Berlin—Just after a six-month ban on dogs in this vicinity had been lifted, rabies again broke out here and will probably result in another muzzling order. Permission to destroy the dams was obtained from the state.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE CRITICIZES EUROPE

Lack of Reciprocity Cited; Urges Defense at Sea.

Washington.—An appeal for the construction of additional cruisers for the American navy was sounded by President Coolidge in an address delivered at the American Legion Armistice day exercises.

While sounding his plea for stronger naval defenses that the peace won at great cost on the fields of France ten years ago might be preserved, the President swiftly reviewed American foreign relations since the war and notified Europe of important changes in American foreign policy.

Mr. Coolidge took America's former allies sharply to task for their criticism of this country, announced a tightening of American purse strings on loans to Europe, placed the blame for the failure of the Geneva three-power conference and the efforts to attain reciprocity squarely upon the selfishness of England and other European nations.

The President asserted that as a result of the large expenditures made abroad for military purposes and the generally increased financial stability and prosperity of European nations, the United States feels it is no longer called upon to make loans to Europe upon other than a strictly business basis.

As a result, he said, American financial needs will be cared for first in the future and any further advances made to Europe "must be given most careful consideration."

Mr. Coolidge made clear his disappointment at the European attitude toward this country. He reviewed the liberality with which the United States aided in prosecuting the war at a cost to this country of one hundred billion dollars.

He also reviewed the policy under which the United States sent millions to rehabilitate Europe and contrasted this spirit with European criticisms of this country, failure to pay the war debt, and the general lack of good will toward the United States.

Summing up, the President stated frankly that the American policy toward foreign nations has been one of patience, consideration, restraint, and assistance.

He added, however, America would have more confidence in a policy of assisting financially in the further progress of Europe if "we could obtain a more complete reciprocity of good will, the final liquidation of the balance of our foreign debts, and such further limitation of armaments as would be commensurate with the treaty renouncing war."

Millions of Americans listening over a nation-wide radio hookup heard the President as he delivered his message before a brilliant audience of American officials, foreign diplomats, national officers of the American Legion and hundreds of members and guests of District of Columbia Legion posts.

Cabinet members, justices of the Supreme court and a host of high ranking army and naval officers were included in the audience assembled in the Washington auditorium.

M. Paul Claudel, French ambassador to the United States, and high officials from twenty foreign nations sat in boxes while the President criticized Europe for its failure to co-operate more fully with the activity of the United States.

Prior to his arrival at the auditorium, the President had led the nation in the observance of Armistice day. Motoring with Mrs. Coolidge to Arlington National cemetery, he placed a wreath of red and white carnations and roses on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Mrs. Coolidge placed a single white rose on the soldier's grave.

Immediately after the President's address Commander Paul McNutt of the American Legion and John J. Pershing, commander of the American expeditionary forces during the war, paid high tribute to the American soldiers who fought the war, and urged the American people of today to see that this country is adequately prepared in case of another war.

After paying warm tribute to General Pershing and the American soldiers who fought the World war to a successful conclusion, President Coolidge turned his attention to the question of peace and national defense. He asserted that the American peace policy is one of preparation, limitation, and renunciation of war.

The President riddled the contention of the pacifist that world approval of the Kellogg antiwar treaty will automatically do away with the necessity of an adequate army and navy for the United States. He praised the Kellogg pact as "the most effective instrument of peace that ever has been devised," but warned that this pact must be reinforced with a navy adequate for protective purposes if this country is to live in security.

President-Elect Welcomed on Good-Will Mission.

17 PERSONS KILLED IN FACTORY BLAST

Mother and 5 Children Dead; 11 Blown to Bits.

Boston, Mass.—Seventeen persons are dead and scores are injured, some fatally, from a mysterious series of explosions and a fire at the Freble Box Co. company plant in Lynn.

Included in the death list are a mother and five of her nine children. Of those killed eleven were blown to bits or burned to death at once.

Five others died at Lynn hospital where there were eight probably fatally hurt. Among the dead are Mrs. Harry Blaney and five of her children. Her husband was among the dying. Two of the other Blaney children were injured.

The first explosion set fire to the Blaney home, a few feet from the rear of the factory. All except the father and the smallest child, an infant, were up, and most of the children were getting ready for school. The explosion and flames came at the same time. There was no warning.

All of the workmen in one room of the plant where four different kinds of explosives and inflammables were kept were killed. Two men were blown clear out of the building. Another was blown through the door into the street twenty feet away.

One man died in the arms of a rescuer. Two were saved from immediate death by John Kelly, owner of a nearby laundry, who tore off their blazing clothing and then took them to the hospital.

Explanations for the tragedy, the worst in Lynn's history, varied from the usual "lighted cigarette" to possible spontaneous combustion of explosive chemicals in the factory.

Many Killed, Homeless, as Lava Sweeps Towns

Riposto, Sicily.—Many persons already have perished in the flood of molten stone and several villages laid in ruins resulting from the most serious eruption of Mount Etna in twenty-eight years.

Eighteen square miles of the richest citrus land in all Sicily have been devastated by the eruption, engineers who made an aerial survey of the district report. The engineers reported the town of Muzina had been destroyed by the flow of lava. It is the sixth village to fall before the blazing torrent.

