FRENCH AUTO BUILT WITH EYE TO WORLD'S RECORD

France's first serious bid for world speed records on land materialized recently in a test on the Saint-Germain road, outside of Paris. This huge machine, designed and constructed by M. Stapp, a French automotive engineer, was given its inaugural trial spin. The super-powered car resembles in some details the famous Bluebird driven by Sir Malcolm Campbell, English holder of the present world mark.

How It Started By Jean Newton

WHY IS IT "RIGHTEOUS"?

RIGHTEOUS is a word whose use is confined almost exclusively to the Bible, although it is frequently found in satirical reference in other publications or every-day speech. Probably few people are acquainted with the curious derivation of "righteous," but it has an interesting origin and one which throws light on the queer ways words have.

Centuries ago, "righteous" was spelled "ryghtwys." As might be surmised, this meant exactly what it reads, that it—right and wise.

The root of the word or compound was the Latin "rectus," a modification of "regere" from the same language, meaning "to direct, to guide, to rule."

From this fact, it can be seen that "righteous" in its original significance implied the right to be the master of others because of one's good behavior. Subsequently it acquired the meaning it has today.

Texas Man an Illegal Voter for 36 Years

Gainesville, Texas.—Although not an American citizen, for 36 years Thomas S. Crawford, division superintendent of the Santa Fe railroad, through misinformation has voted in Texas and national elections.

He hopes to vote in the election this fall, but as a bona fide American citizen.

Crawford came to America from Ireland when he was seventeen and settled in Memphis, Tenn., with two uncles. The uncles told him they would attend to the naturalization and Crawford passed up the worry.

He came to Texas shortly afterwards, believing he was a full-fledged citizen.

A few days ago he began wondering how he could, if necessary, prove his citizenship as he had no naturalization papers. On inquiry at the naturalization department in Fort Worth, he learned he never had been naturalized.

"It never entered into my mind about heading citizenship papers for in 1913 I made a trip to Europe and was admitted without a passport and re-admitted to the United States when I came back," Crawford said.

"One reason the theater business is bad," said Mike Jacobs, the big shot among ticket brokers, "is that in these days persons pick their spots."

"What do you mean by that?" I asked him.

"Why," said Mr. Jacobs, "in the old days, if you didn't have seats for the show they demanded, you could sell them seats for some other show. That frequently was very useful, as you might have tickets for a show you were trying to boost. But you can't do that any more. The customers accept no substitutes. They make up their minds how many shows they can afford to see, and then they budget their money among the shows they particularly wish to see. If you don't happen to have the reservations they want, they walk out on you and go to a movie. As a result, a few hits are doing all the real business. In the good old days," said Mike sadly, "it was not like that at all. Everybody had money and would spend it for almost any sort of entertainment. Now they have become very hard-boiled."

Hard Task for Mountain Climbers

Washington.—Nanga Parbat is to be attacked this summer.

This means that the world's eighth highest mountain will be stormed by climbers intent on conquering heights greater than any ever before attained by man. The party of mountaineers, consisting of Germans and Americans, recently arrived in India, where local guides will be added. A bulletin from the National Geographic society tells of this mountain that has lured climbers half around the world.

"Although Nanga Parbat with an altitude of 26,629 feet, is eighth among the world's peaks," says the bulletin, "it probably ranks much closer to the top of the list when difficulty in climbing is considered. It rises from a relatively low base, is furrowed by tremendous glaciers, and is surrounded by numerous large boulder-covered mo-tainous on the lower slopes that must be clambered over before the real climb starts. The top mile consists largely of sheer precipices.

Climbers can be followed to a certain point; but above the glaciers on the south side there is 15,000 feet still to go, and on the north side, 12,000 feet.

"Although this mountain is probably as difficult to scale as any, save one or two, in Asia, it has one advantage in the accessibility of its base. The Gilgit trail, from Srinagar, capital of Kashmir, to Gilgit and on to Chinese

SOME SUMMER SALADS

SOME of these salads are more adapted for entertaining than for every day's use:

Butterfly Salad.—Split a small banana into halves and dip into lemon juice to keep it from discoloring. On either side of the banana, place on lettuce, put half slices of pineapple to form the wings to the banana body, the rounded edge toward the banana. Garnish the wing with red and yellow aspics or fruit gelatins. Garnish the banana with chopped ripe olives and capers. Serve with french dressing after being well chilled.

Beach Club Salad.—Fill a scalloped grapefruit shell with shredded lettuce and diced grapefruit which have been well mixed with mayonnaise. Decorate the top with halved cherries. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Chicken Salad.—Dice cooked seasoned chicken and add one-third of the amount of cooked tender veal also diced; add an equal quantity of diced celery and marinate an hour or more with french dressing. Take two or three hard cooked eggs coarsely cut, a teaspoonful of chopped capers and a teaspoonful of mayonnaise. Put into a mold to shape. Turn out on a bed of lettuce on a chilled platter and serve garnished with capers and quartered hard cooked eggs.

Cheese Salad.—Arrange a nest of shredded lettuce and place on it finely shredded celery, apples and radishes all cut into small shreds. Mix with creamy mayonnaise, using two tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise to a half cupful of whipped cream. Decorate with rings of olives in the center of which has been piped a rose of cream cheese. Serve with french dressing.

A felt blackboard eraser is best in cleaning the top of the kitchen stove. If grease gets on the stove the eraser should be used while the stove is still hot. The eraser is much more satisfactory than a cloth and it keeps the hands from getting soiled.

When cooking sour fruit add a pinch of carbonate of soda to the juice and it will require less sugar.

Use muffin tins for baking tomatoes, apples, stuffed peppers, onions, etc. They will keep their shape much better. Mold jellies also in muffin tins if you have no individual molds, turn on plates and place hot towel over them and they slip out easily.

Australian Bear Dubbed World's Champion Idler

Boston.—The world's champion loafer is Australia's koala, in the opinion of Dr. G. M. Allen, vice president of the Boston Society of Natural History, who last year explored the land "down under."

The koala, he says, is a sort of bear that is perfectly happy to park all day in a convenient tree crotch.

Old Gobbler Guards Children on Estate

Leonardtown, Md.—There is an old turkey gobbler here that is causing widespread interest in his dog-like instincts.

