COMMITTS SUICIDE BY SHOOTING

Franklin Klein, aged 40, a former resident of Beechwood, committed suicide at the Joseph Pfrang farm home at Winoski between 8 and 9 o'clock last week Thursday morning by shooting himself below the heart with a 12 gauge shotgun. His body was discovered in the basement by Mr. Pfrang upon his return from a nearby cheese factory. Coroner C. N. Sonnenburg of Sheboygan was called to investigate the shooting, and his conclusions were that Mr. Klein committed suicide. Mr. Klein had been in ill health for several months. Recently he consulted a physician and was informed that he would have to submit to an operation. This preyed on his mind, according to Mr. Pfrang, who gave this as the reason for the suicide. He was in the teaming business, and during the summer months was employed as a patrolman on a road in the town of Plymouth. He had been staying at the Pfrang farm for a week. That morning he planned on taking a load of hay to Cascade. He harnessed his team and left the horses in the barn where they were seen by Mr. Pfrang on his return from the cheese factory. Failing to find Mr. Klein in the barn, Mr. Pfrang started looking for him and followed his tracks in the snow to an outside cellar door of the house, which was open. In the basement he found the dead body of Mr. Klein. Investigation by Coroner Sonnenburg indicated that the man placed the butt of the single barreled shotgun against the stone wall and pressed the trigger with a ramrod, which was lying near him. Another shell similar to the one discharged was in his pocket.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAMS LARGELY ATTENDED

The Christmas programs held at the various churches here and in the community, were well received by large audiences. Services on Christmas Day were likewise largely attended. The choir of the Evangelical Peace church made their annual rounds Christmas Eve, singing Christmas carols at the homes of those in which members of the family were sick and could not get out to enjoy and participate in the Yuletide festivities.

NOTICE

The annual meeting of the Theresa Mutual Insurance Co., will be held in E. Arndt's Hall on January 8, 1929 at 10 o'clock a. m. for election of officers and to transact such other business as may lawfully come before such meeting.

W. A. Justman, Secretary.

The field meeting was held at the Henry Mintz' apiary in the town of Richfield, with Mr. Adams present. Mr. Whitehead held a series of meetings at demonstration apiaries on September 11 and 12 at the John Blank, Ambrose Wiedmeyer and A. B. Rusco apiaries. At the annual meeting in December, 1923, A. H. Kapelke was elected president.

1924 was a quiet year for the association, only one meeting being held and that took place at the Jacob Kraetsch apiary at Boltonville, with L. P. Whi ahead present.

The State Bee Tour passed through Washington county in 1925. It was attended by over 100 beekeepers from several states and Canada. The H. C. Ahlers and A. H. Seefeldt apiaries were visited by the party. Lunch was served free at the Seefeldt apiary by the association. Kewaskum was decorated for the occasion. It was truly a great time for everybody.

The year 1926 marks the death of one of our most beloved beekeepers, namely, Henry Kohl Sr. of Kohlsville. The "cane sugar" bill in Congress kept us busy passing resolutions and writing letters opposing its passage.

An invitation from George Semple of the town of Erin took us to his place on May 19, 1927. Mr. Wilson and Mr. Whitecomb of Madison gave us interesting talks that day, and Mrs. Semplehen fed us royally. Beekeepers in the flood regions of Louisiana were remembered annually by the association and individual members. On November 4 we had the pleasure of meeting Mr. James Gwin, our own marketing agent, appointed by the State Department of Markets.

Ten years of growth and success find the Washington County Beekeepers' association in 1928 in the lead of all local associations in the state, with a membership of 57. Slowly but surely we have been adding members, losing some but always a little stronger as the end of the year. Two of the charter members have been with the association for the full ten years, Erwin Hess and A. H. Seefeldt.

The tenth anniversary meeting of the association was held on August 5, 1928, on the farm of the late Capt. Geo. W. Jones in the town of Jackson, in honor of the memory of that pioneer beekeeper. More than 250 people were in attendance, many from Ozaukee and other nearby counties.—West Bend News.

To One and All We Extend the Heartiest of New Year Greetings

FATAL ACCIDENT NEAR ACKERVILLE

Yesterday morning's blizzard took its toll in human life when Mrs. Nels Knudson, one of a party going from Milwaukee to Waupaca to attend the funeral of her brother-in-law, was severely injured in an automobile collision near Ackerville and died in St. Joseph's hospital here one hour after at 11 a. m. The car containing Mrs. Knudson and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Wilson of Milwaukee, was driven by Mr. Wilson. While ascending a hill on Highway 41, about six miles east of here, they were caught in one of the flurries of yesterday's storm so wild that they were unable to see. Another car having a Michigan license, struck their machine, smashing the windows and breaking through along one side. Dr. Maxam of Slinger, who was called to administer treatment to the party, brought them here, where Mrs. Knudson died an hour later.—Hartford Times.