Geologists declared that only a third of the lava seething in the volcano has been ejected, and in all probability the flow of molten stone will reach the Ionian sea this week, an event that has not happened in two centuries.

Eruptions within the eruption have caused the lava to flow with renewed intensity, geologists said. The latest months to open were on the northeast side of the old volcano, and the belching of lava caused a red glare which could be viewed from the mainland, where thousands of tourists had gathered to witness the unusual spectacle of a volcano in full eruption.

Nearly 20,000 people have been made homeless by the eruption and subsequent flow of lava.

HOOPER IS TO MAKE VISIT TO S. AMERICA

President-Elect Welcomed on Good-Will Mission.

Palo Alto, Calif.—President-Elect Herbert Hoover is being swamped with telegrams of welcome from South America on his proposed tour of that country which now is planned to start within a few days.

The U. S. S. Maryland, flagship of the Pacific battle fleet, now at San Francisco, is being placed in readiness for the President-Elect and his party.

Special trains, ships and other equipment have been offered him for sight-seeing trips through the South America sections.

Many of the cablegrams of welcome are written in Spanish. Mr. Hoover has employed a translator to handle the messages. His associates describe these cablegrams as the first fruits of the projected good-will mission.

An invitation is understood to have been received from Nicaragua, urging him to visit this troubled nation.

Mr. Hoover's quarters will be in the main stern of the Maryland. He will have four rooms and a private bath. Members of his party will occupy quarters of the ship's officers. All but six of the ship's junior officers have been ordered off the Maryland to make room.

Mr. Hoover, as the personal representative of President Coolidge in his good-will mission, is taking along the State department and other governmental officials to gather information and establish contacts between these division chiefs and South American officials.

The present plan is for the trip to end in Florida about the middle of January, giving Mr. Hoover six weeks in which to hold cabinet and other conferences.

Sailing south from San Diego, the President-Elect would put in first at the western gateway to the Panama canal, and spend a day in inspection there.

From here his route is along the way of the Spanish conqueror, Pizarro, who carried the sword and the cross among the palaces of the Incas. He will ride in comfort across the Andes and compare this range with our own Sierras. The strengthening of the consular and commercial attaches service in the various republics will be one of Mr. Hoover's aims.

During his administration as secretary of commerce he built up the commercial service, put the attaches in a recognized rank and made them the most useful adjunct to American business. They were able to supply him with the latest and most accurate information on all trade conditions.

As an engineer who has been in many pioneer lands, the undeveloped resources of the southern continent command Mr. Hoover's keen interest and as to natural resources the country is rich and varied.

In all the great cities of the world Mr. Hoover can now find himself at home with friends, put his finger on the right men to get done the things he wants done. He knows them by contact. But he does not know South America in this way and this is the main reason for the trip. He is looking forward to it as the groundwork for an understanding that will be of great value to both parts of the continent when he takes the helm of state.

283 Americans Are Each Making Million a Year

Washington.—Ten Americans boast annual incomes of $5,000,000 or more each, the Internal revenue bureau revealed in making public its statistics for 1922.

These ten Croesuses shared among them last year incomes amounting to $89,000,000. Two hundred and seventy-three other men and women enjoyed incomes ranging from $1,000,000 a year up.

They paid taxes to Uncle Sam on an aggregate income of $497,000,000. Although there were fewer persons in the $5,000,000 class than in 1922, which it reported, the number of incomes between $1,000,000 and $5,000,000 set a new high record.

Counting all persons with incomes of $1,000,000 or more, New York had ninety-two; Pennsylvania, thirty-seven; Illinois, twenty; Michigan, twelve; New Jersey, ten; California, nine; Ohio, nine; Massachusetts, eight; Indiana, six; Delaware, five; Florida and Wisconsin, four each; Oklahoma and Maryland, three each.

Kohler Will Not Live in Executive Mansion

President-Elect Welcomed on Good-Will Mission.

Gov.-Elect W. J. Kohler.

Madison.—Gov.-elect Walter J. Kohler will not occupy the executive mansion here after he assumes his duties the first of the year.

The mansion was occupied by former Gov. Blaine during his three terms and has been the home of Gov. Zimmerman, but the late Gov. E. L. Phillips lived in a hotel in Madison during his three terms.

Mr. Kohler is said to have informed friends during his campaign that he planned to maintain his home at Kohler village and "commute" by airplane between there and the capitol during week-ends.

Hoover Carried 58 Wisconsin Counties

Republican Candidate Has Plurality of 99,000 in State; Kohler Wins for Governor by 134,000.

Milwaukee—Reports on the general election from practically all of the precincts in the state indicate that the plurality of Herbert Hoover, republican candidate for president, in Wisconsin over Al Smith will be about 99,000. Figures on the basis of reports from 2,584 precincts out of 2,743 in the state, are:

Hoover 518,283
Smith 420,807
Smith carried only 13 of the 71 counties in the state, Brown, Calumet, Crawford, Fond du Lac, Iron, Kewaunee, Langlade, Manitowick, Marathon, Milwaukee, Ozaukee, Portage and Washington.

