Lights of NEW YORK By WALTER TRUMBULL

Since stocks have gone up, our bond leaders of finance and industry have stuck their heads out of the cyclone cellar, but are ready to pull in their necks at the first cloud or new puff of air. Still, it seems natural to some of us, who can remember the storm of 1929, to hear once more in homes and restaurants the talk of investments instead of walls concerning the depression. People actually are giving each other tips again. And they are beginning to take a little gamble on the market again. They figure that this time they will sell at the top. Of course, they won't. Anyhow, it is a lucky break for brokers' clerks. Some of them are going to work again.

Lunching at The Players recently, William F. Beazell pointed out that the depression really had caused the start of a new cycle. First, there were a lot of small businesses. Then came corporations and consolidations, which eliminated the little fellow and resulted in big business. When the depression arrived, big business had to close up or cut down and there was a terrific increase in the country's unemployed. The less resourceful of these sat around and waited for their old employers to start hiring again, but there were others who decided to take a shot at something new. For example, Mr. Beazell told of one youngster who had worked for a big chain store. He went to a number of customers in a certain neighborhood and told them that if they would agree to buy their groceries steadily of him he could save them money, because he had no overhead and would not have to allow for waste. He worked up a profitable business.

Now that youngster would not go back to his former job if he could. He is his own boss and doing well. The chances are that some day he will open a little store, and it will grow larger, and he will either form a chain or sell out to one. Then the new cycle will be complete. But that time probably is a couple of decades away, or more. Another youngster, who always has been a clever carpenter, mechanic and electrician, has built and sold a number of ice boxes. Others have made jobs for themselves. By and large, there will not be much trouble about youth. Youth can adapt itself to any conditions and it is fitted to survive. The ones who feel the hard going are the middle-aged, who do not find it so easy to suit them

THE BOY WHO WAITED

There were five of them in all, five boys who started off one morning for a picnic in the country. The sun was shining and everyone felt ready for a happy day. None of them dreamed that before nightfall something would happen to change the horizon for each and every one, but particularly for one. Jimmy Norton was the leader of the group as a rule. Somehow the boys always knew they could trust Jimmy to lead them the best. He was fair and when he said something that was usually just what he meant and he would stick to it. They took their bicycles and their lunch baskets and went whirling off.

The day went just as they had planned until they were coming home. Just as they turned into the center of the town, it was a very small town, an auto came whizzing around a corner and knocked down a little girl. No one was around and the auto did not stop. Jimmy and the other boys hurried to the spot. The little girl lay unconscious. It was supper time and nearly everyone

A DOLL'S BERET

If a doll in your house needs a new bonnet why not make her this one? It is so easy for it can be made out of any scraps of cloth and as large or as small as you please. You can even make one for yourself if you like. Cut one circle of cloth like figure 1, solid; then cut another just like it but out of this one cut a round piece big enough for whatever head you are making the beret, as you see in figure 2. Now cut a strip on the bias, that is diagonally across the cloth, first measuring the head the hat is for, exactly the size you find it is. Now gather the circle that has the hole cut out of it onto the band, and sew the whole circle to that. And there you have the hat, already for any doll or child or person whom it will fit, and the nice part of it is that you can make one for every colored dress if you like. Dolls can have one to match every outfit she has.

How It Started By Jean Newton

The Heel of Achilles

EVERY now and then we hear it said of a man much in the public eye, when some startling disclosure is made in connection with him and he receives his long deferred deserts—that the heel of Achilles was reached. We at once understand this to mean that he was finally detected or affected in his weak spot, and when this happened, he went the way of all who are similarly exposed. But why do we say "The Heel of Achilles"? The answer is interesting and enlightening. Achilles was one of the most splendid military heroes of the ancient Greece of mythology. He was the outstanding figure of the Trojan war and the central character of Homer's Iliad. From his very infancy it was planned to make Achilles invulnerable, invincible, a warrior beyond compare. To this end, he was dipped in the river Styx, in order, according to Greek lore, to make every part of his body invulnerable. However, while being so immunized, he was held by the heel, which was overlooked in the process. His heel thus becoming the one weak spot in his make-up, and injury to which, after numberless heroic exploits finally caused his death. Ever since then the expression "Heel of Achilles" has become an allusion to a vulnerable spot.

The Kitchen Cabinet

How About Dried Fruit?

WHEN fresh fruit is scarce or not at hand try using a package of dates to add variety to the daily menu. Children like them and they may be used at any meal or midnight supper. Dates, prunes, figs and raisins as well as dried apricots and peaches give us plenty to choose from for the needed variety. Orange juice and tomato juice are needed in the children's diet to supply the vitamins so essential to growth; these may be varied with the dried fruits which are so valuable as laxatives and at the same time giving them the mineral salts needed.

Apples are very good, but if eaten as freely as children like them they will become tiresome if served daily. Serve dates with bread crumbs in a steamed pudding, add them to your gingerbreads and simple spice cakes. Serve them stuffed with cheese as a dessert. Chop them and mix with nuts and serve with whipped cream for an emergency dessert, for it is one quickly prepared.

With prunes a little more attention is needed. Soak them overnight, then simmer in the same water until tender. Drain and place them in the ice chest to chill. They will need no sugar for the average taste, but if any is added it should be very little and toward the last of the cooking. These prunes are now ready for various dishes. Save the liquor and add to the pudding sauce when making a prune pudding. Prune whip is so well known and liked and so easy to prepare that it should be served often. Stew the prunes and put the pulp through a colander and it is ready to use.

There are few people who do not enjoy a dish of prunes with their breakfast menu. They are delicious stuffed with cottage cheese, or one may make a confection by stuffing them with fondant or chopped nuts. Figs and raisins may be served in the same ways, as puddings, salads, in cake and served as a dessert to satisfy the craving for sweets that is natural for all children.

Youthful Victims of Hard Times

Washington.—Two hundred thousand boys in their teens, jobless yet not always in search of work, are roaming the United States today, stealing rides on freight trains, panhandling, and living in hobo jungles. Like a gigantic tide they are pushing toward the South, where in warmer states they expect to spend the winter and hopefully wait for the depression to ebb.