GERMAN "WANDERING BIRDS" ON TOUR

These gay German youths, ranging in age from eighteen to twenty-six years, paused in their round-the-world jaunt to see the spectacular sights of Manhattan. Then they struck out on foot for the Pacific coast, there to embark for Japan. The boys are paying their own traveling expenses but they are carrying musical instruments with them on the long trek in order to give impromptu concerts of German folk songs and old-time ballads along the way. They are known as "Wandervoegel"—"Wandering birds."

Stylish Feet Via Kid Shoecraft

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

That a costume can be successful and outstanding only in so far as it is underwritten with accessories which are pre-eminently correct and attractive is a lesson which is being instilled into the minds of the present generation with ever increasing emphasis.

This sensitiveness to perfection down to the minutest detail of the costume is becoming more acute among the fair sex with each passing year. Especially is the call for that which is beautiful and chic heard in the realm of modern footwear. Full well does every style-minded woman of today realize that shoes are far more than a mere covering for the feet. Not only must they sound an esthetic note in the scheme of things but there must be that about them which is so distinctively new as to proclaim them of latest creation.

As every woman knows there is no media for dainty shoes which so convincingly carries an air of refinement as soft exquisite kid. This season stresses that fact to a greater degree than ever, for the kidskin has become the idol of the hour so far as shoe artistry is concerned.

Brown-trimmed white kid shoes are particularly good style. The young woman in the picture who is gazing so admiringly at her smartly shod feet has subscribed to the brown-and-white vogue. Her dress is a two-piece brown-and-white cotton mesh. It is everything it should be to quality as supremely modish. Her swanky white kid pumps are trimmed in two tones of brown. These identical shades of brown reappear in the striped scarf collar of the dress.

A shoe of flattering appearance and one which is adaptable for wear at any time of the day is the sandal which has an unusual use of cord laces which hold the shoe together in a draw-string fashion as illustrated in the top little inset picture. This olympic sandal, as it is called, is one of the prettiest, most becoming-to-the-feet type of shoes brought out this season. The original of the model pictured is in brown and fawn tones of color, but the same shoe is equally as adorable in the self-kid, exquisitely soft kid. The same shoe is adorned in contrast color in the self-kid trimmings. In white it is very charming worn with the white frock or suit, its color accent in the trimming repeating certain bright or pastel tones found in the scarf and other accessories which complement the ensemble.

A wardrobe of footwear which does not include at least one pair of gentle black shoes is sadly lacking in one of the real essentials to good dressing. The stunning model shown in the lower inset strikes a high spot in shoecraft. Its sophisticated simplicity of lines makes it a classic.

New Blues Are Popular as Are Beige Outfits

In many years fashion's favor of black, even for spring, has been so strong that you felt as if you were called upon to choose between black and black!

This year, unless black turns out to be a dark horse, it will be just an "also ran" in the race.

Those who want to depart from the somber will have a delightful dilemma. There are blues, from a bright dark blue to the deepest navy; there is beige, playing a return engagement by request, after many seasons of absence from the fashion scene; there are rust reds and soft greens, and rich browns—many of the latter used in combination with blue, beige and black. For color contrast is still important, but in less obvious versions than ran riot last spring.

Suit jackets are short, high-waisted, and very jaunty. Coats are long, broad-shouldered, and definitely fitted through the body.

Tucking Is Beautifier of Even Simplest Frock

Tucking, that prime beautifier of even the simplest frock is very much in evidence since this material lends itself definitely to that form of ornamentation, just as it does to pleats and drillings.

Such frocks can easily become professionally girlish which is just another way of calling them insipid, but the clever designer watches for this and generally introduces some restraining touch that gives a slightly tailored air to the model. It is this balance that marks the fine garment as being such and, so is as important as it is in any other field where individuality rules.

Four Fabrics Used in Milady's New Sport Coat

Four materials are used to make a fabric for madame's spring sports coat. One of the smartest fabrics for spring wear is woven of silk, artificial silk, cotton and wool.

It is beige streaked with brown threads and resembles a loose gunnysack weave.

COLOR CONTRAST

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Daring color contrasts, the more daring the smarter, is fashion's idea of things this season. It is in the sports realm that the theory is working out with most pronounced success, and along most original lines. For instance, there's the little white sports dress in the picture. It is one of the likable types made of spongy durne mesh. This frock is particularly interesting because it says sports with a decided, energetic accent. Best of all it is in any other field where individuality rules.

Style Gleanings From Fashion Centers

Lightweight fleecy woolsens in polo-coat types are good.

Lacy woolsens in eggshell or pastel are used over contrasting linings.

Don't hesitate to wear fabric gloves this summer, for they have fashion's approval.

"Bordeaux red"—a deep shade varying between wine and American Beauty—is combined with pink in an effective manner.

Ostrich woolsens in pastels and vivid shades continue in favor.

Colored patent leather trims milady's costume from head to hem.

Raspberry red and lavender blue are fashion's newest exotic combination.

Braided belts of three-colored ribbon are used for negligees.

Navy blue stockings are decidedly smart when they are very sheer of the mesh.

Leaders in Freedom's Cause

(1)—FRIEDRICH WILHELM VON STEUBEN. Prussian general who fought for independence. His untiring efforts converted the almost disheartened American handful of patriots into a disciplined and effective army.
 (2)—NATHANAEL GREENE. The Scipio Africanus of the Revolution. He saved the South by the brilliant strategy that ruined Cornwallis.
 (3)—JOHANN DE KALB. Prominent military figure in the War for independence. He died of eleven wounds at the Battle of Camden.
 (4)—ETHAN ALLEN. Hero of Ticonderoga. Described in Revolutionary annals as "A real bucko, of almost gigantic stature and strength, with a florid idea of freedom as the fortune of the brave, and no pale idea of himself."

That Glorious Day at King's Mountain

The battle on the summit of King's Mountain, rising above the border of the two Carolinas, was unlike any other in the Revolution; it was as decisive a victory as ever was won anywhere, and was a real turning point in the War of Independence. Even George Washington had not known that there was an army in that part of the country to oppose the insolent and triumphant British until he heard about the battle, which in a general order he called "a proof of the spirit and resources of the country." Col. Patrick Ferguson had been killed; his army destroyed or captured, and his commander, Cornwallis, forced to halt his hitherto unimpeded march.

The Carolinians were not recognized by Great Britain as being at war. Those opposing the British were treated as rebels, traitors and outlaws. The British went through the country hanging, shooting, pillaging and burning. The Tories—Americans on the side of the British—were the worst of the lot.