Kohler won by 134,000. Walter Kohler, the republican candidate for governor, considerably bettered the Hoover margin. On the basis of reports from 2,497 precincts out of 2,743, Mr. Kohler had a plurality of 134,229 over Albert G. Schmedeman, mayor of Madison, the democratic candidate. The figures were:

Kohler 480,066
Schmedeman 345,837
The republican candidate carried all but 10 counties—Brown, Calumet, Dane, which is Mayor Schmedeman's home county, Dodge, Jefferson, Kewaunee, Manitowick, Ozaukee, Portage and Washington. These counties were the seat of democratic strength in years past but more recently have been in the progressive republican columns.

Big Vote Increase. The wide national interest in the Hoover-Smith contest was reflected in Wisconsin by a large increase in the total popular vote. Four years ago 840,159 persons voted in the three-way contest between LaFollette, Davis and Coolidge. The total recorded this year with 159 precincts missing was 939,102 without including the vote cast for minor candidates. The official total probably will be over the million mark.

Incumbents won handily in all contests for the minor state offices. Lieut. Gov. Henry Huber, Secretary of State Theodore Damman, Atty. Gen. John Reynolds and State Treasurer Sol Levitan defeating democratic opponents by margins of two to one or better.

Senator Robert M. LaFollette was re-elected for six years, leading his independent opponent, State Senator W. H. Markham, Horicon, by a 6 to 1 plurality or better. The totals in this contest for 2,035 precincts were:

LaFollette 451,529
Markham 70,288
Berger Defeated for Congress. The only close race for member of congress in Wisconsin was in the fifth (Milwaukee) district, where unofficial returns with one precinct missing showed Victor L. Berger, socialist, the present incumbent, to be 730 votes behind Wm. H. Stafford, republican.

The total Stafford vote, without the missing precinct, was 41,570 and that of Berger was 40,834. Other congressional candidates elected, all republicans, are: First district—Henry Allen Cooper. Second district—Charles A. Kading. Third district—John M. Nelson. Fourth district—John C. Schafer. Sixth district—Florian Lampert. Seventh district—Merlin Hill. Eighth district—E. E. Browne. Ninth district—George J. Schneider. Tenth district—James A. Frear. Eleventh district—H. H. Peavey.

Chippewa Falls—An extensive campaign for sugar beet acreage will be made this month, according to L. E. Flink, manager of the American Beet Sugar Co. plant here. The Chippewa Falls plant has been idle for several years. It will be improved and equipped for capacity production next fall.

Randolph—Water from the local village supply, sent to Madison for a test, has been reported unsafe for drinking purposes.

Drugs Excite the Kidneys, Drink Water

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strain to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the entire tissue clog and the result is all they trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys get the better of lead, your back aches or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, or nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is hot, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist a quart of ounces of Jad Salts. This is a table-spoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act well.

This famous salt is made from acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and cleanse clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus relieving bladder discomfort, curing the Jads Salts is inexhaustible, cures the lithia-water drink and restores the entire system, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

CHAPTER X

The long afternoon and evening...
...the door to the corridor and looked out. Everything was dark, of course, and I could see nothing. So I ventured into the hall, and felt my way to the top of the stairs. Then I stopped and looked down in the hall, into which the moonlight was seeping dully. But nothing was doing there either. Then it occurred to me that none of us had explored the third story of the house. What if something were hiding up there?

ure. So if you don't mind I'll keep that to myself, too!"

I did mind very decidedly, but of course I couldn't say so. Instead, I asked Fred if his guess at things provided for anything happening that night.

"I can't tell," he answered. "It all depends. If the explanation is what I think it is I should say the chances are just about even for some fun to-night. Therefore—he got up—"If you'll permit, I think I'll look over the house and see what I can find out."

"All right," I said. "You can hunt around until your heart's content. But it's nearly ten o'clock, and it seems to me that we'd better get ready for the ghosts instead. I mean put out the lights and go to our rooms and give Perkins a chance to think we've all gone to bed. He'll be waiting to send some word or signal to the spooks when the coast is clear."

The others agreed that I was right; and so we all went upstairs to our rooms. Of course, however, none of us dreamed of going to sleep. Instead, we put the lights out and gathered in Mrs. James' room and talked in whispers by the light of the moon.

Then, faintly but distinctly, we heard some one moving along the corridor outside the door. I thought I recognized that footstep as the one I had heard the night before. It stopped at our door and listened—at least the one who made it listened. Then it passed on and all was still once more.

Two minutes afterward Fred got up. "Ah ha!" he said. "The plot thickens. The third act is at hand. I guess I'll go and reconnoiter a bit."

He started for the door but as he reached it Josephine got up. "I think I'll go, too," she announced calmly. And she went with Fred. That was Josephine's way. When she once made up her mind, she wouldn't change it for any ghost in the world.

I couldn't keep quiet to save my life. I felt sure that things were going on or were about to go on and I was horribly restless. There wasn't a sign of anything happening, and the more nothing happened the more restless I became. Finally I opened the door to the corridor and looked out. Everything was dark, of course, and I could see nothing. So I ventured into the hall, and felt my way to the top of the stairs. Then I stopped and looked down in the hall, into which the moonlight was seeping dully. But nothing was doing there either. Then it occurred to me that none of us had explored the third story of the house. What if something were hiding up there?

Then suddenly I thought I heard a door close upstairs. I suppose it was some earlier sound that had made me think of the third story in the first place. Wonderingly, I gazed up the stairs.

Then I remembered Fred and Josephine. Could they be in the third story? What could they have gone up there for?

