EISENTRAUT-DEINER WEDDING A wedding of keen interest was solemnized at the Zion Evangelical parsonage at Batavia last Wednesday afternoon at 5:39 o'clock, when Miss Lavern Ethel Eisentraut, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Eisentraut of the town of Farmington, became the bride of Harold Deiner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Deiner of Batavia. The ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Wm. Abe. The bride was attended by her sister Arline Eisentraut, as matron of honor and the groom by his brother Harvey Deiner as groomsman. The bride was beautifully attired in a dress of egg-shell colored satin, ankle length with slippers to match, her long tulle veil was caught in place with rhinestones and orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and white mums. The matron of honor was attired in a dress of pale blue taffeta with an over drape of Spanish lace and slippers to watch and carried a mixed bouquet of chrysanthemums and roses. Immediately after the ceremony the wedding party drove to the bride's home where a seven o'clock dinner was served to immediate relatives. The home was beautifully decorated in white and yellow crepe paper. The groom is a graduate of the dairy school at Madison and is employed as cheese maker at the Orchard Grave factory, where the newly weds will be at home to their friends after January 1st.

KRUEGER-GILBOY WEDDING Our Lady of Angel's church in Arm strong was the scene of a pretty wedding at seven a. m., Thanksgiving day, when Miss Jillie Marie Kraeger daughter of Mrs. Emelia Krueger of Dundee was united in marriage to Marion P. Gilboy also of Dundee. Rev. Francis Finnegan performed the cerenony at the parsonage. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Ceorge friends at Dundee where the groom is

FREE CHEST CLINIC AT ZART-FORD

The free chest clinic for Washington county will be conducted by the December 5.

The Washington county board is cooperating with the W. A. T. A. in holding this clinic which provides Washington county citizens with a fine opportunity to check up on their physical condition.

Free examinations of the lungs, heart, nose, mouth and throat will be made. Children under six years of age will not be examined unless they have had intimate contact with some one having tuberculosis, and children under 16 years of age must be accompanied by an adult.

No treatment will be given at the clinic. All persons requiring treatment or further medical advice will be eferred to their family physician.

The W. A. T. A. clinics are made possible through the annual sale of enny tuberculosis Christmas seals.

Oconto--Kiwanians have urged the common council to adopt a resolution requiring regular milk inspection in the city. Other local groups have joine In urging such action, following disclosure by the school board of results secured in a surprise test by the state. No milk was found clean and only three dairies were fair. Dr. R. L. Frisbie, deputy state health inspector, declared the situation was dangerous.

Madison-Births in Wisconsin in 1929 fell below those of any year since 1920, & was announced by the bureau of vita! statistics, state board of health. The 1929 total stood at 55,593, while in 1921, when the population of the state was close to 300,000 less than it is at present, the births reached 62,090. Increasing intensity of the economic struggle is the explanation offered for the downward trend. Of the 585,103 Wisconsin births registered during the last decade the boys outnumbered the girls by 16,943.

Appleton-A. G. Meating, Outagamie county superintendent of schools, who planned an educational pilgrimage to Europe next summer for the rural school teachers of his county, has been swamped with 956 applications. Most are from teachers in 192 Wisconsin communities but there are also applications from 11 other states and the District of Columbia. Twenty teachers from Chicago want to make the trip. The tour, which will cost $249 complete, will last 34 days.

Madison-Actions to oust Theodore Dammann, secretary of state, and John Reynolds, attorney general, have been definitely abandoned, it was learned here from Randolph R. Conners, Madison attorney. Mr. Conners prompted the move against Dammann, Reynolds and Lieut. Gov. Henry Huber by filing a petition for the appointment of speclal state's counsel with Gov. Walter Kohler, Gov. Kohler complied with the request, but the actions never reached the courts. The Conners petition was filed in the belief that the three progressive-republican state officers had violated the corrupt practices act in the 1928 campaign.

