

PETTY THIEVERY IN VICINITY

The Dutch Mill Oil station, George Poetzel, owner, located at the intersection of Highways 55 and 67, two and one-half miles northeast of Campbellsport, was held up Tuesday evening, at about 9:30 o'clock by two armed bandits and robbed of $35 in cash and a gold watch. George Poetzel and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thorsby were in the place when the bandits entered and ordered the occupants to "Stick 'em up." Each of the bandits was armed with a revolver, and before leaving ordered the occupants of the oil station to lie down on the floor for 20 minutes, "or it'll be just too bad for you."

Some time during last Sunday night the soft drink parlor of Joe Herrigos at St. Michaels was robbed when burglars entered the building by prying one of the doors of the building open. The loot taken amounts to several boxes of candy and two slot machines. The total amount thought to have been in those machines is $40.00. One of the machines was found lying in the river one mile east of here, but the money had been taken out of it. No clue has been found as to who the burglars are.

HARTFORD BOYS BUILD AIR-PLANE

After two years' work, plans of two of Hartford's young men, Raymond Hegy and Norman Zunker, came to a realization when the airplane which they built, took to the air on Sunday, Sept. 20, and handled as easily as a duck swims. The two years of work have not been of steady construction upon the plane, but spare moments were used. At times the work did not go on for three or four months. The ship is a single passenger high-wing monoplane, patterned after the Heath Paraisol, with modifications of the original plans, the changes being the ideas of Hegy and Zunker. On its trial flight the plane was powered with a four-cylinder air-cooled motor-cycle engine built for the plane by Zunker. On this flight it was found that it only turned up 2100 r.p.m., when it should have been 3000. In spite of this fact, the plane flew very well and handled very easily. On Tuesday following the first flight the two young men went to Chicago to the factory of the Heath Co. and purchased a Heath Henderson motor, which has a horsepower rating of 27 at 2000 r.p.m.—Hartford Times.

The rifle was a .22 caliber repeater and Klajenski was examining it when it went off, entering Nawrocki's chest and killing him almost instantly. ROADSIDE MARKETS ESTABLISHED IN CO.

A roadside market was opened October 5th, at Gamm's corners by the Washington County Fruit Growers association offering for sale home grown fruit. The county bee-keepers organization is co-operating and honey was also displayed to purchasers. The market which will be open week-ends during the fall is the first one which has been sponsored by a Washington County Farm organization.

The opening was very successful and demonstrated the possibilities of roadside selling of farm products. The objectives as far as the fruit growers organization are concerned are to move choice home grown fruit at fair prices and to recommend and sell the various varieties for purposes to which they are suited. It is a fact that some excellent varieties of apples grown in this section are not appreciated because they are used largely out of season and for the wrong purpose.

The organization is not sponsoring the market because of surplus fruit in fact the crop this year is extremely short. The market was opened as a worthwhile project with a view of expansion in coming seasons to keep in pace with a rapidly increasing interest in the production of fruit in Washington county.

BLANKET CAMPAIGN EXTENDED

Bank of Kewaskum Meets Many Old and New Acquaintances

It surely was a pleasure for the officers of the Bank of Kewaskum to meet so many of their old friends as well as many new faces during the past week. People from Wauwatosa, Adel, Freedom, Random Lake, and a dozen more places within a radius of twenty-five miles were calling at the bank for their beautiful Esmund Blanket or the Kewaskum No-Water Cooker which the bank is giving away absolutely free. The only requirement about the plan to get one of these gifts is to open an incentive savings account with a $5.00 deposit.

After that you may deposit any amount of money more to earn a few dollars in interest, after which time the $5.00 deposit is also credited to your bank account. The plan is very simple and certainly teaches you to save the few dollars that are very often spent foolishly.

Many people through this simple plan are opening savings accounts for their young folks to assure them a better education when the proper time comes. Others are starting savings account to pay or at least help pay their mortgage when it becomes due.

By calling at the bank, the plan is fully explained to you and it only helps to put you on the road to prosperity. And remember the slogan, "A Gift for your Thrift."

By ETTA WEBB

(By D. J. Walsh.)

MYRA bore a tray heavy with all the seasonal delicacies the restaurant afforded on that day's luncheon menu— asparagus tips, new potatoes, cream, chicken, strawberries. The outlay looked tempting even to a girl who handled food all day. The elderly couple who were to receive this fare sat opposite each other at a small table against the mirrored wall. In the light of the pink-shaded candles they glared at each other. They said coldly-stinging things to each other in low voices. Yet they looked so nice, dignified and prosperous. Her violet hat was expensive and she was carefully made up. He had the kind of mouth Bob had. At the thought Myra sighed.

They did not notice Myra as she placed the delicate food before them. They did not even glance at the food. They just went on quarreling in that polite, maddening way that made Myra long to box their ears.

"Your grievance against Raymond isn't a grievance, it is a grudge," the woman said. "You always did make a difference between him and Caroline."

"Caroline's got some common sense."

"Takes after you, I suppose."

"She does. Put Caroline on a desert island and she would manage to feed and clothe herself, or else she would build a raft and float off. But Raymond would starve without making a single effort. When I was Raymond's age I was supporting the whole family. All Raymond knows about money is spending it."

"And when I was Raymond's age I made the mistake of my life. You talk as if I were to blame for our son's extravagance!"

The chicken was getting cold. Myra withdrew. She was sick at heart. Squabbling—she hated it. These married couples mad; her tired. Yesterday the squabbling pair had been young. The girl had on the spiffiest ensemble suit. Seemed as if they had everything to be pleasant about. But they squabbled because the fellow had, or had not, paid attention to somebody else.

Marriage was fast losing its appeal for Myra. Familiarity with other people's marriages as well as other people's food was fast cloying her sense of the fitness of either. Myra had no home memories to come to her aid. Her father had died when she was six. Since then she and her mother had worked to the limit trying to get the twins up to where they could do for themselves. Pete was now earning a good bit after school hours and Marjory could do most of the work at home. Mom said if Bob and Myra hung back. That couple yesterday, and now this one today, one at the beginning of the journey, and the other nearing the end. It didn't take much to start a row, kids or a bit of jealousy, anything. She and Bob might have to live together for thirty years—thirty years was a long time in which to squabble.

