MRS. ANNA ZWASKA DIES
Mrs. Anna Zwaska, a former resident and funeral director of this village, passed away at the home of her daughter, Clara (Mrs. Paul Janke) at Milwaukee on Thursday, June 9th, after a short illness. She was 77 years, 7 months old.

After the death of her husband 41 years ago, Mrs. Zwaska continued the furniture and undertaking business in the village, which, later, passed it on to her son Frank, who has since located in Milwaukee. The business in the village is now being continued by Edward F. Miller and son Edward E.

Six children still survive, namely: Clara (Mrs. Paul Janke) and Frank of Milwaukee; John of Auburndale; Celia (Mrs. Fred Arndt) of Fond du Lac; Leo of Racine; Dr. Anthony B. and Mrs. Veronica McCullough of Rockton, Ill. She also leaves twenty-three grand children, five great grand children, and two sisters, Mrs. Sally Schoenhofen of Marshfield and Mrs. Caroline Young of Milwaukee.

The funeral was held Monday, June 13th at 8:30 a.m., from her son's funeral home, N. 24th and W. Center Sts., to the St. Leo's church at Milwaukee. Requiem mass was read by the Rev. Peter Theisen at 9 o'clock. Interment was made at the Holy Cross cemetery, Milwaukee.

MATHIAS STOFFEL

Mathias Stoffel, a long time resident and business man of Allenton, and a brother of Simon Stoffel of the town of Kewaskum, passed away at his home in Allenton last week Thursday evening, June 9. Mr. Stoffel had been in ill health since November, 1930. Death was due to nephritis. Deceased was born May 4, 1876, in the town of Addison. He married Miss Mary Wolf on May 23, 1893. For five years he conducted a store in Addison, and was postmaster of the place until the post office was discontinued. Later he moved to Allenton, where he purchased the old Bertschy store, and continued the business under the firm name of M. Stoffel & Co.

He is survived by his widow and six children, Anna and Eleanor at home, Roman, Werner and Rose (Mrs. Calvin Hartleb of Allenton, Ledwina (Mrs. Robert Seebert) of Los Angeles, Cal. He also leaves four grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. Wm. Wenninger of Slinger and Mrs. Albert Gundrum of Hartford; and four brothers, Peter, Nick and Henry of West Bend, and Simon of Kewaskum. The funeral was held Monday morning with solemn requiem mass in Sacred Heart church at Allenton. Burial was made in the congregation's cemetery.

MRS. MATH. FEITEN

Mrs. Math. Feiten, aged 36 years, died at her home at West Bend Saturday morning, June 11. Death was due to heart failure. She was found dead in bed between 4 and 5 o'clock that morning.

Mrs. Feiten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hausner, of the town of Scott, Sheboygan county, was born on June 20, 1897. On June 20, 1916, she was married to Math. Feiten, and the following year moved to West Bend.

Besides her husband she leaves three children: Lellah, 13; Odella, 11; and Bernice, 7. She also is survived by her parents, now living at Crystal Lake, and two brothers, Ernest Hausner of Crystal Lake, and Otto Hausner of Crystal Lake. The funeral was held Tuesday morning with services in the Holy Angel's church, West Bend, the Rev. Edward Stealing officiating. Burial was made in the Catholic cemetery at West Bend.

MRS. GEORGE SCHLEIF, SR.

Word was received by Fred Schleit on Thursday that his mother, Mrs. George Schleif, Sr., died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Doherty, at Cascade the same morning. The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon with services in the Evangelical Peace church. Burial will be made in the congregation's cemetery. A fitting obituary will be published next week.

CARD OF THANKS

To all those who so kindly assisted us during the illness and after the death of our beloved wife and mother, Mrs. August Backhaus, to those who furnished cars for the funeral, to the choir, to Rev. Gerhard Kanieser for his consoling words, to those who sent floral offerings and to all those who attended the funeral, we extend our sincere thanks.

HUMAN NATURE DOESN'T CHANGE

We hear a good many people remarking that the younger generation has no manners, that the boys and girls of today are rapidly sliding down to perdition and that things were so much better when these complaining individuals themselves were young.

We seem to remember having heard old folks talk in a similar strain when we were young. We are strongly inclined to believe that the bad manners and worse morals of youth have always been a subject of complaint by their parents and grandparents from King Solomon's time, and perhaps farther back than that. Our belief is strengthened by recently seeing a letter written in 1795 by an English woman who said among other things:

"Our manners become more licentious, our men are indifferent, our women are bold and assuming. The pertness of fifteen is allowed to give her opinion on all subjects. She awes into silence her superiors and understanding, for who can wish to hold an argument with a flippant tongue? But a more serious consideration is the hideous undress of the present day, for to be perfectly fashionable is to be half naked."

In the same letter elderly women were criticized for resorting to cosmetics in the effort to make themselves look younger. We have heard people talk about how disgusting it is for a woman old enough to be a grandmother to try to look like a flapper. Regardless of whether it is disgusting or not, our point is that it is nothing new. A hundred and thirty-seven years ago people were saying the same thing.

One thing is certain, that is that each generation has to learn its own way about and find its own way of living. In other words, codes of manners and behavior generally are good only for the generation in that subscribes to them. And when we consider that half of the people of the United States are under twenty-six years of age, it seems to us the young folks have about as much right to decide such things for themselves as the older ones have to prescribe for them.

ARRESTED FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

Irwin Faber, of the town of Wayne, on Monday evening was arrested by Marshal Brandt for reckless driving, taken to West Bend county jail for the night and on Tuesday morning brought into Justice Olwin's court in the village where he pleaded guilty to the charge. He was fined $10.00 and cost, totaling $25.62. At the time of his arrest he was accompanied by his four-year old son, who was taken to his home by the officials.

CHURCH PICNIC

Kewaskum took a real defeat on their chin last Sunday when Amend on the mound for Menomonee Falls had the local swatters swatting the wind for eighteen strikeouts, and allowed them a measly number of three hits. The final score being Menomonee Falls 6, Kewaskum 1. Although Amend was stingy with his hits he was very liberal in the first inning when Nell, first man up, was walked, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on a wild pitch. This ended the scoring for the locals, while Wisniewski was touched for ten hits, most of which were well bunched, coming when scores were needed. Eleven of the visitors went down the strikeout path. Both teams played errorless ball. Menomonee Falls scored one in the second when D. Wilke singled, going to second when Jac. Rott walked, A. Rott struck out, John Rott then singled scoring D. Wilke, A. Rott going to second, H. Wilke struck out, Amend grounded out Wentort to Elliott. The visitors added three more in the fifth. H. Wilke singled, Amend struck out, Lemke singled, Wilke going to second, Lemke was forced out at second, Wentort to Nell on Pierce's hit to short, Wilke going to third, Pierce stole second, Wilke scored on a wild pitch, Adlam walked, D. Wilke doubled, scoring Pierce and Adlam, Joe Rott was an easy out, Wisniewski to Elliott. The visitors again scored two runs in the sixth. A. Rott singled went to second when John Rott was hit by a pitched ball, Schuster batted for H. Wilke and struck out. Amend flied out to Heberer, Lemke was hit by a pitched ball, A. Rott going to third and J. Rott to second, Pierce singled scoring A. Rott and J. Rott, Adlam lined out to Wisniewski.

NEW TAX IN EFFECT ON JUNE 21, 1932

June 21 most of the new taxes voted by Congress in the $1,118,500,000.00 (B) revenue bill become effective.

The measure signed by President Hoover on June 6 provided that most of the new excise taxes and special levies be applied 15 days later, or on June 21.

The excise taxes on various manufacturers will be paid by manufacturers on all goods they release into the channels of trade on June 21 or after. The public will begin to feel these taxes as the goods move to distributors and wholesalers and then to the retailer. Some of the special levies such as that of admissions will be felt by the public on June 21.

The new income tax rates, 4 per cent on the first $4,000, 8 per cent on the next $4,000 and surtaxes up to 55 per cent on incomes over $1,000,000 will be levied for the calendar year 1932. Returns are due on March 15, 1933. The 13 2-4 per cent corporation tax is in the same class.

Returns also will be due next March on the new estate and gift taxes, but that tax will apply only to that part of 1932 from June 6 onward, instead of to the whole calendar year. The estate tax ranges up to 45 per cent on estates of more than $10,000,000.00. The gift tax ranges from 3-4 to 33 1-3 per cent.

The three-cent first class postage rate goes into effect on July 6. The increased second class rates become effective July 1. The tax on the use of boats start on July 1.

All the rest of the new taxes become effective on June 21. They are:

Mrs. P. J. Haug last week Friday afternoon, while working in the garden, stumbled over a ladder, fell to the ground and broke her left arm between the wrist and elbow. We are pleased to report that Mrs. Haug is getting along very nicely.

BEISBIER-BATZLER

At the St. Killian Catholic church, St. Killian, on Tuesday, June 14th, at 9:30, Miss Cecelia M. Batzler became the bride of John M. Beisbier. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father John B. Reichl.

The bride is a daughter of the late William and Mary Batzler of the town of Wayne, and lately has been making her home with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wenzel Peter of the town of Wayne. She wore a white satin gown trimmed with lace, the veil being fashioned with a tight cap effect. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and baby's breath. She was attended by Miss Mary Felix, cousin, as maid of honor, who wore a pearl blue gown of

Pretty June Weddings of the Past Week

* THEUSCH-HERRIGES

On Tuesday, June 7th, at 9 a. m., a very pretty wedding was performed in the St. Michael's church at St. Michaels when Rev. J. F. Beyer united in Holy Bonds of Matrimony, Miss Lorraine Theusch and Frank Herriges.

The bride, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jac. Theusch, of the town of Scott, wore a satin and lace dress, and carried a shower bouquet of roses and ferns. She was attended by Gertrude Herriges, who wore a blue soft taffeta dress, as maid of honor. Mrs. Andrew Roden was bridesmaid and wore a blue soft taffeta dress. The groom a son of Mrs. Joe Herriges, of the town of Kewaskum, was attended by Rayner Theusch as best man and Lawrence Theusch as usher.

After the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held with about 150 guests present. Upon their return home from a wedding trip through the northwestern part of the state, the young couple will go to housekeeping on the groom's farm near St. Michaels, and will be at home to their many friends and relatives after July 1st. May their married life be blessed with happiness and prosperity.

BENTER-DOGS

The marriage of Miss Bertha Benter of Theresa and Norbert C. Dogs, local agent for the St. Claire Refining Co., took place at Theresa on Sunday afternoon, June 5th, at the Riverside Evangelical Lutheran church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. H. Laabs. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Evelyn Benter, the Misses Wilhelmine Dogs and Hedwig Dogs, sisters of the groom, and Miss Gertrude Buss, cousin of the bride. Peter Dogs, brother of the groom, and Erwin Benter, brother of the bride, were bestman and groomsmen respectively.

The young couple this week returned from their wedding trip to Eagle River and Chicago and have gone to housekeeping in the village in the late Mrs. Quandt residence on North Fond du Lac avenue. We extend hearty congratulations.

