On Wednesday evening, while the Thomas and Kocher children were playing on the lawn at the Kocher home, a car suddenly stopped in the yard on the opposite side of the ighway. CYCLIST PEDALS 80 MILES IN

A feat most unusual in these days of automotive power was accomplished by Peter Schwartz, the brother of Mrs. Frank Rehwaldt of this city, last Sunday, when he rode his bicycle from Milwaukee to Hartford and then from Hartford to Milwaukee, making a distance of 80 miles. Schwartz is in training for bicycle races to be run between Kenosha and Chicago on September 15th. He has already been able to attain a great speed upon his cycle. In a previous trip to Hartford he was able to travel at a rate of 35 miles an hour for a distance of three or four miles, which is a speed not so far behind that achieved by the averge automobile. Last Sunday he made one hour and forty minutes.-Hart-

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) A variety of corn with husks that fit tightly over the ears like finger stalls would be a boon to corn growers everywhere because of the protection afforded against corn ear worms, black weevils, and corn ear smut.

A single specimen of such a huskprotected ear vas recently reported by C. H. Kyle, of the United States Department of Agriculture. He found it among the corn plants in his experimental plots where he is attempting to develop a corn that will have ears tightly inclosed in husks for protection against ear smut. Ordinarity, the husk covering of an ear of corn is made up of a number of overlapping leaves, each of which only partially encircles the ear. The unusual specimen found by Mr. Kyle had a single leaf completely encircling the ear.

Other scientists in the department, G. N. Collins and J. H Kempton, have shown that corn ear-worm damage is reduced when the tips of the ear are covered with the husks, and Kyle has shown in other experiments that husks that tightly inclose the ears protect them from rice or "black" weevils.

Crates stack better in storage space than either baskets or barrels and fruit cools quicker in crates than in the other containers and for other reasons keeps better. by Improved Equipment More efficient farm production may be secured where the equipment used on the farm is all of approximately the same size and requires the same power unit to operate it. For example, a farm needing four work horses may secure the most efficient production by having as much machinery as possible that requires four horses. This keeps the horses in use the maximum proportion of the time and results in lower production costs. Lower production costs are the result of more efficient use of man labor where one man is driving as many horses as possible all the time.

Group of Fruit Diseases Blue mold rots comprise a group of diseas : characterized by being very soft and watery, light green or pale vellowish brown in color and covered with numerous bluish tufts comprising millions of spores. Blue mold is the most common storage rot of apples and pears and every grower is famillar with it because it forces him to put his punctured apples in the cull pile instead of in boxes. The country over, blue mold probably causes more loss than all other storage rots combined. This mold is not materially retarded by cold temperatures and its spores will even germinate at 32 degrees. It will not start a rot except under warmer conditions, but removing infected fruit to cold storage will not check rot growth. The long accepted method of control is careful handling of fruit to prevent injury. Adoption of methods for spray resides removal has opened new problems in this connection, for extra han-

"The usual loss of straw for feed your gasoline, in combining probably will be compensated by growing feed on land now used for green-manuring crops. If straw is desired for feed, it can be saved by some additional labor.

"Crop varieties susceptible to lodgng can be harvested more efficiently with a combine than with a binder. Only a few varieties of wheat will ever shatter enough to cause appreclable losses, but most varieties of oats and some of barley will shatter unless harvested as soon as they are ripe enough to combine."

Secure Better Results

From Various Hay Crops

For best results timothy hay should be cut when in full bloom. Clover should be cut when it has reached full bloom. If allowed to stand too long, many clover leaves will turn brown and fall and the stems will become woody. Such hay has less feeding and market value than hay cut at the proper time.

Mixtures of clover and timothy are hest cut when the clover has reached full bloom. Red clover is usually ready to cut ten days to two weeks before timothy.

Alfalfa should be cut when 10 to 25 per cent of the crop is in bloom. Alfalfa that is putting forth new shoots from the crown should be cut without regard to bloom.

Incubation Long Known

Artificial incubation was successfully practiced in very ancient times in Egypt and China, and probably other countries. Reaumur, the eminent French physicist, used successfully a very crude form of incubator. The first application for a patent on an incubator in the United States was in 1847. Practical success with modern incubators may be said to date from the Paris exposition of 1877, at which Rouillier and Arnoult exhibited a hydro-incubator.

Madison-Threatened deadlock between senate and assembly over financing the $10,000,000 university appropriation bill was averted when the assembly backed down from its demand for a surtax on incomes to raise funds for the university.

