HIS COMPENSATION

The Story of a Music Master

By FANNIE HURST

LIVING in the machine-age should in some measure have prepared the director for what was coming; hundreds of the more astute had seen it in the offing for years, before it actually happened, and in many instances had run for the cover of kindred professions or occupations.

Klinger, however, had stuck, as the saying goes, like a captain to a sinking ship, until the inundation of "canned music" was something that even his stubborn kind of resistance had to reckon with.

No doubt about it, the day of the theater and moving picture orchestra was gone. A man had not a chance to earn any sort of decent living for himself and family, if he depended upon a profession that had literally died in its tracks.

In vain the perishing vocation fought for its life. An organization was formed, of which Klinger was vice president, to combat, by newspaper and magazine advertising, this demise of an honorable profession. DO NOT PERMIT CANNED MUSIC TO BE SERVED UP TO YOU. THE BEST IS NONE TOO GOOD. PUBLIC DEMAND YOUR RIGHTS!

Of course the public did nothing of the sort, the sound-screen became its own orchestral effect, orchestras died out of the theater, and at fifty-seven, Otto Klinger, for thirty years director of an orchestra in one of the city's largest temples of entertainment, found himself, incredible as it might seem, out of a job.

There was the alternative, desperately clutched by so many of his men, of rushing to the picture studios of California, but even had such an opportunity presented itself, Klinger was not the man to subject his dignity to any such flagellation as that.

Playing on a motion picture lot! Otto Klinger, graduate of a Berlin conservatory of music, one-time concertmeister of a Nurnberg orchestra and now, for thirty years, director of an aggregation of thirty men, going Hollywood, Never!

Fortunately, it was at a time of his life when his family, containing grown sons and daughters, had agreed among themselves it was best for him to retire.

Rearing three girls and three boys on a scale of decent and substantial living had, of course, not enabled Otto to accumulate, but when the catastrophe of the dissolution of his orchestra came along, there were fortunately, three out of his six children who were earning. Firmin and Max, the two elder boys, steady and showing the results of the spartan rearing that had been theirs, were both draughtsmen drawing substantial wage. Mathilde, the third, daughter, a staid, careful, uncoquettish girl, who so far as the modern dapper was concerned, did not exist at all, was confidential secretary to the German consul.

So, all in all, while in the heart of Otto calamity had descended, his family, including his wife, was of an opinion, secret from him, that considering his age and gouty constitution, it was just as well for him to retire.

The Klingers owned their little home on the outskirts of New York. There were only three children left at a school age. Mrs. Klinger, twenty years younger than her husband, and of firm heroic build, was a housewife of impeccable and amazing capacity for economy.

The Klingers could make out all right.

But the effect upon the morale of Klinger was what troubled them. Prepared as the family was for the let-down that inevitably must take place in the somewhat Bismarkian figure of their father, who for thirty years had ruled thirty men, to say nothing of a household, the actual happening was nothing short of appalling.

He became a household tyrant, domineering over the daily routine, interfering in his wife's capable regime, exercising even more discipline with his children.

There came a time, in that little home, when so far as the members of it were concerned, the idea of sending Otto off to a private hospital at some quiet seaside resort actually began to present itself.

That project never took form. The Klingers were too compact a group for that; too grounded in certain rudiments of family solidarity, but it does go to show the extremes to which they were pushed, by the overflow of their father's chagrin into the household.

Then Bertha, the fourth child, hit on a scheme that, while it was to increase the household tyranny in many ways, was nothing short of stroke-of-genius.

Secretly, so that not even his wife or children knew it, there had always smoldered in Otto bitter disappointment that not one of his children had followed in his musical footsteps. They were a practical, sensible lot, youngsters any parent could be proud of, and for that matter could be proud of, and founded in a musical education. But among them, with the exception of Edith, who was too young to reckon with, not one of the girls or boys had exhibited outstanding musical talent.

Bertha's idea, however, was founded on this rather casual musical equipment of the family.

Father must form a family orchestra and they could practice evenings. Mother at the piano, the three boys at the violin, flute and viola respectively, Bertha and Mathilde at the harp and cello and little Edith, who was now eight and taking her first lessons, at the violin.

Well, somehow, the idea caught with Klinger like wildfire, and catching, did some tantalizing things to family life, curtailing the outside activities of the grown boys and girls to such an extent that their souls or their evenings could no longer be called their own.

Bad as was the evening after evening practicing of the group, under the surveillance of Klinger, it was offset by the fact that once more clutched by an interest, something of the old good humor, and normal gentility of the man revived.