* OPPERMANN-GARBISCH

A very pretty wedding took place Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the St. John's Lutheran church at New Fane, when Rev. C. J. Gutekunst performed the ceremony that joined in wedlock, Miss Malinda Oppermann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Oppermann of the town of Auburn, Fond du Lac county, and Raymond Garbisch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garbisch, of the town of Scott, Sheboygan county.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Lucinda Oppermann, as maid of honor, and by Miss Flossie Oppermann, cousin, as bridesmaid. The Misses Frona Garbisch, sister of the groom, and Marie Oppermann, sister of the bride, acted as ushers. The groom was attended by Marvin Garbisch, his brother, as best man, and Elmer Harter, a cousin, as groomsmen.

The bride wore a white satin gown with a voile veil-in cap effect and carried a bouquet of white rose buds, white sweet peas, lilies of the valley and baby's breath. The maid of honor wore a yellow satin dress and carried a bouquet of yellow tea roses, pink sweet peas and baby's breath. The bridesmaid was attired in a green satin dress and carried a bouquet of pink roses, pink sweet peas and baby's breath. The ushers were gowned in lavender and wore corsages of lavender sweet peas.

After the ceremony a reception and wedding dinner were held at the home of the bride's parents with about sixty guests in attendance. The young couple left on Tuesday for a wedding trip through northern Wisconsin, Michigan and Canada. Upon their return they will go to housekeeping on the groom's farm in the town of Scott, where they will be at home to their many friends after July 1st. We extend hearty congratulations with best wishes for success and happiness in their future life.

* BEISBIER-BATZLER

At the St. Killian Catholic church, St. Killian, on Tuesday, June 14th, at 9:30, Miss Cecelia M. Batzler became the bride of John M. Beisbier. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father John B. Reichl.

The bride is a daughter of the late William and Mary Batzler of the town of Wayne, and lately has been making her home with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wenzel Peter of the town of Wayne. She wore a white satin gown trimmed with lace, the veil being fashioned with a tight cap effect. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and baby's breath. She was attended by Miss Mary Felix, cousin, as maid of honor, who wore a pearl blue gown of princess crepe with head band to match, carrying an arm bouquet of roses and baby's breath. Miss Mary Beisbier, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid and wore a pink princess crepe dress with head band to match, carrying a bouquet of roses and baby's breath.

The groom is a son of the late John and Mary Beisbier, of the town of Wayne. He was attended by Nick Beisbier, his brother, as best man, and Frank Felix, cousin of the bride, as groomsmen.

Little Anita Beisbier, niece of the groom, wearing a yellow georgette crepe dress, carrying a basket of mixed flowers, was flower girl. Master Leonard Peter, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer, which he carried on a pillow.

After the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George Peter, in the town of Wayne where the wedding was celebrated with about 50 close relatives being in attendance.

The young couple left on a short wedding trip through the northern part of the state. Upon their return they will go to housekeeping on the groom's farm in the town of Wayne. They will be at home to their many friends and relatives after July 15th. To the young couple we extend our hearty congratulations.

WILLIAM F. SCOTT

William F. Scott of West Bend has announced that he will be a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Washington County in the approaching fall elections.

He was born at Cedarburg, Wis., in 1893, and is a high school and college graduate.

For 17 years he has been a taxpayer in Washington County, residing in the city of West Bend.

Mr. Scott is now entering his fifth year as assessor of the city of West Bend, and his fourth year as undersheriff of Washington County. Both positions have shown his efficiency, honesty and ability as a public servant.

With his marked civic interest and pride in this county, Mr. Scott will absolutely bring an economical, efficient and honest administration to the office of Sheriff. Mr. Scott earnestly solicits your vote September 20.

CATHOLIC CLERGY CHANGES

Among the various appointments announced last Thursday by the Catholic archdiocesan chancery at Milwaukee, the following changes have been made in Washington county: Rev. W. B. Bruecker, St. Peter's church, Slinger, to succeed the Rev. John H. Kessler, who has been placed on the retired list.

Rev. J. J. Grasser, of Newburg, transferred to St. Mary's church, Milwaukee. He is succeeded by Rev. Joseph Bette, formerly assistant priest at Holy Angel's church at West Bend.

Rev. J. A. Dries, assistant for Holy Angel's church, West Bend, to succeed Rev. Joseph Brasky, who has been appointed pastor of Holy Ayostle's church, New Berlin.

WASHINGTON COUNTY'S 1932 STATISTICS

Washington county's 1931 statistics covering infant mortality, maternal mortality and stillbirths, three phases of public health vital to the present and future of the county's well being, have been announced by the state board of health.

Infant deaths, which comprise those of children under one year of age, have reached a county total of 25 last year, as compared to 26 for 1930. There was but one death from childbirth among Washington county mothers in 1931, marking a decrease of one from the 1930 item and establishing a rate of but 2.1 deaths per 1,000 live births, as compared with the 1931 state rate of 4.3 the records of the bureau show. Stillbirths for Washington county total seven in 1931, two more than were reported for 1930.

To further increase Wisconsin's prestige in minimizing deaths in these 3 classifications, the state board of health offers free of charge a series of 9 monthly letters for the expectant mother, the first of which is designated for the first month of the prenatal period.

More than 3,500 Wisconsin women profited by the counsel found in these letters last year, and the annual increase in the demand for the series indicates that it will reach a much larger number of expectant mothers this year.

This letter service is provided upon application to the bureau of child welfare, state board of health, Madison.

Wisconsin News Briefly Told

Mayville—The 90th anniversary of the founding of this city will be celebrated with a four-day homecoming celebration, beginning July 1.

Fond du Lac—The Citizens State bank, with assets of $850,000, has been merged with the Commercial National bank, which has assets of $5,000,000.

Milwaukee—A saving of $350,000 annually to Milwaukee consumers will be effected by a proposed reduction in the city water rate of one percent per 100 cubic feet of water.

Madison—The Soo Line railroad has asked permission to pay its property taxes to the state in installments. Half the Soo's $975,923.14 property tax was due June 15, the balance Oct. 15.

Kohler—Mrs. William C. Siemens, who was born Jan. 3, 1828, in Germany, died Friday at her home here. Civil war veterans knew her as the oldest widow of a veteran in Wisconsin.

Elkhorst—There is no depression in candidates in Green and Walworth counties. For the office of sheriff fifteen have declared as candidates in Green county and nine in Walworth.

Stevens Point—Burglars who knocked off the combination were unable to open the safe in the postoffice at Amherst Junction and obtained only 72 cents which had been left in a cash drawer.

Eau Claire—Elmer M. Bradford, Augusta attorney and formerly a director of the defunct Augusta State bank, was acquitted by Judge Robert S. Cowie of a charge that he violated state banking laws.

Madison—John Price, 55, Dane county farmer; his son and daughter-in-law, Mrs. and Miss Glenn Price, and their two-year-old daughter, Beverly Jean, were killed in an automobile collision on Highway K between Sun Prairie and Token Creek.

Milwaukee—John A. Firer, 31, city treasurer of Cudahy, has confessed to embezzlement of $9,000 of the city's funds, which he used in real estate speculation.

Oconto—Homer Don Levy, 89, one of Oconto county's earliest settlers and one of three remaining Civil war veterans here, is dead. He had lived in Oconto county for 76 years.

Fond du Lac—While his wife was in a hospital after the birth of a baby, Carl Urban, 49, town of El Dorado, shot and killed himself. Relatives are unable to account for his act.

Minoqua—A 39-pound muskellunge, believed to be the largest caught in Wisconsin this season, was shipped to Gov. Louis L. Emerson of Illinois. The fish was 49½ inches long. It was caught in Trout lake, near here, by a friend of the governor.

Milwaukee—The lowest group of bids ever received by the county board highway committee has been opened for state and county highway work.

The bids for seven sections of county trunk highways, covering 9.57 miles, totaled $200,104.90, or about $79,000 less than had been estimated.

Oconto—Two farm youths going after a drink of water found Jacob Schaffner, 53, eccentric farmer, beaten to death at his home near Gillett. The house had been ransacked. The bachelor farmer, reputed to be wealthy, had been struck repeatedly with a double bladed ax and a yard long piece of wood. Tracks about the place indicated two men had participated in the attack.

Madison—The fine of $250 and costs assessed against Commissioner of Agriculture Joseph D. Beck for contempt of court has been paid by a committee headed by State Senator V. C. Keppel of Holmen, who said that the money had been contributed by creameries, cheese factories, farmers' organizations and individual farmers from various parts of the state. Beck was fined by Circuit Judge Zimmermann for violating an injunction against distributing lists of dealers selling oleomargarine.

Madison—Employers of women and children in Wisconsin are permitted to operate on reduced minimum wage scales by authority of the state industrial commission, which has ordered a 10 per cent reduction in the rates in recognition of the drop in living costs. The minimum legal wage for experienced workers in cities of more than 5,000 population was cut from 25 to 22½ cents per hour; in cities of less than 5,000 population, from 22 to 20 cents per hour. Inexperienced workers' minimum wages were left at 16 cents per hour for those who have worked less than three months, but those who have worked more than three months but less than six months had their lowest wage cut from 20 to 18 cents per hour. Under the new order seasonal industries, such as canning factories, are now given the same permission as non-seasonal industries to employ persons at the rate for inexperienced persons.

Madison—The state convention of "regular" republicans held here nominated Walter J. Kohler for governor and John B. Chapple, the militant Ashland editor, for United States senator. The balance of the ticket, which will go before voters in the fall primary, consists of Harry Dahl, In Crosse, for lieutenant governor; Senator Ben Getteman, Milwaukee, for secretary of state; Levi H. Bancroft, Richard Center, for attorney general, and Edward Samp, Madison, for state treasurer. The nomination of Mr. Kohler was made without contest after the former governor had notified the convention that he would accept if there was genuine sentiment for him. Charles B. Perry and J. N. Tittmore withdrew their candidacies for governor and agreed to support Mr. Kohler. The nomination of Chapple for U. S. senator was made unanimous after the first ballot gave him 776 votes, 207 for W. J. Campbell of Oshkosh, 134 for W. S. Goodland of Racine and 2 for G. A. Bading of Milwaukee.

Platteville—Eunice Krause, 21-year-old teacher in the Platteville schools, has confessed to an attempt to extort $3,000 from Dr. Wilson Cunningham, who had been the doctor of her family for many years. She wrote a letter demanding the money and threatening death unless it was forthcoming.

Madison—Wisconsin is growing enough strawberries this season to provide a quart of them for every man, woman and child in the state. The crop will be 17 per cent greater than last year.

Oshkosh—When Oshkosh's "bonus army" reaches Washington its members will not have to worry about having a place to stay. Mrs. Florian Lampert, widow of the late congressman, has offered to open her home in Washington for the thirty Oshkosh men preparing to leave here by truck.