Concurrence in other senate amendments by the lower house sent the bill on its way to Gov. Walter J. Kohler and indicated that the actual work of the legislature may yet be concluded before September 1.

Agreement upon the university appropriation left income taxation as the only major issue pending settlement by the two houses. The bill grants the university approximately $500,000 more than its last blennial appropriation.

Opponents of the plan to centralize investment of Wisconsin's $30,000,000 in trust funds to a re-organized investment board won a temporary victory in the assembly when they voted the bill down, 40 to 35.

Losses incurred on farm mortgage bonds amounting to more than a half million dollars were unavoidable and cannot be blamed upon administration of the teachers' retirement fund or others which lost, Assemblyman Alvin C. Reis argued.

Reis defended the present system of investment of trust funds by various groups appointed to administer them and sald that better financial advice can be obtained under the current plan than could be had by the pro-

Under provisions of the bill, which previously had been passed by the assembly and now goes to the governor for approval or veto, the state will buy the Kettle-Moraine area of about 1,500 acres, establish a state park, and pay for the land at the rate of $25,000 a year for six years. Construction of a $600,000 capitol annex building on the shore of Lake Monona here apparently has been delayed another two years, the assembly killing the Goodland bill which provided for such a structure by a vote of 43 to 30. The bill offered by Sen. Walter S. Goodland, Racine, and passed by the upper house, would have taken the $600,000 from the state insurance fund. An amortization plan, whereby the state would repay this with interest refunding approximately $48,000 of the debt annually until paid, was proposed by Assemblyman Moulton B. Goff, Sturgeon Bay, but was rejected, 54 to 18.

The Langve resolution to exclude lobbyists from the assembly chambers and galleries was tabled by a vote of 42 to 40, after being amended to exempt the galleries.

Two senate bills, relating to compensation of prisoners in the state prison and to creation of annuity and benefit funds in cities for firemen, their widows and children, were concurred in by the lower house.

SENATE RECONVENES: TARIFF ROW BEGINS

Revised Measure Not Ready Until September 4.

Washington .- After a two months recess the senate has reconvened, but found no work because the finance committee will not have the revised tariff bill ready before September 4. Republican leaders, however, have obtained an agreement with the Democrats for the senate to recess over three-day periods until two days before Labor day to permit the committee to complete its work.

Both sides of the tariff argument have their spokesmen in the states of the Central West, judging from testimony before the senate finance committee. Out of about 50 witnesses on industrial products appearing before the committee from Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Iowa, a few more than half sought as high or higher rates than in the house bill, while the others protested against increases. Of the numerous other witnesses from these states who appeared on agricultural duties the sentiment overwhelmingly was for further boosts above the house bill rates. That the this spray is not applied the cost of Central West is against upward revision of duties on most of the major industrial products might be deduced from the small number of witnesses interested in iron and steel, textiles, chemicals and other basic commodities.

Those seeking higher rates repre sented for the most part various mis cellaneous industries. The witnesses protesting against increases included large Chicago department stores and ordinary consumer, who is supposed to be against tariff boosts, was not represented.

A transcript of the testimony before the senate committee shows that the Central West displayed some degree of interest in nearly all of the schedules of the tariff bill.

There have been indications that of 1 per cent, which is remarkable for Mr. Hoover is displeased over some of the sepate tariff boosts. In announcing the call for the special session to consider farm relief and the tariff, the President admonished congress to hold tariff revision to farm and related products. The house went beyond his counsel by opening up a number of new schedules, while the senate committee has made a most extensive revision of rates all along the line.

So widespread, in fact, has the senate revision been that there are seri-Green Bay-Questions relating to ous doubts whether the bill can be the religion of applicants for positions enacted without going over into the regular session in December.

BOGUS REAL ESTATE PROBE IN PROGRESS

Statewide Quiz Being Conducted by Illinois Officials.

Chicago.-A state-wide investigation of real estate swindles by which several Chicago real estate concerns are alleged to have defrauded 400 or 500 investors of an estimated $3,000,000 has been launched.

Commissioner A. A. Crissey of the real estate board of the state department of registration and education, concluded a two-day hearing of complaints at Rockford and is conducting Chicago. Thereafter he plans to hold hearings in Chicago. Thereafter he plans to hold hearings in Moline, Freeport, Danville and Peorla.

