Within a few

lessly the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdler and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 1701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his trouble quick, strengthens him, makes him eat.'

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

Baseball and football are great blessings. They keep boys from falling in love too early.

their long bookings on wide vaudeville circuits testified to it. The Three Hortons were a cheering part of any bill and almost invariably second only in importance to a headliner like Friganza, Brice or San Francisco. There were Beatty Horton, whose patter was as nimble as his soft-shoe dancing. Alicia Horton, who could outpattern but not outdance her spouse, and, from the age of seven on, Winstead Horton, who could fling himself in a bridge from maternal to paternal shoulders, and sing in a choirsoprano that had captivated his audiences from the days he had toddled on stage with lifted hands balancing unsure feet. All that was changed now. Winstead was grown, his father Beatty had developed a gouty tendency and had been obliged to cut out the softshoe work, and Alicia, while she still made up to something of the old dazzling blondness and was adorably cute in her flip line of patter, was nevertheless subject to the relentless eye of her audience to the extent that they simply did not want the "young stuff" from her any longer. Alicia, in rather severe togs and a slight comedy makeup, was getting around that, these days, by doing the young matron sort of thing, and to a point making her audience like it. But the fact of the matter was that by the time he was eighteen, and his parents were in their forties, Winstead, single-handed, was carrying the act.

And carrying it brilliantly. A flying contortionist, voice for comic, character and solo singing, a baffling ventriloquist and a soft-shoe dancer who seldom failed to get his six recalls, the Three Horton act practically rested on his slim young shoulders. Not that anything of the kind was ever admitted in the confines of the Horton family, however achingly Beatty or Alicia might long since have realized it to themselves. Regularly. the Three Hortons held confab for the refurbishing of their act; periodically rehearsals were called, changes inserted, songs revamped and costumes freshened for each and every one of the three of them, with emphasis on the requirements of each. Beatty's audiences wanted his sure-fire bombardment, of patter; Alicia's wanted her's blond and graceful; Winstead's wanted him the flying, dancing, comic. vocal young devil.

The Three Hortons. Up to the bitto twist and turn as she danced there

It was with a sense of what seemed positive relief that Beatty capitulated Actually, his old face seemed for the first time to allow itself to fall into the luxury of wrinkles. "I guess you're right, Alicia. We're done.

There was not any money scare. Winstead, of course would see to that, and besides the Hortons, Beatty and Alicia, simple-living, simple-minded folk, had put by their little penny. It was fear of Winstead that lay in their hearts. This boy, never out of his parents' tracks, suddenly alone on the road! Fear of Winstead had squatted on their old chests, both of them, ever since the shadow of this day of their retirement had begun to cast itself across the circuit. He was such a child, Winstead was. A helpless, confiding genius-like fellow. No good at money, for instance. Had to have it handed to him every-morning. So much for taxicab. So much for lunches, and little luxuries. So much for tips. No good at watching himself against colds, to which he was subject. It took all his mother could do to keep after him effectively with mufflers. rubbers and precaution about drafts. No good at eating well. His father was forever giving him the second helpings of food without his even knowing it, stacking his plate when his attention was diverted and then insisting that he eat.

> "But I have eaten, father. Didn't you slip some more potatoes on my plate?"

"Nonsense. Eat, I say !" Imagine a boy like that, a helpless, off-in-the-clouds fellow who had never had to think much for himself about the creature phases of life, off suddenly by himself on a circuit. It hurt the heart of Alicia so that she cried most of her nights. It threw such a dread into Beatty that his efforts to pretend to Alicia that all was well were pathetic to her almost beyond endurance.

Well, it had to be faced and the sooner the better. The Hortons purchased for themselves the inevitable chicken farm in New Jersey, that haven of all good retired vaudevillians, and Winstead, bewildered and a little frightened with his released, began rehearing a new act with a young girl with the stage name of "Yvette," whose singing and dancing had attracted the admiration of the Three Hor> tons. It was a whirlwind turn of fast, amusing young-blood talk, really exquisite and highly diverting soft-shoe and toe-dancing, and some pretty duet singing that marked them for almost instantaneous success.

After a tryout in Newark, Winstead and Yvette were booked over a fortyweek cycle and the pair of the older Hortons settled down to what gallant resignation they could muster.

