CHAUTAUQUA DAYS ARE DRAWING NEAR

With the Chautauqua days drawing near, the various committees in charge of the same, are making final arrangements to help bring it to a successful conclusion. One thing certain the programs to be rendered are going to be good, all the way through, and all can rest assured of listening to good entertainments. The same company furnished a four-day program at Camppellsport last week, and all who atended same, speak very highly of it. The Campbellsport News of last week's issue has the following to say of the four-day performances: "The United Chautauquas which nave been showing in our village every afternoon and evening since Sunday night closed their engagement here last night. Every entertainment was very pleasing to the audience and some of their musical numbers and lectures were inspiring and educational. The Chautauqua was sponsored by a number of our professional and business men, who made it possible for our people to enjoy these interesting and elevating programs. A sufficient number signed up for the return of the Chauauqua next year."

Note-This makes the third season that this company will perform at Campbellsport.

KEWASKUM BOY MAKING GOOD AS DOCTOR-FARMER

Dr. Anthony Zwaska of Rockton, IIL formerly of Kewaskum, and a grainate of the Kewaskum High School is now the owner of a large farm near Rockton, Ill. The Beloit Daily News relates the following interesting story of Mr. Zwaska's 200 acre farm:

"Good stock and good farming practices will be found on the farm of Dr. A. B. Zwaska near Rockton, wnich is worked by P. D. Dingman. About 100 acres of the 200 acres on the farm have been limed five tons to the acre, and Dr. Zwaska stated that six tons to the acre would be better. Most of the .18 acres of alfalfa were winter silled soy beans and sudan grass have been put in for an emergency hay crop.

"Brown Swiss cattle are raised, half of which are purebred. All the best calves are raised, and several of the cows have records of over 400 pounds in the testing association. The herd sire is from a register of production cow. The motto of the farm is to feed fewer cows and better cows. If a cow does not come up to the sta .dard

Opposition to TB. Eradication

Critics of Campaign Are, as a Rule, Well-Meaning, but Uninformed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Critics of the tuberculosis-eradication campaign in the United States are, as a rule, well-meaning, but uninformed. The bureau of animal industry of the United States Department of Agriculture has observed a rapid decline in opposition to the campaign for eradication of bovine tuberculosis, but occasional criticisms persist. To these objectors the bureau offers opportunity to judge the overwhelming mass of scientific evidence in published form. An array of established facts, the bureau asserts, proves that eradication of tuberculosis from live stock means not only a huge economic saving to the live stock industry, but also a safer milk and food supply to the American public. Expression of Public Will.

In particular the bureau stresses the view that tuberculosis eradication is an expression of the public will through their elective representatives. The work aims to remove, in a practical way, the menace of a devastating disease. The co-operative work is conducted under federal and state authority, and is supported by funds appropriated by congress, by state legislatures, and by counties. Any opponent may have opportunity to appear and voice opposition when appropriations and authorization of the work are under consideration. The work has expanded to new areas from year to year because the advocates have presented to legislators evidence that convinced the doubters of the merit of the Work Will Go On. The bureau of animal industry is confident that the work will go on. Opposition to eradication work, which was quite general ten years ago, has declined until now it occurs only sporadically. Obstructors, the bureau says, add something to the cost of eradication and the time required for completing the work, and increase the opportunity for tuberculosis to spread from animal to animal, and from animal to persons. The bureau believes that citizens have every right to express criticism verbally or through the press, but that if the critics are sincere and honest, they should first obtain the facts readily available in fed-have arisen to date. It is especially regretted that some critics whose titles imply scientific training or attainment have sought to hamper the work with unsound objections and without adequate consideration of the reliable information so easily obtained.

Many critics of tuberculosis eradication have turned to advocacy, the bureau says. Notably, owners of valuable animals condemned as tuberculous and who have suffered serious financial hardship, have, as a rule, remained ardent supporters of the work The critics are often those on the sidelines. Many owners of cattle who at first were doubtful of the worthiness of the campaign have become convinced supporters.

