"What do you regard as the highest honor to which a statesman can aspire?"
 "To be mentioned kindly by the friends at home," answered Senator Sorghum.

 "Only in moderation. I'll have been sufficiently involved in controversy during my lifetime without going off and getting mixed up with literary and art critics."

 "Not too much. Nobody is liable to get the best publicity by getting up in meetings and giving three cheers for himself."—Washington Star.

Smoker Chat

"Yes, sir," concluded the talkative man, "I live in the healthiest town in the healthiest part of all the world. Why don't you move out to my part of the country?"
 "No," sighed the man who had listened patiently. "You see, I'm a doctor."

In Reverse

"You are reading a travel book. Preparing for the holidays?"
 "No. I am on holiday now. I sit here and dream 'W' travel."
 "But you are reading the book backwards."
 "Yes, I am on the return journey now."

Fifty-Fifty

Two casual golf acquaintances were walking towards the green when they sighted two women coming over a hill.

Puzzles
 "I understand you and your wife never exchange a cross word," remarked the observant friend.
 "That's right," answered Mr. Meekton. "The crossword puzzle is sufficiently interesting the way it is with out trying to reduce it to home conversation."

Takes Seventeen Years for Locust to Mature

The 17 year locusts, as the insect known to science as the cicada is called, appears in the North more often than every 17 years, but this is due to the fact that there are several cycles of them in existence. The cicadas actually require 17 years to mature from the egg stage to the final stage of the full-grown insect. In the South the period is about four years shorter.

The adults lay the eggs in slits in the bark of twigs of trees. When the eggs hatch, the young is a nymph with legs, but no wings. They drop from the tree to the ground and, burrowing beneath the soil, reach the roots, where they find their sustenance during the years' they are progressing toward maturity.

When the 17 years have been accomplished they work to the surface, and their shell coating splits, permitting the full-grown insect to emerge.

Willing

"I must tell you that my daughter can bring a husband only her beauty and her intellect."

"I don't mind—many young couples have started in a very small way."—Montreal Star.

Novelty, Message of Smart Cottons

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SMART cottons go galloping through the fashion picture at high speed this season. Keep us guessing, too, as to their real identity, being silky looking one moment, dull-lustered and wooly the next, sheer, heavy, spongy, lay, sporty, dressy, formal or informal as occasion may demand. When it comes to novelty, the new cotton weaves have it written all over them and that is why in all fashion reports they are getting front-page notices these days.

The material which fashions the attractive frock centered in the picture is a fine example of a cotton which conceals its identity. It is one of the new dune crepes—a knitted crepe which is extremely sheer and cool. It might be traced from the looks of it, which goes to show the extraordinary tricks quality-kind cottons are playing in the game of fashion at the present moment. The fact that this handsome dune crepe cotton weaves is dotted adds to its prestige, for its dots and dots according to what "they say" in Paris.

Speaking of novelty, the new mesh cottons "say it" with emphasis. The latest member of the lace mesh-cotton family to announce its debut is eyelet dune. The last-minute frock which you see illustrated to the left in this trio of swagger spring and summer gowns is made of the very best and interesting eyelet dune fabric. Those who wear a gown fashioned of it to a golf tournament, or while watching the horses at the first 12 meet, will discover that this material is even cooler than chiffon because of the "air-holes"—not a classic term, but informative—for the fabric is unusually absorbent.

This very modern frock, worn by a very young woman, is designed to accentuate the wider shoulder line. It also has a smart-looking diagonal cut to its seamings.

Take notice, please, that this same Miss Modern is wearing a beret, for she has heard all about their continued vogue in Paris. The simplest of berets or the rather dressy sort, the beret which harmonizes or the beret which provides a color contrast to one's costume, they each and all qualify as perfectly good style. And her gloves! Have you sensed the open-mesh gloves which this lady of fashion is wearing? To sport the new cotton lace mesh gloves such as those pictured is proof-positive that the wearer is correctly style-informed.

Speaking of novelty as expressed in this season's ultra-chic cotton weaves, the fabric employed for the up-to-the-moment gown to the right in this group, has "it" in no uncertain terms. It is a faggoted cotton which is "nuff said" to those who keep pace with fashion's stride. All the best designers are choosing faggoted materials for their latest spring and summer gowns. The one shown is a particularly lovely dune openwork fabric, faggoted to stress the importance of diagonal lines. The prim little belt—belts may be almost any width—indicates a fairly high waistline. The fanciful lace quality of the dune fabric provides all the needed decoration, hence the simplicity of its treatment. A piquant little rough straw hat is worn.

Another outstanding movement of smart cottons is in the direction of embroidered effects. This applies to sheer materials for party wear as well as sturdier types for sports.

WOOL PIQUE LAST WHISPER IN CHIC

We've had cotton pique and we're had silk pique.

Now may we introduce the newest member of the family, wool pique, which is the last whisper in spring-time chic.

For instance, one of our more alert shops along the avenue is showing a suit of white wool pique, with a trick yoke effect which makes your shoulders look like those of a West Point cadet. The yoke of the jacket is cut straight across the sleeves, about midway between shoulder and elbow, giving effective shoulder breadth as well as a new dash and a last-minute air.

The jacket is short and fitted as to waistline. The skirt is straight, with a front pleat concealing the fact that it is divided. It is worn with a knitted blouse of white wool yarn with an ascot scarf banded in red and green.

If you'd care for a sailor of rough white straw, with a tri-color band of green, red and white, you'd find it added quite the finishing touch.

Simplicity Is Theme of Smartest Dresses

Lines still point the way to smartness. Not only the lines of the model, but the diagonal lines of the various woollens and the lines formed by the ever-smart pin tucking that is seen so much just now.

Simplicity is the theme of most of the frocks. Life is much less complex and exciting than it used to be and clothes are paced in the same gait. Novelty is conspicuous by their absence, so are freak clothes.

Instead we have smart little suits, attractive and wearable, and charming frocks that have a fine dressmaker air about them, but are careful not to flaunt it. This is the type of frock that will be worn for the present, during the day, anyway.

Rakish Little Hats

Timely Suggestions From Fashion Centers

Stripes will be important this season. Gloves are a trifle shorter than last year.

Rainbow stockings are a new hostelry note. Buttons are appearing as trimmings on everything.

Navy with pink is a color combination beloved by a famous French designer.

PLAY OVERALLS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Spring has come and it's time for children to play out of doors. What more befitting for your little girl to wear than this clever overall costume? Make it of jeans or cotton broadcloth or any preferred sturdy weave. The original model photographed is in marine blue and red, with bright red ocean pearl buttons. Be sure to add the gay pearl buttons for they give this cunning suit the touch that tells.

Raffia Necklaces Are New Spring Accessory

Raffia necklaces are fashion's newest accessory novelty to wear with that spring wool frock. They are made of fine raffia braided in checker design and finished with a long tassel which falls to the waist. White necklaces are worn with black wool frocks and emerald green with light green.

Caviar Necklaces and Bracelets are Fashionable Just Now

Yellow promises to be a huge success as a summer shade. The new silhouette with its straight lines is infinitely becoming.

Matching shoe, bag and glove ensembles are shown in white kid. Navy-style pajama suits have white trousers, blue coats and brass buttons.

HOOVER HAS PLAN TO SLASH $95,000,000

Program Calls for Five-Day Federal Week.

U. S. BORROWES AGAIN
Washington.—An issue of $75,000,000 in treasury bills to raise that amount of money was announced by Secretary Mills. He said the bills would be sold on April 18 to the highest bidder. They will mature in 91 days.

Washington.—President Hoover's revised federal employment reduction plan was laid before the house economy committee, as the federal deficit increased to more than $2,000,000,000. The President discussed his program calling for a five-day work week throughout the government, elimination of annual leave with pay and allowances to rural mail carriers with the group at the White House. He estimates it will save $95,000,000.

Meanwhile, the treasury reported that on April 11 the government's deficit totaled $2,017,858,745, its highest figure in peace times. On that date all sources had produced $1,629,961,527 in revenue during the fiscal year, while $3,647,820,272 had been spent.

Another effort at economy was begun by Chairman Vinson of the house naval committee through the introduction of bills expected to save $3,000,000 by abolishing the offices of the assistant secretaries of aeronautics in both the War and Navy departments and authorizing the President to sell or close naval shore stations.