And muster they did, except it actually did seem that with the letting down of the strain and excitement of their life-time of years on the circuit. Beatty and Alicia were destined to fall ter end, until Beatty's patter began to apart like the proverbial one-hoss crack in his throat, and Alicia's ankles shay. Its many-gored skirt which slenderizes at the hipline and flares at the hemline is one of the outstanding features of the model. The surplice yoke of white mesh is also voguish.

VELVET IS SMART FOR SPRING WEAR

Many velvets are popping up here and there in the shops.

One of the most effective suits for formal wear combines a white velvet jacket with a black satin skirt. The velvet of the jacket is the new dullsurface variety, and very smart. Short velvet evening wraps are to take the fashion trenches by storm this spring. They are being shown in every conceivable color, from black and white, through the pastels, to the bright jewel tones.

A black velvet coat for spring wear has barrel sleeves starting to flare at the elbow, and gathered into a tight cuff of white ermine. A standing white ermine collar is finished by a black velvet bow, like a windsor tie.

Spring Suit Must Have Jacket to Be Success

You must have a jacket with your new spring frock if it is to be a grand success. Of course, the jacket is sometimes a long coat, especially when it comes to the ensembles that are so liked just now. But it is jackets and nothing but in the evening, when the younger set, almost to a girl, steps out wearing some sort of jacket, however brief, with her frock.

Mostly the jackets are of the same material as the frock, and what they lack in length they make up in chic. But to put back to the frock with its coat, that does not match in color or material and yet manages to show that it is the soul-mate of the accompanying frock.

Plaid Ginghams

Another southern fashion that will bear watching is the shirt made just like a man's, of brilliant plaided gingham. These are worn with trousers or with sports skirts and have a chic all their own.

But the time had come when it was apparent even to Winstead himself that there was imposition in any longer asking for bookings for the older pair. SYNOPSIS

Acting in good faith to aid a neigh-bor, Ruth Ingraham, in a business way, Edward Patterson, cashier of the Chi-cago agency of a life insurance com-pany, is wrongly suspected by his wife, Julia, o' infidelity. Her accusa-tion unfits him for business, and he takes a short vacation. On his return he is ceply wounded by his daugh-ter, Edith, telling him his personal belongings are in the "spare room," having been removed from the room which had been his and his wife's bed-room. Patterson accepts the situation which had been his and his wife's bed-noom. Patterson accepts the situation as proof of his swife's belief in his guilt. Edith, seventeen years old, is worried over the estrangement of her parents. Her mother only partly suc-ceeds in her efforts to comfort her. The son, Edward, Junior, is at college. A business matter brings an "inven-tor." James Mariner, into Patterson's life. Mariner needs §6,000, with which to push his invention, an automobile choke, and Patterson, after a brief in-vestigation, decides to go in with him, supplying the money and taking a part in the management. Without informing his family, he resigns from the insurappring the money and taking a part in the management. Without informing is family, he resigns from the insur-nace company, devoting his whole ime to the pushing of the invention. A talk with Eoger Morgan heartens her. Edward mean a saving of several hundred dol-lars, and Edith agrees. A talk with Roger Morgan heartens her. Edward tells her he is going to pay his own way through the university, and she decides to leave school and fit herself to become her father's stenographer. He is hurt, but her determination is evident. Edith finishes her course and takes the position in her father's of-fice. At her urging he goes out as a salesman to sell the choke.

CHAPTER V—Continued -10-

"Nothing doing at all," he said violently. "I've been listening to you fellows all day, and I'm through. See?"

"I feel, I suppose, much as you do," Edward told him. "It's as tiring work trying to find the doors to inaccessible minds as it is to sit listening to strings of plausible nonsense. Yet it's part of your business to be curious and tolerant, and it's part of mine to be indefatigable. I may have something you want, and you may be a potential customer of mine. It won't take either of us but a few minutes to find out."

He was conscious of having created with this speech, some sort of disturbance in the mental atmosphere of the man behind the counter. In particular, the word indefatigable seemed to have startled him. He'd been frightfully self-conscious and embarrassed over his choice of words during the earlier encounters of the day; trying for the vocabulary, the phrases, even the inflections, of hard-boiled salesmanship, and aware that he wasn't doing it successfully

But when he ceased talking, the impulse to retort died away. As he sat there with hanging head, his face working and his hands clenched, he was merely pitiable. Suddenly he looked up. "I beg your

But about this choke. I think there's a real chance to open up some new territory. I'll do the very best by it that I can. At the very least, 1 can make it pay my way.' "How much." Edward asked nim thoughtfully, "how much money would you need?"