Canada Thistles Killed

by Using Smother Crop Canada thistles are best killed by some smother crop, and the more thoroughly the smothering is done, of course the more effective the killing will be. Where a good stand of alfalfa can be had, that will usually wear out the thistles. Thorough cultivation of a crop like tobacco should do-serious damage to the thistles. The essential thing is to keep the tops from growing, and after a time with this treatment the roots will be starved out

If you sow oats on this field the thistles are likely to overgrow the outs, so that the crop will be pretty near worthless. If tobacco will work well in the farm rotation, that will be a much better crop, because it would be cultivated, and hence the thistles would be kept cut off. In the oats or other similar grain, they will grow right up with the grain and no progress whatever will be made with getting rid of them.

Farmer Plays Big Part

in the Spread of Weeds Man has always been the chief agent in the spread of weeds. This human factor in their spread is larger and more varied than is commonly realized. By far the greater number of noxious weeds have been introduced into a region with seed imported from old countries, or older parts of the same country, where weeds grow with the crop seeds.

The weeds which come in seed from such places usually establish themselves quickly in the new location, often to a great disadvantage to crops trovert practically all criticisms that and native plants.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) In no other agricultural subject has so much interest been manifestedaccording to requests received during a year for bulletins published by the Department of Agriculture-than in the control of lice and mites of poultry. Sixteen editions of a bulletin on this subject (amounting to nearly 1, 000,000 copies) have been printed. Although these recommendations have been put into effect very generally by commercial poultry raisers, with the result that in intensive poultry-raising sections there is very little infestation of parasites on poultry, owners of farm and town flocks continue to lose much money through injury caused by these external parasites. Losses are especially large from head lice on chicks and body lice on grown

Lime Feeds to Prevent

Leg Paralysis in Sows Motherly sacrifices in favor of their offspring cause the paralytic condition in brood sows known as "going down in the back" and this trouble, therefore, can be much more easily prevented than cured, Dr. W. E. Carroll, chief in swine industry at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, is telling the farmers of the state in response to inquirles about this ailment. Frequently, although probably not always, this trouble is caused by the sow using an extra large amount of lime from her own bones to produce milk for her pigs, Doctor Carroll explained. This leaves her own bones rather fragile and in danger of cracking when they are placed under stress and strain. In case one of the vertebra of the backbone is thus cracked in such a manner that it presses upon the spinal cord, the animal loses control of its hind legs.

dium fluoride, used in the form of a dust or dip, will completely destroy all kinds of poultry lice and their eggs in one treatment. This material is easy to handle, and if used in accordance with instructions causes no harm in any way to the operator or to the fowls. In using the material as a dip, all that is necessary to insure a fully satisfactory job is to pick out a warm, sunny day and to treat every fowl.

Most Practical Control

Measures for Plant Lice Spraying with a nicotine solution is one of the most practical control measures for aphids or plant lice that attack plants in the vegetable or flower garden. This material is prepared by soun is terriby dissolving one and one-fourth tea-of soap. As this material is a contact insecticide, it is necessary to hit each aphid with the spray to get complete control. The aphids usually gather on the underside of the leaves and these must be sprayed. The nicotine may be used as a dust by mixing one-fourth pound with five pounds of hydrated lime. Allow the mixture to stand several hours before using and then apply with a dust gun.

Material for Shells

Crushed oyster shells, a feed of nearly 100 per cent calcium carbonate content, builds the bones of the chickens, doing away with frailty, and making them less susceptible to disease. Its most important work, however, is supplying shell material which comes from the calcium carbonate contained in the oyster shell. This mineral not only assures hard-shelled eggs, but increases the number of eggs produced.

Improving Dairy Herds by Following Records

Almost every berd has unprofitable producers, and the sooner these animals are weeded out the easier it is for other improvement factors, such as feeding and breeding, to show their effect, says J. B. Parker, associate dairy husbandman, United States Department of Agriculture, who has prepared a brief publication on "Improving Dairy Herds."