COLLECTING "BUG" SMITES THEM ALL

Mania Seems to Have Good Hold on Males.

The best conversational opening, to any man, above the age of three, that I have yet discovered, is: "What do you collect?"

Every male collects something, and he is only too glad to tell you all about it. Even if he does not collect, he is used to, and the tale of why he no longer collects is usually rather tragic, and ends: "And so you see why I don't collect any longer."

They all begin, these men, in the same way. Shells on the beach, worms, rabbits, eggs stamps (an egg of five once told me he had a collection of three stamps). They go on to butterflies, cigarette pictures, crests—since the war hardly anybody has created notepaper—and gradually quality takes the place of quantity.

Then comes the prints and Tolby-Jugs phase, and quietly they settle down to the collection of their lives. And that may or may not be a money-making concern. If I were a father, and were making cautious inquiries about my daughter's best beau, I would ascertain what he collected, and I would be relieved if his tastes lay in the direction of first numbers of magazines, bought hot off the bookstall, for the original price of a quarter or a dime, rather than in the line of first editions, hundreds of years old, that increase in cost from year to year.

Of course, collecting pays—at times. A friend of ours, with an inherited as well as an acquired knowledge of coins, collected them, quietly and unostentatiously, in out-of-the-way places, mostly in the back streets in Italy, every vacation, as a student and professor. He sold his little lot for $30,000, and built himself a country house. The day after he sold his collection he began another one. He sold it, and laid out the garden, specializing in roses. He began his third coin collection the day he sold his rose-garden one; this time, he says, he is going to keep his coins.

Another friend collects something that costs him nothing—railway tickets. He began in his agile youth, in Scotland, when dodging the legitimate collector was part of the game. The ticket was just proof he had dodged successfully. For some reason, probably a prudent one, he has stopped collecting them himself, but he expects that when his friends and younger relatives go a-journeing in far countries, they shall bring him back as many samples of the tickets of other lands as they can. He has now a world-wide collection.

Those vicarious collectors are trying. In the days of the picture-postcard craze, our small nephews and nieces used to hail the news that their uncle and I were going abroad, with joy. "Try to go to as many out-of-the-way countries as you possibly can," they used to say, "and send us a new place every day and send us a few picture post cards from every place."—Lady Adams, in the Boston Transcript.

Economic Leaders Will Speak on Newspaper Hour

Outstanding economic problems of the day will be discussed in the National Farm and Home Hour Saturday, April 30, by L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central railroad, Benjamin M. Anderson, Jr., economist of the Chase National bank of the city of New York, and United States Senator Otis F. Glenn of Illinois.

The broadcast will be under the direction of the corn belt farm dailies, a group of daily agricultural newspapers which circulate principally among the larger producers of live stock. In the group are the Chicago Drivers Journal, Kansas City Drivers Telegram, Omaha Journal-Stockman, and St. Louis Daily Livestock Reporter.

Charles E. Snyder, editor of the Chicago Drivers Journal, will be in charge of the broadcast and will introduce the speakers who are to devote their attention to presenting for the farm radio audience discussions of existing economic conditions of the day.

The program promises to attract the attention of vast audiences particularly because it will bring before the NBC microphones three distinguished leaders in the economic world.

The program will be brought to listeners as part of the plan to feature the messages of practically every important agricultural organization in the country. The speakers were chosen by Mr. Snyder because of their long experience and contacts with our economic problems.

Lifelong Warfare

on Insect Pests

Award of the Copper gold medal "for distinguished service to agriculture," carrying an honorarium of $5,000, has been made to Dr. L. O. Howard, a government bug expert who, on a small official salary, has waged a lifelong battle against insect pests.

"He has made a great contribution to the present and future happiness of the American people," says the Woman's Home Companion in its announcement of the award. "He has for years been fighting the greatest of all wars—the war against insects. Insects, as he has shown, steal two billion dollars a year from us. They nullify the labor of a million men."

"They reached their development millions of years ago. We are the newcomers on earth and our foothold is not yet sure. Doctor Howard believes that it is still possible that in some distant future the last living thing on the expiring earth may be a bug feeding on the last bit of plant life. Thus far, indeed, the insects have held their own against us. But we cannot doubt that mankind will eventually win."

Enterprising Thief

Charles S. Hall, of Rockland, Maine, reported to police that some one had been stealing a cottage of his piecemeal. The cottage is a two-room log cabin, built three years ago on Spauldings island. The thief had taken away the furnishings, as well as the doors and windows and partitions, and part of the roof had been removed.

To every mother who can't nurse her baby... NEWS!

When a mother's milk fails, nothing is more important than this—to be sure that the food that goes into her baby's bottle gives him just what he needs to make him rosy and healthy now, and build him a firm foundation for future health.

Test made with fifty babies

Recently, two physicians—specialists in baby diet—conducted a test with fifty average babies, to throw new light on this subject.

The food tested is one unique in infant feeding history. Next to mother's milk, it has raised more babies than any other food in the world. Over a period of 75 years, it has given millions their start in life. Throughout America, there are healthy babies, children, grown-ups, to prove the value of this amazingly digestible food.

Yet never before had scientists put this famous food—Eagle Brand Milk—to such a thorough, controlled, scientific test. What would such a test reveal?

Simple diet proves builder of 100% babies

For months, the two physicians fed those fifty babies on Eagle Brand—checking with closest care every detail of their health and growth. Bone structure was studied with the X-ray. Tooth development was watched. Weight and height were periodically recorded. Blood tests were made...

And those fifty Eagle Brand babies, judged by every known test, proved themselves splendidly nourished. This simple diet—Eagle Brand, with merely the usual supplementary foods—had proved equal to the building of a 100% baby.

Now, science joins the millions of mothers who say, "We have our proof that Eagle Brand Milk is a truly valuable and effective food for a baby."

If you cannot nurse your baby, try Eagle Brand. Easy to prepare—merely add boiled water. Always pure, safe, free from dangerous germs. Keeps indefinitely in any climate. Simple feeding directions are on the label.

*The usual supplementary foods, of course, are orange or tomato juice, and cod-liver oil or other source of the anti-rachitic Vitamin D.

Takes Seventeen Years for Locust to Mature

The 17-year locusts, as the insect known to science as the cicada is called, appears in the North more often than every 17 years, but this is due to the fact that there are several cycles of them in existence. The cicadas actually require 17 years to mature from the egg stage to the final stage of the full-grown insect. In the South the period is about four years shorter.
 The adults lay the eggs in slits in the bark of twigs of trees. When the eggs hatch, the young is a nymph with legs, but no wings. They drop from the tree to the ground and, burrowing beneath the soil, reach the roots, where they find their sustenance during the years' they are progressing toward maturity.
 When the 17 years have been accomplished they work to the surface, and their shell coating splits, permitting the full-grown insect to emerge.

Novelty, Message of Smart Cottons

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SMART cottons go galloping through the fashion picture at high speed this season. Keep us guessing, too, as to their real identity, being silky looking one moment, dull-tustered and woolly the next, sheer, heavy, spongy, lay, sporty, dressy, formal or informal as occasion may demand. When it comes to novelty, the new cotton weaves have it written all over them and that is why in all fashion reports they are getting front-page notices these days.

The material which fashions the attractive frock centered in the picture is a fair example of a cotton which conceals its identity. It is one of the new dune crepes—a knitted crepe which is extremely sheer and cool. It might be twined from the looks of it, which goes to show the extraordinary tricks quality-kind cottons are playing in the game of fashion at the present moment. The fact that this handsome dune crepe cotton weave is dotted with its prestige, for it's dots and dots according to what "they say" in Paris.

Speaking of novelty, the new mesh cottons "say it" with emphasis. The latest member of the lacy mesh-cotton family to announce its debut is crepe dune. The last-minute frock which you see illustrated to the left in this trio of swifter spring and summer gowns is made of the very new and interesting eyleted dune fabric. Those who wear a gown fashioned of it to a golf tournament, or while watching the horses at the first of the meet, will discover that this material is even cooler than chiffon because of the "air-holes"—not a classic term, but informative—for the fabric is unusually absorptive.

This very modern frock, worn by a very young woman, is designed to accentuate the wider shoulder line. It also has a smart-looking diagonal cut to its seamings.