Planters fleeing from these men and these conditions crossed the mountains and warned the settlers in what are now the states of Tennessee and Kentucky. It was there the battle of King's Mountain started. Col. John Sevier of Tennessee and Col. Isaac Shelby in Kentucky, noted Indian fighters, got together, rallied their followers and came across the mountains to get Ferguson—the British leader sweeping farthest west. The call was sent to other Virginians and Carolinians, and at the great rendezvous at Sycamore Shoals on the Holston they were joined by William Campbell, McDowell, Cleveland, Hill, Hambricht and others leading their parties of mountaineers with very little order or discipline.

The battle lasted just one hour and five minutes, Colonel Ferguson and 206 of his men had been killed; 128 had been wounded and 600 were surrendered by De Peyster. The Americans had lost 28 killed and 62 wounded. The British army was not merely defeated; it was destroyed. The American soldiers recognizing some notorious Tories among the captives proceeded to hang about ten of them, but the officers made them stop. The number of men on both sides has been variously given. The 1929 edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica gives the British 1,000 loyalist militia (colonists) and 100 Provincial Rangers; the American "backwoodsmen" were placed at 900.

After this fight the American loyalists were afraid to show their heads, while the patriots came out more boldly. The North Carolina and Virginia legislatures became braver and more energetic, while the British under Cornwallis became discouraged and began to retreat. Things cleared up for the struggling Colonists. There followed the battles of Cowpens, Guilford Court-house, Eutaw Springs and Yorktown—and independence.

Honor and Fame to Brave 'Mad Anthony'

A very tipsy Continental soldier ran afoul of that rigorous disciplinarian, Brig. Gen. Anthony Wayne, one night. He gave the man a verbal dressing down, it is related. The discussion aroused admiration in all present, General Wayne being able with his language, and he then threw the fellow into the guardhouse.

"My, the general's mad at me," the intoxicated patriot commented, even proudly, "It's 'Mad Anthony Wayne' that's what he is—Mad Anthony Wayne!"

That, it is reported, is the origin of the nickname given one of the greatest fighters of the American Revolution, though it is more likely that this able and beloved leader of men, who forged the Scotch-Irish and Pennsylvania Dutch farmers of the "Pennsylvania Line" into the toughest fighting outfit of the war, earned his designation by his reckless, dashing, eager courage.

If he couldn't go through, Wayne would go around, but he preferred to go through. He was the Stonewall Jackson of the Revolution.

Stony Point, Monmouth, Brandywine, Germantown—scores of great and lesser fields of the Revolution—saw Wayne's valor and his military ability. He loved to fight and he could fight. With serene contempt of danger and death he went into many a battle certain that he didn't have a chance to come back alive, but that only made him, apparently, bolder. When a bullet hit him in the head during the gallant onslaught at Stony Point, he was sure he was going to die and insisted on being carried up through the battle so he could breathe his last within the captured fort. He lived, and this capture, which "or that time saved the Revolutionary cause, was hailed as one of the brilliant military exploits of the war.

After the war, when British agents stirred up Indian warfare in the North-west territory, Generals Harmar and St. Clair suffered notable defeats from the red warriors. President Washington, troubled by his fears that Wayne was brave and nothing else, nevertheless sent him on to handle the situation—a feather in Wayne's cap, because he and St. Clair had long been bitter enemies. Wayne's army was pretty much drilled, and he spent months drilling, drilling, drilling, turning his men into soldiers who decisively smashed the Indian power at Fallen Timbers. The Indians called him "Black Snake" because he worked so fast.

General Wayne returned to his command to receive from British garrisons the northern forts they held so long after the Revolution. Moving eastward again, he was stricken with gout, complicated by an old wound in his leg. Not quite fifty-two years old, he died December 14, 1796, at Presque Isle—Erie, Pa.—Philadelphia Ledger.

TICONDEROGA

"In the Name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress!"

Paine's Pen Factor in British Defeat

All America bows reverently to the memory of George Washington. But what of the memory of another who, with only his pen, helped as much as any in achieving Washington's triumph?

Tom Paine, who arose to aid America in its darkest hour, and for a reward won only contempt and curses! Truly a stark reminder of the gratitude of republics, comments a writer in the Milwaukee Journal.

The Colonists five months after declaring their independence were well-nigh beaten. Across New Jersey's frozen marshes Washington's ragged remnant of an army fled desperately. Two days before Christmas, 1776, General Washington resolved, as a last desperate measure, to make a surprise attack upon the Hessians at Trenton. But the chances of victory were so small! The Americans, frozen, starved and discouraged, were losers almost before they started. As the American commander sat gloomily figuring his chances a pamphlet was brought in, fresh from Philadelphia.

"The Crisis" was the title and "Common Sense" was the writer. Washington read, then shouted in joy.

The drums were sounded, the soldiers were gathered into groups and the officers, by torchlight, read to them the words of the pamphlet:

"These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country, but he that stands it now deserves the love and thanks of man and woman. Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered, yet we have this consolation with us, that the harder the conflict the more glorious the triumph; what we obtain too cheap we esteem too lightly; 'tis dearness only that gives everything its value. Heaven knows how to put a proper price upon its goods, and it will be strange indeed, if so celestial an article as freedom should not be highly rated."

"These are the times that try men's souls" was the battle cry at Trenton.

POULTRY

BEST HOPPERS FOR THE YOUNG CHICKS

Cup Flats Recommended as Suitable.

Cup flats used for packing eggs in cases make excellent hoppers for chicks during the first week after they are hatched, the uneven surface of the cup flats holding the mash and reducing the amount of waste, advises J. C. Taylor, of the New Jersey agricultural experiment station. By using first one side of the cup flats and then the other each day their durability will be prolonged. The best results will be procured if one flat is used for each hundred chicks.

Urging that small, open-box hoppers be used after the birds are one week old, Mr. Taylor states that a very satisfactory "reel hopper" can be made at home. A trough or box 6 inches wide, 2 1/2 inches deep and 4 feet long is the hopper, with a reel 4 inches in diameter running its entire length and so adjusted at each end that it can be raised and lowered to prevent the chicks from wasting the mash. If both sides of this hopper are used 100 chicks can be fed from it at a time.

Commercial hoppers are obtainable at a moderate cost, the size to be determined by the age of the chicks. Experienced poultrymen have found the open type most economical for the feeding mash to poultry of all ages.

Water fountains for the chicks should be so constructed that they may be easily cleaned and not upset. The most satisfactory fountain for the first ten days is the earthenware bell jar with the flour pot saucer, a type of fountain suitable for 100 chicks. Large metal fountains should be used when the chicks are four weeks old.—Michigan Farmer.

