KEWASKUM, WISCONSIN, FRIDAY, MARCH 15 1932

KEWASKUM HIGH SCHOOL COLUMN

School closed on Thursday and Friday for the Easter holidays. It will resume on Monday morning. The regular boy scout meeting will be held on Monday evening. The scouts will be represented by the members of the scout basketball team at Lomira on Saturday. The girls of the General Science class as a part of their work on the subject of clothing prepared charts of the most common types of cloth. The charts considered best contained 78 colored samples of cloth all correctly labeled. It was prepared by Mauella Kerschbaum, Alice Dreher and Lorraine Halves. The chart given second prize was prepared by Inez Stellpflug, Violet Kerschbaum, Beulah Schaub and Bernita Backhaus. In the health posters made by the same class, Ruth Foy's poster was considered best; Inez Stellpflug's second best and honorable mention was awarded to the one prepared by Alice Dreher. The local High School attended the basketball tournament at Slinger last Thursday, Friday and Saturday. In the first game we were successful and defeated the old rival, Campbellsport, by a score of 29 to 30. It required an overtime period of three minutes to do the trick. In the second game we were not so successful and were handily defeated by the strong Menominee Falls team which later won the tournament by defeating Random Lake. The tournament was featured by close games and very fine officiating. There were many fouls called and consequently many boys were put out of the game on four fouls. In the second game, Joe Enders was given a berth of forward and Harold Marx was chosen center.

DEATHS OF THE PAST WEEK

FERDINAND RAMTHUN
Ferdinand Ramthun, aged 91, a former resident of the town of Osceola, Fond du Lac county, passed away on Monday, March 14, at 5:30 a. m., at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Chas. Pregel, 2542 N. Fifth St., Milwaukee. Death being due to a week's illness with pneumonia.
Deceased was born May 6, 1841, in Dorbitz, Pommern, Germany. When a young man of twenty-six, in company with a number of friends, seeing future possibilities in the Land of the Free, immigrated to America in 1867, settling in Kewaskum, where he labored for several years among friends. On March 18, 1875, he was married to Louise Glese, in the town of Addison, Washington county. Soon after his marriage, the couple went to farming in the town of Osceola, Fond du Lac county, where he resided up to the time of his wife's death in 1909. In the year 1910 he went to live with his daughter, Mrs. Chas. Pregel, at Fond du Lac, where the Pregel family resided until the year 1918, when they moved to Milwaukee.
Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ramthun, four of whom still survive, namely: Bertha (Mrs. Fred Ebert) of the town of Ashford, Tillie (Mrs. Chas. Pregel) of Milwaukee, and Robert and Julius of the homestead. Mr. Ramthun had many warm friends in the town of Osceola, where he ploughed in the early days. During his period of long life he has been very active. He went about his tasks of life with calm deliberation.
The remains were brought to the Clem Reinders funeral parlors Monday noon, where they laid in state until Thursday at 1 p. m., the funeral services being held at 2 o'clock at the Trinity Lutheran church at Dundee, conducted by the Rev. Stroschein. Interment was made in the Mitchell cemetery.

In the Shadow of the Terror By Albert T. Reid

THIS LAWLESS COUNTRY

It is not to be wondered at that the press of Europe points to the Lindbergh kidnaping as proof that the United States is the most lawless nation in the world. We are. There is no doubt about that. There is no other country pretending to civilization in which the machinery of the law is so inefficient to protect the individual, in which people generally hold the law in disrespect. It is a disgrace to the United States that Col. Lindbergh should have felt it necessary to call, not on the constituted police authorities, but upon acknowledged "underworld" characters to lead the search for his baby. We do not blame Col. Lindbergh; any father in his case would do whatever he could, regardless of the law, to get his little boy back safely. But it is an amazing confession of impotence on the part of the police of New Jersey and of the country at large that kidnaping can be carried on without fear of punishment, as so many recent instances have proven. Perhaps the public indignation arising from this dramatic disclosure of the failure of our law-enforcement and protective machinery may result in an anti-crime wave which will wipe out the shameful reputation our nation has earned by public indifference to crime. Perhaps we may see citizens taking the law into their own hands, as in old Vigilante days in San Francisco, and hanging racketeers and gangsters from the most convenient lampposts. Perhaps, and then, perhaps nobody will do anything much about it. That is more likely, in view of our past history in such matters.

CARL STRUEBING

Carl Struebing, 80 years, a highly respected citizen of the town of Wayne, since he immigrated to this country in the year 1868, died at his home Sunday, March 13th. Death being due to heart trouble from which sickness he has been ailing for the past two years.
Deceased was born in Germany on August 2, 1851, and when a lad of 17 years immigrated to America. He married Margaret Schwendener in the year 1874, in the town of Wayne. After this event the then young couple took up farming in that township where they resided until eighteen years ago, when, with the effects of advanced age being felt, they retired to Wayne, where they have made their home since. To this union four children were born, one son, John, passed away at the age of 7 years. Those living, besides his wife, are: William Struebing of the town of Wayne, Herman Struebing of Sheboygan and Kathryn (Mrs. A. Joss) of Milwaukee.
With Mr. Struebing's death, one of the few remaining old settlers of the town of Wayne has gone into eternity. He found his greatest enjoyment in congenial work close to nature and in peaceful home life.
The funeral was held Tuesday, March 22, at 2 o'clock with services in the Salem's Reformed church at Wayne, and interment was made in the congregation's cemetery. Rev. A. A. Graf officiated.

CELEBRATES 74th BIRTHDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Christ. Schaefer, Jr., were host and hostess to a large gathering at their home last week Thursday evening, March 17th, St. Patrick's Day. The occasion being in honor of Mr. Schaefer's 74th birthday anniversary. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. John H. Techtmann of Milwaukee; Fred Schaefer, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schaefer and son, Elmer Abel and family of West Bend; Mr. and Mrs. William Schaefer, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Schaefer and son, town of Barton; Mr. and Mrs. William Backhaus, Mr. and Mrs. August Schaefer, town of Auburn; Miss Minerva Summerfield of Fond du Lac; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Prost, Edward Schaefer and family, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Schaefer, Elwyn M. Romaine and Herman Belger. All report having had a very enjoyable evening.

BASEBALL TOURNAMENT AT KEWASKUM

Principal E. E. Skalkskey was at Fond du Lac last week Saturday where a meeting of the officers of the Tri-County Interscholastic Athletic Association was held. SLINGER UNDISPUTED COUNTY CHAMPIONS

The Slinger basket ball team are the 1932 basket ball champions of Washington county, having won that title when they defeated West Bend by a score of 36 to 24 in a game played at Hartford last week Thursday evening. On Friday evening, in the finals of the Tri-County Tournament, held at Hartford the Leaf Fords of Oconomowoc won the championship of the tournament, when they defeated Slinger in a very close and exciting game by a score of 42 to 36.
MISS VIOLA HAFEMANN MARRIED
In a quiet home wedding Tuesday evening at 5 o'clock, Miss Viola A. Hafemann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hafemann, of this village and Roy F. Schreiber, son of Mrs. Louis Schreiber, of West Bend, were married by Rev. Otto of West Bend. The bride attired in a blue georgette gown carrying a bouquet of roses, sweet peas and ferns was attended by her sister, Miss Armita, as maid of honor. The latter wore a beautiful gown, old rose color, and carried a shower bouquet of roses, sweet peas and ferns. Ralph Schellenberg acted as best man, and Beatrice Hafemann was flower girl, wearing a peach color dress and carried a basket of roses. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion. After the wedding, dinner was served at the home with immediate relatives of both families in attendance.
The young couple will make their home for the time being at Kewaskum. The friends of both Mr. and Mrs. Schreiber join in wishing them a very prosperous and happy married life.

VILLAGE OFFICES GO BEGGING

The village caucus last week Thursday evening was the quietest held since the incorporation of the village, only 31 votes being cast. The office of Village President goes a begging. Although Theo. Schmidt, the present incumbent, received the nomination, he refused to be a candidate, which up to the present time leaves the candidacy open, and as no nomination papers were circulated and filed within the time required by law, 15 days before election, no name for President will appear on the ballot. Joseph Eberle, who received the nomination for trustee, also withdrew, which leaves three names for trustees on the ballot and three are to be elected. Unless a contest is stirred up to write certain names on the ballot for Village President, there will be no opposition.
The official village ballot, after considering the withdrawals, will read:
President—Blank.
Trustees—Frank Hepp, John F. Schaefer, Chas. Hafemann.
Clerk—S. N. Casper.
Treasurer—John Marx.
Assessor—A. P. Schaefer.
Supervisor—N. W. Rosenheimer.
Justice of the Peace—Otto E. Lay, Emil Backhaus.
Constable—Fred H. Buss.