Take notice, please, that this same Miss Modern is wearing a beret, for she has heard all about their continued vogue in Paris. The simplest of berets or the rather dressy sort, the beret which harmonizes or the beret which provides a color contrast to one's costume, they each and all qualify as perfectly good style. And her gloves! Have you sensed the open-mesh gloves which this lady of fashion is wearing? To sport the new cotton lace mesh gloves such as those pictured is proof-positive that the wearer is correctly style-informed.

Speaking of novelty as expressed in this season's ultra-chic cotton weaves, the fabric employed for the up-to-the-moment gown to the right in this group, has "it" in no uncertain terms. It is a fagotated cotton which is "nuff" in that those who keep pace with fashion's stride. All the best designers are choosing fagotated materials for their latest spring and summer gowns. The one shown is a particularly lovely dune openwork fabric, finely fagotated to stress the importance of diagonal lines. The prim little belt—belts may be almost any width—indicates a fairly high waistline. The fanciful lacy quality of the dune fabric provides all the needed decoration, hence the simplicity of its treatment. A piquant little rough straw beret is worn.

Another outstanding movement of smart cottons is in the direction of embroidered effects. This applies to sheer materials for party wear as well as sturdier types for sports.

WOOL PIQUE LAST WHISPER IN CHIC

We've had cotton pique and we've had silk pique.

Now may we introduce the newest member of the family, wool pique, which is the last whisper in spring-time chic.

For instance, one of our more alert shops along the avenue is showing a suit of white wool pique, with a trick yoke effect which makes your shoulders look like those of a West Point cadet. The yoke of the jacket is cut straight across the sleeves, about midway between shoulder and elbow, giving effective shoulder breadth as well as a new dash and a last-minute air. The jacket is short and fitted as to waistline. The skirt is straight, with a front pleat concealing the fact that it is divided. It is worn with a knitted blouse of white wool yarn with an ascot scarf banded in red and green.

If you'd care for a sailor of rough white straw, with a tri-color band of green, red and white, you'd find it added quite the finishing touch.

Simplicity Is Theme of Smartest Dresses

Lines still point the way to smartness. Not only the lines of the model, but the diagonal lines of the various woolsens and the lines formed by the ever-smart pin tucking that is seen so much just now.

Simplicity is the theme of most of the frocks. Life is much less complex and exciting than it used to be and clothes are paced in the same gait. Novelty is conspicuous by its absence, so are freak clothes.

Instead we have smart little suits, attractive and wearable, and charming frocks that have a fine dressmaker air about them, but are careful not to flaunt it. This is the type of frock that will be worn for the present, during the day, anyway.

Rakish Little Hats

They are young and cute and rakish, these new hats of woven viscra straw, with a low, rounded crown, a brim pointed a bit over the left eye and with two quills in contrasting colors standing straight up on the left side. They are slipped through the crown.

Timely Suggestions From Fashion Centers

Stripes will be important this season. Gloves are a trifle shorter than last year.

Rainbow stockings are a new hostery note. Buttons are appearing as trimmings on everything.

Navy with pink is a color combination beloved by a famous French designer.

PLAY OVERALLS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Spring has come and it's time for children to play out of doors. What more befitting for your little girl to wear than this clever overall costume? Make it of jeans or cotton broadcloth or any preferred sturdy weave. The original model photographed is in marine blue and red, with bright red ocean pearl buttons. Be sure to give the gay pearl buttons for they give this cunning suit the touch that tells.

Raffia Necklaces Are New Spring Accessory

Raffia necklaces are fashion's newest accessory novelty to wear with that spring wool frock. They are made of fine raffia braided in choker design and finished with a long tassel which falls to the waist. White necklaces are worn with black wool frocks and emerald green with light green.

Washington.—President Hoover's revised federal employment reduction plan was laid before the house economy committee, as the federal deficit increased to more than $2,000,000,000. The President discussed his program calling for a five-day work week throughout the government, elimination of annual leave with pay and allowances to rural mail carriers with the group at the White House. He estimates it will save $95,000,000.

Another effort at economy was begun by Chairman Vinson of the house naval committee through the introduction of bills expected to save $3,000,000 by abolishing the offices of the assistant secretaries of aeronautics in both the War, and Navy departments and authorizing the President to sell or close naval shore stations.

COLLECTING "BUG" SMITES THEM ALL

Mania Seems to Have Good Hold on Males.

The best conversational opening, to any man, above the age of three, that I have yet discovered, is: "What do you collect?"

Every male collects something, and he is only too glad to tell you all about it. Even if he does not collect, he is used to, and the tale of why he no longer collects is usually rather tragic, and ends: "And so you see why I don't collect any longer."

They all begin, these men, in the same way. Shells on the beach, worms, rabbits, eggs stamps (an angel of five once told me he had a collection of three stamps). They go on to butterflies, cigarette pictures, crests—since the war hardly anybody has crested notepaper—and gradually quality takes the place of quantity.

Then comes the prints and Toby-Jugs phase, and quietly they settle down to the collection of their lives. And that may or may not be a money-making concern. If I were a father, and were making cautious inquiries about my daughter's best beau, I would ascertain what he collected, and I would be relieved if his tastes lay in the direction of first numbers of magazines, bought hot off the bookstall, on the day of publication, for the original price of a quarter or a dime, rather than in the line of first editions, hundreds of years old, that increase in cost from year to year.

Of course, collecting pays—at times. A friend of ours, with an inherited as well as an acquired knowledge of coins, collected them, quietly and unostentatiously, in out-of-the-way places, mostly in back streets in Italy, every vacation; as student and professor. He sold his little lot for $30,000, and built himself a country house. The day after he sold his collection he began another one. He began his third coin collection the day he sold his rose-garden one; this time, he says, he is going to keep his coins.

Another friend collects something that costs him nothing—railway tickets. He began in his agile youth, in Scotland, when dodging the legitimate collector was part of the game. The ticket was just proof he had dodged successfully. For some reason, probably a prudent one, he has stopped collecting them himself, but he expects that when his friends and younger relatives go a-journeing in far countries, they shall bring him back as many samples of the tickets of other lands as they can. He has now a world-wide collection.

Those vicarious collectors are trying. In the days of the picture-post-card craze, our small nephews and nieces used to hail the news that their uncle and I were going abroad, with joy. "Try to go to as many out-of-the-way countries as you possibly can," they used to say, "and be sure to go to a new place every day and send us a few picture post cards from every place."—Lady Adams, in the Boston Transcript.

Economic Leaders Will Speak on Newspaper Hour

Outstanding economic problems of the day will be discussed in the National Farm and Home Hour Saturday, April 30, by L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central railroad, Benjamin M. Anderson, Jr., economist of the Chase National bank of the city of New York, and United States Senator Otis F. Glenn of Illinois.

The broadcast will be under the direction of the corn belt farm dailies, a group of daily agricultural newspapers which circulate principally among the larger producers of live stock. In the group are the Chicago Drovers Journal, Kansas City Drovers Telegram, Omaha Journal-Stockman, and St. Louis Daily Livestock Reporter.

Charles E. Snyder, editor of the Chicago Drovers Journal, will be in charge of the broadcast and will introduce the speakers who are to devote their attention to presenting for the farm radio audience discussions of existing economic conditions of the day.

The program promises to attract the attention of vast audiences particularly because it will bring before the NBC microphones three distinguished leaders in the economic world.

The program will be brought to listeners as part of the plan to feature the messages of practically every important agricultural organization in the country. The speakers were chosen by Mr. Snyder because of their long experience and contacts with our economic problems.

Lifelong Warfare on Insect Pests

Award of the Copper gold medal "for distinguished service to agriculture," carrying an honorarium of $5,000, has been made to Dr. L. O. Howard, a government bug expert who, on a small official salary, has waged a lifelong battle against insect pests.

"He has made a great contribution to the present and future happiness of the American people," says the Woman's Home Companion in its announcement of the award. "He has for years been fighting the greatest of all wars—the war against insects. Insects, as he has shown, steal two billion dollars a year from us. They nullify the labor of a million men."

"They reached their development in the millions of years ago, and our foot-neo-comers on earth and our foot-hold is not yet sure. Doctor Howard believes that it is still possible that in some distant future the last living thing on the expiring earth may be a bug feeding on the last bit of plant life. Thus far, indeed, the insects have held their own against us. But we cannot doubt that mankind will eventually win."