Before I knew it I was hurrying up the stairs to the third floor. At the top I stopped to look and listen, and to my amazement, I caught sight of a light streaming from beneath a door.

I was scared, but my dander was up, and I marched along to that door as bold as a lion. As I drew near it I heard the murmur of a voice, but it was not until my hand was on the knob that I recognized it.

My hand dropped. Almost I screamed out. It was Father's voice—Father's! Slowly I realized the situation. Father had been hiding in Dinsmore's folly while the whole city was being ransacked for him. Why he had chosen Dinsmore to hide in, and why he was hiding at all, I did not know. But that he had done it was evident. So it really was Father that I heard talking over the telephone the afternoon before. He was on the upstairs switch of the telephone when I was on the downstairs one.

An instant later I heard Fred laugh; and realized that he had known all along that Father was in the house. I was jumping at conclusions, of course, but I was sure I was jumping right.

Father was up to one of his Wall Street games and had decided for some reason to let people think he had gone out of town. I remembered that he had told some one over the phone to "Buy! Buy! Buy!"

Suddenly I began to wonder what had become of Josephine. She had gone outside with Fred, and—good gracious! She must be with Father, too.

The realization made me heart sick. Had Josephine known all along, too, I wondered. Had Father called her in and not called me? It nearly broke my heart to think that he could do such a thing. Father and I had been such bully pals. I had never thought he would treat me so.

Of course, I ought to have guessed. I ought to have remembered that Josephine and I had been in the house for only a little more than twenty-four hours, and that Father probably hadn't known that we were there for more than half that time. I ought to have understood that he was frightfully busy with that Wall Street "drive" against his intrenchments and that he had no time to talk with Josephine or with me. I ought to have guessed that Josephine had reached Father first, simply because Fred had taken her there and not because Father had sent for her and had forgotten me. I ought to have guessed lots of things. But I didn't; I was too miserable.

Many Accorded Fame They Had Not Earned

The popular belief that Watt was led to invent the steam engine by observing the effect of steam on the kettle lid was described as a myth by Prof. E. N. de C. Andrade in a lecture to children on "Engines" at the Royal Institution, London.

Actually, he said, Watt, as an instrument maker, was asked to repair the model of a Newcomen engine, and by his examination of this he was led to design a more efficient and economic steam engine, in which steam, having been expanded to low pressure in other parts of the engine, did work by virtue of the partial vacuum created by a condenser. It was that principle which was applied in every economical reciprocating or turbine engine of today.

Many other famous discoveries have been called in question, and the claims of inventors and scientists dispelled by the explosion of similar popular myths surrounding their work.

There was a heated controversy as to whether George Stephenson or Sir Humphrey Davy was the first to invent the miners' safety lamp. When the admirers of Davy in 1817 presented him a service of plate those of Stephenson countered with an address and £1,000 in 1818. Henry Bell, the Scottish engineer who placed the first ship, the Comet, on the Clyde in 1812, had to concede priority for the invention to Robert Fulton, an American engineer.

Domain of Certainty
The domain of mathematics is the sole domain of certainty. There and there alone prevail the standards by which every hypothesis respecting the external universe and all observations and all experiments must finally be judged. It is the realm to which all speculation and all thought must repair for chastening and sanitation—the court of last resort, I say it reverently, for all intellectuality whatsoever of demon or man or deity.—From Keyser's "Universe and Beyond."

Forgetful Auntie
Sammy came down for breakfast one morning looking rather scared. He had had a most unpleasant dream, which he began to recount to the family at great length.

He had reached an exciting stage, and his voice had sunk to an impressive whisper, when he stopped short and demanded of his aunt: "And what came next, auntie?"

The lady looked puzzled. "How should I know, Sammy?" she asked. "Why," said Sammy indignantly, "you were there, weren't you?"

Pelicans Easily Tamed
Pelicans though generally wary and difficult of approach, become, when assured of safety, quite fearless; and it is a common sight to see them, in the harbors which they frequent, swim up to the ships to be fed. In certain Egyptian villages they even follow customers about in the fish markets and stand expectantly by for food to be given them.

Set Camel Before Wife
That a camel is worth more than a wife was the declaration of a native of Egypt who recently offered both to an English clergyman. He first offered the wife for the equivalent of $25.

"Why do you want to sell her?" he was asked. "She is old and feisty," was the laconic reply. "Then she would be the laconic reply," the clergyman said. "No fight me," said the clergyman. "No, not an English gentleman," was the answer. The offer being refused, the native then offered the camel for $100.

Fight Quickly Ended
The shortest war that was declared by the sultan of Zanzibar against Great Britain in 1893; it lasted 40 minutes.

CHAINS this winter? NO! Yet, safety all the time—not just when chains are on! And quietness all the time—not just when chains are off!

Cleated tires are the tire industry's answer to winter's most annoying problem. What an innovation!

The picture tells the story. Cleated tires... grip wet roads... bite into snow... are sure-footed in slush and mud... respond effectively to the demands of four-wheel brakes.

AND THEN, after the trying conditions of winter have worn down the cleats, comes into play the standard long mileage Dunlop non-skid balloon tread... ready when spring comes to take over the changed road demands brought about by the difference between winter and spring road conditions.