"I'm scared to death of the whole business," Myra sighed. "I don't say I'd turn into a nagger, I don't say Bob would ever give me one of those cold, deadly looks. But we might get to hate each other. You can't tell. I guess I will keep right on my job. You can't quarrel with a good paying job."

The elderly couple gave Myra a generous tip for the food they had not enjoyed.

That night Myra went home very tired. She went to bed early. She hoped she would wake up next morning to rain and leaden skies. But when she awoke the sun was shining warm and bright. On bright, warm Sundays Bob always came with the car and took her and Mom and the twins far out into the country. It was a thing to look forward to all the week. But today she was not going. Since she was not going to marry Bob the Sunday trips were all off.

She tried to get Pete to go over and tell Bob not to come, but Pete refused to be bluffed with the story of Myra having a headache. Pete knew that Myra was not subject to headaches.

An hour later Bob came. He had his car washed and it was all shiny blue. Bob looked fine and so happy that Myra quailed. Well, she would go just this once.

They drove to a favorite spot, where there was a meadow, and creek, and clump of graceful, swaying willows. Immediately the twins pulled off shoes and stockings and went wading. Mother withdrew with a blanket for a nap. Myra and Bob were left to one of their long, cozy chats. But, contrary to custom, she produced a magazine. "Mind if I read, Bob?"

"Go ahead, I'll smoke."

Myra opened the magazine. The story was all about a couple that quarreled over a dog. Disgusting! She peeped over the edge of the magazine at Bob. He was looking straight at her. His blue eyes were deep and peaceful. A streak of sunshine lay on his crisp brown hair.

"You are an awfully sweet-looking girl, Myra," he said.

Myra blushed. She held the magazine up before her face, her hands trembled and the pages of the magazine shook. She hated to say "No" to Bob. But her mind was made up once and for all not to get married.

"Is there room for us here, too?" a pleasant voice inquired.

Myra jumped. Standing close behind her was a tiny old woman. She had a big basket covered with a white cloth on her arm. Behind the smiling old lady was a round, rosy, jolly-looking old man with gray-colored hair, an auto robe and two zany-colored pillows. The couple had just stepped from a car that was so old-fashioned that it looked a bit absurd.

"Of course there is room. Help yourself," Bob sprang up, but he was dismayed by the intrusion. Myra, on the contrary, was relieved and insisted upon the old people's sharing the shade with them.

"In Sally Betts," the old lady prattled on as Myra and Bob helped the old gentleman spread the blanket and arrange the pillows for the old lady's comfort. "And this is Hiram, my husband. Take a squirt at the sky, H, and if it's getting time to eat we'll open the baskets."

"It's time to eat all right," said Hiram. "Everything's ready, good company, cool shade and if these young folks have got as good appetites as we have I say eat."

Myra motioned to Bob. They were quietly withdrawing when the old lady stopped them.

"Oh, don't go," she pleaded. "Stay and have a bite with us. We'd enjoy your company, so we would."

"But there are five of us," protested Myra.

"What if there is? I've got a plenty for everybody. We always come prepared to ask company, and we usually find some one."

"Better stay, young folks. Sally will be disappointed if you don't. That was one reason why we came to this spot; we saw you before we stopped."

Myra called her mother and the twins and the seven gathered round the picnic baskets, which were augmented by the boxes of lunch Myra's mother had brought. Everything went wild over the fluffy little biscuits Sally Betts served. Everything that came out of the baskets was delicious.

"Sally's a good cook, if I do say it," Hiram Betts said proudly. "But she couldn't boil water without burning it when we were quarrelled."

"How long have you been married?" Bob asked.

"Fifty-one years. He was twenty-one and I was eighteen." Aunt Sally laughed softly. "We've had our ups and downs, H and I have, but we've had each other."

"That's all that's counted," agreed Hiram solemnly.

"Fifty-one years! A good long time to be happy together," Bob said thoughtfully.

"I bet you've squabbled like all the rest of them," Myra said.

Aunt Sally looked at the dark, vivid young girl thoughtfully.

"Folks that love right don't squabble. Live right, love right, is the recipe for a happy marriage."

"There you are!" Bob reached over and laid his hand on Myra's.

The afternoon shadows were lengthening when Bob and Myra bundled mother and the twins into Bob's car. Myra sat on the front seat with Bob.

"Fifty-one years from now you and I are coming back to this very spot to have a picnic just like those old dears did," Bob declared.

Myra reached out and patted Bob's hand which was guiding the car. The future, and marriage no longer held any dark doubts for her.

World Pays Big Annual Toll to Insect Pests

Persons who are inclined to glance askance at the hundreds of thousands of dollars spent in insect control work by experts of the Department of Agriculture, says the Washington Star, would do well to reflect on the annual loss in plant injury, which totals about $1,500,000,000. This enormous loss is not unique to the United States, however, for it is estimated that in Great Britain, for instance, fully 10 per cent of all agricultural crops fall victim to various plant enemies each year.

The loss in the wheat crop due to rust, smut, root-rot and other diseases is set at about 87,000,000 bushels annually, while the corn crop pests account for 281,000,000 bushels, and pests claim about 85,000,000 bushels of white potatoes each year. The danger of the spread of various pests is illustrated by the case of India and Ceylon which once thrived on coffee raising, but the coffee fields were completely wiped out by rust, forcing the substitution of tea.

Here's Real Honesty

Somewhere off Cox ledge, which is 14 miles southeast of Block Island, there lurks an honest man, Jerry Littlefield, master of the schooner Evan N. is authority for the statement. When he hauled up one of his lobster nets with just three lobsters in it, he found in the pot a tea can that had been wrapped and wrapped in adhesive tape to stand the pressure of 19 fathoms down. When the can was opened Captain Littlefield found five $1 bills in it to pay for the lobsters some one had taken.—Boston Globe.

Historic Grecian Town

Kastoria, old Macedonian city, is the seat of an Orthodox archbishop. It is usually identified with the ancient Cotacrum, captured by the Romans under Sulpicius, during the first Macedonian campaign, about 200 B. C., and better known for the defense maintained by Bryennius against Alexis I in 1084. A Byzantine wall with round towers runs across the peninsula.

Largest Arch Bridge

The largest arch bridge in the world is across the harbor of Sydney, Australia. The main arch has a span of 1,350 feet. The bridge cost $3,000,000, and has a maximum capacity of 168 trains, 6,000 vehicles and 40,000 pedestrians an hour.