CAUCUS RESULTS IN OTHER LOCALITIES

CARD OF THANKS

To all those who so kindly assisted us during the illness and after the death of our beloved mother, Mrs. Barbara Klein, to those who furnished cars, to the choir, to Rev. Kanless for his consoling words, to those who sent floral offerings, to the funeral director, Clem Reinders, we extend our sincere thanks.
The Children

IN MEMORY OF CARL AND JOHN KELLER

Two little Angels now on high,
They hand in hand together roam.
Two links now bind us to the sky,
Two fingers beckon us to come.
Lord give us strength our loss to bear,
And lead us in the Heavenly way.
Oh! may we meet our children there
In realms of everlasting day.
Sadly missed by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Keller, brothers and sisters.

NEW SERIAL STORY APRIL 8th

A new serial story will start April 8th, in the Statesman, entitled "Caged" written by Courtney Ryley Cooper, well known writer of stories of circus life. "Caged" is the tale of a country lad who landed in New York with the idea of setting Broadway on fire with his accordion playing. He found the going exceedingly rough, became innocently involved with gangsters, and finally joined a circus. His thrilling adventures in that romantic life make a top-notch story that all readers will heartily enjoy. Be sure to get your first copy Friday, April 8th.

BASE BALL MEETING MARCH 28

The regular monthly meeting of the Kewaskum Athletic Club will be held Monday evening, March 28th, at 8 p. m., at Jos. Eberle's place. All members are requested to be present. Several important reports of the officers and committees will be given.

CHILD BADLY BURNED

Mary Lou, the 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ruecher, of Theresa, was badly burned last Saturday as she crawled from behind a stove just as her mother started to raise the cover on a waterless cooker, containing chili. As there was too much pressure in the cooker, a quantity of the contents spurted out about the face and head of the child.
—Geo. Romaine and wife of New Prospect visited with their son Elwyn and family Sunday. The latter's son, Robert, being confirmed.

ANOTHER CHEST CLINIC FOR WASHINGTON COUNTY

Washington county's second free chest clinic for March falls on the eve of the fifth annual campaign for the early diagnosis of tuberculosis to be conducted throughout the nation beginning April 1. The Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association, which will conduct the clinic, sponsors the campaign in this state.
The clinic will be held at the High School at Slinger on Thursday, March 31. It will be open from 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. during which time free examinations for defects of the lungs and heart will be made.
Children under 16 years of age must be accompanied by an adult, preferably a parent, because accurate information concerning a child's past illnesses or possible contact with someone having tuberculosis is of great aid to the examining doctor.
Children under six years of age will not be examined unless they have had close contact with someone having tuberculosis.
No treatment will be given at the clinic. All persons whose examinations reveal them to be in need of treatment or further medical advice will be referred to their own family doctors.
"Tuberculosis causes tuberculosis," Miss Ruby McKenzie, County Nurse, who arranged the clinic, says. "Every case comes from another. Tuberculosis is spread to others, particularly children, by persons who have the disease. Frequently a person spreads germs without knowing it. That is why periodic physical examinations are so necessary."
The Washington County Board sponsors the clinics in the county, and aids the W. A. T. A. in financing them.

VISITORS INSPECT STUDEBAKER PLANT

The layman's interest in the mysteries of modern automobile manufacture is shown by the large number of visitors to the Studebaker factory in 1931. No less than 7,105 people stole a glimpse "behind the scenes," a number 10.7% greater than the year previous. They represented every state in the Union and eleven foreign countries. Two regular inspection tours are conducted by the Studebaker Corporation daily, except Saturdays and holidays. Uniformed guides escort visitors through the different Studebaker plants, explaining features of particular interest in the building of the modern motor car.

PAUL HAUSMANN HONORED

Paul Hausmann, son of Dr. and Mrs. William Hausmann, Sr., of West Bend, was among 69 freshmen who were elected to Phi Eta Sigma fraternity, honorary freshman scholastic fraternity at the University of Wisconsin. The initiation of members into the fraternity will be held at the University Memorial Union, student center, on Wednesday, March 30.

MISS ELVERINA BECKER BEST GUESSER

The egg day at L. Rosenheimer's on Wednesday was largely attended and patronized. The number of eggs received that day were 50,526. Miss Elverina Becker proved to be the best guesser, missing the count by only 26. Her guess was 50,500. She was awarded first prize, a new $5.00 pair of shoes; Elmer Moldenhauer captured second prize, 100 pounds of Pillsbury flour; his guess was 50,400. Other prize winners were: third, a $3.00 hat, Miss Elvianor Schief, 50,320; fourth, 100 lbs. Lomira Egg Mash, Matthew J. Metz, 50,540; fifth, 10 gallons gasoline, Miss Lucile Backhaus, 50,600.

LOCAL TRUCK DRIVER STOPPED

Raymond Klein, truck driver for Lester Dreher, local truck man, while enroute to Milwaukee Tuesday morning with a load of cattle, was stopped about two miles south of West Bend by state inspector W. J. Philip for reweighing of load carried. The inspector found that there was approximately 2000 pounds over weight, and issued a summons for Mr. Klein to appear in Justice Hayden's court at West Bend Wednesday morning. Mr. Dreher appeared for Mr. Klein in court and was obliged to apply for an additional license according to the overweight. No other fines was imposed.

RED CROSS MAKES APPEAL

Mrs. E. L. Morgenroth, chairman of the Red Cross, wishes to announce that the Red Cross has again made a strong appeal for old clothes. She asks all to keep all such clothes as each desire to donate to the Red Cross until such time when the Boy Scouts will be designated to gather same. The work of collection is expected to take place within a short time. Watch for the date, and in the meantime save your old clothes for the Red Cross.

THESSA BOY FINDS $7000

Harold Brodzeller, aged 15, of Theresa, last week Friday near the Emanuel Pfaff residence in Theresa, found a packet that contained liberty bonds and notes valued at approximately $7000. The securities found belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Martin Budahn of Theresa, from whom they were stolen last summer. At the time of the theft, the loot contained $320.00 in cash besides the valuable securities. The cash was missing in the find. No doubt the thieves kept the cash and hid the securities with intentions of coming back to reclaim same.

FOND DU LAC COUNTY RECEIVES $153,000.00

County Treasurer M. Washburn of Fond du Lac this week received a check for $153,000 from the state to be applied on the county highway bond retirement under the new highway law.

BELL TO BE BLESSED

The new bell for the rebuilt St. Bridget's church at St. Bridget's will be blessed Sunday afternoon, March 28th, with special services at 3 p. m. A number of neighboring clergymen will be in attendance.

BRAT WURST SUPPER

The Ladies' Aid of the Evangelical Peace church will give a Brat Wurst supper in the church dining room on Thursday, March 31. Everybody is cordially invited.

APPRECIATION

I appreciate the vote of confidence in nominating me for re-election to the office of Village President. However, I wish to announce that I am not a candidate for that office and the nomination is declined.

FINNEY OF THE FORCE

Cough 'Em Up, Finney!

THE FEATHERHEADS

Gullible, Nothing

Follows the Hens
"About what time does the sun set in winter?" queried the teacher of the class.
The smallest boy answered, "When our hens go to roost."—Capper's Weekly.

Distinguishing Marks
"Do you think that man is a natural born orator?"
"I am sure he is not," answered Senator Sorghum. "He doesn't look well in a frock coat and a high hat."

RAPID PROGRESS
"How is your wife getting on with her social settlement work?"
"Great. She's had her picture in the paper twice this month."
Impossible
Little red-headed Suzanne liked kisses for all her bumps. One evening she came running to mother with: "Mother, dear, I hurt my heel. Kiss it." Mother was washing dishes so she answered, "Kiss it yourself, I'm busy."
With great distress Suzanne said: "I can't, mother. My face is in front."

Flowers on Milady's Easter Bonnet

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

COMES Easter, comes the urge for a new spring "bonnet." As the calendar brings us an unusually early Easter this year, it is high time that the "do it now" policy should turn our steps in the direction of the nearest smart millinery shop. The new modes are in such a decidedly "we aim to please" mood, the matter of hat shopping becomes an adventure of sheer delight.

All the winsome feminine follies of flowers, feathers, ornaments and saucy little veils which make milady's "bonnet" pretty enough to inspire the poet to write a spring sonnet, answer "present" to the roll call this season. And there's brims, don't forget brims. They are as flattering as flattering can be. Some of them have a way of turning up at the back which is ever so new looking. Then again they mount skyward at one side while the other side takes a perilous dip downward over the right eye. Even the new sailors, and by the way, sailors are tremendously good this spring, have gone on a spree of tilts and tilts which gives them any amount of chic.

As to the collection here pictured, each model carries an illuminating message concerning current millinery trends. The hat at the top to the left tells us that crowns draped of sheer transparent velvet, either in pastel, black or high colors are part of the spring programs. It also indicates the dip-over-the-right eye movement which prevails at present.

The wee chapman with a plumed flaring veil shown next, "says it" in unmistakable terms. The two little coils of velvet make a charming finish to this modish cap-fitting toque, which comes straight from Paris.