This is the discovery of the children's bureau of the federal Department of Labor in a national survey which has just been completed. Officials feel, incidentally, that there is no immediate danger that these youths will become a social menace but it is admitted that there are perils ahead unless they can be returned to their homes and either put into schools or given employment.

In El Paso, Texas, police officials report that during the last six months more than 45,000 transients passed through the city. Kansas City, Mo., reports an average of 1,500 a day. Many pitiful stories have been told investigators for the children's bureau. One report reads, in part, as follows: "We next encountered two men making coffee. One was eighteen. He was from Mt. Carmel, Pa. He gave me a letter to read from his sister and mother. The sister wrote a good letter, telling about high school. The mother was a poor speller. She said the father was out of work and that the sister would quit school and go to work if she could find anything. She urged the boy not to return home. "He was eating a lot of bread, tearing out pieces of it and washing it down with coffee. His nose was swollen where he had been hit by a rail road brakeman while he was riding a freight train."

"Some of the boys," says another report, "say they are going to certain cities. Most of them are not going

UNDER FROZEN STARS

by GEORGE MARSH

Copyright by Penn Pub. Co. (WNU Service)

As the stars dimmed in the withering dawn, six lean huskies, followed by trailing ribbons of frozen breath, started down the river, purple with shadow, between the bleak buttresses of the hills. Riding the sled where the wind had scoured the ice, breaking a path on his snowshoes for his foundering dogs where drifts barred the way, Jim pushed north. The sun lifted in the southeast to rim the white ridges with fire. Then, up the silent valley drifted a long wall on the freezing air. The ears of the plodding team lifted. Their black nostrils quivered as they sought for the scent of their hereditary enemy.

"The wolves are after some breakfast," muttered Jim snapping his whip as the dogs trotted over a stretch of wind-scoured river. Again the far call reached the team. Lifting his nose, the shaggy leader sent back the answering challenge of the husky, as the team behind him snarled and yelped in their excitement.

A half-mile below, the river made a sharp turn. Reaching the bend, Jim, who was breaking trail, stopped in his tracks; then, calling to his team, hurried ahead, as three gray shapes left a dark object in the snow and slunk from the river ice into the forest.

What was that by the trail? Jim approached the thing in the snow which the wolves had left.

"After all," he groaned, "is this the end? Had she despaired of his coming? Did she wait there in the snow for the man who was too late?"

Jim's wondering eyes blurred at the red wails raised by the dog-whip on the black muzzle near his extended hands.

"Smoke!" he choked. "Smoke, boy; don't you know Jim?"

The bloodshot eyes of the husky searched the face of the man. His black nostrils dilated. He took a cautious step forward—his nose seeking the hands thrust toward him—hands which stirred vague memories blurred by months of brutality and starvation. Another sniff and dim recollection of a master who never struck, whose voice was a caress, harassed his dazed brain.

"Smoke! It's Jim; Jim, boy! Don't you remember Jim, Smoke?"

With a whimper, the dog fiercely nuzzled the outstretched hand, as in a poignant memory of the lost master flooded his brain. He sprang upon the man kneeling in the snow, his red tongue covering him with mad caresses as he yelped and whimpered behind him.

Then, weak as he was, Smoke circled Jim again and slow—and hard!

Taking Aurora's sleeping bag, he cut loose the remaining two dogs and returned to her.

"I didn't tell. I wanted Smoke to recognize you," she said as Jim wrapped her snugly on his sled. "I think he knew me, and often I stole food for him. At night he always came to me when we made camp."

"Don't talk about it!" Jim protested, haunted by the thought of her days in the power of the man who had paid.

As he knelt, busy with the sled lashings, she suddenly touched his shoulder.

"Jeem!"

He looked up.

"Why did you follow? For hatred of him—or love of me?"

She had her answer in his eyes as he bent and kissed her.

Triumphantly she smiled through her tears.

"You do love me—even after this—"

With a murmured protest, he kissed her tenderly. But she was not through. She reached and turned Jim's face toward her.

"Look at me! That dead man there has much to answer for—but not that! He was mad—but he worshipped me—respected me! I didn't trust him and always carried my knife. He knew I was ready to kill myself!"

"You think my love is so small a thing?"

"No!" she sobbed. "You've proved it, lover of mine! But I would not have lived—you would have found him alone!"

Sing in the spruce beside a great fire, they camped that night and feasted, in their happiness oblivious of the fierce cold which drew down the stars until they glittered close to the spruce tops while the aurora pulsed across them in flashes of green and rose and pearl. Then back up the Winkler they journeyed, Smoke and his gaunt teammates loose while Jim's feeding thickened their blood.

Meeting Omar with a sled-load of food, Jim and Aurora passed the Sturgeon and reached the Pipestones. From there, Omar hurried south to carry the news of Aurora's safety to LeBlond and aid Esau with the Christmas trade, while Jim turned east on the Fort Hope trail.

"We're going to see a friend of mine, Father Jean, on the Obate mission, Omar," Jim explained with a grin. "Tell them we'll be home for New Year's."

On the last day of the Little Moon of the Spirit, which is December 31, a seven-dog team, with two huskies running loose in the rear, its harness braving with bells and colored worsted, jingled up the ice-hard lake trail toward Sunset House. As the excited dogs took the sled toward the post at a gallop, the driver, kneeling behind the hooded Aurora, pointed into the west.

"What a welcome!" he laughed. "Even the skies are outdoing themselves for our homecoming."

She turned and circled his neck with an arm.

"It's too beautiful to be real, Jeem."

In the rich color of her dark face there was little trace of the agony of the days which had passed.

"Do you think you can endure it here for awhile with me, Aurora of the sunset cheeks?" he teased.

"With skies like this and Jeem Stuart to love me, I could live at Mitawagagama forever."

For reply he tilted back her chin, buried in its fur hood, and kissed her.