Geneva. - Germany's demand for military parity with the victorious allies was turned down at the League of Nations preparatory disarmament conference, over the violent protest of Count von Bernstorff, the Berlin delegate. By its action the commission went on record that the Versailles treaty must stand. The session was thrown into an uproar after Rene Massigli of France proposed an amendment that any deision concerning the limitation and reduction of armaments adopted at the League's international disarmament conference in 1932 would not release the defeated nations from the strict terms of the Paris peace treaties. M. Massigli aimed directly at perpetuating the Versailles military clauses, which stripped Germany of a navy and aviation force and which allows her an army of 100,000 men without artillery and tanks. Seconding the Paris delegate, Lord

Cecil of England turned the stipulation to cover the Washington and London naval treaties by saving: "Great Britain cannot accept any one interfering with or diminishing the scope of these accords.' Count von Bernstorff denounced the conference in even more scathing terms than those recently used by Maxim Litvinov of Russia.

"We should take stock of the deplorable results of the year's work," he cried. "Perhaps there are certain delegations among us which believe they can offer Germany a project which, instead of leading to real disarmament, merely serves to veil the real status of land armaments and. what is worse, to augment them and at the same time force my government to renew her signature to the disarmament clauses of the Versailles

"I pray you gentlemen to abandon such illusions. You all know the conditions Germany believes indispensable to enable the convention to execute the obligations of other governments toward a disarmed Germany, Germany can only recognize a disarmament convention which brings a just solution and takes account of the security of all the states. Germany will judge the value of the disarmament convention by examining how it realizes the principle of parity and se-

The delegates of the 31 nations anxiously awaited the words of American Ambassador Hugh R. Gibson as he arose to present America's attitude toward the treaty which the Washington senate rejected.

"The United States signed the naval treaties of Washington and London and will not permit them being placed into the discussion," the American delegate declared, omitting any men-

Washington.-An accurate index of the number of workers actually jobless throughout the country at present was promised as the probable result of the unemployment survey to be made December 8 at the request of Col. Arthur Woods, head of President Hoover's emergency committee for employment, by a prominent life insurance company.

The information gathered is expected to be of great value, not only to Colonel Woods' organization, but also to members of congress, who will be called upon to give the unemployment situation a great deal of attention. It was explained that the survey would be made by the company's field. organization in the course of the regular calls they make at the homes of industrial policyholders in about forty widely distributed key cities. On two occasions in the past the company has made a similar survey of the employment situation for the bureau of oor statistics and the result! ple" has proved so accurate that use of the same method has been found advisable in the present situation.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, meanwhile, issued a statement attacking the unemployment problem from a different angle, denouncing as "public enemies" the employers who are taking advantage of economic and industrial stress to lower living standards through forced reductions of wages.

"The wrongs which they are perpetrating are against the public," Mr. Green said, "and serve to undermine our national economic structure at a time when the leaders in government and public-spirited people are striving to maintain wage standards so that we can facilitate and hasten a return to normal conditions.

"These men, exploiting the economic necessity of unemployed working people, force them, in their hour of greatest need, to accept lower wages. The employers to whom I refer are found in the textile industry, the bituminous coal industry, the boot and shoe industry and in some other miscellaneous manufacturing enterprises."

Congressional Support Assured; to Get More Money.

Washington.-Strong congressional support for continuance of the federal farm board's wheat buying policy was disclosed at the end of a two-day conference on the grain situation and agricultural legislation conducted by members of the senate committee on agriculture with Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture; Alexander Legge, chairman of the farm board, and leaders of farm organizations.

It was made clear that the board has the backing of the farm organizations and the senate committee in its wheat purchasing. Further, it was predicted by Senator Charles L. Mc-Nary, chairman of that committee, that congress this winter would appropriate $250,000,000 for the board's use instead of the $150,000,000 which the budget bureau will recommend. "What say, fellers, we buck up and have a party of our own? He can't help things," she nodded towards the driver, "He's done all the work and had the worry and now all he gets handed to him is a bunch of growls. Come on, folks! We're safe and warm. Nothing can hurt us. We'll get help in the morning."

The old lady's wrinkles crinkled up in laughter as she fumbled in her shabby gladstone bag. The fourteenyear-old boy came out of his grumps and offered to do anything from singing a song to pushing the bus-a suggestion which was greeted by a roar of laughter from the driver. "We ought to have a tree," mused the girl aloud. "We can't do a thing without a tree." "Hey, I got an idea," called a voice. A man shot out of a seat and shook door, driver . . . I'll be back in a couple of minutes." A blast of cold air, and the man slipped out. He came back presently with a small ragged bush.