Alma—Norman Averbek, 25, local barber, was killed when his automobile was struck by a Burlington road gasoline coach at a crossing two miles south of Cochrane. He was to have been married the following day.

HOOVER SIGNS NEW REVENUE MEASURE

Power Tax Only Important Change in the Bill.

Washington.—The $1,118,500,000 tax bill became a law when the President signed the measure only a few hours after it had passed the senate by a vote of 46 to 35, with charges that the senate conferees "had done the bidding of the power trust."

Except for the peak peacetime income taxes, the corporation, estate and gift taxes, most of the new taxes in the bill automatically end on July 1, 1934. The effective date for practically all the imposts is fifteen days after the President signs the bill.

The income taxes will remain in force until new legislation is passed as a substitute.

Progressives on both sides of the chamber ripped into the conferees' action in changing the 3 per cent electrical power tax from a levy on domestic and commercial consumers, to be paid monthly on the regular power and light bills.

In signing the measure, President Hoover said:

"The willingness of our people to accept this added burden in these times in order to impregnably establish the credit of the federal government is a great tribute to their wisdom and courage. While many of the taxes are not as desired, the bill will effect the great major purpose of assurance to the country and the world of the determination of the American people to maintain their finances and their currency on a sound basis."

With the backing of the directors of the Reconstruction Finance corporation who had been conferring with him for two days at his Rapidan camp, President Hoover carried forward his fight to complete his economic relief program in a White House statement urging a $1,500,000,000 expansion of the Reconstruction corporation and attacking public works bond issue proposals.

Expansion of the corporation to make loans to states for unemployment relief purposes, to farm co-operatives and to self-sustaining public and private projects was the first objective named by the White House in the four-point program. The setting up of a system of home loan discount banks to protect home owners and stimulate up to $1,000,000,000 of new construction work was the second item in the program.

The creation in each federal reserve district of such a co-operative committee representing industry and finance as Owen D. Young heads in New York was also urged for the organized expansion of credit facilities.

The projected program was completed with a demand that government expenditures be held within the tax income now provided.

The Garner two-billion-dollar relief bill was passed by the house, but his chance of getting through the senate was considered small.

Hundreds Are Killed by Quake in Mexico

Mexico City.—More than 400 persons were reported dead or injured as a result of severe earthquakes that shook Mexico.

Reports over damaged communication systems said that at least 300 were killed or hurt in the area about Guadalajara, with the death toll still mounting.

Thousands were found to be homeless in remote sections of the back country. Organization of local relief commissions to speed aid to the victims was ordered by authorities. Fearing a recurrence of the shocks, officials forbade indoor meetings, schools, saloons, churches and theaters were closed.

A dispatch from Colima said the bodies of 17 victims had been recovered. Twenty or more towns were destroyed or seriously damaged.

Sweden to Send Team of 50 to Olympic Games

Stockholm.—Sweden will be represented in the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles by a team of 50. It was decided by the Swedish Olympic committee.

Wrestlers lead the list with 11. Contacts in other sports will be as follows: Track and field, 10; boxing, 2; modern pentathlon, 4; equestrian sports, 6; yachting, 7; swimming, 3; shooting, 8, and cycling, 4.

Lindbergh Ransom Bills Bob Up in New Castle, Pa.

New Castle, Pa.—Several bank notes that were part of the $20,000 ransom paid by Dr. John E. Condon to the supposed kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby have appeared in New Castle, Pa. Efforts to trace the passers of the money have failed.

Allentown, Pa.—Willis Loviche, president of the Allentown Aviation corporation, was killed when the plane was about to land went into a nose dive at the Allentown airport.

J. D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., a teetotaler and in the past a liberal supporter of the Anti-Saloon league, created something of a sensation by coming out for repeal of the eighteenth amendment and control of the liquor traffic by the states.

LEWIS TELLS BONUS CROWD TO "GO TO"

Threats of "Marchers" Enrage Illinois Senator.

Washington.—"You can go to hell," was the response a group of "bonus marchers" got from Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, when they accosted him in the corridor of the capitol.

He was met by a group of bonus marchers as he entered the capitol and they began to berate him for a speech he made urging them to leave the city.

They began to argue with him, and said they had voted for him, but still had votes.

"If you are from Illinois, you are dishonoring the state," Lewis shot back at them. The senator, as he told the story, then warned he would do his best to stop all veterans legislation while they were in Washington.

"We are here to see that you fellows get right and we are going to stay here until you do what we want done," the spokesman of the group said.

"You know where you'll go don't you?" one of the group said, finally. "I don't know what you mean," Lewis shot back, "but you can go to hell and I'll go back into the senate to my duties."

Lewis said he was sorry he "lost" his temper, but he did not believe any of the men who accosted him were veterans or Legionnaires. He called them trouble-makers, but had organized the march to take advantage of former service men.

Mistakes Man for Deer; Kills Him With a Gun

Ashland, Wis.—Admitting that he shot and killed Frank Gervais, forty, when he mistook him for a deer, Frank Johnson, twenty-three, Odanah Indian, was held in the Ashland county jail.

He told Coroner Louis Solie and Sheriff Elmer Sanders that he was on the edge of a clearing at the Raymond Gervais farm, near Odanah, in the hope a deer would come out of the woods to feed. It was foggy, he said, and when he saw something move behind a barn he believed it was a deer and fired.

When he ran to the barn he learned the bullet had killed Gervais. The victim had been sitting behind the farm with his brother, Raymond, and an uncle, John Pitelo.

Would-Be Assassin of Mussolini Is Arrested

Rome.—Another attempt on Premier Benito Mussolini's life was frustrated. Special police arrested Angelo Sbardolotto, twenty-five, the would-be assassin, while he was loitering in the Piazza Venezia, outside of Mussolini's office, waiting for it due to emerge.

Sbardolotto, an Italian from Belluno, province of Venice, was armed with two flat, high-explosive bombs which he carried in an upper vest pocket and a revolver, police said. After a severe grilling, he confessed his intention of assassinating Mussolini.

Confesses Killing Father to Marry

Potsdam, N. Y.—Arrested here for the slaying of his sixty-six-year-old father, Stephen R. Witherill, thirty, was quoted by policemen as saying he shot the older man because he opposed the son's marriage with Mary Zikesky of New York.

"I waited until he was asleep," Witherill said. "After I'd killed him I went through his clothes and took $100 and the keys to his car. Then I drove to New York."

Admits $9,000 Embezzlement

Milwaukee.—John Firer, city treasurer of Cudahy, a suburb, confessed converting $9,000 of public funds to his own use. He said he took the money after he lost his fortune in real estate speculation.

Canadian Vessel Burns

Halifax, N. S.—The schooner Silvia II of Halifax registry was burned off St. Pierre Miquelon. The crew abandoned the vessel and headed for the French islands in small boats.

Shakespeare Authority Dies

New York.—Dr. Frederick Douglas Losey, sixty-five, an authority on Shakespeare, died of heart disease at his home.

J. D. ROCKEFELLER, JR., QUILTS CAMP OF DRYS

Advocates Repeal of the 18th Admendment.

New York.—Jubilant reigns in the wet camp, for John D. Rockefeller, Jr., a lifelong dry, has decided that the Eighteenth amendment ought to be repealed.

His change of opinion disclosed in a letter to Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, brought expressions of amazement and sharp disagreement from supporters of the prohibition amendment. The which Rockefeller and his father helped make the law of the land.

In expressing hope that both major parties would adopt repeal planks and remove the question from partisan strife Rockefeller made it plain he had not altered his views on temperance. He said he had been a teetotaler all his life.

"Neither my father nor his father ever tasted a drop of intoxicating liquor, nor have I," he declared.

He stated he and his father had contributed $350,000 to the Anti-Saloon league to support prohibition legislation.

"Slowly and reluctantly," he said, he had come to believe that the amendment had not been supported by public opinion sufficiently to hasten the day "when the value to society of men with minds and bodies free from the undermining effects of alcohol would be generally realized."

Rather, he declared, he found that "drinking generally has increased; the speakeasy has replaced the saloon, not only unit for unit, but probably twofold if not threefold; that a vast army of lawbreakers has been recruited and financed on a colossal scale; that many of our best citizens, plucked at what they regarded as an infringement of their private rights, have openly and unabashedly disregarded the Eighteenth amendment; that as an inevitable result respect for all law has been greatly lessened; that crime has increased to an unprecedented degree."

Dry leaders were sorry that Mr. Rockefeller had changed his views, but disagreed with his statements. Dr. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, executive secretary of the national prohibition board of strategy, said: "I don't agree with him, of course, but he has a right to his opinion. The reversal was not unanticipated. There has been a wrong impression about both the Rockefeller's support of the dry cause. I'm sorry, but I'm not surprised. I think the idea of remedying evils that have come not because of but at the same time as prohibition is wrong."

Detroit Police Battle Reds With Tear Gas

Detroit, Mich.—Fifty mounted police and patrolmen battled a crowd of 3,000 demonstrators at the gates of the Briggs Manufacturing company plant and turned back the mob in a brief but bitter struggle in which several were slightly injured. A woman and five men were arrested.

Armed with riot clubs and tear gas bombs the police fought back the demonstrators when they attempted to rush the gates of the plant. The rioting followed a meeting called by John Schmeiss, one time Communist candidate for mayor of Detroit, in which unemployment relief and an increase in wages for workers at the plant were demanded.

Senator Brookhart Is Defeated in Primary

Des Moines.—Senator Smith W. Brookhart was decisively defeated in the Republican primary, the voters of Iowa deciding that he should be replaced by Henry Field, a seed merchant of Shenandoah. Gov. Dan Turner was renominated by the Republicans. In the Democratic contest Louis Murphy led former Senator Daniel Steck by about 2 to 1 for the senatorship nomination.

Charlotte, N. C.—In the Democratic senatorial primary Senator Cameron Morrison ran far behind Robert R. Reynolds, but as neither received a majority they will both enter the runoff primary on July 2.

Dawes Resigns as Head of Finance Corporation

Washington.—Charles G. Dawes has quit the government's Reconstruction Finance corporation to return to Chicago and his bank.

He submitted his resignation to President Hoover and it was announced to coincide with enactment of the budget-balancing tax bill. He said he felt the turning point toward eventual prosperity had been reached, and asked to be released. The President accepted with regrets, but with high praise and acknowledgment of "great obligation to you for your co-operation and great accomplishments in many of our most important governmental problems of the past years."

Gold Medal for Amelia Putnam

Washington.—In recognition of her lone flight across the Atlantic, the special gold medal of the National Geographic society will be presented to Amelia Earhart Putnam by President Hoover June 21.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—The known death toll in a flood that inundated hundreds of lowland homes in the river bottoms of southeastern Oklahoma City reached eight with the finding of two more bodies.

Cholera Rages in Shanghai

Shanghai, China.—Cholera has broken out in Shanghai, the city health authorities revealed. The board of health disclosed that 100 cases had been discovered.

