GREETINGS

"Peace on Earth"—a thought sent through mortal flesh—gave to man a vision which has survived through more than nineteen hundred years of strife, ever advancing until today, nations know and have turned to a discussion of outlawing war. It was not nor is not a false promise from creative power. Instead only a rule of life, so simple that man has found it difficult to believe and follow its tenets. It is this: "A Little Child Shall Lead." With that understanding, true humility and simple faith, the wonders of "Peace on Earth" unfold. Not by might, not by power; but by the Spirit of God born in the life of man. HAIL CHRISTMAS 1928.

LANTERN USED TO INSPECT GAS PLANT

Accompanied by his son and a neighbor, a town of Ashford farmer carried a lighted lantern to a garage on his farm Sunday night to find out if an acetylene plant which had repaired earlier in the day was working. It was—with the result that the three men were seriously burned and the interior of the garage was wrecked.

CARD OF THANKS
The lantern that the elder man carried into the garage could not be found after the explosion. The entire plant was wrecked and part of it was blown through the roof.

REWARD OFFERED
For information leading to the apprehension of the guilty party or parties who took the culvert from the highway leading from New Prospect to Forest Lake, about Nov. 10 or 12. A reward will be offered by the town board of the town of Auburn, to the person giving the above information.

KEWASKUM HIGH SCHOOL COLUMN

School closed Friday for the Christmas recess. It will reopen again on Wednesday, Jan. 2.

The Christmas program given by all of the departments on Thursday evening was well attended.

The Senior Class play will be given the first week in February.

Twenty-eight of the forty people to whom 100 Christmas seals were sent have purchased all of the seals an estimated report on the receipts of the seal sale is that it will total close to $60.00.

The Seniors are entertaining the high school at a dancing party in the gym on Friday afternoon. The three grade rooms are also having their separate Christmas parties on Friday afternoon.

The Kewaskum basket ball team defeated the Campbellsport team on Friday evening of last week by a 12 to 16 score. On Jan. 1, the team plays Rosendale there.

The Farmers and Merchants State Bank is giving away a beautiful set of candles in various colors, a set for the home. We also want you to enter our contest, "HOW LONG WILL THE GIANT CANDLE BURN", now burning in our lobby. Three prizes will be given for the three persons guessing the nearest length of time the candle will burn.

Also don't forget to ask for your servicable FRANKLIN CALENDAR.

TO EXPAND MOON LAKE REFUGE

Expansion of the wild life refuge at Moon Lake, located about seven miles northeast of Kewaskum, is being planned by the Izaak Walton league chapter of Milwaukee, which purchased a large tract of land at the lake some years ago to establish the refuge.

Expansion of the refuge was voted at a meeting of 500 members of the chapter at Milwaukee Monday night. Plans for maintaining the refuge were also formed by the chapter.

The Fond du Lac county project, according to Haskell Noyes, refuge chairman and state conservation commissioner, has already cost the organization $15,000 and it will require $10,000 more during the next two years. Despite this expense, the chapter refused to turn the refuge over to the state or to private interests as had been suggested.

Commissioner Noyes advocated a two-day rest period each week for hunter and fowl during the open duck season, arguing that such a scheme would protect the birds and aid the hunter as well.

"The two-day-a-week plan would give the birds a resting time so they would not be chased out of the state but would remain for the Wisconsin hunters," Noyes said discussing his plan.

WILL GIVE CHRISTMAS PROGRAM
An interesting program will be given at the Campbell School on Saturday evening, Dec. 23. Everybody is invited to come.—Miss Alpha Meilahn, Teacher.

Badger State Happenings

New London—A resident of New London for 71 years, Albert Stern, Sr., 82, Civil war veteran, died at his home here.

Wautoma—A county agricultural agent will be hired in Wautoma county as the result of action of the county board creating that office.

Plymouth—The State Equity society, in convention here, re-elected President George Nelson, Milltown, and Miss Mae Cobban, secretary, for another year.

Beloit—While returning to his home in the country with his collections from his milk customers W. J. Cronin, dairy farmer, was robbed of $400 by two holdup men.

Madison—Seed corn grown in Wisconsin, if properly handled, will give better results than any other kind, says A. H. Wright of the Wisconsin college of agriculture.

Chicago—Final summaries of the international livestock exposition, held here, show that Wisconsin exhibitors won 32 first prizes and 18 championships. Iowa had by far the best exhibitors, winning 130 firsts and 71 championships.

Tomah—The new method of testing milk and cream for butter fat content by mail is now in operation in Monroe county, after slight delays in getting equipment. Two men are kept busy getting out reports and records and doing the testing.

Kimberly—An average of 232 eggs per hen a year was the record set by a flock of 43 White Leghorns owned by Peter Van Sanbeck. During the year ending Nov. 1 these hens laid 9,970 eggs. During the last 10 years Mr. Van Sanbeck has kept chickens as a hobby. The average earning per chicken has been $3 every year except one. In 1918 his flock of 65 hens produced $3.65 apiece.

Ladysmith—The Ladysmith Milk Producers' Co-operative association held the last of a series of meetings here to decide whether to sell their creamery to eastern capitalists or retain the business. A large percentage signed a three-year contract to continue the plant and expressed dissatisfaction with outside ownership. The signers include all of the largest milk producers in the territory.

Coudery—Swift Bird, who was appointed a leader for the Chippewa Indians at the Coudery reservation here, has resigned and returned to his home in South Dakota. He was a Sioux and the first Indian farmer on the reservation. There are about 1,200 Indians on the reservation. Supt. J. P. Ryder at the Indian school at Hayward is in charge of all Indian affairs on the reservation as well as at the school. There are more than 300 Indian children at the Hayward school.

Buett—The Burnett butter and cheese factory has won high honors in the 1923 "beautify our surroundings" contest for Wisconsin cheese factories. The result of which has just been announced by the Marshall dairy laboratory, Madison. A silver medal has been awarded to Robert F. Gronert, operator. Thirty factories in all parts of the state were awarded prizes in this, the sixth of these annual contests, the aim of which is development of neater, more attractive factory grounds.

Merrill—More than 300 children marched quietly to safety when fire broke out in the Cosmo theater during a matinee for children. The children smelled the smoke and started leaving, while the operators ran off another reel of film to help counteract any tendency to panic. The theater building, which housed six business enterprises in addition to apartments for 11 families, was destroyed, with an aggregate loss estimated at more than $70,000. Wausau firemen assisted the Merrill department in the successful fight to save other buildings in the block.

Antigo—Acting on the complaint of a prisoner's wife that her husband was not getting the proper food and care for a man sick with rheumatism, Judge A. N. Whiting summoned into court for an inquiry all the prisoners at the county jail. In the presence of Sheriff Willis Jones and his deputies, the prisoners were questioned as to the quality of food and bedding, sanitation and heat. All admitted that the food was wholesome and well cooked. The county physician testified that the jail was clean and sanitary. None of the prisoners, it seemed, had complained to the sheriff.

Berlin—Loss of a leg impaired but slightly the skating skill of Roy Fox, who, with an artificial leg, is able to do most of the difficult stunts on the ice for which he has been famous here. Mr. Fox lost his leg in a shooting accident several months ago.

Madison—Although a man served 40 days in jail for killing a wolf when he had no hunting license, he is entitled to the $30 bounty on the animal, Atty. Gen. John W. Reynolds advised Louis B. Nagler, director of conservation.

Stanley—Poultry shipments totaled 72,000 pounds during a two-week period previous to Thanksgiving, 49,000 pounds of which represented live and dressed turkeys. The record of 18 tons of turkeys shipped out during the same period in 1927 was exceeded by five tons in 1928.

Appleton—After being divorced four years, Julius Carstensen, 61, and his former wife, Emma, 51, both of Route 1, Black Creek, have decided to make a second attempt at married life.

Berlin—Treatment for tuberculosis, a disease contracted from rabbits, is being given Helen Stanley, 16-year-old high school student here.

Madison—Lee I. Yorkson, secretary of the Wausau Chamber of Commerce, was unanimously elected manager of the 1929 Wisconsin goal will tour by the tour committee here.

Green Bay—Joseph F. Jilot was sentenced to serve from one to three years at Waupun for embezzlement of a legacy of $2,400 that belonged to his three children by Judge N. J. Mouabhan in municipal court here.

Antigo—The explosion of a can of kerosene which she was using to light a stove so badly burned Mrs. Marvin Pitts, 43, of the village of Lily, that she died 12 hours later. Four children and her husband survive.

Elkhorn—The Walworth County Agricultural society, sponsor of the county fair, will start next year with a budget of $11,000. Ora P. Taylor reports in his annual statement. Receipts this fall were more than $65,000. Attendance was the largest on record.

Janesville—A petition to discontinue the Janesville-Beloit interurban line has been filed with the state railroad commission, it was learned. The company declares the line is losing money. Its business having been impaired by the bus lines operating between the two cities.

Madison—Resignation of Ralph Bretting, chairman of the Wisconsin highway commission, was received here by Gov. Fred R. Zimmerman. The northern Wisconsin man was appointed to the commission by the governor last year to fill the unexpired term of J. H. Nemacheck, resigned.