Marked improvement in the herd is difficult to obtain, he says, unless records are kept for accurately determining the production of individual cows, their feed consumption, and economy of production. These may consist of private records, records obtained by cow-testing circles or clubs, or records kept by dairy-herd-improvement associations. At the present time where dairy-herd-improvement associations are practical, they furnish by far the best method of keep-

Textured interior finishes, according to noted interior decorators, are not merely a fad, and as such doomed to early obscurity, but are a distinct contribution to the art or arranging lovely interiors.

Furthermore, they have a historical background in that textured interiors were a part of almost all great architectural periods-the Greek, Ltalian, Spanish, French, English, etc. Such finishes have physical as well

Badger State Happenings

Platteville-Despite rain and improvement in pastures, several Platteville farmers have been forced to buy hay. Several carloads of western hay, high in price and of inferior quality, have been delivered.

Appleton-R. D. Baker, general manager of the Baker Canning Co. at Dundas, near here, estimates that his factory will can 75,000 cases of peas if growing conditions continue as favorable as they have been and no pests or diseases appear.

Rhinelander-A woman has announced herself as a candidate for sheriff of Onelda county. She is Mrs. Lloyd Brooker, wife of the present sheriff. Mrs. Brooker, who new holds the office of undersheriff, will seek the nomination on the republican ticket. Her husband is a democrat.

Hustisford-After years of fruitless effort, advocates of a high school here put the project over at a school district meeting, 48 to 17. Ordinarily only 25 or 30 persons attend such a meeting, but persons who wanted the high school worked to get all the favorable votes and 65 persons were present.

Couderay-The first large tract of wild cutover lands in Rusk and Sawyer counties admitted by the state under the forest crop law will be a tract of 27,000 acres owned by the Nekoosa-Edwards Paper Co. of Port Edwards. The land has a good stand of second growth timber that will be fit for pulpwood in a few years.

New London-Winter killing, a cold spring and drouth has reduced the strawberry crop to less than one-fifth, and growers, who recently organized the New London Berry Growers' association, do not expect to operate this year. There will be a bumper crop of red raspberries and blackberries in this vicinity, however.

Madison-Government bluff, 1.046 acres of undeveloped land near Sturgeon Bay, has been accepted by the state conservation commission from the United States war department for park purposes. The tract cost $1,307 .-63. Development of the land, according to L. B. Nagler, director of conservation, will not be started for some time.

Merrill-An unusual distortion of veins on plum tree leaves has been noted on local orchards and is apparently due to particles of rain during a recent heavy storm injuring the surface of the leaf. Owners at first feared a fungus growth and sent the leaves to Madison for examination. Some leaves are entirely covered by the sacs formed by the injured veins.

Green Lake-Pea growers in the Fox River valley have an opportunity to forestall in 1929 a repetition of the serious shortage of legume hay that exists this year. Numerous growers of early peas plan to plant alfalfa and sweet clover after the removal of the canning crop. The excellent condition in which the peas leave the soil is an added inducement for summer planting and the early peas allow plenty of time for the seeding of alfalfa and sweet clover.

Nagler at the state commission's monthly meeting here. When these tracts are accepted, the total land under the law will be 62,000 acres.

Milwaukee-Declaring the hostelry "a nuisance beyond all question," Judge F. A. Geiger ordered a padlock for the entire St. Charles hotel of 122 rooms here. The court action climaxed activities of prohibition agents against the sale of liquor in local hotels. Previously they had obtained padlocking decrees for several hotel bars, but never for an entire establishment.

Madison-A new rate which will permit household heating by electricity has been granted the municipal electric and water department of Kaukauna by the state railroad commission. "The supreme object of all good citizens of America in this campaign is to annihilate the beverage liquor traffic and maintain our Constitution, which object is opposed by the wet Tammany candidate."

On the liquor question, the Prohibitionists' platform makers stressed their opposition to the methods of the Anti-Saloon league, as manifesting a "false political philosophy." Other planks in the platform included a denunciation of the "power trust." The McNary-Haugen and Boulder dam bills were favored.

