HARTFORD SALOON KEEPER ROBBED

Last week Saturday noon two prosperous appearing young men held up and robbed Conrad Geuss, proprietor of a saloon in Hartford of $1,600. They drove an automobile with a Pennsylvania license, and left Hartford suddenly Saturday, leaving behind an unpaid board bill.

Mr. Geuss, the victim, told the Hartford police officials, that the men came into his place and ordered sandwiches and drinks, and while serving same, one of the bandits pushed a gun in his stomach and ordered him into a rear room, where he was relieved of approximately $1,600, which he carried in his pockets, then left him gagged and bound on the floor. ROOSEVELT CARRIES 42 STATES HOOVER 6.

A revolution occurred at the polls on Tuesday, the result of which the Democrats swept the entire nation. Not only was Franklin D. Roosevelt elected President, and John N. Garner, Vice-President, but they won by the largest majority of electoral votes and by the largest popular vote ever given to any president and vice-president. The latest figures show that the Democrats won in 42 states with a total electoral vote of 472, while Mr. Hoover only carried 6 states for a total of 59 electoral votes.

Four years ago when Hoover was elected in a Republican landslide he received 444 electoral votes and Smith 87. The states won by Hoover in this election were Connecticut, Maine, Delaware, New Hampshire and Pennsylvania.

With the Democratic landslide went down old time Republican Senators and Congressmen. From latest returns the Democrats will have at least 56 Senators, although they are claiming sixty, while in the House of Representatives they are certain of 260 with possibilities of having close to 300. In the race for United States Senators there were 35 seats at stake, of these the Democrats won at least twenty-five.

Some of the things that the newly elected President Roosevelt and the Democratic Congress will take immediate action on after March 4th, are:

An immediate and drastic reduction of governmental expenditures to accomplish a saving of not less than 25 per cent in the cost of federal government.

Repeal of the Eighteenth amendment, and the immediate modification of the Volstead Act to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and beverages.

A sound currency to be preserved at all hazards.

Roosevelt carried the State of Wisconsin by over 300,000.

SCHMEDEMAN THE NEXT GOVERNOR

As the nation went so went the state, A. G. Schmedeman, mayor of Madison was elected as Governor over Walter J. Kohler. His plurality will exceed 100,000 when all returns are tabulated. With him was won every state office with the exception of Secretary of State, Theodore Damman, the present Republican incumbent being retained, having defeated Adam Port in a close race. This is the first time in 38 years that a Democrat has been elected Governor in Wisconsin.

From all indications the Democrats will have full control of the state senate and state assembly.

DUFFY DEFEATS CHAPPLE FOR U. S. SENATE

F. Ryan Duffy of Fond du Lac was the successful Democratic candidate for United States Senator, he having defeated John B. Chapple of Ashland. Mr. Duffy's plurality will exceed 200,000. He will succeed John G. Blaine, who was defeated for renomination by Mr. Chapple in the primaries.

FOND DU LAC COUNTY RESULTS

LOCAL BOYS HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Three local young men, William Schaefer, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Schaefer, Otto Stenscheke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Traugott Stenscheke, of the village, and Otto Ramthun, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Ramthun, of the town of Kewaskum, suffered injuries early last week Friday morning, while returning from a dance at Mt. Calvary, when the automobile in which they were riding, skidded in loose gravel at the intersection of County Highway "H" and State Highway 55, near Lake De Neve, Fond du Lac county and went into a ditch.

William Schaefer, one of the occupants of the auto, which belonged to Otto Ramthun, was the most seriously injured. He suffered a very badly lacerated cheek and a skull fracture. For several days he was in a very critical condition, but at present is doing very nicely.

Otto Stenscheke received a fractured collar bone and several cuts and bruises. Otto Ramthun escaped with two broken ribs and minor bruises. The latter was able to give his friends first aid and go to a nearby filling station, from where a doctor was summoned. After being given temporary medical attention the three injured men were brought to their local homes, where local physicians gave them further medical attention and dressed their wounds.

The result of the accident is a great blow to the Kewaskum High School Basketball team, as both Young Stenscheke and Schaefer, were active members of said club, each playing the forward position. The injuries will mean that both will be unable to play this season.

BIDS OPENED AT CAMPBELLSPORT

The depression perhaps was the cause that fifty eight general bids, which included about 200 sub-bids for the installation of a sewage and water system at Campbellsport last week Saturday.

The attendance of the bidders at the opening of the bids was so large that the village board found it necessary to hold their meeting in Bauer's hall.

The bids averaged from $10,000 to $15,000 less than the estimates of the engineers. Bids for the complete sewer lines and manholes ranged from $21,000 to $37,000 while bids on the water system labor ranged from $8,500 to $16,525. The pump station costs averaged $5,700. For pumping station and disposal plant, the bids were from $10,607 to $16,460. Separate bids were submitted for labor and materials.

There were bidders present from Fond du Lac, Appleton, Milwaukee, Wauwatosa, Sheboygan, Elgin, Ill., St. Paul, Minn., and numerous other cities.

No action was taken on the bids, but the engineer was instructed to tabulate all bids and make a report to the village board on November 17.

The low bids received practically assure the citizens of Campbellsport of a Water Works and Sewage system. Before the project was accepted by the voters of that village, three special elections were held the past few years.

This list of organizations is to be known as the Washington County Taxpayers' Alliance. SYNOPSIS

Wilson McCann, young Arizona ranchman, finds an old friend, Jim Yerby, with a broken leg. Julia Stark, daughter of Matthew Stark, favorite enemy of the McCanns, is rendering first aid, taking a note from Julia to her father, Wilson is fired on by Jasper, Julia's brother. On the way from Yerby's place to her home, Julia learns her companion's identity and dismisses him in anger, the old feud ranking. Ann Gifford, with her young sister, Ethel, are sheep raisers, and on that account unpopular with the cattlemen. "Night riders" burn a cabin and shoot a McCann ranch hand. Peter McCann, Wilson's father, offers a reward for the disclosure of their identity. Wilson McCann horsewhips Jasper, he making practically no resistance. Matthew disowns his son for his cowardice, and posts notice he will kill Wilson McCann on sight.