To the right, at the top, the sketch portrays a member of the popular sailor family. It is one of the smart-for-spring rough, shiny, black straw, has a trim of velvet ribbon and is tilted to expose one side of the hair. The hat sketched to the center left is designed for a young girl. Note its shallow crown, the up-one-side and down-at-the-other pose of the brim, also the use of velvet ribbon in contrasting colors.

The sailor shown to the right of the center photograph proclaims the vogue of the allover machine-stitched fabric hat. It has a perky velvet bow. So far the hats described have a touch of velvet which is something to remember when looking about for the new spring hat.

A most important message which fashion is broadcasting is in regard to the flower-trimmed hat. French milliners are making a liberal use of them this spring. Massed in flat effects, as on the black milan straw hat centered in the group, is the favored method of handling the dainty posies which glorify the new hats with a springtime spirit. The lines of this narrow brim are especially new.

Three hats shown below call to mind that milliners strongly endorse positioning the trimming at the back. The beret to the left is draped of straw cloth. It is worn at an angle so as to show the coiffure at one side. Blue velvet forget-me-nots are clustered at the back in boutonniere effect.

One of the "scuttle-brim" shapes is sketched in the center of this trio. Its white straw brim is crowned with black velvet. The gardenias at the back are also in black and white. A smart rough straw sailor with a quill concludes this group.

INGENIOUS SPORT FROCKS INTRIGUE

Campus wardrobes have the pick of the pack as far as spring fashions go. For never before have there been so many ingenious sports costumes, such original sweaters and skirts, such sleek, trick and youthful tailored frocks.

Skirts and blouses offer endless variations for campus costumes, at prices that fit any school girl budget. The becoming new sweaters delight the hearts of coeds. Altogether, it's a big year for the colleges.

A navy flannel basket-weave skirt is worn with a polo shirt of white peau d'ange Jersey, on some of our smarter campuses. The waistband of the skirt has a point front and center and is adjustable, so that the waistline may be either normal or raised.

Puffed short sleeves and a high, tied neckline distinguish a blouse of navy blue solid color cotton crepe, which is daring and effective when worn with a skirt of bright red flannel, sporting a large silver belt buckle.

Wooden or cork buttons fasten a short jacket of beige herringbone angora, with a matching skirt. It is worn with a zephyr gingham blouse striped in red, yellow and brown.

A Brown Straw Jacket! Can You Feature That?

Straw was added to the economical features in spring styles when a prominent dressmaker showed a jacket and dress trimmings, both of close-woven lacy straws. A fitted hip-length brown straw jacket was worn with a beige cotton sports frock. A black silk coat had a white lacy straw collar.

Made of String
Very smart indeed are belts made of natural colored string held together with narrow yellow cord. Bags of brown rough silk are also ornamented with the same string.

FORMAL CAPE-SCARF

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This is a season of beguiling wraps. The black velvet cape-scarf sketched has a wide lace border caught loosely with a brilliant clip so that the décolletage is left free, making a gracious and charming covering for the arms, as it falls into artful points toward the front.

Daytime Coats in Gay Colors Replace Blacks

Distinctly dazzling are the daytime coats now appearing on smart French women in chic places of the capital, now that they have finally decided to try something other than their favorite black.

The Baroness Edouard de Rothschild, who has rarely worn anything but black or white, has been seen in one of Madeline Vionnet's beige woolen coats with a silver fox collar scarf which slips over the head and around the waist.

The Grand Duchess Marie of Russia is wearing LeLong's brown broadcloth coat for smart daytime events, a simple straight-line one with large draped collar of beaver and barrel cuffs of the same fur. It has a broadcloth belt and two flaring ties of it at the waistline.

What Women Want to Know About Fashions

Padded shoulders give new "lines" to coats.
Coats with contrasting tops tell a new story.
New silhouette calls for broad military shoulders.
In slim, trim, military fashion enters the spring suit.
Flowered gazerette with a wee fanciful velvet jacket or capelet is favored ensemble for months to come.

Best houses are featuring coat dresses.
Wrap-around dresses replace over-the-head types.
Crinkled fabrics either in silk or woolen are outstanding.
Beige is reported next in importance to vivid blues and navy.
"With a touch of Irish crochet lace" is slogan for the spring afternoon frock.

Stronger than He Was at Twenty

FIFTY-FIVE years old, and still going strong!
Do you want the secret of such vitality? It isn't what you eat, or any tonic you take. It's something anyone can do—something you can start today and see results in a week! All you do is give your vital organs the right stimulant.

A famous doctor discovered the way to stimulate a sluggish system to new energy. It brings fresh vigor to every organ. Being a physician's prescription, it's quite harmless. Tell your druggist you want a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Get the benefit of its fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and that pure pepsin. Get that lazy liver to work, those stagnant bowels into action. Get rid of waste matter that is slow poison so long as it is permitted to remain in the system.

The new energy men and women feel before one bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin has been used up a proof of how much the system needs this help.

Get a bottle of this delicious syrup and let it end that constant worry about the condition of the bowels. Spare the children those bilious days that make them miserable. Save your household from the use of cathartics which lead to chronic constipation. And guard against auto-intoxication as you grow older.

Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin is such a well known preparation you can get it wherever drugs are sold and it isn't expensive.

Store With a History
One of the oldest stores in Philadelphia is this year celebrating its one hundred and eighty-first anniversary. It is a little gunsmith shop and was first opened for business in 1751. The site was originally sold by William Penn in 1684 and William Drinker erected a building in which the first white child born in the Quaker colony was born.

Protect Your Children

Promote your children from those nasty colds that always come when winter is breaking up. Doctors recommend Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil as an effective resistance-builder. Its Vitamin A helps protect children from recurrent colds. And its Vitamin D helps build strong bones and teeth. Youngsters—and grown-ups, too—find this emulsion an easy, pleasant way of taking cod liver oil. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N.J. Sales Representative, Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Inc., New York.

A sudden terror invaded him as she said that. He didn't hate her. He loved her. He wanted her, desperately. It was that that had been gnawing him.

His mind seemed to slip. The path he'd been following had disappeared. He was lost. He didn't know what he'd been saying.

"I guess I am a little out of my head," he said. "I—I thought I was all right when I began. I don't know what I've been trying to do. But I don't hate you. You're wrong about that."

He couldn't bear the way she was looking at him. It was a tender look, softened by a sudden surprise. His voice had given him away. His words hadn't surrendered, but his voice had. Again he covered his face with his hands. She left her chair and came around the table to him. At the contact with her body, as she laid her hand upon his shoulder and seated herself upon the arm of his chair, he went limp.

"It doesn't matter," she said. "The things we've been saying to each other, I understand, I guess. You've been—having such a terrible time. I haven't known till now quite how hard it is, or that I had been making it harder. I want to help all I can. Not—every way I can. If—if you want to come back to the old way—I mean, if that will help—you can."

"Oh—d—d!" he cried.

With astonishing violence he thrust back his chair and wrenched himself free from her hands. She had to cling to him to save herself from a fall. He backed away and stood glaring at her. For the first time in his life, he saw red. She might have been an assassin who had tried to slip a knife into his back.

Another noble act of self-sacrifice! If she'd betrayed him into accepting that—! She hadn't got him this time, though.

She stood staring at him in the utmost bewilderment. He didn't know whether he'd spoken aloud or not. She turned and left the room. He heard her going up the stairs. He had an impulse to follow her; there was still a lot that he'd left unsaid, but he doubted if he could say it. He didn't believe he could speak at all.

He put on his hat and overcoat and went out. It struck him, vaguely, as strange to find himself doing anything as commonplace and respectable as that. He had no objective whatever; he just walked fast. It was quite automatic that he took his daily route to the railway station. He had no idea of going back to town. Not even the train, pulling in, suggested that idea to him.

But the train itself seemed a desirable thing to catch, perhaps merely because it would require a desperate run to make it. He began running as hard as he could, faster than he would have thought he could possibly run. He flew up the station steps three at a time, raced down the platform and swung himself aboard the last car. There was a satisfaction in his agony of breathlessness. In the numbness of his legs and the furious beating of his heart.

He didn't know what he was going to do for. It must be far along in the afternoon, too late to find anybody he wanted to see. He looked at his watch. It showed half past one, and he thought it must have stopped. It was running, and when he asked the conductor, who came through to punch his ticket, what time it was, he found his watch was right. His quarrel with Julia, which seemed as if it had lasted hours, had been only a matter of minutes.

He didn't know what he'd said to her. He couldn't feel sure that it had made sense. It didn't matter. What he had done was plain enough; he had escaped her trap. She'd have no more emotional joy-rides at the expense of his delinquencies, pecuniary or other.

He'd get the money from somewhere. It wouldn't be from mortgaging the house, and it wouldn't be by borrowing it from Bert Willard, either. He'd get it out of Jake Gorman, somehow. Jake was his predestined prey. He didn't know what he'd say to Jake. It was no good trying to think things out in advance, anyhow. He'd find him, and then he'd get him. That was the program.

