eggs are small; are you sure they're ripe? Grocer—Yes, ma'am; came in fresh this morning. Mrs. Newlywed—Well, that's the trouble with these farmers, they don't leave their eggs in the nest long enough!

The telephone rang. "Is Mr. Jones in?" queried a voice. "Yes, he's in, but—" "Could I speak to him?" "Well, no. It would be inconvenient. You see, he's just varnished the stairs from the bottom up and he's waiting until they dry before he comes down."

Duty Bound
A young man leaving the sorority house with his date for the evening, said: "Tell me, why did the little blond persist in playing the victrola at the house?" "She is a pledge and it's her job to keep it playing when we have dates, so the chaperon won't hear every word that's said," replied the coed.

THE OLD PROSPECTOR IN LUCK AT LAST

By G. VANDER MERWE

STAGGERING across the sandy desert, gleaming white in the bright sunlight, came Panhandle Pete, slightly bent under the weight of a skimpy pack. He was making his last trip into town. Old and shaking, a battered, greasy hat pulled well down over the white locks and lined brow. His eyes, bloodshot and bleary, peered across the brilliant jumble of endless seas of brilliant sand. The desert had taken its toll of Panhandle Pete.

"Get up there, Pancho! I know yuh tired, so'm L. Yuh an' me's a-gettin' old, but we'll be hittin' Indian Springs purty soon, then—then it'll be th' porchouse fer me, ol' timer, and Gawd knows wot fer yuh!"

The old burro bent his head still lower and its striny tail flapped wearily at the swarms of flies that settled in clouds on the gray, patchy back.

Panhandle was leaving the desert; it was his last trip out. He was through. He had fought it as fiercely as it had fought him, thwarting his every effort. Forty years in the hot, gleaming sand—and nothing to show for it except the empty pack. Years of "scratching" for the wealth he knew must be there—and then failure. Now he was coming out of the desert before it got him, as it had got Bella.

"Pore Bella!" he moaned, "she was a good gal!"

Ahead of him a sign-post marked the end of the desert. Before him stretched the cluster of shacks that lined the rough sidewalks on either side of the roadway.

A cloud of dust rose from the many burro's hoofs as it slowly ambled down the main street of the little mining town.

"Pore Bella!" and a tear coursed down the tanned cheek, "how good this would hev looked to her. How pitiful her brown eyes looked at me, when I held her head an' said, 'Good-by, Bella! Pal of a lifetime!'"

Panhandle wiped his eyes with the back of a calloused and none too clean hand. For a moment he closed his tired lids and shook his head.

"Go on, Pancho, wot in sam hill are yuh stoppin' fer?" He mumbled, making weak, ineffectual slaps at the gray flanks.

A man coming along the wooden sidewalk smiled as he noted the shabby pair.

"Lo, Panhandle, yuh in town? Sheriff tole me ter tell you, when I see'd you, that he wants yuh, right pronto."

"Me? Wot fer?" exclaimed Panhandle in a tone of shrill surprise. He stopped and blinked at Hank Blasdon, one of the deputies.

"Oh, I dunno," answered the latter, with a smile an' a knowing wink, apparently at some joke of his own. "All I know is, yuh a-goin' to get wot's comin' ter yuh," he concluded, slouching on his way toward the town restaurant.

"Hey! I ain't done nuthin'!" called the old man after him.

Down the busy street a dazed old desert rat made his way. A few autos clattered by, half-choking him with dust. But he headed straight for the sheriff's office. It had never occurred to him to disobey the order of the law.

In the middle of the road he paused to mumble aloud, "Naw, I wonder wot that thar sheriff wants with me? Whoa, there, Pancho," this to the burro, who stood, too tired to even swing its wispy tail. "Bella wouldn't hev bin as quiet as you, Pancho. She'd a-bin wantin' to run here an' there to see this an' that, quite a gal, Bella was, fer pryin' into wot weren't her business, pore Bella. Naw, I kin mind—"

"Say, pop, move yuhself an' thar bag o' lones an' fleas out o' the road!" called the driver of a large truck, applying his brakes quickly. He smiled impatiently at the old prospector lost in daydreams.

Panhandle woke with a start and shuffled to the side of the road; here at a hitching post he tied his burro. "Yuh stay quiet, Pancho," he admonished, "mebbe when I come back I'll get yuh a bucket of nice clean water. I won't hev ter pay fer that anyway," he mumbled as he stepped stiffly up on the board walk and dodged through the pedestrians. His legs were painin' him and he was aware he hadn't eaten since sun-up yesterday; he couldn't forget it. He might have begged a meal, but he hated to do it.

He, who had always provided for himself.

He stumbled on, sometimes bumping into passers-by. His eyes burned and ached. Somehow the sidewalks seemed hotter than the desert sand.

Arriving at the building he was looking for, he toiled wearily up the eight wooden steps that led to a door with the impressive wording, "Sheriff's Office." He knocked. Weak as the sound was, Sheriff Watkins heard it and called gruffly, "Come in."