"To start with? Oh, not very much." "I don't mean that." Edward told him. "I mean for the whole trip." Mariner smiled wryly, "To be rid of me," he commented, "for good and all,"

up a chair. "Let's have it out. What's on your mind?" Mariner surprised him. "I've been there now !"

Of late he'd been forgetting about this supposed necessity but it wasn't until now that he realized how far he had lapsed. Indefatigable wasn't the only one, either. How about "inaccessible" and "potential" and "plausible nonsense"! Surprisingly, though, they seemed not to have done his cause any harm. Possibly this hail of polysyllables had dazed his victim. The implacable hostility of his expression didn't change and he spoke as gruffly as ever, but what he said was, "What you got?"

Edward took the choke out of his pocket and handed it over to him but didn't at once launch out on his explanation; gave him time for a curious and rather mystified examination first. This wasn't conscious drama on his part. He was still thinking about the effect of his words.

Was it possible that an honestly acquired command of the English language was an asset and not a liability? Certainly he'd got on better since he'd quit pretending to be less educated than he really was.

The man was asking questions, he kept on asking them. He must like the thing or he wouldn't hang on to it like that. He sneered at Edward's lighted match test but he repeated the thing two or three times for himself. Why?

Suddenly Edward got a surmise as to the answer to that question and it excited him as the sight of the fleeing cat excites the dog.

The man was afraid! He was afraid he'd buy. A stupid man, no doubt, not very quick witted, anyhow, inclined to be credulous. If he didn't look out people took him in, persuaded him of things; especially people whose intelligence he recognized as superior to his own. His defense was to frighten them, with his sneers, his bullying voice. When he succeeded in frightening them he avenged on them his own fears.

This time, though, his defense had failed. The shoe was on the other foot. This customer, before Edward got through with him, was going to sign his name on the dotted line of an order form. A dozen? No. A full carton of two dozen was the tune he was going to dance to.

All the same, when the order was finally filled in and the signature written down, a feeling akin to panic took possession of the salesman. The man might snatch the thing back from him and tear it up. He didn't feel safe until he had got outside.

Lord, what an experience! Well, he knew, now, how the thing was done. He looked at his watch and found it was six o'clock. He'd have to call it a day. He could face Edith, now, at all events. He telephoned the office and Mariner, who happened to be there, told him she had gone home.

Mariner seemed to want him to come back that evening. There was quite a bit of mail, he said; and then there was a matter he wanted to talk about. But Edward told him it would have to wait. He didn't want to talk

Except for a few agencies in the South, it's practically a local business. Our real market's in the West, and that part of the country hasn't been touched. St. Louis and Kansas City and from there on, all the way to California . .

Edward pricked up his ears. He began to see what was coming. He switched his mind off what Mariner was saying and began to think. By the time the inventor wound up "That's how it looks to me," he had pretty well decided upon his line. "That's not a bad idea," he said, "if you can see any way to accomplish it. Of course our main preoccupation just now is to keep afloat. We couldn't afford to send missionaries out to convert the West, even if we had the man to go."

"Of course it would be essential," Mariner said, "to send the right man. I agree with you about that. I'd even thought it would be well if I went myself; take my own car and drive all the way. Go to St. Louis first and get the work started there. Then, across to Kansas City. That's an enormous field. When I got that organized I'd go on west, to the coast.

That's the biggest field of all." "How long," Edward asked thoughtfully, "do you figure the trip will take?"

"Oh, not so very long," Mariner told him. "Six weeks, perhaps."

Edward repressed an impulse to smile. Had the man any idea how transparent he was? "You couldn't do the job very thoroughly in that length of time," he commented mildly. "Oh, of course," Mariner admitted, 'I wouldn't expect to stay in every town and wait till the results came in. I'd give them a chance to take it if they wanted it, though." Edward glanced around. Edith had slipped out into the shop. "Mariner," he said, "for just five minutes, let's talk plainly. If you're advocating this trip to the coast as a selling program, you're talking nonsense. There's more buying power up Sheridan road from here to Milwaukee than there is along your whole route between Kansas and California. We haven't begun to cover Cook county. By the time we have covered it, we'll know definitely whether we've got anything or not. We've both been shirking. You've done nothing for weeks; nor I either, so far as the vital need of this business is concerned, until yesterday.

