Mr. Mueller was one of the most widely known men in Washington county. Besides being trusted to the office of county treasurer he was chairman of the Town of Hartford and a member of Washington county board, a body which he served as chairman for 13 years.

He was born near Cologne, Germany, February 24, 1844, and came to this county with his parents in the spring of 1856, settling in the Town of Hartford.

He married Miss Theresa Redig of the Town of Addison. Their union was blessed with 14 children, seven boys and seven girls, and of these, three died in infancy and one son, Theodore, at the age of 50. His wife preceded him in death in 1930.

In November, 1918, Mr. and Mrs. Mueller celebrated their golden wedding, and in 1929, only observed their diamond wedding anniversary. The children surviving are: Philipp, Lena (Mrs. Peter Infalt), Barbara (Mrs. Art. SALVATION ARMY DRIVE

Kewaskum makes the 8th town to line up for the Salvation Army campaign for funds in Washington county in the last three weeks. There has been a fine spirit all through this territory.

One of the largest committees to carry on the work in this community will be under the able leadership of Mrs. E. L. Morgenroth as chairman. Other women who will act on the committee are the Misses Lillian Schlosser, Miriam Schaefer, Renetta Becker, Pearl Buss, and the Mesdames Ida Koerble, Peter Guenther, Augusta Clark, Lulu Davis, Elwyn Romaine, Elmer Martin and Irwin Koch.

The committee met Wednesday evening and details for the drive worked out. The goal has been set at $65.00, the same as last year. This is about 7 cents per capita, while many of the towns are asking 10 cents per capita.

Field Organizer A. H. Christian, who was formerly a teacher in dramatic art in Marquette university, Milwaukee and who is also a globe traveler, with about 80,000 miles of travel behind him, not only presented the work of the Salvation Army in this and other lands but drew from his experiences, and entertained the Lions' club Tuesday evening with bits of dynamic verse and quotations from famous poets and writers.

He stated that owing to the increased suffering in congested centers like Milwaukee and other cities throughout the state, where the Salvation Army works miracles in the rehabilitation of human derelicts, and the relief of the suffering humanity, appeals for increased quotas have met with a hearty response, and larger contributions have been cheerfully given by those who are fortunate enough to still retain a position or business.

From Washington county in four years, have come eight unmarried mothers with their children to the Salvation Army home in Wauwatosa. These poor unfortunates are taken to the home when no one else will have pity on them. They are given the kindest of treatment. They become good Christian mothers with a new hope. They are kept for six months at a cost of $250 each. This total expense for those from this county in four years was $2,000.00. It is these expenses the towns of the state are asked to help meet.

The Salvation Army has never found anything like present conditions in all its history and needs the support of every individual who can possibly give. They have adopted the slogan, "Give until it hurts, for suffering humanity."

BASEBALL CLUB RE-ORGANIZED

At the re-organization meeting of the local baseball club held Monday evening, a constitution and by-laws were adopted. The name adopted was the Kewaskum Athletic Club, instead of the Kewaskum Baseball Club. This name was chosen to leave an opening, if members decide, to add other lines of athletic activities.

The officers and directors elected were: President—William Edlitz; Vice-President—Dr. Leo Staudle; Secretary—Norbert Becker; Treasurer—Arnold Martin; Directors—Arthur Koch, Elwyn Romaine, Fred Witzig.

The membership committee submitted a very favorable report, securing fifty paid-up members, and have assurances of fifty more that will join the club. The membership drive will continue for several weeks and from all indications before the drive ends, at least two hundred will be in the ranks. The membership is open to both women and men.

The officers and directors will meet shortly to appoint a manager and such other officers and committees necessary to carry on the work of the coming year.

With the large number of candidates for players awaiting a tryout, the management will have no difficulty in selecting a base ball club that Kewaskum can be proud of.

With the interest that the local fans are taking and supporting base ball, Kewaskum wants a winning team and should have it.

LOCALS DEFEAT WEST BEND

About 150 of the local basketball rooters accompanied Manager Muckerheide's basketball five to West Bend Wednesday and cheered them on to victory, defeating the Benders by the low score of 13 to 9.

This defeat for the Benders eliminates them from any claim to the championship of Washington county, Kewaskum winning two games.

The victory was a great surprise to the Benders themselves. It was one game that they were looking forward to win but Elliott and his men were too good. The game was full of thrills and at the end of each period Kewaskum was in the lead.

Kewaskum was held scoreless during the third period, while West Bend scored one free throw. The score by periods was: Quarter, Kewaskum 3, West Bend 0; half, Kewaskum 9, West Bend 6; third quarter, Kewaskum 9, West Bend 7; final, Kewaskum 13, West Bend 9. This was the ninth straight victory for the locals.

Kewaskum 35, MAYVILLE 28 Sunday evening the city basketball team took in tow the Mayville A. C. five, defeating them by a score of 35 to 28. This victory increases the number of wins to 10 and 8 in a row. The spectators witnessed one of the fastest and cleanest exhibitions of basketball played in the local gym. It was a game in which every man played his position well.

Mayville was the first to score. Daniels, No. 15, on the very first play caged a basket from beyond mid-field. He was easily the outstanding star of the evening and won the admiration of the local fans. His basket shooting was very accurate. Of the 28 points scored for the visitors he netted 20. Casey Heberer, who was assigned the honor, if you may call it so, to guard Mr. Daniels, had the toughest job of his basketball career. The pivoting of Mr. Daniels was perfect.

Andrews, for the locals, is deserving of worthy mention. He played a cool-headed game, was all over the floor guarding his man and when the opportunity came at hand he was in position, whereby it made it easy for him to pass the ball through the hoops. He was high scorer for Kewaskum, scoring 16 points. Elliott, the spokesman of the team, was a strong helpmate. The two worked like clockwork. He was successful in caging 9 points.

