On Friday, November 18th, the 1932 and 33 basketball season will open with Sheboygan Falls playing in the local high school gym.

At the beginning of the year, with the entire front line returning from last year's team, hopes for a very successful season ran high. These hopes, however, received a severe jolt when both of our forwards, Otto Stenscheke and Billie Schaefer were injured in an automobile accident.

For the most part the team, as it now stands, is untried, but with the fight, determination and desire to do their best ever evident we are certain that the team will make a most commendable showing in all its games.

This new and young team needs your support. With your encouragement the boys will be able to do their very best.

TWO BREWERIES RAIDED FRIDAY

Federal agents raided a large distillery and brewery at Plymouth and a large brewery at Waldo late last week Friday. The operators at the Plymouth brewery and distillery escaped arrest, apparently having been warned that a raid was going to be made. Two unidentified men were arrested at the Waldo brewery.

At the Plymouth brewery 3,000 gallons of beer in tanks, 10 half barrels of beer ready for sale, carbonators, bottling and capping machines were found by the raiders.

All told the federal agent had a beautiful job of dumping 12,000 gallons of mash in six vats found in the distillery, 325 gallons of alcohol, the beer aforesaid mentioned, and seized the motors, pumps, condensers and other equipment.

While at work raiding the Plymouth brewery some one let the air out of all the tires on the Federal agents automobile.

On Monday Federal agents entered Calumet county and raided a large distillery which was operated on a farm near Chilton. The dry authorities found upon the property 207 gallons of alcohol and 38,500 gallons of mash, which was in five 6,000 gallon vats and one 8,500 gallon vat. Five tons of coke confiscated was turned over to a charitable institution. Four men were arrested.

YOUNG AMERICA'S HOUR

By Albert T. Reid

BURNS PROVE FATAL TO YOUNG LADY

While preparing breakfast at about 7 o'clock Wednesday morning, Mrs. Herold Deiner, residing at Orchard Grove, poured kerosene on burning coals to hasten the fire, after which an explosion followed and completely enveloped Mrs. Deiner in flames. She was alone in the house at the time, and with her clothing burning she ran for help across the street to the cheese factory where her husband was employed. Mr. Deiner frantically extinguished the flames, which had severely burnt his wife. Dr. N. Edw. Hausmann of this village was at once summoned, and as her condition was so critical she was removed to the West Bend Community hospital where everything possible was done to save her life, but to no avail, she having passed away at about four o'clock that same afternoon. The interior of the kitchen was damaged to considerable extent.

The accident and death of Mrs. Deiner was a great shock, not only to her grief stricken husband, parents, brother and sisters, but to the entire community. She was only 21 years of age and is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. (Ias. Eisenbrauth of the town of Farmington, Mrs. Deiner was born on December 27, 1912, in the town of Farmington, and was married to Harold Deiner at Batavia on Nov. 26, 1930. OPERETTA WELL RECEIVED AT SCHOOL

The operetta "Chonita" which was presented by the high school students to good sized audiences last week Friday and Saturday evenings in the high school was well received by all. The entire cast is to be complimented for the splendid way the operetta was staged. Much credit must be given to the teachers, the Misses Jordahl, Smith and Brown, for their untiring work in their wonderful coaching. It is indeed very difficult to single out any individual star, and to our observation each member of the cast does his or her part well.

AUTO USED IN BANK ROBBERY FOUND

Word was received by Sheriff Theo. Holtebeck of West Bend that Chicago police found the automobile used by the bandits that robbed the First National Bank at West Bend on the morning of November 1st, and escaped with $13,800. The sheriff accompanied by Police Chief Arthur Jueck and Officer Carl Guth, both of West Bend were at Chicago Sunday to identify the car.

The automobile was found 4 miles east of Chicago Heights, a suburban city south of Chicago, and is described as a 1932 black colored high-powered Buick sedan. It was stolen from a party living at Chicago. The car, when it was found, was stripped of the tires and headlights. Three bullet holes pierced through the rear of same and blood stains noticed on the interior. Blood was scattered over both front seats. This is evident that the driver was hit by one of the bullets fired by Carl Guth in the bandit get away. Officers also believe that one of the occupants of the rear seat was hit by one of the bullets as a bloody imprint of a man's back clearly showed on the back of the seat with a bullet hole through the imprint.