Scarf Theme Tunes to Decolletage

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

ADVANCE showings of midsummer formal fashions carry the message that designers are in mood to create filmy, joyous looking apparel such as suggests going to lovely garden parties on sunlit afternoons or dancing at the country club.

Not as yet have creators of clothes beautiful discovered anything in the way of fabrics which add such enchantment to the picture of midsummer festivities as richly colorful prints. Let daytime prints be as sober and as monotone and at trim and neat in design as they wish, but when it comes to prints for nighttime they must be gorgeous, exotic and breathe the air of romance, not only in their wealth of color but in the daring of their patterning as well—such is the prevailing sentiment as expressed in fashionland for this summer.

In this matter of color and design it may truthfully be said that this season's midsummer evening prints are telling "the sweetest story ever told." Many of them burst into a riot of color while all the flowers of the garden seem to be holding a reunion as they crowd into space on diaphanous backgrounds. Field flowers, especially those with ragged petals such as daisies and bachelor buttons, are making merry on many a summery chiffon. Then again the fascinating tale of printed design is told dramatically in two colors, such as for instance, a startling print which shows a vibrant yellow playing a solo dance all over a very black background.

The scarf theme as applied to daring silhouettes in decolletage design is again demonstrated in the "classy" dinner gown illustrated to the left. In this instance the scarf and the bodice seem molded into a unit. With forms a scarp shoulder strap, while the other streamer glides over the opposite shoulder, falling with consummate grace toward the back. The pure silk printed georgette which fashions this model is one of the much-talked-of semi-sheers which leading designers are so enthusiastically sponsoring this season. The color scheme is also interesting as it features the patterning done in white on a gay monotone background.

Sometimes as many as seven or eight colors splash over white or pale grounds in flowery design. The charming gown to the left in the picture is fashioned of just such a chiffon of many hues. No less exciting than the chiffon itself is the unique decolletage of this ultra-smart gown. There is nothing quite so new and so unusual as the decolletage neckline which reflects the vogue for scarf effects. One of the points to observe in connection with this new scarf movement as adopted by this dress is that the high-in-front neckline, which is now the thing, is accented, the two ends of the scarflike drapery dropping at the back in general cascades, as shown by the accompanying miniature sketch.

New Coats Have Little Flare; Frocks Tailored

The smartest coats this year do not have much flare—they hang fairly straight, but with sufficient swing to be easy and comfortable for walking. Dresses, too, have gone tailored in such a big way that the thing we have always called an "afternoon dress" is almost threatened with extinction.

The beauty of a tailored dress is, that it is at home everywhere. Woolen dresses used to be considered more informal than silk ones, and knit dresses more informal than either. But now we know few distinctions as to fabric.

So under a tailored coat may go perfectly appropriately any of the following fabrics in a simple dress; rough silk crepe; canton or flat crepe; tweeds; sheer wools; jersey and all knit fabrics; mesh and crochet. And with a tailored coat you may also wear a sweater and skirt; and be very comfortable as well as very smart.

Practical Ensemble Is Latest Spring Favorite

Early spring sees the practical ensemble enjoying a real success. Every house is concentrating on wearable ensembles done in woolen, stressing a bright, youthful note, and made with all evidences of careful treatment and workmanship.

The woman who spends a great deal of her day out of doors is particularly addicted to this type of garment as it fits unobtrusively into any scheme and is most flattering to every type. Brown is being much used and in place of the white used so much with that color last spring, two tones of brown are being shown and very much liked.

HE KNEW THE SERVICE

Harry rather fancied himself as a mathematical expert. One day he met his Cousin Jim. "Think of a number, Jim," he said, "and I'll tell you whether it's odd or even."

"Right," said the other. "I have just called up my girl on the 'phone. What's the number?"

Harry looked thoughtful. "Did you get her?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Jim.

"Right away?" inquired the other.

"Yes," answered Jim.

"That's odd," finished Harry.—London Answers.

Stowaway Takes in Sights of London

Very Simple the Way La Raviere Tells It.

London.—Strict as immigration officials and steamship officers are, it is still possible to cross the Atlantic as a stowaway, eat two square meals daily for seven days while mingling with the passengers and crew, and then enter Great Britain without so much as a question from the authorities.

Raymond La Raviere, twenty-eight, who says he lived at 2432 Marquette road, Chicago, did it. Travelers who have experienced the thoroughness of the European investigations of foreigners at ports and frontiers, plus the usual ticket and passport inspections of stewards and others aboard ship, merely go through formalities in no way essential. La Raviere proved it.

He boarded the Olympic in New York 15 hours before the vessel sailed, made himself comfortable, traveled to Southampton, landed, tramped to London, and was going for a walk with two newly found girl friends in Drury Lane some time later before the police called him to account. Then he was fined $10 or given one month in Wormwood Scrubs prison for the offense of entering England illegally.

Afterwards he restored himself to the trust of the officials and spent a month doing the tower, houses of parliament, Westminster abbey, Kew gardens, and other points of interest.

La Raviere was even given a police registration card such as all Americans and other foreigners who stay in England any length of time must have.

It all sounds easy as he explains it.

He walked up the Olympic gangplank, stored his luggage in the crew's quarters, and went for a walk. He came back at eight, got his bag, and picked out an unoccupied third-class stateroom. Mattresses and other "unuse" bedding were stored in the room, and out of these he built a screen to shield himself from the door. Then he made his bed behind and turned in for the night. When he woke up next morning he was at sea.

La Raviere stayed in his stateroom until evening, when he grew hungry. So he changed his clothes and went out on deck. Then he learned that the night crew was about to be fed, so he dashed back and got into his seaman's clothing in time to follow the crew in to supper. He helped himself and nobody asked any questions. He made this quick change twice a day for seven days. He ate lunch with the day crew and at night he fed with a different watch. Nobody suspected. The rest of the time he lolled in deck chairs and mingled with the passengers.

La Raviere meant to embark at Cherbourg, but found this impossible because of the landing card necessary to board the tender. So he went on to Southampton and was unlucky enough to arrive there in mid-afternoon. He saw two gangplanks taken aboard, one for the passengers and the other for the crew, who immediately began unloading laundry. Then he did his quick change for the last time. He left his bag behind to avoid customs officers and walked off the ship with the crew.

He was unable to get out of the dock yards at Southampton because the only exit is through a gate in a high steel wire fence and this is guarded by immigration officers.

But he waited until dark and then jumped the fence, the last hurdle of his crossing taken. Then he walked

Spain Ignores Death

Penalty in New Regime

Madrid, Spain.—Although the constitution of the second Spanish republic is silent on the subject, and the new criminal code has not yet been drawn up, the death penalty has gone out of vogue in this country.

Recently, the minister of justice, Don Alvaro de Albornoz, announced the commutation of the death penalty to life imprisonment of a man who had killed the wife of a dairy owner, and their twenty-seven-month-old baby.

The Cortes Constituyentes, a few weeks ago, refused to take into consideration a bill proposed by a deputy belonging to the radical party, which would provide the death penalty for all robbers who engaged in holdups. The bill was proposed on the day when a bank in Madrid was held up and robbed of $4,000, but it was promptly hooted down by the Socialists and Radical Socialist deputies.

These two events are symptomatic of the spirit of the times in Spain.

U. S. Memorial in France

Old French Defenses Are Discovered by Laborers.

Bar-le-Duc.—As excavations for the construction of an American monument were being made on the peak of Mo' aucon, in the Argonne, the foundations of an old fortress built there by Godefroy de Bouillon in 1076 were discovered.

The American monument is to commemorate the 1,512 soldiers of the United States army who were killed there in September, 1918, when the position was taken from the Germans. The old fort is said to have been destroyed and reconstructed in the Eleventh, Thirteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries and finally burned with the village during the Thirty Years' war by the Swedes.

Godefroy de Bouillon was a young vassal of Emperor Henry IV, from whom he received the title of Marquisate of Anvers at the death of Godefroy-le-Bosseu. The fortress was dismantled when the Duc de Basse Lorraine left with the Crusaders.

Explorations are being made by Baron Renaux, curator of the Verdun museum and library, under the auspices of the ministry of fine arts, in collaboration with Canon Almond, historical savant of the Meuse, and other authorities. Among the finds so far are an entrance stairway, a series of galleries of different sizes, small rooms in one of which was a stone bench, and several piles of burned wood, indicating the destruction of 1636. These were all discovered at a depth of eight or ten meters.

The American battle monument is to be made of reinforced concrete faced with Burgundy stone. It will be 200 feet high, overlooking the entire battlefield. Dedication ceremonies are scheduled for this summer, unless present excavations postpone the work.

New Yorker Owns Goose

That Lays 11-Inch Egg

Pen Yan, N. Y.—Peggy J., owned by Mrs. J. F. Goudry, is no ordinary goose.

Peggy lays eggs so large that one of them, mixed with two quarts of milk, will make enough custard for the family.

Every spring Peggy goes on an eccentric production schedule. On alternate days she lays a huge double-yolked egg weighing ten ounces. It measures 11 inches around.

When hot weather sets in, she settles down to one normal egg a day.

Early "Sunday" Houses Are to Be Preserved

Fredericksburg, Texas.—Efforts to preserve the wood and stone "Sunday houses" of early settler days here are being made by members of the American Institute of Architects.

Before the days of automobiles farmers came to town Saturday afternoon and remained throughout Sunday to worship. Hotels were scarce. "Sunday houses" appeared on side streets, in the churchyard, and on the outskirts of the town.

These one-room structures served as living quarters for farmers on weekend trips. Generally the roof was gabled, providing sleeping quarters for the older children.

It was long believed Sunday houses were peculiar to Fredericksburg, but in Middletown, Conn., "Sabbath Day Houses" were in use as early as 1690.

SEES PASSING OF "DARKEST AFRICA"

Industrial Revolutionary Era Predicted.

To the classical world Africa was a source of novelties—"out of Africa always something new." But if Prof. Julian Huxley is right in the forecast which he gave during an address in Oxford, the capacity of that continent for novelties is becoming exhausted; its new things appear to lie in the direction of Europe's old ones. Professor Huxley thinks that at the end of another 100 years "a tropical African federation" will have come into being, with its own factories ready to deal with its own great variety of natural resources. Africa, it would seem, is to have an industrial revolution, and Professor Huxley sees it following so closely on the European models for such transformations that he was pleading for early action on the part of European powers to reserve large African areas as national parks. "If that were done in time," he suggested, "Africa and not Switzerland would become the playground of the world." Whether the African peoples (or such of them as have not become industrialized) will develop the characteristic Swiss genius for hotel keeping remains to be seen; or perhaps while the Africans work in their factories the Europeans will organize the tourist industry in the national parks. It sounds a little fanciful at the moment—if only because Switzerland is a great deal easier to get at than Africa. But 100 years hence it is certain that travel by air will become far more widely and swiftly organized than it is today. To reach central Africa by airplane may then take less time than a journey to Switzerland by boat and train now implies; for our great-grandsons a fortnight on the slopes of Kilimanjaro might be just as feasible, in point of time and money, as a contemporary week in "lovely Lucerne." But it is a little alarming to see it hinted that we should act soon in the matter of reservations lest the Kilimanjaro become covered with lumber camps and canning factories.—Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

Sight-Saving Methods Aiding Children's Eyes

Four hundred sight-saving classes have been established in the schools of 112 American communities, according to statistics received by the Better Vision Institute. The classes are conducted so as to put the least possible strain on the children whose eyes are naturally defective; large-type books are used, the children can choose their own positions in the classroom so that they can see the blackboard without difficulty, and they are taught to use the touch system on the typewriter as soon as possible to avoid the strain of handwriting. According to the institute, one out of five children are handicapped by defective vision, and since they are compelled to attend school up to a certain age, school authorities are beginning to realize that they owe a special responsibility to the 5,000,000 out of the 26,000,000 children in the United States who do not see well.