Watch Eggs Intended for Hatching Purposes

In keeping eggs for setting purposes, it should be remembered that too high temperatures do more harm than chilling. A temperature of 70 degrees will start some germ development, which is very harmful, it is stated. Thus, for best hatching results, eggs should be kept at a temperature below 70 degrees, and above freezing.

Eggs generally hatch better the fresher they are, but it is sometimes necessary to save them as long as two weeks. When eggs are saved they should be turned over once or twice daily. They should be kept covered with a damp sack to help keep them cool and prevent excessive evaporation of water from them. Heavy loss of water from eggs is a cause of poor hatches and weak chicks.

Eggs should rarely be washed, because it generally opens the shell pores. This allows bacteria to get through the shells and spoil the eggs.

Worm Young Chickens

As soon as the baby chick is allowed to run on ground he is very likely to pick up worm eggs when he starts to scratch and peck for food.

For some time the presence of worm infestation is not noticeable because the worm eggs must incubate and the parasites mature before indications present themselves outwardly in the chick's appearance. It is proper to worm young pullets soon after eight weeks' age.

Spring worming aids normal growth and development of young chicks.—Prairie Farmer.

Farm Chicken Census

According to figures of the United States census bureau, California ranked seventh among the states in the number of chickens on farms in this country on April 1, 1930. The ten leading states of the nation as to number of chicks over three months of age on farms on April 1, 1930, were: Iowa, 30,666,221; Missouri, 25,197,000; Illinois, 22,081,902; Texas, 21,525,816; Kansas, 19,127,522; Ohio, 17,969,950; California, 17,467,284; Minnesota, 16,611,573; Pennsylvania, 15,446,514; Indiana, 14,082,641.

Pullorum Disease

The accuracy of the blood test for pullorum disease in mature birds has recently been submitted to an interesting test, according to a recent article in the Rural New Yorker. Blood samples were drawn from a group of birds and the poultry disease laboratories in three different states were furnished with the blood samples. Each state with the blood samples, used its own technique of testing. There was practically no variation in the reported findings from the three laboratories.

Baby Chick Cannibals

They can be checked by darkening the brooder house and avoiding overcrowding. Paint the windows blue, and cover the muslin openings with blue cloth to dim the daylight. Three hundred chicks in a 10-by-12-foot brooder will be about right. 1 inch of feeder space to the chick. Piling up in corners at night can be prevented by hanging a low-burning lantern in the brooder. Emil Peroutek, Jewell county, uses these methods.—Kansas Farmer.

His Chicks Roost Early

Poultry netting under the roosts in brooder houses serve two purposes for Ed G. Lewis, Hamilton county, Nebraska. Mr. Lewis builds roosts that slope from the floor to one side of the house and gets his chicks started roosting as early as three weeks' old. The fine mesh poultry netting keeps the chicks out of the droppings and makes it easy for chicks to get on the roosts without danger of falling through the roosts to the floor.—Capper's Farmer.

WHERE NORSE GODS MADE THEIR HOME

Gloomy Gorges That Appeal to the Tourist.

In the mysterious recesses of the gloomy gorges of the Sogne Fjord, in Norway, now a delight to the summer traveler, the gods of the old Norse mythology had their home, and these gorges were the last retreat of the trolls and gnomes, elfish spirits of fell and forest, by whom they were believed to be inhabited long after the faith of Odin, Thor and Frey had been abandoned.

The rugged peaks, deep cleft gorges and swelling bluffs are titanic.

Into some of the ravines the light of the sun does not penetrate for weeks at a time. Northward stretches the Jostedal, the largest ice field in Europe, covering an area of nearly 600 square miles, from which enormous glaciers descend. The mountains are from 2,000 to 5,000 feet in height.

The Sogne is the longest fjord in Norway. It seems to give physical expression to the sterner side of the Norwegian nature and history, to be haunted by the spirits of the Vikings, whose clamorous war cries were echoed by its rugged rocks a thousand years ago. Long stretches of its shores are wild, lonesome solitudes with somber ravines streaked with frozen mountain streams, leading from snowy slopes and icy table lands. About 100 miles in length, this grand fjord is nowhere more than four miles wide. In some places almost sheer mountain walls rise above the dark waters to a height of 4,000 feet.

Along the small tracts of comparatively level land at the foot of the mountains are popular tourist resorts, to which many people are attracted by the wildness and grandeur of the scenery. One of the most beautiful of these resorts in Balholmen, on the north shore. During the summer it is thronged with visitors. Opposite the town, on a conspicuous rock promontory, is a fine statue of Frithjof, mythical hero of Scandinavia. The view from the steamer's deck is magnificent, with the towering mountain summits all white with snow.

At other points waterfalls, from lofty bluffs, fling themselves down 2,000 feet to the waters of the fjord. All along the Sogne Fjord the scenery offers a dream world to the amateur photographer.

Buy many things you don't need, and you may be obliged to sell a few things you do need.

Score One for Horse

Something new in nature-study stories comes from North Queensland. A peaceful old nag was browsing by the roadside, perhaps pondering on the difficulties of earning a carrot in these days of motor transport, when a motorcycle with a pillion-rider ran into him. The horse was knocked down but to the utter astonishment of the cyclist, who had also taken a toss, he deliberately rose, bared his teeth, and waded into them and the machine. The latter will never compete with horse labor again; the cyclist, considerably knocked about, had to find refuge behind a stiff three-railed fence while the infuriated animal—obviously a cavalry brigadier's charger at one period of his existence—told them what he thought of them from the other side.—The Bulletin, Sydney.

In a Strange World

May—is your husband fit? Rae—is he? Say, every time he takes a nickel out of his pocket the Indian blinks at the light.

Some people go without what they want in order to get what they don't want.

The greatest thrill a mother can know

HER BABY... thriving... gaining by leaps and bounds! His back, strong and fine as a little champion's. His teeth developing perfectly. His legs straight and sturdy. His skin rosy, his flesh firm, his whole body a living promise of health—radiant, buoyant health—through the years to come!

Can any food except Nature's food build such a baby? Millions of mothers have answered Yes to this question. And now more emphatically still a world-famous clinic answers Yes.

