KEWASKUM HIGH SCHOOL COLUMN

Mr. Alfred Seefeldt gave an interthe Ev. Lutheran esting talk on the life of bees before his position the high school assembly on Monday. h last Sunday, Thank you, Alfred, your talk was much appreciated.

The local American Legion Post has presented to the Kewaskum High School library a finely bound seven volume set of history books dealing with the World War. This set, entitled "Source Records" of the Great War," states the causes for the war, gives the history of it battle by battle and tells also of the making of peace in the conference at Versailles.

A series of tests were conducted in the commercial classes the four days th a neat of last week for the purpose of selecteet emer- ing the best students in each subject, Last who will represent the school in the ith the Annual District Commercial Contest, had the which will be held at West Bend, Satthe gol- urday, April 21. PHONE WAGES DISCUSSED

The wages of telephone operaturs in Wisconsin were considered at the conference held in the Milwaukee ofgregation has as yet see en- fice of the state industrial commission. The conference was made up of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Schultz at Adell. members of ar. advisory committee on the hours of laber for women in telephone exchanges, and members of the advisory wage board. A recommendation was recently made to the industrial commission by the committee for a modification of the general statute concerning labor hours for women who work in exchanges at night, particularly in the smaller exchanges. The adoption of such orders would automatically affect the amount of wages that telephone operators receive, so it becomes necessary to consider the trial commission has power to modify the statutory standards regulating the hours of labor for women. In 1917 the commission placed a ban on night work for women in laundries and facories. It is also charged with administration of the minimum wage law, which applies to minors, and the oppressive wage law, which applied a adults. The minimum wage law requests that a living wage be paid to minors, and the oppressive wage law requires that a wage reasonable and adequade shall be paid adult women.

BARN AND LIVE STOCK BURNED NEAR RICHFELD

The barn on the farm of Ben Janzer, located one mile east of Pleasant Hill and two miles north of Fichfield was entirely destroyed by fire on Wednesday evening of this week. The fire. the cause of which is unknown, started early in the evening. Mr. Janzer, a single man, having completed his chorus, had left to visit a neighbor residing about a mile from his home The fire was discovered about 7:30 o'clock by families living in the vicinity, who sent in the alarm to the Richfield fire department. The latter, the neighbors, and Mr. Janzer arriving upon the scene, put forth every effort to save the property. The fire hose and the engine were connected with the well. However, with the early exhaustion of the flow of water, it became evident that the barn was lost. Three horses were shot to save them from burning to death. The loss included, the barn; a structure 36 x 80 ft.; a quantity of machinery, hay and oats; 3 horses, 8 cows and a dog. Altogether the amount of the destruction is estimated at between four and five thousand dollars, which was not nearly covered by insurance. The house, which was also in danger from the flames, was saved by the effort of the fire department and neighbors .- Hartford Times.

BREMEN FLYERS PLAN TO HOP TO NEW YORK

New Parts Necessary to Make Plane Ready for Completion of Flight.

Queebc.-The German plane Bremen, with Captain Koehl as pilot and Baron Von Huenefeld, a passenger, will fly from Greenly Island to Quebec city on the first stage of its continued flight to New York city. Here the German members of the crew will join Maj. James Fitzmaurice, who preceded them to Quebec, and the plane and its crew, intact again, will continue to New York.

The purpose of Major Fitzmaurice's flight from Greenly island was to select the repair parts necessary to put the Bremen in running order

The Bremen required new tires or skiis to replace the tires burst in the landing, a new propeller, some parts for the undercarriage, and some engine parts.

It had been arranged for Major Fitzmaurice to wait in Quebec for the Bremen and the other members of the crew. The sister ship of the Bremen, the Junkers F-13, provided the spare parts necessary to repair the Bremen. the two ships being identical in construction as regards essential parts.

Quebec. Que.-First direct contact from the outside world with the crew of the Ice-blocked German monoplane Bremen, which flew across the Atlantic, was established when a Canadian airplane landed at Green!

Dr. Luis Cuisiner, former pilot in the French air service during the World war, and Charles A. ("Duke") Schiller, famous Canadian pilot, flew from Seven Islands, Que., and made a successful landing at the island.