CHAPTER IV

Red Tragedy

Wilson drew up among the scrub pines on the side of the horseback across from Yerby's cabin. These days he followed roundabout trails and moved with extreme caution. For his life had been posted by a man who never made vain threats. It was the sight of a white-faced bay standing in front of the house that brought him up short now.

With the trained eye of a cowpuncher he recognized the horse instantly. He had last seen it on a certain moonlit night and Julia Stark had been in the saddle. But he had no certainty that she was using it today. Some one else might be waiting for him in Jim's cabin—say Jasper Stark or his father or that Texas killer, Gitner. He decided to play safe.

From its place beside the saddle he drew a rifle and tested its mechanism. This done, he crept on all fours through the greasewood and the yucca till he had put a long hundred yards between him and Jim Dandy. Behind a clump of cholla he squatted and watched the house patiently. For nearly half an hour he did not stir. Except his eyes he was motionless as a statue.

Julia Stark might not be alone with Yerby, though the fact that he could see only one saddled horse pointed to that conclusion. With the greatest care, he worked toward the house from the rear.

When at last he reached the window Wilson raised his head slowly and looked inside. Julia had seated herself and was evidently just about to read aloud from a book. Jim was sitting in a chair with his leg propped up in another chair in front of him.

Wilson went back to his horse, rode across the arroyo, and shouted, "Hello the house!"

Miss Stark came to the door. She stood erect and uncompromisingly hostile, watching him as he dismounted. Her dark look was like a flashing sword.

He nodded good morning without response.

"How's Jim?" he asked. She stood aside to let him pass into the house, gathering her skirts close so that he would not brush against her as he went by. Nothing could have expressed more positively her detestation of him than that disdainful gesture.

With jingling spur he moved across the room. "How are you, Dad?"

"Pat like a match. What you know that's new?"

"Not much. Gather of heaves on Poison creek next month. Some more rustling up in the hills, they say." McCann chattered easily, casually, with the nester, ignoring the burning resentment that held the girl passionately silent. His manner was coolly indifferent, but not for a moment was he off guard.

Watching him covertly, Julia saw a sudden change in the lounging figure. The back straightened and the muscles grew taut. Every sense had quickened to the touch toward the house.

Julia moved quickly to the door, then drew a breath of relief. She had dreaded and half expected to see her father. But the approaching figure was that of a young woman.

The new arrival was Ann Gifford. She had brought with her a cake. Since Yerby's accident she had been in the habit of coming every day to supply the simple needs. Even her fierce aloofness had not been proof against the little man's good will. No body who knew him could continue to dislike Jim Yerby.

"Meet Miss Julia Stark, Miss Gifford," their host said, and after pronouncing the formula added: "Miss Julia she's just back from Los Angeles, where she's learned 'most everything they is to know about them schoolbooks, I reckon."

Julia laughed at this testimonial as she stepped forward to shake hands. She had wanted to meet the Gifford girls ever since her return. Ann was still holding the cake and she did not put it down. Coldly she bowed.

"I called the other day, Miss Gifford, but you weren't at home," Julia said. "May I come again—some day soon?"

"We're often out with the sheep," Ann replied.

It was a rebuff, but Julia refused to accept it. "You can't be out all the time I'll try my luck again," she said.

Yerby tried to cover Ann's discourtesy by a flux of words. "Miss Julia she's just startin' to read to me from this here David Dickens book."

"David Copperfield," Julia corrected. "Sure enough, Dickens he's the fellow that owns the brand. Well, I was sayin' that this Steerford duck, the one that done hit Emily dirt, why some one had a horse hang his hide out to dry, seems like. I can't hold with dry-gulching, you understand, but there's times—"

The nester stopped abruptly, the springs of his garrulity dried up. A glance at Ann Gifford's frozen face had done it. He recalled the rumors that had come to him as to the reason why Nora had gone to Los Angeles and embarrassment flamed in his countenance.

McCann rescued him by commenting on the number of characters in the book. "I never did see so many foot-loose folks trailin' around. There's David an' Peggoty an' Miss Betsy an' the Murdstones an' Barkis—"

"Looks like he'd have trouble with all them folks millin' around in his haid whilst he was writin'," the old-timer mused aloud. "But this Dickens guy sure knows how to throw a rope so as to cut out any of 'em from the herd when he's good an' ready."

Ann Gifford did not stay. Her manner implied that she wanted to have nothing to do with any of them except Yerby.

The nester spoke first. "I'd like right well to do something for her an' her lil' sister if I knew what," he said, wrinkling his forehead in thought. "O' course sheep are pests. I ain't denyin' that none. But seems like these girls ain't hardly to blame because old Andy Gifford was so mean and obstinate he plumb wasn't contented till he'd started trouble."

"Exactly how I feel," McCann agreed.

Julia had opened her lips to say substantially the same thing, but she closed them again without speaking. She did not intend to be of the same opinion as Wilson McCann on any subject.

Nevertheless she had a word to say to him, and before she left she said it. He had stepped out to bring a bucket of water from the spring. She met him under a live oak a few yards from the house.

"You know my father is looking for you?" she said abruptly.

"Some one did mention that to me," he said.

"Why don't you go away? Why don't you leave the country?" she demanded.

"Because Matt Stark has served notice on me of his intentions?" he asked grimly. "What kind of a man would I be if I ran away after that? Am I the one lookin' for trouble? Did I print bills sayin' I'd kill him on sight?" His face was hard as hammered iron.

"You know why he did that—because you jumped on Jasper when he wasn't looking and beat him when he couldn't defend himself."

He laughed scornfully. "That's the story he's telling, is it?"

"And now Father's crazy mad. If you don't go away—"

"I'm not going," he cut in harshly. "Then some one will be killed," she cried despairingly.

"Yes."

