THE STORY

On a pleasure trip in eastern waters, Philip Amory, English World War veteran, now a trader on the island of Papua, New Guinea, plunges overboard to save the life of a musical comedy actress, known as "Gin-Sing." Amory becomes interested in Pia Laurier, member of a wealthy New South Wales family. He tells her of his knowledge of a wonderful gold field on the island. "Gin-Sing" tells him Pia is engaged to Sir Richard Fanshew. His holiday ended, Amory arrives back at Daru. He meets an Englishman, Spicer, there on development business for a syndicate of which Fanshew is head. Fanshew's name recalls to Amory a long forgotten incident in which he witnessed the "escape" of Fanshew from a leper colony. He tells Spicer details of a message which indicates that the secret of the gold field is known. Amory meets with an accident that lays him up for three weeks.

"I think you're very good indeed," I lied promptly. Dismay was the emotion that, in truth, and possession of me. I wondered how many people knew, or would know, and how soon they would be on the track of the unique, amazing place known as Tatanita. I swore to myself that, doctors or no doctors, I was off tomorrow.

Something of this I said. "Gin-Sing" eyed me with a satisfaction that I found almost puzzling. "Right; get off and beat him to it. That's the way, my lad; if he hears, you'll soon be dead!" Was her entirely Jibean comment. "What way will you go?" she asked, presently.

"Way? Oh, by Daru, I suppose."

She seemed to like that, and I realized, with some astonishment, that the map of Papua was no blank to her.

"Well," she said, "I must be going, or the cats will begin to mew. Call and say good-by to me before you go. I'm out of a shop now, so I dare say I'll make back to Little Sydney again. You've no idea what a lamb you look in these pink pajamas, cuddly boy! See you again soon." Her yellow stockings gleamed as she walked down the long veranda, just not dreading, out through the doorway into the smiling sun.

Next day I left the hospital. I called on Jinny, as a matter of course, and was rather surprised to find that she had sailed the previous night. The hotel people did not seem to be sure what boat she had taken or where she had gone. And the truth was, that I had too much to do to puzzle over the matter, for more than a little while. Nor did I, for even an instance, suspect what matters of grave import had lain concealed beneath the light surfaces of our talk.

I had to go to Port Moresby. It turned out, because there was no one at Daru to take charge of my store, the man on whom I counted having suddenly left. I remember I was worried at having to go, but consoled myself by remembering that Sir Richard and his lot could not possibly get away before me, since they had still to do their recruiting, and mine was as good as done. I had only to whistle, and get as many boys as I wanted, but they would have to employ a recruiter, and probably ever come a good many difficulties before they collected boys enough to carry for a large party of strange white men. As to Pia, she was safe in the East.

So, feeling like myself again at last, I sailed once more in the merry sun and wind, heading my cutter for Port Moresby.

Never since then have I believed in presentiments, in warnings, or shadows that fall before events. There was no warning for me. Singing, I went straight to the dark day of my life; the day that has colored, and will color, every following hour, until that time, when hours and days shall mean nothing more to me.

CHAPTER VI

I made Port Moresby on the evening of the third day. My boy was not with me; I had sent him back to Daru direct, and was alone. It was duskish when I sighted Paga Hill, with a nasty squall coming up. I thought with disgust of the trouble of seeing the doctor, and the customs, and getting pratique, all to be gone through before I could have leave to land. Very likely they wouldn't give me pratique that evening; I should have to sleep on board the tiny cutter again, just when I needed a good rest.

The sight of Fisherman Island looming up to starboard decided me. I would run in there, spend the night at the empty quarantine station, and get off early next day for the port. Nobody would know—the island was uninhabited save by the old, crazy Solomon Island caretaker who had been there for over thirty years, and couldn't tell tales even if he would. Perhaps I was breaking quarantine laws—I didn't know, and did not much care. I knew that the two houses were comfortable, if one could get into them, and I reckoned I could manage that.

I found the two little houses standing up stark and pale against the velvet sky; I scrambled into one, and cautiously flashed my torch.

"Well!" was my astonished comment.

Somebody had certainly been preparing the place for a stay. There was a comfortable bed, a couple of planter chairs, a box that I guessed contained linen and oddments of various kinds. I peered into the cook-house. Stores; cooking utensils. "They'll be coming a-bong tomorrow," I thought; and reflected that I was luckier than I deserved.