Ancients Put Faith in Certain Lucky Numbers

The number 6 enjoyed great prestige with the ancients because it was discovered that the sum of its divisors, 1, 2 and 3, is equal to six. The followers of Pythagoras venerated the number 6 on account, as was said, "of the integrity of its parts and the agreement existing in it," calling it marriage and health and beauty.

According to the early Christians, God created the earth in six days rather than in one, because of the perfection of the number 6. The entire human race sprang from the eight souls in Noah's ark, and as eight is not so perfect as six, we have been living under a disadvantage ever since.

A curious light is thrown by ancient commentators on the account in Genesis of Jacob's gifts to Esau, which included 200 ewes and 20 rams. According to them this number 220 is a hidden secret, being one of a pair of numbers of which the divisors of either add up to the other. Thus the divisors of 220 are 1, 2, 4, 5, 10, 11, 20, 22, 44, 55 and 110, which add up to 284. The divisors of 284, on the other hand, are 1, 2, 4, 71 and 142, which add up to 220.

Such a pair of numbers was called "amicable" and was much employed by ancient peoples in sorcery, particularly in connection with love charms. If one could manage it so that the lady of his choice swallowed one of these numbers, then by swallowing the other himself a long and tedious courtship became unnecessary.

Jacob, anxious to appease the wrath of Esau for certain rather questionable transactions, resorted to this device. It is interesting that his thrifty soul prompted him to use the smaller of the two numbers.—University of California Chronicle.

For TEETHING troubles

FUSSY, fretful . . . of course babies are uncomfortable at teething time! And mothers are worried because of the little upsets which come so suddenly then. But there's one sure way to comfort a restless, teething child, Castoria — made especially for babies and children! It's perfectly harmless, as the formula on the wrapper tells you. It's mild in taste and action. Yet it rights little upsets with a never-failing effectiveness.

calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. When the children don't eat well, don't sleep well, or have any little upsets, more liberal doses of this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

Seeing Big League Baseball

By BILLY EVANS
Sports writer, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

...sitting in the grandstand at... Ohio, back in 1903, short... I had become sports editor... score book... But the game didn't start... passed, a consultation was... of the home plate and heads were... in my direction, although I... of their zig-zag... And then a delegation from... Mary Hogan, manager... and Howard Kisher... and Captain McCloskey, of... approached me with a... that nearly blew me out... umpire hadn't shown... word he was sick and... to officiate. There... around to take his place... had decided on me as a... said I. "No pop... mine. Not on your life. I... a thing about umpiring... care to learn. No thanks... against it, Bill." I was adamant... I was an umpire... as a favor. We'll give you... the game is off and... have to beat it." I merely put it down as his way of saying something nice to a fellow who was having a tough time of it, and I let it go at that. It seemed ridiculous that any one could see in me, a rank busher, a potential big league umpire. But, at the close of the 1905 season came an offer from President B. B. Johnson of the American league, and I accepted.

game was not to be sneered at. When the baseball schedule was played through I went back to my desk on the Indicator, satisfied that I was through with umpiring forever. But no, I was offered a contract for the following season, and as there was a lot more money in it than in my newspaper job at $20 a week, I accepted. How the umpires came and went in that organization! There were about thirty of us that first season. Some of them lasted a week, others less than that. At times I got so disgusted with it all that I was on the verge of quitting myself. In fact, if it hadn't been for that memorable game in Niles I feel sure that my umpiring career would have ended with the close of the 1905 season, for I was to have an offer during the fall of more money than I had ever seen before in the newspaper game. After being virtually run out of Niles my intention to quit was all the stronger. I had no idea that anything would come of Jimmy McAleer's words. "You'll get to the big leagues yet," I merely put it down as his way of saying something nice to a fellow who was having a tough time of it, and I let it go at that. It seemed ridiculous that any one could see in me, a rank busher, a potential big league umpire. But, at the close of the 1905 season came an offer from President B. B. Johnson of the American league, and I accepted.

LIKEN KAMM TO OL' MAN RIVER

WILLIAM EDWARD KAMM, the American league's premier third baseman, is a lot like Ol' Man River in that he just keeps rollin' along, year after year.

Bill may be discouraged because he's never known the thrill of playing on a first division ball club since he joined the White Sox in the spring of 1923—but it's never shown in his work. He has led the league's regular third basemen in fielding every year he has been in the majors except the first, and then he was second to Joe Dugan and accepted 70 chances more than Joe.

Since joining the Sox, by whom he was purchased from the San Francisco club for $100,000, you remember, Bill never has played in fewer than 143 games and last year led the league in number of games played by a third baseman with 155 of them counted to his credit.

It may be as well to break it right here with the remark that this piece is in no way designed to smoke up Mr. Kamm for the aggressiveness of the White Sox, a connection in which his name frequently has been mentioned. It is our opinion that Bill would be a clump to take on any such burden under the present system of running things on Chicago's South side. Bill is twenty-nine and far too good a ball player to have his career dimmed by the harassing duties and buck passing that a Comiskey management involves.

Bill Kamm.

If the job were a plum, Bill would deserve it, for his loyalty and continued earnest endeavor is a trait all too rare among White Sox players. Sulkers don't lead the league in anything desirable at any time, and Kamm's record is the best testimonial of his spirit.

If Kamm ever grumbles, he keeps it well to himself. And goodness knows he had plenty of opportunity to become a moaner, for he and Bib Falk were inseparable pals for years. Bib moaned himself into mediocrity and Kamm still is a star, even if the unique organization of professional baseball dooms him to serve out his career on Comiskey's White Sox.

Athlete George Simpson Was Almost Invalid When Boy

George Sidney Simpson, Ohio State's dark-haired flash on the cinder path, was almost an invalid and under a nurse's care for several years when a youngster. Today he's the greatest track star his school has shown. He can thank Papa Simpson for his fleet feet. He realized the worth of exercise in the fresh air for his sick boy and bought George every kind of athletic apparatus he could find—baseball equipment, tennis rackets, golf clubs, basketballs—and made him use them.

out playing basketball in the evenings with his chums," recalls his father, G. M. Simpson, a wholesale milliner of Columbus. "But now he always is careful to get plenty of rest before a big race and for two or three nights before he is to run he goes to bed at 9:30," he chuckled, remembering, perhaps, his youthful reluctance to desert play for slumber.