His brown competent fingers were on the barrel of the rifle he had been carrying in one hand. There flowed through her a sense of his virile power. This man was dangerous. His force expressed itself in the cool quiet eyes, in the clean lines of the face and figure, in a certain wary stillness that meant reserve strength.

"If you'd only go—while there's still time—"

Her distress touched his not very accessible heart, the more because he knew her capable of fierce and primitive passion. Independence and courage were of the essence of her. But her pride could not stand out against the shadow of tragedy hovering in the background.

"I can't go. What would folks say?"

"Does it matter what they'd say if you were doing right?" she asked.

"It would matter to me. Besides, I'd not be doing right to go. This is where I live—the only country I know. I can't let anyone run me out. I've got to go through."

"Why have you?" she pleaded. "It's all wrong, this feud. If you'd just go away, for a while, maybe things would quiet down. Then you could come back."

He shook his head. "No, I can't go. I don't want to have any trouble with your father, but if he's bent on it, why it'll have to come."

With a little gesture of hopelessness she gave up. It was of no use. Before making the attempt to move him she had known it would be. For according to the frontier code he was right. None but a weakling could run away after an enemy had served notice that he was looking for him.

As she turned away his voice stopped her.

"I'll promise one thing. It'll be a fair fight far as I'm concerned—no layin' in the bushes an' waitin' for him."

Her dark troubled eyes rested in his. Their appealing beauty disturbed him. He would have liked to give peace to her worried soul. But he could offer no assurance. When the hour came, if it lay within his power, he must strike her to the heart.

Much stirred, he watched her lissom young body as it moved with light rhythm toward the house. She belonged to the enemy clan, but he could not hold her in cold disapproval. An enemy, yes! But already he knew her a very dear one whose presence filled the secret places of his being.

As Jasper Stark moved about the streets of Mesa with his slouching gait his eyes furiously questioned public opinion to discover what it thought of him. His manner of braggadocio still sat on him, but it was a hollow mockery. He was full of shame, resentment, and self-pity. Hatred surged in him.

He sent for Gitner. That hardy ruffian straddled into an upstairs room of the Gilt Edge and looked at young Stark with a scarcely veiled anger.

"Sit down," Jasper growled, with annoyed impatience. "I wanta talk." He pushed the bottle on the table toward the other man.

Gitner took a chair and a drink. He offered no comment. There was a tactical advantage in forcing the other to lead and he availed himself of it.

"Shove that bottle north by west," Stark said surlily, and then poured himself a large drink. He tossed it down at a gulp and almost at once replenished the tumbler. Morosely he eyed the liquor. "The old man been to town this week?"

"No. Last time he was in was the day he reeled the riot act to you." Gitner grinned maliciously. "But he's had Fletcher out to the ranch an' they spent 'most a whole mornin' together."

Jasper gloomed at his drink and poured it down his throat without visible pleasure.

"He was making a will, don't you reckon?" he said at last.

"I reckon."

"Question is, has he signed it yet?"

"If you want to know, who don't you go ask him?" suggested the Texan with sarcasm.

"I don't need to ask him. He hasn't. Fletcher would draw it up when he come back to town. That would be the way they fixed it. But Fletcher had to leave Thursday night again for Phoenix to argue a case before the Supreme court. He got back this afternoon, not more 'an an hour ago. He'll finish writing up the will tomorrow."

"Looks like," agreed the man from the Lone Star state.

"An' he'll take it out either in the afternoon or next day."

"Sounds reasonable. Better kiss the ranch good-by, Jas."

The eyes of the two met and held fast. There was something of crouched significance in Jasper's narrowed gaze. It brought the other man to a wary and alert attention. He knew that he was going to find out now why he had been asked to come here.

They talked, in whispers, for an hour, their heads close and the door locked. Not once, though they drank much, did their voices lift. It might have been noticed, if anyone had been observing them, that Gitner left the Gilt Edge half an hour before his companion. Nobody but Hans the bartender knew that they had been in the room together.

At the hotel waiting for him Jasper found his sister. They walked a little distance down the road to be alone.

"No use, Jas," she told him. "I've fought it out with Dad and he won't listen to a word. He's cutting you out of his will."

"That'll suit you an' Phil," he sneered. "What do you care if I do get a rotten deal?"

Her scornful eyes flashed anger at him. "That's a nice thing to say, after I quarreled with Dad about it for you. But you always were a poor loser."

"I haven't lost yet," he snarled. "If you think I'll sit down an' let him cut me out my share of the ranch, why, you've got another guess. I'll not stand for it."

"You can't help yourself," Julia told him curtly. His boasting was an old story with her and she gave it no weight. "What's the matter with you anyhow, Jas? Why didn't you stand up and fight Wils McCann?"

"Tell you he hit me when I wasn't lookin'. Tell you I was dazed an' I fell. He jumped me when I was down. It's the honest-to-God truth."

She was convinced he was lying to save his face, but there was no use telling him so.

"When are you going?" she asked. "Goin' where?"

"Away from here."

"Who said I was going?"

"Why, I thought—Dad said—"

"I don't care what he said. He's not runnin' me. When I get good an' ready maybe I'll go an' maybe I won't."

She came to a subject that never was long from her thoughts. The fact that she mentioned it at all to her brother, from whom she could expect no help, showed how much the dread of it obsessed her.

"I'm worried about Dad—awfully worried. Every time he rides away from the house my heart sinks. If he should meet that Wils McCann—and of course he will some time—"

"Does he ride alone?"

"Not if we can prevent it. I go with him when he'll let me—or Phil—and once or twice Dave Stone. But if Dad sees we're trying to protect him he gets wild and won't have it for a minute."

"Sure. That's the old man for you. Well, you tell him something for me."

"Making It Unanimous"

A man was presented with an account which he had good reason to believe had already been paid.

"Haven't I paid this account?" he asked the boy who brought it to him. "I don't know, sir," was the reply. "Does your boss know?"

"No, sir."

"How do you know that?"

"I heard him say so."

"And after that he had the impudence to send you to see if I knew, eh?"

