HARD LUCK FOLLOWS UP FAMILY

Sunday morning at about 11:45 fire completely destroyed the large barn of Tom Brennen about three and one half miles north of Ashford. A chicken house and milk house were also destroyed.

The fire believed due to spontaneous combustion in the hay mow was discovered by a relative who was visiting the Brennen home. He saw smoke issuing from the roof and upon investigating the entire haymow was one mass of flames. An alarm was sounded to the neighbors, but before any of them arrived the entire structure was one mass of fire. Through quick efforts of Mr. Brennen and his brother, four horses were saved. A wagon and hayrack which had been standing on the barn floor was destroyed. Hay cutting and harvesting had just been completed Friday and the mow filled to the top, about sixty tons were also consumed in the flames.

Burning shingles carried away from the burning barn forced neighbors to station themselves on the roofs of buildings at the Murphy farm, about 40 rods away, to prevent fire from starting. In a few minutes a large crowd of spectators gathered to witness the fire.

The barn was built in 1900, and measured 36 by 70 feet. But since that time it was remodeled and had all the latest conveniences. Mr. Brennen stated the loss will total about $6,000, which is partially covered by insurance.

About twelve years ago the Brennen home was destroyed by fire and was replaced by a large modern home. On January 20, 1929 Mr. and Mrs. Brennen's only son was called by death. In the last twenty years the farm has had four fires.—Lonira Review.

"King's English"

It is the king's English just as it is the king's army, the king's navy and the king's court. Everything in the tight little Isle is subject to him, in theory at least. The expression is proverbial. It is sometimes credited to Shakespeare because of his use of it in the first act of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," but it antedates him.

It is not generally believed that the interior of the earth will ever become entirely cool. Geological facts point to the conclusion that the earth's interior is not cooling. The interior is still hot but it should be less so under normal conditions. It is believed that from melting by the enormous load of the crust. The condition in which the heated rock exists in the interior is one of the fundamental problems of geology still awaiting solution.

Birds on the Wing

Here in America there appears to have reverted to the ancient gonadic strain. We flit from one apartment to another on moving day. We move from city to city as our business beckons. We perigrate between town, seashore and lakeside. Our savage forbears chased the birds; we chase the sunshine. In us, as in them, is a restless longing for change of scene.—Woman's Home Companion.

Gypsy Trails

The romance of the road is irresistible to most healthy, vigorous people. Walked up within most hearts is the desire to travel. Whenever man is happy he wants to travel. His deepest emotions move him to go where he hasn't been. The gypsy is the irresistible youth of the world; he has in his language no words for "duty," and none for "possession"—he is the one man who is free, says American Magazine.

Appalling Suicide

The boiling pool at Rotorna, New Zealand, was used to commit suicide by an elderly man. He jumped into it and was boiled alive. Horrified spectators were unable to do anything. They could see the man clearly for a time, standing upright, his head a few feet below the surface and looking up. The body was recovered with grappling irons.

SEE ALLIGATOR IN RIVER

Considerable excitement has been created in the Main street neighborhood near the Leavens avenue bridge by the report that an alligator, about five feet in length was seen in the river near the bridge the past week. Mrs. Stephen Bigler, who resides at 324 Main street, is positive she saw the alligator plainly while she was standing near the river edge. Her son John, also claims to have seen the reptile. It is reported that a party in the Falls had a small alligator three years ago which secured its liberty in some manner, and this report has led some people to believe this reptile and the one reported being seen in the Sheboygan River are the same.—Sheboygan County News of Sheboygan Falls.

Improve Peanut Ration for Hogs

Value of Tankage Studied in Series of Tests Made at Beltsville.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Peanuts are used to a considerable extent in hog feeding in the peanut-growing areas of the United States, says the United States Department of Agriculture, and are usually fed alone or with mineral supplements only. The efficiency of peanuts for growing pigs is very materially increased, however, according to the department, when tankage is included in the ration as a protein supplement.