The closeness of the game at all times kept the fans in a high pitch of excitement. The first quarter ended, Kewaskum 16, Mayville 9; end of the half, Kewaskum 22, Mayville 19; third quarter, Kewaskum 28, Mayville 23; final score, Kewaskum 35, Mayville 28.

In the second quarter Meilahn substituted for Dreher of the locals and while in the game he played very well. Dreher went back into the lineup at the beginning of the second half. His guard work is being closely watched by all opposing teams. We class him one of the best guards in this part of the state. Kohn, center played his best of the season and practically had a part in every play.

As to the Mayville players, they are to be commended. They had elegant team work and put on a very good defensive and offensive game. Their passing was superior to what has been shown on the local floor this season.

The summary: Kewaskum FG FT F Elliott, f-g 4 1 2 Heberer, f 2 0 2 Kohn, c 1 0 2 Dreher, g 1 0 1 Meilahn, f 1 0 1 Andrews, g 8 0 1 Totals 17 1 8 Mayville A. C. CELEBRATE SILVER WEDDING Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Rosenheimer on Sunday, January 24th, in honor of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary entertained about thirty relatives.

At six o'clock in the afternoon the guests were escorted to the Republican House, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was awaiting them. For the occasion the dining room was beautifully decorated with roses and spring flowers. The wedding march "Mendelssohn" was played by Mrs. D. M. Rosenheimer, who also played the same march at the wedding 25 years ago.

After dinner all returned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rosenheimer, where the remainder of the evening was very pleasantly spent in conversation and card playing. Those present were: Dr. F. J. Lambeck and wife, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Vilter, Mrs. Clara Elmergreen and Paul Hasler of Milwaukee, Mrs. Gustav Landmann, Scotland, S. Dak., D. M. Rosenheimer, wife and daughters, Retha Jane and Doris May, Otto E. Lay, wife and daughter Charlotte, Mrs. H. J. the fourth period the score remained close, the score then being 8 to 11, with the visitors in the lead. During the fourth period the locals awakened and by fast work, the visitors easily raised their score to 21, while Kewaskum had to be content with 12. The game was marred with too many out-of-bounds and wild passing. This was the first exhibition of the second team, which also perhaps accounts for the defeat. They possess good material and with more coaching and experience each member should develop as a high class player.

RAMBLERS 13, FOND DU LAC 28 The local Ramblers "girls" were at Fond du Lac Saturday evening where they participated in the preliminary game of the evening with the Rupp's girls basketball team. The Fondy team led from the start and won easily. The Ramblers put up a very good game and encountered no trouble in obtaining possession of the ball, but had tough luck with their basket shooting.

RAMBLERS 17, WOODHULL 36 The Ramblers were at Woodhull Tuesday evening playing a return game with the girls of that place. This was the worst defeat the Ramblers suffered this season. At the end of the first half the score was Woodhull 26, Kewaskum 1. To stop the onslaught Manager Muckerheide instructed two players to guard Miss Weber of Woodhull, who seemed to be making baskets at will. Miss McCarty during the second half, scored 6 baskets.

ALLENTON SUNDAY JAN. 31ST On Sunday evening the Allenton basketball five will play a return game with the city team at the high school gym. This game should be very interesting. On Jan. 12th the locals were awarded the game at Allenton by the referee after the Allenton boys refused to resume play, following a disturbance started by one of their spectators. The preliminary game will be between the Adrian Cleaners of Fond du Lac and the second city team.

SYNOPSIS

Acting in good faith in an effort to aid a neighbor, Ruth Ingraham, in a business way, Edward Patterson, cashier of the insurance company, is wrongfully suspected by his wife, Julia, of infidelity. Her accusation, in a letter from a summer resort, unites him for business, and he takes a short vacation. On his return he is deeply wounded by his daughter, Edith, telling him his personal belongings were in the "spare room," having been removed from the room which had been his and his wife's bedroom. Patterson accepts the situation as proof of his wife's belief in his guilt. Edith, seventeen years old, is worried over the estrangement of her parents. Her mother only partly succeeds in her efforts to comfort her. The son, Edward, Junior, is at college. A business matter brings an "inventor," James Mariner, into Patterson's life. Mariner needs $5,000, with which to push his invention, an automobile choke, and Patterson is interested. After a brief investigation, he decides to go in with Mariner. Without informing his family, he resigns from the insurance company, devoting his whole time to the pushing of the invention. An old friend, Robert Willard, is frankly skeptical of the value of the choke. Patterson tells his wife of the chance he has made. She accepts the situation.

She didn't know if it would ever come in at all.
"But why did he do it, mother? What made him—you didn't want him to do it? Oh, it wasn't fair!" the girl cried in a sudden burst of anger. "It wasn't! I don't care what you say! He hadn't any right to do it. Mother, what are we going to do?"

A memory of something he'd said while they were riding home in the taxi after the play flashed into the girl's mind and held her thoughtfully silent for a minute, oblivious even to her mother's rebuke. He'd made her rather blue by saying that he knew now, at forty-six, that he'd never been rich nor conspicuously successful just as he knew that he'd never find a bag of pearls or a treasure box of pieces-of-eight behind the wainscoting in the library.

CHAPTER IV

The Actress

As a rule Edith hated Thursday. It was Norma's afternoon and evening out, and she and mother had to cook the dinner and wash up afterward.

But today they were making a lark of it. Dad had telephoned that he wouldn't be home for dinner, so that there was just what they liked: chicken salad and rolls and two mince turnovers from the community kitchen, and cocoa that they'd made at home.