"Well, sir, it's like this. The boss don't know, I don't know, and you don't know. As the boss says, if you pays it again we shall all know."

Julie. He's not the only man that's lookin' for Wils McCann."

Her startled eyes fastened to his. "What do you mean?"

"What do you reckon I mean? I'm a Stark, no matter what the old man says—an' he's a McCann an' on top of that he's done me dirt. I'll fix him, sure as he's a foot high. But keep it under yore hat. I ain't gettin' out any bills about it. No norse."

She was torn by conflicting emotions. That Jasper had spirit enough to fight his own battle, if he really meant it and would not weaken when it came to the test, was news that warmed her blood. The danger in which her brother stood might be averted if her brother met McCann first. Yet this was cold comfort. After the first flush of audacity for Jasper she knew by the chill that drenched her heart how dreadful it would be if any of her family killed Wilson McCann or were killed by him.

"Isn't there any way out, Jas—any way at all but this?" she cried, almost in a wall. "Do we have to start this—this awful feud? Surely there must be some way I could stop it if I only knew how."

Yellow lights gleamed like sinister beacons in his cold eyes. "No way. The McCann started this an' it'll have to go through now."

Julia turned back toward the hotel with sick foreboding in her heart.

Phil was blabbing a calf when his father came out to the porch.

"Goin' to Mesa, son. Hook up the team for me, won't you?"

The boy, before he went to the kitchen, Julia was making pies.

"He's going to Mesa," he said quickly.

Julia at once unfastened her apron. "Keep him here till I'm dressed," she told him, and moved in her swift light way to the bedroom she used.

While Phil, with the assistance of a wrangler, was hitching to a buckboard the half-broken colts his father drove, a rider jogged up and stopped to pass word. The man worked for an outfit down the river.

"Lo, Red!" Phil greeted him. "How they comin'?"

"No complaint, as of man Peters said when his third wife died. Everythin' fine an' dandy with you?"

Red eased his weight in the saddle to relax stiffened muscles and rolled a cigarette.

"Miz Rollins jes' got back from Los Angeles, and she happened on a piece of news out there right interestin'." He volunteered. "She was takin' care of her daughter whilst an interestin' event was occurin'. They was a nurse there to meet the lil' stranger the stork was bringin', an' it seems she was hired awhile ago to look after Noga Gifford, one o' them sheep-ranch women. The Gifford girl she had a hard time of it an' died—her an' the baby, too. Folks have kinda figured they was something wrong when the oldest sister come back alone. There's been right consid'able talk."

Phil flushed angrily. "Why don't they mind their own d-d business?" he blurted out. "We're in big business when we pick on some lone girls an' make their life hell for them."

The generous indignation of youth flamed in him.

"That's right, too," agreed Red. She was a mighty sweet girl. The lobo wolf that ruined her life had ought to be hunted down an' shot in his tracks."

"'T'heche!" agreed Red with the easy variability of the cowpuncher. "Dry-gulchin' wouldn't be none too good for him."

From his hip pocket he dragged a sack of "smoking." "I seen Wils McCann as I come up the road," he said, in a carefully casual voice. "He was fixin' the head gates of that ditch runnin' along the ridge to his father's place."

"Right now?" asked Phil instantly.

"Well, it's a good four-five miles from here. Say an hour ago."

Matthew Stark came out from the house and swung across the yard toward the stable with his strong bow-legged stride. As usual he carried a rifle. He had not covered twenty yards before Julia appeared.

"Oh Dad!" she called.

Stark stopped, waiting for her. But before she could frame her request he refused it.

"No, you can't go to town with me. I don't care how many dofunny you got to buy. No use your pesterin' me either. You ain't going. That's settled."

"We're out of salt, Dad, and canned tomatoes, and lots of things."

"You make a list. I'll get 'em. Now, honey, don't you argue with me about it. It won't be a mite of use."

She came up close and took him by the coat lapels. She had always been the center of his dearest love. In his heart he thought her the most beautiful and wonderful creature under heaven.

"I want to go—awfully," she whispered, her deep dark eyes appealingly earnest.

Exhibition Hints

It is well known that white or buff plumaged birds intended for exhibition are improved in appearance by "sifting" laundry starch into the feathers after they are washed with a good grade of soap and then rinsed in lukewarm water. In the final tubbing a little laundry bluing will help remove any yellow tinge. Proper drying after washing is essential. The bird must not be placed too close to a fire or the feathers will curl. Peroxide of hydrogen, diluted, will remove stains

Green Feed for Winter

Now is the time to provide a good stock of green feed for the hens during the coming winter. Alfalfa or clover hay can be obtained for the purpose; storage cellars can be built for such crops as beets or cabbage for next winter's flocks, and double yarding can be started so that there will be a green pasture for next spring. Rye or wheat can be sown for this purpose in the late fall months so it will make good growth before winter.

FARM POULTRY

PUTTING FLESH ON BIRDS FOR MARKET

Advice Applicable to All Turkey Raisers.

By O. C. UFFORD, Extension Poultryman, Colorado Agricultural College, WNU Service.

The range for turkeys to be fattened should be restricted, because excessive exercise on a free range prevents the birds from putting on flesh as they should.

A mash of ground feeds should be kept before them all the time, in hoppers. Any of the grains that are raised in the state, such as corn, wheat, oats or barley, may be used in this mash, which may be composed of equal parts by weight of the grains available.

In addition to mash, the turkeys being fattened should receive whole grain in the mornings and evenings. Some growers prefer to put the whole grain in hoppers and keep it before the birds at all times.

It may require some time before the turkeys take to grains they have not been used to, and any change in the ration of the flock should be made early enough that the birds will become accustomed to the change before the fattening period starts. Milk, if available, should be kept before the flock being fattened. It is also a good practice to soak some of the whole grain in milk before feeding it.