WAYNE SCHOOL PROGRAM

Miss Marcella Abdella, who is teaching in the Wayne Center school, held a program at her school on last Saturday evening, which was attended by about 200 people. The school was beautifully decorated in keeping with the holidays, and temporary electric lights were installed for the occasion by the school board. The program consisted of plays, songs, recitations and monologues. Miss Luella Griesmer of Iron Ridge rendered piano music. Miss Abdella's work was highly commended by all present. Among the guests were M. T. Buckley, county superintendent of schools, who delivered an address, and Mr. Behrens, county agent. Miss Abdella was recently awarded honorable mention in a travel essay contest conducted by a publishing company, her thesis being "Nature's Own Movieland." She was the only Wisconsin teacher to receive honorable mention.

LOOKS LIKE ATTEMPT AT KIDNAPPING

Melvin, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Brinkman, of the town of Addison, figured in an attempted kidnapping last Monday evening. When emerging from the Brinkman chicken coop, the lad, who is fourteen years of age, was seized by a strange man, and dragged a distance of ten blocks to the Soo tracks. There his captor was halted in his course by the arrival of a freight train. Evidently his project to be discovered, he thrust the boy to the ground, and when the latter screamed, threatened to stab him. He listened to the pleadings of the boy, and put the knife that he had drawn, away. Finally Melvin jerked loose, ripping his coat pocket by which the man held him, grabbed in an effort to hold him. Taking to his heels he proved fleet enough of foot to elude his captor and reached his home.—Hartford Times.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our beloved sister, Mrs. Madeline Frey (nee Sommers), who passed away two weeks ago, December 13, 1928:
She has only crossed the river,
That some day we, too, must cross;
She has landed safely over,
Though her boat was tempest tossed
She has landed in the harbor of the saved,
Redeemed and blest;
Her sailing over life's great sea is finished—She's at rest.
The Savior called her from this world to higher realms above,
To mingle with the angels there in fellowship and love.
She heard her Master's voice say "Come", and said "Thy will is best".
She heard the summons to appear, and bravely answered "Yes".

STRIKE PLENTY OF WATER IN NEW CITY WELL

The Gray Well Drilling Company of Milwaukee, to whom the contract for drilling the city well for the water works system was sub-let, finished their job of drilling last week, after going down a depth of 405 feet having 375 feet of water. On Friday morning they started to test out the well and after continuous pumping until Tuesday a. the rate of 170 gal. per minute, the lowest the water could be lowered at any one time was 15 feet. It is estimated by the company that the well is good for at least 600 gallons a minute. This exceptional flow of water at that depth, has gone beyond all expectations, and it is said by the well drillers to be one of the best wells in this section of the state.

The erection of the water tower is going along at a good rate of speed and it is thought that within two weeks this work will be finished. Due to the frost in the ground the Falls Construction company, who are digging the trenches and laying the pipe lines, have stopped their work of digging and will store their machines in one of Roman Smith's large ice houses for the winter months.

Ozaukee county ranked first in flax acreage last year among the counties of Wisconsin with a total of nearly 1700 acres. A higher percentage of land is devoted to the canning pea crop in Ozaukee county than in any other county in the state, nearly 4 per cent of the cropped acreage being given to the production of canning peas. The leading crop in acreage is clover and timothy hay, for which nearly 30 per cent of the cropped land is used; oats is second with 28.7 per cent; corn third with 16 per cent; alfalfa fifth with 4.5 per cent.—Cedarburg News.

HOOVER'S GOOD WILL TRIP IS COMPLETED

President-Elect Now Is on Way to Florida.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.—Herbert Hoover, President-Elect of the United States, completed at this point his South American good will trip and now is on his way to Florida. His visit to the capital of Brazil was the last on his scheduled list of South American nations originally outlined in his tour plans.

The President-Elect remained here three days before continuing his northward journey to Florida. He had a busy time during his stay in the Brazilian capital, as the government arranged an elaborate round of entertainments, luncheons, state dinners and receptions.