Yes, Many!

The Toledo Blade says that a man must be either a hammer or an anvil. Shucks, we know some who are both.

Cyclones will never break into the "popular air" class.

Here is the NEW McCORMICK-DEERING ALL-PURPOSE TRUCK

YOURS FOR
$61
f. o. b. Chicago

For tractor or horse.
To haul 2 to 2 1/2 tons.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER has perfected a new all-steel, all-purpose, roller-bearing truck which is a remarkable value at the price—$61 f. o. b. Chicago.

The new McCormick-Deering All-Purpose Truck is designed for hard use behind either tractor or horse. Tractor hitch is regular equipment, horse tongue is available, and the change may be made in a minute. Track is standard, wheelbase adjustable from 84 in. to 126 in., and the truck will take any box, rack, or other standard equipment.

The steel swivel-reach coupling makes the truck extremely flexible, taking care of any rough going. Front wheels are auto-steering, and they clear the wagon box on short turn. The exceptionally strong wheels are dust-proof, fitted with take-up washers, and with Zerk oiling system. Roller bearings (two on each axle) make lightest draft ever found in a wagon.

Every possible detail is right in this sturdy McCormick-Deering truck—it is "all-purpose" in every sense. It will haul anything anywhere for a horse farmer or a power farmer.

We have this new ALL-PURPOSE TRUCK on display at our store, ready for your inspection. You will find it a remarkable value at $61 f. o. b. Chicago.

HIGH LIGHTS

Trotter and fans were greatly disappointed when the ball hit on top of school house was not allowed for a home run, ball going foul by only a few inches.

Kral and Dallich each struck out 3 times, that is something to talk about.

Heberer played a good game in center field.

The coach of Menomonee Falls was chased from the field after pushing Umpire Muckerheide. There might be an occasion at times to dispute an umpire's decision, but it is very un-sportsmanlike to attempt to strike the official.

Very few fans from Menomonee Falls were present.

NORTH FONDY 6, WEST BEND 0

In the first shut-out game of the season North Fond du Lac Tigers defeated West Bend at the latter place by a score of 6 to 0. Hable, on the mound for North Fondy allowed the Benders only three hits and struck out eleven men. Kuehthaus started for West Bend, and was relieved by Robeskey, newly acquired twirler. Fun for All the Children
Edited by DOROTHY EDMONDS

POOR SUSIE

Poor Susie! At least that is what people who didn't know the whole story always called her. That's what Aunt Mary said, too, one day when she was going to call on her, that is, before she went and discovered things. You see, Susie was considered to be very poor, one of a large family, with hardly enough money to buy food and clothes and certainly not enough to buy toys and things just for pleasure. It looked that way on the outside. The house was small, scarcely big enough to hold nine of them, and it was shabby and needed many repairs which Susie's father was too poor to make. But inside, it seemed that a magician had been at work. The windows were shiny and clean, letting in all the sunshine there was. Pretty, crisp curtains fluttered at them, too, adding color and daintiness to each room. All the furniture was painted a fresh clean color, and all nine children were happy and smiling as if they were the richest children in the town.

The day that Aunt Mary went to see them, she took her little niece

Myrtle and her little nephew Paul. They had brought some of their toys thinking that since they had so many they could give some to these poor little children. Their surprise was great as they stepped inside the room where the children played. There were toys galore, only the toys were different from theirs. There were not only toys but useful things as well, made out of cast off boxes, scraps of colored cloth and paper, string, wire and odds and ends of all kinds that are usually thrown carelessly away. There were carts out of pasteboard boxes, with wheels made of clean milk bottle tops or of cardboard disks, and colored bright colors. There were dolls of all shapes and sizes, made from cloth tied together at neck and waist with ribbon or string, and the arms and legs made from other pieces of cloth sewn on in the right places. Just strips of cloth, fastened together and Myrtle and Paul were fascinated to see what lovely dolls they made, soot cuddly ones. Why, Myrtle's mother had lots of pieces of cloth in her attic. She could make

* all kinds of dolls. There were animals, whole crosses of them made from things like burdock burrs stuck together in animal shapes and then painted to resemble the particular kind of animal they were, the prickly surface being trimmed off neatly before painting them. There were dishes from hollowed horse chestnuts, shells, acorn cups. There were quilts and covers made from scraps of cloth sewn together. There were lamp shades and curtains made of pretty colored crepe paper, the curtains tied back with crisp paper bows. Susie herself was smiling happily as she showed all the fascinating things.

"You should save everything," she told Paul and Myrtle, "and see what you can think to make from it. It's much more fun than buying things." And Paul and Myrtle saw readily that indeed it was for these children were happier making their own toys than they ever were with more expensive ones. After that visit it was no longer, "Poor Susie." Instead it was "Lucky and clever Susie."

Great Musical Director Leads "Jobless Musicians" Band at Philadelphia's City Hall

Leopold Stokowski, musical director of the Philadelphia orchestra and idol of concert-goers throughout the world, is shown coatless and in a blue shirt, leading a band composed of some 200 odd jobless musicians, on the steps of Philadelphia's city hall. The concert was a triumph for Musicians Union Local 77, after its leader had upbraided Mayor Moore in a speech and stated that the "City fathers would not allow even Stokowski to give music away free in Reburn plaza." The city fathers showed that they were not afraid and that they enjoyed the music in the bargain.

Lights of New York

By WALTER TRUMBULL

A well known New York newspaper woman who lived on Perry street, owns a cat by the name of Mollie. Perry street is a homelike neighborhood, and Mollie roamed at large, known and liked by all. Frequently she would go out walking in the evening and return escorted by two or three gentlemen friends. But recently the newspaper woman and her family moved uptown. Not only that, but they moved to a fifteenth floor apartment, where there was a doorman and elevator boys in uniform. The old, care-free atmosphere was left behind. Mollie moped. The new surroundings did not suit her at all. There were none of the things with whom to exchange gossiping minnows. She had risen fifteen floors above her former address. But once a flirt, always a flirt. The other day, Mollie's mistress found her perched on the sill of the open living room window. Five stories below, in another window, sat a large gentleman cat, singing to Mollie in a throaty yowl—a perfect troubadour. Mollie was giving him one of those looks. For the first time since occupying her new quarters, she appeared to be contented again.

The captain of bellboys in a big Florida hotel has aspirations as a dramatist. His name is Henry Trueheart, which would appear to be a good name for his hero. At any rate, every time John Golden goes South, Henry has new ideas for a play. He tells them all to Mr. Golden who, if Henry ever writes the play, undoubtedly should be his producer.

One of the extremely few inhabitants of Andros, that island of the western Bahamas where flamingos still are found in large flocks, is Percy Cavill, a perfect type of the gentleman. He has been all over the world but came originally from Australia. His brother, Tom Cavill, was a swimming champion and is credited with being the originator of the Australian crawl stroke. They tell me it was known originally as the "Cavill stroke."

Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington baseball club, told me that Sam West of Rule, Texas, not only was the best outfielder, but one of the best he had ever seen. Texas appears to be a state which turns out good outfielders. Witness, for instance, Mr. Tris Speaker.

As a matter of fact, Texas appears to turn out major league players for all positions. There is Rogers Hornsby from Winters; Gus Mancuso from Galveston; George Watkins from Galveston; Art Whitney from San Antonio; Lloyd Brown from Beeville; Pat Caraway from Gordon; Tex Carleton from Comanche; Sam Gray from Van Alstine; Fred Marberry from Streetman, and several more. Tex Rickard always used to take pleasure in recounting to me the number of athletes Texas had produced.

WAY TO ECONOMIZE

Mrs. Newlywed—We have got to economize.
Newlywed—Well, you can begin by making the biscuits lighter.

My Neighbor Says:

A SLICE of apple kept in the bread or cookie box will aid in keeping foods fresh and soft. Of course, the apple must be changed frequently.

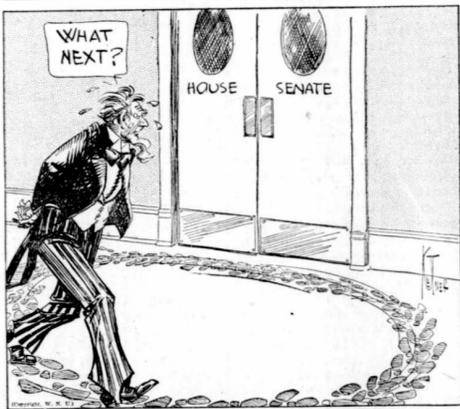

To clean parchment or paper lamp shades use wall paper cleaner. In case one has the plated shades, remove the string and lay flat on table. The lamp shades will clean beautifully and look like new.

Keep rubber bands in a tightly closed tin box. They keep very much longer than if exposed to the air.

When you wish to make gravy or soup with the water in which meat has been cooked, wring a cloth out in cold water and strain the liquor through it. No grease will go through.

Anxious Father

Many of those now prominent in the theatrical and moving picture world did other things before taking up their present occupations. Among New York producers, for example, George Cohan was once a boy violinist; Sam Harris, before he managed Terry McGovern, ran a laundry; Morris Guest was a ticket speculator; Bill Brady was a manager of pugilists. Winchell Smith, the playwright, was a grain salesman. Al Wood was in the spectacle business. Charles Dillingham was a hotel clerk, and a boxer. Joe and Nick Schenk were druggists.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

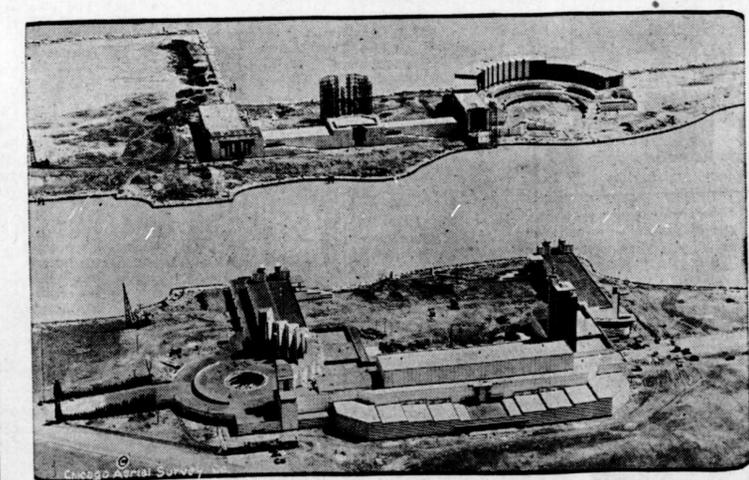

Why Do We Call a Dancing Party a "Ball"?