Fright Often Cause of Eggs With Soft Shells

Fright is often the cause of internally broken eggs which generally prove fatal. Fright is a common cause of soft-shelled eggs. Such eggs are not only a loss, but they are passed with such difficulty as to give rise to serious complications which may end with the loss of the pullet. Soft-shelled eggs may also be responsible for pullets contracting the egg-eating habit.

Moreover, fright seriously affects egg production. Unfortunately, fright often becomes a permanent condition and injury; let the pullets become frightened once and the least disturbance or irregularity afterwards will often cause them to go "all to pieces."

Whether a flock of pullets has "gone to nerves" or not may determine whether they will yield a profit or a loss.

Since fright may lead to serious conditions and losses, how can it be prevented? Simply by special care and management. When pullets are given no cause for fear they soon welcome the companionship of the caretaker or even visitors if due care and precaution are exercised.—Farm Journal.

Increases Size of Eggs

Increasing the size of eggs laid by a flock can be brought about by using only male birds from large-egg dams, states C. G. Burroughs, Dane county, Wisconsin. In three years the average weight of a dozen eggs from his flock has increased from 23.2 ounces to 26.4 ounces.

Mr. Burroughs attributes his early small-egg weights to a group of cockerels saved from heavy-producing, small-egg hens, but his present pullets are sired by cockerels from dams that produced eggs weighing from 28 to 27 ounces per dozen. In April this flock was the leader in the Record of Performance poultry flocks of the state.

In this contest production and egg size are both considered.—Prairie Farmer.

Hen Pests

Menopon gallinae, the common hen louse, is a profit-cutting poultry pest, and is known wherever hens congregate. Keeping company with the louse are the mites, the hen flea, and sundry relatives that specialize on eating feathers, sucking blood, or just pestering their victims. Cornell bulletin dealing with chicken lice and mites, and their control is available on request to the office of publication at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

Modern Fashions Banned

At Greengaz, Austria, and in the neighboring town of Feldkirch notices have been posted on the doors of all Catholic churches that every woman desiring to attend services must wear a dress which extends from not more than an inch below the neck to a point at least halfway between the knee and the ankle, and which has sleeves that reach the elbow.

Tolerant

Mrs. Bildee—Those people in the next yard aren't in our set.

Bildee—But they have a fine set of garden tools.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Wage War on Worms

Worms in poultry run the feed bill up, we are reminded by one of our folks in Washington. Says he: "The worms are always on the job and their continual sucking of blood means they are taking a large share of the birds' mash and grain. Many of the ailments of poultry, including paralysis and deficiency diseases, are the result of worms—roundworms, tapeworms, caeca worms." You can make similar charges against all parasites internal and external, of poultry and of stock.

HOLIDAY FOR ALL BANKS IN NEVADA

Reno Finds 12-Day Closing Helps Business.

Reno, Nev.—Reorganization of the twelve banking corporations controlled by the George Wingfield interests was under way as banks throughout Nevada took advantage of a 12 day holiday proclaimed by executive order.

In Washington, after a flight there by airplane, Gov. Fred Balzar sought a loan of two million dollars from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, while officials here worked to protect the interests of depositors.

The legal cessation of business was ordered by Acting Gov. Morley Griswold after an extended conference with state and banking executives.

Reno's merchants and bartenders discovered an unexpected business boom in what started out to be a panic. In the first 24 hours of the "banking holiday" that saw most of the financial institutions in the state closed, economic laws were turned topsy-turvy, spending was on a scale unequalled in recent months, and more big, round silver dollars were floating from hand to hand than in months.

The police station was doing the biggest banking business in town. Dice rattled with new vigor and roulette wheels whirled and spun incessantly as gambling picked up.

"This," tradesmen and divorce lawyers murmured sadly to themselves at the first shock of the moratorium, "is going to be all right. All the money is locked up. We'll be taking in cows on the hoof for canned peaches, and chickens for divorce decrees."

Alas for all laws of economics but luckily for business, the populace, like the banks, declared a holiday—but it was a buying holiday, a spending spree. Never, in recent months, has business been so good.

The First National was the only bank in the city to remain open. It stacked up $3,000,000 in cash.

"Come and get it," invited President Richard Kirnan.

"Come again tomorrow," he urged at closing time.

Others, whose quiet withdrawals in recent weeks were in part responsible for the "moratorium," also found themselves with cash in their pockets, or hidden in their sugar-bowls.

The gambling halls had their thousands of dollars kept ever ready to pay off winning streaks.

CHICAGO KIDNAPER SHOT TO DEATH

Roland McKenna Slain by Machine Gunners.

Chicago.—Roland McKenna, twenty-eight years old, alleged kidnaper of gamblers, was shot and killed in front of his home at 205 West Sixtieth street. He was struck by 23 machine gun bullets and shotgun slugs fired from a gun nest on the second floor of 2578 Wentworth avenue, across the street from his home.

McKenna's wife, Rose, saw him killed, and also the flashes of gunfire from the window opposite her home. She directed the police to the apartment from which the shots were fired. Investigation revealed that the slayers had rented the apartment on September 7 and then had maintained an almost nightly death watch on McKenna.

The police were satisfied that McKenna was slain because of his abduction campaign against bookmakers and other gamblers. McKenna knew he was marked for death, it was said. The police early in October were warned by an anonymous caller that if the department did not suppress him, his victims would take action.

McKenna alighted from a south-bound Wentworth avenue car at Sixtieth street and walked toward his home a few feet west of Wentworth avenue. As he neared the entrance, two second floor windows on the Sixtieth street side of the building at 2578 Wentworth avenue were opened. Shotgun and a submachine gun volleyed. Bullets riddled McKenna and splattered against the wall of his home.

As he fell four men ran out of the building where the gunfire had come, jumped into an automobile, and sped north in Wentworth avenue.

McKenna had a record as a minor hoodlum, once being tried for the attempted robbery of a handbook. One of his probable kidnaping victims was John Lynch, the police said. Sumptuous Fur Enriches Fall Suit

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THERE is this about the new suits which is outstanding, they make one feel fur-conscious until one can't get away from the idea that to be chic one's jacketed or caped two-piece, be it of cloth or velvet, simply must sport a lavish embellishment of either fox or lynx or astrakhan or leopard or panther or seal or ermine or "what have you" in the way of spectacular peltry.