As Smoke led the galloping team up the trail to the post, the guns of a group of Indians, led by Omar and Esau and Jinaw, the Hattiesnake, saluted again and again. Up through the tips of the hunters which dotted the clearing Jim drove his dogs to the stockade gate. Swinging the laughing girl to her feet, they hurried to the house where Sarah waited in the doorway.

"Nia! n'go! Meester Jeem, I glad to see you!" The wide face of the excited Sarah knotted impotently in her endeavor to hide her tears.

"Sarah," he laughed, patting her broad shoulders. "I've brought back Mrs. Jim to live with us."

With a laugh, Aurora hugged the embarrassed Ojibwa.

"Sarah and I will always agree. We both love Jeem Stuart."

They were in the lighted living room, when Jim choked, coughed, then burst into laughter.

"Sarah! What in the—Look! Look at Sarah's gibdogwason!"

With the pride and assurance of the wearer of a Paris gown, Sarah stood in baggy knickers on which she had lavished so many painful hours, awaiting the approval of the convulsed Aurora and Jim.

"Sarah, they're beautiful!" cried Aurora, while the Ojibwa grinned in delight.

Jim's thoughts went back to his first meeting with Aurora. To the picture of a dark head beside a submerged canoe which the seas buried as they drove past, his memory joined the dripping figure of a shivering girl, standing in Marthe's doorway, dismissing the adventure as a joke. Then her cool indifference to the scandalized Ojibwas! He had read that they were like that—these present-day girls.

He chuckled at the memory of how she rose from the table to display her whipcords, to the consternation of the inquisitive Sarah. No false modesty there! In fact, he admitted, modesty did not appear to enter into the picture. And how she had seized on that word gibdogwason! It certainly was set off her shapely legs—that name!

But what a crime, he had thought, to cut her hair like that! It must have ripped to her waist. Then he laughed aloud as he remembered the disgust in the blue eyes of Mary Christie, daughter of the inspector at Lake Expance, when he once asked her when she intended to bob her hair.

No, Mary wouldn't cut her hair or shorten her skirts either. Lake Expance fashions were somewhat behind the times, and—as Mary was the only white girl on the great lake—would remain so.

Of course, the astute LeBlond was set on marrying his daughter off well in Winnipeg. Strange, she'd escaped so long—with those dangerous black eyes and that magnetism. It was magnetism; no doubt about that. The man on the bunk in the trade-house had sucked in a deep breath at the memory of his struggle to get the half-drowned girl into the canoe—the dead weight of her in his straining arms.

He remembered, too, with a deep drawing in of the breath, the weight of her in his arms as he took her from the lake—the touch of her hair on his face.

And the day he returned from that glorious stolen visit on the island, to confront an anxious Sarah and Marthe.

"Well, Sarah," he had said, as his boat shot into the beach, "you see I am back safely."

"You see her?" demanded Sarah.

"Yes."

"She wear dose gibdogwason?"

"No." Jim was amused at the interest of his cook in the recent guest of Sunset House. "She didn't wear 'em. She wore a white dress."

Sarah and Marthe exchanged quizzical looks.

"And she had on white silk stockings and white shoes?"

"Well, Sarah," he had said, as his boat shot into the beach, "you see I am back safely."

"You see her?" demanded Sarah.

"Yes."

Devastation by Lemmings
The Norwegian lemmings, small creatures of the mouse tribe that live in the mountainous districts of the Scandinavian countries, are noted for the strange migrations they make at certain intervals. At these times they travel in great masses from the center of Norway to the east and west, leaving desolation in their wake. When they reach the coast they fling themselves into the sea to die. Some are always left behind, however, to propagate their race, but this does not need to be a large number, as they breed very rapidly.

Population Movement
The United States Department of Agriculture estimates that 1,472,000 persons left farms for towns and cities in 1931, and that 1,679,000 persons moved farmward. The gain in number of persons living on farms was 648,000. For the year 1930 it was estimated that 1,706,000 persons moved from cities to farms and 1,727,000 persons moved from farms to cities—these two movements almost balancing each other. There was a slight decrease in the number of persons going to farms in 1931, and a considerable decrease in the number going to cities.

WISCONSIN FARM PRODUCTS HIGH

Wisconsin's farm products will now buy about 16 per cent more of the commodities used by farmers than could be purchased with the same products three months ago, according to information furnished to the Wisconsin Crop Reporting Service, by farm price reporters. This favorable change in farm purchasing power is due to steadily declining prices which farmers must pay for things they buy, and to increasing values in recent months for important Wisconsin farm products such as milk, butterfat, hogs, cattle, veal calves, chickens and eggs.

The level of retail prices which the farmer pays for things they buy has been slowly but steadily declining since 1929. These prices have now fallen to levels which average only six per cent above the pre-war level, the lowest point since 1915. Prices which Wisconsin farmers are receiving have improved since June, so that the level of these prices is now 68 per cent of pre-war, a net gain of 13 per cent since June. While the spread between prices farmers pay, and those received is still wide, the margin is narrower than it has been at any time since last January when the prices of farm products were considerably higher than they have been since.

Cat feed has proved to be worth as much as timothy hay in rations for cows and horses, feed authorities assert.

OUR AFFAIRS AND EUROPE'S

If we could build a wall a mile high around the United States of America and put a roof over it, so nobody could come in or go out of it by air, the people of this country could probably get along very well without any contacts of any kind with the rest of the world.

We would miss our tea and coffee, which we haven't succeeded as yet in growing in the United States. We would have to get along without any silk. We would have to give up cocoa and chocolate. Unless we found some way to make rubber out of sawdust or something else, we would have to run our automobiles without any tires. We would have to be pretty economical about shoes, since we depend very largely upon other countries for hides and leather. We would have very many fur coats. We would have to get along, in short, without a lot of things we are accustomed to. But on the whole, we probably could manage to be comfortable and reasonably prosperous if we didn't import a single commodity from any part of the world.