It was very cool out there, I remember; far cooler than it would have been in little iron rooms beneath the stifling roofs of town. I had a bite of something from the locker of my boat, fuming my bedding on the unknown person's bedstead, and slept untroubledly.

Dawn came with a wild crying of seabirds, and a sudden wind that burst in the door. It waked me, and I slid to earth, looking for my shoes, for now it was full time I got away. I suppose I took a few seconds to slip on and tie my shoes; I never heard a sound—but when I looked up, there was some one in the doorway.

"My first thought—for you could not see the man's face, so blackly was he silhouetted against the pale rose and primrose of the sky—was—"Caught; maybe it's the doctor inspecting." My second sent the blood from heart to fingertips, like leaping flame. I knew that tall, tight, well-set figure, that bearded head. I had seen it four times; once on the island of decay and death; once on the great liner in the Arfura sea, once at the hotel on Thursday, and now here.

Fanshew had seen me, he came across the floor in a couple of strides, and asked me, with profane additions, what on earth I might be doing there? I could hardly answer him at first; never, till that moment, had it occurred to me that, however well I was known to me, I was, so far, quite unknown to him, except by repute. I answered him briefly.

I knew that tall, tight, well-set figure, that bearded head.

"I did not know anyone had the place. I got in late, and camped."

"The h—! you did," answered Fanshew roughly. "Don't you know you have to get leave to land?"

"There was a squall coming."

"Squall be hanged. You'd better clear out of this, and be thankful if I don't report you."

I might have gone—knowing myself to be in the wrong, and not wishing to enlighten Fanshew more than was necessary about myself—I might have gone, and changed the course of four lives that day—had not the nearest trifle intervened. Nothing on earth but a cushion, Sir Richard had been carrying it, wrapped up in paper; while he was talking to me, he laid it down on a table, and the paper, being insufficiently fastened, burst open. I saw the thing, a pretty trifle of white satin and embroidered flowers, crying "Wedding Present!" in every stitch and thread. I saw somebody's

Cured Small Boys of "Finickiness" at Meals

Meal time generally was a trying period in the Brown household. Invariably Bobby didn't like half the things that were served, and Billy expressed a dislike for the other half. Often they agreed on the same item. It resulted threats and persuasion to force them to partake of the food provided, but at length the Browns decided on a new method.

For weeks they compiled a list of the eatables that the boys hated, and served them exclusively for dinner. There was a howl of anguish from the two urchins as they glanced at the table. The parents passed the various dishes instead of Mr. Brown serving them, but the boys, with a pained look, took tiny helpings or passed them up entirely. They pecked at the food and went to bed hungry. For Mrs. Brown had seen to it that there was nothing in thearder to attract them.

This went on for several meals—

Ink's High Importance

Some one has said that the art of writing "consists in putting black marks on white paper." The history of this modest essential, both of writing and printing, has recently been traced back 3,000 years. The Egyptians are credited with using ink as early as 1200 B. C. Later, the Greeks imported both papyrus and ink from their neighbors on the banks of the Nile. It is difficult to imagine how learning could have progressed or the records of the past have been handed down without ink. It has been a faithful soldier in the procession which we call civilization.—Exchange card fastened to it. And immediately I knew what it was; for whom it had been intended. And the world, for one reeling instant, vanished behind veils of red.

I came out of that moment's madness calm and cold, as once or twice, in the war, I had found myself, before the doing of some deed that brought a medal after it.

"You are Sir Richard Fanshew," I stated. He looked at me curiously; I thought he was beginning to guess.

"It may interest you to know," I went on, that I am Philip Amory."

Now he turned scarlet; the curious, honey-colored eyes flashed beneath moons of white above and below, like the eyes of a dangerous horse.

"If you see, he said, restraining himself, 'that I owe you a great deal of kindly interest in what I had supposed were my affairs.'

I let the time pass. I had one thing only in my mind, and like a charging bull, I drove straight for it.

"Where is Miss Laurier?" I asked. I didn't expect him to answer, but he replied at once, coolly.

"About forty-five miles out at sea on today's Morinda."

"She has come back to marry you?"

"Exactly."

"You're fixing up this place for her?"

He did not reply to that; he looked at me, watchfully, as one boxer eyes another in the ring.