The winter mileage provided by the cleats themselves is entirely additional to the standard tread mileage.

Dunlop considers this winterized tire one of the greatest of its many inventions for the safety and comfort of motorists.

National Mottoes. The English translations of the mottoes of Germany, Holland and Belgium are Germany—God with us; The Netherlands—I will maintain; Belgium—Union makes strength.

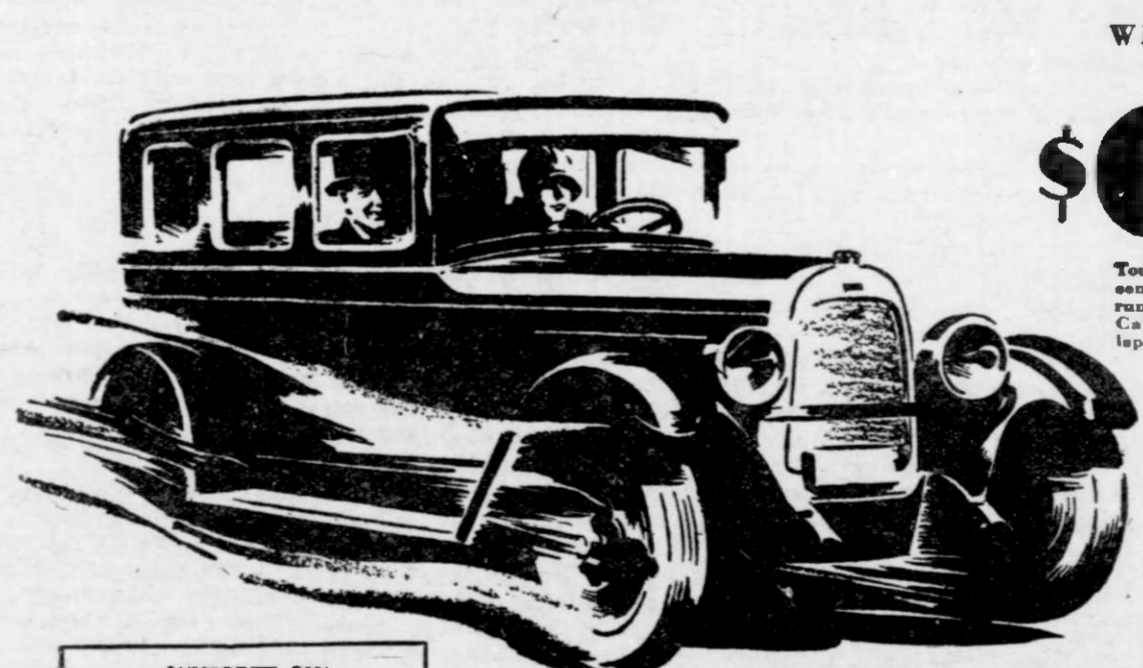

That's the Question. "Anyway," said the aviator, "when you are in an airplane you always are sure of getting back to earth." "And how?" retorted the captain of a submarine.

Exactly. "Some are born great; others make themselves great." But the majority grate upon their fellows.

To the first half-million new Ford owners

To the half-million men and women who have received new Fords in the last eleven months, there is no need to dwell on the performance of the car. You have tested its speed on the open road. In traffic you have noted its quick acceleration and the safety of its brakes. You know how it climbs the hills. On long trips and over rough stretches you have come to appreciate its easy-riding comfort. Continuous driving has proved its economy of operation and low cost of up-keep. This is an invitation to you to take full advantage of the service facilities of the Ford dealer organization so that you may continue to enjoy many thousands of miles of carefree, economical motoring. The point is this. You have a great car in the new Ford. It is simple in design, constructed of the best materials and machined with unusual accuracy. It is so well-made, in fact, that it requires surprisingly little attention. Yet that doesn't mean it should be neglected. Like every other fine piece of machinery, it will serve you better and longer if given proper care. One of the best ways to do this is to take your car to the Ford dealer every 1000 miles for oiling and greasing and a check-up on the little things that have such a great bearing on your life and continuously good performance. Such an inspection means a great deal to your car. To you it means thousands of miles of motoring without a care—without ever hitting the hood. Ford dealers everywhere have been specially trained and equipped to service the new Ford. You will find them prompt and reliable in their work, fair in their charges, and sincerely eager to help you get the greatest possible use from your car for the longest period at a minimum of trouble and expense. That is the true meaning of Ford Service.

Feeders Agree That Grain Must Be Ground for Feed

Save 12-26% on Your Grain Bill

Feeders with whole grain, fed to healthy, full-toothed animals, show an average loss of from 12% to 26%. In other words, out of every 100 bushels of whole corn fed, 26 bushels are practically no nourishment. The unground oat diet shows a loss of 12 bushels out of every 100. Even though you feed whole grain, such feeding losses cannot be overlooked. Feed your animals, now and then, with a McCormick-Deering Feed Mill. It will turn the whole grain into nourishing, easily digested feed at low cost. We can show you the McCormick-Deering Feed Mill meets your special requirements. Our Feed Mill headquarters for McCormick-Deering Shellers, Grinders and Tractors. Modern equipment for the modern farm. Mill in three sizes, 6, 8 and 10 inches.