GERMANTOWN BANK HELD UP

Germantown Wis., Nov. 15—(Special)—Southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois authorities were searching Tuesday night for two roughly dressed bandits who Tuesday morning, robbed the Citizens bank here of $1,200 and escaped after kidnapping the cashier and a Chicago bond salesman.

The captives, B. W. Bellin and Rene Cardinal, were forced into the bandits' sedan and driven a short distance out of the village, where they were forced to jump from the moving car. The two had been alone in the bank. A. E. Fruss, the president, whose adopted daughter Mae 12, recently went on a pleasure trip with $1,000 taken from the bank, was not present.

Bellin and Cardinal were chatting when two men, dressed in dark corduroy coats, lined with sheepskin, appeared at the door and knocked. The doors are kept locked and customers admitted by a push button.

Believing the visitors to be farmers come to transact business, Bellin opened the door and the men entered with drawn pistols. While one stood guard over Cardinal and Bellin, lying on the floor, his companion gathered up silver and bills in the vault and cage.

Ordering the cashier and salesman to their Dodge sedan, the bandits drove slowly out of the village and headed toward Milwaukee on Highway 55.

Several guns, one of which was believed to be a submachine gun, were on the rear seat, covered by a coat, according to Bellin. The bandits, each about 6 feet tall and light complexioned, slowed the machine at a safe distance and ordered Bellin and Cardinal to jump.

Sheriff Theo. Holtebeck of Washington county was informed of the robbery and immediately communicated with Milwaukee authorities. The car was last seen headed toward Milwaukee on Highway 55.—The Milwaukee Sentinel.

Mr. Cardinal is very well known in the village and is quite a frequent caller in the interest of selling bonds.

COUNTY BOARDS IN SESSION

All county boards in the state of Wisconsin are now in their regular session and from reports received the taxpayers of Wisconsin will be given a Christmas present, by the way of lower taxes. The trend shows that every county board in the state are going to make drastic reductions in the expenditures for their respective county.

County Chairman Newton W. Rosenheimer of the Washington County Board informs us that a material reduction will be made in Washington county, and assures the tax payers of this county that nothing will be left undone to accomplish this purpose.

One of the big cuts will be in the Highway department. According to a report of the highway committee, they are going to ask an appropriation of only $14,000 for 1933 compared to $45,000 allotted to them in 1932. In 1929 the appropriation for this department was approximately $125,000.

Reduction in expenditures can also be looked for in the County Superintendent's and the County Nurse's offices. The latter to be merged with that of the Red Cross.

Wisconsin Pedigree No. 6 white rye outyielded all other varieties of rye tested at the state experiment station during the past year, giving a yield of 38.4 bushels to the acre.

county's most recent organization was a success away and beyond what the most enthusiastic had hoped for. There was harmony, a free expression of opinions, a willingness on part of all present to do their part to bring about a reduction in costs a county government to the end that taxes may be brought to the lowest point without in any way affecting the best of government.

The Washington County Taxpayers' Alliance was not organized for the moment, but it will be permanent. And if the enthusiasm and sincerity of those attending last Saturday's meeting are a criterion of what can be done, and what should be done, then there can be no doubt in the mind of anyone that it is a worthwhile organization—one which should be welcomed and be given the encouragement of all who believe in good government at as small an expense as possible.

Those from the village and town of Kewaskum that attended the meeting were: Newton W. Rosenheimer, chairman of the Washington County Board of Supervisors, B. H. Rosenheimer, D. M. Rosenheimer, Otto E. Lay, Geo. H. Schmidt, Emil C. Backhaus and Conrad Bier.

ORGANZE CO. TAXPAYERS' ALLIANCE

The first meeting of the Washington County Taxpayers' Alliance, held at the court house in West Bend last Saturday afternoon, proved conclusively that there is a need of an organization of this kind if the great demand for a reduction in expenditures and a necessarily following reduction of taxes is to become a reality.