"Yesterday I was out in the street myself. I didn't sell much, but it was the most instructive day I've ever lived through. I knew now that our thing can be sold, and I know 1 can to Mariner tonight. He didn't want sell it. What's more, I can make the to talk to anybody. He telephoned the salesmen sell it. My proposal is that by themselves as they came along. It for him.

"I've got to know," Edward said, "Yes, of course," Mariner acquiesced. You're right from your point of view. Five hundred dollars? I'll earn that in commissions between here and Kansas City. But that'll be enough, I guess."

"Well, if you earn more than that, I'll be glad to pay it-after the orders come in and the bills are paid. I won't honor any drafts, though," he added bluntly, "on prospects or promises." Mariner nodded. "That's understood," he said. "But about that check. Can I have it now? If I can. I'll start tomorrow." "I can let you have it," Edward said, "-just about." He wrote it on the spot and Mariner put it in his pocket. His manner had changed. His face seemed actually to have filled out a little. "You're a good sport, Patterson," he said, "and I believe you're going to make a go of this. I don't believe you'll regret having gone into it. I'm off now. This is going to be a lively day."

For a while after the door had closed behind him, Edward sat thoughtfully at his desk. That check had pretty well cleaned him out. Yet, his feeling was that Mariner's departure for good had been cheap at the price. Suppose he'd foreseen this ending on that night when he and Mariner had dined together for the first time at the club. and he'd listened to those golden prophecies and dreamed those roseate dreams. Lord!

But the queer thing was that he was glad he hadn't foreseen it; glad he hadn't consulted Bert about it as he had half meant to do that night. The very blindness of his infatuation struck him as a piece of luck. His daughter's voice startled him. "Gosh, I hope he stays in California !" she said. "Dad, what do you suppose Baby's been up to out there, that he's so excited about?" But she didn't seem to expect him to answer that. "What gets me," she went on almost at once, "is why he should care what she does-as long as she doesn't come back. She treats him like a worm when she's here. He can't possibly like her. Nobody could like a person like that. What does he want of her?" She came over to him, pulled him around in his swivel chair, sat down in his lap and hugged him.

"I think you're perfectly great, dad," she said. Then she laughed. "I bet you're glad mother isn't like that. Come on, let's get to work."

"We're just at the beginning," he told her. "Making our real start today. That's the way I feel about it. It's a long road, my dear, but it leads somewhere."

CHAPTER VI

The Sacrifice That one thing, the length of the road, was what Edith dared not let herself think about. She didn't mind any of the incidents of the job, taken fur coat that must have cost several hundred dollars, and his car looked as if it represented thousands of dollars. He had stopped at the garage for something-gas I suppose-and he came into the office while he waited. I happened to be in there selling a carton of chokes. He looked and listened a minute and began asking me questions. . think he spoiled my sale. He was so interested and got so enthusiastic that I imagine the boss suspected it was a plant; took us for a pair of conspirators. However, the loss of that sale won't matter much if . .

> He broke that sentence off short, as if he had tried to stop himself; as if the last half of that sentence was something he didn't want to say. "Did you sell him one for his car?"

Edith asked. "I gave him one, or rather he took it. He seemed to want it to play with, like a child who has found some irresistible toy. He says he's coming around the frst thing tomorrow morning to talk about it."

She was as excited now as he. "Dad !" she cried, "do you think he means-to go in?"

"I don't know what I think," he told her. "I'm afraid to think. Certainly it was from that point of view that he talked about it. He couldn't understand why it hadn't been advertised. He talked about putting thirty thousand dollars into a local newspaper campaign-as a preliminary. He made my head swim. J haven't really got my feet on the ground yet. Well, there's no use thinking any more about him until tomorrow. We'll see what he says then-provided he comes." He set about opening his letters, and she went back-made, anyhow a pretense of going back-to her own affairs.

Did he mean to tell mother tonight, she wondered? Or would he want to wait until they knew whether Jake turned up again or not. She mustn't of course say anything unless he did. He didn't leave her in suspense. Oddly enough, pother, with her first look at them, as they came in, thought they looked blue.

"Bad day?" she asked. "Don't you care. We've got a good dinner."