Tests at Beltsville.
This conclusion is the result of a series of feeding tests recently completed at Beltsville, Md., by O. G. Hankins and J. H. Zeller, of the animal husbandry division of the bureau of animal industry, and conducted in connection with the study of peanuts in the soft-pork problem.

Because many young pigs are commonly fed peanuts without protein supplements, the question arose as to whether the prevailing method of feeding was producing the best possible results. Three experiments were undertaken in which different rations were compared. In the first experiment, the investigators fed two lots of pigs shelled peanuts and minerals, one lot with tankage and the other without. In the second experiment the rations were the same as in the first except that the peanuts were unshelled. The third experiment was similar to the second except for a change in minerals.

The results are noteworthy in showing the value of tankage as a supplement to peanuts and minerals in the ration for young pigs, and are discussed in Technical Bulletin 110-T, entitled "Correcting the Inefficiency of Peanuts for Growth in Pigs," just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Results Summarized.
As an average of all the experiments, say the authors in summarizing the results, the feed cost of 100 pounds of gain, not including minerals, was $9.92 for the tankage-fed pigs and $17.50 when no tankage was fed.

The cost of the minerals did not exceed 35 cents per 100 pounds gain for either group.

The results also show that peanuts with only mineral supplements are not efficient for pigs in the early stages of growth. The addition of tankage more than doubled the daily gain of the pigs in the experiments.

The amount of each nutrient consumed per unit of gain was also much less for the tankage-fed pigs than for those not receiving tankage.

Factor in Increasing Production of Crops

Last year farmers bought more fertilizers than in many years. This increased use of fertilizer was a large factor in increasing crop production. The American farmer is learning gradually the lesson offered by the European farmer who spends more on fertilizer per acre than any other farmer in the world. Holland is continually enriching its soil, which makes possible the intensive methods of the country and puts it at the head of the list of nations in the crop yield per acre. Where the American farmer was inclined formerly to plant over a wide area of land of questionable fertility, he is coming to realize that with more intensive methods, proper fertilization, and greater attention to the culture of his fields, he can make more money with less labor and acreage and undergo less anxiety from plant diseases and frosts.

Nests for Hens

Poultry specialists recommend one nest for every five birds. If there are sufficient nests, all hens are insured of a laying place and the eggs are more likely to be clean and of high quality. In the well-planned house, nests can be removed easily and conveniently for cleaning. Metal nests have an advantage in this respect because they are easier to keep sanitary and they harbor fewer mites and bed bugs.

SANITATION IN POULTRY YARD PERFORMING DOUBLE FUNCTION

Parasites Undermine Health and Sap Vigor of Birds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Care exercised in keeping poultry yards clean and in sanitary condition has a double function in keeping the flock clear of parasites that undermine the health and sap the vigor of the birds. The injury by mites, lice, fleas, and other parasitic organisms is sometimes obvious, but it also happens that some insects and other small creatures are carriers or intermediate hosts of some of the internal parasites of poultry.

For example, according to specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture, one variety of roundworm must develop for one stage of its life outside the poultry it affects. The roundworm lays its eggs within the droppings, and they are eliminated in the droppings. They will not mature if picked up by a fowl. They do mature if a water flea picks up the eggs. Then if a hen takes in the water flea with her drinking water the roundworm parasite of the flea develops into a poultry parasite.

Many similar examples are known, and others are suspected. The grasshopper, for instance, has recently been shown to transmit at least one important parasite of domestic poultry. Sanitation and cleanliness which prevents such insects from having access to the droppings may thus break a cycle through which infestation reaches the flock. The insects in themselves may not be harmful to poultry, but if they have had an opportunity to feed on contaminated droppings they may be the means of spreading these particular parasites.

Disk Before Plowing Is Advantageous Practice

It has been pretty definitely proved that pulverizing the top layer of the soil with disk harrow before plowing is done is a very advantageous practice. When the furrow is turned over the pulverized soil breaks away from the furrow and helps fill up the furrow bottom much more effectively than when the solid furrow is turned over. In the latter case large openings are often left which cause the soil to dry out rapidly and become too hard to work down well.