THIS is a question which must certainly have occurred to many of us who have an inquiring turn of mind.

The first answer that suggests itself is that this must be a different kind of "ball"—one spelled and pronounced the same but meaning and rooted in something different.

Distinctly Modern Ideas Worked Out in These Two Buildings for Chicago's 1933 World's Fair

Facing each other across the lagoon of A Century of Progress (Chicago's 1933 World's Fair) are these two striking structures—the sickle-shaped electrical group on northerly island and the u-shaped hall of science.

The Kitchen Cabinet

VARIOUS DISHES

A TART sauce that will be well liked because it is unusual, is prepared as follows: Dissolve a tablespoonful of powdered mustard in one-half cupful of fish stock, add two tablespoonfuls of white wine vinegar, or any vinegar will do; bring to a boil, add two lemon slices and boil a few minutes longer, add two eggs which have been beaten with a teaspoonful of water. Season with salt and pepper, heat again but do not boil.

Sauce Mouseline.—This is another good fish sauce. Beat two eggs, add one cupful of this cream, one tablespoonful of butter and pepper and salt to taste, stir until it begins to thicken. When of the proper consistency, add a tablespoonful of lemon juice and it is ready for the table.

Fish a la Marseilles.—Chop into fine bits a small sweet chile pepper and toss it about in a saucepan over the fire with a cupful of olive oil or butter. When hot add a cupful each of okra and stewed fresh or canned tomatoes. Cook fifteen minutes and add a cupful of fresh fish and half a cupful of salt fish—mackerel for example. Cover and cook for twenty minutes longer and serve with crackers.

Mutton With Spinach.—Roast a small leg of mutton, season well with a bit of garlic and plenty of salt and pepper. Add a small quantity of water in the roasting pan. When half cooked remove the meat and skim the gravy of all fat. Return the mutton to the pan, surround it with small, even sized potatoes and cook, basting the potatoes until tender and brown. Cook three pounds or less of spinach, drain and pass through a sieve. Return to the sauce pan and season with salt and pepper. Add a tablespoonful of the gravy from the pan and simmer until serving time. Serve the spinach with the potatoes, about the meat, and serve with the gravy in a sauceboat.

America Leads the World in Phones

Washington.—There were 35,336,467 telephones in the entire world on January 1, 1931, according to statistics recently compiled by the American Telephone and Telegraph company. It takes some time to secure authoritative data from the more remote countries, and January 1, 1931, is the latest date for which comparable information is available in full.

The United States then had 20,201,576 telephones, or more than half of the world's total. The United States and Canada together had more than twice as many telephones as the whole of Europe. Thirty per cent of the world's total telephones were in Europe and 9 per cent were scattered widely about the globe. Adverse business conditions slowed down the rate of telephone growth in 1930 and even caused a few countries to lose telephones. The total number of telephones in the world increased by 865,729 during that year. The increase of 133,553 telephones in the United States during the year exceeded that in any other country.

Privately owned systems operate more than two-thirds of the world's telephones. In the United States all telephones are operated by private companies. This country is not only equipped with more telephones than all the rest of the world put together, but it is likewise outstanding in the number of its telephones relative to population.

With 16.4 telephones for each 100 people, the relative prevalence of telephones in the United States is more than eight times that in Europe. Canada, with 14 telephones per 100 people is the only country whose telephone facilities in proportion to population approach those of the United States. New Zealand takes third place, followed by Denmark, with 9.9; Sweden, with 8.7, and Australia with 8.1

telephones per 100 people. Most of the telephones in both Canada and Denmark are privately operated.

The small towns and rural sections of America are notably well provided with telephone facilities. Communities in this country with less than 20,000 population each have at their disposal an average of 12.2 telephones for each 100 inhabitants. In Europe even the larger cities are for the most part less adequately supplied with telephones than these small American communities

THE BLESSED BARRIER

By FANNIE HURST

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service)

SOMEWHERE in the heart, the mind and the spirit of young Sterling was a barrier as high, practically, as his life was long. Had you even suggested anything of this to any member of the Bulhow family, they would have met the implication with loyal and heated denial.

How could Sterling secretly feel himself an outsider in the Bulhow family, when not one of the Bulhow children, although they had quite simply been told when they each became eight, had an atom of consciousness that Sterling was not blood brother?

As a matter of fact, bending too far backward perhaps to achieve this end, Ann and Proscow took pains to see to it that Sterling received even more than their own children of parental solicitude.

The fact that Sterling had been adopted by Ann during a previous marriage was as remote in the minds of her present husband and children as if it had never happened.

Sterling belonged. As the senior member of a remarkably alert group of children, he was the acknowledged leader of the clan.

"Sterling is too outrageously clever." Ann was wont to remark of her alleged eldest, treating him in the colloquial young fashion of the modern mother. "He sets a dreadful example to the rest of the children. They have to live up to him."

"Sterling is not clever," Ann's really eldest, Shirley, would sing out on such occasions. "He's a soulless misanthrope, an acid-flinging cynic, a misbehaviorist, and he passes off among the unworshippers of my mother's generation as clever."

"Oh, Shirley, be yourself," Terry, two years below Shirley, would retort on the fling of a soft pillow. "You know you'd give your sleepy head to be as clever as Sterling."

"What Shirley can't be, she is not going to bid for," remarked her father, dodging in turn the same soft pillow flung by Shirley toward him that had been flung by Terry to his sister.

"Father, it is a good thing you make it a point to speak your true words in jest. Otherwise your family would never grant you a hearing."

Typical, all this, of the way Sterling stood in the admiration of his so-called parents and brothers and sisters. Not only the two older of the Bulhow children vested him thus in their full and enthusiastic approval, but the stepladder of younger ones followed suit with hero worshipping eyes.

"Sterling this." "Sterling that." "If I had Sterling's brains." "Sterling is the genius of this family." "If only Sterling would take the trouble he could be anything he set out to be!"

Something undoubtedly there was in Sterling. The something that would not take the trouble. Time after time, her sweet, anxious eyes scrutinizing this youth, Ann tried to analyze that trouble. Proscow, too. And as Ann said banteringly of her husband, as a famous alienist whose job it was to analyze the workings of the human brain, Proscow ought to be able to ferret out the way to attack the streak of cynical inertia in Sterling.

"Darling, with all your brains, isn't there anything you want to be?"

"I want my father to subsidize me with ten thousand a year as guarantee against the horrible thought of ever wanting to be anything."

"Sterling, won't you be serious just once? You're twenty now. The time has come when you simply have to decide what you want to do with your life. You're too talented! Music. Painting. Writing. I've a suspicion you can be a great person in any one of them."

"Perhaps."

"Proscow, you talk to him."

Curious, with any one of their own children, this problem would have been treated in quite another manner. In fact, the problem of Terry had already been handled with decision and the school for his medical training selected. With Sterling, just because of his equivocal position in the household, the dilemma of stimulating him to action was a subtle and troublesome one.

"You know after all, Sterling, your father, in spite of his wealth, could never be wealthy enough to encourage a dilettante in the family."

A flush ran beneath the pallor of the best-looking member of the Bulhows. Ann had struck in. Proscow, and rightly, would not permit one of his sons to live off of his largesse

... much less Sterling, the outsider.

How to convey to these dear, warm discreet people that gnawing, sickening sense of his outsideness. The very coloring of the eyes and hair of his five foster brothers and sisters was something Sterling could never look upon without the cold sense of being alien sweeping through the lonely inner moors of his desolation.

The Bulhows were blond, every one of them, blue-eyed, straw-haired. Dark, aloof, alone, he stood in their derelict, kind world—the alien whose isolation no one dared mention. The alien, who by very virtue of the anomaly of his position, was treated with considerations that hurt more than helped. All of his childhood, Sterling had yearned for the heartier reprimands handed out to the unselfconscious to the Bulhow children. No childish dispute had ever been settled against him. The alien deferred to!

The same way now with his retarded decision. With not one other of his children would Proscow have been so indulgent. Terry was a concrete example. Even Shirley, the only girl in the group, had never met the quality of indulgence that had been meted out to Sterling.

It made the bitterness and the hurting and the secret gnawing pain of being inner group, and a little outside the dear, special group of people who were dearer than dear to him, almost too vast to be borne.

It was not alone the sense of being the outsider, it was the knowledge that their unspoken sense of it kept them all so cruelly considerate, so deferential to his special position.

Not even his foster father was to sense this out as the secret of the curious problem confronting him in this foster son of his.

Too bad. Most gifted member of the family. Brains. Talent. Will get his bearings in time, of course. But a curious licked kind of psychology to the lad. Doesn't care a great deal about anything. Fine intelligence. High strung, but not unduly nervous. Sensitive, of course. But somewhere in the machinery of the boy's fine mind, a monkey wrench.

For a while Shirley had seemed to have easiest access to the confidence of Sterling. They were so close; so filled with admiration, each for the other. Their entire childhood had been like that. Merciless in their repartee, gibe and banter, they were nonetheless closer than any other two of the children.

But then at this stage, when more than ever Sterling had become the noncommittal dilettante, even Shirley had fallen back defeated. Something was eating Sterling.

However, in the end it was Shirley who was to find her way into the tortured labyrinth of Sterling's dilemma.

The recital of his years of secret anguish and hurt and jealousies came from him one night in a torrent, on the heels of a discussion they had been having together on the subject of his refusal to compete for an art prize.

Sentence by sentence, revealing commitment by commitment, the strange secret tortures of the years lay revealed.

"I'm too jealous, Shirley. Too eaten with the devilish pain of being an outsider to the people I love best in the world, to care about anything. I'm licked before I start. You can't want anything badly enough to go out and get it when you're eaten with a devil like that. It will always be that way with me. Homesickness, heart sickness, to be one of a group that will always too consciously and conscientiously try to make me think I am what I am not."

"You fool," said Shirley, after hours of letting this too long dammed-up confession flow from him. "You darling, blessed, adorable idiot. The only thing, Sterling, that has made all these late years of mine the grand luminous years that they have been, is the fact that you are not one of us in the sense you mean. Fool. Darling idiot. Please, please don't sit there pretending you don't know what I mean. Sterling—how terrible it would be if really you were of us."

Suddenly, seeing her there in a radiance that was as beautiful as it was unmistakable to him, Sterling did see . . . and seeing, came to bless the fact that he was not one of them!

Biblical "Slips"

Our recent note on a clergyman's discovery that a Bible verse ran: "Gird up thy lions," instead of "loins," brought from correspondents letters concerning other errors that have slipped into this and kindred religious works. Thus in one Bible an error in punctuation made a certain passage run: "The wicked flee, when no man pursueth the righteous, as is bold as a lion."