"No," dad said, "it isn't that. We're a little bit frightened perhaps, but not depressed. Let's hear what you think about it." And he went ahead and told the whole thing. "What's your guess?" he asked, when he finished. "Will Jake turn up tomorrow morn-

Unmeasured Winds

The strongest winds are those of tornadoes and have never been measured. Plausible estimates based on the effects of these storms run up to 400 or 500 miles an hour in some cases. The strongest winds ever measured instrumentally blew at the summit of Mount Washington, N. H. January 11, 1878. The indicated velocity was 186 miles an hour, but certain necessary corrections reduce this to about 140 miles an hour.

Common Error

Majority rule, by some weird perversion of the human mind, is often held to mean not that the majority should rule but that the majority is right.-Woman's Home Companion.

IN ANCIENT TIMES · · · when kings had many slaves, it was the custom to bury a slave alongside the dead monarch, supposedly to protect his master from all things harmful.

RAYMOND HATTON

The day of the slave, and these ancient customs, have passed; but there still lingers the desire to everlastingly protect the remains of those who have passed away.

The assurance of this protection is provided through the Buckstaff Burial Vault, which is guaranteed, for 99 years, to protect against ground waters and burrowing animals entering the vault.

of anthracite coal, except buckwheat, will be lowered immediately for the Milwaukee market. The reductions are $1 a ton on egg and stove size; $1.25 on chestnut, and 50 cents on pea, making the new rates $14.80 for egg and chestnut. $15.05 on stove and $13.05 on pea. The carrying charge, for taking the coal from the curb to the basement, remains at 75 cents a ton on all grades.

Madison - Economic conditions among Wisconsin farmers caused such a drop in the number of subscribers on rural telephone lines that twelve small town telephone companies have reduced rates voluntarily since last October, according to a report of the public service commission. The voluntary reductions will mean a saving of about $4,000 to 12000 rural consumers. Numerous other small companies are applying for rate reductions for the same reason.

La Crosse-Seventeen public milk stations of La Crosse, where consumers purchase their milk supply in bulk and carry it home in their own containers, are facing a battle for existence. Farmers having their own pasteurizing plants or who sell to pasteurizing plants in the city are leading the attack on the stations. They have circulated petitions demanding a bottling ordinance. The station price is 6 cents a quart, while bottled pasteurized milk sells here at 8 cents a quart.

Madison - Warrants charging Fay Hammersley, prominent Dane county farmer, and Mrs. Mary E. Corcoran with murdering Mrs. Corcoran's husband, Martin J. Corcoran, by poison were dismissed by Circuit Judge Hoppmann here without prejudice to the state. The dismissal was on the recommendation of Special Prosecutor Carl N. Hill, who pointed out that there is no statute of limitation for murder and complaints might be filed and defendants arrested at any time if new evidence were uncovered.

Eau Claire-A large force of prohibition agents from Minnesota and Wisconsin descended on Somerset, near here, cleaning up what they said was the source of much liquor finding its way to the Twin Cities. Five men were arrested and five stills were seized. Agents found 1,500 gallons of liquor and 3,000 gallons of mash.

Plainfield-Because he rose before daylight Oscar Currier lost the sight of one eye. In the darkness he bumped into a stove pipe and the sharp end of the damper handle entered his eye.

Madison-Oil companies are seeking to claim exemption of lease and agency filling stations from the chain store license levied under the new emergency relief law. About $35,000 had been collected in license fees up to Feb. 25, with the largest check, one for $13,290, coming from the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company.

Wausau-The old saw mill of the Wisconsin Box Cd. burned here with a loss of about $15,000. The saw mill, which was built in 1915, had not been operated since 1922.

mund Gutowski, who were arrested by a game warden with 106 brook trout that they caught in the Weirgor creek. near Exeland will spend two months in the county jail because of their inability to pay fines of $50 each. This is one of the largest illegal trout catches ever reported in this county.

Green Bay-George J. Zeutzius of this city recently discovered that his on, Arthur, whom he had not seen for nearly twenty-five years, is a resident of Appleton, and the two have been reunited. Adversity resulted in the adoption of Arthur by a family named Altenberg, who moved away from this section soon after, and it was reported that the boy had died in infancy.

