NIEMAN FOX FARM IN MICHI-GAN HAS FIRE LOSS

Fire Sunday night destroyed the slaughter house, refrigerating plant, machinery and several carloads of fire fighting equipment being available to extinguish it. So sensational was the blaze that farmers as far as ten miles away were attracted to it. They aided with bucket brigades. The company had sold more than $500,000 worth of pells this fall, and was therefore short on animals. Only 350 pair of foxes were on the farm, and they were unhurt, being in their outlying exercise pens. The company announceed Monday that the entire set of buildings will be reconstructed and enlarged to care for 10,000 foxes, the Wisconsin farms of the same company sending their foxes to the Hermansville "ranch." The farm is one owned by the John F. Nieman interests.-Cedarburg News.

Gone by now were such of those graces which might have existed in the younger woman, Grandmother ruled her children, sons-in-law, daughters-in-law, grandchildren and great grandchildren with a high, hard hand.

She lived in a house with two of her married children and their famllies. Within a half-mile of the great gaunt red brick homestead where she had borne her family, there lived the remainder of her progeny. Clustered around the mother hen, as it were. Dominated by her grip, was the family. Strange thing, there was almost in the attitude of this woman toward her children that of the proverbial "golddigger," Fortunately, they were generous, easy lot with what grandmother called their father's "spending streak." She had lived through lean and terrifying years due to their father's improvident ways. There were times when the homestead had tottered on the brink of foreclosure and plans for her children, due to untimely and madcap investments, had been in Jeopardy.

Grandmother knew the dangers of that kind of improvidence and prob ably decided that it was just as well to let her children offer gold to her as to spend it in their more promiscuous ways.

And yet there were times when it did seem that greed and avarice came out over the hooked old face of this sly old woman. Even from her young grandsons she demanded the homage of so little as a weekly one or two dollar bill. Her son Wallace, the most successful member of her family, striking, prince-like fellow who had made a fortune in a patent medicine, used laughingly to refer to her as the "pirate-parrot." She looked like parrot, and, laughingly, the family conceded that she acted like a pirate.

Grandmother. Wallace had committed the unspeakable. Incredible as it might seem, the shades of the prison house were about to cast their ominous reflection around this impeccable family. Handcuffs hovered over the wrists of Wallace. He had defaulted and was about to abscond. It was a grim and panic-stricken meeting of a gay clan.

The old woman in her high-backed chair presided like some menacing Fury. Bitter, indicting words rattled off the thin ridge of her lips. She took occasion to scourge, not only the stricken figure of her son, seated there before her in the limp attitude of defeat, but every member of the family.

Wastrels, spendthrifts, irresponsibles, cheats. Self-satiation had been their undoing. Lack of moral responsibility, selfishness, pretense, extravagance. Her scorn of them crackled from her old lips. And all the while her son, defeated sat before her, with his head seeming to drop down into the slot of his shoulders and his horror of the punishment of the law that was going to descend upon him creasing his face and aging him.

It was then that the Grandmother reached out her claw-like hand and touched his head lightly. It was the first gesture of affection her children had seen from her in years; a curious, hesitant, embarrassed gesture that somehow was painful. It was then that the Grandmother, also, from boxes and drawers that she ordered servants to bring to her, began to tik upon the old family dining table the riches of her resources. Pearls. The square diamond ring. The thousanddollar bill from Wallace, sapphire and dlamond earrings, pendants, bracelets, more jewels and expensive decorations of every conceivable type. And from one drawer alone, bank notes, piles of them, that had the quality of fluttering out like live fingers unfold-

The table top might have been strewn with the yield of a pirate's chest. Thousands and tens of thousands lay in bulk there.