"Yuh was wantin' me," quavered Panhandle.

The sheriff swung around and faced his visitor. "Yep," he answered, emphatically, "I bin lookin' fer yuh all over. But yuh prospectors are as hard to catch as a sand lizard."

"But, sheriff," protested Panhandle in a hoarse whisper, taking off his greasy hat and twirling it nervously in his hands. "I ain't done nuthin'. Honest ter Gawd! I ain't done nuthin'," he whimpered. "Fer nigh onto sixty years I tried ter scratch my livin' honest."

"Yep, I reckon yuh hev," agreed the sheriff, surprise showing on his face at the old man's outburst.

"There's only one thing I'm sorry I done, sheriff," quavered the old voice again, blinking with red-rimmed eyes at the sunlight that came glaring in through the blinds of a window.

"Wot's that?" asked the sheriff, humoring an old man's whim.

"I killed my Bella," said Panhandle with startling suddenness. "Her that had bin my life's companion. She traveled over that desert with me fer years. When I struck a pocket I'd tell her, an' her eyes seemed ter shine with sympathy. Fine gal, Bella! An' I killed her, because there wasn't no 'nuff grub fer us all. One day I took my gun an' jammed a bullet in, an' shot her, right through that faithful heart that beat only fer me. Yep, I killed my Bella!" Panhandle went on, disregarding the stern look that spread over the sheriff's face. "I held her head fer a long time on my knee, then I built a mound of rocks over her body, ter keep th' coyotes away. If that's wot yuh wantin' me fer, sheriff, I'm ready to come," he ended simply, then holding out his hand pleadingly, he said: "Please take keer of Pancho while I'm in jail, because he's old like me, an' he won't be here much longer."

"Well, yuh a cold-blooded ol' reprobate!" exploded the sheriff. "Tellin' me yuh've shot a woman! Because there wasn't 'nuff grub ter go round, yuh shot her, yuh, yuh!" and words failed him.

"She wasn't no woman, sheriff," broke in Panhandle sadly. "She was my other burro. I'd had her since she was a young 'un, raised her, I had, an' it nigh busted my heart ter shoot her. Was that wot yuh was wantin' me fer, sheriff?" he asked.

"Naw, pop," answered the relieved officer of the law, suppressing his desire to laugh. "It's good news fer yuh, ol' timer. Some young prospector yuh grubstaked about two years ago has struck it rich. His name was Buck. Some green 'un yuh helped—"

"Two years ago," Panhandle interrupted musingly. "I remember that bird mighty well; nice feller he were. I give him wot I had. It wasn't much, but it was all I had that day, an' fer many a day to come."

"He's deeded yuh half th' claim," went on Sheriff Watkins. "Man! yuh ch! Yuh won't need ter work no more. Don't yuh understand me, Panhandle?" he asked impatiently as the red-rimmed eyes looked at him dazedly.

"This young man tole me ter find yuh, pop, an' me ar' th' deputies bin huntin' fer two weeks fer yuh. Dog-gone it! Panhandle's fainted!"

Fear Cedar Wood Famine

Pencil wood near large factories is practically exhausted. The industry has detailed special investigators to look up suitable red cedar from which the straight grain pencil lumber may be cut.

European, Japanese and American pencil makers use more than 600 tons of pencil wood per month, according to lumber journals. Pencil cedar must be extremely soft, close grained, with very straight fibers. It must be kiln dried for three months so that every bit of moisture is evaporated.

The best substitute for cedar wood yet found and which may be used in future years is myrtle, a native of timber tracts in Oregon and western Washington.

Bells Peal After 100 Years

After a silence of more than 100 years, the bells of the ancient church of Southfleet, England, will peal again.

The three bells, among the oldest in the country, were cast in 1610, 1735 and 1736. Parishioners recently established a fund for their complete restoration.

Advice Hard to Follow

"A friend who tells you to foghit your troubles," said Uncle Eben, "means well. If you could take his advice to de limit he'd be afraid yuh mind had gone all wrong."—Washington Star.

Primitive People of the South American Wilds

The Djukas are a strange and fascinating people living in primitive culture in the South American jungles on the edge of western civilization. The Djukas, or Bush negroes, are inhabitants of Dutch Guiana, and they are the descendants of slaves who won their independence 200 years ago from their Dutch masters.

In their peaceful villages of thatched huts in the jungles, these primitive people live a contented life, adhering to customs centuries old. Only a few white men have penetrated the country, and fewer still have observed closely the customs and the craftsmanship of the medicine, the religion and the form of government of this people. The Djukas do not welcome white intrusion and keep themselves so isolated from the affairs of the outside world that they first heard of the World War from a scientific expedition which visited them.

INDISPOSED?

Headaches come at the most inconvenient times, but there's one thing that will always save the day. If you have some Bayer Aspirin you can soon be on your way. The sooner you take it the less time you'll lose—the less you'll suffer.