Marinette—Atty. A. H. Rose, Marinette, receiver of the bankrupt State Bank of Crivitz, Marinette county, has announced that a 20 per cent dividend will be paid all depositors and general creditors. The dividend will amount to $22,000. Liquidation of the assets of the bank made the payment possible.

La Crosse—A. H. Yennie and Peter Olson, Rochester, Minn., were arrested here in possession of seven silver fox pelts worth $2,000. When they attempted to sell them to a local fur dealer for $550 he became suspicious and tipped off police. Police here learned from Rochester officials that foxes had been stolen from a fox farm there.

Fond du Lac—Sheriff F. W. Schlaak will be reduced in rank Jan. 1, but will continue to serve the county, it was learned when Sheriff-Elect Alfred Vande Zande announced the appointment of the present official as undersheriff for the next two-year term. Schlaak and Vande Zande, in fact, will just be changing places, the incoming official having been undersheriff the last two years.

Crandon—Venison parties are the vogue in this city after the close of the deer season and are given by both those who were good shots and those who have money enough to pay 60 cents a pound for fawn and doe meat. Game wardens are bringing all the does and fawns confiscated or found shot in Forest county to a local butcher shop which has a permit to buy and retail them.

Kenosha—Contrary to the prediction that the council would double the tax rate if the city manager form of government was upheld at the recent special election, the administration has announced that the rate will remain the same—29 mills—for this year. Supporters of the managerial plan point to this rate as an argument against aldermanic government in general. When the old system was voted out in 1921, the rate was 35 mills. It has been hammered down year by year and has stood at the present figure for three years.

Milwaukee—Market quotations: Butter—Creamery, fresh extras, tubs, 49 1/2c; extra firsts, 47c-48c. Cheese—Twins, 22 1/2c-23c; daisies, 23c-23 1/2c; young Americas, 23c-23 1/2c; brick, 22 1/2c-23c; limburger, 24 1/2c-25c. Eggs—Fresh gathered firsts, 35c-37c. Poultry—Fowls, 19c-24c; springers, 26c-27c; old roosters, 19c; ducks, 22c-25c; geese, 23c; turkeys, 25c-34c. Potatoes—Wisconsin white No. 1 sacked, 95c-1.00 cwt. Barley—Choice to fancy, 75c-76c; fair to good, 64c-74c. Corn—No. 4 yellow, 80c-81 1/2c; No. 4 white, 79 1/2c-80 1/2c. Oats—No. 3 white, 46c-49 1/2c. Rye—No. 2, $1.07-1.190. Hogs—Fair to best butchers, $8.00-8.45; fair to good lights, $8.00-8.60; pigs, $7.00-7.75. Cattle—Steers, fair to choice, $10.00-16.00; heifers, $7.50-12.50; cows, $6.50-9.00; calves, $11.50-12.50. Sheep—Lambs, good to choice, $13.25-13.50; fair to good, $12.00-13.00; ewes, $4.00-6.25.

Wabeno—His body crushed when he was thrown out of his wagon during a runaway, William S. Adam, 60, a farmer from the town of Freedom, was killed here. Several school children riding with Adam escaped serious injury.

Nellsville—The Pine Valley condenser here, with a capacity of 78,000 pounds a day, has been sold by Walter Zbinden to the American Stores Dairy Co., Philadelphia. The price is said to have been about $50,000.

Mellen—Eleven Stevens Point hunters, charged with having doe meat and partridge in their possession, are to be arraigned before Justice of the Peace R. D. Levitt here Dec. 19. A twelfth member of the hunting party pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $50 and costs.

Waupaca—Compulsory vaccination of all local school pupils was ordered here by Dr. V. A. Gudex of the state board of health at Madison, on the strength of a report that the children had been exposed to smallpox.

PARAGUAY, BOLIVIA IN BORDER BATTLES

Many Killed; Forts, Prisoners Taken in Clashes.

Asuncion, Paraguay.—A decree mobilizing the classes between eighteen and twenty-nine years of age was published, the action declared necessary for defense, as provided by the constitution, and was approved by President Guzagari.

La Paz, Bolivia.—Unofficial reports of the fighting in the Chaco district said the Bolivian troops had captured 30 wagons loaded with provisions and munitions and a tractor beside numerous prisoners. It was said that more than 100 Paraguayan soldiers were killed while the Bolivian losses were said to have been light.

Buenos Aires.—The Asuncion correspondent of La Prensa said that Paraguayan troops had recaptured Fort Mariscal Lopez (Fort Boqueron) in the Gran Chaco territory after a counter attack upon Bolivian forces were forced to retire and were pursued by the Paraguayan soldiers.

Lugano.—President Aristide Briand of the council of the League of Nations told newspaper men that he would immediately convene a special session of the council in Paris if either Bolivia or Paraguay makes formal declaration of war.

Washington.—Cables received in Washington indicated war between Bolivia and Paraguay virtually is inevitable unless stronger pressure is applied by the American republics.

In the wake of new outbreaks along the disputed wilderness boundary line where the two Latin-American nations are maintaining bloody contact, the Paraguayan legation announced that its government has ordered that more urgent measures be taken at once to protect its territory.

A cable received by Senor Juan V. Ramirez, charge d'affaires of Paraguay, from his government, was made public at the legation. It stated:

"Bolivia has undertaken warlike hostilities against Paraguay, attacking its military positions on its frontiers near the Pilcomayo river, and dropping bombs from several airplanes over Bahia Negra, a fort situated on the Paraguay river near the Brazilian frontier.

"A small Paraguayan fort garrisoned by 30 men has been captured. "In view of this new, more extensive aggression, deliberate and unjust, the government of Paraguay has been forced to accede to the imperative necessity of taking urgent measures for the protection of its territory."

Commenting on the cable dispatch from his government, Senor Ramirez said:

"There has thus been confirmed the fact denounced by this legation a few days ago, that Bolivia was concentrating troops and war material in an attitude of aggression on the Paraguayan frontiers. Bolivia is merely seeking a pretext to cause the outbreak of war which she has been preparing against Paraguay in the belief that she could obtain in this way what she could not hope for through arbitration or other peaceful and judicial procedure." (Most of the disputed territory was awarded to Paraguay by United States President Hayes, who acted as arbiter, in the seventies.)

"Bolivia wants war because she is prepared for it, and it now appears that, despite world opinion which clamors for a peaceful solution of international conflicts, and despite the good disposition of Paraguay, she is going to get what she wants."

Delegates to the Pan-American conference for the pacific settlement of international disputes, meeting in Washington for the purpose of working out new arbitration and conciliation treaties, had no public comment to make on the latest development in the disputed territory. It is clear, however, that the optimism of a few days ago has largely disappeared. Some of the delegates were of the opinion that more heroic measures will have to be taken to bring the two governments into line.

HOPE TO ADD MOTOR UNIT TO U. S. ARMY

Secy. of War Davis and Chief Summerall Approve.

Washington.—A project for the incorporation in the American army of a motorized machine unit equipped with modern tanks, armored cars and other motorized material, has been approved by Secretary of War Davis and Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, army chief of staff.

This move to increase the mobility and fire power of this country's land fighting forces is expected to result eventually in a radical change in the organization of the American army through the substitution of machines for man power on a scale undreamed of a few years ago.

Action was taken by the War department on the recommendation of the department's special machine development board, appointed several months ago to explore the possibilities of armored motorized units in modern battle.

The board, headed by Col. Charles S. Lincoln, visualized the substitution of fast, powerfully armed machine units for the man power which now comprises the assault battalions depended upon to break through enemy lines. It warned that machines must be adopted on a greater scale in the American army, of this country's land forces would go down to certain defeat in event of a war.

Steps immediately to build up a machine striking force composed of 2,000 men armed with modern tanks, cross country cars, ammunition carts, cargo carriers, and cross country machines for the quick transportation of infantrymen and artillery over all kinds of terrain, were recommended by the board. If the first of such experimental units were successful then others would be organized and incorporated in the army to the extent experience showed them to be practicable.

Secretary Davis said the board's recommendations would be in part adopted and congress will be asked to include sufficient funds in the 1931 budget to purchase one-third of the equipment for the armored force.

The board has recommended that the material be purchased in three installments, the first to be authorized by the present congress for acquisitions in 1930. A threatened deficit this year caused the War department to delay the modernization program one year. Unless congress moves to speed up the action it will be several years before the army is placed on a machine basis which will give it the striking power recommended by the experimental board.

Dickinson, Former Secy. of War Is Dead at 78

Chicago.—Jacob M. Dickinson, former secretary of war in the cabinet of President Taft and a former president of the American Bar association, died in St. Luke's hospital here. He was nearly seventy-eight years old.

Judge Dickinson was a distinguished southern lawyer who had served on the Supreme court bench of Tennessee, before he came to Chicago in 1890, as general counsel of the Illinois Central railroad.

$5,000 Reward for Couple's Slayings

Easton, Ohio.—Preble county commissioners have offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest and conviction of two robbers who shot and killed Dr. Horatio Silver, fifty-five years old, and his wife in their home here.