The meeting was called to order by H. B. Kaempfer of West Bend, upon whose invitation, in behalf of the new organization, the excellent gathering was a result. Mr. Kaempfer, spoke briefly on the need for concerted action to bring about lower taxes in Washington county and in state and nation. He assured the gathering that the new organization would be strictly non-political, and that it would in no way be dictatorial to those in charge of county government, but that it hoped to be able to prove itself a counseling body for the good of the county in particular. At the close of his remarks he turned the meeting over to the chairman of the new organization, E. C. Ziegler of West Bend.

Mr. Ziegler explained that fifty or more men had been invited to attend the meeting, two or more from every town, village and city in the county and told how these men—outstanding in their respective communities—had been chosen. He then commended briefly yet sincerely on the recent action of the County Relief committee in providing work for all who receive county aid. He dwelt on road work as carried on at a time when the cost was abnormally high, and compared costs of road construction in Washington county with the cost in adjoining counties. The high costs of roads in Washington county is out of all proportion to costs in some other counties, this because Washington county built its roads at an inopportune time rather than at such a time as was assured to the voters who authorized the $2,000,000 bond issue. He stated that the county's bond issue had been reduced to a balance of $750,000.

Officers were elected for a term of one year as follows:

Chairman—E. C. Ziegler, of West Bend.

Vice-Chairman—Art. F. Schauer of Hartford.

Secretary—Herb. P. Schwalter of West Bend.

Executive Committee—Jos. Pick of Hartford, on general government; G. Koelsch of Polk, on protection of personal property; H. B. Kaempfer of West Bend, on health conservation and sanitation; Wm. Laubenheimer of Richfield, on highways and bridges; Paul Bast of Rockfield, on education; O. McCullow of Hartford, on charity and correction, and David Rosenheimer of Kewaskum, on general and miscellaneous matters.

No treasurer was deemed necessary, as it was the opinion that the organization can function even without funds.

It was decided that each member of the executive committee appoint two citizens to work with him as a sub-committee on the subject for which he was named.

Chairman Ziegler read the Oct. 31, 1932, financial statement of the county, and this served as a basis for the discussion which followed.

It was recommended that the county nurse's and Red Cross activities be merged, and the matter was so referred to the chairman of the County Board of Supervisors.

It was voted to recommend to the County Board of Supervisors that in order to cut educational costs (super-vising teachers' expense) activities along this line be curtailed.

The meeting went on record as not being in harmony in many respects with the present system of distribution of federal and state aids, since these "aid" taxes are becoming burdensome and a problem for county boards to handle.

Filmer Eberhardt of West Bend was chosen to attend the meeting of the Wisconsin Taxpayers' Alliance on the 10th of December, and to make a report at some future meeting of the county alliance or to its officers.

The present manner of handling the county relief work was praised, and it was voted that the new organization express its appreciation by letter to Chairman Geo. Blank.

Subjects such as the county fair and road construction were discussed, and it was the sense of the meeting that the County Board of Supervisors make every effort to reduce to a minimum all activities, non-essential work and offices, to the end that the county's budget may be held within reason and to the advantage of all tax-payers.

It was also the sense of the meeting that the acts of the Washington County Taxpayers' Alliance be given as much publicity in all papers of the county and even in papers of adjoining counties. The meeting then adjourned, subject to call by its officers. This first meeting of Washington

Formal Modes in Glittering Array

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

JUDGING from appearances, Dame Fashion does not know that there is such a thing as "depression" in the world of affairs these days or if she does she is not letting on, or perhaps this arbitrary dictator of the mode has determined to cheer us up a bit by brightening the style picture with all the gleam and glitter at her command. At any rate the new fashions fairly scintillate with the sparkle of sequins and beads and other pretty tinsel effects together with a lavish use of metal cloths and weaves which dazzle the eye with their glint of "silver threads among the gold."

While, of course, these glamorous metallics are making their biggest showing at formal night affairs, let the daytime program is by no means without the glittering note. The new woolsens, likewise knitted effects, are many of them enriched with interweavings of metal threads while tulle-like lame weaves for the making of the new blouses, are loomed in colorful patternings.