Enterprising Thief

Charles S. Hall, of Rockland, Maine, reported to police that some one had been stealing a cottage of his piecement. The cottage is a two-room log cabin, built three years ago on Spaulding island. The thief had taken away the furnishings, as well as the doors and windows and partitions, and part of the roof had been removed.

To every mother who can't nurse her baby... NEWS!

When a mother's milk fails, nothing is more important than this—to be sure that the food that goes into her baby's bottle gives him just what he needs to make him rosy and healthy now, and build him a firm foundation for future health.

Simple diet proves builder of 100% babies

For months, the two physicians fed those fifty babies on Eagle Brand—checking with closest care every detail of their health and growth. Bone structure was studied with the X-ray. Tooth development was watched. Weight and height were periodically recorded. Blood tests were made...

And those fifty Eagle Brand babies, judged by every known test, proved themselves splendidly nourished. This simple diet—Eagle Brand, with merely the usual supplementary foods—had proved equal to the building of a 100% baby.

Now, science joins the millions of mothers who say, "We have our proof that Eagle Brand Milk is a truly valuable and effective food for a baby."

If you cannot nurse your baby, try Eagle Brand. Easy to prepare—merely add boiled water. Always pure, safe, free from dangerous germs. Keeps indefinitely in any climate. Simple feeding directions are on the label.

*The usual supplementary foods, of course, are orange or tomato juice, and cod-liver oil or other source of the anti-rachitic Vitamin D.

FREE! COMPLETE BOOKLET ON BABY CARE

Men and the Truth

Men in all ways are better than they seem. They like flattery for the moment, but they know the truth for their own. It is a foolish cowardice which keeps us from trusting them, and speaking to them rude truth.—Emerson.

Urban Age

It is nearly 2,000 years since an urban settlement was founded on the territory which today is covered by Vienna. The small Roman military camp Vindobona developed into the modern metropolis with her enormous municipal area of 275.88 square kilometers, second only to London.

A Poor Sort of Wit

That sort of wit, which employs itself insolently in criticizing and censuring the words and sentiments of others in conversation, is absolute folly; for it answers none of the ends of conversation. He who uses it neither improves others, is improved himself, nor pleases anyone.—Franklin.

"Ghost" Only Rabbit

Pupils of the school of Buena Vista, Scotland, were recently thrown into a panic by the sudden appearance at the side of the blackboard of what they took to be a fluttering apparition in white. They ran home and told of the appearance of either a ghost or an angel. Parents investigated and found that a very large white hare had gotten into the schoolhouse and had been seen to jump from behind the blackboard.

Nobody Loves a Policeman

That's an old saying but a man's true any more. At least it hasn't been true since F. G. Alexander added "Finney of the Force" to the list of the most comic strip characters. For "Finney," with his sparkling humor and his sharp comment on people and the common everyday events of life, is a lovable character, as thousands of newspaper readers who have followed him through his various adventures will testify.

"Finney of the Force" is a regular feature in this newspaper with whom our subscribers are acquainted, and all enjoy him. I can tell you friends about him, for they all enjoy him as much as you do.

TEN MILE TAX LAW IS UPHeld BY HIGH COURT

The ten-mile tax law enacted in 1921 legislature is constitutional, state supreme court said Wednesday in a special ruling.

A petition by the Wisconsin Truck Owners' association for an injunction to restrain the state police service commission from enforcing the law was denied.

"The construction placed upon the law by the public service commission is approved in principle except as to vehicles which do not transport freight," the supreme court said.

An opinion in the case will be handed down later.

Through its attorney, Glenn Stevens, Madison, the Truckers' association brought an original action before the supreme court last January in an effort to have the law declared void.

Several modifications since been made by the public service commission of the original interpretation of the law. The final construction placed upon the law exempted hauling agricultural products to a primary market whether for commercial hire or not.

This interpretation was approved by the court in its ruling Wednesday.

An acre of soil, plow depth, is estimated to weigh about 2,000,000 pounds which means that when two tons of limestone are applied to an acre that there has been added one part of lime to every 500 parts of soil. For this reason, soils workers recommend the use of finely ground limestone in order to secure a greater distribution of lime particles in the soil.

Eskimo Music

The Eskimo are very fond of music. Their native music consists chiefly of songs, chants and melodies, many of which possess considerable musical rhythm. Although the tunes to which they are sung are very crude, they can be traced to keynotes. The melodies especially are said to be very pleasing and a number of them have been published with corresponding music.

All Around WISCONSIN

Wausau—Max Geldon, a farmer, was bound to circuit court for trial on a charge of having set fire to his home. Milwaukee—The will of Mary E. Kelly, who died in California recently, leaves the bulk of her $100,000 estate in a trust fund to aid worthy students at Marquette University, Milwaukee. Waukesha—Run over by a tractor, Martin Kern, 45, Vernon farmer, was killed. He apparently was knocked from the tractor when his head struck a beam as he backed it out of a shed. Racine—The association of commerce is attempting to re-route a detour from U. S. highway 41, west of here, through the main business section of this city, to aid business men. Waukesha—William Markham, 62, a North Prairie farmer, was placed on probation for two years after he pleaded guilty to shooting and seriously wounding his neighbor, Charles Kelch, 60. New London—J. D. Rouse, 74, manager of the Strout Farm agency here, died of injuries received when his car was struck by a freight train. He was formerly principal of the Manawa high school. Milwaukee—Driven temporarily insane through the loss of a job he had held for 12 years, Emil J. Huebner, 42, a former street car motorman, shot and killed his aged mother, his wife and himself. Sheboygan—Elmer Jenkins, 41, manager of the Plymouth fox and fur farm near here, committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver. His wife found his body in the storage refrigerator on the farm. Fond du Lac—Damages of $5,500 were awarded by a federal court jury to Mrs. Louise Lemke of this city, who sued Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kuhle on the contention their sales of liquor to her husband, Fred Lemke, caused him to lose several jobs and the Lemke family to become impoverished. Beloit—Richard Rule, a Beloit school boy, who weighed less than a pound when he was born at Platteville thirteen years ago, is now strong and healthy, although being about the size of a seven-year-old boy. It is believed that he was the world's smallest baby at birth. La Crosse—James Saltz, 22, attendant at a downtown filling station, was found shot to death in the office by children who had been playing nearby when the killing occurred. The safe had been robbed. Police are without clues, as no one seems to have seen any suspicious characters about the place or to have heard a shot. Oconto—Sixteen new faces will appear on the Oconto county board, a complete check of votes cast in the recent election reveals. In nearly every precinct where there was opposition the present supervisor was unseated in the greatest single upheaval in years. The board includes 39 members. Neenah—George Nobbe, 13, claims the title of 1932 fishing champion. Walking along the border of a swamp, George saw a commotion in the water and the outlines of a big fish. Jumping in and with nothing but his bare hands, the lad, after a 20 minute battle, landed a 14 pound pickerel. The fish measured 37 inches. Madison—March farm prices resisted the steady decline which began last fall and remained at 29 per cent below the pre-war level, the same as that which existed the month before. From Feb. 15 to Mar. 15 livestock, grain and chicken prices rose, but milk and egg prices declined, the service said. March milk averaged 93 cents per hundred pounds, the lowest price in the present depression and 26 per cent below prices of 1910 to 1914. Milwaukee—Despite a general decrease in property values, lower inventories and complete elimination of the personal property tax on automobiles, 101 cities and 52 counties in Wisconsin have inaugurated tax reductions totaling $10,606,341 for 1932. It is revealed in figures collected by the Wisconsin state chamber of commerce. The average tax rate for the cities in 1931 was $31.70, whereas the 1932 rate averages $28.08, the survey showed. The average taxation rate for counties in 1931 was $7.22 as compared to $6.13 for 1932. Sturgeon Bay—The last of the public domain in Door county formally passed into private ownership when Louis P. Nebel, Sturgeon Bay, acquired title to Bug island, a tiny dot of land less than an acre in size in Sawyer harbor. Mr. Nebel, who has had a summer home on the island for more than 40 years, found out that paying taxes for 29 years had failed to give him a "squatter's rights" title to the island, which still remained under the control of the federal government, although it was not listed on any government chart or map. Madison—If collections under the state oleomargarine tax law keep pace with those reported during the first quarter of 1932, the total will not be much more than $2,000 for the entire year. In the first quarter, $400 was paid in sales taxes of 6 cents per pound and $424 in yearly license fees. No manufacturers or wholesalers in the state have taken licenses. Madison—Appointments of Mrs. Elizabeth Cushing of Portage to the state free library commission and Mrs. Annette Roberts, Milwaukee, to the university board of visitors have been announced by Gov. La Follette. Baraboo—Mr. and Mrs. William Dunt, sr., who recently celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary, were married at Freedom and have lived there ever since. They are the parents of three children and have 49 grandchildren and 42 great-grandchildren. Schofield—When he crawled out of a burning airplane here, Elroy Radloff, 18, barely escaped with his life. Backfire from the engine started the ship to blazing, and Radloff had just stepped from the cockpit when the gasoline tank exploded.