To Build 9 Grain Elevators

Lethbridge, Alberta.—Nine new grain elevators of 40,000 bushel capacity each are to be built at once by the Alberta wheat pool, according to an official statement.

HOOVER WIRES GOOD WILL TOUR SUCCESS

Message by Direct Cable From Buenos Aires.

Washington.—President-Elect Hoover has officially reported to President Coolidge on the marked success of his good will tour through the Latin-American republics.

The message to the President was delivered by Mr. Hoover during the course of a protracted telegraphic conversation here by the President-Elect and Secretary of State Kellogg over a direct wire to South America.

Taking advantage of courtesies extended by the Argentine telegraph service, Mr. Hoover sent a message to the State department, stating that he wished to communicate with the secretary over a direct telegraph wire.

A few seconds later the State department telegraph operator informed Mr. Kellogg that President-Elect Hoover was standing near the telegraph key at Buenos Aires and would dictate a message. The secretary took up a position behind the telegraph operator and read the message as it came in. As soon as the messages arrived Mr. Kellogg replied.

In both the messages sent by Mr. Hoover the President-Elect spoke enthusiastically of the many manifestations of good will toward America he had seen displayed by the people of the countries he had visited. In reply Mr. Kellogg stated that both he and President Coolidge had been much gratified by the splendid reception the Hoover party had received.

"I have the unique opportunity of direct communication with you through the courtesy of the Argentine Telegraph Service," Mr. Hoover informed Secretary Kellogg. "I wish to report to the President and yourself the most courteous and enthusiastic welcome and reception by the President and the people of Argentina."

"They at every hand show the most genuine friendliness. The government, the press and the people alike have joined to indicate their good will towards our government, and our people."

(Signed) HERBERT HOOVER.

"It is a great pleasure to receive your message through the courtesy of the Argentine Telegraph Service," Mr. Kellogg replied. "The President and I are very much gratified by the enthusiastic and splendid reception which you have received from the President and the people of Argentina. This reception demonstrates to the people of the United States the ties of friendship between our countries. Will you please convey to the President and officials of the Argentine the sincere thanks of the President and the people of the United States for this splendid reception and demonstration of good will."

A few seconds later, Mr. Hoover sent this message:

"We have throughout the Latin American countries received the most profound evidences of friendship. Honduras, Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Peru, Chile, Bolivia, Alaska, have joined to use this occasion to demonstrate their friendship and good wishes to the people of the United States."

(Signed) HERBERT HOOVER.

To this communication Mr. Kellogg replied as follows:

"The President and people of the United States have noted with the utmost satisfaction the progress of your trip through Latin America and the spontaneous expressions of good will which have universally been shown to you have been the source of the utmost pleasure to the President and the people of the United States. These demonstrations show a feeling which is heartily reciprocated by the people of the United States towards all the people of Latin America."

12,000 Poor Children to Feast on Prize Steer

New York.—Dick, 1,150-pound champion steer, has arrived in New York to gladden the hearts and stomachs of some 12,000 poor children on Christmas. J. C. Penny, the chain store man, paid the record price of $7 a pound for Dick at the International Live Stock exposition in Chicago, where the steer was crowned grand champion.

Jimmy Dodge, farm manager for Mr. Penny, conceived the idea of the charitable dinner and obtained the approval of Mr. Penny. He estimated the dinner would bring the cost of the steer to $11.50 a pound. The steer was raised by twelve-year-old Clarence Goecke on his father's farm at State Center, Iowa.

$808,000 in Tobacco for Orient

Newport News, Va.—A steamer now en route to the Orient has in her cargo 3,325 hogheads and 2,000 cases of Virginia leaf tobacco, valued at $808,000, the largest tobacco export ever loaded here or probably in any American port.

Negotiable Paper Banned

Bucharest, Rumania.—To check depreciation of the lei the Rumanian government forbade all Rumanian banks to deal in negotiable paper. The government reserves to itself the exclusive right to engage in such transactions.

Cuba Plans National Militia

Havana.—Establishment of a Cuban national militia is being projected by Manuel Secades Japon, legal adviser of the interior department.

$5,000 Reward for Couple's Slayings

Easton, Ohio.—Preble county commissioners have offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest and conviction of two robbers who shot and killed Dr. Horatio Silver, fifty-five years old, and his wife in their home here.

To Build 9 Grain Elevators

Lethbridge, Alberta.—Nine new grain elevators of 40,000 bushel capacity each are to be built at once by the Alberta wheat pool, according to an official statement.

RIBBON HANDBAG EASILY MADE BRIMS REVIVED FOR MATRONS

A FEW inches of handsome wide ribbon, a bit of silk lining cut to fit, also suitable interlining, ten minutes or so devoted to basting and machine stitching the two short side seams, the sewing in of the hookless slide fastener across the top—and behold a finished handbag as exclusive and elegant in appearance as those shown by the smartest shops in town. These pocketbooks are really a revelation in "pretty things that can be made at home," for they cost so little and the process of making is so simple while the dividends they pay in point of beauty and elegance cannot be told in words. Make one and you will find it almost amusing to find how eagerly your friends will express a resolve to do likewise.

The diagram drawing in the picture is almost self-explanatory as to "how to make." Stated briefly, it requires 14 inches of colorful 9-inch-wide metal brocade ribbon. The silk lining, which may be crepe de chine, satin or flat crepe in some gay color, measures the same as the outside ribbon, allowing, of course, for a turn-in edge all around. Cut the canvas lining and the layer of sheet cotton to fit.

Study the sketch in the picture as to just how to arrange the lining and interlining. Baste the silk lining and the layer of cotton and the canvas together, turning in three-eighths inches of the silk lining over the interlining all around the edge. Baste this padded silk lining to the brocade ribbon. Fold across the center as indicated in the working drawing here-with. The side seams are then machine-stitched together, leaving the top ture—"short cut" to the dress sought for "hand-made" appearance.

Matrons' hats which are getting that "thing" what the matron of becoming dainty and fine-tuned wants is not difficult to make, nor does she mind the art of being directed to a department of age-appealing hats in response to a request for a larger-than-life size.

What the average matron wears, yes, long for, is a hat of "practical" lines which is not designed exclusively for "bobbed" locks and which, it discreetly flatters, in no way shows by flaunting a super-youthfulness.

At last milliners are awakening to a realization of this need, even to an extent that many of them make a specialty of creating "youthful" hats for the matron. Wherefore her hat should be a season of replacing the woman seeking a becoming, suitable headdress.

Then, too, this is a just time when happens to sponsor just these things most conducive to fashioning hats for the matron. First the revival of brims is a good omen or omen. How many women have suffered a told trial in trying to "look present" in a skull-fitting shape which something but becoming? Lovely materials, especially velvet (which is flattering) and hatters' plumes (which are not) are the two elements which are so featured in the designing just now and dress and shirtings and such are always ready to mature lines. Intricate braid enters into the scheme to a great extent than in many seasons past, especially finding pleasing expression in youthful matron modes.

The interesting group of hats shown with presents styles for the season from various interesting styles, beginning at the top to the right, describe them. This made a group rather high crown of velvet, which is draped a figure of a crown, net, the same worked in tulle, chenille and metal stitching. Turn-up brim is an essential element in becomingness.

The center hat is of crepe, quilted in an elaborate pattern, a narrow gold metal ribbon with an enamel flower ornament is the chosen trimming.

In the top corner of the group, which emphasizes the use of velvet, velvet for the lining, particularly hand braided satin for the crown.

The felt cloche centered just below boasts an elaborate applique motif of velvet and metal chain stitching. This model is very effective and tried out in finishing shades.

Lastly comes a modish toque which is a lovely matron hat, equipped with a lovely metal brocade velvet together.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

At the Warren ranch, the "Three Bar," on the fringe of the "new country," a stranger appeared for work as a rider. William Warren, known to all as "Billie," is the owner of the ranch. The girl's father, Col. Warren, had been the original owner. The question whether the territory is to remain in the hands of the original owner or a troublesome one, the newcomer is put to work. "Riders" have been troubling the ranch owners, the "Three Bar," with a girl boss having suffered more than others. The new hand gives his name as Billie. By his announcement in favor of "squatters" he caused the enmity of a rider known as Morrow. The will of the Col. Warren stipulated that half the property should go to the son of his old friend, William Warren, under certain conditions. The new arrival is the son, and he discloses the fact to Morrow. The girl is suspicious of the new rider and takes counsel with her friend, the ranch cook, "Billie." He quiets her fears.

CHAPTER III

Billie Warren heard the steady buzz of the saw and later the ringing strokes of the ax. The men had departed three days before to be gone for a week. The horse round-up but she had not seen from her own quarters. The sound of the ax and saw was ample evidence that her new and undesired partner was making valuable use of his time. She went outside and he was at the cross section of the log as she moved toward him.

"I'll have to get along the best I can," she announced abruptly. "Of course you will have a say in the management of the Three Bar and you'll get the same amount for yourself as I do."

"I'd rather not do that," he decided. "I don't want to be a drain on the Three Bar. I'll just serve as an extra hand and whatever necessary turns up I'll return for your letting me advise you on a few points that I happen to know worked out while I was prowling through the country."