At the outset, he encountered a check that would have been fatal with him in a normal mood. Jake wasn't at his office, and his smart, rather knowing secretary seemed surprised that Edward had come there looking for him. "He didn't make an appointment with you, did he?" she asked. "Most men get sort of nutty on their wedding day, and he certainly isn't any exception. He was in for a while this morning."

"I'd forgotten it was today," Edward said. "What time is it to be?" "Not till eight o'clock," she told him. "He's probably at his hotel. I'll try to get him for you, if you like."

But Edward didn't adopt that suggestion. "I may drop around and see him later this afternoon," he said. This casual note was automatic, however. His purpose wasn't shaken in the least. The fact that Jake was going to be married tonight seemed to him utterly trivial. He took a bus and went straight up to Gorman's hotel on the North side. Jake seemed surprised and rather pathetically pleased to see him. He'd been in too much of a hurry earlier in the day, he said, and had got everything done. Now he was left flat with nothing to do but wait for the hour, and think. He hoped Edward would sit down for a while and keep him company. He offered Edward a drink, which he declined, and a cigar, which he accepted. He couldn't smoke himself, he said; he was too nervous.

"I'd be all right," he said, "if I didn't get to thinking. That's what gets you at a time like this. It's a solemn occasion, Patterson. A right-minded man has got to think about things. There are a lot of things he wishes he hadn't done. Oh, well, no use worrying about past regrets, of course. How long have you been married?"

"Twenty years," Edward told him. Jake seemed rather startled. "My G—d, but that's a long time!" he said. "You must have been just a kid."

All that Edward was vividly conscious of was the comfort of the chair he was sitting in and the soothing flavor of his cigar. The driving impulse that had brought him to Jake's door seemed to have been spent when Jake opened it and invited him in. He'd almost forgotten what he had come for. There was no need to hurry, anyhow. He had plenty of time.

His mind was active enough. He perceived the irony of his having come from that nerve-racking scene with Julia to Jake full of sentimental solemnities over his approaching marriage, but the perception was too weak to carry any pain with it. Even the bundle of reminiscences about his own wedding day, evoked by Jake's question and comment, had an agreeable savor.

He said, "I may have seemed pretty young to the elderly onlookers, but in seriousness and sense of responsibility I imagine I was older than I am today. If you could confront me now with that young man, I think I'd be rather overawed by him."

Certainly, he reflected, he wouldn't have wanted that dimly remembered bridegroom for a witness of the recent quarrel with Julia. But even this reflection didn't hurt.

"Well, it's enough to make any man feel serious and responsible," Jake said. "When I get thinking about it, I'm almost scared. She's a wonderful little girl, Patterson. She's had a pretty hard time—had to work for her living. Well, she'll never have to work again; not as long as I live. I suppose you know she's been on the stage. She's not like the rest of them, though. The bright lights don't interest her one little bit. She hates 'em. She don't care about my being rich, either. All she wants is a nice little home. She talks about doing her own cooking; wants a flower garden to dig in. Well, that's all right as long as it's fun; but if I can help it, she's never going to have to do another lick of work."

"How's your insurance, Jake? Have you got enough to protect her if anything should happen to you?"

The question startled Edward almost as much as if the voice that asked it had not been his own. He'd spoken without the slightest preliminary thought and with complete disinterestedness. But the reflective, almost somnolent, mood of the moment before was completely shattered by it.

He was bewildered for an instant by the suddenness of his awakening, but he was most vividly and brilliantly awake. Luckily, he had time to get himself together, for the question had startled Jake, too.

"I haven't tended to that," he said, "and I sure ought to have. That's one I overlooked. Well, it's too late now. I'll have to take it up first thing when we come back from our trip."

"It's not too late," Edward assured him, after a look at his watch. "There's all the time in the world. And you'll be a lot more comfortable on the trip if it's settled."

He had the sensation of enjoying a box seat at his own performance. He admired and mildly wondered over the readiness and skill of the expert who was giving Jake his choice of contracts; telling him how much this and that kind of insurance would cost him.

Jake's wonder knew no bounds. "Why, insurance," Edward explained very casually, "is the one thing in the world that I know anything about. I certainly never knew anything about mechanics."

He heard himself add, as Jake looked up at him, "That's why I'm going to liquidate that choke business. It could be made right, I suppose, but I'm under too great a handicap of ignorance, there, to do it—or even to put it on the market properly if it were done."

It wasn't until he'd finished speaking that he felt any surprise over the words. The decision must have formed itself in his mind almost in the moment of his asking Jake about his insurance, but he hadn't discovered it there until now.

Of course he was going to get out of it! What an ass he'd been to struggle along month after month, handicapped by his ignorance, selling by main strength a thing people didn't really want anyway, when he had at his hand, in insurance, a real commodity that he knew all about.

He remembered an old wood-cut in his boyhood copy of "Pilgrim's Progress": "Christian leaping with joy," when the enormous bundle that represented his burden of sin rolled from his back. He felt like that.

the general agent, while the examination was in progress. He didn't want anything of Vane and he had nothing in particular, least of all about his own plans, to tell him, but it was exhilarating to feel that Vane was puzzled—didn't know what to make of him; regarded him as the product of some inexplicable metamorphosis.

He didn't feel that way about himself. He was himself, that was what it came to, perhaps a little more completely than he'd ever been before. He didn't even recognize that he was excited, until they told him that Jake was passed and the policy in force.

Then, as it came over him that his own commission upon it, earned with two hours' work that afternoon, came to as much as he'd vainly tried to borrow of Bert Willard that morning, he felt himself going a little weak in the knees.

He accepted Vane's unaffectedly impressed congratulations on what he termed a brilliant piece of salesmanship, however, calmly enough. "After one has been selling an automobile accessory to garage proprietors," he said, "a good sound insurance contract seems about the most marketable commodity in the world."

On the whole he was rather pleased to find that he was not yet rid of Jake. He must dine with Jake. He must come to the wedding. He had become, for the time being, Jake's only friend. He didn't know, probably he didn't want to know, why the program attracted him. Vaguely, he recognized it as a postponement of something which he must face, but wasn't quite ready to face as yet. Jake's great adventure imposed no responsibilities upon him, exacted no decisions, gave him the spectator's role. Well, he'd earned it, hadn't he?

He felt a little frightened at first at the prospect of meeting people of so strange a sort as Jake's friends would be, doubtful if he'd know what to say to them.

He thought, at least, that fright was what he felt, but he decided, when he sat down, after an admirable cocktail, to the excellent dinner which was served to the two of them in Jake's room, that it had been merely humer. He couldn't remember how long it had been since he'd eaten a square meal. Breakfast that morning when he'd planned, under pretext of meeting Edith's train, making that last appeal to Bert Willard—that couldn't have been this morning, could it? It seemed a week away.

Lord, what a day it had been! Well, he needn't think about that now. Not yet. There was still the wedding. The marriage ceremony didn't take long. It was a little startling to reflect how quickly a momentous act of that sort could be accomplished. But there was a supper afterward that he couldn't, without discourtesy, evade.

He found himself liking the people, too. They weren't at all what he'd always thought of as his sort—his and Julia's—but they were surprisingly easy to talk to. The bride wasn't what he'd expected; not hard-boiled a bit. She was rather helpless and wistful and Edward became almost romantic about her.

The supper was good, too, and there was champagne as a background for it. Edward hadn't tasted champagne in years, and he was surprised to discover how well he liked the modest glass or two he indulged in. It proved to be exactly what he wanted.

He didn't stay the party out. It came over him, suddenly, that it must be getting late; suddenly, that he must be getting back from our trip."

"It's not too late," Edward assured him, after a look at his watch. "There's all the time in the world. And you'll be a lot more comfortable on the trip if it's settled."

He had the sensation of enjoying a box seat at his own performance. He admired and mildly wondered over the readiness and skill of the expert who was giving Jake his choice of contracts; telling him how much this and that kind of insurance would cost him.

on a pedestal and waited for what he wanted to come to him. When it didn't come, he'd get more dignified and superior than ever. It was great to be able to see into yourself like this!

How about Julia? Was she afraid of something too? And was she masking that fear as a virtue? She'd come close to admitting it today. "I wanted to show I was some good," she'd said. She'd been doing that for years.

But his mind ran back beyond the beginning of it. She'd been a jolly, fun-loving girl. She was still that way with the children, with their friends. It had reference to him, somehow, that misgiving that forced her into poses of nobility. Toward him this attitude had been consistent.

No, not quite! There was one bet she had overlooked. Why hadn't she forgiven him, last fall, for the Ingraham affair? Why had she moved him into the spare room? There had been a chance for the finest sacrifice of all. Unless she'd really wanted him! Was that it? Was that what she had been feeling guilty about, all along?