"Well, I want to tell you," I said, "that you won't marry her—as long as I'm above ground."

Again he was silent. Again I charged like a bull; but this time, it was as a bull charges, bravely and uselessly, upon the barrier about the ring.

"You were the man who got away from Tota Island. You're an escaped leper."

He just laughed a little; seemed to be waiting for me to have done. I had not anticipated this. He just stood there, not admitting, not denying. If I was strong, he, with his weight of added years and honors, his money, and his celebrity, to back him up, was stronger. I could feel it—that as he meant that I should feel it—almost visibly upholding and supporting him, as we stood there in the windy quarantine house, with the seabirds crying on the sands outside; Fanshew and I—one and one, with a shadowy third—the eternal triangle yet again.

Fanshew was entirely self-possessed. He waited till it seemed clear that I had done, and then spoke.

"Your boat is outside. You can get away as quick as you like."

"If I do," I warned him, "I'll sail straight to Port and stop your d-d marriage."

"Just as you choose," he said. He took the white cushion out of his paper, smoothed it, laid it carefully on the back of one of the planter chairs; set down some small parcels he had in his pockets, and walked out of the house. He did not seem to be paying any attention at all to me.

One used to fight in the great war, sometimes, when one was almost three parts asleep; drunk with the want of rest, long continued, with the nerve-releasing strain. So I fought then, drunk, drugged by Fanshew's enormous personality, his superior mental forces, yet determined, as ever one had been in the trenches, not to give in while life was life, and I was I.

We went down to the beach almost together. There was my cutter, rocking on the tide; there, long and black and slim, was what I knew to be the fastest thing afloat for a thousand miles—a speed launch capable of doing thirty miles an hour, which had lain for some good while in Port, unsalable, because she simply ate fuel.

I thought I knew who had bought her now; who didn't count a tin or two of benzine, when he happened to be in a hurry.

For any BABY

We can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't, you should call a physician.

All through babyhood, Castoria should be a mother's standby, and a wise mother does not change to stronger medicines as the child grows older. Castoria is readily obtained at any drugstore, and the genuine easily identified by the Chas. H. Fletcher, signature that appears on every wrapper.

Needless Pain!

Don't be a martyr to unnecessary pain. Lots of suffering is, indeed, quite needless. Headaches, for example. They come without warning, but one can always be prepared. Bayer Aspirin tablets bring immediate relief. Keep a bottle at the office. Carry the small tin in your pocket. Then you won't have to hunt a drugstore, or wait till you get home.

And don't think Bayer Aspirin is only good for headaches, sore throats, and colds! Read the proven directions for relieving neuralgia, neuritic, rheumatic, and other aches and pains. Remembering, of course, that the quick comfort from these tablets is not a cure; for any continued pain, see a doctor.

Bayer Aspirin is genuine. Protect yourself by looking for that name. Always the same. Always safe. Never hurts the heart.

Lonely Hearts

WILBERT has a heart of gold. Will no one tell him what's the matter—why girls turn pale, and gracious matrons freeze at his approach? Yes, we will. This has gone far enough. Get a new pipe, Wilbert, and break it in gently, thoughtfully, with Sir Walter Raleigh's favorite smoking mixture. When the curling wisps of its fragrance surround you, everything will be changed, Wilbert.

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All acid is dissipated; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. To try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take. Any drug store has the genuine, pre-ferential product.

CAPED FROCKS OF PRINTED CREPE; TAFFETA OR SATIN FOR EARLY WEAR

YOU can tell the moment you glimpse a frock of gay printed crepe made with a cape, that it is distinctly advanced. There's nothing smarter on the boards than these caped frocks.

The spring costume in the picture flaunts a cape of circular cut, the neckline finished with a soft tie of self-print. The quest for these new printed costumes will reveal many plaited cape versions as well, the plaits falling from a fitted round model pictured first in this group, made either of black satin or taffeta, color-matched to the costume, make an admirable "first hat."

In its back-bow treatment this model conveys a very important style message. Even the hats with brims display their bow trimmings across the back. The bow may be very tiny or it may be a huge arrangement of loops and ends extended so as to show from the front.

Speaking of bows, surely this may be aptly called a "bow season." The new frocks and blouses are animated with whole flocks of bows and lady's hat follows suit in this matter of bow trimmings.