"Any way you like," she returned. "It's up to you to decide. Any money you fail to draw now will result to you in the end, so it won't matter in the least."

"Your reply was irrelevant, a deliberate refusal to notice my ungenerous interpretation of his offer. I don't know if I gather a few more Bar colts round here close and get out my own string before they back up," he asked.

"Anything you like," she repeated. "I'm not going to quarrel. I've made my mind to that. I'll be gone the day after tomorrow."

Three minutes later he saw her riding down the lane. She was not seeking companionship but rather solitude for hours she drifted aimlessly over the range, sometimes dismounting on some point that afforded a new view and reclining in the warm sun. Dusk was falling when she rode back to the Three Bar. She heard the sound of saw and ax as men worked up the dry logs in the lengths. At least he was making his word to the cook. The ax ceased when the sun was an hour high and when she looked out to see the reason she saw him riding with four colts in one of the corrals.

He leaped the colt's foot and addressed the girl. "If I'd fight him now while he's spoky and half-scared it would spoil him maybe," he explained. "I'll gentle-break mine, too," she said, and the man overlooked the infection which, as plainly as words, was intended to convey the impression that his ways were effeminate. "If every man used up his time gentling his string, he'd never have a day off to work at anything else."

"Why, I don't use up much time," he objected. "They half-way break themselves, standing round with a saddle on and having a man handle them a little between spells of regular work—like cutting firewood and such. And it's a saving of time in the end. There's three hundred odd days every year when a man consumes considerable time fighting every horse he steps upon—if they're broke that way to start."

"So your only reason for not riding them out is to save time," she said. "If you mean that I'm timid," he observed, "why, I don't know as I'd bother to dispute it." He moved over and sat on his heels facing her, twisting the ever handy cigarette. "Listen," he urged. "Let's you and I try to get along. Now if you'll only make up your mind that I'm not out to grab the Three Bar, not even the half of it that's supposed to be mine—unless you get paid for it—why, we're liable to get to liking each other real well in the end. I'll give you a contract to that effect."

"Which you know would be worthless," she returned. "The will specifically states that any agreements between us prior to the time of division are to be disregarded. A written contract would have no more value than your unsupported promise and in view of what's happened you don't expect me to place a value on that."

He pulled reflectively at his cigarette and she rather expected another of the irrelevant remarks with which he so often replied to her pointed thrusts. "No," he said at last. "But it's a fact that I don't want the Three Bar—or rather I do if you should ever decide to sell."

"I never will," she stated positively. "It's always been my home. I've been away and had a good time; three winters in school and enjoying every second; but there always comes a time when I'm sick to get back. When I know I can't stay away from the Three Bar, when I want to smell the sage and throw my leg across a horse—and ride!"

"I know, Billie," he said softly. "I was raised here, up until I was eight. My feeling is likely less acute than yours but I've always bawled to get back to where the sage and pine trees run together. I mentioned a while back that I was tied up peculiar and stood to lose considerably if I failed to put in two years out here—which wouldn't have been of any particular consequence only that I found out that the Three Bar was going under unless some one put a stop to what's going on. I'll pull it out of the hole, maybe, and hand it back to you."

"You!" she flared. "And what can you do against it—a man that was raised in squatter country behind a barbed-wire fence, who has to gentle his horses before he can sit up on one, who has hitched a gun on his belt because he thinks it's the thing to do, and has stowed it in a place where he'd have to tie himself in a knot—or undress—to reach it. And then you talk of pulling the Three Bar out of a hole! Why, there are twenty men within fifty miles of here that would kill you the first move you made."

In that," he said. He looked down at his gun; it swung on his left side to front, the butt pointing toward the right. "It's easier to work with it sort of out of the way of my hands" he explained and smiled. She found herself liking him, even in the face of the treachery he had practiced against her father and was correspondingly angry, both with herself and at him. She left him without a word and returned to the house. He finished putting the shoes on the colt and as he turned him back into the corral he observed a horseman jogging up the lane at a trail trot. He knew the man for Slade, whose home ranch lay forty miles to the south and a little west, the owner of the largest outfit in that end of the state; a man feared by his competitors, quick to resent an insinuation against his business methods and capable of backing his resentment. Slade dropped from his horse and accented Harris with a casual nod as he headed for the house. He walked through the cookhouse and opened the door of the girl's quarters without the formality of a knock, as if a frequent visitor and sure of his privileges.

"How many times have I told you to knock?" she demanded. "The next time you forget it I'll go out as you come in."

"I never have knocked—not in twelve years," he said. "It was somewhat different when I was a small girl and you were only a friend of my father," she pointed out. "But now—"

"But now that I've come to see you as a woman it's different," he insisted. "No reason for that." She switched the channel of conversation and spoke of the coming round-up of the poor condition of range stock owing to the severity of the winter; but it was a monologue. For a time the man sat and listened, as if he enjoyed the sound of her voice, contributing nothing to the conversation himself, then suddenly he stirred in his chair and waved a hand to indicate the unimportance of the topics.

"Yes, yes; true enough," he interrupted. "But I didn't come to talk about that. When are you coming home with me, Billie?" "And you can't come if you insist on talking about that," she countered. "I'll come," he stated. "Tell me when you're going to move over to the Circle P."

"Not ever," she said. "I'd rather be a man's horse than his wife. Men treat women like little tinsel queens before, and afterward they answer to save a cook's wages and drudge their lives out feeding a bunch of half-starved hands—or else go to the other extreme. Wives are either work horses or pets. I was raised like a boy and I want to have a say in running things myself."

Slade rose and moved over to her, taking her hands and lifting her from her chair. The girl pushed him back with a hand braced against his chest. "Stop it!" she said. "You're getting wilder every time you come, but you've never pawed at me before. I won't have people's hands on me," and she made a grimace of distaste. The man reached out again and drew her to him. She wrenched away and faced Slade. "That will be the last time you'll do that until I give the word," she said. "I don't want the Circle P—or you. When I do I'll let you know!"

He moved toward her again and she refused to back away from him but stood with her hands at her sides. "If you put a finger on me it's the last time you'll visit the Three Bar," she calmly announced. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

ANOTHER CATTY CHAT

The amateur dramatists were rehearsing. Mrs. Greene was required to kiss Mr. Gage, and just as they had arrived at this particular incident, Mrs. Gage appeared.

"Oh," exclaimed Mrs. Greene, "I hope, dear, you don't mind my embracing your husband like this?" "Not at all," was the dry reply. "I don't mind in the least—if he doesn't."

Slade dropped into a chair. "I never have knocked—not in twelve years," he said. "It was somewhat different when I was a small girl and you were only a friend of my father," she pointed out. "But now—"

"But now that I've come to see you as a woman it's different," he insisted. "No reason for that."

"The Kind He is" Blinks—What kind of a fellow is this Perkins? Jinks—Well, he is the kind who would let his wife take in borders to keep the wolf from the door while he devoted his time to proving the fellow who said you can't scramble an egg was a liar.

"A Girl of the Period" Tossing aside a rapid novel, she reached for and opened another book. It proved to be a treatise on geometry.

"Ah, the eternal triangle," she sighed, tossing that out of the window.

"Beat It" Harassed Carpet Salesman (appealing to husband)—You won't beat this, sir. "Wife—You'll pardon me; he will if I want him to!"

"His Views" He was discoursing on friendship and was told not to be a grouch. "I'm not a grouch. But I must say the Habilitates just about balance the assets."

"USUAL RESULT" "Well, what's been the result of redlock with them?" "Deadlock, I'm afraid."

"Scenery" "That was an episode in 'stock' which made the people gasp. A beey played fell on a rock and mashed it out of shape."

"Trying to Beat the Game" She (at beach)—It's awful to meet one of the boys you were engaged to last summer. —Her Friend—It must be. She—I just ran across Dick and he wanted the old engagement renewed without giving up a new ring.

"A Changed Man" Mrs. Knagg—You were a different man when you married me. Knagg—I sincerely hope so, for then I was a fool.

"Beyond the Law" Cop on Shore—I'm going to arrest you when you come out of there. Man in Water—Ha-ha! That's a joke on you. I'm not coming out. I'm committing suicide.—The Farm Journal.

"The Bathing Hour" "I wonder if there is anything worth landing in that lake?" murmured Alfred. "Plenty of heresses," declared wise little Eloise.

"Choice Limited" Very Friendly Visitor—Did you have any difficulty in choosing a name for baby? Fond Mother—Not the slightest. You see, dear, we've only one rich relative.

"That Would Be New" "I wish I could think of something new for a literary afternoon," sighed Eloise. "Don't have lettuce sandwiches," suggested Alfred.

He played twenty-four good hands and lost one, having 780 good points. Others from this community who attended the tournament and who won a prize were, Carl Klemb and William Knoebel of West Bend.

—The cold wave which struck this section of the state, was surely welcomed by all after four days of heavy fog and rain, which was a great aid to the spread of the epidemic now sweeping through the state, causing school and business interruptions, to be closed among them being the University of Wisconsin, Lawrence College, and Oaklawn Normal. Mr. Skansky, principal of the High School reported that over 60 per cent of the students were absent from school Monday, due to sickness. On account of the cold weather and continual rain, all side roads were very muddy, almost impassable.