SMART EVENING ENSEMBLES; BACK OF COAT IS IMPORTANT

THERE was a time when it took considerable courage to wear red. Of course that was in those dull days when the fashionable world did not feel the keen urge for color which it does in this age of modernistic trends. Today it takes courage not to wear red, for red is an outstanding choice of the mode. Various tones of this color are now generally adopted for millinery, for frocks, for coats, for thought that, if they take care of the back view, the front view will take care of itself. Rather good logic this, for what with the lavishness of deeply reversed collars of fur and other luxurians furring, there's no doubt as to the charm of the coat viewed from the front. To make it an all-around proposition is the problem which is causing designers to work imagination to the straining point. However, it has be-sweaters and for all sorts of accessories from handbags to shoes. Especially is red playing a radiant role in the evening mode. Most every formal occasion is glorified with costumes of exquisite transparent red velvet, or perhaps of chiffon in a rich Castilian red, or that which is all rich—wine-colored malines. An evening ensemble which stresses the enchantment of red is shown in this picture. By the way, to be ultra smart, one's dinner and opera costumes must carry out the ensemble idea, not so much in the spirit of matching fabrics as to employing identical color for both wrap and gown. The dress shown here is designed with a draped-to-one-side scalloped hemline. The coat is of red velvet, the same tone as the dress, but lined with a deeper shade. The new round collar and cuffs of blue fox add to the effectiveness of the ensemble. Red for evening is especially interesting in lace dinner frocks. Topped with a red-toned velvet coat the composite is most beguiling. The dance gown of deep-wine malines is another of fashion's favorites this season. No matter how imcome an incentive to give fabric manipulation an impetus to achieve through unusual seamings and tuckings most gratifying results.

Many of the modish tweed and other novelty woolsens coats boast tucks down the back as you see in the garment to the left in the picture. In this instance the same sort of tuckling is repeated on the deep cavalier cuffs and the huge patch pockets.

Insets of a contrasting material also achieve interesting patternings. This method was effectively employed in the styling of the black broadcloth coat to the right. Strips of heavy black satin are so inserted as to form a modernistic design. In just as many instances a reverse of the cloth is used in place of a different fabric. This coat also typifies a new trend—that of trimming black broadcloth with sumptuous light fur.

Returning to the subject of back views, not only coats make this outstanding but frocks as well. The desired effects are sometimes attained by caplets and half-capes, or scarf ends are frequently brought to the back and tied. When collars are high pressively bouffant and generously flared the skirt may be, the bodice is usually very simple and extremely décolleté. To climax its charm, the red malines frock takes into itself a sleeveless or sleeved chiffon or malines cocktail jacket, as fashion so terms it. This charming little fantasy is apt to be very much bespangled with sequins in accurately matched coloring—which goes to show what alluring themes have entered the midwinter evening picture.

In creating cloth coats fashionists now seem to be inspired with the standing at the back, as so many are, flat bows of fur form a favorite finish at the neckline, also helping to hold the collar up in position.

A new collar line is established for coats this season, since neckerchiefs of thin fur have come into fashion. These are draped about the shoulders as were the silk squares during the summer. Often they are so knotted as to present striking lines viewed from the back as well as in the front of the coat.

The Velvet Season

Never were the velvets more alluring than they are this season, and it is able to resist them. Not only the colors but the designs are extremely wearable, for many have small confetti-like decorations in soft colors.

Day Dress of Tweeds

A smart little dress for all-day long wear, which has the added merit of a short jacket attached, is of tweed.

Scintillating Season

Evening accessories predict glittering ballroom scenes. Scarfs, bags, kerchiefs, fans and evening jackets are most stylish when made of gleaming paillettes in colors slightly richer than pastel shades.

Red Modernism

A gorgeous red crepe frock has modernistic insertings of three lighter shades of red running up the left side of the blouse and the sleeves.

But words are things. A small drop of ink, falling like dew upon a thought, produces that which makes thousands, perhaps millions, think. —Byron.

COLD MEATS

There are numberless tasty dishes that may be prepared with a small amount of delicately cooked and seasoned meat. Ham lends itself to a variety of good things. Its flavor is so well liked. Meat balls of chopped veal, which is rather tasteless of itself, with the addition of a little chopped ham, made into balls, wrapped in a strip of bacon and baked, makes a most delicious meat dish.

Mutton on Toast.—Underdone mutton, cut into neat slices or rounds and reheated in butter with salt and Worcestershire sauce—a tablespoonful will be ample. Place a piece of the mutton on hot, well buttered toast and serve hot. The mutton and sauce may be placed on the toast and baked in the oven.

Barbecued Lamb.—Cut cold roast lamb into thin slices and reheat in a sauce made by melting two tablespoonfuls of butter; add three-fourths of a tablespoonful of vinegar, one-fourth cupful of currant jelly, one-fourth teaspoonful of mustard and salt and cayenne to taste.

Creamed Chicken With Mushrooms.—Cut up bits of leftover chicken. Sauté in butter a handful of mushrooms, add both to a rich white sauce. Let stand over hot water until ready to serve on well buttered rounds of toast.

Mock Terrapin.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of chicken or chicken and veal of equal amount, add to one cupful of white sauce with two hard-cooked eggs finely chopped, and salt and cayenne and cook two minutes, add a spoonful of currant jelly and serve hot.