Life in the Klinger household was once more livable, as the Klingers put it.

And then there began to develop the aspect of it all that made the idea of Bertha seem to blossom into something that was nothing short of genius.

Time and time again, conducting this little group of his family orchestra, Klinger began to find himself amazed and delighted by the musical precocity of the mite of a girl playing the third violin.

Within two months, trying to keep down within himself the rising hope and the rising excitement that here in this child was talent, he saw the thin little wisp of a girl superseding her delighted first violinist brother, playing in his place.

Six months later, by arrangement made by Klinger, Edith was taken to the conservatory, there to play before the great Eicher, who pronounced her of outstanding and amazing virtuosity.

That busted up the Klinger orchestra, so to speak.

Six hours of each day, Klinger, who has no more time for his family orchestra, interested to his fingertips, tender of her youth, adoring of her talent, teaches his youngest, and plans for her musical future.

Automatic Mixer
 One concrete mixer has an automatic control system operated by photo-electric cells that can be depended on to measure out the different ingredients with unerring precision and dispatch. These cells are built into dial scales in such a way that the pointer of each scale swings between an associate cell and its exciting lamp. Each ingredient is brought to the mixing plant by conveyors that feed into weight hoppers. The charging goes on until the pointers pass through beams of light focused on the electric eyes, when sensitive relays stop the flow. With the eyes on watch, concrete of a uniform grade can be produced regardless of the number of batches made up.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Botanically Speaking
 The out-of-town guest was showing some snapshots of her little granddaughter, and among them was a charming picture of the little girl standing in a bed of tulips, which reached quite above her head. Sonya was a very interested onlooker, and when some one remarked, "Just see! The flowers are taller than the child," Sonya drew up to his full stature, and announced importantly:
 "Well, if they wanted to get flowers taller than I am, they'd have to take hollyhocks!"

Poor Underpinning
 British pirates threw their gin jugs and gambling chips in a sea-level swamp, then built up a city, Belize, which a hurricane, helped by a tidal wave, recently demolished. Says Time: "It would have been better if the city's fathers had thrown in a few more pots and chips, for Belize is only a few inches above sea-level." It might still have been better if they had thrown their "foundations" on higher and drier ground.

Sugar in Amber
 A German scientist has found sugar in pieces of amber, imbedded there when insects, gathering sap or honey were trapped in the sticky resin, which hardened.

Systematic Hunt for Priceless Old Papers

Quit recently a London workman was cutting out a piece of old parchment into segments for making into a lamp shade when he noticed some old and faded writing on the piece he had cut. A close examination revealed the parchment to be a deed of the period of James I. Here was a valuable old document that should have been preserved in a museum being ruthlessly cut up to gratify the passing whim of fashion, and when it had served its purpose to be cast aside on a dust heap, a loss to history and the severing perhaps of a valuable link with the past.

Hundreds of priceless old documents are being cut up in this way, but thanks to that distinguished scholar and antiquarian, Mr. William le Hardy, a public appeal has been made to end this needless sacrifice of historical documents for the sake of a craze. He is asking to be allowed to examine the archives of old-established solicitors' offices in London, where many of these old documents are to be found, in the hopes of discovering deeds that will throw some light on the history of some famous county families. One firm has already given Mr. William le Hardy permission to go through their archives, with the result that many important facts concerning the histories of ancient manors have been revealed.—London Mail.

No More "Old Maids"
 The term "old maid" is obsolete, if not obsolete. There are women who are "old maids" at eighteen and others who do not become so classified before they are forty or fifty. This is a state of mind and not a chronological matter.—Washington Star.

Intricacies of Kinship

Part of Southern Life
 Perhaps one of the most characteristic modes of behavior in the South is the business of kinship, in which particular the southerner surpasses even the New Englander. Howard Mumford Jones writes, in Scribner's Magazine. It sometimes seems to me that everybody in Virginia or South Carolina or Georgia is related to everybody else.

If a marriage takes place, the fact is conversationally recorded; then comment turns at once to the question of the family ramifications involved. If a political appointment is announced, it soon appears that the appointee is cousin to somebody else. The system is so intricate that the tactful northerner, after one or two unhappy blunders, learns to preface any comment on a public character, literary, political, or what not, with the polite hope that the subject's relatives will not misunderstand his remarks.

In a day when the family is supposed to be breaking up, the business of "claiming kin" in the South probably is less patent than it used to be; yet it is one of the most powerful forces in southern life, and one the implications of which, I believe, few southerners realize.