Wireless messages to the Canadian press relayed from the Island report that the crew of the Bremen are making satisfactory repairs and that the plane is expected to "leave under its own power shortly."

Doctor Cuisiner and Schiller flew a Canadian Transcontinental Airways plane, and in pegotiating a successful flight to the island. Cuisiner realized his hope that he would be the first to reach the airmen who completed the crossing of the north Atlantic, Cuisiner, who was in the French flying service during the World war, and two of the trans-Atlantic flyers fought on opposite sides in the same conflict, Capt. The messages indicate that at the start of the flight from Baldonnel, Ireland, weather conditions were favorable. After nearly thirty hours of flying, conditions changed and the Bremen was forced to fly very low. At that time the airmen were confident of success and believed the coast of Newfoundland was at hand. At this stage of the venture the campass "began to fail," according to the messages, and the fog was replaced by snow and hail.

HANDS OFF BUSINESS, COOLIDGE'S WARNING

Tells D. A. R. That Private Enprise Is Sacred.

Washington .- Federal encroachment on the rights of the states and the growing interference of government in business and the life of the individual were criticised by President Coolidge in an address delivered at the opening session of the annual convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The 4,000 delegates applauded enthusiastically when Mr. Coolldge asserted that the American theory of society "rests upon a higher level than communism," and uttered a plea that the nation return to the high ideals for which the American Revolution was fought.

The President deprecated the present tendency of the people to call upon the national government to take over their burdens and asserted that along this road lies disaster. Mr. Coolidge specially warned against the trespassing of government into the domain of private business,

While the President did not mention the shipping board any of the pending bills in congress which provided for federal entrance into the business field, there was no doubt among his hearers that he had reference to the government's experience in operating commercial ships and the efforts being made to pass legislation calling for government operation of Muscle Shoals.

The President asserted that government ownership on any large scale is Inevitably followed by a demand on the part of the chief beneficiaries to first gain and then maintain control. Mr. Coolidge scoffed at the Idea that the government is ever able to bandle private business better than the people themselves.

"Through regulations and commissions we have given the most arbitrary authority over our actions and our property into the hands of a few men," the President said. "It is a procedure fraught with considerable danger and should only be adopted as a last resort. "

West Plains, Mo.-Forty persons were killed and twenty injured in an explosion which demolished a dance hall here.

A coroner's jury, hastily summoned by Richard Green, prosecuting attorney, could not agree on the cause of the explosion and adjourned until later. A gasoline tank supposed to have exploded was found intact.

Two buildings adjoining the garage and dance hall also were destroyed by the explosion and the fire which followed. Estimates of property damage ranged upward from $150,000. Thirty or forty couples attended the dance, but some were not in the hall at the time of the blast. Whether all escaped who were sleeping in second story apartments in the buildings adjoining the garage was in doubt for some time. The list of dead includes the follow-

Complain of Harmonics in Short-Wave Bands

Interference in the short-wave bands from harmonics, particularly those of program broadcasting stations, has been called to the attention of the federal radio commission by amateurs.

K. B. Warner, secretary of the Green said possible motives were American Radio Relay league, has suicide, revenge against dancers, or complained to the commission that both. Wiser, he said, was involved the situation is seriously endangered financially. He understood Wiser had in areas possessing many broadcast-

"Harmonics in the so-called 80-meter band are so numerous and strong so far as direct evidence shows, might erally impossible for amateurs there

> "As an example, one of our oldest and most skillful amateurs in that area recently counted 27 harmonics in one evening from broadcasting stations between 75 and 85 meters. The stronger ones took up as much room as three or four good amateur sigoals and the frequency of many transmitters was anything but constant.

"The same situation exists proportionately in other localities and in other short-wave bands, being particularly annoying in the band above 150 meters, which is the present assignment for American amateur phones.