George Simpson.

George won back his health and with that victory came an unflagging interest in athletics. "When you'd think he'd be all tired out, playing all day, George would be

Personally we wouldn't think of taking a midget motor car along on a hunting expedition, for fear someone would shoot it for the pet.

Overheard in a service station: "You say there's a noise in the motor, eh?" "Yes. Sometimes it's like the busy signal on a dial telephone."

Magnet Useful to Test Rod Bearings and Pins

If your motor is fitted with iron pistons, it is possible to test for loose wrist pin or connecting rod bearings by the use of an electromagnet such as is illustrated. Of course, it will not work on aluminum alloy pistons. Secure a catchpan, mixed with magnesium or chloride, mixed with magnesium or chloride, and is compressed into small tablets or "pills." At one stage in the manufacture of the tubes the pill is flashed, thus eliminating the last trace of air and securing the desired vacuum.

Many Safety Problems For Driving in Winter

Spring bumpers not only save radiators, fenders and gas tanks from damage, but frequently prevent cuts, bruises and broken arms.

8. Protect your engine. As a winter precaution there always should be some means for controlling the intake of cold air through your radiator.

9. Take care of your batteries. Extremely cold weather demands special attention to batteries, because of excessive use in starting and greater use of lights. Many motor accidents have been caused through the failure of batteries in emergency.

10. Drive carefully—always.

Women Find Favor as Best Drivers of Automobiles

Pointing out that the mooted question as to whether women or men are the best drivers will probably never be settled to the satisfaction of all concerned, the Chicago Motor Club submits, for what they may be worth, some recent surveys which seem to favor the women.

The surveys, according to the motor club, were made by several authorities, and were not intended, primarily, to determine the driving merits of the two sexes.

"Several of the surveys, which took into consideration a number of states and cities and which was made on a nationwide basis, indicated that women compromise 24 1/3 per cent of all drivers in the United States," the club declared in a statement.

"Another survey, also made on a city and state basis, showed that out of 569,960 drivers involved in accidents, 33,830 of them, or 6 per cent, were women.

"Thus, these surveys roughly indicate that although one out of every four drivers is a woman, they become involved in only one accident in every seventeen."

Caesium Used Solely in Tubes

Practically the only use for caesium at present is in the manufacture of radio tubes, according to a statement by the bureau of mines. It is introduced into the tubes in the form of chloride, mixed with magnesium or calcium, and is compressed into small tablets or "pills." At one stage in the manufacture of the tubes the pill is flashed, thus eliminating the last trace of air and securing the desired vacuum.

Sergeant Was Shrewd, but Unlucky Day Came

While in training in France, Sergeant Matthews usually carried a huge pack while on the morning hikes. The wonder was that he bore up so nicely under the heavy burden. When all the rest were jaded at the end of the hike the sergeant appeared fresh and in a jovial mood. One morning when hiking with packs we were marched to a large field where to our amazement a regimental inspection of equipment was to take place. We proceeded to lay out equipment in an orderly fashion. Our captain walked hurriedly by in a critical mood. He stopped abruptly in front of Sergeant Matthews' pack. "Open up your pack" commanded the captain. Whereupon, the sergeant unrolled the pack with all eyes focused in his direction, revealing a large stove pipe.—L. A. Kirkpatrick, Indianapolis, Ind., in American Legion Monthly.

AREA TEST HAS GOOD RESULTS

In the six counties where area tests have recently been completed for bovine tuberculosis, the total number of reactors has dropped to less than a quarter of those found in the tests made three years ago, according to Dr. W. Wisnicky, of the division of livestock sanitation of the department of agriculture and markets. Richland county had only 48 reactors in 1930, Milwaukee county had 75, Washington had 120, while Polk showed 118, Wood county had 36 and Portage only 27. Out of the total of 272,805 cattle tested in the six counties this past season there were only 425 reactors to the tuberculin test and only 200 infected herds as compared to a total of 1,980 reactors in 1927 in 894 infected herds. The total cattle tested in 1927 were 253,752. State and federal testing for tuberculosis is now in progress in St. Croix county and has just been started in Columbia, Waushara and Marquette counties. The testers are working somewhat ahead of schedule in the last three counties in order to distribute the work of the year more efficiently according to Dr. Wisnicky. Only 700,000 cattle are on the lists to be tested this year, while the 1931 schedule calls for 1,300,000.

Mr. Kuhaupt has easily proven one of the county's most popular officials, and it is generally regretted that illness makes it impossible for him to give his office his personal attention.—West Bend Pilot.

The Joerns Brothers Furniture Co., another local furniture firm, is also having a good year and some of its departments have been working overtime.

Appleton—Boys and girls enrolled in Outagamie county rural schools will again this year receive a complete physical examination without expense. The work is done by physicians of the Outagamie County Medical society, under direction of the county health committee. Last year about 5,000 rural school students received examinations under this system. The cost of the examinations, $2,000, is defrayed by a special appropriation made by the county board.

Madison—The drinking water in approximately 30 per cent of Wisconsin's farm and rural wells is unsafe, Frank R. King, director of the bureau of plumbing and domestic sanitary engineering, state board of health, reports. Causes of pollution in these wells have been listed by Mr. King as including defective well tops; seepage from privies, cesspools, barnyards and other sources of stagnation; defective pump bases and seepage from improperly located sewage disposal units.

Madison—Industrial employment and payrolls continued their downward trend from July 15 to Aug. 15, the state industrial commission has announced. During this period employment dropped 4.3 per cent while total payrolls declined 6 per cent. The drop was largely due to declining seasonal operations of canning factories. Only four out of thirty of the principal cities of the state increased factory employment and payroll during the period from July 15 to Aug. 15. Average per capita weekly earnings of factory workers stood at $22.21 in August, 1930, compared with $26.50 in August, 1929.

PROSPERITY SURE TO RETURN, SAYS HOOVER

Urges Bankers to Aid; Keep Living Standard High.

Cleveland, Ohio.—A prophecy that the United States will emerge from the current world-wide depression without waiting for other nations and a challenge to American financiers and business men to devise means to prevent future depressions were delivered by President Hoover before the annual convention of the American Bankers' association.