Salmi of Duck.—Reheat cold roast duck in the following sauce:

Spanish Sauce.—Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add one tablespoonful of finely chopped onion, a stalk of celery, two slices of carrot, and two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped lean, uncooked ham. Cook until the butter is brown, then add one-fourth cupful of flour and when well browned, two cupfuls of stock, a bit of bay leaf, sprig of parsley, blade of mace, two cloves, one-half teaspoonful of salt, bit of pepper; cook five minutes. Strain, add the duck, a few mushrooms and stoned olives cut into bits, with a tablespoonful of melted currant jelly.

Variety in Diet.

For the housemother who has many mouths to feed and a very limited purchasing capacity, there is some excuse for sameness in diet. These are the ones who should have a good knowledge of all food properties and be able with little money to furnish food that is nourishing and wholesome.

If we may pardon an overworked mother for her lack of interest, what justification has the woman of means and leisure in slighting so important a subject? It is sad but too true that thousands of undernourished, listless and unhappy children come from homes of means. Homes where the mother is too indifferent to take the trouble to find out why her child is not right physically or up to grade in school.

With our school nurse and supervision there is still hope that this lack of realizing the importance of keeping up a child's weight to normal, giving it the right kind of food, seeing that it has proper sleep and fresh air at all times, will in a few generations be overcome.

It is unwise as well as unnecessary to serve many varieties of foods in one meal. Often two, well prepared, will satisfy and be much better digested than three or four which even in small quantities often disagree in the digestive tract.

Cornish Pasty.—This is such a good diet for a large family, is so appetizing as well as nourishing that mothers of large families should serve it often.

A pound of round steak with plenty of suet—one-fourth pound will be sufficient. Cut it into half-inch pieces and after lining a large plate with a rich biscuit dough, add the meat and season with salt and pepper, then add a layer of finely shredded onions, a layer of parboiled turnip, then a layer of sliced potatoes, adding plenty of seasonings. Cover with the biscuit dough, make a vent, add a tablespoonful of water and bake for two hours. Cover with a cloth and steam ten minutes before serving.

A small amount of meat taken from that part of the animal which is most exercised, will with plenty of vegetables season a large dish of food. Meat from the chuck, the leg, the neck, when cut, rolled in seasoned flour, browned in fat, then simmered in a small amount of water, adding more occasionally, with plenty of such vegetables as carrot, turnip, cabbage, onions and potato—two of a kind is plenty; this will serve a satisfying meal to young and old.

Worked Out With Football Team

Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia, lightweight champion of the world, is working out with the Georgetown university football squad...

Want Dignity, Grace in Gridiron Rooting

The Pacific Coast Association of College Yell Leaders decided at a meeting at Berkeley that something ought to be done to raise the standard of organized rooting at football games.

St. Louis Cardinals Win Many Boxes of Apples

As the result of an offer made at the opening of the world series, Babe Ruth and those members of the St. Louis Cardinals whose batting eyes were good, will enjoy boxes of Golden Delicious apples this winter.

To encourage the Cardinals, the Stark Nurseries of Louisiana, Mo., at the beginning of the series offered apples as prizes to the Cardinal players.

Sporting Squibs

The American game of football is now played by college teams in Mexico.

The eight football coaches at West Point are graduates of the military academy.

Bob Johnstone has served as professional with the Seattle Golf club for more than twenty years.

Northwestern lost one of its best prospects when Lefty Carter, halfback, broke his collarbone the second day out.

Clarence Mitchell, veteran pitcher of the Cardinals, is the one and only left-handed spitball hurler in the history of big league baseball.

How could they do it? In 1883 the Boston club won the pennant of the National league, using only twelve players throughout the entire season.

Rene de Vos, middleweight, proved the best fighter Belgium has sent to America, by whipping Dave Shadle at Philadelphia. The Belgian is a combination fighter-boxer.

Major Frank Cavanaugh at Fordham university is not the only college football mentor now coaching a son. Hugo Bedek has his youngest under his wing at Penn State.

A trio of brothers are performing on University of California gridiron teams this season. Frank and Harry Gill are on the varsity and Ralston Gill is a yearling hopeful.

Bill Baerbach, Illinois Athletic club's swimming coach, never won a swimming race. He seldom goes in the water, contenting himself with coaching from the side of the pool.

Football rivalry between Indiana university and Wabash dates back 39 years to the opening game of the 1889 season when Wabash trimmed Indiana, 40 to 2.

Reading led the International league in hitting and was tied in fielding with Buffalo and also has the star pitcher of the league but the Keys finish in the second division.

John Leary, Three-Eye league pitcher, has been sold to Connie Mack and, it was said here recently, will be taken South for the spring trip of the Athletics next year.

Jerry Standaert, infielder, has been sold by the Memphis Southern association club to Kansas City of the American association. Standaert came to Memphis from Brooklyn.

The worst score Walter Hagen has ever made in a national open golf championship was 311, at Inwood, 1923. It was also the only time he ever wore a hat during a links tournament.

Johnny Callahan, veteran jockey, retires with a record of 27 years in the saddle, more than 6,000 mounts, approximately 1,200 winners and never a breath of suspicion to tarnish his record.

Stanford's football squad of forty-nine men average 180 pounds to the man, the total weight being 8,508 pounds this year.