They had a lot to talk about, Edith did anyhow. She was full of the senior play, "The School for Scandal." They had been rehearsing all the afternoon. Edith was Charles Surface.

The comfortable, rather jolly feeling remained as they set about washing the dishes. Mother looked so pretty in that Dutch apron. She was a peach. It was fun to have her all to yourself, even since the new change, back to more like his old self, that had lately come over dad. Dad's conduct was still perplexing, but it didn't make her blue any more. But of course her fears and worries about him and mother had been largely ignorances; the idea that Mrs. Ingraham might be going to have a baby, or that there was anything queer and unnatural about dad and mother sleeping in different rooms. Since an amazing talk she had had with her science teacher, speculations of that sort had been relegated to the world of mere childish nonsense. Ed had been right, of course, last summer when he had told her she didn't know what she was talking about. She wished she'd believed him then.

What a lot of fun it was to act, and how much more fun it was going to be when they really gave the play in costume. Everybody agreed she was going to make a perfectly corking man. She thought she'd like to be an actress.

Her mother called her back. "There," she said, when the last dish was dried and put away, "that wasn't so bad, was it? How would you like to do it every night?"

She was in the act of answering the first question carelessly, off the top of her mind, when the import of the second stopped her short. Mother meant something by that unless she was just teasing. She didn't look as if she was teasing. She didn't wait for an answer—there was just time for the look to pass between them before she went on. "Because we're going to try it, I'm letting Norma go. I gave her two weeks' notice this morning."

Edith wouldn't let herself understand. "I thought Norma was pretty good," she said.

"Oh, yes," her mother agreed. "We aren't going to try to get anyone else. We're going to do it ourselves for a while—make a picnic of it like tonight."

"Mother, has anything happened to father? He hasn't—he isn't—going away or anything?"

Her mother laughed as she said no and hugged her. "He's gone into a new business, that's all. We hope it's going to make our fortunes."

"Well, if it's going to make our fortunes—" Edith began, but her mother interrupted.

"Father's resigned from the insurance company. He had to, because the new business will take all his time, and of course that means that his salary stops. And it may be quite a little while before the money from the new business comes in. He didn't want me to let Norma go. He said he didn't believe it would be necessary, but I thought we'd rather begin now making money as far as we could, than wait till we didn't have any. It makes it feel more as if we were helping. I want you to look at it that way, too, so that he won't feel unhappy about it."

That was all reasonable enough, of course. And if they were really going to be rich in the end, of course they wouldn't mind doing the housework. Only mother's assurance didn't sound convincing. Why did she try so hard to keep Edith from being frightened about it, unless, down inside, she were really frightened herself? She felt herself turning perfectly cold inside.

"You mean he won't have any more salary at all?" she asked. He'd always said—she'd heard him tell her mother a hundred times—that they had nothing to live on but his salary. "His salary from the insurance company has stopped."

"And the other hasn't begun yet? Mother, when will it begin?"

"Oh, I don't know exactly. Before very long, we hope." The words weren't so bad, but she had tried to give a little laugh as she said them, and the laugh didn't work. Mother was frightened, too. She didn't know when the new money would come in.

"You mean," she said thoughtfully to her mother, "that it's sort of an adventure for him?"

Mother gave her a funny look at that. "Yes," she said, "that's exactly the cloud castle of her dreams come down to this! This was where they were going to make their fortune. She tried to laugh at herself, but couldn't. Her primary impulse was to drive away again and pretend she'd never come, but she was trembling so, she was afraid she couldn't. Finally she went in through the grimy little door that said "Office" on it.

Dad was there sitting at a desk, and seemed pleased as well as surprised to see her.

"Sit down," he said. "I'll be through in a few minutes." After apparently hesitating a moment he introduced to her the man who sat opposite him at the desk. His name was Weed, and she thought him detestable. The other occupant of the room he didn't introduce. He was younger, perhaps. He had a thick dirty-looking skin and a pimply face, and he sat morosely at a typewriter pounding out a letter rather slowly with two thick fingers. She turned her chair a little to make it easier not to look at him.

She'd made occasional visits to her father's old office and the contrast really was appalling. That had been in its sober way palatial, furnished with great dull mahogany desks and leather chairs. But this place! Why, it was hardly clean. It wasn't, really. And it was shabby. The floor was bare. And to think of poor old dad having to come to a place like this!

It was pitiful.

The pimply young man whom she couldn't bear to look at must be dad's stenographer. She thought of his stenographers at the other office and shuddered at the contrast. Dad couldn't have made the change of his own free will. He must have lost his other job—got fired, instead of having resigned—and hadn't been willing to tell her. Did mother know the truth, she wondered?

Another man came into the office from the shop. A workman in overalls, his face and hands streaked with dirty machine oil like a man in a garage. He asked, "Is Mr. Mariner coming back this afternoon, Mr. Patterson?"

"I believe not," dad said. And then to her amazement he stopped the man before he could go back into the shop. "Oh, Charlie," he said, "wait a minute. I want you to meet my daughter Edith. Edith, this is Charlie Franklin."

Charlie seemed to have an idea of shaking hands, but he rubbed his hand on his overalls, but then he looked at it and laughed. "I guess it'll hardly do," he said. And then, "You haven't seen our shop yet, have you?"

Luckily dad answered for her. "No, it's her first visit. I'll bring her out in a minute."

"It's pretty dirty out there," Charlie said, "and it isn't making anything out yet, but we're really working something there, Miss Patterson."

She liked Charlie Franklin—she couldn't help liking anyone who spoke as pleasantly and comfortably as he—and his assurance that they were really making something restored some of her courage.

But she found the shop, when father made good his promise and conducted her through, almost as dispiriting a place as the office. The meagerness of its equipment was a shock to her. The machinery didn't anywhere near fill up the space even in that little building. It was just pitiful. Did dad really think he could make a fortune out of that?