"This investigation is no reflection on the general real estate business as conducted in Illinois," Clyde I. Backus, assistant director of the department of registration and education, said. "It seems, from our investigation, that a few of the less reputable Chicago firms, baving exhausted their lists in the city, have begun to prey on the more gullible small town business men and in some cases on aged persons of no husiness acumen.

"The practice of these concerns seems to have been uniform in that they opened a subdivision and with the sales contract offered another document represented as a contract. In this second document, the company appears to have agreed within a speciresell the property involved at a substantial profit for the customer.

"While this practice savors of fraud. the department of registration and education will not undertake to prosecute offenders. We are interested only in revoking the licenses of concerns following such methods."

Mr. Backus indicated he would invite the co-operation of state's attorneys in counties where hearings will be held, with a view to having criminal proceedings instituted where convictions are deemed likely.

"The difficulty in prosecuting such cases is that complainants are reluctant to have their credulity exposed in open court," Mr. Backus said. "Publicity of an impersonal kind helps to bring cases of fraud to light."

Despite the fact that the raisin grape industry has been active before the board ever since it first convened, the problem of relief had been sorely complicated by entanglements of the Sun Maid group. At least one large bond issue, held by a New York concern and due on the 1927 crop is still unpaid according to reports, and this fact, coupled with the board's avowed reluctance to deal with more than one co-operative in each line of agriculture, was taken to indicate that the final agreement in the raisin grape field would be a matter of dim, distant future.

The board's attention is being directed to both the wheat and cotton situation. The members now have before them applications from the cotton growers for funds to finance their coming crop, and it is understood the co-operative will arrange to furnish several million dollars for its own appropriation through intermediate and private banks.

The wheat situation also is to occupy several members of the board in Chicago. It is expected that the committee organized to form the $20,-000,000 wheat cornoration will have a report ready at that meeting and that final plans will be made. Shortly thereafter the board is due to actively participate in relieving distress in the wheat growing sections of the

This plan was announced by the board after several conferences with officials of the national wool marketing council and other wool marketing associations which had asked the board for the immediate selection of a commodity advisory council and for financial aid from the farm relief revolving fund.

The decision of the board to withhold funds for the time being from the wool marketing association was in keeping with its policy to bring about as large an amalgamation of marketing concerns of each major commodity as possible. A statement by the board declared that "It is apparent that one of the major problems confronting the wool associations is a need for the co-ordination of their selling efforts."

Reverend Mr. Tolliver stood up, and put out his hand. "Come here, Margie. Let me see if my pretty twin is as pretty as I think." She crossed to him quickly, a little pain rising in the white throat with the thought of his helplessness, quick mist clouding the lovely eyes. His hand gently followed the gold tace at her shoulder, fondled the soft curve of her hair, fingered the slender chain. "It is not just prettiness, my child," he said affectionately. "You are fragrant, and wholesome, and sweet. That is your beauty. You don't need artificial adorning. Your loveliness is like a flower's-unaffected, unassumed, just born there." Marjory, freed from his hand, moved sinuously about before the mirrors, preening herself pleasantly to their flattering reflections, and to the more flattering eyes of her sisters. Ginger giggled. "Father, you ought to see her. Really you ought. She is so unaffected right now-just like a flower turning to the sun."

The low siren of a motor sounded outside. A flash of lig. leaped to Marjory's eyes, a quick flush to her cheeks. "It's Eddy," she whispered. "Sit down everybody, and look natural. Don't stand about-gaping-" Sulting action to ber words, Marjory dropped gracefully into a chair and toyed with the golden chain with an air of utmost indifference. The others, quickly, with more or less of grace, draped themselves about the room, Ginger turning her back to them all and to the door, burying herself in the details of the buffet supper.

"You see, father," she hissed scorpfully. "You see? The whole family is man-mad, simply man-mad. Except you and me. Disgusting, that's what it is, simply disgusting. Notural as a flower-humph! You don't see the flowers flying off their stalks when a boy-friend bumble bee breezes In."

"'Lo everybody," called Eddy's pleasant voice from the plazza. 'Door's open-I'm coming in. Oh, good evening, Mr. Tolliver, how are you? Good evening, Miss Jenkins. Gee, Marge, I pity the judges. I only hope they live to deliver the prize." "Why, Eddy, how nice you look," sald Helen warmly. "Yes, thanks, I suppose I do. The white carnation was mother's idea, and l feel just like a hanker. She says It is not often a mere hay rube farmer has a chance to step out with a Blue Ribbon, so she dolled me up. Hello, Ginger."