—Roman Smith, local ice dealer, who usually has a very busy season when ice harvesting begins. Roman, up to the present time has signed over thirty contracts for ice houses to be filled by him this winter in the immediate vicinity. Some of the places where he will cut ice are at Big Cedar Lake, Round Lake, Long Lake and Schrauth's Pond. Roman states that he has prospects for a number of more places where he will harvest the ice. Mr. Smith has a very up-to-date ice sawing outfit, a contraption which he practically invented himself, and with it he is able to cut many cakes of ice in one day.

MEMORIAL

In loving remembrance of our dear daughter and sister Adeline Meinecke, who passed away one year ago Dec. 21st.

We have lost our darling Adeline. She has gone to live in heaven, And her form is lost to view.

But an angel came down for her, And removed her from our flock.

Sadly missed by her parents and brothers, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Meinecke.

Origin of Nickname

"Nick-name" probably came from the word "nec-name" formerly used to mean an "infamous name." The earliest writers used "nec-name" in the fourteenth century, but from 1534 to the present day the word "nickname" has been used.

WILLIAM SCHULZ DIES SUDDENLY

This community was shocked to learn of the sudden and unexpected death of one of its esteemed and well known citizens, Wm. F. Schulz, who passed away into eternal sleep Friday morning, December 21, 1928, at five o'clock, at his home here of heart trouble from which ailment he had been suffering for three years. Mr. Schulz seemed to be in good spirits when he retired Thursday evening and nothing serious was thought of his ailment. About five o'clock Friday morning he was found dead in bed by his wife. Deceased was born Sept. 27, 1866, in the town of Scott, Sheboygan county. At the age of one year he came with his parents to the town of Kewaskum, residing on a farm about a mile south of the village. On April 28, 1926, he came to his present home here. On December 21, 1899 he was married to Marie Mueller, who died Nov. 25, 1900. One son Irvin was born of this union, and who now resides on the homestead. On Jan. 26, 1904 he was married to Margaret Emley, who with the following children survive: Ada and Meta, twin sisters. One son died in infancy. He also leaves one daughter-in-law, Mrs. Irvin Schulz, one sister, Mrs. Fred Bartelt of the town of Kewaskum and numerous other relatives and friends. Mr. Schulz was a man of a very kind disposition, one who not only spoke a good word for all his friends, but who at all times was ready to lend a helping hand to those in need. He was a good husband and father and made his home a pleasant one to live in for his family. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the home with services in the English M. E. Church at West Bend. Rev. W. J. C. Perry will officiate. Burial will be made in the Union cemetery.

There is no duty we all much undertake as the duty of being happy. Be being happy is not an optional matter, it is upon the world, which remains unknown to the individual.

Molasses Not Treacle

The words "molasses" and "treacle" are often used as synonyms but properly speaking molasses is the uncrystallized syrup produced in the making of sugar, while treacle is obtained in the process of refining sugar.

Not a Bad Fellow

Much undeserved blame descends upon the mole in our garden, says Nature Magazine. Destructive cutworms, grubs and earthworms are on his menu and he has few voracious predators. The death of plants above the ground is caused by the drying out of the roots. Thus he does unwitting damage as he tunnels for food and home.

Famous Painting

O. P. Falstaff in "The Italian Renaissance in Art" says that the Sistine "Madonna" was executed for the church of San Sisto, at Piacenza, and for this reason takes its name of the Sistine or "Sistine." The Sistine "Madonna" is still in Dresden, where it has been for many years. The painting was purchased by the elector of Saxony, Augustus III in 1733.

LOCAL STUDENTS LISTED IN COLLEGE CATALOG

Two Kewaskum students are listed in the seventy-ninth annual Lawrence college catalog which has just been published. The students are Allen and Charles Miller, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Edw. C. Miller. Final registration lists included in the catalog total 1072 students enrolled in the college of liberal arts and conservatory of music. The liberal arts students alone total 812, of which 395 are men and 417 are women.

Fifteen states are represented in the geographical distribution of the Lawrence student body. They include 667 from Wisconsin, sixty-seven from Michigan, forty-eight from Illinois, twenty from Minnesota, four from Indiana, three from California, two each from Iowa and Pennsylvania, and one from each of the states of Florida, Massachusetts, Montana, New York, Ohio, South Dakota and Washington.

INCREASED GAS TAX

In the next session of the Legislature one of the big questions to be decided is the one of "Gasoline Tax Increase." Does Wisconsin want to build a system of roads that will be a pride to the state? Do we want a 2-cent increase in gas tax and let the license fees remain the same, or do we want a 3-cent increase in the tax and lower the license fee?

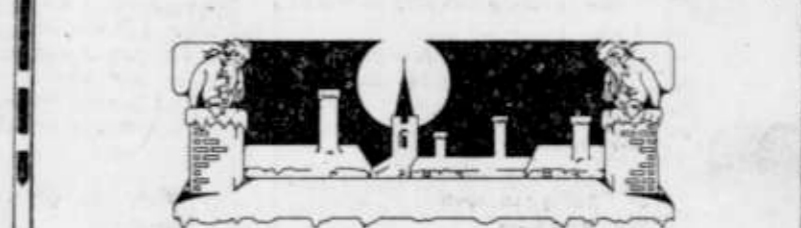

Assemblyman Huber will leave for Madison within the next month and invites letters from all his Washington county constituents, whether they are in favor or against the proposed increase and give their reasons. Just address the letter to Jos. J. Huber, Box C, West Bend, Wis.

Again The Bells Ring Out

By Katherine Gdelman

AGAIN the bells ring out to tell
The story angels told,
The blessed tidings of His birth,
That never can grow old.

Again the world is thrilled and stirred,
With gladness men rejoice,
And happy thoughts and wishes true
In every heart find voice.

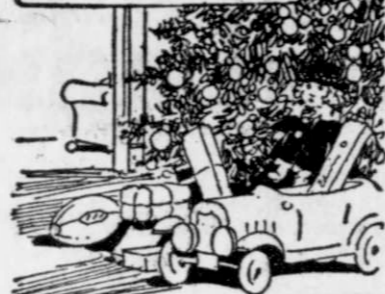

With smiling face friend calls to friend
A greeting most sincere,
And friendship ties and ties of kin
Have grown more strong and dear.

Once more the joy of Christmas fills
The hearts and souls of men,
Once more in Bethlehem's little town
A Child is born again.

The Smallwoods' Christmas

By W. D. Pennypacker

PIERCING wind swept the dry snow into gawled knots and eddying circles, and continued its moaning all through the night. Drifts were high and here and there the bare ground could be seen. An almost similar condition prevailed in the heavens. Dark, forbidding clouds from which flakes fell lightly like goose feathers, now and again parted, to reveal brilliant constellations.

That was the mood in which Christmas eve found the out-of-doors in Smithville.

The Smallwoods had had a busy day. They were not natives of Smithville, but arrived late that afternoon after a tedious run by train and motor bus. They usually spent Christmas in Smithville, where Mrs. Smallwood's sister lived. They enjoyed the romps and frolics with the children and always asserted that no day could be Christmas unless blessed with the rollicking laughter of little ones. Having none of their own they enjoyed the holidays with their Smithville relatives.

Embers in the big fireplace were still bright, but losing their brilliance because of neglect. The pungent odor of burning pine brought soothing drowsiness to tired eyes. Books and papers lay untouched. They relaxed. They all but slept.

When the great hall clock struck one—two—three—four—five—six—seven—eight—nine—ten—eleven—and when the chimes ceased to reverberate, they rose upright with a start. It was time to decorate the tree! The youngsters were asleep, and there was no danger that any of them would "hear Santa if he came."

And so, as gently as they could, but full of the joy of doing it—an hour or more was spent in arranging the tree, and placing gifts before it as some benighted ones might lay trophies before an idol. The thought occurred to them—and it amused them.

When all was ready, and the stockings hung in the chimney place had been filled, the two to-bed to bed.

Rest was not long. Between midnight and the moment a small boy thinks he should hear Santa Claus is but a span. It seemed even less.

Long before the first faint flush of dawn—before the wind rose to sweep the snow into new drifts, and play on wires and silvered boughs, the Small-but eager child's treble piped up: "Ma, I hear him, it's Santa." In a twinkling there were smothered sounds attesting; all were looking for the jolly old man of Christmas. As footsteps approached and the jingle of bells became distinct, little eyes round as saucers told the thrill the children were experiencing. A few moments later the family were assembled in the big, comfortable bedroom. Parents carried away in the wonder in their children's eyes, and children thrilled with the knowledge that Santa Claus was actually before them!

The jolly old man, his nose and cheeks ruddy from long contact with Arctic winds, strode deliberately into their room!

"And here's the whole bunch of 'em," he muttered. "A bloomin' fine lot, I should say." He lowered the heavy pack from his shoulders as he sat upon the edge of the bed.

"A heavy load it has been; but I've loved to think of them," he remarked under his breath. Then turning to John, a tow-head youngster of seven, he questioned:

"Have you been good?" "Yes, Santa Claus," was the prompt reply.