Automobile Casualties Totaled 32,500 in 1930

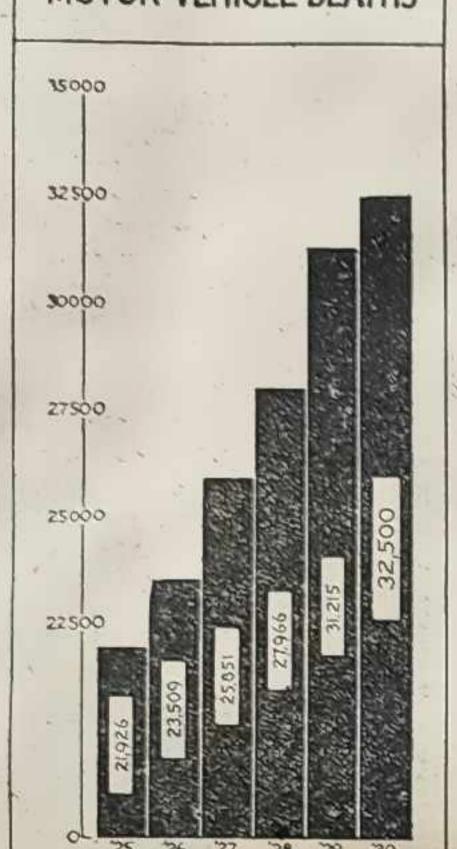

The national motor vehicle "death | curve" continues upward with a new states with large city populations, lo-"high" registered for 1930.

During the past year 32,500 automobile deaths occurred, a 4 per cent Increase over the 1929 record of 31,-215 lives. Reports from 33 states and the District of Columbia, representing 75 per cent of the population, form the basis of the National Safety council's estimate, which has just been announced. This 4 per cent increase occurred in spite of the fact that there was less than 1 per cent increase in motor vehicle registrations during the Motor vehicle deaths increased 48.1 per cent in Iowa during 1930. In decided contrast Rhole Island enjoyed a reduction of 20.1 per cent-during the year while Washington, D. C., cut its motor vehicle deaths 28 per cent.

Ten states with drivers' license laws showed an average decrease of 1.5 per cent. These states are New Hamp-

> The new figure of 32,500 deaths is the highest in history and yet the 4 per cent increase which it represents is really the lowest annual percentage increase since the reckless driver first became a safety problem.

The increase in 1929 was 12 per cent. In 1928 it was 8 per cent over the previous year. Increases since 1906 when the first motor vehicle records were kept, very often ran from 25 to 50 per cent. It is interesting to note that there were only 416 auto casualties in 1906.

In its analysis of the various state records for 1930 the council finds that the large rural populations had by far the worst experience. Sixteen states, predominantly rural, reported 14 per cent more fatalities last year than in 1929. In another group where city and farm populations were approximately equal, a 7 per cent increase was reported. Practically all of these states as well as those in the predominantly rural group are located in the southern and western sections of the country.

The best reductions were made by cated principally along the North Atlantic coast. Railway grade crossing deaths showed big reductions in 1930. In the first nine months of the year there was an 18 per cent drop from the corresponding period of 1929. The pedestrian also fared a little better in 1930 than during the previous year when fully 50 per cent of the victims were struck while on foot.

Collisions of two motor vehicles or of motor vehicles with fixed objects continued to exhibit the worst record during 1930.

An examination of the percentage increases and decreases by states reveals some very interesting data:

An Interview With CHICK EVANS Former American Open and Amateur Golf Champion

figure in golfdom. He has won hundreds of minor titles and has one of the greatest colection of trophies of any man in the world. Eight times he won the Western Amateur championship. Twice he has been national amateur champion with the national open crown in the same year that he first won the amateur title. He has competed in England and other foreign countries, and has undoubtedly played on more American links than any man living.

Now he is still to be figured in tournament play as "one of those who must be beaten." But the events of 1916 stand as the acme of his accomplishments.

He came along that year in great form and swept all competition aside as he marched toward the amateur title, having already annexed the open. In the final he met that sterling player, Robert A. Gardner, of Chicago, who had held the title in the past. Evans was the favorite in this battle, but every one knew that he would be called upon for a display of his

Gardner had 1916 when he won shown magnificent play in beating Jones and in reaching the finals, But Evans was almost invincible and soon assumed a lead.

The play for the title was at Merion Cricket club, where the championship was settled in 1924. A great gallery followed the match breathless with excitement. The crowd was well behaved and quiet through most of the play, but when on the fourteenth hole a long putt dropped for Chick, a thousand voices yelled:

"The double crown for Evans." And that cry from the thousands banked about the fourteenth green gave Chick his greatest thrill. Of this moment he says:

"Whatever I had done in golf up to this time seemed small in comparison, and I will never forget the thrill which came to me as I holed that last putt, for with the sinking of the ball came a roar from the crowd, saying, 'the double crown for Evans.' The voices seemed as clear as a bell despite all the weariness of mind and body following the bard final play.