Shopping frequently brings on a headache. Over-exertion of any kind. Eye-strain. Or just "nerves." Often it's the time of month. Regardless of the cause, you want relief. And you get relief when you take Bayer Aspirin. Take promptly! It will relieve the pain at any stage, but why wait until you are miserable? Bayer Aspirin can't harm you, because there is nothing harmful in it.

Remember this, when you're tempted to try some product that costs a few cents less!

Vatican Art Treasures Worth Many Fortunes

Said to be the largest palace in the world, the Vatican contains 80 grand stairways, and 200 smaller ones, 20 courts and 11,000 halls, chapel rooms and apartments, and its wealth is so fabulous as to be beyond anyone's knowledge, writes James T. Nichols in an article in Successful Farming.

Within the Vatican, he continues, are tens of thousands of paintings and objects, many of which alone are worth a fortune. The single painting of the Last Judgment is 33 feet wide and 66 feet high. If a single one of the half-dozen marble bathtubs were put on the market, it would bring enough to build a good-sized church. In the library are single manuscripts that are priceless, marble tablets inlaid with pearls and gems worth a fortune, and vases almost as valuable. Rockefeller could hardly pay for the tapestries and paintings in the Vatican, and Henry Ford would be bankrupt before he half finished if he started to purchase the treasures of this great building.

WOMEN SHOULD LEARN USES OF MAGNESIA

To women who suffer from nausea, or so-called "morning sickness," this is a blessing. Most nurses know it. It is advised by leading specialists: Over a small quantity of finely cracked Ice pour a teaspoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Sip slowly until you are relieved. It ends sick stomach or inclination to vomit.

Its anti-acid properties make Phillips' Milk of Magnesia quick relief in heartburn, sour stomach, gas. Its mild laxative action assures regular bowel movement. Used as a mouth-wash it helps prevent tooth decay during expectancy.

Can't PLAY Can't REST

—child needs Castoria

When a child is fretful and irritable, seems distressed and uncomfortable, can't play, can't sleep, it's a pretty sure sign that something is wrong. Right here is where Castoria fits into a child's scheme—the very purpose for which it was formulated years ago! A few drops and the condition which caused the trouble is righted; comfort quickly brings restful sleep.

Nothing can take the place of Castoria for children; it's perfectly harmless, yet always effective. For the protection of your own peace of mind—keep for your own peace of mind—keep this old reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an every-day aid. Its gentle action will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. In more liberal doses it will effectively help to regulate bowels in an older child.

All druggists have Castoria. Buy genuine if you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature and this name-plate:

The Kitchen Cabinet

What can an individual do but first distribute such little gifts as he has to give, which increases the chances for happiness by increasing the appetite for the things of the spirit—Edward Teomans.

WHAT TO EAT

A simple dessert well made and daintily served gives just the finishing touch to a plain dinner. Here are a few desserts that may be helpful in planning a luncheon and the dinner menus:

On baking day when the oven is not too well occupied, prepare and bake a pastry shell or two, or bake the shells on patty tins for individual pies. These will keep well for a few days and it will be found most helpful to put in a filling of lemon, cover with a meringue and have a dessert in a very few minutes. These shells may be filled with crushed fruit, topped with whipped cream, or they may be filled with a butterscotch filling or chocolate, thus having any kind that seems desirable or is well liked.

The following will be another filling that takes but a few moments to prepare: Marshmallow and Fruit Pudding.—Soak one-fourth of a cupful of candied cherries and pineapple cut into pieces either in the pineapple juice or any fruit juice either canned or fresh, for an hour or more. Use maraschino cherries and their own sirup if preferred. Cut one-half pound of marshmallows into six pieces each. Beat one cupful of whipping cream until stiff, add three tablespoons of confectioner's sugar gradually, then a half teaspoonful of almond with a few drops of vanilla. Mix the marshmallows with one-half cupful of pecan meats broken into pieces and fold all together. Chill and serve in the pastry cups.

A Dainty Luncheon Dessert.—Spread the round butter crackers with marshmallow cream and in the center of each place a teaspoonful of pineapple or orange marmalade. Beat the whites of two eggs until stiff and dry, add one-fourth cupful of powdered sugar and with a pastry tube pipe this meringue around the edge of the cracker, then set a rose of meringue in the center. Sprinkle with granulated sugar and brown delicately in the oven.

Nellie Maxwell No "Frills," but Real Meals in Lumber Camps

Some one recently writing of Maine lumber camp feasts describes the table in rather interesting terms: "The food is all on before the cook shouts: 'Come and get it!' You will not find finger bowls, white napkins or a dozen knives and forks to every person, but you'll find real grub, the kind that delights the stomach of every woodsman. There are no 'courses.' You eat as much as you want of anything that is on the table. The dishes are kept filled by the cook. Coffee, milk and tea are in large pitchers. Other food is in tins or enameled basins and in large quantities. The cups are of tin and hold a pint—a real man-size cup. Knives, forks, spoons and plates are also of tin or enameled ware. Some of the men mix beans, bread, pickles, potatoes and onions together and then cover it with molasses. As soon as a man has eaten, he takes his dishes and deposits them in one of the huge dishpans that is usually in the sink at one end of the cookroom. To leave your dishes on the table would be a certain sign of 'greenhorn.'"—Lewiston Journal.