That was a wild question; perfectly academic, anyhow. This was no way to prepare for the scene he had ahead of him.

But he'd like to get it over tonight if he could. He was feeling good to-night, clear-headed, confident. To-morrow morning he might not be quite so convincing.

She hadn't gone to bed. The lights were on in the sitting room, and the click of his latchkey brought her into the hall immediately.

"Ned!" she cried with a gasp of relief at sight of him. "Are you all right?" "Yes," he told her pleasantly. "I'm all right."

She was gazing at him earnestly and in an incredulous sort of way, as though she found his manner unnatural, suspected it of concealing something.

"I know you haven't been at the office. I telephoned there—kept telephoning. I wanted to call up Bert Willard, but I didn't."

"No, I haven't been near the office," he said, "and Bert wouldn't have known anything about me. I've been to Jake Gorman's wedding."

"Why didn't you call me up! Send word, somehow!" The fierce intensity of her manner, rather than the question itself, bewildered him.

"I don't know," he said. "I—couldn't say what I wanted to over the telephone, so I thought I'd wait until we could talk."

"It didn't occur to you after I'd been terrified about you after the way you'd gone out of the house this noon."

"No," he said doubtfully. He knew she was waiting for him to amplify his denial, but his mind was simply off the rails. He wanted to start his real explanation, not waste time talking about where he'd dined or why he hadn't telephoned. He saw now how he ought to have answered when she asked him where he'd been. He could have said, "I've been down the road to Damascus. I have seen a great light." Then, perhaps, she'd have listened to him.

"You could have telephoned, couldn't you?" she cried. "Did you think about me at all?" He considered the question. "No," he told her truthfully, "I don't believe I did. Not till when I got into the train, things began to get clear. I've been thinking about you all the time since then—about both of us, I mean. I think I can—well, explain things now. What's been the matter between us—all along, more or less."

"I heard enough of your explanations at lunch. I don't want any more! I suppose you think they were all true. Well, I don't care whether they were or not. You won't be troubled with any more of my sacrifices. I don't care what you do. You can go away and stay, if you like. Go and live with Ruth Ingraham or one of Jake Gorman's chorus girls. Oh, stop looking at me like that! Let me alone! What are you trying to do?"

He couldn't have named the feeling that set him in motion toward her. It might have been anger, the sudden response to challenge. But by the time he'd come close enough to get hold of her and pull her up in his arms, it was pure exultation.

VANDALS NOT SOLE WRECKERS OF ROME

An unanticipated by-product of the wholesale excavations undertaken in Rome by order of Mussolini has been to clear the barbarian invaders of much of the stigma formerly attached to their name. As a result of the discoveries in the vicinity of Trajan's forum, Corrado Ricci, director of excavations, has formulated the conclusion that earthquakes, internal strife, sheer carelessness and indifference wrought far more destruction in ancient Rome than did the barbarians.

One of the latest discoveries is a long colonnade of heavy pillars all toppled, leaning against each other like trees bent by a strong wind. Their destruction was not due to human vandals, but was traced to an earthquake in 891, when the city was under the papal rule of Pope Leo III. As the excavations have revealed increasing evidence that the barbarians were malign, the director's work has intensified their study of the old historical records and they have been able to demonstrate that many buildings and temples supposedly destroyed in the "sack" of the city, were standing long after the last barbarian departed.

Much of the bad name of the barbarians may be due to the prejudiced reporting by the early Christians, who, as was amply demonstrated in the reports of persecutions under the empire, never let accuracy stand in the way of giving their enemies a bad name. Even without support from the most unprejudiced records to be found the archeologists in charge of the present work have become convinced by the massive size of the structure uncovered that the destruction of buildings by the invading armies was out of the question.—Washington Star.

Women Doctors Banned by Colonial Lawmakers

Though American women have gained, in recent years, considerable prominence in the medical profession, their achievement has not been effected without effort, writes Capt. John Lee Maddox in the New York Evening Post. About the year 1838 Mrs. Jane Hawkins was threatened with deportation from the Colony of Massachusetts if she did not get out within three months, and she was warned not to meddle, in the meantime, with surgery, physic, plasters or oils.

Again, about the year 1750, a Boston physician wrote concerning a piece of recent medical legislation: "It was one of the happiest fruits of improved medical education that by this bill females were excluded from the practice of medicine, and this only had been effected by the united and persevering efforts of some of the most distinguished men in the profession. The act enjoined women not only from the general practice of medicine, but also from that of obstetrics."

Plays His Bride In

Bridegroom was only one of the roles taken by C. H. S. Parsons, son of Rev. Dawson Parsons of St. James', Sheffield, England, at his own wedding. Acting as organist, he played the bridal march as his bride, Miss Nellie Howards, entered his father's church. Then he joined her and marched with her to the altar.

NEW FANE

Marvin Kleinke is laid up with a bad cold. The New Fane school will close on Wednesday for the Easter vacation. Mrs. Andrew Dworschak spent the forepart of the week with Mrs. Frank Kaas. Miss Louise Kolafa of West Bend returned to her home Tuesday to spend her Easter vacation. Quite a number of friends were entertained at a card party given by Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Kempf Sunday evening. Quite a number of girl friends attended a birthday party in honor of Miss Ruth Corbett Monday evening. Those present were: Misses Louise and Marie Kolafa, Malinda and Lucile Heberer. Card playing was the main pastime. A surprise party was given Saturday evening in honor of William Gessner's birthday. Those present were: Misses Gertrude Albrecht, Louise and Marie Kolafa, Marion Petermann, Messrs. Otto Bartelt, John and Wilson Opperman, Fred and Marvin Kleinke. The evening was spent in playing bunco and other games.

WHERE OUR MONEY GOES

We often consider the debt ridden condition of foreign countries and put ourselves on the back because the United States is not in the same boat. But if the trend of recent years continues, it won't be long until we are. In 1900, the per capita cost of the Federal government was $7.29, and it increased ten per cent in the next 16 years. In 1921, the per capita cost was $34.37—an increase of 500 per cent in 15 years. According to a Treasury estimate, the combined deficits of 1931, 1932 and 1933 will increase the Federal debt by the neat sum of $3,250,000,000, bringing the total debt to the staggering total of $19,240,000,000. It is a favorite political practice to blame all this on the war. To a certain extent, that is fair enough. But it is likewise true that many departments of the Federal government have proven inept, inefficient and wasteful. The Farm Board has spent the greater part of $500,000,000 in an effort to maintain prices on certain commodities—and has made a monumental and predestined failure of it. Two hundred millions more is being poured into Boulder Dam. The Postoffice is one long deficit. The Government operates ships at a loss—the Shipping Board appropriated in 1930 was $11,494,000. And, to go back a few years, the Government sunk $1,600,000,000 while it was running the railroads. The condition of the states is even gloomier—while Federal expenditures were increasing 730 per cent between 1903 and 1928, the states were more reckless yet, with a 900 per cent increase. Every family in the country is saddled with a government debt of $1,000! The thoughtful citizen will wonder if we are not approaching a tax crisis—a point beyond which we cannot pay. And he is liable to come to the conclusion that the progress of the country demands government retrenchment and economy, not in a vague future, but right now.

FARM AND HOME LINES

Last year, farm population showed an increase, the first since 1922, a recent report shows. A back-to-the-farm movement caused by urban unemployment is given as responsible for the change. A workman is known by his tools. Yet many an otherwise careful housewife struggles along with inconvenient or badly worn knives, can-openers and stirring spoons. "The dairy industry of the United States is gradually approaching an export basis, our exports being almost equal to our imports of dairy products at present. Foreign countries have increased their production and the foreign demand for our dairy products has decreased."—O. E. Reed, Head of Bureau of Dairy Industry.

SEED LOAN COMMITTEE APPOINTED.

County Chairman M. V. Adkins of Fond du Lac county announced last week Friday the appointment of William Seffern, chairman of the town of Friendship, and Walter Whiting, chairman of the town of Waupun, to serve with himself as Fond du Lac county seed loan committee to provide farmers with credit under the Reconstruction Corporation Act. This committee will act on all applications for seed loans from farmers in Fond du Lac county. The seed loan credit facilities have a two-fold purpose, to give service to farmers living in communities where bankers feel they cannot loan more money on farm security, and to those who have not ample security with which to get loans at banks and who will give a mortgage on their crops in return for federal loans. The act limits each farmer to $400.00, but this may be used for fertilizer or anything directly connected with the growing of crops as well as for the purchase of seeds. The act appropriated $50,000,000 for seed loans to farmers. All applications for loans from Wisconsin will be handled in the district office located at Minneapolis, Minn. Application blanks may be secured from the committee, or from your county agent.