It is significant that this interest for metallic effects extends to the realm of accessories as well as to the field of dresses and wraps. Daytime costumes are enlivened with quantities of metal buttons, nailheads, clips, and gold, silver or bronze belts and fancy girdles, with millinery showing up tinsel cloths and ornaments in endless intriguing ways. The advent of the dressy dinner hat and the favor for formal evening headwear stimulates the Vogue for things glittering.

Stripes are the "last word" when it comes to metal cloths for formal evening wear. The handsome gown pictured here is determined to cheer us up a bit by brightening the style picture with all the gleam and glitter at her command. STRIPED VELVET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here is a dress good to look upon. It is just the sort every woman is sure to covet. It is made of one of those lovely new striped lustrous velvets which are so extremely smart this season. The combination is beige and brown. The designer realizes how effective stripes are when worked together cunningly. The belt is of antique skin set with steel nailheads. The swanky beret is of brown velvet.

New Browns

For the most part the new browns, which, by the way, will be very good this winter, are very dark. One dark brown is called "kaffa." A lighter shade is known as "rum."

Evening Wraps

Waistline and hip-length velvet evening jackets are extremely good for fall. White with dark fur or black with white fur are favorite combinations.

Suggestions Picked Up in Style Centers

The brighter reds are still strong. Daintiness is the keynote of some of the newest underwear.

Underwear in face powder shades is not a "fantastic idea" by any means. Chanel lines a new black wool cape coat with black and white printed silk.

Some of the newest handbags for evening are of black jet mounted on heavy dull silk.

Thin woolen swagger coats are made with collars of white pique. Ribbons are well to the fore in trimmings in the new collections.

Color this year is a matter of taste, for more hues are offered than at any other time in the past decade.

The camisole-back evening dress has come to challenge the supremacy of the very low cut or backless evening dress.

POULTRY

NOT HARD MATTER TO PREVENT MOLT

Careful Feeding and Use of Lights Important.

By PROF. L. E. WEAVER, New York State College of Agriculture—WNYU Services.

The molt is an old custom among hens and is adhered to by every avian female. But the molting season is costly to the poultryman unless he can frustrate the hen's or pullet's idea of stopping laying while the old plumage is shed and a new, glossy coat is grown in the fall.

If a pullet lays two or three months prior to the usual molting season, she is likely to follow the example of the older hens and molt, too, and lay no eggs for the five or six weeks' molting period. If the pullet starts to lay just before or during the normal molting season, she will continue to lay. Many poultrymen hatch their chicks late in the season to avoid the molt; but, under those circumstances, the late-hatched pullets do not begin to lay full-sized eggs until egg prices start to fall. The early hatched pullets are the ones that lay full-sized eggs when eggs are high-priced and make money for the poultryman, if they do not molt.

Get the pullets to eat all the feed they can, for they will not get too fat. Be sure they have all the dry mash they want at all times; and, as soon as the pullets begin to lay, wet mash can be fed, in addition, once a day. If possible, mix the wet mash with milk, for milk helps keep the flock healthy. Lights may be used to give about 13 hours of daylight, starting about two weeks after the pullets are put into laying houses. Plenty of green food, especially cabbage, helps to keep the flock in good condition and to prevent the molt.

Care of Birds Before and After Caponizing

Cockereels can be caponized successfully late in the season if care is taken to handle the birds properly. Not more than 10 or 12 birds should be confined together. They should be kept without feed for 24 hours before the operation. Afterwards they should be given a light feeding of moist mash consisting of bran and ground oats moistened with skim milk. Plenty of clean water should be provided.

A condition known as wind puffs is likely to develop a few days after the operation. This is nothing serious and can be ignored for eight to ten days. By this time the incision between the ribs will have healed and if the outer skin is punctured the air will be released. Capons out-sell cockereels for enough to pay for cost and trouble of caponizing.—Prairie Farmer.

Feed for Molting Hens

Hens that are molting should be fed a good laying ration. Cutting down the amount of protein will slow up the growth of feathers and they will not get back to production so soon. If the hens do not get enough protein they will grow feathers at the expense of body weight and then body weight must be built up before they can produce eggs again.

If the birds are losing weight, feed them at noon each day a mixture of equal parts of cornmeal, rolled oats and condensed milk, say Penn State poultry specialists.—American Agriculturist.