Similar questions were put to all as Santa distributed. Then he turned to the youngest—

"And how about you," he inquired. Her eyes grew big and her expression startled. For some seconds she could not speak. Then, as Santa hesitated whether to leave anything, she inquired:

"Mamma, has I been good?"

hours later, the thrill of the early hours having worn off to a degree, the children were chattering away about the experiences of the morning. They little realized that the man who came from the chimney place into their room, several hours before, with a heavy pack upon his shoulders, and bells jingling from his bectoned costume, was sitting amongst them.

"I saw him my very self," exclaimed the youngster, looking straight into the eyes of "Santa."

"Ah! he came right up to the bed," interrupted Jack. "E didn't intend to leave anything at first," piped in another—not 'till mother an' dad told 'im we'd been good. Then he left these presents and hurried away."

"After he shut the door we could hear the sleighbells jingling, and growing fainter and fainter."

"Wish you had not slept so long, uncle. You should have seen him."

"But why did you not watch him as he went out?" was his comeback.

"I think," said dad, "they—we were all afraid Santa Claus might not like us to watch him. Anyhow we all poked our heads under the covers. There were smothered chuckles mingling with ejaculations of surprise."

"I really seen 'im. I told you he— And they went on and on.

But it was Mr. Smallwood who had the jolliest of Christmases. The children "really" saw Santa Claus—but he, Uncle John, positively discovered what Christmas meant. When he and Mrs. Smallwood returned to their home after the holiday festivities ended they carried with them more of Christmas than they had ever believed it possible they would possess.

"They had understood Christmas." (C. 1928, Western Newspaper Union.)

Winter Is Time to Control Rats

In cold weather the marauding rat congregates with his fellows in rubbish heaps, dumps, cellars and other protected places. From these he may be dislodged by a well-planned campaign of eradication.

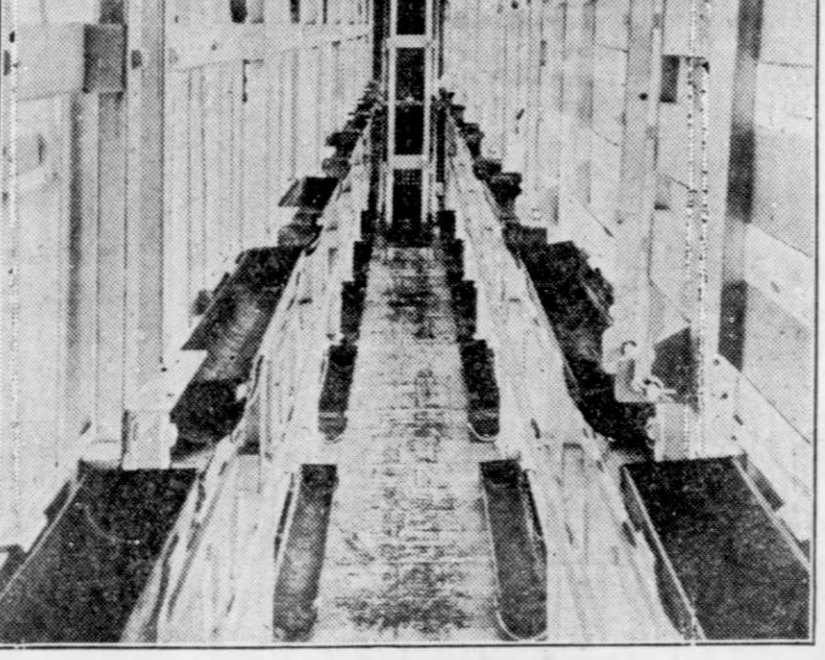

"Rats are not so scattered in cold weather," says C. D. Schwartz, junior biologist at the North Carolina State college. "A campaign of eradication may be made very effective in winter because of this gregarious habit and too, the offensive odor of dead rats is not so noticeable. The rat population may be reduced or eradicated by a definite schedule of systematic poisoning, trapping and starving. It is better, however, if the campaign is undertaken in a large way as by community effort."

Mr. Schwartz says that the wharf rat, as he is commonly known, has been increasing his numbers this summer by leaps and bounds. Food has been plentiful and farm owners have been too busy to notice his depredations. In winter is the time to note this damage and to check it.

What the pest has not eaten, he has carried off or spoiled for human consumption. In addition to being a robber, the rat also is a carrier of disease. One of the most fatal of these is the "Black Plague" or bubonic plague. This disease may be controlled only by the most rigid of quarantines.

How communities may co-operate to control the rat or to conduct campaigns for his eradication has been made an especial study by Mr. Schwartz. He will be glad to render such assistance as he can, free of charge, anywhere within the state. Those who wish to reduce rodent damage on their farms or in their neighborhood should write Mr. Schwartz.

New Stock Car for Small Animals

Interior of Car for Sheep, Lambs, Etc.

A new live stock car for the shipment of sheep, lambs and other small animals has been patented. The external design of the car follows closely the general lines of the live poultry cars. The interior of the car is so laid out as to provide an aisle running lengthwise through the center of the car, in which water and feed troughs are conveniently arranged for all pens at each deck level. The inside dimension of the car is 30 feet 6 inches in length. At one end is a 6 by 9 caretaker's stateroom underneath which is a submerged feed bin providing ample storage for feed en route. There is also two steel water tanks located above the stateroom with a capacity of ten barrels of fresh water. The car is triple-decked and designed to accommodate the same number of animals as may be loaded in the ordinary double-decked stock car. The animals can be evenly distributed on all three decks, where partitions properly placed prevent piling and reduce cramping.

The outstanding feature of and the claimed superiority of this triple-decked car is in its facility to feed en route without requiring a stop in transit under the federal statute which requires unloading every 30 hours with a stop of 12 hours for rest, feed and water in transit.

Garden Needs Only Occasional Liming When Properly Manured

When Soil Becomes Sour Apply Some Limestone.

Although most vegetables are "lime-loving," it is not often necessary to apply lime to the garden. If it has been receiving yearly applications of manure and commercial fertilizer, this is the opinion of extension specialists in vegetable gardening, at the Ohio State university.

If the garden soil has become sour, say the specialists, ground limestone should be applied after the ground has been plowed. Enough lime should be applied to make the ground look white, and the lime should then be worked into the soil. When it has once been syretened with lime, it will be four or five years before another application of lime will be necessary.

"The way to improve the garden soil," say the specialists, "is to plow under as many tons of organic matter as possible. Too much manure can hardly be applied to the garden soil, especially if it is put on in the fall or if it is well-rotted when it is applied in the spring. At least five big loads of manure should be put on every quarter-acre of garden each fall. Well-rotted manure can be harrowed into the top soil in the spring, but straw, fresh manure should be turned under in the fall and given time to decay before planting begins the next spring."

Winter Suitable Time to Improve Wood Lots

Most forestry experts agree that winter is the most suitable time for improving the farm shelter belts and wood lots, since the farm owner has more time, timber is more easily handled, and it gives a chance for the horses to earn part of their winter board. Winter-cut logs are better than those cut in summer, since they season more evenly and are less damaged by insects.

The lumber should be looked upon as an annual crop, to be harvested by cutting out for lumber and fuel the trees that are fully matured and starting to deteriorate, diseased trees, dead and dying ones, and those which are crowding out younger trees of more valuable species. The second growth coming on should be carefully watched and all poor trees removed which are preventing more valuable ones from growing.

In some places the good new growth may be too thick and in other places too thin, and some resetting of very small trees may be advisable.

Such a Wonderful Christmas

By LULU RUTHERFORD MORRIS

AGNES LOWDEN looked from her second-story bedroom window in the downtown district upon a typical Christmas eve scene. The street was aglow with lights.

"How lovely!" she murmured, and then added, "but what a mockery! So much happiness mingled with dire unhappiness. Oh, God, help me not to lose faith!"

Turning to her bed she threw herself upon it face downward and burst into violent weeping. So this was the disappointing close of the day for which she had so long waited—the day Rob Roy was to come to claim her as his wife—his Christmas gift. Six months before Agnes had seen him away that both might learn through long separation if each meant to the other all that was needful to insure their future happiness. And she had told him to come; that at last she knew her heart's desire; that on Christmas eve she would welcome him and go with him to the very end of the earth.

In vain had she listened through the long hours of the day for a telephone call, a telegram, of his ring at the door of her boarding house.

When Agnes awoke with the dawn of a clear Christmas morning she looked out upon a far different scene than that which the glowing lights of the night before had presented.

But hark! There broke upon the air the clarion notes of cathedral chimes proclaiming to the world the birth of the Christ. The grand old hymn with its martial strain brought to the mind of every listener the glorious words:

"Joy to the world, the Lord is come, Let earth receive her king."

Agnes stood with bowed head until the last note of the last stanza had died away, struggling hard to grasp the true spirit of the day, though her torn heart was unable to entirely cast aside the bitterness of the great disappointment she had suffered. A little later, from a near-by church the crowd of early worshippers came pouring out, and as she looked, came the thought:

"All of those people are happy. With joy they can think of their Lord and King, their loved ones, little tokens of affection and appreciation to cause their hearts to swell with unbounded joy. But what have I? Only emptiness and hopelessness. Ah, Christmas but mocks me with its revelry."