During his voyage from Montevideo Mr. Hoover prepared three speeches which he delivered at Rio de Janeiro. One of these was a response to the welcome of President Washington Luis of Brazil. He delivered another when he was received by the Brazilian congress and the third at the formal reception by the Brazilian Supreme court.

When the Utah arrived in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro the battleship's distinguished passenger was greeted with a round of salutes from guns of Brazilian naval craft and the Utah responded with a 21-gun salute.

The Utah was escorted into the capital city's harbor by two Brazilian cruisers. Mr. Hoover was met at the dock by President Luis and Vice President Melo Vianna, who was accompanied by the vice president of the senate, president of the chamber of deputies, the entire cabinet, the president of the Supreme court, and the city's mayor and highest officials.

President Luis came to Rio de Janeiro from his summer capital at Petropolis especially for the visit of Mr. Hoover.

The Stars and Stripes seemed to be everywhere, while private homes, business blocks, and streets themselves had been decorated with the entwined colors of Brazil and its northern neighbors in anticipation of the arrival of the President-Elect of the sister republic.

Mr. Hoover spent Christmas at the star on the Utah. However, for Mr. and Mrs. Hoover, who have spent Christmas day in many foreign lands, the experience of being away from the United States at the yuletide season was not new.

World's Debt to Uncle Sam Reaches 14 Billion

Washington.—Uncle Sam is playing world banker this year to the tune of about $1,500,000,000, official figures and estimates to the year-end show.

It is by far the largest total in any year except 1927, when the Commerce department recorded foreign loans at $1,592,000,000. It brings the total of American investments abroad, direct and indirect, to about $14,000,000,000.

NAVY BILL, TREATY ARE ON EVEN TERMS

Senate Agrees to Consider Both Measures Jan. 3.

Washington.—Hostilities between the anti-war treaty zealots and cruiser bill supporters were suspended in the senate until after the holidays.

After a lively filibuster by radicals against the cruiser bill, a unanimous consent agreement was entered into by which this measure and also the treaty will come before the senate on Thursday, January 3, the day congress reconvenes.

The agreement provides that the cruiser bill shall become the unfinished business on the regular senate calendar at two o'clock on that day and that the treaty shall become the unfinished business in open executive session on the same day.

Senator William E. Borah (Rep. Idaho), who proposed the agreement, said in response to questions from treaty advocates that he would promptly move on January 3 that the senate go into open executive session for the consideration of the treaty and that if a majority of the senate should support him, he would seek to obtain its consideration ahead of that of the cruiser bill.

It was apparent that the pacifist-radical group would make every effort to keep the treaty before the senate continuously until acted upon and that defeat of the cruiser bill by filibuster would then be sought.

Senator Borah has expressed a willingness that the two should go forward without conflicting with each other, but this program does not satisfy the radicals who have threatened to take the treaty leadership out of the Idaho senator's hands. As the situation stood a majority of the senate was ready to proceed to the consideration of the cruiser bill.

During the early part of the senate session, Senator Pat Harrison, (Dem. Miss.), helped to carry the filibuster along.

"Why do we in one hand hold a peace pact for the preservation of peace throughout the world," queried Senator Harrison, "and in the other a bundle of explosives to burst upon the world?"

Dedicate Monument to Orville, Wilbur Wright

Kitty Hawk, N. C.—Representatives of forty nations and many distinguished Americans and leaders in aviation at Kill Devil Hill near here paid tribute to the first airplane flight of the Wright brothers twenty-five years ago.

Where the throng witnessed the unveiling of a national memorial to the feat of Orville and the late Wilbur Wright, only five men saw the historic flight a quarter of a century ago when the world looked upon attempts to fly with derision. Orville Wright was here to accept the delayed honors paid him and his deceased brother.

Secretary of War Dwight Davis in an address said the monument would memorialize the names of the Wright brothers through future generations, but that the greatest honor to "these two Americans who gave wing to the world" would be the future expansion of aviation and its part in fostering peace, prosperity and progress.

LONG DISPUTE WITH MEXICO NOW AT END

No Further Friction Anticipated by Morrow.

Washington.—Mexico and the United States are in accord on every major point which has separated them for years.

This was learned when it became known that a treaty of amity and commerce soon is to be negotiated. This treaty will embody the fullest protection for the respective nationals and their properties.

Into it will be written regulations governing the ownership of oil and farm lands in Mexico, which will stand during the life of the treaty. While the specific details are to be worked out, the agreement will be fair and equitable.

This, it is learned on the highest authority, is the result of the work in Mexico by Ambassador Dwight Morrow. He is now here as a special adviser to the State department in the Pan-American arbitration conference and as the guest of President Coolidge at the White House.