"Naturally it is not amateurs alone who are annoyed by this interference; the harmonics extend throughout the short-wave spectrum and constitute a serious situation which must be of concern to all classes of short-wave

Members of the radio commission declared that the problem of interference and maintenance of transmitter frequency had been perplexing them and the engineers for some time. With the improvement of apparatus and the proposed elimination of a number of broadcasting stations it is expected that interference will be materially reduced.

How to Reduce Noise of Atmospheric Disturbance One of the most serious difficulties which amateurs find in long-distance receiving, especially during the cold months, is that of atmospheric disturbances. No device for completely eliminating these has yet been invented, but they can at least be greatly diminished by means of a comparatively simple contrivance. This is nothing more that the insertion of a nigh-ohmed resistance between the antenna and the ground wire. In laying in the auxiliary connection with the receiver the resistances of the static transmissions of the antenna are immediately diverted to the earth. At the same time, however, a small part of the high-ohmed receiving energy is lost through this auxiliary connection. The strength of this resistance is best ascertained by testing. On the average, a resistance of half a meg-ohm will suffice. support pencil strokes of different lengths and depths.

Levine, the trans-Atlantic by to find the minimum point of pickup. The reason for this is because the "wave front" at short distances from a transmitter may not be proceeding in a vertical plane.

Plug-In Coils Should Be Watched Carefully

A few receivers make use of "plugin" coils-that is, coils with terminals which fit into sockets and which may be replaced with others of different value to facilitate changing from one band of wave lengths to another. Such coils should be watched carefully for corroded or oxidized terminals, for unless these terminals make good electrical contact in their sockets poor reception will result.

When made at the factory these metal contacts frequently become coated with a film which, unless detected, results in a poor connection. The best method to follow is to scour each terminal with fine sandpaper occasionally.

Cheap Radio

Quarter-in-the-slot radio service is available in every room of a new Middle West hotel. The house has a stock of receiving sets on wheels, each equipped with a loop aerial. Upon order, one of these is delivered to any room. A quarter in the slot enbles the users to operate the set for 30 minutes, a little time clock measuring the period for him

Crystal Set Capacity

The Loomis Radio college says that the average distance range of a crystal receiving set is about twentyfive inites. While under certain circumstances of "freak reception" crystals may have been heard of as bringing in signals for long distances, no one would think of expecting this under normal operating conditions.

On Testing "B" Batteries

Be sure to have the "B" batteries connected to the set while in operation when testing their power. Otherwise a false reading is obtained, showing far more voltage than is actually available.

Then she went to Italy to study for three years, and came back eight months ago, so that practically all the friends she has now are mere business acquaintances."

"Oh, I think that tooks as if she had been intentionally cut off from other people; don't you?" I demanded. Even taking such pride as Mr. Grosvenor's into account, he must have realized that she was blameless in that matter, and in all other respects apparently a credit to him. Then, from your description, he was the exact type of old-fashioned man who invariably objects to baving any woman connected with him work or enter a profession, and, however badly he treated her, he did acknowledge her as his granddaughter. Oh, I'll never believe that such a total lack of sympathy with ber during his life, and a decision to leave her stranded at his ful to its owner, if she were as fine death wasn't due to some powerful motive!"

"Feminine intuition, maybe; certainly not pure reason!" commented Mr. Almy, who had heard me out, however. "Well, it might be of the greatest value to find out what the motive was. if it existed. The truth is, that Miss Grosvenor, on her side, had evidently no high regard for her grandfather. She has said nothing whatever against him, but it is evident that she very bitterly resented the way he treated her, and furthermore, this long-pent-up resentment seems to have burst out violently last Sunday afternoon. She does not know this yet, but she and her grandfather were then overheard quarreling bitterty."

"Oh, dear!" I faltered. "About what?

I suppose somebody listened?" "Somebody did; but unfortunately his command of English was not equal to the situation. All he can definitely state is that the quarrel apparently concerned some book. He heard the word 'book' over and over again, and sticks to his story; though a book might seem a strange object of violent dispute between an old man and a young girl."