The Prohibition party platform as drafted, also urged reform in judicial procedure, uniform marriage and divorce laws, entrance of the United States in the world court, and condemned election laws of several states.

United States Senator Norris' announcement in Washington that he could not accept the Presidential nomination voted him in spite of his advance refusal to run, was followed shortly by a statement by Will Vereen, vice presidential selection, that he considered his pomination absurd.

Substitutions on the Farmer-Labor ticket probably will be made eventually but not immediately. Bert Martin of Denver, national secretary, said that the executive committee is empowered to fill vacancies, but that the announcements of the positions of Norris and Vereen will not be recognized until they have been notified of their nominations and made their re-

Athens.-Former Premier Venizelos of Greece has informed the Associated Press that he favors the plan to outlaw war advanced by Secretary Kellogg, despite the fact that it is "not all that might be desired." Since the great war of 1914-18 it had been apparent that it does not pay to make war, he said, because both victors and vanquished are losers.

PACKERS WIN FIGHT AGAINST RATE FIXING

Master in Chancery Finds Law "Unconstitutional."

Omaha, Neb.-That part of the ackers and stock yards act of August 15, 1921, vesting in the secretary of agriculture power to fix commissions of live stock commission firms, was held unconstitutional by B. H. Dunham, special master in chancery.

The case, brought originally by three Omaha commission houses against the government and proper agencies, drew in nearly ninety plaintiffs before it vas placed in the master's hands. They alleged that the law of congress deprived them of their liberty of contract and that it violated the fifth amendment of the Constitution. Unholding this contention, Dunham ruled the secretary of agriculture's order of November 19, 1926, under which he fixed maximum charges to be made by commission men at the Omaha market, was confiscatory. In his decision he found that "64 per cent of the commission firms at the Omaha market would be forced to go out of business if the new rate was put into

Peru and Chile Ready to End Estrangement Washington.-Peru has accepted the proposal of Frank B. Kellogg, secretary of state, that diplomatic relations be resumed with her old ex-enemy and neighbor Chile, after their diplomatic break of 17 years and their 45 years' dispute over Tacna and Arica.

Peru's acceptance is the latest move in a long series of negotiations which were started on an informal basis between the Chilean and Peruvian delegations to the Pan-American conference at Havana in January, and have been fostered officially and unofficially by the United States. Reapproachment has been made possible by definite endeavors of leaders in both countries to ameliorate public sentiment and with the progress already made as a basis it is believed in the State department that Chile and Peru will be able to settle their old controversies for themselves.

Big Liner Rammed by

Speeding Rum Chaser New York.—An unidentified rum chaser bore down on the Colonial Line steamship Concord and rammed her as the boat was proceeding to New York from London with 600 passengers.

According to passengers, the Concord had the right of way and stuck to her course until the crash was imminent, when both boats swerved, resulting in only a side-swiping blow. Frightened passengers rushed for lifeboats and the destroyer speeded away. Capt. George A. Cobb asserted the action of the destroyer was deliber-

RAILROADS TO TAKE OVER EXPRESS LINES

Will Put End to Competition in Merchandise Transportation Business.

New York.-The American raffroads announced definite plans for taking over the country's express business. Presidents of four of the larger railroads were appointed agents with powers to acquire either the assets and property of the American Railway Express company or its stock and to organize a new corporation, the Railway Express Agency, Inc. Representatives of 86 railroads doing most of the nation's business have agreed that they will not renew the existing contract with the American Railway Express company when it expires next February 28. All are expected to co-operate in the plan for taking over this business. It is estimated that successful culmination of negotiations will add some 300,000,000 yearly to the income of American railroads which for years have watched with hungry eyes the cream of the merchandise transportation business taken by the American Railway express with an investment of a little more than $34,000,000, while the railroads, with hundreds of millions of dollars invested, had to be content with less return. For the express company, it will mean its end and the taking over of its 25,000 offices and 90,000 employees by the railroads. Some changes in the way of consolidation of activities may be made by the roads. It is understood rates will not be affected.