Earliest English Clock? In the first chamber of the great tower of Salisbury cathedral lies a rusty, odd-looking piece of mechanism which may prove to be the earliest turret clock in England, dating back to 1380, or six years before the earliest record of the Wells clock, now in the Science museum at South Kensington.

An interesting feature of the Salisbury clock is the hand wheel for winding the going (as distinct from the striking) part. Only a little work at a trifling cost would be required to make the clock go again.

First English Silk Mill In 1718 the first silk mill in England was established in Derby by a London merchant named John Lombe, who had stolen a secret process of manufacture from Piedmont, where he had obtained employment as a workman and, at the risk of his life, had made drawings of the machinery used by his employers.—Detroit News.

Woods for Violin Maple and sycamore are the favorite woods for the backs or under surfaces of violins. The belly or top is made of a soft wood like fir or pine. Maple is generally used for the neck, and the tall piece and fingerboard are made of ebony. Altogether there are about 70 different parts in an ordinary violin.

Alligator Vindicated A study of stomach contents of 157 alligators of the Gulf coast vindicated these reptiles of being seriously destructive to useful forms of wild life.

Overdoing Exercise Taking enough exercise for a week in one concentrated dose on a Saturday or Sunday is probably more injurious than no exercise at all, especially to persons more than fifty years, in the opinion of the medical director of an insurance company.

The New Goal A life devoted to the acquisition of wealth is useless unless we know how to turn it into joy. And this is an art that requires culture and wisdom.—County Home.

SHEER WOOLENS LEAD IN STYLE; EVENING CAPS AND DINNER HATS

At the turf meets, at the international polo matches, at the ball games, in fact everywhere that fashionable women are gathering, the new wool dress is the most prominent and the most pleasing style creation of the season—not the heavy wool dress of years ago, but something new and far more wonderful—a dress made of sheer wooleens so soft and so supple that they meet the most exacting demands of graceful, flowing lines.

OF SHEER WOVEN WOOL CREPE

trend be reflected in terms of the formal dinner hat, flattering dance hats and festive-looking evening caps. The hats in the group pictured evidence that the trend is toward more formality. They are the sort which top the luxurious fabrics, the flattering furs and the rich jewels of the costume to perfection. These styles are particularly interesting in that they bear the stamp of approval of leading millinery authorities of America.

The first model is one of the new fur-trimmed types which are the choice of the smart set for fall, in color it takes its cue from the red and white print of the frock with which it is worn, being a brick-red felt with a draped bandeau of white galyak. Its side dip is infinitely becoming and supremely smart.

Everything must glitter, is one of the messages of the mode this season and the decree is carried out in ways as pictured to the right at the top. This stunning evening cap is made of sequin-embroidered banding. Glitter answers to glitter for the one-sided shoulder strap of the gown is of brilliant silks and sequins.

The novel beaded and scalloped bandeau which gives "class" to the hat below to the left is being made a feature in millinery design. A favorite theme is turquoise beads with tulle frocks such as is shown in upper picture. This model is styled of sheer woven wool crepe in a clear tone of red. The versatile wool fabric fashions the fringe which trims the tunic as well as the chic little hat which is worn with it. White ball buttons add a smart touch.

Elegance in Millinery. As the costume so the hat must be. And now that fashion is ascending to heights of elegance and dignity, it needs must follow that this

Dressy Necklines Mark New Blouses for Fall

By dressier necklines and longer peplums, know the new blouses. These are the most distinguishing details, and both are exploited in many new models. The peplums of many models are cut on this plan. Other blouses have peplums long enough to be termed tunics. Necklines are scarfed or use fluttering cowl effects. When it comes to colors you will know those for autumn; they have a tangy flavor.

Modern Life Compels Virtue of Punctuality

Human beings, we suspect, are almost without exception tardy. The man who is always on time for his social engagements is regarded as a sort of freak by his friends; indeed, he is regarded as somewhat objectionable, for by his punctuality he makes them feel guilty when they arrive 20, 30 or 40 minutes late. As for the man who is on time for business engagements, he probably does not exist. There are a score or more time-clock companies listed in New York; all of them seem to be prosperous, and their wares are not bought, we may be sure, by companies whose employees are on time every morning to the minute. Left to their own devices, these employees would get to work anywhere from one minute to eight hours late.