Italy insists war debts be canceled. Renunciation Demanded by Grand Council. Rome—The grand council of Fascism came out flatly in favor of renunciation of reparations and cancellation of war debts in a resolution adopted at a session presided over by Premier Mussolini. The settlement of the reparations war debt problem is the first necessary step toward the economic recovery of the world, the resolution declared. The council, which is the government's official advisory body, took this position after a detailed discussion of the entire international situation. The statement contained five principal recommendations. These were: 1. Settlement of the question of reparations and war debts. 2. Removal of the shackles on international trade. 3. Solution of the economic difficulties of the Danubian and Balkan countries. 4. Revision of the peace treaties. 5. An end to too frequent international conferences. The peace treaties "carry in themselves the causes of inquietude and of a new war," the council declared. It recommended that these treaties be revised through the League of Nations. Supreme Court Holds States' Remap Invalid. Washington.—Three states were told by the Supreme court that their reapportionment laws were invalid because they lacked their governors' approval. New York, Minnesota and Missouri had passed statutes reshaping their congressional districts, but the decision threw the tangle back where it was when they began. The question presented in all three was the same—whether the legislature had the right to redistrict without the governor's signature on the legislation—as is required where ordinary statutes are concerned, unless passed over his veto. Justice Cardozo took no part in the case, but the other eight justices were unanimous in their agreement that redistricting was law making and that the governor has an important place in it. Shortage Revealed in Ohio County Treasury. Cleveland, Ohio.—Grand jury investigation of charges by State Examiner James N. Main that $475,000 was missing from the Cuyahoga county treasury last December 18 and that an additional $188,200 was represented by un-cashed checks, is imminent. A. E. Peckinpaugh, special state examiner, revealed that part of the $475,000 alleged shortage represented "more than a dozen" checks cashed at the bank and that no record of deposit of this money with the county can be found. He said the checks were all indorsed with a rubber stamp bearing the name "L. G. Collier, county treasurer." Peckinpaugh's statement introduced the first definite charge of actual embezzlement into the case. He admitted it will be difficult to trace the embezzler or embezzlers in view of the rubber stamp indorsement. Rift Widening Between De Valera and Britain. Ennis, County Clare, Irish Free State.—President Eamon De Valera of the Irish Free State vigorously restated his position that his country would stand firmly for abolition of the oath to the king and against payment of land annuities. De Valera said that not a penny of the land annuities, which have been collected from Irish farmers for repayment of loans they were given to buy their land, would be paid until Great Britain proved her right to them. "I am convinced she can never prove this," he concluded. Coal Production Fails; Soviets Sound Alarm. Moscow.—A sharp drop in coal production planned for the first quarter of 1932 aroused the newspaper Pravda to sound an alarm. Pravda said the situation in the coal industry was menacing the most important phases of other industries, chiefly the metallurgical works, which are one of the basic sections for the successful completion of the five year plan. This was blamed by Pravda on unskilled management, inadequate organization of labor and the failure of many mines to institute the system of piece work wages, resulting in much shifting of workers. For Closer Bank Supervision. Chicago.—Abolition of bank receivers and creation of a banking board for closer supervision of Illinois state banks were recommended by the committee on legislation of the Illinois Bankers' association. Against Fixed Sentences. New York.—Abolition of fixed prison sentences if society is to progress in its efforts to reclaim criminals was advocated by Walden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing. Bank Official Arrested. Philadelphia.—Alexander D. Robinson, vice president and treasurer of the defunct Northwestern Trust company, was arrested on a charge of embezzling $750,000 of the bank's funds. The bank closed last November. Famous Historian Dead. Berlin.—Prof. Max Lenz, eminent historian, died at his home in this city at eighty-one. He wrote critical studies of Bismarck, Napoleon, and Martin Luther, among other works. Heir Born to Royalty. Brussels, Belgium.—Isabelle, countess of Paris, wife of Prince Henri of Guise, heir-presumptive to the throne of France, gave birth to a daughter. The child was named Isabelle.

ITALY INSISTS WAR DEBTS BE CANCELED

Renunciation Demanded by Grand Council. Rome—The grand council of Fascism came out flatly in favor of renunciation of reparations and cancellation of war debts in a resolution adopted at a session presided over by Premier Mussolini. The settlement of the reparations war debt problem is the first necessary step toward the economic recovery of the world, the resolution declared. The peace treaties "carry in themselves the causes of inquietude and of a new war," the council declared. It recommended that these treaties be revised through the League of Nations.

PRESIDENT HINDENBURG

President Paul Von Hindenburg won another seven-year term and a sensational personal triumph in Presidential re-election. The President not only rolled up the amazing plurality of 5,942,000 votes, but was given a flat majority of 1,114,000. Only a plurality was needed.

STATE INCOME TAX HELD TO BE VALID

California Corporation Loses Important Case. Washington.—The California corporation franchise tax was sustained by the Supreme court. The court said that the tax was valid so far as measured on income from tax exempt securities. The case was brought by the Pacific Co., Ltd., of Los Angeles. The company in its state franchise tax on 1929 was required to include in its income interest on bonds of improvement districts, organized before 1928 under California laws. The company brought suit to recover, contending the securities were tax exempt and that the levy violated contract rights under which the bonds were purchased. The state replied that the income of corporations was used as a yard stick to measure the franchise tax imposed for the right to do business and denied that the tax was in effect a tariff on interest from securities exempt from property taxes. The California Supreme court upheld the trial court in holding the tax valid.

FARM CO-OP ASKS GRAIN PIT'S CLOSE

Chicago Board of Trade Hit by Charges. Chicago.—Revocation of the Chicago Board of Trade's designation as an authorized contract market under the grain futures act was asked of the secretary of agriculture by the Farmers' National Grain corporation. The request was based on charges that the exchange has discriminated against co-operative marketing organizations. Two complaints have been forwarded to Washington. It was announced by C. E. Huff, president of the Farmers' National. The first charged that the exchange is attempting to deny the Updike Grain company, wholly owned subsidiary of the co-operative, further trading privileges. The supplemental complaint filed informed the secretary of agriculture that the application of the Farmers' National for clearing privileges had been rejected by the clearing corporation, and asserted that rule 313 of the exchange, barring corporations from clearing membership after April 2, 1929, is in violation of the grain futures act. An early hearing by the grain futures commission, composed of the secretary of agriculture, secretary of commerce and attorney general, was urged in the complaint in order that a decision may be reached before the board of trade acts on the Updike case. Peter B. Carey, president of the exchange, denounced as "bureaucratic insincerity" the threats made by officers of the Farmers' National. Stone Makes Comment. Washington.—The barring of the Farmers' National Grain corporation from the Chicago Board of Trade was described by Chairman Stone of the farm board as a "severe blow" to grain co-operatives. "Unquestionably this will hurt Farmers' National," he said. He had no further comment because he had not received details from the grain corporation, which has received financial assistance from the board.

Von Hindenburg Puts Ban on "Storm Troops"

Berlin.—Adolf Hitler's national socialist "storm troops" were declared illegal throughout the country, by a government decree. The ban affects 400,000 "Nazis" organized on military lines and referred to be their political opponents as Hitler's "pretorian guard," sometimes as "the state within a state." Immediately after the ban was declared, police throughout the country invaded local and state meeting places of the storm troops to seize their banners and equipment and padlock the premises.

Federal Agents Seize Liquor and Narcotics

New York.—Smuggled liquor and narcotics worth more than $500,000 at prevailing prices were seized by federal agents aboard two recently arrived ships. The liquor cargo—estimated to be worth $300,000—was under tons of coal in the cargo holds of the collier Mantine Tracy from Norfolk, Va. The ship was seized and its crew of 27 arrested. The narcotics were brought in by the Ile de France and labeled "toys."