MARCH COLDER THAN FEBRUARY

Figures computed by E. A. Seeley, official weather observer, show that March, up to the present time, has been colder than February. The mean temperature for the first 12 days of the month was more than 10 degrees lower than for the same period last year and more than 9 degrees lower than the mean temperature for the entire month of February. Low temperature means for the first part of the month was due in part to a wave of sub-zero weather which arrived March 6th, bringing a minimum temperature of 4 degrees below zero. McCormick-Deering No. 3 Field Cultivator

MAYBE it's Quack or Johnson Grass... perhaps it's some other noxious weed... but—nine chances out of ten—weeds in your fields are stealing fertility from your crops and lowering your yields and profits.

After deep plowing, use this McCormick-Deering Field Cultivator on your land and yank out these fertility-robbing weeds by the roots. Then rake them up and burn them!

This cultivator is great for summer-fallow, alfalfa cultivation, or seed-bed preparation. It does good work under all conditions because its entire weight can be thrown on the gangs when the going is tough.

Bring your weed problem to us. We can supply this cultivator in different sizes with sweeps best suited for attacking your weeds.

All Around WISCONSIN

Rhineland—John Pratz and Earl Richardson are serving jail terms of three months each here for blasting beaver houses with dynamite.

Antigo—One hundred and eighteen men are being employed at Antigo's municipal wood lots. The men are paid $1.50 a day and receive free fuel.

Madison—Wisconsin advanced from tenth to seventh place in the list of states having the lowest infant mortality rate during 1931. Wisconsin's rate was 55.6 deaths per 1,000 live births.

Madison—If statistics compiled from 500 ton-mile tax reports for January are borne out for the remainder of the year the state will collect $1,071,360 in new taxes from trucking operations during 1931.

Chippewa Falls—After disappearing from his farm home and leaving a note which revealed he was ill and starving, Joseph Schen, 47, bachelor farmer, was found frozen to death in a woods eleven miles from his home.

Kewaunee—Three out of seven children in the family of John Houdek, town of Casco, celebrated their birthdays on St. Patrick's day, they having come into the world on March 17 in the years 1892, 1896 and 1898.

Rhineland—An amendment to the Rhineland city ordinance for the licensing of soft drink bars requires that there be an unobstructed view from the street to the interior. Screens, signs and other obstructions in the windows are barred.

Stevens Point—All teachers' contracts for the coming year are being held up here until the local board of education can decide whether or not three married women now teaching are to be retained. Votes on the question have found the directors evenly divided, six to six.

South Milwaukee—Lawrence Drejer, 39, proprietor of a saloon, was killed and seven others were seriously injured here when the saloon building was wrecked by an explosion. The blast is believed to have been caused by escaping gas. A small liquor still was found in the ruins.

Elkhorn—When called upon by a W. C. T. U. delegation to enact a dry ordinance to supplement federal prohibition enforcement, the city council decided to let voters settle the question by referendum at the April election. At the last local vote on prohibition, the drys won, 364 to 236.

Madison—Edward L. Kelley, member of the state tax commission, has announced his resignation to accept a position as executive director of the recently formed Wisconsin Taxpayers' alliance. Kelley practiced law in Manitowish before Gov. Kohler appointed him a tax commissioner in 1929.

Fond du Lac—Classifying the state law enacted in 1931 prohibiting auction sales of jewelry stocks between 6 p. m. and 8 a. m. as an attempt to protect certain private interests without regard for the general public welfare, Circuit Judge Van Pelt declared the statute unconstitutional in a case tried here.

Madison—The John Doe investigation into the affairs of the defunct Capital City bank of Madison has been postponed indefinitely upon the plea of District Attorney Bissler that he must devote his entire time to prosecuting charges of embezzlement and blue sky law violations against officials of the Joseph M. Boyd investment firm, which failed several months ago.

Madison—More than 8,000 persons are either wholly or partially dependent upon the 3,797 Wisconsin teachers who have replied to a questionnaire on living costs for the Wisconsin Teachers' association. Miss Charlotte E. Kohn, Madison, chairman of the association's survey committee, said that thousands now dependent upon teachers will be forced to become public charges if salaries are reduced.

Delavan—The Citizens' State bank here was looted of $7,000 on March 18 by four robbers, who had previously held the bank prisoner, Walter Topping, and his wife and little daughter captives in their home overnight. Before daybreak, Topping was taken to the bank in an auto by three of the handits and he was forced to open the vault when the time clock ticked at 8:15 a. m. After securing all the cash in sight, the robbers took Topping about one mile outside of town and released him. The same bank was robbed of $6,000 on Feb. 8 by a lone handit, who shot a citizen in the leg during the holdup.

Milton Junction—Mrs. Frank Schadel, 55, believed to have suddenly gone insane, beat her daughter, Betty, 12, with a hammer and then hanged herself in the basement of their home. The injured girl was taken to a Janesville hospital in a critical condition. Mrs. Schadel had suffered a nervous breakdown last year when a tornado struck this vicinity.

Hartford—The First National bank of Hartford, which was robbed of $100,000 in July, 1930, has installed bullet proof glass around all tellers' cages.

Green Bay—Green Bay's municipal water plant made a profit of $72,566.26 in 1931. The profit in 1930 was $45,640. Of the $28,000 increase, $23,000 can be accounted for by increased hydrant rentals ordered by the public service commission.

Sparta—The Rod and Gun club of Sparta has embarked on a program of restocking the surrounding country with pheasants and has notified farmers of the vicinity that anyone desiring to raise pheasants may obtain eggs free.

Merrill—The Lincoln county jail is without an occupant, save the sheriff's family, a condition that has not existed in many years.

Florence—The plant of the Florence Mining News, the only newspaper published in this county, has been totally destroyed by fire.

Portage—A pardon has been asked from President Hoover for Joseph Eulberg, Portage brewer, now serving a six months' sentence in the Milwaukee house of correction for violation of the federal prohibition law.

Ashland—Sha-Bon-Ba-Shjong, 89, last of the old Indian head men on the Bad River reservation, is dead. To white men he was known as John Diver. Sha-Bon-Ba-Shjong formerly carried mail afoot over Indian trails from St. Paul to Chequamegon bay.

Chippewa—An explosion in the grist mill and power plant owned by the Walter Brothers in the town of Tilden, near here, started a fire that burned the plant to the ground. The mill was about 45 years old and a landmark in the neighborhood. The power plant served about 70 farmers in the township.

Madison—Madison relief organizations have placed an initial order of six carloads of wheat flour with the federal farm board under the authority granted by a bill recently signed by the president. The relief organizations plan to have bakers bake bread for those families who lack facilities to bake.

Portage—For the first time in the memory of old residents of Portage, the Wisconsin river has frozen over here for the third time in one season. Records are available back as far as 1853. In 1877 the river froze over twice in one year but in no other year did it freeze twice, much less three times.

Madison—In an effort to search out those Wisconsin communities whose relief burdens are greater than can be met by automatic allotments from the $8,000,000 state aid relief fund the industrial commission has announced a series of conferences to be held in northern counties.

Madison—Arguments in the appeal of J. J. Beck, commissioner of agriculture, from a $250 fine for contempt of court will be heard April 6 by the state supreme court. Beck was fined $250 by Judge A. G. Zimmerman in Dane county circuit court because he circulated lists of oleomargarine dealers contrary to an injunction.

Stevens Point—Reductions in electric, gas and telephone rates are requested by the Stevens Point city council, which addressed resolutions to the Wisconsin Valley Electric Co. and the Wisconsin Telephone Co. suggesting that voluntary cuts be made to conform to reductions in wages of labor and prices of commodities.

Madison—In a record breaking primary election, Milwaukee's socialist mayor, Daniel W. Hoan, has been renominated for that office with 75,000 vote out of a total of 140,000. His opponent in the April election will be Joseph P. Carney, present non-partisan alderman who received 37,000 primary votes. Col. Phil Westphal, former sheriff, received 23,000 primary votes for mayor.

Madison—After an investigation ordered by the legislature, the state insurance commissioner has concluded that increased rates for bank robbery insurance in Wisconsin have been justified. He is sending notification to that effect to the banks and the banking department. Wisconsin was one of eleven states in which insurance companies boosted rates 100 per cent on the basis of bank robbery experience up to 1930.

Green Bay—The Wisconsin Taxpayers' alliance, recently incorporated here, has announced its plans and purposes through its president, J. M. Conway of Green Bay. The organization is described as a strictly non-partisan fact finding body on all matters of taxation. Group organizations throughout the state in an educational campaign are planned. Other officers are L. A. Lecher, Milwaukee, vice-president; Quincy H. Hale, La Crosse, secretary, and H. H. Seaman, Milwaukee, treasurer.

Madison—Since late statistics show that spring work this year will be done with 10,000 fewer horses than the last season, interest in horse breeding should be renewed, according to William F. Renk, commissioner of agriculture and markets. Mr. Renk anticipates a sharp demand for horses within a year or two and said that farmers with young horses to sell will find this a renewed source of income. It is also suggested that the present may be an opportune time for farmers to organize breeding clubs, as he feels that it should be possible to buy the best stallions at figures ranging from $500 to $800.