"Found it here by the roadside. Gee! . . some little blizzard going on!" He shed his coat. He asked for string. Bundles were untied and the cord offered. plight; she was triumphant because it was no worse; and she was courteous according to the old hospitable ethics of her class in thus giving her guests the assurance that there was still plenty for all. It was a characteristic speech. As for the complaint in it, all the landowners had acquired the habit of speaking like children or servants conscious of injustice and abuse; and back of it all was a sense of impending scarcity, even with all their supplies on hand. If the Nile could think, it, too, would complain on becoming conscious of the fact that the rainfall in Abyssinia and the lake region had permanently ceased, and that when the water already coming downstream should fail there would be no more-and no more Nie.

Why should Mrs. Krassin refrain from complaining at a similar catastrophe? She had been a Vaturlin; and all the Volga valley knows that the Vaturlin family have been great people since the Tartar invasions. By birth they were of the higher nobility-some members of this and other old families maintained among themselves that they were better born than any of the royal family.

They had always controlled things through their ownership of lands, and their powerful organization. Their men had always presided at the local military mobilizations. They had controlled a majority of votes in the zemstvo, and held many honorable offices, serving always without salary.

They were conscious of having deroted themselves to the state, of having made sacrifices, of having rendered valuable service and duty to the scheme of things.

Variations of the different types of ome building designs are always interesting for they demonstrate that individuality of treatment brings most happy results. This is shown in the home reproduced herewith. This is a variation of the Dutch colonial type of architecture. But by the design of the roof over the porch and extending it up to the eaves, the architect has taken away the plain effect of the Dutch colonial and substituted a grace ful break in the otherwise straight est spot in the house and is an ideal location for a playroom for children or a recreation-room for adults. Clever householders are found taking to the cellars, even when there is no danger of cyclones or thunderstorms. Architects who are designing new houses are reckoning with the room built below stairs, and those who are making over old houses are devising means whereby they may evolve at least one attractive basement room besides the laundry. It is quite possible to decorate the necessary beams and supports, and it is also within a possibility to have small windows fixed attractively, and then there may be any number of electric light plugs. Often the chimney is such as to make a fireplace an accomplished fact, and that is a great asset, especially a room fixed downstairs for billiards.

The house entrance may be the one that many basements have, but it may be beautified by having an iron handrail, and it is also a good plan to cover each step with a protector to avoid accidents by icy weather. The floor covering may be just plain (what is called granite) linoleum, or it may be of tile laid in mortar, or the cement floor itself may do with a few furnishings. Carpets of many inexpensive varieties may be used. The expert contractor knows many tricks that can be used in finishing the floor.

If the floor is wood and expense is an item, use the floor as it is. If you have any old carpets or ancient clothes that are too badly worn for use by you or the Salvation Army, have rugs made from them. The cost is small and the covering will be

There is much wear and tear saved on all parts of the upper quarters and stories when the basement is turned into livable quarters, and with the installation of modern heating apparatus, even in the oldest houses much dirt is eliminated. Concrete or stone walls in the base-

Healthful Fad Saves

Makers of Home Doors Door manufacturing, an industry

seemingly threatened by an architectural fad, has been saved by a health fad, according to H. Y. Stillwell, executive secretary of the National Door Manufacturing association. "When they started building these new-fangled homes and apartments without any interior doors we thought the door industry was going to be seriously harmed," Stillwell said. "Spanish arches, oriental arches, French arches, the architects went arch-crazy." Mr. Stillwell admitted that he liked arches personally, but decried them as a menace to the door industry. "But we have been saved," he continued. "Just as this arch fad was beginning to be felt throughout the industry, the sunshine for health fad saved us. Almost overnight home owners demanded more sunshine. Sunshine demands windows, sun parlors and walls of glass.

"Fortunately the door manufacturers also make windows. Houses may be built without interior doors, but as long as the demand for windows, solariums and French doors has been increased the manufacturers of doors -and windows-are content."

Homes need never again be built alike. Like jewelry, clothing, iceboxes, typewriters and many similar articles, color is being injected into homes so that they may reflect originality, beauty and good design as never before. Especially through developments in face brick manufacture in recent years, each home owner's desire for individuality and charm in his house is being met in an ever-increasing variety of colors and greater numbers of attractive textures now available.