Yet when you consider the human race in the aggregate as distinguished from human beings in the particular it is as punctual as an eclipse. It is more punctual than an eclipse, for if an eclipse were ten minutes late that would cause no particular surprise; but if the rush hour crowd at a restaurant were ten minutes late the manager would be out on the street running around to see where the parade was. Crowds can be predicted almost to the minute. Part of this, perhaps, is due to such compulsions as we spoke of above; time clocks, the necessity to eat lunch at a given hour and in a given length of time, and so on. But part of it is not. The big movie theaters run continuous shows, so that there is no special reason to get to them on time. If you miss the first part when you go in, you can always wait and see it before you go out. Yet the queues in front of these theaters always seem to reach their maximum length at about the same time; even here you could set your watch by the crowd. Inside, however, sitting about the foyer, you see many fidgety persons looking at their watches; they are waiting for somebody, and that somebody is late.—New York World.

Unharmful by Long Fall

Reversing the case of Humpty Dumpty, a Stockholm roofer recently fell seven stories to the street without causing himself more damage than a broken tooth. The workman, Tore Fredelin, was nailing plates on the edge of a mansard roof, when the plank he stood on gave way and he tumbled to earth. He said later that he remembered striking many beams before he reached the ground, but he remained conscious throughout. Passersby who had watched him fall could hardly believe their eyes when they saw Fredelin unconcernedly pick himself up and brush off his clothes.

Coco's Treasure Sought

Capt. Malcolm Campbell, the racing autoist, is to again seek the $20,000,000 worth of gold and jewels said to have been hidden by pirates in the Cocos Islands in the Pacific. He started his search in 1925, but had to abandon it temporarily. "The Cocos Islands are 700 miles from the nearest other land," Campbell said, "just the spot pirates would choose. I did not go there entirely 'on spec,' and I know what I am after."

DRIVE CAREFULLY

Inattention at the wheel and fast driving are two primary causes for many automobile accidents, according to a statement issued by the Wisconsin Highway Commission today. The Highway Commission of Wisconsin is conducting a safety campaign. Because it has been shown that industrial accidents have been greatly reduced through educational methods, the highway commission has decided to issue a series of bulletins to acquaint the people with highway accidents.
"It is not speed alone, but speed combined with inattention, a certain carelessness about consequences which we may call haste, that causes many accidents," declares the statement of the Highway Commission.
The truth of this is borne out by every traffic accident survey in the United States. Just as soon as an improved pavement is built the number of accidents on that road increases. The answer is haste. It does not follow from this that we must not improve our highways, but it does follow that we should improve our driving practice. Speed accidents occur for two reasons; one is the operator, the second is the lack of proper vigilance.
Five years ago there were few motor vehicles capable of a sustained speed as high as 50 miles per hour. Today there are many whose manufacturers advertise them as being capable of sustained speeds of as high as 75 or 80 miles per hour. There are a few drivers who are capable of driving these vehicles over our highways at these speeds but they are the exception. They may be called professional drivers. Their vehicles are always of the highest type and in the finest condition in every respect. The drivers themselves do little but drive, and consequently are very skillful. What they can do on the road with a high powered car bears no more relation to what the ordinary driver can do than the feats of a professional acrobat bear to the athletic exercise obtained in hoeing one's garden. If you are in the professional class described you can probably drive 60 miles an hour or more in safety to yourself, if nothing gets in the way, but you can never know when some object such as an animal or a person will suddenly intervene, and with disastrous results to everybody concerned.

New Fireproof Wood
One of the most important uses to which straw has been put is that of making a new kind of wood called solomite. The straw is compressed, under a pressure of 200 pounds to the square inch, in a machine which extrudes it with wire. The machine can turn out four thousand square feet of board a day, and a remarkable feature of the wood is that it is fireproof.

Early Diving Suit
The diving suit is not so new as one might think. A patent was granted to John Stapleton on March 17, 1893, for a new engine, so by him contrived as to permit a person enclosed in it to walk under water, and to a new invented way to force air into any depth of water to supply the person in the suit engine therewith and for continuing a lamp burning under water; also a way to deserate and purify the air so as to make the same serviceable for respiration.

Knighthood Still in Flower
The extreme limit to which some married men will go in courtesy to their spouses was demonstrated this morning when a man driving down North Summit street stopped his car, picked up his wife, who was walking, and took her to work.—Arkansas City Traveler.

World's Fastest Bird
The fastest known bird is the splint tailed swift, which reaches the speed of 220 miles an hour over the mountains of Asia; the tarpon of Florida, the fastest fish, can cover 80 miles in an hour.

STATESMAN RECEIVES CONGRATULATIONS AND BOUQUETS

The Statesman on entering its 36th year of existence last week, received several bouquets from neighboring weeklies as follows:
NEWSPAPER HAS BIRTHDAY
(West Bend Pilot)

The Statesman, published at Kewaskum by Don Harbeck and Art Schaefer, entered upon its 36th year with its last Friday's issue. A newspaper is an asset to any community and when properly managed and full of news content is a welcome visitor in any home. These features are embodied in The Statesman and judging from the liberal amount of advertising the paper is receiving from Kewaskum's businessmen and the generous support being accorded it by the community in general, gives the publishers the assurance that their efforts to please are appreciated. That The Statesman will continue in the field of journalism for good in the community is the birthday wish of The Pilot.