"I realized then that the highest in golf had come to me. Nothing one could do thereafter could exceed what I had so unexpectedly done that year. To be sure there was an infinitesimal chance of a man winning both our nationals and the British as well.

"Whatever happens to me hereafter, I feel that luck was with me for that

McCormick-Deering 10-20 TRACTOR

an

HE McCormick-Deering 10-20 Tractor is a power plant for the moderate-size farm, designed to give one man control of all farm operations. It saves a lot on costly labor charges throughout the year; it gets work done faster: it reduces expenses all along the line.

The 4-cylinder, valve-in-head engine of the 10-20 produces abundant power that can be extensively applied through the drawbar, belt, or power take-off. A reserve of power is developed to meet emergencies that are bound to arise.

See us now about the powerful McCormick-Deering 10-20. Put one on your own farm and realize on new opportunities. We also have the McCormick-Deering 15-30 and Farmall Tractors.

Nobody Loves a Policeman.

That's an old saying but it isn't true any more. At least, it hasn't been true since F. O. Alexander added "Finney of the Force" to the list of famous comic strip characters. For "Finney", with his twinkling humor and his shrewd comment on people and the common everyday events of life, is a lovable character, as thousands of newspaper readers who have followed him through his various adventures will testify. "Finney of the Force" is a regular feature in this newspaper with whom our subscribers are acquainted, and all enjoy him. Then tell your friends abouthim, for they will enjoy him as much as you do.

Members of the legislature, 55 in trouser belt. number, visited the state prison at Waupun on Feb. 27 to study conditions there. The inspection trip is the first made by such a large delegation of the legislature in many years. The visitors were first taken into the dining hall while the prisoners were eating. Visits were then made to the various cellhouses, the hospital, the automobile tag factory, the shoe and stocking factories, the twine plant and brush department, the powerhouse, the creamery and cheese factory, the bakery, kitchens and auditoriums.

A bill setting the automobile speed limit at 50 miles per hour on highways outside of cities, towns and villages in Wisconsin has been passed by the senate, 17 to 14, and sent to the assembly for action. The original speed limit bill introduced by Senator White, Winneconne, would have put 45 miles per hour as the top speed, but this was amended to raise the speed to 50 miles. The automobile code passed by the last legislature had no speed limit on high-* * * Assemblyman John Grobschmidt, Mil waukee, has won his fight against blue laws, the assembly voting 60 to 26 in favor of his bill permitting the operation of drug stores, theaters, soda fountains, restaurants, grocery stores and places of amusement or recreation on Sundays. A similar repeal bill was . killed by the senate two years ago.

Imposition of a $10 fine on persons failing to register motor vehicles was approved by the assembly when it passed unanimously the bill of Assemblyman Callahan, Montello, .

The request of the state supreme court for statutory definition of firearms received assembly momentum as the lower house passed the Young bill, which says a dangerous weapon is "any firearm whether loaded or unloaded." The bill was introduced after a recent supreme court decision, which included the request for a definition. The matter of distinguishing between loaded and unloaded firearms had arisen in numerous cases.

Prospects for a gasoline tax of cents per gallon were increased when the Cashman bill passed the senate by a vote of 22 to 10. Sponsors of the measure predict that the assembly will concur by a majority of at least 40

The bill increases the tax from 2 to 4 cents, provides for repeal of the personal property tax on automobiles and for the elimination of a large number of grade crossings. The latter feature is planned to relieve unemployment.

Party lines were largely disregarded In the senate vote, progressives, conservatives and socialists supporting the measure. Nine of the ten opposing votes, however, were conservative.

Investigation of the Wisconsin highway commission will be made by a committee of five legislators headed by Assemblyman D. M. Langve of Westby. Other members of the investigating group appointed by Speaker Perry under authorization of a resolution introduced by Langve are Assemblyman Robert J. Keller, Sauk City; J. W. Carow, Ladysmith, E. J. of Way in the House.

Washington. - President Hoover's disapproval of the proposed bonus bill now is in the hands of congress, the long predicted veto having been submitted and it is predicted the measure will be promptly repassed.

Speaker Longworth determined to give consideration of the veto right of way over other pending matters so the house could register without loss of time its determination to pass the legislation regardless.

If the expected overwhelming majority develops, the bill will be sent directly to the senate, which in turn must line up two-thirds of its membership to override the President's will.