Speaking to an audience of 12,000 bankers and guests in the city auditorium, where Calvin Coolidge received his nomination for the Presidency in 1924, President Hoover predicted a return of the high prosperity that marked the administration of his predecessor. It was the first time that a President had addressed the bankers' convention while in office. Therefore the occasion was regarded as having both political and economic significance, offering a rebuke to critics of the present administration and outlining a joint policy for business men and the government to bring about recovery in trade and industry.

In his speech the President deplored the pessimism that has developed in the wake of the economic depression. Almost at the close he digressed from his prepared speech to make reply to remarks made by John W. Barton, vice president of the Metropolitan National bank, Minneapolis, a few days ago before the national bank division of the association, to the effect that the American standard of living is too high.

"It appears from the press that some one suggested in your discussions that our American standards of living should be lowered," he said. "To that I emphatically disagree. I do not believe it represents the views of this association. Not only do I not accept the theory, but on the contrary the whole purpose, which is distinctive of our country, is to increase the standard of living by the adoption and the constantly widening diffusion of inventions and discovery among the whole of our people."

"I always have been, and I remain, an unquenchable believer in the resilient, dynamic power of American enterprise," President Hoover asserted, as a climax to his address. "This is no time—an audience of American leaders of business is no place—to talk of any surrender."

He deplored the existing "psychology of fear" that has been spread over the country. Although the income of a large part of the American people has not been reduced by depression, he said, still unnecessary fears and pessimism have led them to staken consumption of goods and discourage enterprise. As an antidote to this epidemic he urged American bankers to preach the gospel of cheerfulness and confidence.

"We must depend on our own strong arm," the President warned, adding that other nations are weaker and cannot make as speedy recovery. President Hoover summed up the causes of the present depression, but asserted they have merely checked economic progress without impairing the country's resources. And the maladjustments can be overcome, he asserted. He blamed excessive speculation in the United States and overproduction and collapse of prices of foreign countries, for depression and political unrest. But prices, he added, are readjusting themselves even now and must eventually recover, as most commodities now are underpriced.

Bankers must direct the flow of credit wisely, the President warned, and check expansion for purpose of inflation and speculation. They must direct credit to commerce, he said. Furthermore, they must study measures in the business world or in co-operation with the government to develop policies to remedy the present depression and prevent future ones. President Hoover asserted that the government has sought to revive business and that business men have given their co-operation. Wages generally have been maintained, he asserted, employment has been distributed and large construction undertaken.

Canadian Rail Lines to Aid of the Unemployed

Ottawa.—A program of construction and improvement entailing the expenditure of $21,000,000 and the employment of 10,500 men by the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railroads was announced by C. D. Robertson, minister of labor. He said this program would be undertaken at once.

Orders for 100-pound steel rails are to be placed, while the Canadian National will increase its purchases of coal by 200,000 tons. It was also announced that of the $20,000,000 fund established by the government for unemployment aid, $1,000,000 will be used to enlarge the grade separation fund and $4,000,000 will be used as "direct relief" for those unable to find employment. About $12,000,000 will be available for public works construction.

DECREASE SHOWN IN TREASURY'S SURPLUS

$52,292,255 at Close of Quarter; $3,000,000 Under.

Washington.—Figures given out by the treasury showed that the department closed the first quarter of the current fiscal year with a surplus of $52,292,255.35. This compares with a surplus of $55,002,517.19 at the end of the first quarter of the last fiscal year.

While the surplus is only about $3,000,000 below what it was last year at the end of the first quarter, the treasury receipts for this quarter were much below those of the first quarter last fiscal year, being $388,940,213.78 as compared with $1,014,710,915.38. The expenditures for three months of this year totaled $816,647,958.43 as compared with $850,618,398.19 in the first quarter of last fiscal year.

A material difference in the situation as to sinking fund expenditures on account of the sinking fund were $65,000,000. For the first quarter of last year they were nearly $27,000,000. Had the expenditures on account of the sinking fund this quarter been as high as those of the first quarter of last year, the treasury would now show a deficit.

Ordinary expenditures the first quarter were $751,586,958.43 or about $30,000,000 higher than for the first quarter of last year. While customs receipts in the first quarter of this year are about $95,000,000 below those of the corresponding period last year, they are now showing a tendency to climb upward.

Income tax receipts for the quarter were $354,886,119.56 or about $55,000,000 below those of the comparable period last year, but in view of the 1 per cent income tax reduction now operative this is considered a strong showing.

SURPLUS BARTERING SCHEME CONSIDERED

Legge Blames Wheat Slump on Disorderly Selling.

Washington.—According to reports here serious consideration is being given by governmental authorities for the putting into effect of a plan whereby commodity surpluses at present in different countries may be traded on an international basis.

As an example of how the plan would work out: Great Britain has a surplus of rubber and the United States a shortage of that commodity. The United States has a surplus of cotton and Great Britain a shortage. The one might be traded for the other, according to the report.

The idea is said to have come from abroad. The details, it was said, have not yet been worked out. It was also learned that some American firms, particularly manufacturers of agricultural implements, have in the last few days been accepting wheat from farmers in payment for implements instead of cash. The International Harvester company some years ago accepted corn from farmers in place of cash.

Washington.—According to information that has come to the federal farm board, implement manufacturers are considering a plan for accepting wheat held by farmers in lieu of money for purchases of farm machinery. The board has looked into the allegation that farm implement makers in the United States are accepting Russian wheat in payment for farm equipment and has found no evidence to substantiate it.

The "disorderly marketing of wheat" by Russia, according to Alexander H. Legge, farm board chairman, is the principal cause of the depression of European prices, which in turn affects the markets of this country. Were the Russian wheat sent out at regular intervals and in a businesslike way, the price of wheat would not be affected and the Russians would receive more for their product.

More than 10,000,000 bushels of wheat have been shipped, Legge estimated, mostly from south Russia, where the production has been the largest. Steamers are being chartered to move more wheat, Legge said. According to reports, much of the wheat was started from Black Sea ports without a known purchaser at its destination and when the unloading point was reached the wheat was sold for whatever was offered. The result has been, it was pointed out, a demoralized world wheat market.

Legge said he was not expecting any of the Russian wheat to be sent to the United States for delivery this year. He would not discuss the effect of the "short" selling by Soviet agents on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Sales of American goods to Soviet Russia in the first half of 1930 increased from $30,575,000 in the corresponding period of 1929 to $73,232,000, a gain of 137 per cent, the foreign commerce department of the United States reported.