Determining to fly at once to some unknown address where Rob would never find her, Agnes arrayed herself hurriedly for the street. At last she pulled her nobby, close-fitting little hat becomingly into place, drew on her gloves, and turned for her coat when the screech of colliding cars directly under her window called her back once more.

"Oh, some one is hurt!" she almost screamed, and her nurse's instinct to offer first aid sent her rushing pell-mell down the stairs and out into the street.

Agnes forged ahead to the side of the machine just as a taxi arrived to receive the injured person.

"Oh, Agnes, is it really you?" "Rob!"

Without a word of explanation to anyone the frightened but happy girl climbed into the taxi by the side of Rob, forgetting now of everything except getting him to the hospital as quickly as possible.

"I didn't quite make it on time, dear," he said with his head on her shoulder, "but I was doing my level best. And to think this should have happened right in front of your house!"

"And to think I was about to run away from you when that truck struck you. No, I didn't know it was you, but something just made me look to the 'Reds'—"

"You were watching, Agnes?" "Yes, dear, I was watching, but had given up hope. I thought you didn't care; that I had called to you in vain; I was crushed."

"So none of my messages reached you. Too bad! I had to trust them to others. But now that we are together, dear, you will not leave me for a single moment, will you, until we are man and wife?" "Never! It is going to be such a wonderful Christmas after all, Rob, and I had thought it so desolate."

"Yes, dear, a wonderful Christmas." (C. 1928, Western Newspaper Union.)

woods were up. They had to be early or the children would be disappointed in finding that good old ruddy-nosed, hot-bellied Santa Claus had not arrived.

Smallwood, who was to impersonate Santa, crept quietly across the floor of his attic room. Quiet as he was, every door slammed to croak under his tread. It seemed discouraging. He feared the children would awake, before he could don his boots and scarlet costume. This was trimmed liberally with cotton "fur" and jingling bells. Fortunately the children had found their beds, after a day of excitement and wonder at all the marvelous things they had seen in the shop windows, and they had slept on.

When he was fully attired and considered himself "after careful survey, ready to perform his stunt, Mrs. Smallwood betook herself to a room adjoining that of her sister. A few minutes later, in the rooms down stairs, the clatter of feet and the jingling of bells was heard.

His Gift to the Street Boys' Christmas Dinner

A GENTLEMAN was hurrying toward the big hotel on the corner, bending some to escape the bitter blast. A man approached, holding out a paper.

"Ah, Mr. Thurston, he said. "I'm begging—"

"No, nothing," emphatically. "But this is very worthy. A Christmas dinner for the street boys—newsboys and all that, you know."

"And I repeat no," shortly. "I'm asked to give something at every corner of the street, No, no."

the fixings. That's what you'd like?" to the boy.

"Yes, sir. Then as he began to fill up, "I'm to have another turkey dinner tomorrow. A street boys' dinner. I gave ninety cents, all I had. I give what I can."

When too full to eat any more he rose. Mr. Thurston drew out a twenty dollar bill and gave it to him.

"Give this as my contribution toward the dinner," he said.—Frank H. Sweet. (C. 1928, Western Newspaper Union.)

Originated Christmas Cards In 1846 Sir Henry Cole is said to have originated the idea of sending Christmas cards to friends and Joseph Crandall was the first publisher. Only about 1,000 cards were sold the first year, but the idea soon spread to other countries and millions are now sold annually.

People Who Belong to the Christmas Season

THERE are some people who seem to belong to the Christmas season by nature. They are: People whose hopes always bloom anew at the approach of a New Year. Mothers whose eyes still twinkle and laugh when they talk to their children. Fathers who like to surprise mothers with presents they really want. Brothers who appreciate sisters. Sisters who don't try to economize on brothers' ties. Children who want to leave sugar for Santa's reindeer. Houseowners who do not forget that the mailman is entitled to more than the bag of presents he carries for others. People who never think decorating is any trouble. People who just love the smell of Christmas greens. People who think there is nothing lovelier than holly. People who think there is nothing

Mirrors Required on Cars in Many States

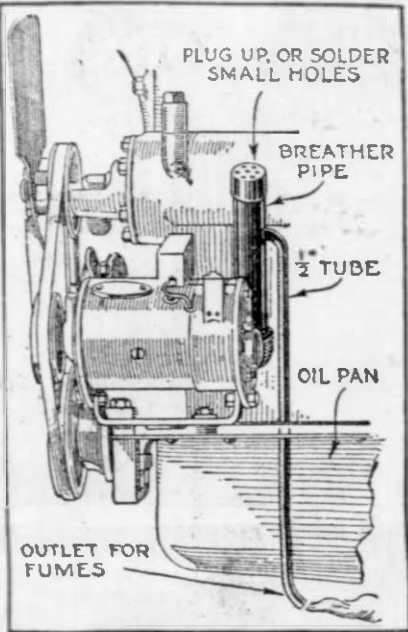

Thirty-one states and the District of Columbia require the use of mirrors on motor vehicles in order to give operators a rear vision, according to the research department of the American Automobile association. The states requiring mirrors on motor vehicles are Arizona, California, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Good Points to Watch in Polishing Finish of Car

While it's all right to polish the car generously in an effort to prolong the life of the finish, there are a few points to watch if the plan is to be a success. Generally speaking, the idea is to avoid too much rubbing of the finish on these points on the body where there are sharp edges, corners or joints. The rounded body has been a great factor in preventing finish from chipping, but if your car features sharp lines you can compensate for this by a little more care in its treatment. The front window sills are apt to get a good deal of rubbing from elbows parked on them by the driver and his front seat passenger, so avoid overdoing it here. Another point to watch is the striping on the body and hood. You can brighten up these lines best by leaving them alone. They are put on top of the general lacquer and cannot be expected to withstand constant rubbing.

Get Rid of Annoying Fumes From Crank Case

If your car lacks a device to carry off fumes from the crank case and prevent their entering the body of the

Judge Holds Dad Must Keep Watch on Junior

Fathers who forbid their sons and daughters to drive the family automobile are liable for damages if the children disobey the parent, take the car and have an accident. A case of that character was disposed of by Justice Charles Brown of Buffalo, who refused to set aside a verdict of $2,000 for the plaintiff who was struck and injured. Merely refusing children permission is not enough, Justice Brown declared, but it must be enforced by the parent making every possible effort to keep the car away from them.

Cheaper Motor Fuel

American chemists are working for a motor fuel to be made from alcohol at a cost of one cent per gallon. They claim that in California alone there is enough fruit going to waste to produce 22,000,000,000 gallons of alcohol. This product is used extensively in Germany and other European countries. The present commercial price of alcohol, about 40 cents, is prohibitive. In Cuba it is produced for about four or five cents.

Foundations supports for interior wall bearing partitions are factors of utmost importance to Ralph W. Friend, Cleveland architect. He suggests an inexpensive way to avoid floor settling troubles. The common practice among many

Have Electric Switches Harmonize With Paper

While the tumbler switch is the modern type for installation in new houses, it is also especially adapted to the modernization of old electrical equipment. It occupies the same space in the wall as the obsolete types that you may desire to replace, and too, involves no marring or further cutting of plaster or wainscoting. You can choose a finish that will harmonize with the tone of the paper—choose it separately for each room—and you will find that the flush plate fairly sinks into its background, entirely inconspicuous save for its refined suggestion of perfect service and perfect convenience.

Limestone as Veneer

New methods have been applied to the use of limestone in the finishing of stone. Indiana limestone is being worked into extensive use as a veneer applied to stud-frame walls. Or it may be used as a structural facing over hollow tile or brick. It is secured to the frame with galvanized metal ties. The same is a veneer of brick.

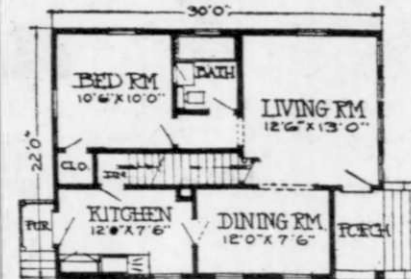

Attractive Story-and-a-Half House Provides Comfort and Ample Space

The economy of the story-and-a-half house is well known, but so many story-and-a-half houses are unattractive in appearance that this type of home does not receive the attention it otherwise would from prospective home owners. An unattractive appearance, however, is not a necessary characteristic of the story-and-a-half house as is amply demonstrated by the design shown here. A well designed house of this type may be just as attractive as the two-story house or the bungalow.

This small home measures just 22 feet wide by 30 feet deep, making it quite suitable for the owner of a narrow lot. It rests on a foundation of solid concrete. The steps and porch are of ornamental brickwork which adds much to the pleasing effect of the design. The side walls are finished with lap siding except for the gables and dormers where shingles have been used and the combined effect is quite distinctive.