Of course, we would have to cut down on a great deal of our farm production. We raise more wheat, more corn, more cotton, more tobacco, more of a number of other farm products than we in the United States can consume. We mine more copper, more iron, more of the several other metals than our domestic needs call for. We would have to shut down a lot of mines and abandon a lot of farms and find some other occupation for the miners and farmers thus thrown out of work. We produce more oil than we can use, so we would have to cap a lot of oil wells and abandon a lot of pipe lines. We make more automobiles, more electrical equipment, more sewing machines, more typewriters, more fertilizers, more cameras, pianos and other manufactured products than we can use, and so a lot of factories would have to shut down or curtail production. But, on the whole, perhaps we could get along if we did no business with the rest of the world. We wouldn't have to bother building any ships, but of course, we could find something else for the shipbuilders to do.

It seems to us that the complete answer to the people who think we ought not to have anything to do with Europe lies in those facts. Until and unless the economic prosperity of the rest of the world is restored to the point where foreign nations can buy our surplus products again, we cannot look for a great or permanent revival of our own prosperity. And since the rest of the world cannot buy our goods unless we buy theirs, the problem of world prosperity depends for its solution largely upon the restoration of our own prosperity.

There is no escaping the conclusion that neither our nation nor any other can stand alone.

HELP WITH FARM ACCOUNTS
MADE NEW TESTER SERVICE

Wisconsin dairymen who are members of dairy herd improvement associations are to be given a new and added service this year.

In addition to the services which the tester is now rendering, he will be prepared to assist the dairymen in making such additional farm records as will help in analyzing the business end of their farms. These records will include a yearly farm inventory, a record of cash farm income and expenses, a record of crop acreages and yields, as well as a record of all farm livestock.

This service, made possible by a plan worked out jointly by the offices of farm accounts and dairy records of the Wisconsin college of agriculture, will provide the dairyman with additional farm management information which will enable him to reorganize his farming business, where necessary, so as to reduce expenses or increase the farm income.

This new project of the Dairy Herd Improvement associations will be supervised by a committee composed of Asher Holborn, K. L. Hatch and George C. Humphrey, H. C. Searles and Erwin Sutton, field men for the Wisconsin Dairymen's association, will cooperate with Roy T. Harris, in charge of dairy records, and A. J. Cramer, in charge of Dairy Herd Improvement associations.

WHEN TO STOP ADVERTISING

When every man has become so thoroughly a creature of habit that he will certainly buy this year, where he bought last year.

When younger, and fresher and spunkier concerns in your line cease starting up and using the newspapers in telling the people how much better they can do for them than you can.

When nobody else thinks "it pays to advertise."

When population ceases to multiply and the generations that crowd on after you, and never heard of you, come on.

When you have convinced everybody, whose life will touch yours, that you have better goods and lower prices than they can ever get anywhere outside of your store.

When you perceive it to be the rule that men who never do and never did advertise are outstripping their neighbors in the same line of business.

When men stop making fortunes right in your sight, solely through the discreet use of this mighty agent.

When you can forget the words of the shrewdest and most successful business men concerning the main cause of their prosperity.

When you would rather have your own way and fall than take advice and win.

"Ghost" Only Rabbit

Pupils of the school of Business, Scotland, were recently thrown into a panic by the sudden appearance at the side of the blackboard of what they took to be a fluttering apparition in white. They ran home and told of the appearance of either a ghost or an angel. Parents investigated and found that a very large white hare had gotten into the schoolhouse and had been seen to jump from behind the blackboard.

WOULD YOU Send Your Child- ren to School BLINDFOLDED?

Of course you wouldn't! Yet you are taking a grave chance by sending your child to school with the strain of defective eyesight. A slow child may only have defective vision and defective vision is so great a handicap and makes a dull child. Children who see better, learn more. Be fair to your child, have their eyes examined now before school.

ILLINOIS TROOPS SENT TO CANTON

Sheriff Asks Aid After a Miner Is Shot.

Canton, Ill.—Company F of the One Hundred and Thirtieth infantry, Illinois, arrived here from Peoria in command of Capt. Amerigo Bonjean to preserve order following the serious shooting of a union miner. The troops were requested by Sheriff C. C. Prickett of Fulton county. The militia was immediately stationed at various points throughout the city.

The situation was deemed threatening in view of the attempted assassination and because of disquieting unrest among the two mine factions which started with a riot. There are at least 1,000 miners in this region, 200 of whom returned to the pits under the new basic wage scale.

Sheriff Prickett's appeal was made to Carlos Black, adjutant general of the Illinois National Guard at Springfield. The order for a movement of troops was transferred to Maj. J. D. Wansbaugh, in command of a battalion of the One Hundred and Thirtieth infantry at Peoria, 31 miles away. The troops were in readiness.

The man shot is Robert Pollitt, 22 years an influential worker at the Pschirrer and Clearview mines. Pollitt and his wife were on their way to visit Charles Pschirrer, Sr., owner of one of the mines, at the time of the shooting. They drew up in front of the Pschirrer home in South Main street, near the Canton city limits.

Suddenly a black car appeared alongside. As it swept slowly by one or more of its occupants opened fire on Pollitt. His wife dodged and escaped injury. He collapsed at the wheel, hit by a bullet which pierced his right shoulder and emerged through the back.

Witnesses told police the license on the gunmen's car, and officials tracing it said it was issued to Leroy T. O'Brien of 7406 Irving Park boulevard, Norwood township.

Immediately after the shooting, more than 100 special deputy sheriffs were placed about the city with a special guard at the home of the state attorney G. Ray Seiff. Police said they believe the assailants of Pollitt were miner pickets. Many regular union men have been threatened, they said.

CONFESSES TO THEFT OF HALF A MILLION

Chicagoan Admits Swindling Many Clients.

Chicago.—Charles F. Glaeser, a lawyer and mortgage dealer in the Lake View district since the turn of the century, walked quietly into the office of State's Attorney Swanson. He made a voluntary confession of a series of embezzlements and frauds during the last ten years by which he had swindled his clients of approximately $500,000. Glaeser himself estimated the number of his victims at more than a thousand.