Chicago.—The congressional committee on Communistic activities completed a hearing a few days ago on Soviet Russia's recent grain operations on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Testimony by officials of the Chicago Board of Trade and brokers classed the Russian short selling of wheat as legitimate hedging, handled in the regular line of business by the brokers, who acted for the All-Russian Textile syndicate.

Joseph P. Griffin, three president of the board of trade and partner of J. S. Bache & Company, which sold 2,300,000 bushels of wheat for the Russians, said the sales were in part at a fixed price, indicating there was no attempt to depress the market. He said low prices for wheat were due to a generally depressed condition in all commodities.

Gold Strike in Nevada

Tonopah, Nev.—Indications are that Nevada's newest gold strike at Manhattan is the richest the West has known for many years.

Taken from a four-foot bottom drift of a mine, a sample of ore assayed $8,920 a ton. Ore at the floor drift near the top of the same mine assayed between $75 and $100 a ton.

As all land in the vicinity of Manhattan had been claimed previous to the discovery, there has been no gold rush.

"You came because you could not stay away—when I called you, Linda, and because we are never going to be parted again. Linda, we love each other! Could anything be as wonderful as that? Let me tell you something, dear, I was beginning to think that life had played me an ugly trick. I was beginning to doubt and question what was real and true. I was ready to throw it all away because of a pride that would not let me take from another man. And then I was made ashamed when they gave me you. When I found that out I learned how to be grateful and humble. I knew that one gift was but the preparation for another. I knew that I had to win if I had you—"

She laid her fan against her lips to conceal that she had bitten them deeply. Now she had to be cruel, so cruel that she dared not plan words but must let them come as they would, impelled by the bitterness of her soul. And she must never know that this hatred was for herself and not for him.

"Are you trying to tell me that you love me?" she cried, and burst out laughing.

He drew back, hard hit. "You have always known that," he said quietly. A silence fell upon their warfare, for it was that. Men and women are so close to hatred when they love! She was trying to maim and kill his love with all the weapons at her command. It was a thing that must die here and now, if all that was good in her died with it.

"Have I? I wonder," she appeared to search her mind for proofs. "But how could I believe you meant it? Young men—like you—are always falling in love with women like me." As if by accident she lifted the string of pearls and held it before her like a little swaying bridge of beauty to her white breast. The movement was symbolic; she needed to say nothing more, but she could not stop there.

"Let me get all this right. First, I have come to Washington because of you—because I love you, to be exact. And then, as if that were not enough, I have been given to you by an over-generous deity as special inducement to success! Good heavens, could youth go further than that." She laughed at him again, letting her cool unlaughing eyes mock him for a moment. "Go on. You had reached the point where the world was at your finger tips! Oh, this is fun. Better than dancing! That hot room. Or do all young men feel like that when they gain a good appointment?"

But she had gone too far. He suddenly freed her hands and leaned back studying her white face from which the delicate rouge stood starkly out revealing its falsity. She shivered beneath that scrutiny but managed in some way to preserve her shield of scornful calm.

"I cannot believe you," he said. "You could not have changed in a day to this."

She made a gesture of weariness. "What? That I am not an idealist? Some of her pain found its way to her tired voice. "After all, what do you know of me? What right have you to choose for me?"

"The right of love," he said stubbornly, and then he told her what she had known all along she would hear. All about his swift love for her and the wonder she was to him and the dreams he had had for them both. All the foolery that men believe when they speak it to the one woman and forget so easily. But as Brian told it, it was very true and real and Linda had to shut her eyes tightly to hide her tears and her lips more tightly still to keep from saying that she believed it all and would take her chance like any other woman. That was what she had meant to say a few hours ago—but not now!

"Well, then—" she cried desperately, for she was nearly to the end, "what must I say—that you amused me for a little while and that it is all over? I cannot laugh at you any longer. It is all too absurd. Because I have been kind to you. Try to see how ridiculous it is. Could you give me anything like this?" She lifted the pearls and held them before him. For so long they had been a part of her play that the gesture came naturally. The pearls were a defense. She could hide behind them as she had before.

He stopped her with a look. He was stupefied by the situation which was developing into tragedy for him. It seemed impossible that she could be saying these things that were burying them apart. The whole scene began to be nightmarish to him. The pale woman who was insulting him so determinedly could not be the Linda who yesterday had blushed and smiled under his eyes. There must be something that would explain this madness and make it clear.

"Linda," he said softly, "won't you tell me what it means?" He thought her lips quivered; he thought she was about to speak and then the swiftest change of all came over her. She was looking beyond him and her eyes dilated and then turned to ice as if all the tenderness had gone out of her forever.

"Is there to be an end to this? I would like to go back. I would like to dance." Nothing could be colder than her voice.

And now he saw that she meant it. This incredible scene was based upon something deeper than pique. He began to be afraid.

"You mean that I've been wrong to hope—to believe that you love me?"

"More than that." She stood up making ready to go. It was nearly over now. Soon she would be free. "If you have believed that, you have been more presumptuous than I thought. You had no right to think of me at all. You have made an absurd error—your vanity is responsible for that, no doubt. But—I am tired now. I must go back—go back—"

Behind him a face suddenly appeared in the banked greenery at the end of the room. That face, expressionless and unmoved, seemed to be sending her a message from lips muted as one of the bronzes that brooded from their half concealed pedestals. She tried to keep the dread from her own face but it escaped in a little cry smothered at her lips. There was a sharp rattling sound. The rope of pearls had broken in her twisting fingers and the released stones showered in a milky rain upon the floor, rolling everywhere.

Brian Anstey bent instinctively to collect them and felt a jarring scurrah beneath his foot. He looked and saw a fine powder mingled with larger particles where two of the pearls had fallen. Silently he gathered the debris into his hand, shifting it about. It was very plain. The pearls were imitation—not too good a one at that—not worth stooping to recover. He looked at her then and saw her watching him with a strange expression, holding the broken strand against her breast.