Search for Amundsen Kept Up by Russians

Moscow.-With all refugee explorers and rescuers saved from the barren coasts and ice wastes around Spitzbergen, the soviet rescue expedition is turning its attention toward the forlorn hope that six men carried away in the balloon portion of the dirigible Italia may be found alive and that Roald Amundsen and his five missing companions may also be discovered in that vicinity, The Russian icebreaker Krassin, the 10,000-ton vessel which rescued seven survivors of Gen. Umberto Nobile's expedition, was reported heading toward Advent bay to refuel for the attempt to find trace of the 12 men whose fate is: 'Get the evidence.'" is yet in doubt.

London.-An unconfirmed message from Copenhagen says some of the balloon party of the Italia have been rescued. There is no mention of Capt. Roald Amundsen, although it is now believed he is one of the party. With nine rescued within two days, there still are eighteen men missing or marooned in the Arctic as a result

GET EVIDENCE TO PROVE ACCIDENT

Far Too Many Motorists Have No Idea What Should Be Done in Emergency.

"How many motorists know what to do after an accident has occurred, in which there has been damage to the cars involved, or possibly a personal injury? Far too many have no idea what to do," says a bulletin issued by the legal department of the Chicago Motor club. "The care of the injured, if any, is always of first importance, of course. The next thing to be remembered is that lawsuits are won, not by the brilliance of counsel but by the facts as presented in the evidence; and evidence cannot be manufactured at the time of trial-it must be obtained at the time of accident. The answer to the question, 'What shall I do in case of accident?

Evidence Is Big Help.

The statement goes on to say that: in getting evidence, one of the best helps a motorist can have is a camera. If a camera is not part of his equipment, a good pencil sketch of the scene of the accident should be made. Witnesses are, of course, important; and in this connection it is well for the motorist to remember that a disinterested witness, a bystander, is more valuable than one of the occupants of his car, who might be regarded as sympathetic to his friend's case. It is advisable to seek witnesses in houses or in stores or office buildings near the scene of the accident.

After the names and addresses of witnesses and of the driver of the other car have been obtained, the mo torist should make a note of the weather conditions and of the nature of the pavement. He should step off the distance from the curb to the point of accident; note skid marks that tell where the brakes were applied; take the name, address and license number of the driver of the oth er car and put it in writing: take a good look at the other driver so that you will be able to identify him in fit snugly by cutting court later.

Look Out for Ruse.

Then, according to Tucker, 'the box clicked,' and the old man toppled over, slowly and heavily, but without much noise.

"We worked this description out in detail; it was soon evident that the stiding of the hand along the bookshelf was Mr. Grosvenor's attempt to steady himself, as he had jerked himself off his balance when rebounding from the shock of seeing the professor so unexpectedly. But instead of recovering his balance, he lost it entirely. His frail wrist hit violently against the base of the spring-irrect, which was tying set on the edge of the shelf-set, as we know from the wound inflicted, at its greatest depth, doubtless to give full scope for comparison between its Incisions and the scratches on Clarihew's 'Notes.' He shot the lancet along the shelf forcibly until it ruck the upright division between the book-shelves, and set it of, on his own wrist, thus forced against the base of the lancet, by accidentally pressing the trigger on the edge of the shelf over which it was hanging."

"Just one thing more, please!" I begged. "Had Professor Harrington ome to Darrow's for Claribew's Notes'?'

Mr. Almy taughed.

"He was the one person who had not! He hadn't even noticed the advertisements, either of the auction or the purchase. He had, in fact, quite given up his old law book, which he was chiefly sorry to lose for sentimental reusous. You see, Mr. Groscenor-and with this final wrong, we might dismiss that unbappy old man, since the one he injured bears him no grudge because she is incapable of doing so-Mr. Grosvenor had written to Professor Harrington, while the latter was still in England, that the niece he knew had been born had died soon after her mother. That was why the professor never made any attempt to und his niece. Well! That was a reunion when we broke the good tidings to them!"