When she and dad got into the car and started driving home, she began talking feverishly about anything she could think of that was not the shop. She settled finally upon the senior play at school and gave him a detailed account of the misadventures of the last rehearsal. She knew, and at last the thing she dreaded happened.

"I'm afraid," she said, cutting her short, "that you were disappointed in our place down there. You know you can't judge a thing—you can't judge what it will grow into—by what it looks like at the beginning. A turnip's bigger than an apple seed, but it won't grow into a tree, and the seed will if it gets the chance. We've got a seed down there, and we've got to try to give it a chance to grow. You wait a while and see. I didn't mean you to visit it quite so soon. I thought I'd let you wait until we'd put out a leaf or two."

"Oh, it's all right," she said. "I understand what you mean." It was a relief not to have to pretend any longer. "I suppose if I hadn't gone to see you so many times in your other office..."

He laughed at that, but she felt a little uncertainly, and she perceived he felt that contrast, too.

"But that other office wasn't mine," he said. "I belonged to it, almost as if I had been one of the items of furniture. This thing is mine, half mine, almost, and as it grows, my share in it will grow. You liked Charlie Franklin, didn't you?"

"Oh, yes," she said, "he's great. But dad, who are those other people? The man with the cigar and that horrible boy at the typewriter?"

"Weed's a salesman," he said. "He isn't satisfactory. His job is to go around to dealers and garages and to get them to carry our choke. The appalling boy at the typewriter is a concession—well, he's a concession. But I don't think we shall be saddled with him much longer."

They drove along for a while in silence.

"Oh, there are plenty of discouragements," he said at last, "but the thing itself is right and it's going to succeed."

Edith laid her hand on his knee. "I know it will, dad," she said. "Really and truly, I do."

Health Associated With Slimness and Laughter
The old advice, "Laugh and grow fat," is out of date. Not many years ago fatness was regarded as a sign of robust health, but we know now that it is undesirable even in babies or young children.

Dr. Leechmere Anderson, medical officer for Doncaster, England, claims that the phrase should be "Laugh and grow healthy." "Laughter," he says, "is essentially associated with good health, but adipose tissue, if at all undue, cannot be regarded as a favorable condition. Leanness of body is far more likely to be associated with strength and energy."

Reiert That Appealed to Roosevelt's Humor
The agitation about the useless noises of a big city reminds a certain eighty-three-year-old Washington contractor of a time when his company was filling in the land that is now Potomac park. There was a battery of dredges at work there, and their puffing, snorting, and scraping so disturbed the repose of the members of the White House family that a certain Colonel Haines was sent to register a complaint by none other than the nation's Chief Executive.

Events in the Lives of Little Men

When Mother Sews for Little Folks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AND now the spring sewing campaign begins. As a rule, it's "children first" when mothers begin to sew. What with the little folk's needs taking precedence, it's time to look about for timely suggestions on the subject.

As little daughter emerges from the tiny tot age, she wants her outfits fashioned more on the lines of the clothes mother or big sister wears. Wherefore, it appears to her greatly to have a jacket suit somewhat after the styling of that of her elders. The skirt and jacket two-piece worn with dainty washable blouses has also the virtue of being eminently practical for the little girl who goes to school. Usually the tiny skirt is pleated like the one worn by the sprightly little lady posing to the right in the picture.

There are many pretty checked materials which will make up successfully after this fashion. A rayon and wool weave is suggested, for mixtures of this sort launder perfectly, the presence of the rayon keeping the wool from shrinking. It also adds a pretty luster. The jacket may be fashioned along simplest lines as the picture portrays. As to the blouse, or perhaps for that is the beauty of a jacket suit—it admits of many a change when it comes to the blouse—it should show clever little trimming features. There is a new trim-stitch decoration which is very effective and easily done. The work is entirely done by sewing machine. All that is needed for this is a trim stitch thread in both needle and bobbin, the needle being of the coarsest, and the gauge set to nine or ten stitches to the inch. Worked in bright colors the effect is that of embroidery. The blouse which completes the jacket suit pictured, is of cross-bar lawn, all edges bound with bias trim.

The beauty of bias trim is that it can be bought ready to use, thus proving a time-saver and a nerve-saver for everyone who has had the experience knows what a task it is to cut narrow strips on a true bias, to which add endless folding of edges. It is bias trim (bright green) which gives so pleasing a finish to the attractive pajama outfit illustrated to the left. The material is a quality-kind cotton print-saffron and green on a white background. Even 'little daughter is letting her hair grow these days with the result that hair ribbons have come back. The latest is to match the hair ribbon with a linen collar and cuff set unless the set is white, in which case the hair ribbon matches its trim. These collar-and-cuff sets are so easy to make there is no reason why every little lady should not have several of them. The one shown in the picture on the dainty little miss in the foreground is of baby blue linen, of which the dainty slashes interworked with fagoting done with a trim stitch thread in contrasting color. The fagoting also unites a bias trim bordering to the collar and cuff edges. The bias trim can be bought folded under and ready to apply, which is a time-saver and a nerve-saver when it comes to cutting narrow strips on a true bias—and think of the endless folding!

NEW MODELS GIVE VERVE TO SATIN

Take a length of black satin, add to it a dash of white satin, and you have a most wearable frock. Early in the season there was quite a lot of satin shown, but it hasn't been worn so much through the winter.

But for early spring it would not be surprising to see several models of black satin with white satin touches making a grand success. Such a black satin frock, cut on suit lines, is vastly becoming and is luxurious without being too lavish.