Eau Claire—Members of the Eau Claire county board have voted themselves a 20 per cent pay cut effective after the next election. The new wage will be $4 a day. Action on a proposed cut for all county employes was postponed.

Madison—Dr. Frederick Jackson Turner, 71, former professor of history at the University of Wisconsin and former president of the American Historical association, died recently of a heart attack in his Pasadena, Calif., home.

Oshkosh—The Winnebago county board has refused to support a resolution asking for an eight-hour day for all county employes. More workers would have to be employed and additional housing facilities provided, it was pointed out.

Madison—Gov. La Follette has received word from Washington of the decision to purchase 200,000 additional acres of land in Ashland, Forest, Oconto, Sawyer and Taylor counties for establishment of new federal forest reserves in Wisconsin.

KIDNAP CLEWS ALL LEAD TO NOTHING

Search for Lindbergh Baby Covers the World.

Hopewell, N. J.—The international search for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby moved along three widely scattered fronts.

There was the underworld search which is being pursued separately by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and the police. In England, France, and Germany ocean liners occupied the attention of the authorities, and finally there was the half-hearted hunt in the Sourland hills surrounding the Lindbergh home.

Clews continued to blossom from all parts of the nation and fade with bewildering unanimity. Tips came from as far flung places as Seattle, Jackson, Ky., and Hamburg, Germany, but all proved worthless.

The information that New Jersey troopers were endeavoring to trace a brown blanket overcoat found near Feathered road, down which the kidnapers are supposed to have fled with the twenty-month-old child, was denied almost as soon as it became known.

The Hopewell police chief, Charles Williamson, reported that he had received a communication advising him to be in front of the post office at York, Pa., where he would receive a communication from the kidnapers. The "kidnaper" said he would wear a white handkerchief in his coat pocket. Chief Williamson appeared to be the only person interested in the letter.

Later it became known an osteopath at York, M. B. Shellenberger, had told police that a man, woman, and baby came into his office and forced him to make a telephone call to the Lindberghs, giving terms and place of the ransom. The story is doubted.

The underworld search, so far as the police were concerned, centered on a new group of "suspicious characters," the Roma gang from Denver, said to be operating in or about New York city. That also blew up and Col. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the state police, announced vindication of the gang.

Colonel Schwarzkopf also announced that Frank Berg, who police said was involved in the attempted kidnaping several years ago of Max Phillips, Eastonport (N. J.) manufacturer, had been located and arrangements made to question him.

Secrecy surrounded the movement of Morris Kosner, undercover agent of the Lindberghs, who reported the baby was alive and well and would be returned.

In Seattle detectives tried to run down the statement of a jobless paper hanger, who said two bank robbers had invited him to join in kidnaping the baby, when he was in Billings, Mont., last June. His Billings employer reported the man had "delusions of grandeur."

The attorney of Salvy Spitalo and Irving Bitz, first underworld characters chosen to act as go-betweens, said the pair had been in indirect contact with the kidnapers and would make a trip to Detroit in connection with their negotia.

From Jackson, Ky., and other places came stories of persons seized with blood babies, but in every case the lead was found to be due primarily to overzealousness on the part of some officer.

Senators See Propaganda Against Muscle Shoals

Washington.—The senate agriculture committee charged a nation-wide propaganda campaign has been conducted to secure the power at Muscle Shoals for private gain under the guise of cheapening fertilizer for the farmer.

In recommending enactment of the Norris bill for government operation of the plant, the committee challenged those who have been seeking private production of fertilizer at Muscle Shoals to show good faith by accepting the alternate leasing provisions of this measure.

The committee contended the recommendations of President Hoover's Muscle Shoals commission for operation of the plant by a farmer-owned corporation could be carried out under the terms of the Norris bill, and it offered to liberalize its lease provision as far as necessary "without giving the lessee an outright bonus from the federal treasury."

Auto Burns After Wedding Party; One Man Is Killed

New York.—An automobile in which four young men and two young women were returning from a wedding party in Sea Gate, Coney Island, swerved from the road on a sharp turn in Prospect park, Brooklyn, crashed into a tree, turned over, and burst into flames. One of the men was killed. The others were injured or burned.

Dime-a-Dance Girl Weds Harvard Student Secretly

New York.—The wedding of a dime-a-dance girl to the son of a wealthy broker has been revealed. Allan P. Carlisle, twenty-year-old Harvard student, and Miss Romaine Fleming, twenty, who for two years has been a hostess at a Broadway dance hall, were married last December 23 when young Carlisle was home for the Christmas holidays. The wedding became known when a classmate let the word out to young Carlisle's father.

GEORGE EASTMAN

George Eastman, founder and chairman of the board of the Eastman Kodak company, committed suicide in his home in Rochester, N. Y., because of ill health. He was celebrated as a developer of the camera and film industries and as a philanthropist.

HINDENBURG BEATS HITLER AT POLLS

German President, However, Is Short of Majority.

Berlin.—President Paul von Hindenburg emerged as victor in the German presidential election by soundly beating Adolf Hitler, but failed by the narrow margin of 168,000 votes of getting the absolute majority over all other candidates necessary to obtain re-election.

His impressive total of 18,661,736 votes—a plurality of 7,333,165 over the National Socialist (Fascist) leader's count of 11,328,571—makes it virtually certain that the eighty-four-year-old field marshal will be returned to office on April 10, when a run-off election will be held in which the candidate will win who receives the greatest number of ballots, whether an absolute majority or not.

Ernest Thaelmann, candidate of the Communist party, finished third, getting 4,971,079 votes. Colonel Theodore Duesterberg, nominee of the Steel Helmet-Nationalist party bloc, was fourth with 2,517,576, and Gustav Winter, who, although in jail, ran for the "League of Creditors of the Reichsbank" on a platform calling for redemption of the inflated post-war marks, obtained 181,115.

The most surprising feature of the election was the relative weakness of Hitler. His lieutenants were confident his strength would run from 15,000,000 to 18,000,000. Hitler said, however, he would try again.

Hitler received only slightly less than a million votes more than his party polled in the 1930 re-election. The Communists, with their 4,900,000 votes, made a less noticeable gain over their 1930 figures. In 1930 they polled 4,500,000 votes.

Hiram Johnson Scores International Bankers

Washington.—Summarizing the senate finance committee's investigation of foreign loans Senator Hiram Johnson told the senate that American losses were due to the "greed" of international banks and "smug complacency and supine indifference" on the part of the government.

The gray-haired California Republican, who sponsored the investigation of American losses in foreign bond issues, started the senate with the ferocity of his attacks on international bankers.

In a scathing denunciation of their activities, he said they had given "no thought to the impoverishment of American citizens who trusted them and acted apparently only for the profits."

Gets License; Shoots His Bride-to-Be, Kills Himself

Fort Lauderdale, Fla.—The bodies of Harold Nebe, thirty-two, of Quincy, Ill., and Miss Frances Ferriera, twenty-three, were found in a quarry pit near here a short while after they had applied for a marriage license. Corporal Hugh Lester expressed the opinion Nebe shot her and committed suicide.

3 Saw Way Out of Jail; One Slain, Others Caught

Kingston, N. Y.—Samuel Kline was shot and killed and two of his fellow fugitives, from the Ulster county jail here were recaptured by a police posse an hour after they had saved their way out of their cells, slugged a jailer into unconsciousness and escaped.

Hamilton, Bermuda.—The Canadian national steamship, Prince David, on the way from Boston to Bermuda, struck a reef ten miles off the northeast breakers and sank.

Convicts Use Lys and Escape

GEORGE EASTMAN COMMITS SUICIDE

"Work Done," Sick Kodak King Ends His Life.

Rochester, N. Y.—George Eastman, chairman of the board of the $200,000,000 Eastman Kodak company and philanthropist whose benefactions had passed the $75,000,000 mark, ended his life at his home here. He was seventy-seven years old, and had been in ill health for many years.

The manufacturer shot himself, after asking servants and attendants to leave his room. He left a note which said:

"To my friends: Why wait? My work is done. Why wait? Mr. Eastman was a bachelor, and had no close relatives. Beside his many benefactions, he was well known as the leader and pioneer of the photographic industry and as an art collector and big game hunter. He began his business career at the age of fourteen at a salary of $3 a week.

He developed the Eastman Kodak company from a small beginning and on April 7, 1925, retired from the presidency, which was assumed by William G. Stuber. Mr. Eastman remained as chairman of the board, however. The company has factories in many parts of the world, the one here employing 20,000 men normally.

Mr. Eastman had been a close friend of Thomas A. Edison, with whom he contributed much toward the development of the modern motion picture. Mr. Edison invented the first machine to reproduce motion visually, using a film that had been devised by Mr. Eastman after many years of experimentation.

Mr. Eastman was probably the country's best known philanthropist since the death of the late Julius Rosenwald, and was reputed to have given about $90,000,000 to charity.