I managed to give no sign of the fact that that word "book" had made my beart stop short for a second, and then make up six beats at once: nor of the fact that it had spurred me to great engerness for the proposed visit where I had previously felt only reluctance. I inquired: "Shall I ask Miss Grosvenor anything special this afternoon?" "No. Let ber talk, rather than get her to talk. Don't under any circumstances press her. an attempt to clear up the mystery

So a few hours later I passed between the box-trees flanking Number 14 Normandy terrace; and there in the hall, as he had a right to be, was Ernesto.

"Do you know if Miss Grosvenor's n?" I asked. "I've been sent from Darrow's to see her on business." "Yes, she's in," responded Ernesto, hesitantly.

"Well, I think she'l' see me." "You could try. She don't see any. body but that old fellow-lawyer; he came once-and police."

"She's not all alone here, I hope." "Her housekeeper sleeps here, now. My wife, she's been to see her, but the young lady don't talk. She don't know many people, see?" Ernesto again hesitated discreetly, but a chance to talk was too much temptation. "That old fellow, ber grandfather, he didn't treat her so good."

I appeared amazed. "She worked bard, didn't she?" I suggested.

"Sure! And she is beautiful young lady, and the old fellow's rich. But he don't give the money to her." "Kept It, did he?"

"Yeah-h-h! And he gives it to the young fellow. You know-grandson." Ernesto here bestowed on me a wink of an utterly classic description. which I officially ignored, but readily interpreted to mean that Mr. Charles MacIvor was a good and versatlle spender of the ancestral cash. With dignity I ventured on the remark that t was unfortunate that Miss Grosrenor's cousin should be unavailable at this critical time. Bah-h-1 He's not so good she couldn't do without him! I know him; ie's all the time here. She likes him pretty good, I'm sorry. The old fellow liked him real good. All right, you the family she has now, at the age of go see the young lady."

Having mounted the first flight, I rapped with a brass knocker on a black door in the front of the secondstory hall. An elderly mald-servant admitted me, and ushered me directly into the front room. It was a very long room, still used. as designed ninety years ago, for a furniture filled the apartment. The thick carpet was blue with pink rose wreaths; blue brocade curtains draped the windows, through which I caught a glimpse of the long line of fluted gray balcony columns. In the shadows at the back of the room I caught the glitter of tall glass-doored bookcases.

The effect of the room was intensely grand, formal, forbidding. Amid pairs of ruby-glass plates, and china dogs, and painted vases, the one touch of individuality was a miniature walout work table inconspicuously placed among some books on a little table In a corner. It was complete in every detail, though only about ten inches high, and I thought must be very usea sewer as she was an artist. And then a door opened, and she came into that strange, formal, bright-colored room, a sharp setting for a somber, arresting personality.

Julia Grosvenor was in black, as 1 had seen her before; her face was still perfectly white; but now self-possession characterized her bearing. She came forward with a certain grace despite her limp on the right foot, which I should of course have expected, but which, for some reason, surprised me for an instant. Through my mind unaccountably shot that sentence from Daisy Abbott's story: "After Miss Grosvenor stopped short, she stumbled." "How do you do?" She touched my hand, and sat down on the long blue sofa opposite me. "I am glad to see you . . . again."

Her voice had that clear ringing note I had heard before. I said: "Oh, yes, you've seen me at my desk."

"I meant," she rejoined very directly, "that I saw you when you were taking care of me last Monday. I but not least, the reward for one's ef- | patterned material, the one-piece look at you. I fainted again immediately."

"No, I didn't know that until now," sald, trying to show no surprise. "I told no one. Miss Fuller-" her voice sank-"did you notice my slippers?" There was nothing to do but meet her directness.

"Yes," I answered point-blank. "1 said nothing about them, though. 1 thought you could explain them yourself at the right time, if, indeed, it should ever be necessary."