KEWASKUM PAPER 35 YEARS OLD
(Lomira Review)

The Kewaskum Statesman last week entered upon its 36th year in the journalism era. The owners and publishers, Harbeck and Schaefer edit a neat and newsy weekly paper which deserves much credit. Kewaskum and surrounding localities are indeed fortunate to have The Statesman, whereby to inform the general public of their news and ads. Congratulations Brothers.
Messrs. Harbeck and Schaefer desire to express their thanks to the publishers of The Pilot and the Lomira Review.

driver's head and declaring over and over again that he wasn't dead, as if he was the only one that mattered. "What's this?" The policeman bent down to look at two figures that lay side by side. The man's coat, fallen open, displayed a badge shining on his breast. The discoverer was impelled to a more vital interest. "A man from Central office!" he cried, aghast.

Detective Jimmy O'Hara opened his eyes, slowly. His mind was perfectly clear, because his head had not been injured at all. The rest of him was dead, quite dead, and he had seen enough of death to know this for himself.

He knew what had happened, too. The crash of impact still lingered in his mentality. His brain was clear and as resonant as a bell which has just been rung, but his numb body was conscious of a heavy weight pulling against one shoulder. He managed to turn his eyes downward and saw a face there—a dead face with dead yellow hair and spots of red paint on the cheek bones. A horrible thing to be dragging a man down.

"Who was with you officer?" demanded the policeman, with his notebook under his nose. "Did you have a prisoner?"

Jimmy O'Hara remembered. He remembered perfume, white hands and soft slenderness, fine as silk, lying against his shoulder for a second as the crash came. He remembered duty. He lifted his heavy eyes again and saw her like a dream standing over him, pitying, like a person too horrified to move. And he remembered duty? Is it the thing he has promised other men to do, or the prompt of that intimate stranger who sits in judgment when the body sleeps?

Jimmy O'Hara, who all his life had done the right thing as right is accepted, beheld now a sort of white light, a highway opening beside his narrow path. Nearly everything was dead—as the world calls dead—about him, but this was the clearest vision he had ever known.

"Here she is," he said with a weak motion toward the heavy thing upon his arm, and shut his eyes for good and all.

CHAPTER XIII

"Because I Love Her"

Brian Anstey, making his way through the long rooms, evaded successfully the inquiring efforts of people he knew. A good-looking chap with the right sponsors may not, at such a time, reach a given point in a given time without encountering all the opposition that soft eyes, softer smiles, detaining murmurs may throw in his way. Beyond a bulwark of black shoulders Daisy Fentress sent a wistful glance. She alone might have called to him but she would not. He saw Simon, apart and taut; less than other men in stature, yet towering above them, a—personality on stilts. He saw a dozen men whose names and words were making history, and saw them for the first time as individuals who annoyed him by getting in his way. And at last he got a glimpse of the man he was looking for.

Converse was paying ponderous compliments to a Brazilian lady. He seemed to admire her olive shoulders, frankly pasted with snowy shellac, more than anything in the world. His high color was undimmed; his small eyes were bland and avid as ever, yet Brian spoke to him without hesitation. "Come with me," he said in a low voice.

Converse looked around in surprise. He was amazed to be spoken to in that manner. But when he saw Brian's face he excused himself to his companion and followed.

They went to the room that Brian had left a few minutes before. The atmosphere of Linda Roth still lingered there in some strange fashion as if over the thousand perfumes of the crowded rooms beyond, her own clinging intangibly to the drooping fern fronds or trembled somewhere in the golden haze of shaded lamps. It forced them to admit her presence.

But they were alone there and Brian could endure to see the great bulk of Converse sprawled upon the frail settee where she had rested. The faint shimmering of one of the imitation pearls as it perished did not move him as it might have done, so far was he removed from the sentiment of little things.

Magic of Trees

There is magic in the word "Trees." It means so much to the lover of nature. Trees stand for all that is best in life—beauty, loyalty, steadfastness of purpose, and to sum it up, they are symbolic of life itself.

They live to give. They give us fruit, they bring the birds with their cheerful songs, they give us beautiful surroundings, they give us shelter, they give us the shelter of the livestock from the hot sun, they retard the evaporation of moisture from the land, they lessen the velocity of the wind and furnish us restful pleasure whenever we are near them.—United States Daily.

Power Ascribed to Chinaman's Picture

In the doors of Chinese houses, in temples, are pasted pictures of the first Taoist pope, in a blue robe, with a white beard and long hair, holding a staff. Probably there are many such pictures so displayed and during the year, for example, supposed to repress evil and ward off calamity and in the hot months, on the day of the full moon—usually pasted up, the children are made to keep off the demons, who are supposed to be the cause of illness.