House consideration was slated first as the bill, permitting veterans to borrow up to 50 per cent of the face value of their compensation certificates, originated there.

The house recently passed the bill, estimated to cost the government $750,000,000 or more, by 363 to 39. The senate a few days later brushed administration opposition aside with a vote of 72 to 12.

Although a few votes may be gained by the administration as a result of the veto message, proponents were confident this swing would not affect the outcome. The margin above the twothirds was too great.

Validity of Eighteenth Amendment Promptly Sustained.

Washington,-Validity of the Eighteenth amendment was sustained by the Supreme court of the United States.

The decision of Judge William Clark of Newark, N. J., the young federal jurist who held that the amendment should have been ratified by state legislatures, was reversed. "The United States relies upon the "Appellees reply that all these save the Eighteenth dealt solely with governmental means and machinery rather than with the rights of the individual citizen. But we think that several amendments touch rights of the citi zens, notably the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, and Nineteenth, and in view of this weight is to be given to the fact that these were adopted by the method now attacked. When the average family begin to plan to build a new home, every member has some idea that he or she would like to see incorporated in the house. In some other home, perhaps, such a feature as appealed to the individual was found and gave rise to the thought that when or if he was to build he would have this feature in his home. It is this desire that makes so many homes entirely different from others.

There is danger, however, in carrying this idea too far. Odd features either in the exterior or interior of a house may not appeal to some one else, and, if the necessity arises, may prevent the sale of the home. Comfort and convenience may be secured for the average family by following the plans that have been found most suitable to the average family. And when this is done it is not difficult to dispose of the place if it is desirable to do so.

One type of house that appeals to the greatest number of persons is the story-and-a-half building, such as is shown in the accompanying Illustration. Here is a house of the size and shape that appeals. While it looks large from the outside, it is not, as it contains only six rooms, aside from the inclosed breakfast porch at the rear of the first floor. It contains three good rooms downstairs-living and dining rooms and kitchen-and three bedrooms and the bathroom on the second floor. This number of rooms will accommodate nicely the average family.

In exterior appearance it is difficult to find a more attractive house than the one shown. The narrow gables at the end, the steep dormer window set n it at the front and the extension of the roof lines to form the porch covering all combine to give this house a graceful, homelike appearance. This exterior appearance is greatly enhanced by the brick foundation and piers of the porch and the wide brick fireplace chimney in the end wall. The porch is inviting in summer, while the chimney gives rise to thoughts of a comfortable, open fire in the winter

Without glancing at the document, commanded her to lay it on the Ivan; and then he looked both women iver again with absorbed attention. Something in the affair seemed to command his interest, and even amused him. Evidently he was solving some riddle, as he sat looking at them in that silent embarrassing war of his, glancing oftener and oftener at Musia as the expression of his eyes binted that the riddle was clearing up. and that he had found the solution in the young girl's presence. And some thing like hate and disgust began to characterize his scruting of Mrs. Krassin; a little cynical smile curled

"Who in this young lady?" Loris shot the question at Mrs. Krassin like a crossexaminer. "My daughter," replied Mrs. Kras-

"Yourself-body and woul!" exelaimed Loris, with a bitter and fronte smile "And," insinuatingly, "I suppose this young lady would be equally bord in the matter-or you for her?"

There was a movement at the door, as if some one were about to enter. toris rose and by gesture as of dismissel brought them to their feet. A soldier came in with a message; and as he crossed the room glanced sharpty at the group—the two women stand-Ing before the commissar, drooping as from a cutting rebuke, with Mrs. Krassin still helding in her hand the petition.

"I think I understand you, madame. You are calculating on the impression made by the fine form and pretty face of your daughter. You think the Bolshevik commander amountle to such infinences-and you are liberal in your offers, or your suggestions as to carrying out any little arrangement which may be effective. Isn't that so? And I am sure you have something in reserve in your reticule, too-from the manner in which you hold it. You certainly adjust yourself admirably to a difficult situation, and neglect nothdng, dear lady!"

The inconceivable brutality of this speech was such that for a moment Musia could scarcely believe that she had heard aright. Then as Loris' atvitude forced upon her the certainty that he had made this terrible charge neminst her mother she grew sick and dizzy, with a feeling that her heart and been physically crushed.

She took her mother by the arm and drew her toward the door. Why did she linger after that's Music's indigration rose as she saw her mother seemed not to resent the insult; for Mrs. Erassin resisted the urge toward the door, stood fast in this room in which every moment's lingering was a compromise of honor.