Living proof—in millions of healthy babies

Seventy-five years ago, Gail Borden gave Eagle Brand to the mothers of America. Today, Eagle Brand—second only to mother's milk in easy digestibility—is known as a wonderful infant food the world over. Eagle Brand has raised more healthy babies than any other food, excepting mother's milk. In practically every community are healthy, sturdy boys and girls, and men and women who got their start in life on Eagle Brand. In your own community, see how these Eagle Brand ex-babies compare.

What the scientists discovered
 But newer still is the news from the world-famous baby clinic. Two physicians fed a group of 50 average babies on Eagle Brand for a period of several months—checking with care every detail of their health and growth. Bone structure. Tooth development. Weight and height gains. Blood count... And those 50 Eagle Brand babies, judged by every known test, proved themselves superbly nourished!

Mail coupon below for a free copy of "Baby's Welfare"—containing feeding instructions and directions for general care; also histories and pictures of Eagle Brand babies. We will gladly send your physician a report of above scientific test of Eagle Brand. Your grocer sells Eagle Brand—feeding instructions are on the label.

Up-to-the-Minute and Practical

Every woman wishes to be as well-dressed as possible without spending too much time or money on her clothes. That is why so many women in this community turn first to this page in this newspaper which contains the illustrated fashion articles by Miss Cherie Nicholas. For Miss Nicholas is an authority on fashions—not the freak models and the extreme styles, but the fashions in dress which the modern woman demands, those which are up-to-the-minute and at the same time economical and practical.

Be sure to look for these articles in each issue of this newspaper and then tell your women friends about them. They will be glad to know how they, too, can wear clothes which carry the message of the well-dressed woman.

STRANGER THAN FICTION

Was there ever such a complicated, unsolved mystery plot outside of the pages of a detective novel than that of the Lindbergh tragedy and its ramifications have developed into?

The kidnapping itself was sufficient-ly horrifying. The discovery weeks later that the little boy had been ruthlessly murdered, was one of the most gruesome shocks the American people have ever received. The subsequent disclosures of attempts to profit from the grief of the agonized parents make one wonder whether there is any such thing as honor and decency left in the world. The total failure of federal, state and local authorities to get any tangible evidence of the identity of the criminals is almost beyond belief. Then the suicide of the servant girl in the Morrow household, who took poison rather than face another inquiry by the police, adds still another touch of mystery and tragedy to the whole affair.

When the whole truth is known, if it ever becomes known, the plain, unadorned, straightforward story of the Lindbergh affair will take its place with the classics of detective fiction.

Highest Paid Short Fiction Writer

FANNIE HURST is the highest paid short story writer in the world today. There's a good reason for that. She knows human nature and under the magic of her touch, the people about whom she writes become real people, not mere literary creations. The plots of her stories are based on incidents from real life as it is lived every day by the common people.

Such are the stories which are appearing in this newspaper. Be sure to read them and talk to your friends about them, for they like interesting stories, too. And Fannie Hurst's stories are interesting stories.

Delavan—For the third time in four years fire destroyed the Hetzel flour mill here. The loss is estimated at $30,000.

Beaver Dam—The state convention of lodges of the Loyal Order of Moose in Wisconsin will be held here July 15, 16 and 17.

Madison—Diplomas and degrees were awarded to 1,325 seniors June 20 at graduating exercises at the University of Wisconsin.

Fond du Lac—Ethel Mae Jones has graduated from high school here with a record of never having missed a day of school in ten years.

Milwaukee—Robert M. Millard, Eau Claire, was elected grand master of the Wisconsin grand lodge F. and A. M. at the annual meeting here.

Shawano—The interstate commerce commission has authorized the North Western Railway Co. to abandon its nine-mile branch line from Mattson to Mattson Junction in Shawano county.

Milwaukee—Miss Lenore Cawker, 57, Milwaukee's samaritan to vagabond animals since 1908, is dead. She spent in personal fortune of a half million dollars in the care of homeless dog and cats.

Shawano—The Shawano county board, seeking to provide work for those on the relief list, has put more than fifty men at work clearing roadsides and other property. The men earn a $1 a day.

Antigo—By unanimous action, members of the Langlade county board have voted not to adjourn the sale of real estate on which taxes are delinquent, thus ignoring a recent proclamation by Gov. La Follette.

Baraboo—A new Indian village site, discovered near Merrimac when waters of Lake Wisconsin receded to an unusually low level, is being studied by members of the Wisconsin Archaeological society to determine its history.

Madison—A person licensed only as a chiropractor, who uses electro-therapy, violates the medical practice act and is subject to prosecution, according to an official attorney general's opinion sent authorities of Langlade county.

Ellsworth—Returning from a visit out of town, Mrs. George Richardson found her home burned to the ground. It caught fire from a defective chimney while her husband and children were "sleeking up" in anticipation of the homecoming.

Sturgeon Bay—Door county is engaged in a drive against an infestation of grasshoppers, reputedly the worst plague since 1924. A survey showed the hoppers present in every town in the county. Poison bait is being scattered to fight the pest.

Appleton—The co-operation of the state department of agriculture was pledged to the new Wisconsin milk pool by Chairman Charles L. Hill at a picnic of pool members and their families in Pierce park here. Heretofore the state department has held aloof from the new organization.

Madison—Thirty Chicago school teachers wishing to enroll for the summer session of the University of Wisconsin have offered "scrip" money received for their salaries the past few months in payment of university tuition fees. The requests have been referred by the university regents for decision.

Beloit—Convicted as an accessory to an incendiary fire in a chain store here several months ago, Mrs. Mildred Smith, 43, was sentenced to serve one year to 18 months in state prison. Her son, A. X. Smith, who assisted her in operating the store, was acquitted. The fire was set by an improvised electrical device.

Dodgeville—B. W. Doran was held in jail here after authorities said he confessed fatally shooting his brother-in-law, Raleigh Shaw, 36, in self-defense during a family quarrel on a farm near Cobb, Wis. Doran was arrested shortly after the shooting when he took the body of Shaw to the office of a physician at Montfort.

Clintonville—The forty-fifth Wisconsin firemen's convention brought about 2,000 visitors to this city. The parade, eight blocks long, was the big feature of the convention. Horicon won the prize for the best delegation in the parade, and "best appearance" prizes went to Kibbourn, Horicon, Whitewater, Bonduel and Reedsburg, in the order named.

Madison—University of Wisconsin regents voted to make a $300,000 reduction in the salaries of staff members on a graduated basis and adopted a resolution calling for a complete revaluation of courses offered students. For this biennium the university will spend $708,000 less than the legislature allowed it. About $408,000 was saved through voluntary economies.