Always an effort should be made to see that there is a dash and a gay air to the black satin frock; otherwise it has a tendency to look heavy and set, which means, of course, that it looks old and is inclined to make the wearer look rather too matronly, something that even the matron of long standing usually wants to avoid.

Lace Bolero Jackets New Note for Evening

Colored venetian lace bolero jackets are a new note for evening wear. One of the newest dinner dresses is designed of black crepe in the princess silhouettes with bodice of light blue georgette over which is worn a bolero of pale blue venetian lace.

Fur Collar and Cuff Sets Add Dash to Coat

Everyone will like to know about the fur collar and cuff sets that are being sold over the counters. A winter coat could have an interlining added and one of these sets imposed upon it and turn out to be winter's greatest success.

Timely Notes on Winter Wear for Women

Contrasting sleeves prove a continuously popular theme. There is a trend to slenderizing princess lines. Detachable fur capelets are shown for resort wear. Sweaters are lace and elaborate, also highly colorful. Be the wearer long or short in stature, nighties this season must touch the floor. Knit dresses are taking on short puffed sleeves. Lace hose are making a bid for fashion's favor again. New collections give preference to higher necklines and waistlines. Lace boleros worn over sleeveless gowns are noted at afternoon affairs. Many dresses of black satin are worn including those in crepe satin with long svelte silhouette.

Cold Insurance

He carries it with him, ready for just such times. That little box of Bayer Aspirin. If he catches cold, what of it? Bayer Aspirin will stop it. If his throat feels sore, he will end the soreness with one good gargle made from these tablets.

Dangerous complications can follow the neglect of "a common cold." Every case of tonsillitis began with "just a sore throat." It's a wise plan to take aspirin after any undue exposure to bad weather, or whenever there is any chance that you've caught cold. If it's genuine aspirin it can't possibly hurt you; and how it does banish the aches and pains caused by colds, neuralgia, neuritis, lumbago, and even rheumatism.

Bayer Aspirin will insure your comfort through the worst cold season. The more susceptible you are to colds, the more you need it. Does not depress the heart.

Miniature Schoolhouse

A schoolhouse, 20 by 50 feet, which will house 30 pupils, was built in one day at Cape Creek, Ore. Employees of the state highway crew did the construction work. The pupils will be children of the construction gang, and the teacher will be the wife of one of the employees.

French Writer on American Culture

I should like to meet in every European country women as truly cultivated as those whom I have seen in the great colleges of the eastern United States—at Bryn Mawr, at Vassar and at Smith.

My students at Princeton were capable of following intelligently a lecture in French, and their reading was wide. To read the output of the younger American authors is to be convinced that it could not be the expression of an uncultured people. A novelist such as Hemingway, by his taste and his restraint, heralds a great epoch. A critic like Edmund Wilson would do honor to any French or English review.

The tone of the best magazines indicates a true taste for ideas. It might be answered that these magazines address themselves only to a small minority of highbrows, and that the rest are vulgar. But is not that true of all countries?

For my part, I think like my fellow countryman, Paul Morand, that we shall have difficulty in saving our western civilization during the next few decades, but that one of its sanctuaries, along with Paris, London and some of the great European universities, will be the rocky islets of Manhattan.—Andre Maurois in the London Morning Post.

Lock That Keeps Records

A recording lock that not only tells the time it was opened but the key that did it, has been invented, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It can be used in connection with any standard make of door fitting. It prints on a tiny paper roll, like that in a cash register, what time it was opened. It has facilities for as many as six keys, each making its own forgery-proof imprint on the roll.

CORRECT GROWTH for Children

You can help your children gain sturdy bones and strong teeth by giving them Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil daily. (It's the Vitamin D content that does it.) But there's also a wealth of Vitamin A present that builds resistance—in parents as well as children—to such common illnesses as winter colds. It's the pleasant, easy way to take cod liver oil. The Last Laugh

As Eddie Cantor, the comedian, was standing in front of a theater where all seats had been sold, a little man and his wife were turned away, greatly disappointed. "Here," said Eddie, "I'll let you have a couple of my seats," and he gave the little man two tickets. Delighted, the man gave Eddie his card, saying, "Some day I hope I may be able to do something for you." The comedian looked at the card. The little man was an undertaker.—Capper's Weekly.

W. J. WITTMAN HONOURED

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Wittman were at Oshkosh Wednesday where his brother, W. J. Wittman, returned after spending national honors with the speedy midwest plane, Chief Oshkosh, which he built himself. He landed at the airport while whistles screamed a welcome.

At the airport, Mayor T. G. Brown, delivered a welcoming address. Mr. Wittman, naturally shy, smiled and said: "Thank you. No then went in search of his mother, Mrs. Mary A. Wittman, of Byron, who has been at Oshkosh two days waiting for him."

Wittman left Joliet, Illinois, about 10:15 Wednesday morning and was first sighted at Oshkosh about 11:50, traveling the distance, about 225 miles, in one hour and thirty-five minutes.

The races won by Wittman at Miami, Florida, recently included the $6,000 cash Colonel Green trophy and the Glenn Curtis cup. The plane is only 16 and one-half feet from tip to tip and is powered by a 90 horsepower American Cirrus motor.

Murkey weather dogged him all the way down to Miami and he arrived on the third and last day of the races. The two races he won on that last day were the two principal events on the program.

DEMONSTRATION TAKES WELL

The baking demonstration sponsored by John Marx, proprietor of the local I. G. A. store last Monday and Tuesday at the Woodman hall, attracted a large attendance at each of the three meetings.

The demonstration not only was a success but educational to all present. It was in charge of Riffa M. Barkley, baking specialist of Everett-Aughenbaugh and company. At each meeting valuable prizes were awarded.