And the omission of a letter in a passage in the Book of Common Prayer made it run: "We shall all be hanged in the twinkling of an eye."—Boston Transcript.

Coal Mined in Great Britain Since Year 1239

The first charter giving liberty to the town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne to dig coal was granted by Henry III in 1239, and was denominated "sea coal" on account of its being shipped to places at a distance. In the year 1281, this trade had so extended that laws were passed for its regulation.

In Scotland coal was worked at about the same time and a charter was granted in 1291, in favor of the abbot and convent of Dumfries, in the county of Fife, giving the right of digging coal to the lands of Pittencrieff, adjoining the convent.

Coal began to be used for smelting about the beginning of the seventeenth century.

The working of coal gradually increased until the beginning of the eighteenth century, when the steam engine was brought forward in the year 1705, and was applied to collieries in the vicinity of Newcastle about the year 1715. This engine produced a new era in the mining concerns at Great Britain and collieries were opened in every quarter and the coal trade increased to an astonishing extent.

In Old Verona

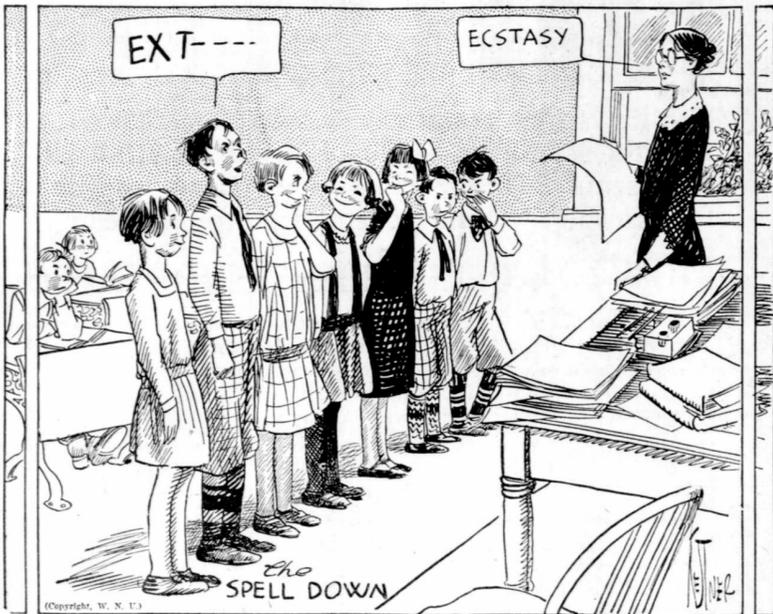

If tourists from the American continent can pass by with small notice the dubious, though beautiful and romantic tomb of Juliet, they will find much to occupy their time while visiting the interesting old Italian city of Verona. Centuries of art and history have combined to make this city, girt about by picturesque hills and encompassed by the murmuring Adige, one of the noblest. The famous Arena and Roman theater date back before the Christian era, and its prosperity under the overlordship of the Della Scala in the Middle Ages gave the city much of its architectural treasure. Noteworthy for artists is the varied scene in the Piazza delle Erbe, and one should see the Della Scala tombs, the cathedral and St. Zeno.

CHAPTER I

"Smoke, old chum, there's something afloat out there to the south." Zars pricked the massive black-and-white husky raised slant eyes to the speaker.

Jim Stuart watched a distant object, which regularly disappeared, to lift again on the white crest of the running seas.

"Acts like a filled canoe, Smoke. I'm going to get the glasses."

Crossing the clearing, where the grass grew thickly among the stumps, to the group of white-washed log buildings of the little fur post, he entered the tradehouse.

"Looks like a cupized canoe out there, Omar," Stuart said to the broad-backed figure seated cross-legged on the floor, shaping with a drawknife a slab of birch into a paddle.

The half-breed lifted a swart, square face, seamed with lines, his mouth widening to a grin, as he said: "Wal, w'at you do? Dis canoe come from Nor-Wes' compagne; eet ees good t'ing, eh?"

"You're too bitter, Omar," said the factor of Sunset House. "We can't let men drown before our eyes even if they are from LeBlond's."

Stuart took his service binoculars from the case and joined the dog who waited for him at the door. Crossing the clearing to the shore, he focused the glasses on the wind-hurled lake. As he found the drifting object he sought, his lips moved in a muttered: "Man hanging to that boat! How long can he last?"

Jim started on a run for the tradehouse. "Come on, Omar! There's some one with that filled canoe. Come on! We'll take the peterboro!"

The lined face of the half-breed stiffened in a black frown. "We fill, too, out dere! Tough job—put de canoe into dat wind!"

Stuart laughed as he started for the shore, followed reluctantly by his man. "What! The best canoe man I ever saw—afraid of that water?" he taunted. "You sure hate that LeBlond outfit! But we'll show this fellow some paddling!"

Out into the welter of wind-driven seas went the plunging canoe. For a mile, the dogged "churn-swish, churn-swish" of maple blades fought the fury of the southwester. On they went for a space, then swung toward the submerged boat. The canoes were within short rifle shot of each other when Jim saw the dark head beside the submerged craft move as if to signal the approaching boat.

"He's all right!" panted Stuart. "He'll hang on! A boy!"

Rails awash, the filled canoe bore down on the laboring peterboro. As the rescuing boat worked closer a huge comber mounded over the wallowing craft burying the dark head beside it. Jim dug desperately with his paddle, fearful of what the lifting boat would reveal. But as the canoe rose he saw the head still there, with the arms circling a thwart.

"Good boy!" muttered the bowman. Closer crept the peterboro. Again the boat was drowned in a ridge of black water, topped with foam. Then, as the dark head appeared, the eyes of the toiling bowman widened in amazement.

"A girl!"

His paddle tore at the water. Over his shoulder he shouted: "It's a girl!"

It was dangerous work—edging the peterboro alongside a filled boat yawing in that sea. But Omar Boisvert was a magician with a paddle, and did not hesitate. As they reached the canoe the half-drowned girl turned a face gray from exhaustion and the drenching of the seas, and her blue lips moved.

While Omar fought to hold his bow into the wind against the drag of the yawing canoe, Stuart looked desperately to get the limp body of the girl into the boat without rolling them under a lifting sea. At last, she was in the peterboro, and, as a ridge of water broke at the bow, they cleared the boat and headed for Sunset House.

"A white girl—from LeBlond's! Short hair, whipcord knickers—who can she be?" wondered Jim as his stiff arms drove his paddle. He glanced over his shoulder at the huddled figure of his drenched passenger covered by his coat. "Cold!" he shouted to the shivering girl. "Get down, out of the wind!"

She nodded, with a gallant attempt at a smile, as he encouraged: "Only a few minutes now!"

But two miles of running "white horses" separated the canoe, yawing in the following sea, from the post, and the kneeling paddler had his work cut out.

At length, leaping into the shoal water, Stuart eased the boat in to the beach at the post; then lifted the girl, blue with cold, from the boat.

"Can you walk?" he asked, conscious of the thickness of her drenched, crow-black hair. "Take my arm."

The girl's stiff legs, numb from exposure to water and wind, moved uncertainly. With a shrug she raised black eyes to the man who supported her, wondering if he dared pick her up and run to the warm kitchen of Omar's cabin. "I make you—much trouble," she replied through chattering teeth. "You take me—out of—that wet lake. Now you must—dry me."

At the door of her cabin the amazed Marthe, wife of Omar, met them with wide and disapproving eyes. Jim Stuart with a short-haired girl wearing a man's coat, a man's trousers, a man's high laced boots! A costume for women unknown in Kivedia.

"W'at—w'at you do, Meester Jeem?" she feebly gasped, overwhelmed with embarrassment.

"She's been in the lake, Marthe," explained Stuart. "She upset and drifted across from LeBlond's. Needs hot soup and a fire—quick! I'll rustle dry clothes for you, Miss—Miss—"

With a flash of white teeth the girl laughed: "Oh, didn't you guess? I'm Aurore LeBlond!"

Jim Stuart was startled. The blood showed in his tanned cheeks as he replied: "No, I didn't know." Then he said: "Marthe will take care of you, Miss LeBlond. Get those wet clothes off and dry out. My cook will have some supper for you shortly."

LeBlond's daughter, at Sunset House! Impossible to get her back across that lake until the wind died! What a situation! What would LeBlond, his rival and enemy, do? He'd saved the life of LeBlond's girl. It was a huge joke on the free-trader. Now what would he do?

As the girl followed the Ojibwa woman into the log house, she turned in the doorway and called to Stuart: "Merci, monsieur, oh very many thanks for saving me from a watery grave!"

With a laugh she disappeared.

"Well, Omar, she's a cool one! Half frozen in those clammy clothes, she stops to make fun of our breaking our backs to reach her before she let go that canoe. Gratitude, eh—and nerve?"

"Ah-hah!" grunted the half-breed. "Louis LeBlond, he ees lak dat. He don't care for nobodee. How you get her home?"

"Get her back—against this wind? She'll have to stay till it drops."

With a grunt Omar stopped in his tracks, his face black with disapproval. "You know w'at dat mean?"

"I know. He'll make a fuss, no doubt, but there's no help for it. She can sleep in my quarters with old Sarah. I'll stay with you."

"We breeng her back to LeBlond's eed de morn' an' we have trouble! You don't know dat feller."

"No, I don't suppose I do, Omar. But I know that he's putting us out of business, and that will mean all our work here is lost. No, I don't know LeBlond, but he'll know me before I quit."

The squat Sarah, the Scotch-Ojibwa who presided over Jim Stuart's kitchen, was in a ferment of irritation, as she bustled about her stove. She had seen the canoe land and watched Stuart, followed by Omar, lead what she imagined a half-drowned boy to the cabin. Then, to her astonishment and wrath, Stuart had appeared to announce that this girl in men's clothes—this shameless daughter of his rival across the lake, was to be fed.

With her fire well started and the kettles on, the outraged Sarah had lost no time in shuffling over to the rear entrance of Omar's cabin for a whispered council of war with the equally indignant Marthe. Yes, it was true what Sarah had seen. Short hair and men's breeches! No Ojibwa woman would bring shame to her sex by shearing her hair, and as for the "gibodiegawson"—the breeches? Marthe's rolling eyes and hunched shoulders eloquently portrayed her thoughts. But then, some white women are mad!

With much wagging of dark, braided heads the women parted.

Jim Stuart's knock at the door of Omar's cabin brought the reply: "Coming!"

Shortly the door opened and the daughter of the man who was rapidly driving him out of the fur trade at Mitawangagama—Ojibwa for the Lake of the Sand Beaches—stood in dry woolen blouse caught at the neck by a scarf of crimson silk, and whipcord; on her stockinged feet a pair of the begrudging Marthe's beaded moccasins.

"You're warm again—no chill?" he asked, politely aware of the picture she made in the frame of the door.