Poultry Hints

Poultry manure should be collected from the dropping boards, stored under cover and mixed with dry earth or sand.

To maintain a high level of egg production, it is not necessary to cull more than a third of the birds from a normal flock of chickens during the year.

The best pen of birds in the Illinois egg-laying contest for the month of June was White Leghorns owned by Logan Leghorn farm, Parnell, Mo. This pen laid 145 eggs.

Average returns on 123 flocks of Ohio poultry last year was 70 cents per bird.

A normal healthy hen will produce about 80 pounds of moist or wet manure in the course of a year, which should convince farmers of the great value of farm flocks.

Each student in the winter short course in poultry at the New York State College of Agriculture is assigned the entire care of a small flock for four weeks of his course.

Green alfalfa, fed liberally, has been recommended for checking the death of poultry due to poor feeding.

Clean litter on the floor every day in the year makes the poultry house more sanitary and helps in keeping the flock healthy.

Unless turkeys are well fleshed and have a covering of fat under the skin, they usually sell as undergrades. The same is true if they are full of pinfeathers even though they may be in fair condition.

During the year a hen eats one bushel of corn, a peck of wheat, and eight pounds of meat scraps.

It is time to make repairs on the old poultry houses. Being prepared pays. Somebody has said "a word to the wise is sufficient."

Before a hen can produce an egg she requires 75 per cent of the nutrient fed her for her bodily needs. You cannot overfeed a laying hen. It's the "duds," or flesh producers, that invariably get overfat as pullets.

High Qualities Called For in "Ideal" Teacher

How is one to paint a word portrait of the ideal teacher? He should be intelligent but not pedantic, dignified but not pompous, firm but not inflexible. He should be young enough to remember his boyhood, but old enough to have put aside childish things.

With all his scholarship, he should be aware that it would be a sad world if all his pupils were trained to be teachers—like himself. He should not be ashamed to possess or disclose his ideals, but should temper them with practicality. He should be able, outside his own ballcock, to mix with other people on even terms, without self-consciousness, superciliousness or timidity.

He should maintain at all costs his patience, his sympathy, and his sense of humor. If, in addition, he has energy and optimism, he should be qualified to secure and hold a position, and leave behind him a place in the memories of alumni.

It will make little difference where such a man functions, whether in a gorgeous lecture hall or in an ancient classroom, with the desks carved by generations of undergraduates. He may never get a medal or an honorary degree, but his spirit will remain alive long after his body rests in the local cemetery.—Claude M. Fuess in the Atlantic Monthly.

Gas to Heat Orchards

For several years the California fruit growers have been combating the early frosts by burning a smudge in the orchards, but the experiment is now being tried to make use of a substitute in the shape of butane gas, which will actually heat the orchards without the annoyance of the pall of smoke. Butane is a part of the crude oil refining process which has heretofore been discarded, but a process has been devised for burning it as indicated. If the experiment is successful, the gas will be supplied in a commercial way to all parts of the state.

"Electric Chair" for Insects

An "electric chair" for mosquitoes and other insects and pests was recently devised at a tree research laboratory. The "chair" is a large square with two sides made of extremely fine wire. A current is passed through these sides, killing all insects alighting thereon. A weak current is used, running from an electric bulb socket through a transformer into the wire gauze. During the day, bait is used to attract the insects; at night, a light is placed inside the "chair."—New York Times.

Relief From Neuralgia In Few Minutes

Quick Dissolving Property of BAYER ASPIRIN Starts Relief 3 or 4 Minutes After Taking

Think of a headache going in three or four minutes. The pains of neuralgia, neuritis or rheumatism being eased, often, in that little space of time!

Due to important, scientific developments in the famous Bayer Aspirin laboratories, millions of people are enjoying this almost unbelievably quick relief from pain.

That is because Bayer Aspirin dissolves almost instantly in the stomach. And thus almost INSTANTLY starts to ease pain. The average headache, for instance, eases in as little as four or five minutes. Think of what a time saver this is to busy people.

Remember it is Genuine BAYER Aspirin which provides this unique property. So see that you get the real article when you buy. See that these three words "Genuine Bayer Aspirin" are on any box or bottle of aspirin that you buy. And that the name "Bayer" is stamped in the form of a cross on any tablet that you take.