"Ghost" Only Rabbit

Pupils of the school of Bunesna, Scotland, were recently thrown into a panic by the sudden appearance at the side of the blackboard of what they took to be a fluttering apparition in white. They ran home and told of the appearance of either a ghost or an angel. Parents investigated and found that a very large white hare had gotten into the schoolhouse and had been seen to jump from behind the blackboard.

Rehime Music

The Rehime are very fond of music. Their native music consists chiefly of songs, chants and melodies, many of which possess considerable musical rhythm. Although the tunes to which they are sung are very crude, they can be traced to keynotes. The melodies especially are said to be very pleasing and a number of them have been published with corresponding music.

Anticists Ate Bananas

Bananas have a long history, although they have only been imported into western lands within the last fifty years. The ancient Egyptians are said to have eaten this fruit, and it was certainly known to the Persians, Greeks, and Romans centuries ago.

BUSINESS MEN SPEAK SHARPLY TO CONGRESS

Federation Demands Waste at Washington Cease.

Washington—Waste at Washington must end and political spending of billions be stopped, the American Federation of Business, with headquarters in Chicago, asserted in a memorial to congress read in the senate.

The demand for an end of federal folly and of political spoilation of the tax funds was heard at the request of Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, who said it was the first time in his long years in the senate that he had asked that a memorial be read from the desk.

Some of the more pungent charges of congressional shortcomings and of governmental financial folly in the memorial were:

"You have balanced your books by borrowing."

"Deliberate overappropriation in expectation of recourse to borrowing for payment of ordinary and recurring expenses is to invite financial disaster."

"It is perfectly obvious that your credit is burning up."

"Recovery through government squandering is and always was impossible."

"You cannot cure unemployment by precipitating national bankruptcy."

"Your farm board, with a reckless squandering of millions, has disrupted agricultural unity, narrowed the market for farm products, and producers have watched prices sink to the lowest levels in modern history."

"Taxes must come down if agriculture, industry and commerce are to recover."

"To think of political advantage at such a time as this is political madness."

The declaration of rights of citizens and business men as issued by the federation in the name of Charles A. Wilson, chairman of the board of directors of the association, was brought to Washington by Bernard W. Snow, grain crop statistical expert and chairman of the Cook County Republican committee at Chicago.

The memorial began with the declaration that the burden of federal, state and local taxes had brought the business and industrial machinery of the nation to a breakdown and concluded with a demand that taxes be reduced under pain of bringing the country to bankruptcy.

"The very existence of the nation is at stake," the memorial stated in conclusion, "and your constituents, alive to your every action in this crisis, will accept no excuses and no extenuations."

It is believed to be the first time that an organization of American business men has spoken directly to the members of congress or to the government in a demand for sane and conservative conduct of governmental affairs.

Army Planes Drop Food to Snowbound Indians

Winslow, Ariz.—Six large army bombing planes, carrying cargoes of provisions, in place of explosives, sought remote Zuni and Navajo villages in the canyons and on the mesas of western New Mexico as targets for their "food bombardment."

Sixteen larger snowbound villages already had been provisioned by the bombers. The planes, flying at the dangerously low altitude of fifty feet, dropped more than five tons of food in snow banks near the villages. It had been estimated more than 20,000 Indians, isolated by one of the heaviest snows this section has ever known, faced starvation. Indian department officials in Washington ordered relief sent the tribesmen by air.

RAIL AGREEMENT MAY BE SLOW IN COMING

Union Heads Striving for Job Stabilization.

Chicago.—Extended discussion of the proposals exchanged by the committee of nine railroad presidents and union representatives of the country's rail workers in an effort to reach an amicable settlement of wage and employment problems indicated that the conference may continue for some time.

A proposal of the brotherhood representatives for assurance of employment for their members for at least one year, during which the roads have asked them to accept a voluntary 10 per cent wage cut, was before the conference at the Palmer house.

As actually worded by the spokesmen of labor the proposal asked for the same total of man hours as prevailed in 1930. This total was 10 per cent greater than in 1931, labor chiefs said, and was used because it represented an average between 1929, a peak year, and 1931, a low year.

Labor contends a guaranty of jobs would accelerate business recovery because it would restore confidence and release $2,000,000,000 in purchasing power now held back by fear.

The workmen's barter proposal was an answer to the request of the rail committee for a more detailed suggestion on stabilization of employment, the cornerstone of the union program in the conference.

The rail presidents had said in a general way that the wage reduction would stimulate employment but expressed doubt they could guarantee jobs to a fixed number of workmen.

An agreement was reached on one of the union demands—that an emergency employment bureau be established. The branches will be in charge of E. T. McCles at New York, J. W. Higgins at Chicago and C. P. Neill at Washington.

JAPANESE ARMY GETS VENGEANCE FOR DEAD

Hundreds of Chinese Troops Slain in Retaliation.

Mukden, Manchuria.—The Japanese army has avenged its dead. Official communiques said that hundreds of Chinese have been killed in a series of offensives undertaken in retaliation for the Chinese victories of the previous week, in which the Japanese casualties were heavy.

Supported by heavy artillery airplanes, the avenging columns of Japan killed at least 220 Chinese in engagements at Yenai and Tungliang, the communiques said, and near Yingkow, where a force of 500 Chinese was encountered, "a considerable number" of casualties was inflicted.

These were the three major engagements, but there were many others. Larger units were employed than in previous activities of this sort, and more imposing auxiliary arms.

While the Japanese pressed on with their work of revenge, new groups of Chinese war lords arrived in Mukden to take part in negotiations looking toward the establishment of a new Manchurian state, wholly free of Chinese control.

Gen. Shigeru Honjo, Japanese high commander, explained the fierceness of his new offensives by saying it was necessary to rid South Manchuria of "the curse of banditry" in order to permit the Chinese farmers to sow their spring crops "in assurance of safety and peace."