"What a lot you're responsible for, Peter!" said L

"Promising young fellow, he is," smiled Mr. Almy. "I engaged him again this morning. And first thing he does is fall out with his sister! I merely said she'd be a good one to after he had left the house to belo with the job."

"Stuff!" said Peter, buffily. "All I did was tell her she was young; she goes straight up in the air and stays

"What a dreadful thing to tell one who is young!" I remonstrated. "Do you really want Nancy, Mr. Almy?" "Yes, if you could persuade her to come. I want a keyhole to be found for that lonesome key. Surely there's oue here or bereabouts. I must leave the job in good hands; I'm going home for some sleep, so's the professor.' I ascended to the third floor, there to find Nancy determinedly reading

He said she was a very romantic girl, be thought specially because her father was so stern; and he-Mr. Case-well. he never was very exciting, I guess. But yesterday, when Julia was most under suspicion, he came here and offered, for her mother's sake, to belp her in any possible way. You know last Thursday, when you and he and Mr. Roberts and Captain Ashland were talking about the bookplate? Well, of course he knew something about it: you've heard how Julia's mother threw the book to him from this balcony, where those very granite pillars stand that form the bookplate frame?" "So they do! so they do!" "Maybe Mr. Case was trying to find that book, when I saw him Thursday evening, really to see if he could help Julia with it," pursued Nancy, not without shrewdness. "You see, be did know Mr. Grosvenor, and then he found out who Julia was, when she fainted in the shop; he must have guessed what they both wanted."

Yes, all Mr. Case's queer furfive actions now appeared in a new, rosy light. What he knew of Mary Grosvenor's secret had apparently not been enough to determine him on what he thought the best course of action to help her daughter, then under a cloud. He had therefore come personally to Julia's aid, to try to discover the best course.

"And you're not going to try to find out why Mary Grosvenor hid that key under that bookplate!" I ejaculated crushingly.

Nancy flung down the fashion supplement.

"But whatever I do," she protested, "Peter will think be did it himself, and if it should by any chance be wrong, he'll say I'm young."

"He will, my dear," I agreed, "for he is a man and a brother. But that won't stop you doing things, I suppose?"

She was already half way downstairs. Professor Harrington and Mr. Almy were just departing. We all Mr. Almy shook hands warmly. breathed kind thanks for my humble assistance, and hopes, which I shared, that we might meet again, either officially or unofficially. They were gone; and Nancy forthwith developed a burning enthusiasm for the key quest. Julia mentioned some old mahogany boxes in her room which had always were able to stuck fast and refused to open; Nancy said she didn's believe the key would Tucker said fit any of them, though she had never seen them, but she would try it. She position, when we filtred away; then Julia turned to

"I'm going to tell you both something; something I've known ever since last Monday morning; something-" she addressed Peter-"that you did for me, that you never told about and never would tell about, I know well-"

He fairly sprang from his chair. "Stop!" he interrupted, in frantic agitation. "I beg you not to speak; everything's over now; it's of no consequence!"

"It is of the utmost consequence," sald Julia, firmly, "that I acknowledge what I owe to you. For last Monday morning, when I dashed up the aisle in Darrow's, and you, Mr. Burton, came rushing toward me, you saw this in my hand."

Dipping behind some books on the table, she held up the spring-tancet, to Peter's increased agitation. She went on calmly:

"You saw more: although I instantly concealed the weapon under my cape, you saw its blades protruding slightly, as the kick of the mechanism always causes them to do. I reset the hammer at once, to throw off suspicion that my cousin had used the weapon, and sliding it to the floor under my cape, I kicked it as violently as I could, so it would land under that desk at the door. That kick was what bruised my foot: I stubbed my toe hard, and my feet were not protected by shoes."

"What?" asked Peter, surprised.