Platteville—Local consumers have filed a petition with the Wisconsin public service commission asking an investigation of light and power rates.

Madison—Normal summer and fall conditions are expected to give Wisconsin this year its biggest crop of apples since 1928. Of the total expected crop of 2,000,000 bushels, Wisconsin will put about 156,000 barrels to commercial use, compared to 130,000 barrels last year, and 70,000 barrels in 1930.

Marshfield—The city of Marshfield will sue Wood county for collection of $4,637.83 in non-resident poor claims which were disallowed by the county board.

Wausau—The fourth annual farmers' get-together conference of the Wisconsin Council of Agriculture will be held here Oct. 18, 19 and 20.

TWENTY YEARS AFTER

By FANNIE HURST

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

YOU talk about your dramatic panoramas of life! What is more strikingly than a glimpse backward, say along the twenty years that follow the college graduation of any given group. It is the moment of respite backward. Men and women who have not passed in the race of life long enough even to contemplate it as a spectacle, are here forced to face the evidence.

Twenty years after graduation. Have I failed in the race or reached the goal?

Two men who had not met for those twenty years were about to come together for the first time; two men who had been inseparable through four years of high school and four subsequent years at their state university.

The Heavenly Twins, they had been facetiously called during those years of their intimacy. It had been a nice friendship, ceasing, it is true, after graduation to have any active significance, or, for that matter, anything of a passive quality, because the paths of the two boys diverged instantly.

Rex Tyson went to Boston to learn the shipbuilding business in the yards of an uncle.

Claude Nipher returned to his home town to take up his father's business of taxidermy.

Varied interests if ever there were. Tyson climbing steadily ahead in the enormously profitable business of shipbuilding. Nipher, taking up where his father had left off, and then branching out into many tributaries that led off taxidermy, but into which his father before him had never ventured.

It was after twenty years of their respective efforts in their divergent fields that the old school and college chums were about to meet once more. Tyson's home town, which was situated on the most northerly of the Great Lakes, floated steamers of enormous draught power.

It was in connection with an enterprise to launch some gigantic boats on the bosom of this body of water that Tyson was returning to his home town.

In the twenty years since his graduation from the state university, he had not set foot in it.

Rumors of his fine success had come back, it is true. Some of the decorative monthly magazines had carried photographs of the Tyson country estate just outside Boston. The sailing lists of the big steamships bound for Europe frequently carried the name of Rex Tyson and Mrs. Rex Tyson, and the year his son was graduated from Yale university the papers were quite agog with the story of the ship magnate's son shipping for South America aboard a fruit steamer.

From the bottom-up sort of thing which the American public loves to observe, and admires in the sons of its millionaires, Nipher had followed Tyson's career pretty closely. Living as he did in the smaller environment of his home town, his laboratory built right on the quiet old frame house he continued to occupy after the death of his parents, Nipher had the leisure to watch with close scrutiny the various aspects of the outside world which interested him most.

Tyson's career captured his curiosity not only because it happened to whirl around the person of an old and valued friend, but because it illustrated a sociological and economic aspect of his country. It was interesting to study the success of a man like Tyson, and to ponder over just what conditions made his kind of position possible.

Nipher married a few years later than Tyson. Where Tyson had chosen an eastern girl of some social prominence, Nipher made what was considered, even in his town, a peculiar alliance. He married a girl named Madalaine de Fond, daughter of a French Canadian who had drifted across the line from Quebec and earned a more or less precarious existence as a veterinarian. Madalaine was not only a rather plain, quiet girl, but she had quite a marked affliction. From birth she had been deaf, hearing only slightly with the left ear. Nipher beheld her one evening at the graduation exercises of the Central high school, where in spite of her handicap, she was graduated with honors. One year later they were married.

There were two children, normal youngsters with acute hearing. One of Nipher's favorite occupations when he was not working in his laboratory and doing important mounting of animals for some of the foremost museums in the country, was perfecting an ear disk for Madalaine by

Martlet Long a Symbol of the Resurrection

Those early Christian warriors who fought in the crusades to deliver the holy sepulcher and the Holy Land from the Mohammedans often assumed figures or mottoes on their coats of arms, to distinguish them and their descendants as having been pledged soldiers of the Cross. One of the commonest of such crests or armorial bearing was the martlet, which appears in many a knightly shield on old church monumental tombs in Great Britain, and still finds a roosting place on the coast-arms of some noble families.

The martlet was a swift with legs concealed, and was adopted as representative of the birds of paradise. Everything was holy in the Lord's land to the Crusaders, excepting those who denied the divinity of our Blessed Lord, and the martlet was not altogether ineptly, considered a reminder of His coming again at the Spring of Souls, to judge both the quick and the dead.

So did the swift, largest and speediest of the swallow family, make its way on sculptured stone or worked brass into many of the temples of Christendom, sweet reminders of the Psalmist's song about the Jewish temple, when God had only one church in this world.—Montreal Herald.

which she might be enabled to hear more clearly.

Long years after his death, the Nipher ear drum was to earn great fortunes for his grandchildren.

But when Tyson returned to his home city, the Niphers were living the quiet and uneventful lives of small-town people of limited income.

Madalaine had no servant and took sole care of her two children. Nipher himself spent the long hours of the day at work in his laboratory with only one assistant, and although he had come to be regarded as the prime authority in his field, museum experts journeyed to him for advice from all over the country, his income failed to keep pace with his achievement.

Besides, pre-eminence in taxidermy was not the kind of thing calculated to bring a man any great local emolument. Indeed it is doubtful if his townspeople had any idea that in their midst they were fostering a man who was truly supreme in his work.

Nipher was just rather an odd fogy like his father before him. Tyson, if he had had time to give any great amount of thought to his friend in the years intervening, might have affectionately fallen in with that general estimate of him.

And yet it was with a glowing sense of warmth that he turned his face back home on the shipping mission in question.

Good old Claude! Be a pleasure to write Claude a good fat check if for any reason he might be in need of funds. Chances were that he was. Taxidermist in a one-horse town. Read Claude had married. A deaf girl, too. Just like old Claude. Undesigning sort of fellow. Fall for nearly anything. Should have kept better in touch with old Claude. No friendships like the old ones.

So it was a genial, rather remorseful fellow who swung handsomely off a train one day in the little city he had once called home. A fellow with prosperity written all over him.

Nipher met him. The friends clasped hands. Big, long, silent clasps, two or three of them, and then, bag and luggage, great big Tyson crammed into Nipher's little old Ford roadster and off they chugged.