In the battle at Yenai, a coal mining center 25 miles south of Mukden, a Japanese infantry battalion, equipped with machine guns and backed by airplanes and artillery, fought forty minutes with about 600 Chinese. A communiqué said the Chinese were "almost completely annihilated." The battalion returned to Mukden and a gang of coolies was hired to dispose of the bodies of the battlefield. Numerous enemy wounded were taken to Japanese hospitals.

A Japanese column was sent to the Tungliang district after reports had been received that 1,000 Chinese were looting a nearby village. The Chinese lost 22 prisoners in addition to 90 dead in this battle, headquarters announced.

A brigade sent to the Chihni district to smash irregular Chinese troops returned to its Chinchow base, reporting its mission accomplished.

Among the war lords arriving in Mukden for the negotiations about the establishment of a new government for Manchuria was Chang Hai-peng, who failed in an attempt to oust Gen. Ma Chan-shan from Tsitsihar before Gen. Jiro Tamon accomplished that task in November.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

Why is it "Manna"? "What is it?" inquired the sons of Israel, when, in the course of their forty years wandering through the desert, and on the point of starvation, they suddenly perceived the loaves sent from heaven had dropped from the skies upon the camp, as described in the Bible book of Exodus.

They had never seen this thing before—round substances, "as small as hoarfrost"—which, every day except on the Sabbath, dotted the wilderness and saved them from dying from hunger. And the Hebrew form of the question asked by the Israelites was "Man hu?" (What is it?)—which, in slightly modified form is our present word for "manna."

Urge Need for Better Planes

Washington.—A call for improvement in the performance and efficiency of American military, naval, and air force aircraft was sounded by officials of the national advisory committee for aeronautics and heads of army and navy aviation activities. In summarizing its investigations during the last year, the advisory committee asserted that the fundamental problems confronting aviation in all branches will not be solved until aircraft are made safer, more economical, easier to control at low speeds, and more efficient. In private aircraft, it stated, the airplane must be given greater safety and greater economy in production, in maintenance and operating costs if the aircraft industry is to thrive in the face of threatened decreasing military purchases.

Dr. Frederick Webb Hodge, whose "Handbook of American Indian" has remained standard through the years, has come the Heye Foundation to become head of the Southwest museum in Los Angeles, Calif. This is a grand thing for the Southwest museum, but a bad break for those of us here in New York who, any time we ever wanted scientific information, have sought Doctor Hodge and got the answer. His specialty is, of course, ethnology, or perhaps archaeology. At various times he was with the geological survey and the Smithsonian, and he was head of the bureau of American ethnology, but I rarely have seen a man who knew so much about everything. Many a time I have asked him questions, not alone concerning branches of science outside his own, but also on subjects of history and general information, and he never failed me. I certainly am going to miss that man. Give me five minutes to telephone him, and I could make anyone believe in my erudition. Moreover, Doctor Hodge and I always have seen eye to eye on matters of diet. We both consider beefsteak a highly healthful food and when we wish a bit of a change we agree on the same Chinese restaurant. Doctor Hodge is one of the few who has climbed the "Enchanted Mesa." That huge chunk of New Mexico sandstone may not be any higher than the Empire State building, but it has no elevator, which makes a difference on a hot day. Perhaps the thing for which Doctor Hodge is best known is his famous work in the excavation of Hawikuh. But the things we non-scientists know him best for are the humor and charm, which makes this scholar and gentleman so delightful a companion.

ALWAYS keep cheese in a well-covered dish or it will become dry and tasteless. It cheese is wrapped in a cloth moistened with vinegar it will remain moist and retain its flavor longer. The easiest way to wash a bean pot is to drop a pinch of soda into it, fill it with hot water and put it in the oven a couple of hours. When emptied, the bottom and sides of the pot will be as smooth as glass. An onion, green pepper and a tomato stewed together and put through a sieve, then strained and chilled and added to well-chilled mayonnaise in equal quantity, makes a delicious Russian dressing. Never put fruit peelings directly into an enamel sink, for the acids in them will ruin the enamel, making it rough and hard to keep clean.

Turks Plan Shade and Water for New Capital

Angora.—Shade and water, the two great needs of Turkey's new capital, are to be provided on a large scale next year. The deputies and large functionaries, who constitute the fatter part of Angora's new population, have been accustomed to the water sports at Istanbul, and they sigh for something similar here to make life more livable. So two large open-air swimming pools, with facilities for sun bathing are to be constructed. For shade, 350,000 trees are to be planted, including gacacias and oaks. A hundred thousand vine shoots and 20,000 fruit trees will increase the greenery.

Suggested "Washington Plaza" for Berlin

The Carl Schurz society of Berlin has made the suggestion to the city to rename the plaza in front of the Leber railroad station "Washington plaza." This would be in honor of the 200th anniversary of the birthday of George Washington, which comes on February 22, 1932.

while progress has been registered in all phases of military performance, the speed crown lost to Great Britain, France, and Italy will never be regained until more money is expended on experimental research on racing planes in this country. Both urged expenditure of increased funds to boost the speeds of all types of fighting aircraft. To stimulate depressed conditions in the aircraft industry in the interests of national defense army and navy air heads have recommended increased purchases of airplanes for the army and navy. The advisory committee takes the position that nothing would have such a beneficial effect upon the stability of the aircraft industry as "assurances of continuity of government procurement of military and naval aircraft."

SLEEP IN THE OPEN

"Why is that policeman so anxious to take night duty?" "His doctor has advised him to sleep in the open." Never put fruit peelings directly into an enamel sink, for the acids in them will ruin the enamel, making it rough and hard to keep clean.