Highest Paid Short Fiction Writer

FANNIE HURST is the highest paid short story writer in the world today. There's a good reason for that. She knows human nature and under the magic of her touch, the people about whom she writes become real people, not mere literary creations. The plots of her stories are based on incidents from real life as it is lived every day by the common people. Such are the stories which are appearing in this newspaper. Be sure to read them and talk to your friends about them, for they like interesting stories, too. And Fannie Hurst's stories are interesting stories.

Nobody Loves a Policeman!

That's an old saying but it isn't true any more. At least, it hasn't been true since F. O. Alexander added "Finney of the Force" to the list of famous comic strip characters. For "Finney", with his twinkling humor and his shrewd comment on people and the common everyday events of life, is a lovable character, as thousands of newspaper readers who have followed him through his various adventures will testify. "Finney of the Force" is a regular feature in this newspaper with whom our subscribers are acquainted, and all enjoy him. Then tell your friends about him, for they will enjoy him as much as you do.

You Don't Need to Pay Out Money for Grinding Feed

A McCormick-Deering Grinder Saves Time and Money for You

YOU can pocket the profits you now pay to have your feed ground, if you put a McCormick-Deering Type B Feed Grinder on your farm. The first cost is reasonable and is absorbed quickly by the saving in money and time. You can grind feed at your own convenience, too.

This type of McCormick-Deering Grinder is especially designed for grinding corn on the cob. It grinds small grains equally well. It is available in 3 sizes—6, 8, and 10-inch grinding plates. Other types available for every grinding purpose.

We'll demonstrate it for you when you come in.

Value in Health Facts

That Are Vital Truths

Health teachers and those engaged in telling health facts to the public should stick to the Grade A facts, advised Dr. Donald B. Armstrong, official of a leading life insurance company at a recent meeting of the American Public Health Association.

"So-called health facts worth telling should be important and should be true, though truth is relative," Doctor Armstrong said.
"Every period has its health myths," he added. "Current ones include 'A Clean Tooth Never Decays' and the relationship of underweight to tuberculosis in the school child."
Some true Grade A health facts mentioned by Doctor Armstrong are certainties as to the cause of infection in some communicable diseases, the value of immunization for prevention of disease, the value of minerals and vitamins in the diet, and the value of sunlight under certain conditions.

More numerous are the Grade B, near facts, which include things that are believed to be true, probably are true, but cannot be proved at present. Examples are the real value of six glasses of water a day, of eight hours' sleep at night, of fresh air for the prevention of colds, of exercise, of a full bath once a week, of teeth brushing, etc. These facts need verification, but telling them to the public probably does some good and little harm.

Doctor Armstrong suggested that the American Public Health Association might have an appraisal committee to study and classify the facts used for educational purposes.—Kansas City Star's Science Service.

The European Workman

Count Karolyi, about to set off on a lecture tour, said in an interview in New York:
"The way Europe works, in comparison with the way America works—well, I'll tell you a story.
"A naturalized Frenchman from Chicago was visiting his home town in Normandy.
"Aha," he said to the mayor, a boyhood friend—"aha, we have come on. What are those statues on the roof of the town hall?
"Those are not statues," said the mayor. "They are masons."

Work for Greater Navy

The navy league is an organization of civilians particularly interested in naval matters. Soon after the ratification of the London naval treaty of 1930 the Navy league stated its consequent policy to be "the carrying out of an orderly naval building and replacement program within the time limits of the treaty, as well as within its restrictions, along such lines as may economically and efficiently serve the interests of the United States."

Denver Mother Tells Story

Nature controls all the functions of our digestive organs except one. We have control over that, and it's the function that causes the most trouble.
See that your children form regular bowel habits, and at the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness or constipation, give them a little California Fig Syrup. It regulates the bowels and stomach and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act as Nature intends them to. It helps build up and strengthen pale, listless, underweight children. Children love its rich, fruity taste and it's purely vegetable, so you can give it as often as your child's appetite lags or he seems feverish, cross or fretful.

Leading physicians have endorsed it for 50 years, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows how mothers depend on it. A Western mother, Mrs. R. W. Stewart, 4112 Harlan St., Denver, Colorado, says: "Raymond was terribly pulled down by constipation. He got weak, fretful and cross, had no appetite or energy and food seemed to sour in his stomach. California Fig Syrup had him romping and playing again in just a few days, and soon he was back to normal weight, looking better than he had looked in months."

Protect your child from imitations of California Fig Syrup. The mark of the genuine is the word "California" on the carton.