Taoism is said to have been introduced into the year 35 A. D. by the Chinese missionary, who went to meditate in silence in the western hills and there discovered a book given to him by a Taoist priest which told him how to find the elixir of life and other ancient books how

BRUDER IN SENSATIONAL FLYING LEAP

Red Woodworth, left guard of the Northwestern University football team, is trying to stop a flying leap made by Capt. Hank Bruder in a practice game.

Coach Dick Hanley has been putting his team of Wildcats through one of the most strenuous early season workouts ever handed out to a Northwestern squad.

The makeup of the Wildcats' first string eleven will have Jack Riley and Dallas Marvill, the two regulars at tackle. These boys make a great pair, the former weighing 210 and the latter 225. Then there is Paul Enebreton, a 200 pounder, hanging around as a reserve.

Frank Baker and Larry Oliphant, both regular ends from last year, naturally have the cat on the flank jobs, although they will find considerable competition in Ralph Eylar of last year's squad and some sophomores, including Dick Fencil, Cliff Fogarty, and Harold Nunn.

Red Woodworth, 190 pounder, is strongly entrenched at left guard while Harry Kent and Jimmie Evans are fighting over the other job. They weigh 180 and 175 respectively. Red Clark heads up the center position with Harold Weldon and Paul McDonald, two sophomores, also making a bid for the assignment.

Such a layout gives the Wildcats a fairly seasoned line except at center and one guard position. The candidates for these two positions are shaping up well, however, and barring injuries, the forward wall should be able to give an excellent account of itself.

Capt. Hank Bruder and Al Moore lead the halfback contingent with Lee Hanley the choice at quarter. A three-way fight is being waged over the fullback position between Harry Pritchard, understudy to Bergheim last year, and Pug Rentner and Rob Russell, two sturdy sophomores.

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS
Sports-writer, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

Mr. Earnum, who doped it out that the public liked to be bunked, surely was a wise guy.

I shall never forget an incident that took place in Washington on a dozen years back. I figured in the episode, which had all the earmarks of being inside stuff; as a matter of fact, literally, it was just that. The Philadelphia Athletics, then world champs, were playing Washington.

Throughout the game either the Washington or Philadelphia players were constantly congregating about Bender or Johnson, the opposing pitchers, seemingly offering words of wisdom to those two great pitchers.

First, the shortstop would go into conference with the pitcher, then it would be the first baseman or catcher. Not to be outdone, the second and third basemen also made it a point to have their say.

"Plenty of strategy is being pulled today," surmised the fans, but there wasn't. In reality the line of conversation was much as follows:

"Take your time; you must have a date for dinner."

"What about a chew of tobacco? I'm all out and this ball game isn't going to continue until some one supplies me with some scrap."

"Why the hurry? Is the ball hot? Slow up on those guirks; keep them waiting; they're more worried than you."

Every inning dragged along. It was simply impossible to finish a single session without one or the other team going into a tedious conference. Then along came the seventh inning with Philadelphia leading 4 to 3.

Jack Egan was calling balls and strikes that day. I was umpiring the bases. Suddenly I saw him raise his arm, and in a loud shout "Time!" I wondered why. Egan walked half way down the foul line to first, then with a commanding wave of the arm, he called me over for a conference.

"Well, what's the trouble? I was

Football Game Will Reveal Character of Star Players

"Quarrel with athletic sport as we will," says Le Baron Russell Briggs of Harvard, "and regret as we must that in institutions of learning it seems to turn relative values topsy-turvy, no recent observer of young men can deny that in some men's education—in the development of their character—it is a mighty force.

"There are doubtless athletes who, when the excitement of their playing days is over, betake themselves to inferior excitements and to not much else. There are others who throughout their lives are thankful for their athletic training and practice which fitted them for emergencies and helped to make them men.

"Football supplies what President Elliot calls a 'new and effective motive for resisting all sins which weaken or corrupt the body'; it appeals to

Higher Grade of Fuel for Use During Winter

Most cars require a different grade of gasoline in winter, as compared with the summer months, and also a lighter grade of oil and gear lubricant, says a bulletin issued by the mechanical first aid department of the Chicago Motor Club.

The reason why a better grade of gasoline, particularly one possessing easy starting qualities, is because the air with which the gasoline is mixed is colder in winter, and also the temperature of the intake manifold is usually lower. Virtually all filling stations sell a good winter gasoline.