His confession was a surprise to Mr. Swanson, who received it in person. No formal complaints had been made against Glaeser, but the attorney said that hundreds of his clients were pressing him for settlements, and that it was only a matter of time before his practices would be uncovered.

Glaeser is a little man with a thin gray mustache and gray hair fringing a bald spot. He is fifty-six years old. His attorney, Allen W. Cook, and his two sons, Elmer and John, who are in their late twenties, sat beside him as he told his story in Mr. Swanson's office. The sons were not engaged in their father's business.

"These charges might be fought and because of their complicated nature the cases would lead to a long and expensive trial," said Attorney Cook. "Mr. Glaeser will plead guilty." "At one time he owned approximately $750,000 worth of real estate equities. I have looked over the records in his office. The properties in which he has interests are innumerable—I couldn't begin to count them. However, practically all of them are encumbered, and I doubt if his equities are worth anything now."

MANCHURIA REPORT BLOW TO JAPANESE

League Commission Proposes Control by China.

Geneva.—Ultimate Chinese sovereignty for Manchuria, after temporary demilitarization and control by international intervention, is recommended by the Lytton commission in its exhaustive report, to guide the council of the League of Nations toward a solution of the Far Eastern crisis.

Cutting with equal ruthlessness through the diplomatic positions of both Japan and China, the commission, headed by the earl of Lytton of Great Britain, and including French, German, Italian and American members, held that no solution can be reached without a Chinese-Japanese rapprochement negotiated with respect for the economic and political interests of both nations.

The commission's proposal of an advisory conference of the great powers to effect this, with an interim of autonomy for Manchuria, finds immediate reservations by the two most interested delegations here.

The Chinese want more specific assurance of neutral aid when the council meets November 14, and the Japanese hint that they may refuse to proceed with discussion of many details of the proposal.

The Lytton commission advises the council tamenly that the regime which existed in Manchuria before September 18, 1931, cannot be restored after the military operations which have swept Japanese troops through the three eastern provinces and much of China proper and have brought the establishment of the Manchukuo "government."

While denying Chinese diplomacy, this demand, the commission recommends, on the other hand, that Japan must be allowed no settlement which destroys the territorial integrity of China, guaranteed by the Washington (nine-power) treaty of 1922, or which is incompatible with the conception of arbitration signalized by the league covenant and the Kellogg-Briand pact outlawing war.

The report scouted Japan's contention, so often repeated while the military campaign was at its height last winter, that its soldiers were fighting in self-defense.

After giving the conflicting Chinese and Japanese versions of the events which provoked the outbreak of hostilities at Mukden on September 18, 1931, the committee said "the military operations of Japanese troops . . . cannot be regarded as measures of legitimate self-defense."

Tokyo.—The Japanese cabinet met here and after a careful study of the Lytton report, made this laconic announcement:

"The government has decided that the Lytton report does not constitute cause to alter its Manchurian policy."

Fable of Freddie and the Bow-Wows

By GEORGE ADE

(© Bell Syndicate.)—WNU Service.

ONCE upon a Time there was a Modern Product named Freddie. He had been seeing Life in all its Phases—the Sunshine and the Storm, the Smiles and the Tears, the Tranquility of Peace and the Scourges of War—ever since the Year of his Birth, 1915, so that in 1932 he was permitted to look back over a varied Career of 17 Years, checking up the miraculous Changes which had been wrought by the Introduction of the Oxford Bags, the Dance known as the Charleston and Chocolate-covered Ice Cream, to say nothing of nothing with Regret the Appearance of many Influences which threatened to disintegrate Civilization.

It was Last Year that Freddie began to shave and become disunhappy. Perhaps he had quaffed too freely from the Golden Bowl of Pleasure. More than likely he had, even as many another Man of the World, become surfeited with artificial Pleasures and was beginning to discover the Hollowness of the whole Ball of Wax.

Having run the Gamut of Pleasure and followed every Primrose Path leading to a Movie Show or a Candy Store, it is no wonder that he became sated with Empty Enjoyments and was disposed to adopt a Cynical Attitude.

If he lifted Eye-Brow and the cold Smile lurking at one Corner of the Mouth, when the Subject of Woman was brought up, seemed subtle Indications that he held Pessimistic Views in regard to the much-discussed Sex. It must be remembered that he had drunk the Pleasures of a Dancing Academy to the very Dregs and had Whiled away the Hours with every Type of Vamp under the High School Age.

Before blaming Freddie for being so Bloozy, one should charitably consider that he was a Man who, in taking his Fling, had been played upon by the Fates and had endured and suffered.

Not long ago he crawled out one Morning and sat on the edge of the bed, brooding over the Decadence of the whole Social Organization. There had been many Changes since the remote and glorious Days of 1930 and Freddie, surveying them in the cold Light of Experience was compelled to admit that doggone Few of them had been to the Good.

Jewelry Strictly Banned

For instance, there was his Shirt. Why hadn't some one taken some Action or done something in regard to Shirts in general? The Prince of Wales had made it practically impossible for any Fellow who was up to Snuff and a real Dinger to wear anything except a Blue Shirt with Soft Collar attached. At first these Blues had been O. K. Full of Snap, Peppy, you understand. They looked Great in conjunction with any kind of College Diagonal or Knitted Effect in the Cravat Line. Regular old Yale and Harvard Stuff.

Then, when the Prince had every Hot Dog in the World sporting a Robin's Egg Blue with a discouraged Collar, what does he do but pull out for Martabeleland, Rhodesia and the Argentine, leaving all the Chaps flat? They had waited Week after Week for a Genius to rise up and reveal some such Inspiration as an up-and-down striped Collar keeping Company with a clay-colored Shirt and a Butterfly Bow of rich gangrenous Shade, but evidently no Sartorial Hero had the Courage to dispute a Supreme Authority. No wonder Freddie had to sigh deeply as he sized up the hateful Garment, which was made of the material used in lining Suit Cases.