WHITE HOUSE AIDE

Lieut. Com. Gale Aylett Poindexter received orders from the Navy department for additional duty as aide at the White House. He has been attached to the office of naval communications. The son of the former senator from Washington, Miles Poindexter, he was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1913 and saw service in the World War.

Six-Legged, Two-Headed Terrapin Being Studied

Ocala, Fla.—A six-legged yellow-bellied terrapin, with two perfectly formed normally functioning heads on a single body, found by Louis Tyson, Union county, Florida, and sold to U. R. Parker, Ocala, for $100 has attracted zoologists from all parts of the country. Parker claims to have refused an offer of $500 for the freak. It can eat with either or both mouths, and the two brains co-operate perfectly, each agreeing on proposed actions. It can eat a cricket with one mouth and a piece of beef with the other simultaneously.

Sign of Hard Winter

Redding, Calif.—It may be a sign of a hard winter, but a 250-pound brown bear was killed within two miles of the city limits the other day.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON
"Pluck" for "Courage"
THAT "pluck" should stand for courage, grit and determination, casts an interesting sidelight on former days when it meant something different.
"Autres temps, autres moeurs," say the French, and nowhere is this axiom better illustrated than in the vagaries of language or the nuances of words—like "pluck" for example.
"Pluck" originally was a butcher's term meaning "heart." And we have it in the sense which it enjoys today because the heart was considered to be the seat of courage.

Lithuania Excludes Jews From Buying State Land

New York.—A Lithuanian ordinance stipulating that only farmers who have been engaged in agriculture for a generation may purchase state lands, operates to exclude Jews who had hoped, in the face of the economic crisis, to change their occupation and find a living on the soil.—Opinion.

Happy Moon Legends

Strong Heart's Anger.
There was a time, O Little-one-within-my wigwam, when the maple leaves did not turn red. The leaves of the maple tree were green all the year round. But then there was a battle.
Two tribes of warriors met in a forest. They fought for a long time, but by and by one tribe was beaten. The beaten warriors ran.
Only those too badly hurt to run were left. In a little grove of maple trees three of these lay hurt. They were cut and bleeding.
One said, "Little Robin, give me some of your feathers to press upon my wounds. I must stop their bleeding or I die. Give me your feathers, little Robin."
But the Robin had been frightened by the war cries. He had flown away.

The Song of a Hat

A toodle, a toodle,
I made a fine hat,
Of star-dust and mill-crust
With plenty of fat.
I trimmed it with parsley
And bottles of ink
And several pipes
From an old kitchen sink.
I trimmed it with marbles
And pieces of glue
And half of the lace
Of a last summer's shoe.
I trimmed it with turnips
And pieces of chalk,
And then put it on
And went out for a walk.

Woman at Auction Outbids Husband

Government, N. Y.—An amusing incident occurred during an auction sale here. A man, bidding on a piece of furniture, was annoyed to find he was being outbid by a woman in another part of the crowd. The woman equally was irked. Finally, the woman won out. Upon stepping up to receive her goods, they met. They were man and wife.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

by WALTER TRUMBULL

A Long Island woman was driving her car when she saw in the glass that she was being followed by a motorcycle policeman. She tried to remember whether she had gone over the legal limit or passed a traffic signal, but was sure she had not. Nevertheless, the policeman lunged on until her nerves could stand it no longer. She drew up at the side of the road and waited until the policeman came alongside.
"What have I done that was wrong?" she said.
"Nothing," said the policeman, "but, lady, I have been following you for an hour. You certainly fascinated me. You are the only really woman driver I ever saw."

He got alarmed about bank conditions, went to the bank, made out a check for his balance, and took his place in line. When he reached the window, the paying teller said:
"Good morning, Mr. Bernard. The president wants to see you. He is in his office."
"I shall be glad to see the president," said Mr. Bernard, "but just cash this check first." Just then the president of the bank appeared.
"Hello, Sam, old boy," he said. "Come on out here a minute. I want to talk to you."
"All right," said Mr. Bernard, "but I'll just finish my business with this young man first. Now," he said, turning to the paying teller, "how about that money?"
At this point, Mr. Hayman came along. "Well, if it isn't Sam Bernard," he exclaimed genially. "I was thinking about you last night. Come upstairs to the directors' room. I want to talk to you about a new show."
"I'll be right up," said Mr. Bernard, "as soon as I get my money."