When using a disk for this purpose, do not angle it too much. Let it run rather straight and it will do satisfactory work.

Agricultural Hints

Hog lots and pastures used year after year are one of the causes of rusty pigs.

There is no such thing as too much sweet corn. Don't be stingy with your planting.

If you want to plow the clover under at the beginning of the drought season, it will be saving practically all of the manure dropped there in the summer.

A very satisfactory feed can be made from dry shock corn put into the silo, though it will not be as palatable to stock as if it had been cut at the proper stage.

Sweet clover, in too many instances, has been considered a weed and a valueless forage crop. Blue grass pastures can be improved very materially by sowing them to sweet clover.

In recent years the soy bean has entered into the regular cropping systems on a very large number of farms.

The manure pile is a fertile source of danger through providing a breeding place for flies, but it is also the most valuable sludge adjunct a mixed farmer can have.

Sweet clover hay should be cut before the stalks get too large to be good for hay. It is also important to cut sweet clover before the stalks get very coarse in order to prevent killing it.

Sweet clover may be sown with any crop like barley, oats or wheat. When the nurse crop is removed, the sweet clover comes on very rapidly and when it grows to the height of a foot or more cattle can be turned on it.

Pastures can be materially improved by sowing sweet clover in them or by making provision for sweet clover pastures. Sweet clover is a plant that is not fully appreciated either as a forage or as a soil renovator or improver.

Birds That Qualify as Farmer's Good Friends

Although both cuckoo and quail are worth cultivating for their insect-eating propensities, the grosbeak is the most valuable of the lot where the farmer is concerned and should be given every chance to propagate throughout the country, says Howard T. Middleton in an article in the Farm Journal.

This little member of the finch family, with its oversized mouth, is particularly fond of potato bugs, it is found, and, if unmolested, will build its nest at the edge of potato fields and guard them throughout the growing season.

"It is a conservative estimate that one-tenth of the grosbeak's diet is made up of potato bugs," says Mr. Middleton, "but he also preys with relish upon cucumber beetles, cankerworms, caterpillars, army worms, cutworms and chinch bugs."

Examination of the cuckoo's stomach reveals that he specializes in caterpillars and other crawling creatures, while the quail finds the potato bug his favorite item of diet in season.

Rode to Office on Ass
Mounted on an ass, M. Henri Castagne triumphantly rode to the mairie of Pessac, near Bordeaux, France, recently, to take his seat as the newly elected councillor. He wore the traditional gray top hat decorated with ribbons, and carried the picador's lance with which he paraded the village streets during the election campaign. Castagne styled himself "the laughing candidate," and one of his election pledges was that within three months all drinks would be free in the local cafes. Castagne won his seat by 60 votes, and so far has been the most popular candidate ever in the village.

Yankees Not Tough to Beat

"THE Yankees are not so tough to beat if you go right out and battle them. Some clubs and some pitchers curl up, roll over and are beaten before they start when the Yankees dash upon the field."

"But the Washington club bothered them last year because we declined to believe that just because the Yanks were champions it was in their contracts that they could not be beaten."

Such was the explanation of Garland Braxton, the slender southpaw pitcher of the Washington club, a pitcher so slender that his 152 pounds are distributed along a frame of five feet eleven inches, in telling how it was the Nats troubled the Yankees so much, winning nine games from them after a bad start.

The Nats were just as easy as other clubs for New York in the spring, but when the Washington pitchers, Braxton and Sam Jones in particular, rounded into shape, they gave the champions a lot of bother.

"Major league benches are too large," is another of Braxton's sage remarks. "A lot of big league clubs carry pitchers all season who are not ready for the big show and who might be acquiring real experience in the minors."

The purchase of Braxton by the New York Yankees at the close of the season of 1925 was a blessing for the slender southpaw, for it was at New York that Braxton learned more about the art of mystifying the batters. Coached by Herb Pennock, he imitated Pennock's delivery but where Pennock throws a curve, Braxton depends chiefly upon his fadeaway or screw ball.