She looked at me with evident gratitude, and said not one single word. "I suppose you know," I resumed, 'that Mr. Almy wants me to help him clear up the mystery of your grandfather's death I am an entirely unofficial assistant, but I do wish, Miss Grosvenor, that it lay in my power to do something to help you." already for your attention to me when was so ill," she said cordially; "but much. I couldn't even tell Mr. Almy if my grandfather had any enemies, if there was any reason for an attack to be made on him. Indeed, I haven't really been very clear in my mind as to what I saw at the time I found him in Darrow's on Monday morning. I thought perhaps, however, if I could talk with you, knowing you were there at the time, that you might belp me recall part of what I fail to remem-

"That's a good idea," said I, looking at her keenly, and remembering what Peter had said to Mr. Almy about his impression that Julia Grosvennor bad lost track of her surroundings when be encountered her in the aisle. "I suppose," I hazarded, "the shock you suffered robbed you temporarily of your memory to some slight extent. Nothing unusual about that."

"I shouldn't wonder," she agreed. Well, to begin at the beginning, you know my grandfather collected literature about Virginia? He had a big collection, gathered just in the last few years, too. Last Sunday we saw in the paper that Darrow's had bought a number of Virginia books from Judge Leavitt's famous library, and I planned at once to see if any of these would interest my grandfather. So on Monday I went to Darrow's. As I am not familiar with the shop, I spent a good deal of time, perhaps more than realized, searching for the books in those many alcoves. Finally I found some of the Leavitt books in the history section, and I followed the shelf on which they stood, around into the next alcove, and-" trembling. "And there in front of me," she finally continued, "lying on the floor, i saw my grandfather! His right wrist was cut, blood was spurting out of it. I remember turning, running into the aisle, and stumbling, and then, they say, I screamed for help. I don't remember doing so, or anything else, except that one instant I saw you, until I found myself in the hospital. Mr. Almy thought maybe you could help me fill up some of the gaps."

She broke off a minute, her lipe

They were certainly numerous enough. Miss Grosvenor had given no definite idea of how she had occupied her time to Darrow's; she had made no allusion to the difference she had had with her grandfather. And I frankly doubted that she was telling the truth when she intimated she bad no recollection whatever of seeing l'eter, as of course, her narrative implied. I resolved to find out.

ouch to the costume. The young woman in the picture had the right idea when she decided to make an envelope bag of crepe twist, which should take its color cue from the flamboyant hues in the modernistic print of her blouse.

This youthful modern knows that one simply cannot be too colorful in dress this season. That is why she is wearing such a striking blouse whose patterning reminds one of none other than gay patchwork design. That is why, also, that she is so enthused with the thought of a crepe-twist bag and belt which shall measure up to the color vivacity of the silk of her

Much American Land Once Part of Mexico

Nearly a third of the territory of the continental United States was once a part of Mexico. It was acquired by the United States in three annexations. The first was when Texas, which had rebelled from Mexico and set up a separate government, was annexed to this country in 1845.

The question of the Texas boundary led to the Mexican war, at the conclusion of which our southern neighbor ceded everything north of the Rio Grande and Gila rivers. In 1853 this country settled a number of questions boundary, property and damages by purchasing an additional strip of southwestern land from Mexico-the Gadsden purchase.

Included in these three cossions gravy, apple were all of the states of Texas, New sauce and with a Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada and vegetable or two, California; more than half of Colorado, and parts of Oklahoma, Kansas and Wyoming.

World's Deepest Uell

The deepest well in the world has been sunk in Orange county, California, where a depth of more than 8,000 feet, or 250 feet more than the quently lies in tossing it together previous record, has been reached. At 7,000 feet the temperature was found to be above 212 degrees, the melting their swn juices makes fruit limp, point of the battery of the photographic machines used in making the depth surveys, and the batteries became thoroughly molten. The shaft is the only well ever drilled by electric power to a depth of more than 6,000 feet. Drilling was in progress continuously for over two years. A 5%-inch bit was used with Westinghouse transformers and a variablespeed motor. The shaft drifted from the vertical up to a deviation of 560 feet at a depth of 5,985 feet, and then drifted back till at 8,000 feet the tilt was only 28 degrees.

* Finally Lands Major Berth

OR some minor league stars the road to the big leagues is short sharp and sure. For others it is a long and rambling trail mostly winding through the meadows and cornlands of many farms. And of this latter class none traveled a longer track or served more time on farms than did Lance Richbourg, the Boston Braves outfielder of last season.