After that he permitted himself to give way to melancholy Reflections on the Matter of Stick Pins. He knew that he could not wear one without becoming a Social Pariah but he asked himself why these pleasing little Ornaments had been taken away from the Man of Fashion. He had some approximate Pearls and a ruby-red Set with Twinklers and often he longed to flash them on the World and make it a happier Place of Residence, but he had the Dope on what Men are wearing this Year and he had studied all of the Sock and Clothing Ads and he knew that America's Junior Aristocracy must ever carry a Pained Expression but avoid Jewelry.

Within a Few Minutes he was visited by another great Sorrow. Schooled, as he was, by Contact with a Hard World, he forgot himself for the Moment and almost made a Display of Temper. It was while he was applying the Goo which is supposed to lay the Hair straight Back, the same as on a Bird Dog, and give it the gloss of Patent Leather.

Bermudians Will Buy Portrait of Founder

The Bermuda Historical society has entered into negotiations for the purchase of the portrait of the founder of the Bermuda colony, Sir George Somers and his wife, now in a private collection in England, according to the Bermuda, the pictorial magazine of Bermuda. The islands were long known as the Somers Islands, partly in his honor and partly in description of the climate, while the first capital of the Bermudas, St. George's, preserves his Christian name and commemorates the patron saints of England.

Sir George Somers was one of the Elizabethan sea-dogs who made England's name feared on the seas at the close of the sixteenth century. He made three voyages to the West Indies, on the third of which, en route to the starving settlement in Virginia, he was shipwrecked on one of the coral reefs of Bermuda. Here he built two ships of the native cedar, and continued his voyage, but returned from Jamestown later in the

Before him, stark and threatening, loomed the Ordeal of Breakfast. Would it be Melon or Grapefruit, and in either Case, what Assurance did he have that it would be served cold and ripe?

On the Morning of the Day which held so much Tribulation for Our Hero, the Toast was too thick and scorched on one side and the Coffee had a funny Taste. The Pioneers who came out and built the Log Cabins did not suffer all the Hardships. We'll tell the bleeding World!

A Tough Existence

It was during Freddie's Run-In with unsatisfactory Food and slow Service that he made certain caustic References to Modern Journalism. He said the Papers were getting punk. This fact did Criticism was evoked by the Fact that he could not find under "Social Happenings" any Reference to the sickly Party he had attended the Night before.

Just when he was beginning to edge out into the Sunshine he ran plump into a Cloud of Gloom and was in the Depths once more. It seemed that the Bonehead at the Garage had failed to fill the Car. If Freddie chafed under the Delay and spoke sharply to the Menial, it must be taken into Consideration that he had trained his Relatives to anticipate his wishes, consequently it irked him to be stood up like a Wet Umbrella. Especially when the Cigarettes didn't seem right. Not enough imported Tobacco in them. Life was turning out to be a bitter Experiment but he tried to bear up.

Of course, he was ashamed to drive past Gertrude's House in a Last Year's Car. Why, he asked, had he been cursed with a Dad who was not only Tight but also Tyrannical? What was the Big Idea of all this Mooching about getting Home by 2 a. m.?

As he loafed along the Country Lane, accompanied by a hardened Roue who would be 19 in January, he was doing barely 55 miles an Hour, when a Constable with Bad Manners flagged him and slipped him a Summons. He wondered if Conditions were any worse in Soviet Russia.

While he was at Luncheon he said he could remember the Times when Pie a La Mode was dandy.

The new Release at the Picture House was the same old Junk. He said they had a lot of Muttts out in Hollywood.

He walked out of the Dancing Dump after a fretful Two Hours, because the Jazz was all over Three Weeks Old.

His Parents couldn't get a Word out of him at Dinner. They had green Olives on the Table, knowing all the Time that he preferred Ripe ones, stuffed. It began to look like a Conspiracy.

At the Party that Evening he had to admit, in the Presence of several care-worn Veterans attending the Prep School, that Girls were not nearly as Nifty as they were away back in 1929.

Jumper Frock a Smart Campus Item

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASHION has re-discovered the jumper or guimpe frock, if you so prefer to call it. Now that this interesting type of dress has been put on the map again, joy reigns in the realm of campus, school room and office, for was there ever or could there ever be any style of frock more practical than the one which can change its sleeves and its neckline effect at a moment's notice simply by taking unto itself a different blouse or guimpe?

Most of the fashion columns and pictures and cables from Paris are delivering the message of contrasting sleeves and no doubt the revival of the jumper frock is directly traceable to this influence. As one designer expresses it, "they make the frock"—such as, for instance, sleeves of tissue metal cloth or those which are much be-spangled or embroidered which sound a brilliant note for some of the handsomest velvet, satin or crepe dinner gowns shown in the new collections.

Which all goes to show that the call for contrasting sleeves seems to be "opportunity knocking at the door" of the jumper frock to become formal when it so elects. Which is exactly what has happened—formal as well as informal jumper or guimpe dresses. The velvet gown cut low to the waistline with suspender-like straps over the shoulder worn with a generously sleeved blouse or guimpe of exquisite lace is one of the new numbers on the program of stately evening costumes.

The jumper frock of black tulle crepe shown to the left in the picture is a most practical type for the campus, since it permits of variety and freshness of appearance by merely substituting different blouses. In this instance the blouse with its stylish wide-at-the-armhole sleeves is made of crepe so as to simulate shirring.

Plaid to wear with his same black crepe frock is a timely suggestion, for the outlook is for a "plaid season." Designers are doing very interesting and novel things with plaid and they especially sponsor the jumper frock worn with a plaid blouse. Perhaps there is none more attractive than the blouse made of plaid velvet, and the best of it is, it's "different" and, it goes without saying, extremely flattering.

Another argument in favor of contrasting guimpes is they make possible the transforming of formal evening frock into a less formal afternoon type. The picture to the right is a good illustration of this. One of its clever points is that the dress wraps around and ties at the side to the back so that when off it can be laid flat and folded for traveling—ideal for the college girl's wardrobe.