Chicken Croquettes. - Make one cupful of thick white sauce, using chicken stock with milk or cream. Take two cupfuls of minced chicken, one-half teaspoonful each of salt, celery salt and onion salt and one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika. Mix all the ingredients, cool, then form into small croquettes, cone or cylinder shaped. Roll in beaten egg to which two tablespoonfuls of water have been added, then in crumbs and set away to chill. Fry in hot fat and serve with mushroom sauce.

Heart Cakes .- Make a cake batter, baking it in a shallow pan. Take onehalf cupful of shortening, one cupful gestion of a balcony outside the bedof sugar well creamed, flavoring to taste, two-thirds of a cupful of milk and two cupfuls of pastry flour sifted with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix well and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. Bake in a moderate oven. Cut when cool into heart shapes and cover the entire cake with pink frosting.

To make the frosting use four tablespoonfuls of hot cream, two tablespoonfuls of butter and one and twothirds cupfuls of confectioner's sugar. Mix the cream, butter, salt and flavoring, add a little red coloring and the sugar a little at a time, beating well. Arrange each cake on a paper doily and insert darts of gold paper.

(@. 1930, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

F THERE ever had been any doubts in the mind of Al Koken as to why the slim flower girl named Dot Feverill had married him, he was not entitled to them.

Dot herself, although too young to realize much of her own psychology. had never treated him with any more than the affectionate solicitude of the very young toward one who is considerably older and benign.

When Dot Feverill was twenty-one, as lovely as a jonquil, and with a voice that promised to be an operatic one, she developed a spot on her lung. There was nothing of the conventional "angel" about Al Koken. He was a fat, middle-aged stock broker, who had come to know Dot through a friend of his, a business manager of one of the largest operatic companies in America. Her case was pathetic, her beauty appealing, and her plight appalling.

It was Koken's money that sent her to Arizona for two years; it was the pudgy little hand of the fat old bachelor that wrote out the generous monthly checks.

Dot's recovery was only partial. Her condition responded to the high, clean western air. Her health did improve greatly and the old beauty flowed back into her face. But at the end of two years, when she returned to New York to resume her work, the sad truth revealed itself that there were only certain climates where Dot could thrive. The old lung condition began to reassert itself; she began to wilt again.

Humbly, reverently, secretly and deeply in love was Al Koken. It is doubtful, had the return of Dot to a state of health been a permanent one, that this deep-rooted love of Al for Dot would ever have found voice. He was a timid soul, kindly, naive to a degree that was incredible.

For a man-of-the-world, at least ofthe-world to the extent that a successful broker on Wall Street is bound to be, he was as uncomplex as a child in certain of the ways in which you expect the average man to be versed. Al Koken had attained his bachelorhood (he was fifty-six when he met Dot) without more than a half dozen women having crossed his path, an't those half dozen casually. There are more men like that in the world than we realize, chiefly because their stories are too eventless to project themselves.

The quality of gratitude that Dot Feverill gave Al Koken transcended even her own understanding. From her teen, life had been a precarious performance for her. Hers had been the perilous and somewhat melodramatic position of a really beautiful girl, without parents, obliged at an early age to get out on her own. The gift of a voice asserting itself had not made her position any easier. So many things could have happened to Dot which did not, chiefly because when she was barely in her twenties a man of the caliber of Al Koken had providentially crossed her path.

How it came about, after her return to the east from Arizona, and the subsequent relapse into ill health, that Al Koken was finally to find the courage to ask her to marry him was never clear in his own mind.

She seemed so beyond his reach: she seemed so out of his ken. From the first day he had clamped eves upon her, he had realized that, and had felt humbly grateful for his capacity to serve her as a friend. In any event, the pathos of it gave

Al Koken the courage, and into the safe retreat of this kind man's sheltering arms there crept gratefully the wounded and the frightened Dot. The marriage that resulted was one of those built on passionate adoration on one side and grateful, sweet humility on the other. The happiest day in Al Koken's life was when he closed his affairs in the East, pocketed a large nest-egg of the money he had earned and saved throughout the long years of his bachelorhood, and turned his face, with the frail, lovely one of his bride, toward the more benign climate of southern California. As Al Koken used to say to himself in the period that followed, those precious first years of his marriage contained more happiness than any one man had a right to expect of a life-time. The Al Kokens took up their abode in what was literally a castle in the air; a luxurious Spanish villa that hung from a mountainside that faced the placidity of the Pacific