Richbourg's baseball career covers n period of nine years and extends from Florida to Michigan and from Frisco bay to that bay whose waters lap the eastern limits of Boston. He must have had a lot of courage and bulldeg tenacity deep in his heart to have survived failure and misfortune so long and still had enough left to win his goal. Richbourg was a student in the University of Florida when McGraw took his Giants to Gainsville in the spring of the year 1919 to train. The glitter of a big league training camp, of course, dazzled the eyes of the young collegian and he signed to play with McGraw. He thought he was an infielder and he knew he could hit. He was also very fast, Well, McGraw farmed him to Oakland for a season and then recalled him and furmed him out again, this time to Toledo, and then traded him to the Phils. He could not seem to get into his stride. He showed flushes of hitting form that lured the big league managers on, but he never seemed to be able to win a regular berth. He was farmed out to Dallas and later to Charlotte in the South Atlantic league. During the year he was with the Phils he warmed the bench, not appearing in a game. Nothing in this record to write back to the University of Florida about and have posted in the gym about that institution's former star.

Playing for Grand Rapids in the Central league, Richbourg hit over 400. Finally he landed in Nashville with his big league career apparently at an end. He led the Southern league in hitting and was signed by Washington and Immediately afterwards proceeded to break his ieg. The Senators sent him to Minneapolis on the Matthews deal. This was his seventh minor league stand and his third big league failure. Nothing daunted, this game Florida collegian started all over again seven years after McGraw had plucked him from his college campus and played so well in the American association that Judge Fuchs hired him In the fall of 1926 to play the 1927 season for his Braves.

Picks Pirates to Win

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Cubs is looking over, on paper, the teams he must beat during the regular National league season. As he views it at this time, the Pittsburgh Pirates will be the club the Cubs must conquer if they hope to win.

McCarthy believes that the Pirates have the baseball timber, but he thinks it possible that the drubbing they took from the Yankees in the world series may have affected their Veteran Hopes for Three Years More of Work.

Forty-two years on this globe, twen y-seven of which have seen him in a baseball uniform, slaying foes and felling diamond enemies, Jack Quinn expects to round out three years more before he hangs up his glove and quits the game he loves.

"The old soupbone should last about three more seasons," says this rare vintage twirler, the most competent workman now on the staff of the Mackmen.

"I want to round out thirty years in baseball, ending my career in the major leagues," continued this busky son of the anthracite belt, "and that will satisfy me. For I feel that it will stamp me as the oldest of all the pitchers in experience and service, exceeding even Joe McGinnity and Walter Johnson; yes, even old Cy Young.'

Quinn's real name is Picus. He was born in Hazelton, Pa., and worked as breaker boy in the mines. His father was a Pole, and he had the peculiar ideas regarding the upbringing of the young as sways those southern European nationalities. Money was made to be earned and not spent, and young Picus learned his lessons of thrift and economy early.

Coach John O'Reilly to Prepare Karl Wildermuth

Coach John D. O'Reilly of Georgetown university track team, will prepare nineteen-year-old Karl Wildermuth, his fleet-footed sprinter, for the Olympic tests with great care. In speaking of his protege, O'Reilly said: Wildermuth is only a boy and his legs will get stronger. He is exceptionally fast in getting away from the mark and he still has something left at the finish. He is a perfect sprinter.

"Like Chet Bowman, he runs close to the ground and his feet are never more than a foot and a half from the ground. Karl does not bring his knees up high and his arm motion is excellent. He runs straight during the race and does not throw himself against the cape like some of our sprinters."

"The trouble is not there. Base ball's trouble is a lack of seasoned material." Mr. Barnard was commenting a single season's work by using it. Fanning mills not only separate the weed seeds and foreign material from seed grains, but they grade the grains, too, so that the lighter, chather stuff, which is likely to be of low vitality, is kept out of the seed. Experiments show that plump seeds produce bigger yields and even an increase of only a bushel or two per acre on this acount will be sufficient to make the grain-cleaning process profitable. In Northwest grain dockage has come to be a very serious problem. The dockage costs of weed seeds and other foreign materials sometimes amount to 15 per cent or 20 per cent or 25 per cent. It not only is practically valueless, but it impairs the value of marketed grain so that the money received for it is much less than what it should be. A few hours spent in cleaning seed grain will return great profits.