Offhand it was pretty much as Tyson had foreseen it would be. Stuffy, smelly, little old house. Smelly old horsehair and many, many good yesterday. Shabby gentility. Servantless. Madalaine, a faded, gentle enough, person with the persistently low voice of the deaf and the eager listening manner. Two nice, normal youngsters. A bedroom, scrupulously clean, but that smelled monotonously of the years.

Br-r-r. It made Tyson shiver as he unpacked his bag. So this was what the years had brought to Nipher!

Good old boy—a snide taxidermist in a snide town.

Doggone shame. Do something about it. Doggone shame.

Nipher, who was Tyson's age to the month, looked at least five years older than his friend.

Life had passed Nipher by. Had it? Tyson had occasion to ask himself after his first snap-judgments had worn away and after he left the house at the end of five weeks where originally he had only planned to remain five days.

Had it, or had life passed Tyson by in a fashion that terrified him, now that he was beginning to realize the extent to which his nose had been at the material grindstone?

The Niphers went on hikes in the springtime and actually and without self-consciousness studied the plant life of their region and brought home specimens for slides and mounted their findings in their "Springtime Books" as they called them.

Madalaine Nipher played the harp, and in the evenings she took on a delicate kind of beauty, sweeping her fingers along the strings of the instrument there in the mellow quiet of the shabby study.

Nipher was engaged in some of the most romantic kind of taxidermy. Frequently he went off on visits to the public zoos, Madalaine accompanying him.

The Niphers staged plays in their own little living room, playing and writing and doubling up in the characters themselves. For hours on end, one forgot Madalaine's affliction. The Niphers wrote poetry to one another and the Niphers had formed a quartet. Claude and older son Merle at the piano and Madalaine at the harp which so transformed her into beauty.

Close, happy, almost naive family. Greedy for the beauties of life. Ignorant of their materialisms. Indefatigable in their quest for the happiness of harmony.

No wonder that Nipher's face, while lined with the thoughtful years, was a face of peace.

There was nothing that Tyson could do for Nipher. He realized that on his second day in the home of his friend.

There was so much that Nipher could do for Tyson.

Blessedly, Nipher realized that after the second day of the visit of his friend.

Ants, bees and wasps are the world's dominant insects. Weaker members of the family often resemble the powerful stingers. Birds feed quite freely on both wasps and bees. Ants constitute a favorite food of toads. These batrachians also dine freely on yellow jackets and wasps. Mice, weasels, foxes and badgers ravage the nests of bumble bees. Skunks dig out nests of yellow jackets. Bears plunder the homes of honey bees and hornets. Yet the members of this family are regarded as the most highly protected of all insects and weaker members of the insect race apparently imitate them. To what purpose, has been asked.

SYNOPSIS

George Marsh

Copyright by Penn Pub. Co. (WNU Service)

From his fur post, Sunset House, in the Canadian north, Jim Stuart, trader in charge, sights an overturned canoe in the lake. With his headman, Omar, he rescues the drifter, who proves to be Aureole LeBlond, daughter of his rival in the fur business. Made comfortable at the post, Aureole proves to be a charming companion.

Stuart scowled with impatience. "Are you never serious, Miss Aureole LeBlond? You may ignore the facts but he won't. You French are careful of appearances. If I thought I could get you safely over there tonight we'd start now."

The blood drove into her olive skin. "It's you who seem careful of appearances. You—you are bored with your guest, Monsieur Stuart. Let us go, then!" She rose stiffly, her face flaming with outraged vanity.

But she ignored the challenge. "A boat wouldn't live out there now." "Then I shall go by shore."

With hands on hips she smiled indulgently at the indignant girl who confronted him. "Do you realize how far it is through the bush? It's a good twenty miles, and it'll be dark in an hour. Have you ever traveled in the bush at night?"

Ignoring the question she contemplated Marthe's beaded moccasins as she curled and uncurled her toes in their capacious interiors. Then her black eyes lifted to the man who watched her, all at ease, as her face lit in an amused smile.

"Yes, I can do better," he teased, "but I don't think it's good for you." "You think I'm vain?" "I know you are."

"All right, let it come, then!" angrily answered the trader. "A little more won't hurt us. We can't get her home tonight in that seventeen-foot paterfamilias and we can't put her out in the bush, can we? She's got to stay here. If he wants to make trouble—let it come!"

Stuart left the half-breed and entered the house. "Miss LeBlond," he said, "there's no trail alongshore, and there's a swamp at the outlet where you'd be eaten alive by mosquitoes. To start with our small canoe means filling, in a mile or two!"

She studied him with sober face; then, thick brows knotted in a mood of frown, she demanded: "You're not trying to deceive a defenseless woman, whom fate has thrown into your hands? Oh, sir, somewhere in your black heart there must linger a trace of pity, of honor. Spare my tender youth!"

"Well, anyway, whether you're a villain or not," she continued, "I don't intend to swamp in that lake in the dark and get wet again. Oh-h-h! It was cold; it makes me shiver to think of it. And besides," her eyes flashed with humor, "suppose my what-you-call-em, my gibo-dieg-wason, shrank? What should I do?"

"Yes, such as they are. But you'll find them pretty poor." He went to his bedroom and returned with a package. "Now," she said, when he had given her a light and filled his pipe, "tell me about yourself."

"There's not much to interest a lady from Winnipeg." "Try me. You came here three years ago to start a post for the Hudson's Bay company. I know that much. Father was here first, for his North-West Trading company, and, naturally, didn't like it. I've heard so many terrible things about you, that I've been gasping to learn just how much of a liar Paul Paradis was."

"So—Paradis has been blackening my reputation, has he?" "Blackening is mild to what he's told me about the factor at Sunset House. You came from God's lake, didn't you? Well, it seems you left a very dark and mysterious past up there, Mr. Stuart, according to Paul."

"Oh, very! I'm really a terrible man, Miss LeBlond. Hadn't we better have Sarah in here as chaperone?" She laughed as she shook her head. "From what I've seen of Sarah, I'd wager she's on guard now, waiting to rescue you from the woman with the gibboidlegvansons. No, Paul Paradis didn't impress me. He made you too black. Father is quite different. He intends to beat you but he's sorry for you—sent here by your people on a forlorn hope."

believe him. Why, what do you know about him?" An enigmatic smile was Stuart's reply.

"You do know something, eh? Well, I'm sure father does, too; but the man is a wonder with the Indians. That excuses a lot."