"Come," said Musia, "let us go Last us go!"

But Mrs. Krassin would not yield. She still stood fast. She seemed to thouse for specess some nort of sucress. Loris turned nway and finished with the guard the business upon which he had, ostensibly at least, entered, and all through this space of time Music was, without success, urging her mother to depart.

"I see," said he, "that the son is the favorite child. Or perhaps you have necessed your own standards as to the comparative value of an enforced step out of the path commended Or moralists, if taken by the daughter, with no harm to her life and limb, to move the very life of your non. Such an able argument as yours could not fall to have its effect on the candid mind, Mine is a candid mind! I now feel that I should hear further argument in the matter. But the time which I can give to the subject is unfortunately limited, and your oratory, which, as I have admitted, is able, lacks the merit of brevity. Such appeals as may be made for him in the future must be offered by this fair advocate!" Musia was thrust back into the room by the leering soldier, who, in obedience to a wave of his commander's hand, took Mrs. Erassin out. The long stay of the two women, the fact that the system of espionage which prevalled among the Bolsheviki had revealed the fact that they were seated in earnest conference with Loris, these things sent a ripple of interest along the lines of information that ran like a network of wires through the Bolshevist organization-to Vilinsky, to Petrov, and on even to Lenine and Trotsky. But as for Loris' holding the girl in consultation after her mother was excused, and of making public as he had in his speech in the presence of this soldier the fact that Musia must be the intermediary if he heard more in behalf of Ilya-this was quite a different thing from that long confabulation of the three shut in together. This was quite a natural thing. He who ran might read. Even under the dictatorship of the proletariat, thought the soldier, as he stood guard over Mrs. Erassin on the platform, the officers had certain advantages over the common soldiers.

Mrs. Erassin had been led to a bench, but she did not sit down. She stood like a hypnotized person who remains fixed in the posture in which the dominant mind has left her, her skirts pressed against the edge of the anything to please you. bench, her ear turned toward the car in which she had left her daughter, her eyes staring in blank unregardfulness, her reticule containing her Jewels in one hand, and her petition to the commissar in the other, a dark and mysterious picture of the chaos in humanity wrought by chaos in somety.

Tons of American confections go to every part of the world. From Amer-Ica last year from June, 1929, to June, 1930, eighteen million pounds of candy was shipped. The world is growing conscious of the value of candy.

The scientists of the United States Naval observatory who went to the Pacific Island of Niuafou to see the total eclipse of the sun have proved that lollipops are a valuable asset in gaining the confidence and help, of savage tribes. Peanut Brittle.-One may make candy in her own home; it is not much work nor does it take a great deal of skill to make the pan candies. Take a pound of peanuts, shell, remove the brown husks and roll with a rolling pin until the nuts are like coarse crumbs. - Take one pound of sugar, place in a thick iron or heavy aluminum pan over heat and stir until the sugar is well melted, stirring well from the sides of the pan. Add the nut meats with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, mix well and pour onto a buttered baking sheet.

"That Beats the Dutch" "An American Glossary," by Thornton, gives examples of the use of the expression "That beats the Dutch" as early as 1775, the line "Our cargoes of meat, drink and cloaths beat the Dutch" appearing in a "Revolutionary Song" by Bartlett of that date. In the Philadephia Public Ledger of February 6, 1837, occurs this statement: "That beats the Dutch, saith the proverb; meaning that, as the Dutch beat Old Nick, it is something of an exploit to beat them. Vizetelly and De Bekker's Deskbook of Idioms states that the phrase originated in the days when bitter enmity prevailed between the Dutch and other nations. In this connection, however, it is worthy of notice that most of the expressions that arose out of the struggle between the English and the Dutch in the Seventeenth century were derogatory or derisive; among these are "Dutch courage; to talk double Dutch; Dutch comfort; Dutch con; cert; I'm a Dutchman if I do; Dutch treat; Dutch gold; talk like a Dutch uncle." The saying "That beats the Dutch" is not derogatory and is an American and not an English one, so that it possibly expresses admiration for the fighting qualities of the Dutch in their long struggle with Spain and later with England. Again, as the name "Dutch" is also applied to Germans, it may be a reference to the The wrap which is artfully German mercenary troops of Colonia)