After the sumptuousness of these fur trimmings has been duly impressed on one's mind, followers of fashion are due for another thrill in that the treatments of these fascinating fur details is as novel and daring as ingenious designers can conceive.

You can see for yourself, looking at the suit to the right in the illustration, that we are due for a season of conspicuous and unique fur trimmings. This afternoon costume is fashioned of one of the very new velvety woolsens, an exceedingly dark brown in this instance with natural colored fox in startling contrast. As to the neckline, fur is nil, which makes it smarter. If you will study the picture closely, you will discover that the tunic-coat fastens in a most interesting manner, in that a single wide scarf end of the material throws over one shoulder with a graceful streamer effect.

The stunning suit for formal wear shown to the left is a Molyneux creation. The suit is champagne colored with luxurious sable. The hat is brown with shoes to match.

There is just no telling about all the fascinating ways of fur trimmings as seen on the autumn and winter suits, for their clever gestures are too numerous to enumerate. However in this orgy of fur decoration which is fairly running riot in latest style showings, there are certain highlights which are especially significant.

There is, for example, the suit which has sleeves of fur, if not all of fur, at least the top part. They are, of course, of a flat type of peltry, perhaps astrakhan or ermine or possibly lapin dyed to match or contrast the cloth. Then also, there is the costume which has a capelet, the same bordered with deep fur—and listen to this—fastening at the back instead of the front.

And again there are jackets the top part of which have a sort of contraption which is half yoke and half bolero in appearance. Panther, the now-so-popular and particularly youthful-looking fur, works in smartly with beige jersey or tweed in this sort of an arrangement. To make it highly practical this bolero-like fur novelty together with its almost-to-the-elbow cuffs is detachable so as it may be worn with any costume.

Very genteel-looking and adaptable to versatile interpretation is the fur trimming which binds all edges with astrakhan or Persian lamb or some equally as supple and thin a type.

NEW CROCHET IDEAS

FURS OF ALL KINDS TRIM WINTER COATS

Furs of all kinds trim coats. There is mink, sable, dyed kolinsky, seal, beaver, nutria, krimmer and mole. Foxes of all kinds including the aristocratic silver fox, black, red and cross fox as well.

Suits are both tailored and dressy. The former are glorious in tweeds and novelty woolsens that have a British look about them and are minus fur. The dressy suits are best when made of dull surfaced materials, luxuriously and abundantly trimmed with rich fur, and always this fur is placed so that the checked look at the throat is achieved. Bright colored suits are exceedingly high fashion right now; with them are worn black or brown accessories. The choice is governed by the fur that adorns them.

Three-Purpose Dress Hailed in Winter Show

A new three-way costume ready for luncheon, tea or dinner was outstanding in the new style displays, climaxing the winter shows.

The costumes shown were black, brown and navy sleeveless velvet frocks, with skirts eight inches from the ground, accompanied by matching short jackets and fur-trimmed three-quarter-length coats.

The frock worn with the jacket, is ready for luncheon or tea. Worn without the jacket, it is suitable for dinner.

The most formal afternoon clothes seen in many years made their debut, predicting a return to the mode of tea-time elegance.

Paris Combines Pale Blue With Dark Colors

Pale blue, combined with darker colors, is one of the color surprises sprung by the fashionable dressmaking world of Paris, in advance showing of styles for the coming winter.

One of the favorite uses of the lighter blues is for afternoon dresses to be worn under dark coats.

Fable of Link's One Large Day

By GEORGE ADE

(© Bell Syndicate)—WNT Service.

ONCE there was an Industrial Slave whose Name did not appear in the History of his Own Times. He cut no ice except that he added a Grand Total of 1 to the Census Total. He was just another Passenger on the Trolley and another Pay Envelope on Saturday night and another Vote to be rounded up by the Precinct Captain. He was known to the Folks living Next Door and the Foreman remembered him from one Week to another and that is as far as his Fame ever spread. He wore Overalls and carried a Lunch Pail with a Cup inverted on the Top and pulled at a stubby Duedeen, which was about all of the Biographical Details available. Except that, being a Namesake of the great martyred President, he was commonly known as Link.

Nothing ever happened to him until he died and then he received as much worshipful Attention as ever was expended on a Crowned Head. He may have been a Mutt while he was breathing but the Moment he became cold he was a Prominent Citizen.

When he joined the Majority the bereaved Helpmate consulted the Bank Book, which showed a stingy Balance of $334. There was an unpaid Balance on the House and a Doctor Bill. Germany was well off as compared with Link's Family. However, a Sick Benefit had accrued from the Union.

So the poor bereaved Widow began to make arrangements for the Obsequies. She took all she had in sight and went into debt as far as she could let her go and gave his Nobs one Whale of a Fare-Ye-well.

While Link was here and the Missus used to go to the Mat about once so often. In fact, they averaged about three Armazeddons a Day, with the Issue always in doubt, but the Moment he cashed in, she remembered him as a Male Turtle Dove who did nothing but Coo.

He was a Tough Bird while he had his Health but the Minute he breathed his Last he was Snow White.

Alive and Kicking: Dead—Can't Kick.

As soon as they began making the Arrangements it occurred to her that they did not have, in the principal, high-priced, aristocratic Cemetery, a Lot which was in keeping with the Social Prominence and Eminent Virtues of the Deceased.

So she sent for one of the Trustees of the Graveyard and let her have a small Tract of Ground on a High Spot, commanding a good view, and all he charged her was about four times what she would pay for land at the corner of Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street.

After that she called in the Undertaker, who is a great help on such Occasions. He had a very beautiful Catalogue showing the different kinds of Caskets which might be purchased. He showed her some of the cheap ones but he very frankly admitted that possibly some of the Wood had Worm Holes in it and the Handles were not Sterling Silver, and, although he didn't want to influence her in any way, he suggested that she could not get any thing which would be worthy of the Dear Departed unless she picked out something in the Back Part of the Book.