"I'm sorry—" But it was not for the broken stuff in his hand that he was sorry. She twisted her mouth in a sort of smile. "You have the truth you were asking for a while ago . . ." she said, "I'm a sham—like my pearls. I'm false, you know. Women like myself can't afford to love—it's much too expensive. . . . Or if we do it must be some one who can make these real." . . . She touched the poor beads that clung to her bosom as if they hated to leave there; then with contempt she released the string and let them fall. "Why wouldn't you let it stand as it was? It was so much prettier. . . ."

She turned away slowly and left him. He saw her silhouette slender and slightly drooping but altogether lovely as she moved away among the green arms of the palms to the open golden door of the ballroom. She left him casually as if he were worth no better parting than that.

"Fuss and Feathers" in Presentation at Court

In order to be presented to the Court of St. James it is necessary to be sponsored by the American ambassador or by an important English lady. The summons to appear is issued about three weeks before the day. Regulation court dress, including the prince of Wales feathers, is required. The ceremony takes place in the throne room at 9:30 o'clock. There is a red-carpeted aisle, extending across the room, in front of the throne from door to door. At the appointed time the royal family, preceded by the lord chamberlain and his officers, enter and take their places. The line of members to be presented forms outside the door and slowly files past the throne and out of the other door. As the lady is about to enter, her card is passed down the line to the lord chamberlain, who calls out her name as she stands before the king name as she stands before the king to the queen, and with her head turned toward the royal family makes her way slowly from the room. After the presentations are made, the king and queen rise and bow and the entire assemblage responds. Music is then played while the royal members leave the room.

"HIGH-BROW" HATS POPULAR; PARIS SAYS SEALSKIN COATS

MEET the "high-brows" which milliners are introducing to the smart world. It is a most appropos name, do you not think, for the stunning new off-the-face hats which are making their debut this season? Of all the startling innovations recorded in advance fall and winter millinery displays none is so startling as the vivacious new way of wearing the hat way back on the head so as to reveal the style centers of our fair country. There is not much likeness between the conventional sealskin coat of the dim and distant past and the snappy-styled sealskins which are registering on the 1930 style program. The new models record a most youthful silhouette achieved through a slightly circular cut which accomplishes a sprightly flare as shown in the lower picture. Unusual sleeve treatments likewise give an entirely new aspect to the modernized sealskin coat together with artful and intricately styled collars. Then, too, the very most fashionable sealskin coats are belted at the natural waistline which immediately establishes their identity as last minute entrants in fashion's contest. Logwood brown, which is the color of the coat illustrated, is mentioned as a favorite with such noted French couturiers as Patou, Redfern, Paquin, Lelong and a number of other leading couturiers who are using soft, supple sealskin not only for the coat entire but in a trimming way and for intriguing accessories.

The belted mode has invaded the coat realm to no little extent, a move which is accounted for in that fall and winter styles have gone decidedly Russian. Wherefore the coat, the blouse, the tunic which is belted is the outstanding theme of the moment. No doubt this Russian influence also accounts for the existing flair for aristocratic fur such as Persian lamb, finest caracul, sables and nu-every detail. It accents the off-the-face movement in an effective manner, bringing the brim down into a flattering frill at the back.

A very smart "high-brow" is illustrated to the right. Note its perfectly adjusted shallow crown. You could not push it forward if you wanted to. The last hat is velvet and it heralds a vogue of picturesque brims for the coming months. It accents the modish black-and-white note.

The styles portrayed here represent best ideas of a group of recognized style authorities, they having given their stamp of approval in form of the little diamond-shaped trademark which you see printed below in the picture.

Paris Dictates Sealskin. Since luxury furs are the thing this season, it is not at all surprising that the pendulum of fashion is swinging back to the coat of genuine sealskin. Paris has ordered it so, and the sentiment for this fur of refined elegance is being strongly voiced throughout

THE PEPPY PIMIENTOS

The personality in food is supplied in various ways, first its appearance, next its taste, then, of course, its food value, which appeals to the calorie counter. When food is dull, lacking in color, taste, in insipid, look to the little spanish pepper to give zest to your dishes.

The flavor of the pimiento is not its only attraction; the color adds brilliance to an otherwise dull dish. The little pepper comes packed in several sizes so that if one serves two, a small bottle is provided, and when it is to be the chief ingredient there is the seven-ounce can. For stuffing, one may use any desired mixture. The peppers should be drained, placed in mullin pans, and they are ready to be filled.

Pimientos Stuffed, With Mushroom Sauce.—Cook one small onion (chopped), one stalk of celery also chopped in two tablespoonfuls of fat until tender. Add one-half pound of round steak (ground), salt, pepper, and a dash of cayenne to season, and cook five minutes; remove from the heat, add three-fourths of a cupful of cooked rice, one slightly beaten egg; mix well and fill the peppers. Bake until brown.

Savory Sandwiches.—Take a small can of pimientos, three and one-half ounce size, chop after draining, add one-fourth cupful of peanut butter, one-fourth cupful of sweet pickle, and one-fourth cupful of mayonnaise. Chop the pickle and mix all together, adding salt to taste. Spread on lightly buttered bread and cut into any desired form.

Pimiento Canapes.—Split the six pimientos after draining, using a seven-ounce can. Sprinkle the inner surface with salt and cayenne. Place a rectangular slice of cheese lengthwise of the pepper and roll up. Skewer with toothpicks securely. Roll in flour, cook in a small amount of fat three minutes or until the cheese melts and the flour browns. Serve on oval slices of toast well buttered and hot.

New Orleans Conducts Business Over Coffee

Few affairs of importance have been discussed in New Orleans except over a cup of coffee, writes Ralph A. Graves in the National Geographic Magazine. Here, as in the New East, business seems to function more easily to the accompaniment of sips of the bitter black French drip than in any other, and the most harassed executives will pause for ten minutes in mid-morning, leave their offices and go to the restaurant or the hotel for a cup of coffee—nothing more.

On the top floor of one of the most progressive banks in the state—and in countless other establishments, no doubt—there is a special kitchen and dining room in which the employees retire when the bank closes at three; after their cup of coffee they return to their desks.

In one big manufacturing plant every workman brings with him each morning a small coffee pot which he deposits under his pet steam-leaking valve, so that as the condensing hot water drips constantly, he provides himself with small quantities of the beverage throughout the day.