Small and Horner Win in Illinois Primaries

Chicago.—Judge Henry Horner of Chicago and former Gov. Len Small of Kankakee were the Democratic and Republican nominees, respectively, for governor of Illinois in the primaries, which brought out a tremendous vote. Small was governor from 1929 until 1928, when he was defeated by Governor Emmerson for a third renomination.

Spotted Fever Spreads From Rocky Mountains

Hamilton, Mont.—Spotted fever, long mysterious disease of isolated regions of the Rocky mountains, is spreading into other sections. Caused by the bite of an infected woodtick, the disease has a high mortality rate in man, unless its course is checked by a new antitoxin being manufactured in the government laboratory here.

Commander of Veterans Appeals for the Bonus

Washington.—Darold D. Decoe, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, appeared before the house ways and means committee to urge recommendation of the $2,900,000,000 soldier bonus. He said that perhaps 98 per cent of the rank and file of veterans "are behind the bonus."

POULTRY FACTS

CHICKS THRIVE ON MILK AND ALFALFA Ration Furnishes Vitamin of Prime Importance. Milk and alfalfa are cheap feeds and supply certain essentials to the normal growth and health of poultry. It is good business to add these two feeds to the ration, when possible. Arthur T. Ringrose, of the Cornell poultry department, states. He explained that animal protein is necessary to build body tissue, and that milk is a good source of animal protein. Milk is even more valuable as a source of vitamin G. This has been proved by experiments at Cornell and elsewhere. Several vitamins are required for normal growth and health of poultry. One of these can be supplied cheaply by only milk and alfalfa. Vitamin G, discovered about five years ago, is important in that it lacks causes nervousness, skin lesions, sore eyes, and a general weakened condition. It is believed that a certain leg weakness is also caused by the lack of vitamin G or a closely associated factor. The use of milk and alfalfa for feeding prevents or helps to prevent these conditions. Twenty-five chicks received no vitamin G in a test lasting eight weeks. At the end of the period, only eight chicks were living; the rest died of diseases caused by lack of vitamin G. The average weight of the remaining eight chicks was five ounces. Another group of 25 chicks, fed vitamin G, in ample amounts were all living at the end of eight weeks, and were on the average, one pound and nine ounces. In a Kentucky experiment, the use of milk in place of meat scrap with laying hens increased egg production in the winter from 32.7 to 43 eggs to the hen, he said.

Poultry Raisers Save Money by Home-Mixing

Poultry raisers who grow grain and who wish to feed at the lowest cost can save considerable money by mixing their own mash and scratch feeds, says A. C. Smith, poultry chief at Minnesota University farm. Persons not having mills undoubtedly could arrange with local dealers to grind their grains, which when mixed in the proper proportions and supplemented with the proper amount of animal and mineral matter will provide satisfactory rations at the lowest possible cost. Complete directions for mixing laying-mashes may be obtained by writing the poultry division, University farm, St. Paul, Minn. Dairy farmers with an abundance of skim milk from creameries also may secure from the poultry division information on how to use by-products to the best advantage with their laying flocks.

Feeding Battery Brooders

Proper feeding, said P. R. Record of the Ohio experiment station, is the secret of battery brooding. In the battery every essential must be supplied, a writer in the Ohio Farmer supplements. A formula suitable for battery brooding as recommended by Record is as follows: Ground yellow corn 88 pounds, ground wheat or middlings 20 pounds, wheat bran 10 pounds, finely ground whole oats 10 pounds, alfalfa meal 5 pounds, meat scraps 10 pounds, dried milk, 5 pounds, salt 1 pound, and cod liver oil 1 pound.

Baby Chick Ration

Here is a good baby chick ration which has been tried in Wisconsin. For best results the ration is made up as follows: "Forty-five pounds ground yellow corn, 15 pounds standard wheat middlings, 15 pounds pure wheat bran, 12 pounds dried buttermilk or dried skim milk, 6 pounds meat and bone meal, 3 pounds alfalfa meal, 3 pounds high calcium limestone grit or chick sized oyster shell grit, one pound salt, plenty of fresh water, and 1 to 2 per cent cod liver or sardine oil, for the first four weeks."—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Poultry Notes

Success in poultry raising depends to a large extent on how well young stock is brooded and grown. Never neglect to cord the chick-box well; otherwise some prying hand may open the lid en route to customer. Sudden changes in temperature are more harmful to chickens than prolonged spells of extreme temperatures. It is difficult to keep a brooder house dry when it is crowded. Moist litter helps spread disease. United States farm flocks had 5 per cent fewer hens and pullets on January 1, 1932, than on the same date last year. Young turkeys require a longer period of brooding than do chickens. They should have about seven weeks of warm temperature in the brooder house. The measure of a poultryman's success is his ability to produce good pullets. Young turkeys require a warm temperature in the brooder house for a longer time than chickens; generally about seven weeks. The total cash income from poultry and eggs for the state of Iowa in 1930 was $50,026,000, reports W. D. Termohlen, Iowa State college poultryman. In 1924 it was $36,000,000.

SYNOPSIS

Joe Barry, country youth in New York, comes out of a living in a poor rooming house and a musician in the city. He is a good natured, but somewhat naive, young man. He is attracted to a girl named Edna, who is a girl of the city. He is attracted to her because of her beauty and her personality. He is attracted to her because of her beauty and her personality. He is attracted to her because of her beauty and her personality.

CHAPTER III

Instantly he began to paw about the floor, pushing his arms awkwardly. He looked at the man who had just entered the room, and he saw that he was a man of the city. He was a man of the city, and he was a man of the city. He was a man of the city, and he was a man of the city.

"That's not my money, I don't know where it came from," said Joe Barry. He looked at the man who had just entered the room, and he saw that he was a man of the city. He was a man of the city, and he was a man of the city.

"That's not my money, I don't know where it came from," said Joe Barry. He looked at the man who had just entered the room, and he saw that he was a man of the city. He was a man of the city, and he was a man of the city.

"That's not my money, I don't know where it came from," said Joe Barry. He looked at the man who had just entered the room, and he saw that he was a man of the city. He was a man of the city, and he was a man of the city.

"Bring 'em along." Then he noticed the gray, creased clothing which Joe had discarded on the return from his first trip to the country. "Rained on," he said, screwing up his genial features. "Yeh, that's right. Night before last."

"I can prove where I was night before last," he said. "That makes it easier." He was going through the old suit now, at last to claw deep into a pocket and grasp something there. His hand came out with some difficulty; currency seemed to bound from his grasp as he placed his find on the bureau. "More soft!" he exclaimed. Suddenly he bent and examined the money and pulled a memorandum book from a vest pocket. Joe launched into new denials.

"I never saw that money before. I don't know where it came from." "No?" Ed asked it lackadaisically, and picking up another bill, mumbled the numbers to Pete. Again Joe asserted hopelessly:

"That's not my money, I don't know where it came from." "Maybe we can help you find out," said Pete quietly and continued his search of the notebook. In a few moments his work seemed completed. "Give him the bell," he commanded of the two men at the door. "Ed and I'll stay here and give the place another runover. Tell the Royal Mopper we'll be down in about twenty minutes."

Joe Barry whirled, bold with desperation. "Why don't you talk English!" he burst forth. "Four of you, coming up here and trussing me like I was some sort of wild animal! Four of you, why didn't you put guns on me or beat me up! Yelling this gibberish at each other so I won't know what you're saying!"

"Then, Spirit of Innocence," answered Pete Maxwell with an impersonal grin, "honest to G—d, we're policemen. And we're going to take you to the East Twenty-second Street station house where the captain, or Royal Mopper, will hold conversation with you after we get there. Is that plain enough or shall I write a book about it?"

Joe remembered little but the crowding and clattering noise as they went down the stairs. Once on the sidewalk, he looked for a patrol wagon. There was none; only a sleek-appearing car, with drawn side curtains and a glow from crimson headlights. A jangling bell began to sound after the machine had started, drowning out other noises. Soon the machine stopped, and he was led inside a building, to a desk where a white-haired, disinterested man in shirt-sleeves asked him questions and wrote the answers down in a book. Then the locks of the handcuffs clicked raspingly, as a barred door closed behind him, and another man in shirt-sleeves, fat, disinterested, impersonal, took him by the arm. Joe saw rows and rows of barred places to his right and faces peering out at him. The turnkey swung back a door and gave Joe Barry a gentle push. The prisoner's muscles galvanized.