Ginger had not so much as lifted ber eyes from the paper.

"Oh, hello, Eddy," she said coldly. But this coldness on her part was merely assumed on principle, to show her disgust for the man-madness with which her sisters were afflicted. In her heart, she was fond of Eddy Jack-

"Oh, you're all right, are you? That's a relief. I thought you'd been suddenly struck deat, dumb and-er ub-" He floundered awkwardly away from the tender subject of blindness. "It must be time to start," said Helen, her eyes on the clock. She had told Professor Langley not to come until eight-thirty-a late hour for callers in Red Thrush, but she was determined to do her sisterly duty to Marjory before abandoning herself to personal pleasure.

"Yes, I think it is," agreed Eddy. "It seems they check the beauties at the door, at eight, I think. I should have brought a truck to carry home the prizes, but-'

"Oh, nonsense," laughed Marjory. "You know I haven't a chance in the world, against all those lovely girls, "Huh," sniffed Ginger scornfully, under ber breath. "You'd never think The girls followed them to the door fifty dollars in gold, and there were- as they went out, smiling admiration at Marjory-admiration, encourage ment and hope.

"Shall I bring you a sandwich in my pocket, Glnger? Or would you rather have an aspic?" Eddy called to her. Ginger ignored him.

The three girls stood together in the doorway until, with a last farewell of the siren, the car disappeared down the quiet shady street.

"A nice boy," said Helen quietly. But with a full view of the living room before her, her quietness vanished. "This place is a sight," she sald briskly. "Ginger, get the broom, and dust up that rug. Miriam, put away the thread and things."

"But what difference-this time of night-" protested Ginger. "Horace will be here in ten minutes. Now straighten up for me, won't you. while I run up and straighten my-

"Most disgusting thing I ever saw. Man-mad. Simply man-mad. The whole gang of them. She unesn't care if you sit in a dusty chair, father-she doesn't care if Miss Jenkins has to look at a messy table and an untidy rug-she doesn't care if Miriam and I have to associate with her when her nose is shiny, but a man! Oh, no!"

House of the Future, as Architect Sees It

The house of the future may be seen as a building designed without win- dust and corrosion and properly budows except perhaps a few small ones for the purpose of observing the visitor at the door or determining the state of the weather.

The large wall space will be utilized by the architect as a means of expressing a new type of architectural beauty. Within, we shall have all the comforts we now possess plus others undreamed of.

There will be illumination containing a healthful percentage of ultravlolet light, and there will be a ventilating system supplying fresh, warmed, or cooled air to all parts of the home. Quiet will prevail, no matter how noisy the street may be. The smoky atmosphere of our cities does immense damage to textiles, furofture and all the trimmings and trappings of the home. The air circulated by the ventilating system can just as President's Wives Smoked Mrs. Zachary Taylor, wife of the twelfth President, was a pipe smoker. She was known to smoke a pipe occasionally in private while she was mistress of the White House. Mrs. Andrew Jackson, wife of the seventh President, also was a pipe smoker, but she died soon after her husband's election and consequently never presided over the executive mansion. James Parton, Jackson's biographer, says it was not uncommon for Jackson and his wife to sit for hours smoking their pipes before their fire

Not Really Chinese Dish The truth seems to be that there is no such dish as chop sucy known in China, although it is commonly served as Chinese throughout the United States. This has come about in a curious way. It originated at a dinner that Prince Li Hung Chang gave in New York when he made bis trip around the world. Prince Li carried his own chef with him, and the menu was strictly Chinese. One of the dishes especially delighted the wife of the guest of honor, and she asked [.] what it was. Prince Li called in his chef, and the chef replied in Chinese. "It is a creation of my own-a chop suey." The words "chop suey" mean a mixture or hash. Prince Li sold in English, "It is a chop suey." The American woman spread the news of the chop suey, the wonderful dish. The name was taken up by the Chinese restaurants in America, and today chop sucy is the chief concoction that they serve.

Consumers Demand Quality

The demand for quality milk and cream is becoming general. More real work has been done all over the country in the past few years to improve quality than at any time during the past. Tons of printed matter have been used in urging the production of good milk and cream. But progress has been slow. Undergrade milk has been produced for so many years for the production of butter, cheese and condensed milk, that a large number of producers are unbelievers in regard to being able to better conditions by producing better quality. It is up to those who see the light ahead, to keep up the good work until all are won over. A quality product is bound to bring the price that is a real satisfaction to the producer.