"Yes, my heroic rescuer," she began archly, "and now Monsieur Sourface, that I'm warm and dry again and look less like a drowned fish, do you not like me better?"

The fluttering of her black hair in the wind; the allure of her thick-lashed eyes; the clean lines of her build held the appraising sweep of Stuart's gaze, as she posed, hands on hips, free of all self-consciousness, watching him in frank amusement.

"No, Miss LeBlond," he replied in mock gravity, "I think I prefer you as a 'drowned fish.' You were then more respectful to your 'heroic rescuer.'"

"But my hair was plastered with water and my eyes red!" she objected, vehemently. "See it now—how it waves when it's dry!"

"Yes, it's very—nice!" he replied, agnost at her amazing candor, as he walked beside her toward his quarters. So this was the new girl, the younger generation! He had not been "outside," down to the railroad and civilization, since his discharge from the army on his return from France. But in the stray papers and magazines which had reached him in the hinterlands of Kivedia, he had read of the manners and dress of the younger generation. The frankness of this "specimen," however, was startling.

He said, "Now, you haven't told me how you happened to paddle that canoe out from your shore past the lee of the islands. You see what a risk you took?"

"Oh, I was tired of listening to that fool, Paul Paradis," she explained, "and it wasn't rough inside the islands. But, outside, before I knew it, the wind caught me and I couldn't turn back. You know the rest."

"You had a close shave, Miss LeBlond," he said quietly, wondering at her seeming lack of gratitude for the battle two men had made with wind and sea for her life.

She turned impulsively, placing a hand on his arm, as his face sobered. "You don't have to tell me that," she said, and the railery left her brilliant eyes. "I died out there, today, I knew I couldn't last—hang on, much longer. . . . Then I saw you coming!"

He looked suspiciously at her dark face. Was she acting? But the straight gaze which met his betokened sincerity.

"I thought you didn't know," he said, lamely.

"Didn't know?" she cried, almost savagely. "You think me a fool!" Then, swiftly, her mood changed.

"Ah, I will now make amends to my heroic deliverer from the raging waters of Mitawangagama—is that right?—The Lake of the Sand Beaches!" she laughed. "Sir, you have rescued a water-logged maid from the fishes! She will never forget your bravery—or your surprise at her whippersnappers! She thanks you with all the heart she has—left!" Aurore LeBlond bowed grotesquely, until her hair touched the long grass of the clearing.

He watched her in silence, with a quizzical smile, puzzled, wondering, half-charmed, partly repelled. "Let's see what Sarah has got for us," he suggested. "I'm hungry, aren't you?"

"Starved! She won't poison me, will she? Marthe's eyes snapped fire when she saw me in these." The girl lifted a shapely leg and curled her toes in the smeared moccasins, far too generous in size for her foot.

"You did startle them—in those," she laughed. "You rather startled me; I haven't been in Winnipeg since the war."

"You poor man!"

"No, I've lived in Winnipeg—and prefer this. Hello, Smoke!" Bursting from the spruce at the edge of the clearing where he had been hunting rabbits, Smoke loped up to the man and girl.

"What a handsome dog!" she cried. "Why, he's much larger than any of father's! Where did you get him?"

"He's a Hudson's Straits Ungava," said Jim, proudly.

"He's a raving beauty. The darling! Will he let me touch him? Most of father's won't."

"Smoke, this is a friend of mine," said Jim. "Shake hands with her!"

With a red grin which bared his formidable tusks, the Ungava raised a hairy paw, which the girl took.

"Smoke," she said, with a laugh, as the dog's slant eyes watched his master's face. "You're not polite; you don't look at the lady when you shake hands."

"Like his master, he's embarrassed by beautiful ladies," said Jim, as they left the dog and entered the house.

"Is that why you prefer this life to Winnipeg—because of your shyness of the ladies? But you'll be lonely when this beautiful lady goes," she challenged.

Here indeed was no false modesty. "What makes you think so?" he teased. "Oh, every one is. But you're hardly polite. How nice and comfortable you are here!" She went on, her eyes moving from the chairs built of spruce and birch in the round, the caribou and bear-skin rugs, to walls bare except for moose-horn gun-rack and two shelves of books.

He reddened under his tan. "You're laughing at my humble quarters. They're not much like your father's place, are they?"

Ignoring his remark, she faced him with: "Why do you men hate each other? Can't you trade with the Indians without fighting?"

Stuart laughed at her frankness. "We haven't exactly got to fighting yet; but I admit he's making it pretty rough for me."

They sat down at the table and the square-built Sarah appeared, her copper skin red from cooking, a large pink bow bobbing bravely from her dusky braids. With a withering look at Jim's guest from her small eyes, she deposited a dish of steaming caribou stew, to be followed by broiled whitefish, hot biscuit, tea and wild strawberries.

"Dear me, but I'm hungry!" exclaimed the girl, as the outraged and inquisitive Ojibwa woman, hands on hips, boldly scrutinized her from bobbed hair to whipcord knickers—to gain a better view of which the cook coolly stepped back and circled her chair.

Then, aware of the exhaustive inspection from the rear by the fascinated and shocked Sarah, the girl rose and turned to the gasping cook: "Would you like to see my knickers?" she asked, wheeling on her toes. "You don't wear them, do you? You'd find them very comfortable."

Choking with confusion, the overwhelmed Sarah fled to the kitchen, while Stuart shook with laughter.

"You're too much for Sarah. She was certainly hypnotized by your gibodiegawson."

"My what?"

"Your gibodiegawson—your pan-whippersnappers!"

"Mon Dieu! Are they as awful as that?" she cried, overcome by the Ojibwa equivalent. "What did you call them? Gibo-di-what? No wonder Marthe and Sarah are shocked! Think of a woman wearing anything with such a name! Gibo-di—" and she broke into shouts of laughter.

"Gibodiegawson," he repeated.

"Gibo-di-eg-wason!" she faltered, breathlessly, "gibos, for short! Wait till they hear that in Winnipeg! They'll never wear 'em again!"

Stuart regarded his guest with unconcerned curiosity. Buried in the hinterlands since the war, he had had no contact with the new girl. But now, it appeared, he was being offered a rare opportunity for the study of the species.

"There won't be much left of me when Sarah and Marthe get their heads together, but you're not really shocked, Monsieur Stuart. With us, all women wear them for sport."

"No, indeed, I'm not shocked," he laughed, his eyes shifting from her dusky head to the well-shaped hand busy with her fork. "We saw lots of them in France. But I'm wondering just how your being here will strike your father. It's going to blow all night, Miss LeBlond, and I don't see how we can get you home."

"So you're worried over what Marthe and Sarah will think if you can't rid yourself of your guest, Mr. Stuart?" she suggested with a curl of a full red lip.

"I'm wondering how your father will take it. How will he like it when he learns that you've been here?"

She shrugged. "My father adores his unworthy daughter. He will love you for what you did this afternoon. The poor man must think I'm in the lake, now. He'll be insane with worry! Poor dad!"

A PROCLAMATION

To the Chairmen of the County Boards, The Treasurers, Sheriffs and District Attorneys of the several counties of the State of Wisconsin:

A law enacted in the Special Session of the Legislature allowed municipalities to extend the time for the payment of taxes on real estate until June 1st. Many municipalities granted this extension, and many taxpayers took advantage of it. While this law was enacted, it was hoped that economic conditions might have improved by June, instead they have become more critical. In this emergency the State should give every relief possible to hard-pressed taxpayers.

Under the statutes, the sale of delinquent taxes on real estate is to commence on the second Tuesday in June and the next succeeding days (Sec. 74.39). This will not prevent adjourning the tax sale from day to day until October 15th.

The list of delinquent personal property should, under the statutes, have been turned over by the County Treasurers in April (Sec. 74.29), although I believe this has not yet been done in many counties. Since the counties cannot charge back to the local units the uncollectible personal property taxes until next March (Sec. 74.31), there is no practical reason why the seizure and sale of personal property for delinquent taxes could not also be postponed until after October 15th.

I therefore request:

(1) That all County Treasurers adjourn the sale of delinquent taxes on real estate now set for the second Tuesday in June, from day to day (entering the order of adjournment daily) until October 15th. The treasurer may select and offer each day some parcel upon which the County holds a prior certificate, which will bring the suggested procedure clearly within the language of Wood v. Meyer. 36 Wis. 308

(2) That all County Treasurers refrain until October 15, 1932 from delivery of warrants for levying upon personal property for delinquent taxes thereon, as set forth in Sec. 74.29 and 74.30, excepting in cases where attempts are made to remove or otherwise dispose of personal property to evade taxes.

As the time for the tax sale is near, I suggest that the officers in each county to whom this proclamation is addressed consult with each other and with such other officers as they deem advisable, in order that there may be uniformity of action and an absence of confusion.

In Testimony Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of Wisconsin to be affixed. Done at the Capitol, in the City of Madison, this eleventh day of June, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand and nine hundred and thirty-two.

Wisconsin industries have furnished the people of this country with many products that have been of benefit to humanity.

One of the finest of these products of home industry is the Buckstaff Burial Vault. It provides comfort for the bereaved, and knowledge that their departed are afforded lasting protection from ground waters and burrowing animals.

This protection adds only moderately to the cost of the funeral, but the value of the lasting comfort it provides is immeasurable.

SAVINGS PLAN GONE WRONG

Another savings plan has gone wrong. Mrs. C. E. Pike, of Hirmingham, had saved up to $4,600. She kept it sewed up in a mattress, but somebody must have seen her making a deposit, for last week, while the family were away attending the air carnival at the Municipal Airport, somebody made a run on the hiding place, and when she got home her money was gone. Valuable jewelry in the house had been untouched.

"Eggs have long been a favorite food. Not only do eggs build muscle but they also supply some of the necessary vitamins and other valuable minerals which the body needs. For the child, eggs are especially necessary." -- from Why Not Eggs, a recent circular by the College of Agriculture, Madison.

The name of John H. Hendricks of the town of Ashford has been prominently mentioned as the logical candidate for the office of member of the assembly in the second district of Fond du Lac county on the Republican ticket. Mr. Hendricks is a son of the late J. A. Hendricks and grandson of Andrew Hendricks, who settled in the town of Ashford about 1850 and proved to be a substantial pioneer, as to efficiency, principle and character. Mr. Hendricks has few equals, but no superiors.

Sudan grass, a crop first brought to this country from Africa in 1909, has already established itself in the agriculture of Wisconsin as one of the most easily grown and dependable annual hay and pasture crops. Many farms now are growing it as a pasture crop to supply grazing when other pastures are short.

Doctor of Discretion

Study the policy of the successful business firm and you usually find that it has a "Doctor of Discretion" directing its activities. Just like O. K. Kunnel B.B.M., who knows that letter heads and printed matter sent out by his firm establishes the "character" of that firm. Therefore they must be of the best. In our commercial printing department we produce letter heads and printed matter for many of the most successful business firms in Kewaskum. Let us submit samples and quote prices on your next printing order. No obligation on your part.