The motif on the shapely hat to the right at the top is in line with the season's trend which combines felt with both straw and fabric in the fashioning of the new chapeaux. The mode decrees that hats must frame the face to a flattering degree, and the long, side drape given to this hat carries out these instructions.

In fashion circles we are hearing much in regard to transparent effects. Dresses are of the finest sort, fashioned as they are of thin laces, nets, chiffon and sheerest of woolsens. Even things knitted are running to lace openwork patterns.

What is true in regard to frocks and blouses concerning transparency, pertains also to hats for spring and the ensuing summer. Wherefore the revival of old-time horsehair braid as a medium for chic millinery is to be expected.

Two fetching models of horsehair are herewith illustrated. In the instance of each of these hats the crown is fitted very snugly to the head, which is a point meticulously observed by the milliner this season.

The shape to the left is an extreme type, emphasizing the vogue for silhouettes which frame the face. The brim of this hat surrounds the forehead in a halo of transparency; an effect which is growing in favor, milliners using net, horsehair braid, lace, veils or thread lace to achieve it.

Lace straw is the smartest of the smart new media for hats, according to advance millinery displays. Though made of straw, the lace follows the actual patternings of thread lace.

HOT SANDWICHES

For a quick luncheon or supper there is nothing more satisfying than a tasty hot sandwich.

Chickery Sandwich.—Mix together one cupful each of chopped chicken and onion, one teaspoonful of curry powder, three-fourths of a cupful of thick white sauce and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Mix the ingredients. Toast six slices of bread on one side, spread the un-toasted side with a generous layer of the curry and sprinkle thickly with buttered crumbs. Bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown. Serve at once.

Ham and Egg Sandwich.—Take one cupful of chopped ham and two eggs. Put bacon fat into a frying pan, turn in the mixture and cook slowly until the eggs are set. Cut into squares, lay on toasted bread and spread with currant jelly.

Hot Oyster Sandwich.—Cut a pint of oysters into bits. To a tablespoonful of butter add one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne and the liquor and the oysters. Stir in one-half cupful of cracker crumbs. Fill buttered sandwiches and serve at once. This makes ten sandwiches.

Hot Roast Beef Sandwiches.—Lay slices of hot roast beef dipped into brown gravy between buttered slices of bread from which the crusts have been trimmed. Pour the brown gravy over all and serve very hot with pickles or olives.

Fried Oyster Sandwich.—This is a sandwich de luxe. Dip medium-sized oysters into milk and seasoned crumbs and fry in hot fat. Drain on paper and lay on buttered bread spread lightly with tartar sauce. Cover one slice with oysters and place the other slice on top. Dust with paprika and garnish each sandwich with a stuffed olive. Keep them hot until served.

Bacon and Butter Sandwich.—Cut strips of bread one-half inch wide and cover with butter, softened and mixed with chopped crisp bacon. Toast on both sides in a hot oven.

Toasted Vegetable Sandwich.—Reheat left over vegetable in a cream sauce to which grated cheese has been added. Serve between crisp triangles of toast.

Lunch Sandwich.—Take one-half cupful of chopped boiled ham, one small onion chopped, two eggs slightly beaten, cook in a little fat. Put the mixture between slices and trim. Serve with sliced dip pickles.

DISHES NOT COMMON

Occasionally for luncheon or for a supper dish one likes a change, something which appeals to the taste and intrigues the imagination. The dish may be an ordinary one, but the serving makes it different.

Herring in Paper.—Soak smoked herring over night in cold water after removing the heads and tails. Wipe dry and place in a paper bag, those prepared for cooking or in a greased paper. Place on a hot grid and cook until the paper is well browned. Serve in the paper with:

Maitre d'Hotel Sauce.—Put a tablespoonful of butter into a small saucepan over a moderate fire and add to it chopped parsley and chives. Season with salt and a little lemon juice and while sizzling hot pour over the fish.

Another sauce to be used for this dish or for any fish is:
Sauce d'Anchois.—Take three or four anchovies, mash them and mix with two tablespoonfuls of butter. Prepare a brown sauce with browned flour, butter and milk. Stir in the anchovy butter and just before taking from the fire add the juice of half a lemon or more.