The Widow must have been in a very Sentimental Mood when she picked out the Metal Casket that let down in front, the same as a Kitchen Cabinet. It had a lot of Puffed Satin and was guaranteed to stand up and remain in Good Condition for a great many Years, which didn't make any Difference, but the Widow felt for it just the same. She wanted Link to have the Best of everything.

While he was alive, she would holler until you could hear her a Block away if he bought a Collar Button that cost as much as 50 Cents, but now that he was gone and had become one of the Angels, let us hope, she couldn't think of anything too Recherche for him. So she ordered the kind of Coffin which is favored by New York Millionaires and when she heard the Price was Eight Hundred Dollars she wasn't feazed a trifle.

Then the Undertaker took up with her the Important Matter of how they should attire Link before spreading him out. He said that the neatest and niftiest and slickest Costume for a Gentleman of Standing was a Tuxedo with Pearl Studs and Patent Leather Dancing Pumps. Than which nothing could have been more appropriate for Link.

Soprano Tried for Distance.

He not only never had worn a Lew Cowly outfit but he never had seen one. What is more, it would have required a Fosse of very determined Men to get Link into a Tuxedo but, of course, they had him counted out and lynx Horizontal and the Widow was having her own Way, so she ordered, at a very high Price, a very beautiful Regatta suitable for one who is going to attend a Dinner Dance at the Ritz.

After they got Link into the Nobby Outfit it would be unfair to tell you that he looked different. If he ever appeared at the Gates of Heaven in the Masquerade Costume there is a Question as to whether or not Saint Peter would have identified him from the Description which had been received in Advance.

Quite a Question arose as to where the Funeral Services would be held. It would be necessary to have a Preacher and it was customary to break into a Church. It just happened that Link had not attended Church for something like a matter of 28 Years and he had no Sectarian Affiliations that anyone remembered, but his Wife happened to think that one of his Aunts had been a Methodist, so they fixed it up and had the Methodist Minister come over and he looked at the Remains and secured a few Data from the Bereaved Helpmate and by the time he got through Link was almost a Methodist in Good Standing.

The Pastor and the Undertaker told the Widow that it was customary, if you wanted to have a real Swell Funeral, to have some singing and that a good Soprano who was guaranteed to usher the Departing Soul right into the Blissful Beyond would bring about 50 Dollars.

Link's Wife said that nothing was too good for him so they hired a near-opera Singer and she did three Obligatos at the church, her Idea evidently being to let them know in the World Beyond that Link was on his way, because she certainly was Loud. Fortunately Link could not hear her and did not know what it cost, so everything was all right.

Roping in the Relatives.

It seems that the Importance of a Funeral nowadays is gauged by the Number of Motor Cars which follow the Motor Hearse out to the Cemetery. All you have to do to get a Motor Hearse is to buy it and use it once and then give it back.

Link's Wife wanted the Funeral to be a Real Success so she engaged all of the Automobiles from three Garages and had them lined up in front of the Church, so that all of the Mourners could get a Free Ride out to the Cemetery, with the result that a great many People who never had heard of Link rode out and stood beside the Open Grave and cried like Children.

We must not overlook the fact that Death Notice, had been inserted in all of the Newspapers nearby and that Mrs. Link had sent for Link's Brother, who lived five hundred miles away and had paid his Railroad Fare and had bought a new Suit of Clothes so that they would let him enter the Church. All of this helped to whoop the Expense Account but there is one time when a Sentimental Woman will not balk at Expenses and that is when she is planting the Beloved.

It certainly was a most successful Funeral. Link's wife sent Flowers in her own name and in the Names of all of the Relatives who were not present. Link looked simply wonderful in his ballroom Costume and the Preacher talked about him until almost anybody could believe that Link amounted to something and the Soprano did herself proud and the Parade was about four blocks long and the Assembly out at the Cemetery looked like a Mass Meeting.

After it was all over, the Widow neld a Consultation with the Children and checked up on the Family Budget. They had no Assets in sight but there were quite a number of Bills.

The Widow said, by way of Explanation, "It looks as though we would be broke for the next twenty years, but you must admit that we gave Papa quite a Send-Off."

MORAL—If people are overlooking you, die.

Bit of Early History

Nicholas Disbrove, joiner, who "made the earliest piece of American furniture of proven origin," held the office of chimney vewier in 1647 and again in 1655, 1663, and 1669. He must have been good at it. In 1665, he did more "sighting" as surveyor of highways. He served, too, in the Pequot war, for which service he was given fifty acres of land. Nicholas, with all these good deeds to his credit, is reputed to have been charged with witchcraft, but this was due as the story continues, to a dispute over a bill.

Accountancy

Very little is known of the origin of accounting as a profession. The first association of which there is record is the Collegium Taxonum, founded at Venice in 1531. Professional accountants probably existed in Milan at an early date, as the government established a scale of charges for them in 1742. The first Scotch professional accountant was George Watson, born in Edinburgh in 1645. In 1790 the British directory listed five. The first formal recognition given to accountants in the United States was in the laws of New York in April, 1890.

Railroad Safety

The first vestibuled railroad car, a Pullman invention, was built in 1857. It is considered the greatest single safety device in railroad travel. It provides safe car-to-car travel, includes antileaking construction to prevent cars climbing one another in collision and holds the train in a rigid unit, riding more safely and smoothly.

THE WEAK FISHERMAN

Richard Tallman, who caught a giant fish of Miami, told a fish story at a Miami luncheon.

"Bill Blankin," he said, "went on a fishing excursion to Barnegat bay after weakfish. The weakfish ran fine; all hands but Bill hauled in a good one every minute; and so an hour went by, then Bill growled:

"Hey, who's got a cork they can lend me? This bum of one mine has sunk again."—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drug store—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.