"You're not going to put me in there!" he begged. "I didn't do anything! I swear I didn't do anything!" "I'm just the turnkey; I don't even know what you're in for." "But, please, can't I talk to somebody? You could do that for me." "Park yourself on that bunk in there," answered the turnkey. "You'll get a chance to do all the talking you want in a little while."

Then his big key turned the lock and he was gone. Somehow, like blurred clouds before the dawn, the ugly outlines of a Tommy or Thompson machine gun. "Well, sport," said the captain monotonously, "what about this hardware?" "I don't know anything about it. I never saw the stuff before. It was put in my room today while I was away."

"So?" the captain looked up. "Away where?" Joe Barry's lower jaw shot open, and hung there. If he told that, he also must tell whom he saw and where he went. Involuntarily he winced, as Sue Dayton might wince if she knew that the young fellow whom she had wanted for her ring mate was tainted by accusations.

"I just went out of town for a day." "It's a big country. Where?" Joe Barry's eyes took on a desperate fire. "I won't tell you." The captain looked at him blandly. "Oh, all right," he said, "sit down." They moved a chair to the end of the table; Ed and Jerry sat down, then, Joe Barry. The captain picked up the evil-looking machine gun and eyed it carefully.

"So somebody sneaked this into your room. Who, for instance?" Barry straightened with hope. "His name is Martin. He's a lawyer. I got fired last night down at Louie Bertolini's place and this lawyer said he had a job for me. He gave me some money and told me to go out into the country and take a day off. Then I could come back tonight and tell him whether I wanted to go through with this deal or not. He said he had a friend who'd gotten into some trouble over some liquor and he wanted me to take his place. So I—"

"Don't make a speech about it," said the captain quietly. "We'll get at things one at a time. Martin, you said the name was?" "Yes, sir." "The town's full of Martins. Which one?" "His name is John B. Martin," came tonelessly. "He's an attorney and his offices are down at 60 Wall street."

"Sure of that, are you?" The name evidently had made no impression upon the captain. He raised his eyes and gave a slight jerk of his head. "Take him back," he commanded. Barry clung to the table. "But there's a lot more to tell!" he begged. "I haven't got anything to hide. I want to tell you just how I happened to get into this mess."

"Don't tear your shirt," admonished the captain quietly. Then to Pete: "Take him back." Again the metallic clatter of his heels; again the faces and bars, and the sight of a frowsy woman peering out from under her hair. Then he was alone, sitting on his slatted iron cot, hands sweating one moment between his knees, the next instant rubbing at his hot cheeks or across his burning eyes. He rose and paced, three steps one way, three steps back, bumping against the steel plates at one end, the rough bars at the other. Suddenly he settled, with fearful determination.

They hadn't believed him when he told about Mr. Martin. Maybe they'd question him again. That's it, they'd bring him out and question him for a while, then send him back to forget what he'd said. But he must not forget one thing; they could burn him in oil if they wanted to, but he mustn't forget one thing. He'd make up a story about where he'd been today, and he'd stick to it. Other things faded—just that a girl should not know; this seemed to be all that counted now. Minutes dragged by. He mustn't forget to keep quiet about where he'd been today. An hour passed. The turnkey came and unlocked his cell. They went back to the captain's office.

"Sit down," said the captain. Then everybody seemed to forget him, except a fifth person who was now in the room, a tall, gray-haired man with some distinguishing characteristics, who came to the other end of the table and looked intently at him. "No," he said after a long time. "Sure?" asked the captain.

"Absolutely." Pete Maxwell lit a cigarette. Ed slumped in his chair and began the reading of an early edition newspaper. Jake and Jerry just sat. The captain looked over some papers from his desk. From the other end of the table, the gray-haired man stared at Joe—and Joe returned the look.

"Absolutely," said the gray-haired man for a second time. The captain seemingly ignored the remark. "Sport," he began, leaning toward Joe Barry. "Forgot to ask you before. Suppose you give me an accurate description of this John B. Martin?" Joe Barry licked his lips.

"Well, I don't know how accurate I can be. I didn't pay much attention, except that he was about medium height, and had dark hair and eyes." "Weight?" "He wasn't very heavy." "And just medium height?" "Yes, sir." "Not tall, like Detective Maxwell there, or this gentleman?" "No, sir."

The captain leaned back in his chair. "Sport," he said, "suppose you cut the comedy and save us a lot of trouble. This gentleman here, whom we had to disturb out of a night's sleep, happens to have his offices at 60 Wall street. And he's the only John B. Martin in that building."

Joe Barry's lips quivered; he was reaching the point where a nerve-burned body refused to give more emphatic signals of his distress. "Well," came tonelessly, "I don't know what we can do about it." The captain seemed to disregard that, too. "That'll be all, Mr. Martin. Sorry to have disturbed you."

The distinguished man departed. Pete Maxwell pulled up a chair. "Now listen, sport, there isn't any sense in you trying to beat this rat with a lot of clown stuff. You've got too much to explain. All that money in your pockets; that water-soaked suit and those shoes with mud on them."

Joe's tongue licked quickly at dry lips. "I don't know anything about the money. But about those clothes, I had them on day before yesterday and got caught in the rain." "Where?" "Up by Newburgh, near a little town called Orr's Mills."

Pete Maxwell glanced hastily toward the captain. The three other detectives shuffled into an attitude of attention, their arms on the table. "Go right ahead," said Pete, then interrupted at almost the first sentence. "What did you go up there for?" Joe Barry shifted; the first bubbles of a slow hate were beginning to rise. "I'm trying to tell—but you won't listen!"

"We haven't missed a trick. Hop to it." Joe Barry began his recital again, only to meet with more interruptions, cross-statements between the various men, returns to the beginning of his story. But at last they let him finish. Then Pete straightened, and stretched, pressing his hands wide at the sides of his chest. "Bridge player, eh sport?" he asked. "No."

"You believe in leading trumps in a pinch though. Now we'll play a few. Mind pushing the button, Captain?" The captain complied and gave a command to the officer who responded to the signal. Out he went, to almost immediately re-enter with four other persons. Joe was ordered to his feet. They all looked at him carefully. Then, bewildered, he heard himself identified, first by a farmer who swore him to be a man who had come to his door at midnight, seeking a place to sleep, then by the two others, gawking apple knockers, who proclaimed him the man whom they had urged on his exit from a haystack. Cloudiness again assaulted Joe's mind. He had told all this, as a means to his own release. Then, by police necromancy, his witness had appeared, not to help him, but to damn him. Joe's dark, tired eyes stared stupidly, from one to the other. Deep within his brain, something began to caution him to tighten his tongue, to say nothing more, lest every word he uttered should be used for his own condemnation. Then the three were led out again, only a stocky man remaining.

"How about him, sheriff?" asked the captain. "I guess he'll do. The boys at the filling station in Newburgh weren't any too particular, of course. But from the general description of the two that were on the truck, this one seems to match up with the fellow who got away. Dark hair, medium sized."

"Lots of people are dark and medium sized." Joe half rose with a final burst of desperate appeal. "Besides, I wasn't on any truck. If you'll let me tell my story—" "We'd be delighted if you would, sport," said the captain caustically. "But you seem to think you're dealing with a bunch of children."

Again Joe Barry was led back to his cell, pondering fully. Hate was in his heart; he had been duped, tricked, his honest story twisted into a confession of a crime, the true extent of which he did not know. But his hatred, strangely enough, was clarified sufficiently to exempt these men who turned this night to one of terror. They were merely instruments; Joe all but forgot them in the searing memory of the personality who had engineered this. Martin!

He knew no other name for him. Alone in his cell, bent on the slatted bunk, black hair straggling over his sweat-caked fingers as he bent his head to his hands, Joe Barry strove to tear the tangled events of the last two days apart and weld them anew into something that would possess perspective.