For the first time he let it be known that the general situation across the Rio Grande was tranquil. He expects the new President, Gen. Portes Gil, to be a remarkable success. He is confident that the two countries will work in harmony and that there will be no further friction.

The petroleum situation, it was stated, will take care of itself. This is because drilling virtually has been halted in Mexico and will remain at a standstill for at least ten years, or until some new field is developed. In spite of this, the prospective treaty will protect the rights of all lands legally acquired for the purpose of drilling for oil.

The foreign ownership of farm lands is more complicated, in view of the recent law which provides that foreigners may not own land within 100 kilometers of the border or within 50 kilometers of the sea. Provision will be made for the fullest protection for all such lands acquired prior to 1917 and for which titles are on file. This arrangement, it was learned, is acceptable to the American government.

This situation has been brought about without any published exchanges, and, in fact, there have been few formal exchanges. It all has been left to personal conversations between Ambassador Morrow, former President Calles and President Gil.

There are only two points to be worked out. One is the question of Mexican immigration into the United States. There is a movement in congress to fix a quota on Mexican immigration. Mexico favors this because she wishes to keep her nationals at home for the development of the country. There is a faction, largely from southwestern states, which wishes to continue unrestricted immigration to provide farm labor.

The other is the argument over the disposition of the waters of the Colorado river, which empties into the Bay of Lower California, following the construction of the Boulder dam. The bay is in Mexican territory.

Winter Wheat Acreage Shows Marked Decrease

Washington.—The government crop report issued a few days ago estimated the total acreage sown to winter wheat at 43,228,000, a loss of 4,052,000 acres, or 8.6 per cent less than the revised estimate of 47,280,000 acres sown in the fall of 1927. The loss of rye acreage totaled 602,000 acres or 15.5 per cent below the revised estimate for 1927, this year's total rye acreage sown being placed at 3,293,000 compared with 3,895,000 last year.

The winter wheat crop, the Department of Agriculture report stated and rye, also, both have fallen below the condition at this time a year ago and also below the ten year average. The condition of winter wheat was placed at 84.4 for 1928, against 86.0 in 1927, and 84.6 for the ten year average. The condition of rye was estimated at 84.4 per cent against 89.2 in 1927 and 88.2 per cent for the ten year average.

Abandonment of acreage sown to winter wheat in 1928 reached 23.5 per cent against 13 per cent in 1927, and 10.8 per cent for the ten year average.

FRENCH FAVOR PRINT DESIGNS; LIGHTWEIGHT WOOL IN VOGUE

JANUARY is, or should be, the month when the woman who has the cunning to make her own clothes begins to map out her spring sewing program. One of her first thoughts is usually "a simple little silk frock" which can be comfortably and becomingly worn under her winter coat. Comes in this connection the query, "Will they or will they not wear prints this season?" To be assured of the re-emphasis placed on prints of every description study the Southern resort modes, for they are a trustworthy forecast of what will be worn in spring. As a matter of fact fashions are now being displayed for sojourners under sunny skies give promise of 1929 being the most glorious "print season" of them all.

The latest venture registered by silk prints leads into the studios of several well-known French artists, who for the moment have stepped from the fold of formal painting into the realm of textile design. For inspiration these artists have looked to the immediate things about them, interpreting everything from canines to palm trees in their decorative patternings. It is innovations such as this which are adding a note of super-interest to the new silk collections.

In addition to creating the prints, the artists have joined hands with the leading couturiers of Paris, who have in turn designed a collection of fetching models of these illustrated silks. For instance, an afternoon frock by Renee displays to charming advantage a print based on a motif of palm trees executed by Bernard Bouquet de Monvel. The design itself is a beautiful floral, revealing the exquisite craftsmanship of its creator.

play of seemingly every member of the canine family. Of this "doggy" silk Auguste Bernard creates the smart frock which the young woman seated in the accompanying picture is wearing. Befitting, so well known in Paris, turns to the forest for his inspiration, producing a new silk print with pine cones as the basic motif. The afternoon frock on the standing figure here illustrated is of this silk, the patterning of which gives an exquisite pen-and-ink effect in tones of beige and red. This gown comes to us from the atelier of Jane Regny.

Fur Hem

A princess evening gown, of beige satin, flares in circular fullness below the hips, dipping to the floor length in the rear. The entire hem is of dark brown fur. The shoulder straps are jeweled.