Miles Lane, former all-round athlete of Dartmouth, has signed a contract to play for the New York Rangers, world's professional hockey champions, during the coming season.

Alabama Poly, a few years ago one of the strongest teams in the South, lost its first two games this year to minor schools.

IMPORTANCE OF GRID BUSINESS

Huge Profits Made on Football Sustain Athletics.

Now and then the public gets an inkling of the business importance of football. If one of the boys out on the field accepted a quarter and it became known he would be fired, but so long as he is an amateur he can afford in the greatest business success of the sports world, writes Fred Turbyville in the Louisville Courier-Journal.

After paying the coaches, the business manager and the clerks, outfitting the team and all of that there sometimes it is as much as $200,000 or even $300,000 left in the strong box.

When profits run to $125,000 a year, it is a business, for the investment is small.

The United States Naval Academy has issued a report showing that Navy football is worth more than $1,000,000 a year.

The Navy's money share of these four games amounted to $383,570.82. Navy doesn't charge admission to the football games it plays at the academy. These home games are losses, for the Navy must pay the expenses of the visiting teams and something besides.

Where does that fortune go? The Navy expert shows $161,214.09 being spent on football. The rest is profit.

The report shows that it costs about $250 to carry one football player through the season properly equipped.

But the difference between the cost of football for a year and the football revenues is not all in the bank on interest. For football at the Naval academy, the same as at any other school, must help keep all athletics alive.

It is reported that $250,000 is the cost of conducting all sports at the Naval academy for a single year. So there is more than $100,000 profit.

It sports grow in popular interest this profit will grow. There may, of course, be a falling off and some year would show a deficit, but it is not reasonable to believe that there will be more than one bad year in four or five. Suppose it is one bad year in four. That means that the profits for the three good years would amount to $300,000 and if the deficit for the bad year was only $100,000 there still would be a net profit of $200,000 for the four years.

Of the $250,000 spent for athletics at the academy only $22,500 is spent for instructors in athletics.

At the end of the year there was a total of $220,703.97 in the bank.

The cost of football has been increasing gradually. Of course, there will be increased costs of administration along as business grows, but it shouldn't cost a lot more for a team this year than it did several years ago.

Many Records Set by Yanks in 1928 Series

Here are a few of the records established by the Yankees in the 1928 world's series:

Won eight straight games. Swept two series.

Nine runs in by Gehrig, exceeding Meusel's figure made in 1923.

Ruth's series average of .625, breaking Gowdy's of .545 which has stood since 1914.

Ruth's thirteen home runs in all series he has been in.

Ruth's scoring of thirty-one runs in all series.

Ruth's driving in of twenty-six runs in all series.

Ruth's total bases, eighty-five, to all series.

Gehrig's five straight bases on balls—two Sunday and three recently.

Ruth tied his record of home runs in a single game. He hit three in St. Louis in 1920.

Players' pool biggest in world's series history.

Is Most Valuable

Gordon Cochrane, star backstop with the Philadelphia Athletics, was the American league's most valuable player during the recent season, according to the judgment of the committee of baseball writers appointed for the purpose. The findings of the body were announced by E. S. Barnard, president of the league.

Patch Up Lazzari

Tony Lazzari, the game second baseman of the New York Yankees whose painful shoulder injury did not keep him out of the world's series because he would not let it, plans to have the ailing member patched up during the winter. He may go under the care of Dr. Robert Hyland, physician for the two St. Louis clubs, who operated recently on Eddie Foush of the Giants. Jack Cunningham, Giant catcher, is also scheduled to have a growth removed from his shoulder.

Over Million Members

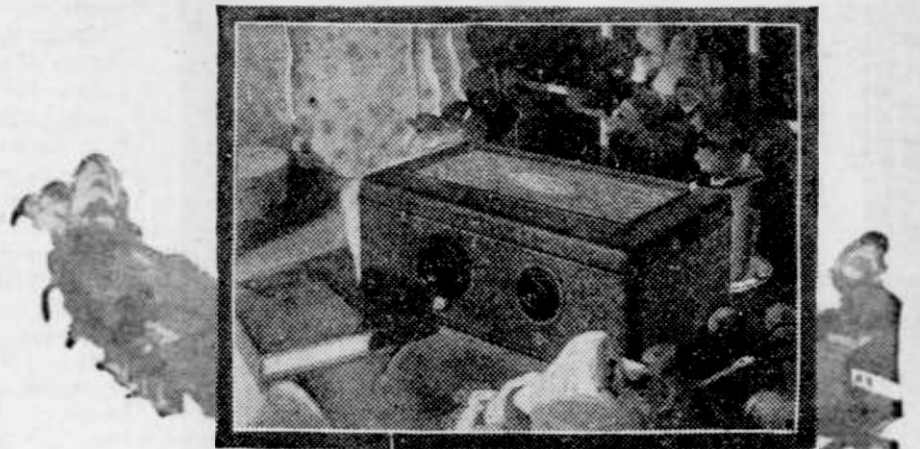

The Workers' Athletic union of Germany alone has over 1,000,000 members. It publishes a school for the training of teachers of physical culture, and owns the largest athletic goods store in the country. Among its subdivisions there are clubs of bicycle enthusiasts, clubs for so-called light athletes, football teams, wrestling teams and, more recently, boxing clubs. In cities located on lakes or rivers there are rowing clubs.