And what happened subsequently was understandable to him, because The famous Greek chapel and a corin the depth of his happiness he was | ner of the stockade were heavily built still capable of a strange wisdom; of enduring redwood.

the wisdom of realizing the inevitability of what was to come. It was not that the lovely Dot loved him less, or that her gratefulness to him as her "Daddy" ever wavered. The sentiment which was inscribed in her sweet. scrawling hand on a photograph of herself that hung in his room, "To my darling Daddy from a grateful Dot," was none the less sincere because one day, one inevitable day, Dot was to answer the call of youth to

of a dipper made of a gourd. The subsequent thing that happened was as natural as the sunset dipping into the Pacific or the beautiful soaring of seagulls about the castle-in-theair, or the sound of Dot's laughter before it became tinged with the pain and the ecstasy of what was happening to her. Al, tied into a knot inside of himself with the pain of it, was conscious of the setting of the sun of his dream almost before the first shadows had come to assert themselves; Al knew that Dot and the young engineer were drifting and carrying with them his happiness, almost before they knew it themselves.

And the heartbreaking part of it was that she fought so against it, struggled with her little strength; and yet from the first she was helpless. One who knows inner tragedy might surmise with what complete heartbreak, what devastating wretchedness, Dot might have carried on her part of the compact with 11, had it not been for the delicate and subtle wisdom of the fat little man.

He saw it coming, and he braced himself; more than that, it was his initiative that was finally to bring about the collapse of his marriage. He made easy for these two young people that which without his assistance would have been intolerably difficult. He placed their happiness in their hands. He did the unthinkable, he stepped out of his paradise that another might step in.

And yet in his heart, Al Koken's shrewdness again asserted itself. He knew that in reality, whether he remained in it or out of it, actually his paradise was finished. His song was sung.

In the young engineer Dot had met her mate and had responded to the mysterious call.

Al Koken lives by himself in a small bungalow down near the sound of the sea. Dot, married to the young engineer, lives in another castle-in-the air that overhangs another crag of another mountainside.

Her adoration of Al Koken is something that has never diminished, but on the contrary has increased. Her picture still hangs on his walls, "To my darling Daddy from a grateful Dot." The quality of her happiness with the young engineer is impeccable, There is but one fly in their ointment. As the babies come and the responsibilities grow, financial pinch is upon Sometimes Al wonders to himself why he does not settle upon the young pair a substantial life income, but in his heart he knows why. Every so often, full of sweet distress at her mission, Dot comes down to the little bungalow by the sea secretly, asking her incomparable friend for the largesse of a loan to tide them over a bad spot in their finances.

Al waits for these occasions a little relentlessly. To him, there is nothing in the world left to give him happiness but the sound of her voice appealing to him, "Dear Daddy-please-will you help us just this once more-"

Summer Camps Prove Value The organized summer camp had its beginning about 50 years ago. In 1880 Ernest Balch established a camp for boys on Lake Asquam in New Hampshire. Shortly afterward other camps were established, and the movement began to grow rapidly. The health, educational and recreational values of summer camps for boys had become so well organized by 1900 that a similar movement for camps for girls was Frank Chaney raises berries and grapes in his orchard. Birds ravished his plants and trees until he manufactured a horrible looking reptile which he painted in gaudy colors and coiled about a bush that was being attacked by the visitors. The birds were frightened away and he chopped up an entire section of rubber hose into many short pieces which he painted as he did the first and scattered them about his fields. The result is that he harvested a very good crop of fruit without the usual interference or help from his bird friends.

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear husband and father, Carl Krewald, who passed away one year ago, December 3rd, 1930:

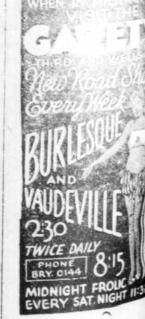

Oh, so often, our thoughts do wander, to a grave, not far away Its here we laid our dear husband and father,

Just one year ago today. Sad and sudden was the call; He was so dearly loved by all.

His chair is vacant in our home, His voice is but a dream, We miss his kind and willing hand, He must come home it seems We miss his fond and earnest care, T'is true, he is missed everywhere.

But God is almighty, it was His will, Tho' in our hearts, he lingers still. We hope to meet some day, On the golden shore, up yonder, Where the Lord, our sheperd, reigns, On high, in beautiful splendor. Sadly missed by Mrs. Carl Krewald