A new color combination this season and one which is becoming very popular is pink with the new dark red wine shades. For the jumper frock this color alliance is very effective, the dress, of course, being in a deep wine shade with pink tulle crepe or a triple sheer weave for the blouse. Another attractive idea is the blouse of lace dyed the same color as the dress which it posed over it.

GAY COLORS MARK NEW SPORTS SUITS

The new sports clothes for fall will appear in every color of the well-known rainbow. Especially the knitted things.

Of course, the dark browns and hunter's greens, the wine reds and navy blues won't be crowded off the fashion map. But they are to be joined by a riotous array of colors.

The new knitted sports suits, many with long belted coats and others in the popular swaggar suit styles, will appear in multi-colored stripes, plaids and gay solid colors.

Bright shades of red and green will be prominent on the sports fashion map. For instance: Emerald, pea green, rust, pimento, cherry red and the lighter wines.

The dark sports suits will be brightened up by gaily striped sweaters and blouses.

"Down-in-Front" Effect Feature of Late Hats

The new down-in-front hats are most alluring, most amusing. The hat itself is set rather high up on the head, but a soft little feather fancy or a soft little bow comes down over the brow at one side.

They are most becoming, these new hats, and far more becoming to many women than the off-the-forehead hats ever were.

Velvet and wool jerseys are used for some of the new little hats that are shown now in Paris. They are light and soft and altogether most charming. And they are made, of course, in all the smart color combinations.

Chiffon Quite Correct for Wear in Evening

Quite correct is printed chiffon, even if some women have declared themselves against prints for evening. A pretty evening frock is of black chiffon with a small floral print in green, white and red. Wide shirring gives the waistline a wide belted look and the frock has a tiny vestee of alencon lace and there are white velvet flowers just above the waistline.

Making a sensation these days are some most original feather boas. With a white chiffon dress one woman wears a boa of white coq feathers, wired to curve up gracefully over the shoulders.

SATIN SLEEVES by CHERIE NICHOLAS

The frock of rough-surfaced crepe which has satin sleeves is, playing a stellar role in the new autumn fashions. Usually the sleeves are very wide at the armhole or they are apt to be leg o' mutton style or some styling along generous lines which makes them conspicuous for according to the dictate of style creators, sleeves must be made the center of attraction. The scarf of satin tied in a soft bow at the neck adheres to the new high-about-the-throat silhouette.

Detachable Furs for Autumn Coats Latest

Coats coming out for autumn wear are cut on depression lines, which really means that it is going to be very fashionable to have detachable fur trimmings that can be used on various clothes. First fall fashions being seen on the rue de la Paix indicate many separate capelets, draped collars and scarves and sets to be worn with several frocks and coats. Straight long coats, tied-on or buttoned-up ones are on the style er-r-d.

Latest Suggestions From Style Centers

Frings decks some of the newest evening clothes. Evening jewelry is 75 per cent precious or imitation of precious stones, notably pearls and diamonds. One of the newest shades offered in knitted costumes is the purplish wine shade that is called beetroot. A recent showing of new clothes for fall showed knitted stockings caps with a high rolled rim with sports outfits.

Swagger suits with bright-colored blouses are in good style. Rough-surfaced materials, especially crepes and satins lead in the fabric realm. Tailored daytime satin frocks, in black and off-blacks, are becoming fashionable. Fuchsia-red and primelle-colored evening frocks, with vivid color contrast, are stunning.

POULTRY

MUST NOT MARKET BROILER TOO SOON

Error That Is Often Made by Breeders.

Opinions differ as to the best time to send the broiler to market. Circumstances also differ, and isolated cases of good fortune in making sales cannot be taken as a sure guide for all conditions. "Many growers," says a dealer, "have failed to make money on broilers because they sold them too soon. A squab broiler at one and one half pounds is usually too small to show a profit. He has cost too much up to that point. The next half pound often represents the profit. There have been two difficulties in doubling the one and a half pounds broiler into a three-pounder; first, holding them that long; second, a market that will take them. Both difficulties are being overcome."

In New Jersey, a practice is now developing which is to take the broilers out of the batteries or from under the stoves, and place them in outdoor feeding coops with slatted fronts and slatted bottoms, where they can be grown successfully to twelve or thirteen weeks of age, and to weights of three to three and a half pounds. Some buyers in the East already favor these larger weights, and there is good reason to believe that this attitude will develop further. At the recent "Fact Finding Conference" of the American poultry industries, held in Chicago, W. F. Priebe, one of the largest poultry and egg buyers in the West, said that "a three-pound chicken may be worth as much per pound as a two-pound chicken." Mr. Priebe thereupon warned farmers in the Middle West to keep away from little broilers, saying:

"Our hotels have discovered that the breast of a three-pound chicken gives more satisfaction than a one and a half-pound broiler. One reason is the price; the other is their customers. Now, the larger the bird, the more money you make. You are losing up to certain weight of bird. My advice to you is to have your bird grow to at least three pounds—up to three, four and five pounds, and you will make more money."

Cost of Raising Flock Must Be Given Thought

The four most important factors to be considered if broilers and pullets are to be raised at a low cost are the quality of the chicks, the quality and efficiency of the brooding equipment, the feed used, and the sanitation.

Quality of chicks comes first, because nothing gives a poorer start toward low production costs than cheap chicks from untested stock.

Brooding equipment is next in line, and quality and efficiency rather than low price should govern one's choice. Well-made equipment will lower the overhead by giving years of satisfactory service.

Feed, which is approximately 50 per cent of the brooding cost, should be bought in large quantities at cash prices to take advantage of all savings. Store the feed carefully, away from rats and mice. Eliminate waste by using efficient feed hoppers.

A sanitary program will do much to lower brooding and rearing mortality. Follow the up-to-date practices recommended by the poultry department experts at Michigan State college—Missouri Farmer.