The Kitchen Cabinet

Sandwiches Always in Season Many directions for sandwich making tell us to butter the bread before it is cut from the loaf. This is not necessary if the butter is creamed. Creaming the butter makes it go farther, has a smoother spread and is more saving.

A hot sandwich may range from a dainty toasted morsel to serve with a cup of tea, to a substantial variety which is a meal in itself. Watch the lunch counter, which in most cities one finds in drug stores, department stores and wherever hungry people may be found in any number, you will note that a square meal with a cup of hot drink or milk may be made from a hot sandwich. Two slices of bread with thin sliced meat and plenty of good gravy over it provides a fairly substantial and sustaining dish.

Hot Beef Sandwich.—Take one pound of chopped beef, one small onion and one green pepper (minced). Brown in one tablespoonful of butter; season to taste with tomato sauce and add a teaspoonful of flour. Place in buttered bun and place in the oven to keep hot.

Hot Tomato Sandwich.—Broil two thin slices of bread—whole-wheat is preferred. Put sliced tomatoes on one slice, add the bacon and cover with another slice. Put into a hot oven or heat carefully on a hot griddle.

Cheese and Pepper Sandwiches.—Pour boiling water over three large peppers, let stand a few minutes then rub off the outer skin and remove the

POULTRY

SICK HEN HAS NO PLACE IN FLOCK

Disease Prevention Should Be Chief Thought.

"Burning dead hens, or removing them from the poultry house, is not sanitation but proof that sanitation is needed," says Prof. E. L. Brunnet of the New York state veterinary college at Cornell university. "Sanitation," he says, "is built around the knowledge of the manner in which disease enters the flock and how disease spreads after it is in the flock."

The expression, hot polio is derived from the Greek words, of polio, meaning the many, multitude, or the masses.

WHAT SHE GAVE UP

He determined that some day he would own those books. When later he rejoined his family in a small town near Chicago, he used to drive a wagon to the city to get goods for his father's store. It was on such a trip that he saw in a window a two-volume, black bound "Conquest of Mexico." The price was $6. Young Ayer asked the bookseller to hold the books, offering to pay 50 cents down and the remainder in installments. The man said he looked honest; that he would trust him; that he might take the two volumes with him. Mr. Ayer never had those books rebound, but years later he took them to London and paid Zehendorf $125 to make slip covers for them. More than any other volumes in his library, those were the two money couldn't buy.

Spain Could Not Be Allies' Friend No one could be surprised that Spain preserved a strict neutrality in the great struggle of Armageddon. The historical barriers between Spain and the allied and associated powers were not to be surmounted. The deepest bitter memory of the Spaniard is the Napoleonic invasion and the agony of the Peninsular war. Even after a hundred years there could be no unity of sentiment between France and Spain. Gibraltar, though a faded cause of irritation, still plays a part in Spanish thought. But the real hatred was for the United States, and the final loss of the last remnants of the Spanish colonial empire left an aching void in the breasts of a proud race. The aristocracy were pro-German. The middle classes anti-French. As the king said, "Only I and the mob are for the Allies." The best that could be hoped for was that Spain should be neutral in the struggle; and certainly she prospered by her abstention from it.—Winston Churchill in Collier's.

Many plants are building manure houses. Tapeworms are spread by insects, principally flies. The insects manage the tapeworm eggs from the manure. Roundworms are spread by eggs which get into the bird's food and drink. Anything that can be done to keep down insect life in the manure reduces the number of parasites in the flock. Some poultrymen have found it necessary and profitable to screen the poultry houses and build manure storages to keep out flies and other insects, he says.

Select Only Vigorous Parents for Breeders

As a general rule any young bird of either sex that has been sick and out of condition should be rejected from the breeding pen. Only healthy, vigorous fowls can be expected to be profitable, and there is no more necessary measure for securing such vigor than breeding only from vigorous parents. However, the occurrence of some slight diarrhoeal trouble in growing chicks, due quite possibly to injudicious feeding, need not necessarily condemn it, if the trouble is evidently fully recovered from and the chick develops fully into a healthy individual. Suspicion should rest upon the unfortunate bird, however, and it should definitely show that it has not been injured by sickness before it is chosen to enter a breeding pen.

Planning Year's Work

Start the year right, keep going in the right manner, and finish up in the right way, if you want maximum success from your poultry. Don't overlook the scientific side of the business. You must have a knowledge of the scientific principles related to the many problems of feeding, breeding and management and most important of all, apply them. Here are four guide posts to successful poultry farming. With the proper management in each of these departments, you can put your business on a better paying basis.

Sealy Leg Treatment

Nicotine sulphate has proved to be a satisfactory ingredient for treating sealy leg. According to Wallace's Farmer, the treatment recommended to rid the fowls of this mite is as follows: Dissolve a quarter of a bar of laundry soap in boiling water, add water up to a gallon and put in one and one-fourth teaspoonfuls of concentrated nicotine sulphate (Black Leaf 40). Hold the legs of the fowls in this solution until they are thoroughly wet.

Wisconsin hens are laying about one-fifth more eggs per hundred birds than they did a year ago, states the department of agriculture. For the United States as a whole the increase in production is about 10 per cent.
Nine years of selected mating, and approved practices in breeding, feeding, and management in North Dakota agricultural college's poultry flock has boosted the highest yearly record of egg production from 108 in 1922 to 251 in 1930.

Known as Sea Unicorn The narwhal an Arctic whale, is known also as the "sea unicorn." Like the dolphin, it travels in schools, but it is seldom seen south of the polar seas. Little is known of it, but in the logs of old-time mariners, there was frequent report of the piercing of a vessel's hull by a narwhal's ivory tusks. Because the center of the narwhal's tusk is hollow, ivory of the narwhal has never achieved commercial importance.