Machine Shed Pays Big

Interest to Any Farmer A $400 implement shed pays interest at the rate of 22 per cent a year when housing $1,000 worth of machinery. The average yearly depreciation on $1,000 worth of machinery, when well housed, is $90; but it increases to $180 a year when the machinery is poorly housed. The $50 difference in depreciation is 22 per cent of $400-the cost of a satisfactory tool shed, one that is weathertight and lasting This estimate does not include a work shop, which is often advisable. Well housed farm machinery depreclates at a rate of from 3 to 12 per cent a year, depending upon the kind of machine, the rate being highest with corn binders, threshing machines, and other complicated machinery. It is safe to say that poor housing reduces the life of a machine by balf .- Wisconsin Circular No. 110.

General Chick Feeding

Demands Careful Study Before any baby chicks are ordered from a commercial hatcheryman or before any eggs are put in the home incubator, the prospective flock owner should learn something about chick feeding in general, and gain some sort of an idea of what it takes to feed a baby chick and how it should be Poultrymen who have been in the game for a number of years also can do well to check up on their knowledge and on the new development. Chickens of all ages consume relatively small amounts of feed and properly balanced rations are so marked that the subject deserves a most careful study.

Feed and Water Supply

Needed by Ducklings Ducklings sometimes die from too much exposure to hot sun and it is necessary to provide a shady range for them during the heat of the day. Ducklings sometimes have fits caused by digestive disorders. Plenty of green feed in the ration helps to prevent such troubles.

The ducklings do not need running water or any water in which to swim, but the drinking water should be given in dishes deep enough so they can ment of the six rooms and their sizes. immerse their heads and wash out their eyes. have come from all over the country to copy and study their lines. Munufacturers have sent students to copy these doors, in full or in part, so that they might be reproduced by machine and thus brought within the means of the modest homebuilder of today.

Today it is possible to purchase stock doors or stock millwork from the colonial or other established architectural styles. These are faithful copies and within the means of the average homebuilder. Sometimes a very plain house, as was stated in the beginning, may be given character through the use of a beautiful door-

Cure for Headache

Mrs. R-, who had a severe headache one evening recently, went into the kitchen to get a tablet to relieve Since she kept her cupboard shelves in perfect order, she thought it was unnecessary to turn on the electric light in order to get the tablet. Trusting to the dim light from the adjoining room she reached to a shelf and found a small envelope. from which she took a small round object, which she swallowed. She left the envelope on the kitchen table. Next morning she found that the tablet, which apparently had relieved her headache, was a sweet pea seed. left from the early spring planting .-

Re-roofing for 40 Year

N the island of San Juan, the Red Cedar roof of a house built in 1856, still stands intact! A monument to the enduring quality of Red Cedar Shingles. Nature has endowed Red Cedar with wonderful preservative oils that render it immune to the ravages of time elements or decay. Engwood shingles are sawn edge-grain from giant Red Cedar trees . . . edge-grain, so they cannot warp, cup or curl, but lie tight and flat to the sheathing. When nailed with zinc-coated or copper nails, famous Edgwood Red Cedar Shingle roof will endure for 40 years or more.

Retroof with Edgwoods, right over the old, worn shingles o rroofing! Think of the time, labor and expense this saves. The absence of dust and litter that are so ruinous to garden and surroundings. No interior left exposed to sudden rain-storms. And ... of still greater importance ... you have double insulation afforded by the double roof, for Red Cedar is one of the most efficient insulating materials known to builders.

Strange as it may seem many dairymen seem to have a hankening to cut down their profits. They keep chopping away at their own milk checks, and yet they don't admit to themselves that they are doing something wrong. Every time they give feed to a cow in is a "boarder" they cut off profit. Every time they feed too small a portion to the profitable cow, they cut profit. When milk is not cooled properly and quality lowered it means less profit. It is also a hard matter to get correct samples for the Babcock test when milk is not in good condition. It pays to take good care.