Small Turkeys Sell Best

Turkeys have come within the modern trend toward smaller units. Where as buyers formerly demanded big birds, such as heavy toms, and hens sold at a discount, the demand now is for birds that weigh eight to ten pounds, dressed. This year smaller birds brought a three to four cent premium over the heavy birds, states H. L. Shrader, United States Department of Agriculture poultryman. This same trend has been noted in the demand for lighter cuts of other meats. Smaller family dinners likely accounts for the change in holiday demands.—Prairie Farmer.

Placing Brooder House

The brooder house should be placed on a part of the farm land which has been sown with alfalfa and where no poultry was raised for two or three years. If breeding is done early in the spring, it is a good custom to make a platform in front of the colony, so that the chicks may get the direct rays from the sun. This platform should be surrounded with wire trelis until such time as the chickens are old enough to be allowed a free range.

Turkey Ration

Turkeys will readily adapt themselves to feeding methods during the winter and the use of a ration of mixed grains, accompanied by mash mixture similar to the ordinary hen egg laying mash, should be supplied to them early enough to induce an early start in production if the desired early hatched poulters are to be had. Starting the mash January 1 or soon afterward, should start egg production not later than the latter part of March.

Looking to the Future

When times are hard and crops fail, we look to our chickens to help tide us over, so we expect to follow our usual poultry program next year. This plan includes having about 1,000 early chickens hatched from our own eggs, raising as many of them as we can with the aid of two good brooder stoves, plenty of the best feed obtainable, lots of care and work, plus good, healthy parent stock, good care and a reliable hatchery.—Nebraska Farmer.

Girl at the Top in Health Tests

Millions of boys and girls all over the world, thousands of them right here in the West, are being restored to health and strength by the purely vegetable tonic and laxative known as California Fig Syrup and endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

Children need no urging to take it. They love its rich, fruity flavor. Nothing can compete with it as a gentle, but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. It stimulates the appetite, helps digestion. A Kansas mother, Mrs. Dana Alligre, 610 Monroe St., Topeka, says: "Bonnie B. is absolutely the picture of health, now, with her ruddy cheeks, bright eyes and plump but graceful little body and she stands at the top in every health test."

Much of the credit for her perfect condition is due to California Fig Syrup. We have used it since babyhood to keep her bowels active during colds or any children's ailments and she has always had an easy time with them. She always responds to its gentle urging and is quickly back to normal."

Ask your druggist for California Fig Syrup and look for the word "California" on the carton so you'll always get the genuine.

How One Woman Lost 10 Lbs. in a Week

Mrs. Betty Luedeke of Dayton writes: "I am using Kruschen to reduce weight—I lost 10 pounds in one week and cannot say too much to recommend it."

To take off fat easily, SAFELY and HARMLESSLY—take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast, go lighter on fatty meats, potatoes, butter, cream and pastries—it is the safe way to lose unsightly fat and one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle. Get it at any drugstore in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the safest way to lose fat—money back.

But be sure and get Kruschen Salts—imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health.

In other words, come in now, enroll your name, pay the regular subscription rate of $2.00 and we will send you the paper for fifteen months for that sum. This practically makes the subscription rate $1.50 for the first year to new subscribers.

You must pay the regular rate of $2.00 and upon doing so, get the paper for fifteen months—regular year for $2.00 and the extra three months free.

Upon renewals, the subscriber, in order to benefit from this concession, must pay up all arrears and one year in advance. If you are already paid in advance, by paying an extra $2.00 between now and January 1st, 1933, you too, will be given the same offer—namely: receive an additional three months' subscription free.

Owing to the fact that old man depression has hit this country a terrific body blow, and everyone is trying to reduce expenses, this offer should appeal to the majority of the people of this vicinity. A vast number of readers feel that they cannot afford to keep the home paper at the former price. By taking advantage of this offer now, you get the STATESMAN for fifteen months for $2.00, where formerly you paid the same amount for twelve months. The supply of hogs available for slaughter in the United States in the next six months will be somewhat smaller than for the same period a year ago, but because feed supplies are more plentiful and more uniformly distributed, considerably more hogs may be produced next year than this, states the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

OAT FEED SUBSTITUTE WHEN HAY SUPPLIES ARE RUNNING LOW

With many Fond du Lac County farms short on hay for winter feeding, a feed which is well worthy of consideration as an efficient and economical substitute for hay is oat feed.

Gust Bobstedt, of the Wisconsin college of Agriculture, considers oat feed the most economical feed at present prices, which, comparatively speaking, costs less a ton than ordinary baled bedding and only half or a third of the price of hay.

It is a by-product of the milling industry and consist of ground oat hulls, oat shorts, and oat middlings, having a guaranteed analysis of not less than five per cent protein and not more than 30 per cent fiber. As such, it has proved in feeding trials to be much like timothy hay when fed as a roughage to cows, horses and sheep. Feeding trials with dairy cows have shown that oat feed may be fed as a substitute for timothy hay.

Oat feed, appearing much like oats ground, can also be used in a grain mixture—about two pounds of oat feed being required to replace one pound of corn or hominy feed. Being a ground feed, yet having the feeding qualities of timothy hay, it may be used in a mixture to take the place of both hay and grain. Such a mixture which is both economical and efficient, with a cost of less than $10 a ton would, according to Bobstedt, consist of 600 pounds of oat feed; 300 pounds bran; 100 pounds linseed meal; 20 pounds ground limestone; and 10 pounds of salt preferably the iodized kind. Cows on experiment have eaten 20 lbs. of this mixture a day along with their regular amount of silage.

Where there is no silage, no hay and no grain, and where feed must be purchased, Bobstedt suggests the following mixture which may be fed to cows as an "all mash" ration: oat feed, 1200 pounds; bran, 300 pounds; linseed meal, 100 pounds; ground lime stone, 24 pounds; and salt, 12 pounds. A 1000 pound cow, producing about 25 pounds of milk daily, will eat from 30 to 36 pounds of this mixture a day. For well producing cows, it is considered advisable to feed cull potatoes or beet pulp as a succulent roughage. It may also be well to moisten the dry feed with water.

While these are not ideal rations they do supply nutrients at very low cost and it may be good business in some cases to use them as a means of cutting feeding costs to the minimum.