New Product Copies Hand Rived Shakes

In the early days of American home building most houses were roofed with shakes, hand rived from cedar, pine or cypress, according to the locality. These hand shakes were used because they were the material most easily and economically at hand, but the years have shown the lasting quality of the old shake roofs and even more recently we have begun to appreciate the true beauty of their irregular texture and deep shadows.

Now red cedar shakes, hand rived like those of bygone days, are being produced commercially and are rapidly gaining favor among those who seek something informal and distinctive in their homes.

The shakes used in roofing are 24 inches long and come in random widths. They vary in thickness from 3/8 inch to 1 1/4 inches at the butt and when laid with a 7/8-inch exposure provide three full laps. When used on side walls, as they often are, they are usually laid with an exposure of 19 to 11 1/2 inches. These shakes are frequently laid in uneven courses, a device which adds a rustic touch suggestive of an older day.

Many Ways of Keeping Maple Floors in Shape

Maple floors are somewhat harder to keep in good shape than oak, probably because maple is such a hard and close-grained wood. On maple the first coat of varnish should be thinned with a liberal quantity of turpentine to hold subsequent coats of heavy bodied floor varnish. Not less than three coats should be applied to these floors to secure the best results. Refinishing maple floors which are in bad shape is best done by scraping and sandpapering after removing the old varnish. Many painters prefer to use oil instead of varnish on maple, and if a slight darkening of the wood is not objectionable it is probably the best way to treat these floors. Oiling should

Ornamental Grilles of Steel Are Practical

Heating and ventilating grilles to hide recessed radiators have always been divided into two distinct classes. One has embodied the stamped grille, the other grille cast in various metals. There has never been an intermediate to meet the situation where stamped grilles were undesirable, although cast grilles could not be used due to their higher cost. Ornamental steel grilles strike the happy medium so long sought for. They are made of cold rolled steel stamped, of sufficient strength to insure durability. Artistic ornaments are affixed to grille face, imparting the feeling of depth, an aspect of beauty never before obtainable in stamped grilles.

Builders Is to Support Interior Wall bearing partitions on a wood beam held in place by the use of iron columns (pipe) set on a small square footing," he says. "The bases of these iron columns rust, the footings settle due to the heavy load on them and throw the floors out of level, frequently causing the bottom of doors to strike the floor when swung open. This practice should be discouraged and the use of an eight-inch tile or brick wall encouraged and advocated. The masonry bearing wall affords an even distribution of load which reduces settlement possibilities to a minimum. It also makes for permanency and is a great aid in building a good house."

Soap and Water Will Clean Iron Articles

Wrought iron is in vogue. Everything from chairs and benches to lamps and brace is being fashioned out of these strips of iron. Some of the articles are painted or waxed or otherwise finished on the surface and people already are beginning to wonder how to clean them without damaging the finishing. Dusting with a soft brush is sufficiently effective for every day, but occasionally a more thorough cleaning is desirable. For this make a good, rich suds of luke-warm water and a good neutral soap. Apply the suds with a brush, so that it will reach all the corners and crevices. Rinse by dipping the brush in clear water. Dry as thoroughly as possible with a soft cloth and let stand in the open air to dry completely. Polish if desired with wax or furniture polish.

The treatment of the roof lines plays a large part in the success of this house for it is most frequently the uninteresting roof which spoils the story-and-a-half house. Here the shubbed gables and dormers break up the roof and produce a pleasing contour. From the small porch the entrance leads into an almost square living room, directly back of which is a bathroom and beyond a bedroom. To the left of the living room, through an arched opening is the dining room with the kitchen to the rear. The kitchen is compact but so well arranged that its small size is an advantage rather than a disadvantage. It contains the basement stair and there is a rear service entrance. The stairs to the upper floor ascend directly from the living room into a large upper hallway. On the floor there is another bedroom, a second bathroom, something quite unusual in so small a home, but very desirable

The Kitchen Cabinet

Be still, and hear! and cease repining; Behind the clouds is the sun still shining; Thy fate's the common fate of all. Into each life some rain must fall. Some days must be dark and dreary. —Longfellow.

SEASONABLE FOODS

There are many mothers who realize the value of vegetables and strive to give them an important place in the children's dinner. When the small people have their meals with the grownups, care must be taken to create in them a liking for all kind of vegetables. This is not so hard when father and mother both eat and praise such foods. If daddy won't eat carrots or spinach or lettuce it is much to expect that the small people will enjoy food that he refuses.

Vegetables must be carefully prepared, seasoned and served in order to foster a fondness for them. Hot Molded Vegetables.—Grease a mold thoroughly and line bottom and sides with two cupfuls of cooked rice. Mix two cupfuls of any cooked vegetable, kohlrabi, peas, carrots, celery, any or several of them. Leftovers may be used in this way. Pack this mixture into the mold and cover with a thin layer of rice. Cover with greased cover or with oiled paper and steam for three-fourths of an hour. Turn out on a platter and serve with tomato sauce. This may be prepared from canned soup or made in the ordinary way.

Cabbage a la Russe.—Cut off as many large leaves of cabbage as you have persons to serve. Steam them in a steamer over hot water for ten minutes. Mix one and one-half cupfuls of leftover meat with one cupful of cooked rice, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper, three tablespoonfuls each of chopped green pepper and onion which have been fried until slightly brown in one-fourth cupful of oil heated egg. Cut a piece from the back rib of each cabbage leaf so that it will roll easily. Place a spoonful of the mixture on the leaf, fold in the sides and roll up. Fasten with toothpicks and cook in a little fat over a slow fire until tender. Serve with tomato sauce.

Different Meats. Just ordinary dishes to which we are daily used may become something quite out of the ordinary by different seasonings and sauces. There are many people who really enjoy kidneys and when carefully prepared they make a very good dish. Lamb's Kidneys and Mushrooms.—Mince one large onion and cook it with two tablespoonfuls of minced parsley in three tablespoonfuls of fat; cook until the onions are brown, then add three tablespoonfuls of flour and when well balanced two and one-half cupfuls of hot water in which two beef bouillon cubes have been dissolved and one egg leaf broken into bits. Cover and simmer until smooth and slightly thick, then add six lamb's kidneys parboiled and skinned, then cut into pieces. Clean and peel one pound of mushrooms and cook into two tablespoonfuls of butter for five minutes, then add one-fourth cupful of hot water, one-half teaspoonful of celery salt and one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper; simmer until the mushrooms are tender. Place with the kidneys and serve. Place a mound of seasoned mashed potato in the center of a hot dish sprinkle with parsley and arrange the mushrooms and kidneys around it. If preferred buttered toast may be used on which to serve the kidneys.

Marbled Tongue.—Chop two pounds of cooked veal and one pound of boiled tongue separately until fine, add salt and pepper to season. Pour over the veal one-half cupful of melted butter, mix thoroughly, then put in layers with the tongue in a buttered pan. Press under weight and serve in slices with lemon or garnish with parsley. Curried Calf's Heart.—Add one chopped onion to a little suet and fry until a light brown. Add the heart and sear on all sides. Reduce the heat, cover with boiling water and simmer until tender, adding a few carrots or other vegetables to the heart when it has cooked. Add one tablespoonful of curry powder mixed with a little flour and cold water, added to the gravy.

Meat Sandwich Roll.—Prepare a baking powder biscuit mixture. Turn out onto a floured board and roll one-fourth inch thick. Spread the dough with chopped meat which has been cooked and seasoned and slightly moistened with gravy. Roll up like a jelly roll then cut with a sharp knife into eight pieces. Place the rolls cut side down in the pan and place a piece of butter on top of each. Bake fifteen minutes. Serve with brown gravy poured over the rolls, or with a white or tomato sauce.

Cold in Vermont

Frederic Gusmussen, the well known agriculturist, said at a banquet in Harrisburg: "Agriculture is carried on in some regions of northern Europe where it is so cold that if you try to describe it people think you are exaggerating. "Yes, they class you with the farm hand who said: "Cold? It's mighty cold today, but ain't nuthin' to what I see to huns wunst in the Vermont highlands. Why, one day in hog-killing time up there it was so cold that we had a little 'o' bilin' water settin' on the stove, and when we took it out in the yard it friz so quick the ice was hot."

Cold Valley Donning Red

Residents in the Torne River valley of northern Sweden are busy painting their farmhouses red. The activity is the result of anonymous gift of $1,500 worth of red paint to the Lapland Geographical society with the specification that it be used in the valley, so that the color-dotted landscape may set an example to the dreary Finland homes across the border.

War Disk in Odd Place

While Ole Seehus, cook on the Norwegian freighter Songa, was cutting a cabbage for dinner in Montreal, he found embedded in it a Canadian soldier's identification disk No. 88825. The war record office at Ottawa shows this number was issued to Joseph Latuer of Pittsburgh, Pa., who enlisted in April, 1918.

Economical Dairying Means Successful Dairying

To succeed in any business the cost of production must necessarily be held down to the minimum, and the product sold at a fair price. The dairyman who uses a good sire at the head of his herd, feeds his cows well and gives them plenty of pure water to drink, and gives them good care, has gone a long way along the route of profitable dairy operations. One more necessary step is the production and delivery of good, well-flavored milk at the receiving station, so that a high grade product can be delivered to city customers every day of the year.