Julia smiled at me. "Miss Fuller could have told you that I had on black satin bedroom slippers," she assured him; "only she didn't tell anybody!"

"Good for you, Constance," said Peter; "I don't quite get all this, but slippers might have tooked queer,

"Very. I'll tell you now how I came to wear them. As you know, my grandfather and I had a disagreement on Sunday. I made up my mind that he must tell me about my parents; so I told him I had beer to the Richmond auction to see that book. He refused me all information, not too kindly. Next morning at breakfast he appeared all ready to go out; I felt sure he was bound for Darrow's. I don't go to my studio until ten o'clock. I had on a breakfast jacket and slippers, therefore, and had just time, slip on a frock and hurry after him so I could keep him in sight. My slippers were black, so inconspicuous that I could take a chance that they would not be noticed. Yet they might have welghed against me, as showing that I had left the house in hasty, possibly angry pursuit of my grandfather. Miss Fuller gave me the benefit of the doubt. "And you, Mr. Burton, saw me in distress at Richmond, you suspected I had trailed that book to your shop, you heard me cry: 'He's dead!' and saw this weapon in my hand; yet you gave me, a stranger, the protection of your silence at the price of suffering to yourself. And finally, you cleared my uncle of all suspicion forevo You don't think I'm going to let that all pass without a word, though I can never repay you?" "Don't talk to me about repayment!" said Peter, sharply. "It's enough for me to have always believed

"Well," smiled Julia, "you'll have to take credit, at least. When Mr. Almy brought my uncle here, I told both of them everything!" Peter looked at her determinedly. "I don't want credit." he said.

So, as it was the day of rest and be had plenty of time, I gave him a chance to tell her what he did want.

CHAPTER XIV

They Have Their Reward.

Monday morning I awoke very early, and viewed the fading stars with regret that the lists of adventure should seem to have closed, however happily. A very few bits of the Colfax bookplate picture-puzzle remained to be fitted in; and then what? Well, at least work, and work was always an adventure to me. So, as I still bad plenty of it to do after the previous interrupted week. I took an early train into town. A quarter-past eight saw me walking down Fourth avenue through the pale fall sunbeams slanting over the low buildings. But when reached Darrow's, to and behold! there were Peter and Nancy before me!

"Good morning, Constance. I want to talk to you," announced Nancy; adding as an afterthought, "so does Peter."

"I came early to get ready my report for Mr. Darrow on the Raynes Foreside sale," explained Peter. "It's going to be a wonder, but I suppose he'll pick me to pieces on principle, anyhow."

"He she'n't," promised Nancy. "What I wanted to tell you, Constance," continued Peter, "Is of special interest to you; it's about your boy friend Charles Maclvor."

"He has repented, I don't believe," observed.

"At least he has been forgiven; I don't know just how you would work that, but anyway, it has been done. He came last night to say good-by to his cousin." "Good-by? Where's he going?"

"To Buenos Aires, very soon. 1 guess they're going to let him off pretty easily, as the case against him isn't of the greatest importance. He did sell those bonds; but it seems they formed part of the estate he will inherit, and he has confessed and will make any reparation decided on. Besides, he gave the authorities much information that was useful in helping solve the Grosvenor mystery, including the fact that he was the poor boob who tried to tinch that book in Richmond-from mel So the demands of justice won't be too hard to satisfy, and he's due to clear out. Well, good-

Sets Work Miracle With

Small Amount of Power The sensitiveness of the ordinary receiving set of today is a modern miracle of radio energy. Its efficiency compared with that of the broadcasting transmitter affords probably the most striking contrast in radio engineering, Commissioner Caldwell, in charge of technical advances for the radio board, says.

An eight hundred millionth of a watt, a power so faint as to be beyond the grasp of the mind, is sufficient energy to operate an ordinary receiving set, Mr. Caldwell has figured. He says the power taken by an electric iron would operate 500,000,000,000 such sets.