Dutch Sauce for Fish.—Take two tablespoonfuls of butter one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour one cupful of liquid in which the fish was cooked, one cupful of milk, salt and paprika to taste. Cook the sauce, adding two egg yolks, one teaspoonful of lemon juice and beat well with an egg beater just before taking from the heat. Add a tablespoonful of minced parsley and serve.

Mint Ice.—Take three cupfuls of cider, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one-third cupful of lemon juice, one cupful of water. Boil the sugar and water together for ten minutes; cool, add cider, lemon juice, a few drops of vegetable coloring and a few drops of oil of peppermint. Freeze and serve in bright red apple shells.

Marpizan.—Take one-half cupful of heavy sugar sirup, warm it and mix with one-fourth pound of almond paste, add one-half pound of confectioner's sugar and work into a paste. Add a few drops of flavoring and mold into any desired form, using cold and leaves of angelica; small fruits are easily copied.

YOU HAVE A DOCTOR'S WORD FOR THIS LAXATIVE

In 1875, an earnest young man began to practice medicine. As a family doctor, he saw the harm in harsh purgatives for constipation and began to search for something harmless to the sensitive bowels. Out of his experience was born a famous prescription. He wrote it thousands of times. It proved an ideal laxative for old and young. As people saw how marvelously the most sluggish bowels are started and bad breath, headaches, feverishness, nausea, gas, poor appetite, and such disorders, are relieved by the prescription, it became necessary to put it up ready for use. Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. It never varies from Dr. Caldwell's original effective and harmless formula. All druggists have it.

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS
Sportswriter, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

In base running there has been a marked decline during the past 15 years. I do not attribute it to lack of speed on the part of the players. Rather, it can be traced to the fact that a running game, involving the risk of being thrown out, particularly on an attempted steal, is not good baseball under present-day conditions. One run means little or nothing these days. The steal is a one-run play, so naturally, pilfering bases as a part of baseball is rather antiquated. It isn't done, except on stated occasions, by the best of teams.

In the matter of fielding, I would say there was but little difference on the whole; if anything, this phase of the game has improved. Better gloves and improved surfaces on the infields have greatly helped fielding. Most of the big league groundkeepers of today are artists at their trade. On a great many of the infields the ball is reasonably sure to bound accurately at all times.

Baseball runs in cycles. When I came to the majors 25 years ago, pitching was supreme; pitchers' battles were the rule rather than the exception. The pitcher, according to general opinion, dominated the game very strongly; it needed a batting revival. After a time there was an improvement in the batting, only to be followed by the era of trick pitching, which cut heavily into batting averages. Trick pitching was abolished as Babe Ruth, Who Changed Complexion of Baseball Almost Overnight.

Illegal, the ball was made livelier, and more new bats were put in play to counteract the superiority of the pitcher. All these things brought about a decided change for the batter in batting.

Then along came Babe Ruth. Without a doubt he changed the entire complexion of baseball almost overnight. He started a home-run rampage that was the talk of the baseball world. "Did Ruth get any home runs today?" became a more important question than "who won the ball game?" In 1923 Ruth reached his greatest height when he made 60 home runs, more than doubling the record for circuit drives that had been made as far back as 1884. In other words, more than twice he smashed a record that had stood the test of time for 39 years.

Without a doubt Ruth created a new atmosphere in baseball, the "era of swat." No player in the history of baseball compares with Ruth as a gate attraction. He originated the home-run idea on a "big scale." Fandom, while he was smashing the almost unbelievable total of 59 home runs for the 1922 season, followed his record more closely than it did the standing of the teams. Papers throughout the country published a "Ruthermometer" that told of his progress in compiling a home-run record that may stand for all time in the history of baseball.

The players, quick to sense the pulse of the public, adopted Ruthian tactics. They tried to hit every pitch out of the ball park. This system of play, which was ably abetted by the lively ball, made for a new style: pitchers' battles and low-score games went into the discard. With a majority of players on every team having a chance to make a homer because all players, pitchers included, were taking a free swing, no ball game was secure. A three-run lead could swiftly fade away before one mighty wallop.

Far be it from me to decide whether the low-score pitcher battles supplied a better brand of baseball than the present-day methods of swat. For myself, I prefer the low-score games, although they need not necessarily be pitchers' battles. I do know that better and brannier baseball is played where a one or two-run lead means something and there is a real premium on a home run.