Something had happened near Orr's Mills, which had to do with that overturned truck, something with which this man Martin had been connected. Now Joe remembered the careful questioning which had been carried on in the car under the guise of mere casual interest; the extraction of incidents, where Joe had been, whom he had seen, what he had done, what he knew about that wrecked truck; in fact, his every action from the time he had left New York until he had returned. Out of that, Barry saw now, a man had gained the knowledge that there was some one who had been near the scene of a crime and whose every action, instead of proving an alibi for him, would aid to conviction. Martin must have wanted such a person—to take the place of a guilty man. So he had engineered an acceptance of a proposition to go to prison, to so conduct one's actions as to cause suspicion. But Joe knew now that these suspicions were not merely the ones which Martin had designated. That machine gun, those two automatons, and that money which Pete Maxwell had extracted from the pocket of his old clothing were evidence enough of serious things impending.

Joe shuddered from the possible change which rose constantly before him. The hours passed. Then the turnkey came in to take him to the patrol that was to conduct him, with other prisoners, to police headquarters for the morning "line-up."

When the patrol stopped on Center street, Joe hardly noticed his surroundings. Another place of confinement, another stopping place in this shifting journey to a market place of human frailties.

He entered the building, with the other sufficing occupants of the patrol. A man in uniform sat in a sort of enclosed throne in the big rotunda; it might have been an office building, information desk. Then came an office with the methodical taking of names. After that a hallway, flanked by office doors with the names of interchangeable bureaus upon them; after that, the line lived into a narrow stairway, under guard. Then they took his name again, in a little cage, where another fat man fondled various keys from a rack which hung above his desk. Once more, he was in a cell, noticing vaguely that he possessed a mate, and staring as vaguely about him.

More hours went by. Then the turnkey came and got him; Pete Maxwell was waiting in the grilled cage outside the holdover proper, to take him to the photographer's.

The endless detail, the constant shifting, moving about, from cage to cage, handcuff to handcuff. Then Maxwell opened a door and put Joe Barry into still another cage, a big one this time, with some twenty other men, a cage which reached nearly to the ceiling, and opening upon a wide room, fitted mostly with tables and photographic apparatus.

Inside the cage, some men sat, some paced, up and down, up and down, hands behind them, faces to the floor. At first there were only a few, then others came from the benches, and still more; pacing, turning swiftly, and moving back again.

COMMUNITY FIRE PROTECTION

Representatives of the Kewaskum Village Board, Kewaskum Fire Department, Kewaskum Lions Club and a group of farmers met at the Village Hall on Monday evening for the purpose of considering the purchase of a fire truck to serve the farmers within a radius of five miles from Kewaskum. The matter was fully discussed and everybody present at the meeting was very much interested in the proposition.

The proposed plan is to solicit pledges for membership, the membership fee to be $15, which is for the life of the truck. There would be no further fees or charges. The village of Kewaskum would house, maintain and man the apparatus and fight farm-member fires, in return for which the village would have permission to use the truck to fight village fires in emergencies. Non-subscribers would be charged $50 for each call.

The village of Kewaskum now charges $25 and expenses for each call that the department serves in the rural districts. However, the village fire truck must be kept in the village at all times and the only apparatus that can be sent out to a farm call is the small chemical truck, which is not entirely satisfactory for fighting farm fires.

The farmers who attended the meeting volunteered to solicit pledges for membership and they will make a report at another meeting to be held on May 3rd. Any farmer residing within five miles of Kewaskum who is interested in this proposition and who is not solicited before May 1st, should notify Harry Schaefer, Chief of the Kewaskum Fire Department.

ENCOURAGEMENT FOR THE FARMER

The most encouraging sign of the times we have seen, so far as the farmer is concerned, is the estimate of the U. S. Department of Agriculture that the winter wheat crop will be about 42 per cent more than last year and 17 per cent less than the average of the five year period of 1924-28. In those years the average production of winter wheat was 551 million bushels. Last year the farmers of the nation produced 787 million bushels. No wonder prices stayed down.

This year there will be only 458 million bushels of winter wheat to supply the market's needs. That will inevitably result in a better price, probably a profitable price, for those who have it to sell. Nearly 14 per cent of the lands which have been devoted to wheat growing are not sown for this year's crop. Drought in the Great Plains area is largely responsible for this fact, however, rather than intelligent foresight on the part of wheat farmers.

The importance of anything will tend to give any considerable part of the nation's farmers a better price and a larger profit extends to everybody. Not every farmer is a wheat grower by any means. But that is one of the five great agricultural staples—the others are corn, cotton, tobacco and potatoes—upon which the prosperity not only of the farmer, but of the whole nation, depends. There has been overproduction in all of these for the past two or three years. Growers have not received enough to enable them to buy the commodities they need. That is true of almost everybody else and the vicious circle will not be broken until some large class or group finds itself with some surplus money to spend.

If the winter wheat growers get a fair price for their crop, as present indications suggest, they are likely to, that may be the one thing needed to start the public to spending money again instead of being afraid to let go of a penny. And that will start us back on the road to prosperity.

WISCONSIN BOYS AND GIRLS TO GET 31 FREE TRIPS THIS FALL

Thirty-one free trips to the International Livestock Exposition will be given Wisconsin 4-H Club boys and girls this Fall by the Chicago & North Western Railway to allow those most proficient in the raising of livestock and in home economics an educational trip to Chicago, C. A. Cairns, passenger traffic manager of the railway, announces. One hundred and fifty trips in all will be given by the road in the nine states reached by the system.

"Letters received from the Wisconsin prize winners on their return home last year convinced us that these trips are well worth while," Mr. Cairns stated. "In almost every case it was shown clearly that the boys and girls had picked up a remarkable amount of knowledge about the livestock market and about Chicago in the short time they were in the city."

"Among those who won trips from Wisconsin last year were: Lester Herrman, Manitowoc; Ralph Schilling, Marathon City; Everett Valley, Waukesha; Eugene Lillund, Conover; Dorothy Gunderski, Princeton; Blanche McGwinn, Glenoak; Spencer Rundle, Dodgeville; Phil. Robinson, Evansville; Laura Conrad, Milwaukee; Donald Rowe, Madison; Lillian Heller, Hazel Green Jct.; Maria Thoma, West Bend; Mae Hildebrandt, Lake Mills; Leo Sorenson, Marinette; Marie Merkel, Oconto; Archie Newton, Wild Rose; Mabel Fushan, Green Bay; Rheimald Haus, Racine; William Badercher, Janesville; Harold Oellerich, Jack Tucker and Delos Culverm, Platteville; and Beulah Lee, La Crosse.

"The continuation of these trips is in keeping with the policy we have had in effect for a good many years and selection of prize winners, as in the past, will be left entirely up to the state agricultural authorities and the state schools working through the county agricultural agents with the provision that contestants must be from counties along the Chicago & North Western Railway. The basis of the prize probably will be the winning of county contests in baby beef raising or in home economics work."

"The North Western will not place any age limitation on the contestants but will leave that entirely to the county agents and the state authorities."

"The prize in each case will be equal to the cost of one round-trip ticket to Chicago from the station at which the winner lives. The prize includes the cost of railroad transportation only during the period of the International Livestock Exposition and does not include the incidental expenses of the journey."

"The 150 prizes offered in the nine states on the system will be divided in the following manner: Illinois-7, Iowa-45, Michigan-9, Minnesota-15, Nebraska-18, North Dakota-1, South Dakota-20, and Wyoming-4."

The use of lime on sour soil may also show that the soil needs potash. Experimental work has conclusively shown that fields, which, before they were limed did not respond to potash fertilizer, frequently did show good results from potash treatment after lime is applied.

WHY NOT OUTLAW THE GANGSTERS

The suggestion is made by the dean of Duke University Law School that legislation might well consider a revival of the old English statutes of outlawry, as a means of checking the activities of racketeers and gangsters. Under those old laws, any person known to be a habitual violator of the laws, whether convicted under the rules of evidence or not, could be declared an outlaw—that is, without the protection of the law. It became the duty of every citizen, then, to kill such an outlaw on sight. His property forfeited and his family prohibited from carrying his name.

That was an effective means of dealing out summary justice. It has been used in the United States more than once in the past century and a half. The suggestion will make the tender-hearted shudder, but so did the kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby. We think the time is here for the tightening up of the criminal laws. As long as crooks can corrupt legislative bodies and courts, they will continue to flourish and imperil the lives and property of honest men. We think the taxpayers are paying too much now for the board and lodging of prisoners in jail. We think it might be a good idea to consider the more effective and economical way of ridding the nation of known criminals by declaring them outlaws.

For an inexpensive rolled roast, even the neck or chuck may be very satisfactory if these are cooked rather slowly at low heat and basted frequently.