"The ordinary $100 set will receive fair programs with a signal intensity of 50 microvolts per meter. Assuming an antenna height of five meters, giving 250 microvolts available potential, and assuming an antenna resistance of 50 ohms, Ohm's law shows that the primary energy received out of the ether by the set would be one eight hundred millionth of one watt.

"This tiny power is, however, a perfect fabric of all the complex frequencies, tones and shades of the orchestra or quartette it carries, and when amplified produces the rich and compelling sound pictures we know so well. And even this amplified energy in the loud speaker is small as power goes, registering less than one watt." On the other hand, the average broadcast transmitter requires a guard area surrounding it at least 25,000 times as large as its dependable service area and probably less than 1-100tb of 1 per cent of its radiated energy is received usefully by all the radio sets in its range, Mr. Caldwell says.

Give Cure for Static

From Smoke Consumer Many cases of radio interference are caused by electrical precipitators which are used to prevent smoke and noxious fumes or material from leaving a chimney, radio engineers at the bureau of standards say.

The precipitator operates by establishing a highly charged electric field inside the chimney of such a nature and direction that particles going up the chimney are charged and driven against the wall, where they stick. Precipitators cause interference, the engineers explain, because the high voltage then used is obtained from a rectifier which produces sparks and generates radio-frequency current as well as the direct current which the precipitators need.

If the precipitator is so designed and arranged that the distance between the rectifier is only a few feet. or if the entire apparatus, including all leads, is housed in a metal building there is usually no trouble but 'f the rectifier is separated from the chimney the wire which joins forms an antenna which will radiate and cause interference for 20 miles or Interterence from these eliminators can be eliminated, the engineers declare, by placing a grounded wire screen entirely around these wires and thoroughly grounding the wire screen and the rectifier. If screening of the various parts is impracticable damping resistances can be inserted at various points in the wire line which will reduce the power radiated.

Farmers Buy Receivers

for Fun, Not Learning The main reason farmers buy radio sets is to obtain entertainment, and Doggett's coat and badge is reputed not chiefly for educational purposes, to be the oldest continuous sporting it was disclosed by a questionnaire recently sent to farmers by the Colorado Agricultural college.

The questionnaire was distributed in order to determine the best kind of program for the college to present during its weekly broadcast from Station KOA.

It was revealed that programs of pure entertainment held the greatest in erest, with mixed programs of entertainment and information next in preference. Purely informative programs ranked third.

About "Dead Spots" in

Some Short Wave Sets The broadcast listener who is using his short wave "converter" for the first time frequently finds there are one or more points on the dial at which the receiver cannot be made to oscillate. This phenomenon, which is the fact that the receiver is tuned to the resonant-frequency of the antenna or to a harmonic of this frequency. When the two are resonant considerable power is absorbed by the antenna, which makes it difficult to produce oscillations in the receiver.

Copper Sulphate May

Be Used When Soldering Sometimes It is desired to solder piece of iron such as a diaphragm used in a receiver. This cannot be done directly, for the solder will not take, no matter bow much flux is used. If a few grains of copper sulphate are first rubbed over the clean bright metal and then the soldering flux applied, it will be found that the solder will read!'y adhere the iron. Care will have to be exercised, as the copper placed on the Iron by this method is at best only a thin film and comes off quite readily. Also, remember that copper sulphate is very poisonous. The V-Shaped Antenna

For best results the antenna should run in a straight line, but, if the antenna is stretched from one corner of the front of the house to a pole in the center of the rear, and from there to the opposite corner on the front, very major league clubs want him. Maybe, good results can be expected. The lead-in should be taken from one end of the wire at the corner of the house.

An Increasing Demand for High Grade Products

The increased demand for high grade dairy products makes it important the right method of handling be observed. M. J. Brucha, of the limit of Illinois, urges producers to keep the utensils, the barn, the cows and milkers clean. Don't depend upon the strainer to remove the dirt, but I keep the dirt out of the milk in the first place. Another feature that " materially to the high grade of the product is the feeding of wholesome and keeping the milk away from odors. Really the whole subject of milk production is strictly up to the dairyman.