ARMISTICE DAY

Today, November 11th the people of the whole world will celebrate the fourteenth anniversary of the end of the greatest catastrophe in the history of the world. When the order to cease firing was given at 11 o'clock in the morning on the eleventh day of November, 1918, there was hardly a human being on the face of the earth who did not join in the universal rejoicing. For there was no single human being in the world at that time and none who has been born since, whose life and whose future was not affected by the war.

We have called it the greatest catastrophe in the history of the world, and that is not an exaggeration. Who could have believed that the firing of a single shot in an obscure Serbian village eighteen years ago last August could have precipitated a tragedy that would involve the entire human race, and from the effects of which we have not yet recovered? For there is no possible question that the world-wide economic depression, the internal and international maladjustments and financial difficulties from which every nation in the world is suffering today, are all directly traceable to the Great War.

More than 65,000,000 young men, the best of their respective nations, were taken from their homes and occupations and sent into the battlefields to die each other. More than eight and one-half million were killed or died of wounds; another twenty-one million were wounded or incapacitated. At the end of the war the survivors returned, most of them almost hopelessly, impoverished homelands, burdened with impossible debts and crushed by unbearable taxes.

We cannot destroy millions of lives billions upon billions of accumulated wealth, without paying for it. That we have made as much progress as has been made toward economic recovery in fourteen years is less than miraculous. But let us not delude ourselves, although our economic losses States, although our economic losses in the war, both in men and in money must continue for another generation and even longer to pay for the war with our labor and our gold.

It seems to us that those are the things to remember on Armistice Day. It seems to us that the eleventh of November should be the occasion for a solemn resolve on the part of every American that we and our nation should use our commanding position

COUNTY BOARDS TO CONVENE NOVEMBER 15

Wisconsin's seventy-one county boards will meet November 15 to decide upon the budget which will govern 1933 expenses. The amount of this budget and its apportionment to villages, towns and cities will have a large part in fixing the total tax which will be paid by the property owners of those communities. The Wisconsin Taxpayers Alliance says:

"County boards will be forced to either greatly increase the county tax levy, or to make drastic reductions in certain appropriations over which they have control to provide for:

a. Fixed appropriations required by state laws. In many instances these fixed items are over half the total budget.

b. Failure to realize cash on tax certificates which the county is forced to buy in the absence of private investors.

c. Rapidly mounting costs of poor relief."

While most taxpayers are demanding reductions in budgets, few are sufficiently informed to make specific recommendations. Some of the limitations placed upon county boards by state laws, and some preliminary plans already made for reducing the county appropriations, are indicated in the following statement from the Alliance.

"Provisions must be made in the county tax levy for a payment of $250 per elementary teacher employed in the common schools of the county. For example, if the schools in a county have 60 such teachers the state law requires that the county appropriate $15,000 for this purpose.

"Each county must levy the amount certified to it by the secretary of the state for the care of the residents of that county in state and other county charitable institutions."

"County Boards must levy an amount sufficient to pay interest on county bonds. They must also levy the annual installment due on bond principal, less the amount which is to come from the state for certain highway bond issues."

"The law requires counties to provide funds for other fixed items, such as highway aid to meet petitions from towns and villages, jurors and witness fees, certain fixed expenses of the sheriff's office etc."

"The county is forced to meet petitions for highway aids from each town and village up to $2,000. Petitions in excess of the maximum amount provided by law for county aid on highways and bridges may be refused."

"The county board may decide to make no levy for county trunk road maintenance and use only the amount which comes from the state for that purpose. The board may also refuse to provide funds for road surface treatment."

"Where a county has drastically cut its highway program, the board may find it possible to reduce the cost of supervision, liability insurance, and incidentals."

"The state now assumes the entire cost of maintenance of state trunk highways, so it will not be necessary for the county board to provide funds for snow removal unless it is desired to keep certain county trunks free from snow and ice."

"Until the last two years, many counties were able to sell delinquent real estate taxes to private investors. This is no longer possible so counties now find it necessary to provide a sufficient appropriation to carry these delinquent items."

"County agricultural agents devote about half of their time to group and organization work, and the other half to helping individuals with their various problems. They are the connecting link between the people locally and state and national agricultural agencies." -- J. F. Wotja, state leader of county agents.

CAUSES OF FARM FIRES

The following are the principal causes of farm fires in the order of their importance and per centage:

- Defective chimneys and flues14%
- Lightning10
- Sparks on roof8
- Gasoline and other petroleum products7 1/2
- Matches and smoking5
- Spontaneous ignition5
- Stoves, furnaces and their pipes4
- Open fires, hot ashes and coal2
- Miscellaneous and unknown4 1/2

FARM RESIDENCE FIRES

About 40 per cent of the farm fire damage occurs in dwellings, being $40,000,000 of the total farm fire loss.

Defective chimneys and flues are almost entirely a source of fires in the dwellings, except exposure losses. This is 14 1/2 per cent of the whole loss or over one-third of the dwelling fires in farm and rural property.

Sparks on roofs are a source of fires only in dwellings except in case of spread of fires to other buildings. This is 8 per cent of the total farm fire loss and about one-fifth of the farm residence fires.

Defective chimneys and flues and sparks on roofs account for more than one-half of the fires which occur in farm and rural dwellings. Other causes of farm dwelling fires are stoves, furnaces and their pipes, hot ashes and coals, and misuse of petroleum products.

FARM BARN LOSSES

Lightning, while not confined to barns, is unquestionably the principal cause of fires in farm barns, and accounts for about one-sixth of the farm barn fire loss.

Spontaneous ignition, most frequently originated in hay, grain, feed and manure, nearly always occurs in the barn or barnyard and accounts for about one-tenth of the fires in that quarter.

Other causes found principally in barns are matches and smoking, power machinery, lanterns, etc.

A further study of farm loss statistics shows that certain causes may be of greater significance in certain sections than in others, as, for instance lightning. Likewise sparks on roofs are a more frequent cause of fires in those sections subjected to protracted dry weather unless fire resistive roof coverings are used.

Most farm fires can be prevented by relatively simple means, common sense and ordinary care and caution.