"The screw ball is bad on the pitcher's arm," says George Uhle. "It never bothered my arm," says Braxton, "and I have thrown plenty of them. In fact, since 1923, I have not had a sore arm. Sometimes when New York and Washington was calling on me often for relief work, my whip was tired."

"You know," added Braxton, "my lack of weight always has caused managers to figure I was not strong enough. At Boston I was told I was too light. When I joined New York I guess Miller Huggins felt the same way for he did not call on me until he threw me into games he figured were already lost. But he did not consider me strong enough to go the entire route and that is how he happened to send me to Washington so he could grab Dutch Rueter."

Yet this 152-pound six-footer took part in 50 games for Washington, more than any other American league pitcher in 1928, in three more games than Marberry even.

Garland Braxton.

JIM McLEOD ALL-AROUND ATHLETE

Arkansas Rookie Signs to Play With Washington.

S. J. McLeod, whom home folks call "Jimmie" for short, will go up to the big time next fall with the good-will and interest of all the state of Arkansas, for Jim is an "Arkansas boy."

Born in the shadow of Kavanaugh field, the home lot of the travelers, Little Rock's Southern association team, Jim McLeod just grew into baseball.

He is nineteen years old, quit his high school education and refused to make a special trip to Chicago to represent his state in the interscholastic track meet, just to get his first tryout with the Arkansas Travelers this year.

And he has made good, for the sale of the boy to the Washington club is said to have involved $12,000 cash, says a Little Rock special to the Washington Star.

The boy thought enough of his ability to quit school in order to have a chance to "make" the Travelers, and his sale thus vindicates his judgment and the judgment of the Traveler officials. With the local club he has been batting about .260 and his fielding has been sensational and steady.

McLeod was known to the boys in school as "Father Time" and "Daddy," because he was slow about getting out to practice. He is an all-around athlete.

He made all-State end in football and played center with the champion high school basketball team, and made his letter in track with the discus.

Refusing to attend the Chicago track meet caused him to be soundly panned, but when he started making a mark with the Travelers his critics became his strongest boosters.

The shortstop who has meant so much to the local club this season probably will become known as the "country boy" when he joins the Griffins, for he is just a well built, husky, sandy-haired boy—"a second Travis Jackson," some say, around Arkansas. McLeod plays the game every minute and fan, about as often as he hits, but when he does hit it usually is for extra bases.

Manager Jack Steele and President Edgar Allen of Little Rock liked the way he handled himself on the diamond from the outset, and, despite his youth and inexperience, counted him as a regular before the first week of spring practice was ended.

Whatever McLeod does in the big show, his work probably will be watched with greater interest than any athlete who has "gone up" from Arkansas in many years.

With the exception of one year in semiprofessional baseball in the "bush leagues of Arkansas," McLeod has had no more experience in baseball than he has in other lines of sports. Out Arkansas way he is regarded as "just a born athlete."

The Yankees reached the 25-men limit by placing Floyd Van Pelt, twenty-one-year-old right hander, upon the voluntarily retired list.

Eibert F. (Eb) Caraway, Purdue baseball star, who led the Big Ten in hitting during the season just closed, has been elected captain of the 1930 nine.

The record number of errors made in a single game by a big league team is attributed to the White Sox, who perpetrated 12 muffs against the Tigers in 1903.

A bulletin from Commissioner Landis' office makes record of an option obtained by Cleveland on Pitcher Milburn G. Schorffner of the Jersey City club of the International league.

If Wilbert Robinson retires as manager of the Dodgers he will retire also as the undefeated champion developer of pitchers, and the champion of all salve artists, his boosters claim.

Hockey goal tenders are idle in the summer time, and as long as a good one will stop an average of about 54 shots out of 56, we don't see why the American league doesn't draft a few, in the emergency, as shortstops.

Big Six Conference Is Strong for Polo Game

Polo as a collegiate sport in the southwest is pushing its way toward a place on the Big Six conference program.

Fleet army ponies from the remount station at Fort Reno have replaced draft horses with cowboy saddles on the University of Oklahoma's team.