Madison-The enrollment of Wiscon. sin boys and girls in Four-H clubs increased 3,000 in 1931. The total was 31.834, compared with 28,514 in 1930. The 31.834 children were members of 2,017 clubs and carried on nearly 40,-000 separate projects on which business records were kept, demonstrating currency, and recently initiated as the as far as possible better farm and home practices.

Marshfield-Olive Charboneau, 15, a Four-H club girl from Vesper, this county, observed George Washington's birthday in Chicago by baking a cherry pie that won the $500 prize offered by the national cherry week committee. representing the cherry industry and growers. Jefferson-Following disclosure of a shortage of $4,721 in his accounts, County Treasurer Frederick Bullwinkel rosigned at the request of the Jefferson county board. Officials believe that the shortage is due to management. Bullwinkel devoted only part of his time to the job of treasurer and received $750 a year for the work. Since disclosure of the shortage the county board has made the treasurer's post a full time job and increased the annual of Madison, Wis. salary to $1,500.

Madison-Dr. Harry Steenbock, University of Wisconsin scientist and inventor of the food irradiation process, has discovered that the Vitamin D content of eggs can be increased by subjecting hens to ultra-violet rays. Vitamin D is that element found only in the yolks of eggs and in butter fats. It aids in the cure of rickets and other ailments of children.

Wisconsin Rapids-Operations have been resumed in the plant of the National Carbonic Machinery company, which was closed last fall.

Madison-Hanging or burning a person in effigy is not a crime in Wisconsin, J. E. Messerschmidt assistant attorney general, said in an opinion sent to the district attorney of Polk county, who reported that a leader in affairs in that county had been hanged in effigy in a village street.

plicit in the nine-power treaty and other agreements concerning the Pacific. These pacts he declared to be interdependent, and the maintenance of the integrity of China necessary for the welfare not only of China but of the whole world. In effect Mr. Stimson's statement is a threat by the administration that the United States will abrogate the Washington treaty limiting the capital ship strength of the naval powers and restricting American defenses in the western Pacific if Japan persists in disregarding the nine-power treaty guaranteeing the territorial integrity of China. He said if the Pacific treaties had been faithfully observed such a situation as now exists could not have arisen.

Credit Expansion Measure

Is Passed by the Senate Washington - The Glass-Steagall mergency banking bill, intended to bring about expansion of credit and result of conferences which President Hoover called with leaders in the two houses, was passed without a roll call by the senate.

Before passing the bill, the senate dopted amendments proposed by Senator Elmer Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, which provide for a two-year life for that section of the measure relating to advances to individual memauthorization of a bond-secured currency.

Nerves on edge. A head that throbs. You can't stop work, but you can stop the pain—in a hurry. Bayer Aspirin will do it every time. Take two or three tablets, a swallow of water, and you're soon com-fortable. There's nothing half-way about the action of genuine aspirin If the box says Bayer, you will get complete relief.

These tablets should be in every shop, office, and home. Ready to relieve any sudden ache or pain, from a grumbling tooth to lumbago. Don't suffer with that neuralgia, neuritis, rheumatism, etc; or lose any time because of colds or sore throat. Get some Bayer Aspirin and just follow those proven directions for instant relief.

Get the genuine tablets, stamped with the Bayer cross. They cost very little, especially if you buy them by the bottle. Any doctor will tell you they are harmless. They don't hurt the heart. They don't upset the stomach. So take them as often as you have the least need of their quick comfort. Take enough for complete results.

Early Diving Suit

The diving suit is not so new as one might think. A patent was granted to John Stapleton on March 17, 1693, for "a new engine so by him contrived as to permit a person inclosed in it to walk under water, and to a new invented way to force air into any depth of water to supply the person in the said engine therewith and for continu ing a lamp burning under water; alse a way to deserate and purify the air so as to make the same serviceable for respiration."

Up-to-the-Minute and Practical Every woman wishes to be as well-dressed as possible without spending too much time or money on her clothes. That is why so many women in this community turn first to the page in this newspaper which contains the illustrated fashion articles by MissCherie Nicholas: For Miss Nicholas is an authority on fashions-not the freak models and the extreme styles, but the fashions in dress which the modern woman demands, those which are up-to-theminute and at the same time economical and practical.

Be sure to look for these articles in each issue of this newspaper and then tell your women friends about them. They will be glad to know how they, too, can wear clothes which carry the message of the well-dressed woman.