"When did you leave Winnipeg?" Stuart changed the subject. "In June. It took me three weeks to get here, but it was wonderful—that trip."

"You like it—the wilderness?" "I love it. Of course I'd tire of it after a while."

"You go back in the autumn?" "Lifting her chin she slowly exhaled a cloud of smoke, her half shut eyes on the spruce poles of the ceiling; tilted head barring the round throat in its loose flannel collar caught by its scarf of crimson silk."

"Yes," she answered, after a space, "my father seems fond to marry me off in Winnipeg, you know. And Paradis worries him, with his mooning around ever since I came. Imagine," she laughed, "that monkey, Paul Paradis!"

"He's quite beautiful," objected Stuart. "I met him at Medicine Stone lake, last November."

Without turning her head she flashed at him a sidelong look from under her long lashes. "He seems to hate you; what have you done to him?"

"Nothing, absolutely nothing," protested Stuart, "except to knock him down when he tried to hog the trail."

"The girl straightened in her chair, her vivid face alight with interest. "What? You dared to do that—to the great Paul Paradis?" she demanded.

"There was no trouble," drawled Stuart. "It was nothing. He stayed down. What did he tell you, Miss Aureole?"

"He told me you had had trouble on a trail—that he had been compelled to choke you."

"If you ask Black Jules Renault, your father's head voyageur, he might tell you that Paradis has a poor memory."

"Oh, when I saw you, today, I know it. Paradis choke—you!" Her dark eyes lingered significantly on the wide shoulders, the corded column of his neck, the elegant hand in the brown glove which held his pipe.

"Lead on, Miss Aureole." So she led on while he listened; amused, startled, now charmed, now puzzled by the direct thinking and amazing sophistication of this graduate of a convent school in Winnipeg. Her education completed, she was living life to the full—tasting its thrills, exploring its by-ways, testing whatever of interest it had to give.

"Well, it'll be some time before Omar attracts their attention. All my men are up the lake with the freight canoes and my small paterfamilias would fill tonight. Your father must have crossed in a big boat. There's nothing to do but wait for him."

"Then I can have another cigarette and we can talk until they come?" Was she strangely callous, he wondered, or totally without nerves, that she could calmly curl herself in a chair and smoke while her desperate father and his men hunted a rocky shore, white with surf, for her canoe and drowned body?

"You must get your father to send him to Fort Hope," he suggested. "That's a good idea! I'll do it."

Then her black brows drew together as she added suggestively: "But you know, Mr. Jeem Stuart, I'm going to be lonely for some one to talk to."

"So am I, Miss Aureole LeBlond." "Well, the answer is obvious. We'll talk to each other."

He shook his head. "I can't come to your father's place. There'd be war. You'll have to swamp again in the lake," he suggested with a grin.

"What? Wait that long? The wind might not blow for days." Omar's dark face, following a call outside, appeared at the door.

"They build fire wen dey see my lantern. I tink a boat follow de shore, now."

"Let's go and see," the girl suggested. With the wash of the surf on the boulders of the shore and the drive of the sleds against the neighboring forest in their ears, they stood on the beach, peering into the black night. Shortly, a light blinked through the trees.

"It's a lantern—in a canoe," explained Stuart. "They're coming for you."

He felt her hand on his arm—felt her wind-blown hair on his face as he bent to hear what she said. His blood stirred at her touch.

"When will they get here?" she called through her cupped hands. "Soon, now."

"Let's go back and talk until they come!" So the two returned to the house while the sullen Omar waited on the beach.

"You know that little island—I think it's the roughest to the east—with all the rocks and boulders on the shore?" she asked.

"Yes." "You remember that split rock which stands partly in the water? Well, if you were to look behind that rock, some day, you might find a note from a very much bored person—that is, if you cared to go there and look."

GOOD ADVICE FOR A SAFE FOURTH OF JULY

This year most of the nation will celebrate the Fourth of July with a three-day holiday. Such a long period for recreation is awaited eagerly by all. Yet its unusual length doubles the hazards and danger to which we will be exposed.

Independence Day is known as the worst accident day of the year. This year may break the tragic record unless everyone guards himself closely and observes all safety rules. A list of "don'ts," all excellent advice, has been prepared by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters and follows:

If you drive your car—Drive Safely:
1. Don't drive recklessly—it's a long holiday and there's plenty of time.
2. Don't take out your car unless it is in first-class condition.
3. Don't drive on the wrong side of the road—keep to the right.
4. Don't drive too long without resting—mental lapses due to fatigue causes accidents.

5. Don't pass other cars unless you have a clear view ahead; don't cut in and out of traffic lines; don't pass or fail to stop at intersections.
If you go swimming—Swim Safely:
1. Don't attempt marathon races by swimming too long or too far.
2. Don't venture out into too deep water if you're not a strong swimmer.
3. Don't swim away from the crowd—"In unity there is strength."
4. Don't indulge in ducking others or in frightening weak swimmers or children.
5. Don't lie too long in the sun—sun poisoning is injuries and can be fatal.

If you celebrate with fireworks—Celebrate Safely:
1. Don't hold lighted firecrackers in your hand or throw them close to others.
2. Don't explode firecrackers near combustible materials.
3. Don't celebrate with guns loaded with real cartridges or shot; firecrackers and toy pistols are dangerous enough.
4. Don't fail to treat injuries, even the most minor ones, immediately and intelligently. Tetanus poisoning works slowly but surely.
5. Don't get too close to a display of fireworks—premature explosions occur.

Nobody Loves a Policeman!

That's an old saying but it isn't true any more. At least, it hasn't been true since F. O. Alexander added "Finney of the Force" to the list of famous comic strip characters. For "Finney", with his twinkling humor and his shrewd comment on people and the common everyday events of life, is a lovable character, as thousands of newspaper readers who have followed him through his various adventures will testify. "Finney of the Force" is a regular feature in this newspaper with whom our subscribers are acquainted, and all enjoy him. Then tell your friends about him, for they will enjoy him as much as you do.

O. K. KUNNEL b. b. m. Doctor of Discretion

Study the policy of the successful business firm and you usually find that it has a "Doctor of Discretion" directing its activities. Just like O. K. Kunnel B.B.M., who knows that letter heads and printed matter sent out by his firm establishes the "character" of that firm. Therefore they must be of the best. In our commercial printing department we produce letter heads and printed matter for many of the most successful business firms in Kewaskum. Let us submit samples and quote prices on your next printing order. No obligation on your part.