Oklahoma was the first school in the conference to play polo. Students started the game by playing on work horses. Now regular polo equipment is used in polo classes as well as by squad members.

The University of Missouri and Iowa State, following Oklahoma's example, also have begun instruction in polo. Major E. P. Parker, commandant of the R. O. T. C. at Oklahoma, coach of the Sooner players, believes polo soon will become a regular Big Six sport.

Fort Worth Pilot Sets Mark for Long Service

Jackey Atz, Fort Worth's baseball pilot, probably holds a record for continued management of the same minor league club.

He came to the Panthers from Chicago in 1918 and has won six Texas league pennants, the last in 1925.

Like the courthouse clock, Atz has become a fixture in Fort Worth. He has not bothered to sign a contract for several years. When spring training time arrives, he drives to Fort Worth from his New Orleans home, and when the season closes he returns there.

Huggins Tells Secret

Miller J. Huggins, manager of the world champion New York Yankees, explains how he keeps his all-star team hustling even after capturing six pennants in the last eight years, says: "I teach them to play years, says: as though it depended every game as though it depended upon our winning the pennant. That is my motto. Every game for itself. That keeps them hustling, no matter how far ahead they are or who they are playing. That is the reason

H. H. Fish, Esq., President of the Company, summarizes from his letter to us as follows:

BUSINESS

Western Newspaper Union, successor to a company of the same name and a business founded in 1865, serves more than 10,000 daily and weekly country newspapers, maintaining fully equipped plants in 36 key cities of the United States from California to Massachusetts. The Company supplies these newspapers with ready printed inside pages or with columns of prepared plate, containing various feature stories, serials and special articles selected by the newspaper publishers; places national advertising in their papers and prepares cuts and copy for local advertising campaigns.

The Company also does a large volume of commercial printing, prints in their entirety various magazines and trade journals and is responsible for the mechanical production of many of the feature services of The Associated Press.

FINANCIAL

During the past 20 years net profits of Western Newspaper Union, after all charges including depreciation, but before Federal taxes, averaged more than $680,000 annually, and in no single year were such net profits less than $450,000.

Net profits after depreciation, but before Federal taxes, for the past 4 years, as certified by Messrs. Arthur Andersen & Co., after eliminating operations of the paper mill, which is being sold coincident with this financing and after other adjustments arising from the reorganization as stated in their certificate, were as follows:

1926.....	955,383
1927.....	571,249
1928.....	765,825

Such net profits as above have averaged about $758,448 annually, and for the year ended December 31, 1928, amounted to $765,825, equivalent to more than 3 times the annual Debenture interest requirement.

After deducting from such net profits in 1928 Debenture interest requirements, Federal Taxes (parent company) at 12% and Preferred Stock dividends, the balance amounted to over $352,000, or about $2.35 per share on the 150,000 shares of Common Stock to be presently outstanding.

The net assets of the Company, available for these Debentures, based on the balance sheet, as at April 30, 1929, adjusted to give effect to the present financing, including the sale of the paper mill, were in excess of $8,500,000.

MANAGEMENT

Since the death in 1916 of the former owner, George A. Joslyn, his widow and other heirs have owned the majority of the Common Stock of Western Newspaper Union, control of which is now being acquired by the executives who have been responsible for its successful operation during the past 13 years.

All legal details will be passed upon by Messrs. Tenney, Harding, Sherman & Rogers of Chicago and by Messrs. White & Case of New York.

For some time after he descended he felt the chill of the weather experienced above.

Water Seeks Its Own Level---So Will Quality

When dairy products are good, it is because the raw material, milk or cream, has been properly cared for before it reached the manufacturer or shipper. The consumer buying this good product will ask for more. In time he will gladly pay more for it because he really wants it. On the other hand, forcing the price up without regard to demand will check the sale of goods, supplies pile up and the market is ruined. Consumption depends largely on two things—prices that are within reach of the average American household and a quality product that will mean a second or third helping. The question of over-production can be well taken care of, by simply producing a quality product.