Sunrise on the Moon

The transition from night to day on the moon is very rapid, for the moon has no atmosphere; no rosy tints paint its mountain tops at dawn. There are no graduations between darkness and night, no twilight with color-tinted clouds. Before the sun comes there is blank, black darkness, deeper and blacker than anything experienced on our earth. As the sunshine moves across its surface the first peaks to catch its rays stand suddenly out, fully defined in a harsh, untempered glare and in sharp contrast to the dense blackness of the nearby terrain, where it is still night.

Male and Female "Mockers"

The bureau of biological survey says that there is no way of distinguishing the sexes in mocking birds by the plumage, since it is identical for both sexes. It is possible to tell the sexes apart by the song of the adult bird, since the male is a better singer, and in the fact that the female sometimes does not sing at all.

Wash Raw Foods

The home refrigeration service says that raw foods should be washed thoroughly, then immersed for five minutes in a stone jar filled with a fresh chloride of lime solution, half an ounce of lime to two gallons of water. Food flavor or quality will not be harmed and the germs will be destroyed.

British Royal Emblem

The present English crown was made for Queen Victoria in 1838. The materials for it were obtained from the crowns of bygone British rulers.

Use the Odd Moments

The use of odd moments is the opportunity used by more than one successful man to climb to the top of the heap. This is what has been termed "margin of effort," and the product of this extra work and study is what makes the leader.—Grit.

The Difference

"Crank letters" are the kind a public man gets from strangers who hawl him out. "Fan mail" comes from intelligent people who think him a wonder.—San Francisco Chronicle.

TILL NEVER stop thanking you for telling me about Rinso. I might still be scrubbing and boiling clothes in the old-fashioned way.

"Just think—these clothes were just soaked in nice thick Rinso suds. That's all—just soaked. And did you ever see such gleaming, snowy whiteness!"

Saves the clothes, too
Clothes last much longer when they're soaked instead of scrubbed. Rinso is safe for the finest cottons and linens. The makers of 38 famous washers recommend it. So economical, too; cup for cup it gives twice as much suds as lightweight, puffed-up soaps.

Try Rinso's creamy lasting suds for dishes, too! Wonderful for all cleaning. Get the BIG package.

A Good Frame House Always a Paying Investment

Building fads come and building fads go but good frame construction remains supreme in public preference, century after century. It has proved to be the safest type of housing in hurricane and quake. It is warm in winter and cool in summer, lends itself readily to alterations or additions and with a good frame house, or farm building, is the most economical to erect.

Here in this rigorous climate of its growth there is no better lumber to use than standardized Association grade-marked Northern Hemlock for studding, rafters, joists, sheathing, lath and sub-flooring. The large, over-size studs and joists, guaranteed by the Association brand, and freedom of this wood from dry-rot plus a vise-like grip on nails, are qualities which assure structural strength and rigidity. Sold and recommended by progressive dealers everywhere and as this superior lumber costs no more than unidentifiable and undersize material, why should you take less for your money?

RED TOPS have changed fence building habits

It is no longer necessary to confine fence work to spring—the "easy-post-hole-digging" season. Being made from tough, dense railroad rail steel, Red Top posts will not batter or buckle when driven through the hardest of soil. One man can drive 200 to 300 a day.

Get your fence building and repair work out of the way this fall while the weather is good. It not only takes the job out of your busy spring season but prevents your fence lines from becoming further run down this winter and gives you an extra season's use out of the wire. It also avoids annoyances and losses next spring from stock breaking into crops or onto the highways.

We carry Red Tops in various types and lengths from which you can select the post best suited to your needs. Come in and let us show you why the Red Top studded tee post prevents fencing from sagging, being rooted up or ridden down and why it gives you more years of service.

NASH

Announces

3 new EIGHTS and a new SIX

NEVER was such motor car quality offered at prices so sensationally low. The literally startling difference becomes at once apparent when you contrast the prices of the new and finer Nash series, with prices of corresponding models a year ago.

Its low non-productive overhead, its elimination of borrowed capital, and remarkably foresighted manufacturing alone enable Nash to offer so much for so little. The unique example in value-giving thus provided the industry was planned last November. At that time, C. W. Nash and the strong group of executives surrounding him, clearly foresaw present conditions. They at once began to design cars of value so great, so unimitatable, as to overcome all buying reluctance.

The result is instantly apparent. Even casual inspection of the four new Nash cars establishes the fact that nothing even remotely approaching them in downright dollar value has ever been available in their respective price fields.

SENSATIONALLY PRICED!

STUDY THESE SENSATIONAL PRICES!

Compare what is probably the most remarkable achievement of Nash in greater value-giving—the New Six—with the Single Six it succeeds. The new Six offers a multitude of superlatives—at prices which range from $160 to $140 below the prices of the Single Six.

Body Style	The New Six W. R. 1100*	Last Year's Six W. R. 1100*	Price Difference
Sedan (4-door)	$845	$1005	-$160
Coupe	$795	$940	-$145
Coupe (rumble seat)	$825	$980	-$155
Sedan (2-door)	$795	$935	-$140

Compare the New Eight-70 with its two additional cylinders, its longer wheelbase, its larger, more luxurious body, with the six-cylinder car it replaces. Then consider the remarkable fact that there is actually a basis price differential in favor of the New Eight!

Body Style	The New Eight-70 W. R. 1100*	Last Year's Six W. R. 1100*	Price Difference
Sedan (4-door)	$995	$1005	-$10
Coupe	$945	$940	+$5
Coupe (rumble seat)	$975	$980	-$5
Special Sedan (4-door)	$955

Compare the New Twin-Ignition Eight-80 Series with the 6-cylinder car it replaces. The Eight-80 is larger, longer. Design, appointments, upholstery are finer—prices are radically lower.

Body Style	The New Twin-Ignition Eight-80 W. R. 1217*	Last Year's Twin-Ignition Six W. R. 1100*	Price Difference
Sedan (4-door)	$1295	$1415	-$120
Coupe	$1245	$1345	-$100
Coupe (rumble seat)	$1285	$1305	-$20
Town Sedan (4-door)	$1375

Compare the New Twin-Ignition Eight-90 Series, now with a 115 H. P. Engine, with the last year's 100 H. P. Eight. Body appointments are finer, upholstery more luxurious, and prices are far lower!

Body Style	The New Twin-Ignition Eight-90 W. R. 1217*	Last Year's Twin-Ignition Eight W. R. 1100*	Price Difference
Sedan (4-door)	$1565	$1705	-$140