The Tweed Coat

Some of the new tweed coats come in such light colors that they are almost pastel tinted. The furs used on them are equally light, such furs as lynx and badger being the rule.

Novel Collar

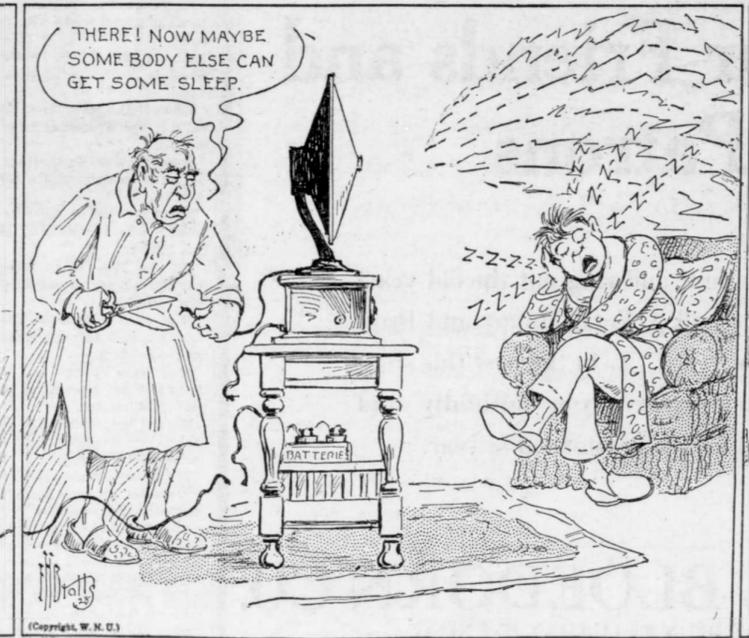

A black broadcloth coat with graceful lines has a shimmering collar that buttons with large ornate front and has a bow-tie at the throat.

Gored Skirt

The black skirt with a gathered waist is made of innumerable little pleats that give the impression of a draped skirt that is plaited. It is extremely graceful.

The tourist guide was getting tired. He had to answer too many dumb questions. "And just where did you say this boulder came from?" inquired one numbskull. The guide politely replied that a glacier brought it down. Then up spoke the inquisitive one again: "And where did the glacier go?" "Aw," said the guide, "it went back after another boulder."

He stood so close as almost to touch her but she failed to lift a hand or come back an inch, and Slade knew that he traced one whose spirit watched his own, perhaps the one person within a hundred miles who did not fear him. He had tamed men and horses - and women; he raised his arms slowly, deliberately, to see if she would flinch away or stand fast and out-guess him. She knew that he was planning to do - and he knew it. He might perpetrate almost any crime on the common and come clear; but in his land where women were few they were honored. One whisper from the Three Bar girl that Slade had raised his hand against her and, powerful as he was, the hunt for him would be on, and every man's hand circled him. His arms had half circled her when he whistled, cattle, every faculty cool and alert, as a voice sounded from the door. Both had been too engrossed to notice its noiseless opening. "I've finished cleaning up round the shop and corral," Harris said. "Is there any rubbish round the house you'd like to have thrown out and piled in a dry gulch somewheres out of sight?" He stood in the door, half facing Slade, his left side quartering toward Slade. To the girl it appeared that the strange pose was for the purpose of enabling him to take a quick step to the right and spring outside. If Slade should make a move and she shot a glance of scorn at his precaution she thought she knew that it would lead him nothing if Slade's deadly temper were roused by the insult. Slade, who had killed many, would kill Harris to his list before he could blink.

ply to deprive her of her rights. But the thought that her father would not easily have willed away the home place to another without being unduly influenced served to reinstate her distrust along with a vague resentment for his having shaken it by throwing himself so openly on her mercy. "You probably thought to overcome that by reaching the point the whole thing so patently aims for," she said. "And you calculated well - arriving at a time when we'd be alone for a week. The whole scheme was based on that idea and I've been patiently wondering why you don't rush matters and invite me to marry you." He rose and flicked the ash from his cigarette into the fireplace. "I do invite you - right now," he said, and in her surprise she left her chair.

Tasters Carry Their Fortunes in Throats

The tea and coffee tasters of the big importing and jobbing houses are paid large salaries. The sole duty of many of these experts is to taste the brews of many varieties of tea and coffee. And their palates are their fortunes - if it's palates that register flavor. Whatever it is, it must never fail in its discrimination; a taste that it requires years of practice and experience to attain. The president of a well-known coffee importing concern, is an expert in the selection of different varieties and combinations of coffee and almost any day may be found as the sole attendant at a little afternoon party peculiarly his own. From a casual cupful of the brew that is put before him he has no difficulty in telling the name and age of the berry from which it is made, and in fact, all the family history of that particular blend. Tea and coffee tasters in the large importing houses are said to daily con-

What Brand?