"Oh, never mind the money now," said Hayman. "We'll take care of that. Come up and let's talk about this show."
Meanwhile, Mr. Bernard had kept his place at the window by hanging to the rail. He said to the paying teller, "How about my money?"
"Don't worry, Sam, old friend. Your money's all right," said Mr. Hayman.
"How about my money?" said Bernard in louder tones and, getting no results, began to shout "How About My Money?" This was effective.
"Pay this bum his money," ordered Mr. Hayman.
Putting the cash in his pockets, Mr. Bernard turned to Mr. Hayman. "Now, where did you say you wanted to see me?"
"I hope I never see you again," said Mr. Hayman, "and the faster you get out of here, the better I'll like it."
That small-time pessimist was putting a few hundred dollars in gold in safety deposit boxes, I knew, but it was not until recently that I heard of a really big league hoarder. They tell me that this man hired an armored car and went to the Federal Reserve bank with $2,000,000 in bills. This he exchanged for gold. The gold he took to another bank, where he had hired space to store it. Now they tell me that a ten-gallon keg will hold $50,000 in gold, so you can see how much space the man needed. If he leaves it there long enough, his storage bill should cut quite a slice out of his capital. Moreover, if the things he fears come to pass, the gold will be of no use to him. Either he can't buy anything with it, or somebody will take it away for him. I think I should rather store canned goods. They told me of another man who is shipping kegs of gold to Europe. Because of the exchange, he makes something over $1,000 on a keg.

My Neighbor Says:

WHEN boiling eggs, wet the shells thoroughly in cold water before dropping in the boiling water and they will not crack.
Keep onions, celery and strong-tasting vegetables apart from other vegetables or food. Herrings should also be kept where they cannot taint the household provision, and if fruit of all sorts should be laid out separately on a shelf, if possible, as one piece coming in contact with another will quickly become spoiled.

To prevent a gas stove from rusting, rub the entire inside with a flannel cloth which has been saturated with sweet oil.

Finger marks on painted doors should be removed with a soft flannel wrung out in water in which a few drops of ammonia have been mixed, and then rubbed with soap. Having removed the stains the paint should be washed with clear water and thoroughly dried.

Will Show How Crop Estimates Are Made

Crop Reporting Board Will Take Listeners Behind the Scenes.

Listeners will be taken behind the scenes to hear an explanation of how the government Crop Reporting Board prepares the estimates of crop and live stock production which its members announce regularly in the National Farm and Home Hour when W. F. Callender, chairman of the board, speaks in the Department period of the National Farm and Home Hour on Tuesday, January 12.
Callender will describe graphically how the Board analyzes statistics collected from 300,000 farmers, and from this mass of data makes the monthly estimates which are considered the most authoritative in the world.

For stockmen, a group of three economists will explain the recent course of prices for beef cattle, hogs, and sheep, in the program of Wednesday, January 13.

The Federal Farm Board will continue its series of talks during 1932 setting forth the progress made in various lines of co-operative organization.

Future Farmers will hear their special monthly program on Monday, January 11, and on Saturday, January 16, there will be a broadcast of the monthly program by the National Grange.

Thirty-two measures of music written during the closing announcement of the National Farm and Home Hour, is the speed record of Harry Kogen, director of the Homesteaders orchestra. As the announcer began, Kogen became aware of the fact that two of his violinists did not have the music for the "Homesteaders' Waltz," the closing theme number. Kogen wrote and finished it in the nick of time.

Aiming to stress the importance of forest fire prevention, the United States Forest Service will broadcast the second in a series of dramatic skits on Thursday, January 13, "With Uncle Sam's Forest Ranger" features episodes in the life of an "old ranger" and its youthful assistant.

The Future Farmers of America will present their regular monthly broadcast in the National Farm and Home Hour on Monday, January 11, featuring news of Future Farmers activities and talks by their leaders.

Simpson to Speak on Farm Measures

John A. Simpson, president of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, speaking in the National Farm and Home Hour Wednesday, January 20, will explain "What Congress Will Do for the Farmers." His talk will be on the various farm measures then pending in congress and their chance for becoming laws. Programs of the Farmers' Union are broadcast in the National Farm and Home Hour on the third Wednesday of each month.

Metropolitan Opera Will Be Broadcast

Up-to-the-Minute and Practical

Every woman wishes to be as well-dressed as possible without spending too much time or money on her clothes. That is why so many women in this community turn first to the page in this newspaper which contains the illustrated fashion articles by Miss Cherie Nicholas. For Miss Nicholas is an authority on fashions—not the freak models and the extreme styles, but the fashions in dress which the modern woman demands, those which are up-to-the-minute and at the same time economical and practical.

Be sure to look for these articles in each issue of this newspaper and then tell your women friends about them. They will be glad to know how they, too, can wear clothes which carry the message of the well-dressed woman.