He began life as a poor boy, and eventually through popularization of the camera became one of the nation's wealthiest men. He not only contributed more than liberally of his wealth, but gave his time, energy and ability to many public causes, especially on behalf of physical well being and culture.

He was born in Waterville, Oneida County, N. Y., July 12, 1854, the son of George Washington and Maria Kilkenny Eastman. He became interested in camera making early in the history of the growth of that industry and popularized the slogan "you push the button, we do the rest."

Under his direction, the camera was simplified. He manufactured both dry plates and films and got them to the public as the use of the kodak spread throughout the world. Ready sensitized films, "daylight loading" of kodaks with rolls of film and the easier methods of developing prints without returning negatives to the factory were other developments in his career.

Dr. Audley D. Stewart, the industrialist's personal physician and close friend, said Eastman feared invalidism. He had been ill a long time, and, Doctor Stewart said, had been thinking for several months of ending his life.

From a collection of firearms he had made over a period of years Eastman selected a pistol of high velocity, one of the most powerful of all small arms in use, with which to end his life.

D. C. Cook, Publisher of Church Books, Is Dead

Elgin, Ill.—David C. Cook II, nationally known publisher of church books, died at his home of pneumonia. He had been ill for two weeks.

Mr. Cook was president of the David C. Cook Publishing company, which was founded in Elgin by his father, the late David C. Cook. He was born in 1881 and had always lived in Elgin, although he traveled extensively and had a winter home at Pasadena, Calif.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Frances Kerr Cook, and three children, Lois, Frances and David C. Cook III.

6,000-Mile Odyssey Ends in Yacht Wreck

Buenos Aires, Argentina.—The 6,000-mile odyssey of Vito Dumas, Argentine sportsman, from Aracachon, France, to Buenos Aires ended when his 26-foot yacht struck a sandbar off Montargis, Brazil, 500 miles from Dumas' home haven. He swam half a mile to shore to keep from drowning.

POULTRY

FOOD MAIN THING AS PULLETS GROW

Oversupply of Chick Mash Not Wise.

The success or failure of the poultry industry depends upon the care and feeding of the pullets during the growing age, according to Prof. R. S. Dearstyne, head of the poultry department at North Carolina State college.

"Cockerels and pullets should be separated as early as possible," says Mr. Dearstyne. "This eliminates crowding, which tends to retard development in the young birds, which means a small hen with a correspondingly low egg production."

The feeding problem, while often neglected, is of major importance, states Mr. Dearstyne. It is a mistake to carry the young pullets through the developing period on chick mash, as such feeding tends to bring about an early lay and a molt when eggs are at a premium. The high protein feeds should be decreased as the birds are ten weeks old so as to bring them into lay about the first of October, he says.

When the birds are fourteen weeks old, a grain ration should be kept before them at all times and Mr. Dearstyne recommends that two-thirds grain and one-third mash be fed until the birds go into the laying house. The consumption of grain may be regulated by keeping grain in the hoppers all the time and by feeding mash several times a day for limited periods.

Flock's Need of Protein Made Scientific Record

Scientific research is just a high-sounding phrase to most of us, but that agriculture owes much of the advance it has made in the last half century to science is the plain truth. The laboratory yields its secrets only to its elect, but the results are often so simple that a child can profit by them.

Examples of this are plentiful on the farm, and now comes an announcement from the research laboratory of a large commercial feed plant of a discovery which will interest poultry raisers, especially just now. Through scores of experiments in feeding many thousands of baby chicks these scientists say they have proven that a proper synchronization of proteins in the feed is necessary to produce best results in pigmentation, feathering, growth, and vitality. They refer to the discovery as an ingredient which no doubt will prove equally successful in all live stock ration.—Southern Agriculturist.

Increasing Hatchability

Hatchability of eggs has been definitely increased by proper feeding of flocks at Ohio State university. A basal ration containing 30 per cent yellow corn when fed to birds in confinement produced an average hatchability of only 36.9 per cent. Skim milk added to this ration showed considerable improvement; and an outdoor yard with bluegrass increased hatchability to 60.9 per cent.

When the percentage of corn in the ration was increased from 30 to 65, the addition of soybean hay increased hatchability from 35.7 to 61.7 per cent; alfalfa hay to 59.4 per cent, and clover hay to 57.8 per cent. Bluegrass alone jumped it to 64 per cent.—Prairie Farmer.

Green Feeds Are Necessary

An abundance of green feed is necessary at all times. A lack of it causes ill health and low production. Greens are a tonic that stimulate the appetite. They also aid the digestive tract to function properly, thereby securing for the birds a larger use from the feed consumed. Birds should be given all the greens that they can eat, once daily at a regular period. This is best given at noon or in the late afternoon. Sprouted oats is one of the best forms of greens and should be fed when the sprouts are from one to three inches in length.—American Fruit Grower.

Poultry Facts

Turkeys made a good return to Minnesota producers in 1931. It is difficult to keep a brooder house dry when it is crowded. Moist litter helps spread disease. The White Leghorn flock on the farm of J. J. Bisagno of Augusta, Kan., averaged 230 eggs per the 1930-31 season; the top hen produced 291 eggs.

In spells of dark, cloudy weather, cod liver oil in the ration is a fine substitute for sunshine. The Pekin duck has a creamy white plumage and a long, broad and deep body with a full breast and deep keel. Theirs is an idea body formation for a market bird.

Lights in the laying house may not increase the total number of eggs laid in a year, but they do shift some of the heavy spring laying to the winter months when prices are better. The year's supply of egg cases can be purchased to the best advantage when the heaviest withdrawals are made from cold storage.

One hundred hens, laying heavily, will transpire three to four gallons of water as vapor in a day. The non-layers will give off only half as much. An outstanding example of what can be done in raising turkeys is the farm of A. Machon of Ontario, Malheur county, Oregon, where 2,000 birds have been raised successfully on ten acres.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Get a sun and use as directed. Fine particles of wax keep off small oil droplets such as grease, dirt and freckles disappear. This is the only way to keep your skin young. Mercolized Wax keeps out the hidden enemy, freckles, and removes wrinkles on the surface of your skin. It dissolves in one-half pint witch-hazel, 40¢ per bottle.

Shooting Merely a Bluff

Some Latin-American countries resort to revolutions as a simple method of election and regard it as the best method for making a political change. Charles H. Cunningham, former United States commercial attaché at Lima, Peru, said at St. Louis recently. "There is a lot of blank shooting done in some of the revolutions, with shots being fired mainly for effect." Cunningham said. "During some of the revolutions in Peru foreigners were allowed to transact business as usual in downtown districts, but were warned to keep off or certain streets where fighting was going on."

"TARGET hits the bull's-eye on every count. It's the new idea in roll-your-own tobaccos... real cigarette tobacco, blended just like ready-mades."

"And the smokes you roll from Target look like ready-mades. They stay plump, and don't roll out at the ends. You get 40 gummed papers free with every package. No more roll-your-own smokes that bust open while you're trying to smoke them."

"And the saving you make is a 1932 idea. Just think of it, I get thirty or more swells smokes from each pack of Target. And I pay only one dime. Yes, sir, I'm for Target."

AND GET THIS: The U. S. Government Tax on 20 cigarettes amounts to 6¢. On 20 cigarettes you roll from Target Tobacco the tax is just about 1¢. No wonder you get such value for a dime!

MEMORIAL

In sad but loving memory of our beloved husband and father, Fred Ramthun, who passed away March 17, 1932. If we had seen you at the last, And held your dying hands, And heard the last sighs of your heart We would not feel so bad; We did not know the pain you had, We did not see you die, We only knew you passed away, And never said good-bye. We loved him, but angels loved him more. The golden gates were opened A gentle voice said come, And with farewell words unspoken, He calmly entered home. No one knows the silent heartache, Only those who lost can tell; Of the grief that's borne in silence For the one we loved so well. Sadly missed by wife, Mrs. Fred W. Ramthun, and children.

CARD OF THANKS

We sincerely thank our relatives and many friends for their kind expressions of sympathy and the beautiful floral offerings extended to us in our sorrow, the loss of our beloved husband and father, Fred W. Ramthun, the Rev. Gerhardt Kamies for his message of comfort, the choir for their beautiful songs rendered, the pallbearers, those who furnished automobiles, and the funeral director, Clem Reinners.

Mrs. Fred W. Ramthun and Children.

Up-to-the-Minute and Practical

Every woman wishes to be as well-dressed as possible without spending too much time or money on her clothes. That is why so many women in this community turn first to the page in this newspaper which contains the illustrated fashion articles by Miss Cherie Nicholas. For Miss Nicholas is an authority on fashions—not the freak models and the extreme styles, but the fashions in dress which the modern woman demands, those which are up-to-the-minute and at the same time economical and practical.

Be sure to look for these articles in each issue of this newspaper and then tell your women friends about them. They will be glad to know how they, too, can wear clothes which carry the message of the well-dressed woman.