To my way of thinking the ease with which home runs are batted these days destroys much of the glory that once went with every circuit smash. However, fandom seems to be perfectly satisfied with the free-and-easy style of play, with swat the predominant feature. Under that system baseball has made its greatest progress in the matter of attendance and gate receipts. And, after all, that is the big thing in professional baseball. There is no doing it for the glory of the old Alma Mater with the professionals; it is merely for the almighty dollar. Therefore, it would seem that the magnates were wise when they adopted the lively ball, also that they owe a debt of gratitude, financially and otherwise, to one Babe Ruth for creating the era of swat in baseball that has become so decidedly popular. Enough of that.

TOM CHURCHILL IS QUITE AMBITIOUS

Oklahoma Athlete Wants Letters in Four Sports.

Enthusiasts who are inclined to enter controversy over the relative merits of the fading sport of college baseball and the sloping "one-man" sport of track may be interested in the decision of Tom Churchill, Oklahoma's famous all-around athlete, to drop track this year to play baseball.

Churchill's desire to earn letters in all of the four major sports has caused him to decide to give up the track and field game and turn to the diamond. He has shown ability as a pitcher in interfraternity baseball and in independent baseball during vacation months.

Besides being a track and field star, Churchill was a unanimous selection for all-Big Six end last fall and received several all-American citations. He played on the East eleven in the East-West football game at San Francisco. He was also unanimous choice as all-conference forward in basketball during his sophomore and junior years. This year he has been handicapped by injuries received in the East-West football game and has not been up to par on the painted court.

Churchill weighs slightly over 200 pounds, but is not slow. Besides being versatile in the major college sports, he has a reputation as an amateur boxer. His home is in Wichita, Kan.

Rope skipping will play an important part in the spring training of the Pittsburgh Pirates, Manager Jewel Ems has let it be known. This stunt, as well as calisthenics, some running and light throwing mark the day's workout. There will be golf, for those who like it, but not until after the day's practice sessions have been concluded.

Sharpshooting at Waco Funny While It Lasted

The home plate at the Waco park is within a few feet of the wire netting on the grandstand. It was a torrid afternoon, a breeze stirring, and the pitcher, Red Pete Lapan, who was catching, went having their troubles. It was like this:

Every time Lapan would stoop over to watch the ball, someone would pop him with a lead shot, and according to the ball-and-strike caller, whoever was doing it was a dead shot.

It was a little more serious with Lapan. He was on the receiving end of doubled-up shots, with rare marksmanship from a rubber. Every time Pete crouched to make a catch he would yell, jump a couple of feet off the ground and pull out a pin.

Finally, after a couple of innings, Erwin told Manager Dell Pratt that if the game was to continue the target practice had to cease, so a copper was placed in the stands behind the plate and the game was played without any more sharpshooting.

The Montreal baseball club of the International league has released First Baseman Sol Mishkin to the Houston (Texas) club.

Joe Harris, who has played with a half dozen major league baseball clubs, has signed with the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International league.

Mr. Ruth's threat to join a circus has alarmed one of our nice old aunts. It would be dangerous, she thinks, to have a man batting baseballs around in a tent.

Carl Zamoeh, manager of the Oakland baseball club, announces the signing of "Bud" Hafey, seventeen-year-old outfielder, and a cousin of Chick Hafey, St. Louis Cardinals' outfielder.

The famous old Carlisle Indian football team of a generation ago never went to their locker room between halves to seek the solace of liniment and massage. They squatted to midfield until play was resumed.

"One Week Of Dreco Enough To Convince Me"

Backaches and Biliousness Soon Ended By New Treatment.

When the stomach fails to do its proper work and gas forms, making you feel bloated, sharp pains across your back, dizzy spells and a swollen float before your eyes, there is only one medicine you need and that is "Dreco." Let Mr. Peter Bernard, 222 Wisconsin St., Janesville, Wis., tell you in his own words just how Dreco helped him.

"For years I suffered terrible agonies, with pains across my back and rheumatism. I was always constipated, and at times a bitter, stale acid would come up into my mouth that would make me deathly sick. A good friend told me about Dreco and advised me to give it a trial. A trial was all this medicine needed, as it did wonders for me. I was soon feeling fine and now all my aches and pains are gone. I want to take this stand to recommend Dreco to all sufferers."