The agency of the make of car is always in a position to advise owners as to the best oil. Some cars use the same consistency of oil the year around; most, however, are designed for thinner lubricant in winter. Honest and to the minute filling stations usually offer the right grade of oil for the car in question; the Chicago Motor Club does not, however, advise motorists to trust all stations to recommend the correct oil. The reason that a comparatively thin oil is better in winter is because oil thickens in low temperatures; frequently the "drag" of the pistons against the cylinder walls and other sources of friction cause an excessive load on the starter

Auto Tool Box Is Handy If Under Driver's Seat

Getting at the tool box under the rear seat of a car is usually rather inconvenient in the case of two-door sedans, especially if the occupants must get out. As the driver is the one who must get out when repairs and adjustments are made, he can avoid unnecessary bother by having a tool box arranged under the floor boards, directly under his seat, which swings forward as shown. A square hole is cut in the floor and a hinged trapdoor, fitting flush, is provided. A strong, wooden box, a trifle larger than the hole, is attached to the underside of the floor board by means of small angle brackets. Of course, the available space underneath the floor boards should be measured and a box of suitable size obtained, before the hole is cut.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Handy Tool Box Under Driver's Seat Eliminates Inconvenience to Other Occupants.

when Egan walked away and called "Play ball."

A pinch hitter produced the base hit the Washington fans had been praying for, and the score was tied. Instead of the game ending in nine innings, it took Washington fourteen to get the verdict. I might add that we were an hour late for dinner, also that our steaks were far from palatable; both were too well done. The inside stuff had gone wrong both on and off the ball field.

Importance and Necessity of Attention to Batteries

Many automobile owners do not realize the importance and necessity of giving their starting and lighting batteries proper attention in the winter. The battery is a delicate piece of apparatus, and if mis-treated, will very quickly depreciate.

Two things are of prime importance; the battery should be kept fully charged, and it should not be allowed to freeze. A battery when standing idle for any length of time gradually loses its charge. Therefore if the car is not run regularly during the winter, in order to keep the battery fully charged, the engine should be run at regular periods to charge, or else the battery should be charged from an outside source of current. This should be done every two or three weeks. The state of charge can be easily read from a specific gravity hydrometer syringe, which can be purchased for about a dollar from an auto supply dealer. A reading of from 1.250 to 1.300 indicates full charge. The reading is indicated by the number on the hydrometer at the level of the liquid.

If the battery is fully charged, it is not apt to freeze when the temperature is above zero, Fahrenheit. It is best, however, to take the battery from the car and into the house in extremely cold weather.

Motor vehicle accidents in the United States last year resulted in an economic loss of more than $850,000,000.

OLDER PEOPLE Must watch bowels Constantly!

As we grow older the bowels become more sluggish. They don't get rid of all the waste. Some days they do not move at all. So older people need to watch their bowels constantly. Only by doing this can they hope to avoid the many forms of sickness caused by constipation.

When your bowels need help remember a doctor should know what is best for them, and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from your drugstore. Syrup Pepsin is a doctor's prescription for lagging bowels, good for all ages.

No restriction of habits or diet is necessary while taking Syrup Pepsin. Made from fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other valuable ingredients, it is absolutely safe. It will not grip, sicken or weaken you.

Take a spoonful next time your tongue is coated, or you have a bad taste in your mouth. It clears up a bilious, headachy, dull, weak, gassy condition every time. When you see how good it tastes and how nice it acts, you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the world's most popular laxative for every member of the family.

AND NOW WE HAVE VIRGIN DIAMONDS!

Phrase Coined by Diamond Syndicate as Trade Name. Now Important Factor in Diamond Purchases

Friday, Oct. 24.—Long have we heard of virgin gold, virgin soil and virgin snow, long has the word been a favorite of poets—but it remained for a diamond syndicate to introduce Virgin Diamonds.

According to the Virgin Diamond Syndicate, Virgin Diamonds are genuine diamonds, right from the mines, so named to distinguish them from those stones which have previously been on the market.

"Diamond," says Mynherr Van Guilder, "like people, have 'pasts.' Once a stone comes from the mines, it goes on through the ages accumulating a reputation.

"Because of their value, ere diamonds are long on the market, they usually figure in scandals of one sort or another. Eventually they find their way to 'fences' and pawnshops. Soon they are again in legitimate jewelry channels.

"So much sentiment is attached to engagements, weddings, birthdays, Christmas and those other gift occasions when diamonds are given, that most people naturally prefer a diamond of known origin, a stone that never before—has been worn. Sentimental, of course, but who of us would care to give a loved one a second-hand gift with an unsavory past? It was to fill this demand that the Virgin Diamond Syndicate was organized some years ago and the phrase "Virgin Diamond" was coined. Only selected rough, direct from the mines, is used. It goes, from the skilled hands of the cutter, to Authorized Virgin Diamond Dealers all over the country—and from them to you, the first, after thousands of years, to own and to wear this precious gem.

Mrs. Kate Endlich, well known Jeweler of this village, have been selected as local representatives of the Syndicate.

Began a Big Industry

The shoe industry of this country was begun in 1629 by Thomas Beard, who came over on the Mayflower on its third voyage and brought hides for making shoes. Seven years later Philip Kertland, of Buckinghamshire, began making shoes in Lynn, Mass. Since that date the state of Massachusetts has come to lead the world in the manufacture of boots and shoes.