In the club a man was holding the attention of a small knot of men by announcing the fact that he could tell any brand of spirit by just tasting it. Several glasses of different spirits were put before him, and each time he gave the correct answer. Then suddenly a youthful member offered him a glass containing a white liquid and asked him to taste it. "Good heavens, you idiot!" shrieked the other, after the first sip. "That's gasoline!" "I know," came the imperturbable answer; "but what brand is it?" - Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. The initials e. g. stand for the Latin words exempli gratia, meaning "for example."

chair and stood facing him. "I'd like real well to have you, Billie." "That's the final proof," she said. "I'm surprised that you didn't tell me the first day." "So am I," he said. She found no answer for this but stood silent, knowing that she had suddenly become afraid of him. "And that's the living truth," he affirmed. "Other men have loved you the first day. You know men well enough to be certain that I wouldn't be tied to one woman for the sake of owning a few head of cows - not if I didn't want her for herself." He waved an arm toward the door. "There's millions of miles of sage just outside," he said. "And millions of cows - and girls." He moved across to her and stood almost touching her, looking down into her face. When Slade had stood so a few days past she had been coldly indifferent except for a sliver of distaste at the thought of his touching her. Before Harris she felt a weakening, a need of support, and she leaned back from him and placed one hand behind her on the table. "You judge for yourself whether a man wouldn't be right foolish - with all those things I mentioned being right outside to call him - to marry a woman he didn't want for herself, because she had a few hundred head of cows." He smiled down at her. "Don't pull back from me, Billie; I won't lay a finger on you. But now do you think it's you I want - or the little old Three Bar?" "You can prove it," she said at last. "Prove it by going away for six months - or three." He shook his head. "Not that," he said. "I've told you I was seved up in a right peculiar way myself - which wouldn't matter a d - n if it wasn't for this. I'd have tossed it off in a second if the girl on the Three Bar had turned out to be any other than you. Now I'm going to see it through. The Three Bar folks helped to found - unless some one pulls it out of the hole. Believe me if you can and if you can't - why, you know that one remark about my being unwelcome here will clear the road for you. Like I mentioned a few minutes back."

He turned away without touching her and she had not moved when the door closed behind him. An hour past noon on the following day a drove of horses appeared at the lower extremity of the valley and swept on toward the ranch. As Harris threw open the gates of the big corral he saw her standing in the door of the cookhouse watching the oncoming drove. Riders flanked the bunch well out to each side to steady it. There was a roar of hoofs and a stifling cloud of dust as three hundred half-wild horses clattered past and swiftly across the pasture lot back of the corral. A dozen sweat-streaked riders swung from their saddles. There was no chance to distinguish color or kind among them through the dust caked in the week-old growth of beard that covered every face. One man remained on his mount and followed the horses into the pasture lot, cutting off fifty or more and heading them back into the corral; for Vaddies had decreed that they could have the rest of the afternoon off for a jaunt to Brill's store and they waited only to change mounts before the start. Calico stood drooping sleepily in one of the smaller corrals and Harris moved toward him, intending to ride over with the rest of the men. "The boss said for you to ride Blue," Morrow stated as Harris passed the group at the gates of the corral. "He's clear gentle-broke, Blue is."

The men looked up in surprise. Morrow had not been near the house to receive instructions from the girl. The lie had been so apparent as to constitute a direct challenge to the other man. Harris stood looking at him, then shrugged his shoulders. "Whatever the boss says goes with me," he returned evenly. A rangy blue roan swept past with the fifty or so others. At least once every round of the corral he laid back his ears and squealed as he scored some other horse with his teeth, then lashed out with wicked heels. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Sat Right Down

Patrons of a local theater, seated behind a young woman who mistaid her purse one evening, missed a part of the photography, because the woman stood up to conduct her search for the lost article, but then enjoyed a little unintentional comedy which other patrons missed.

It was during a court scene put on by the Vitaphone, and the court was hearing parties in a separate support action. Those seated behind the young woman searching for her property were getting fidgety when the judge rapped his gavel, and ordered, "Order in the court, sit down!"

The woman was so surprised that she sank back into her seat, and there she discovered the missing purse, where it had fallen. - Springfield Union.