Remember that when you buy. And remember, too, that Genuine Bayer Aspirin cannot harm the heart. Bayer Aspirin cannot harm the heart. Take care you get the genuine.

Germany's Charm

The periods of the Renaissance and the Middle ages were not alone in creating a prodigious abundance of imposing buildings and monuments of art leaving them as impressive memorials of former splendor. In the Eighteenth century, when the other great peoples had long since achieved internal unity—thereby gathering all energies in the mighty capitals, in London, Paris, Madrid—Germany was still an old, fantastic mosaic. It was in this period of princely dominion that the singular dispersion of German cultural life manifested itself, crystallizing around a multitude of great and small spots. This evolved a brilliantly variegated picture whose magic charm persists to the present day.—Exchange.

YOU can't nurse your baby? Then read of a recent feeding test conducted by two eminent baby specialists. Let their findings help you decide—what milk for my baby.

For a test, fifty average babies were chosen. Into their bottles—through the months of the test—went a milk known to millions of mothers and grandmothers in this country as a wonderful baby builder. That milk was Eagle Brand. Eagle Brand was the only food these babies received, except for the usual supplementary foods now given even with mother's milk.

And how those babies were studied! Regularly, X-ray pictures of bones were taken. Tooth development was watched. Weights and heights recorded. Blood counts made. And all these results were compared with other groups of babies, similarly fed on other foods.

What the test showed

At last came the verdict: Measured by every scientific test, the result was favorable to Eagle Brand. This simple diet—Eagle

Brand with the usual supplementary foods—had proved equal to the building of 100% babies.

Send for FREE baby booklet

If you cannot nurse your baby, try Eagle Brand. Next to mother's milk, it is the easiest form of milk in the world to digest.

Millions of babies have been raised on it—babies whose strong, healthy constitutions—sound teeth—straight bones—firm muscles—are living proof of its benefits.

Just follow simple directions on label. And send for "Baby's Welfare," an 80-page guide-book on raising a baby.

A report of the physicians' test will be sent your doctor, on request.

*The usual supplementary foods, of course, are orange or tomato juice, and cod liver oil or other source of the anti-rachitic vitamin D.

Koo Koo Bird

Dr. Edward C. Elliott, president of Purdue university, whose store of witty stories is a source of constant enjoyment to students at the university, recently told the following one at a dinner in Indianapolis: "I'll tell you about the Koo Koo bird. I do not know that it is described in any legitimate works on ornithology nor do I know this bird actually existed. This Koo Koo bird flies backward instead of forward because it does not know where it is going and wants to know where it came from."—Indianapolis News.

Measure for Life's Span Sir William Mulock, speaking joyfully at a banquet in Orillia, remarked that the best way to live a long time is to select good healthy parents. As a matter of fact, the best rough-and-ready test of a person's probable span of life is to add together the ages of parents and grandparents and divide it by six.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

OPENS NEW "WORLD" TO SCIENTIFIC KEN

Beebe's Ocean Explorations of High Importance.

William Beebe, deep-sea explorer, has lived a life of many strange adventures in the world of science. In his mental makeup there abides an insatiable curiosity about living things and the origins of life. Science, for him, is associated with romance and adventure. Mysteries of the jungles fascinate him. The sea is an aqueous undiscovered continent whose secrets lure him to strange and original explorations. With Fabre, the French entomologist, and Hudson, the British naturalist, the name of William Beebe, the American, is linked as one of a trio of scientists whose enthusiasms and literary abilities have popularized the study of nature and broadened the interest of humanity in "this living world."

His latest feat, results of which are not yet scientifically known, might be called a purely spectacular one, if the name of William Beebe were not attached to its performance. For the first time the human voice was transmitted to the radio world from a half mile below the surface of the sea, off Nonsuch island, in the Bermudas. This was made possible by the bathysphere, the invention of Otis Barton, serving the same purpose for deep-sea observations that Professor Piccard's aluminum globe did to the upper strata of the earth's atmosphere. The device is an airtight metal ball with steel sides an inch and a half thick. From this hermetically sealed compartment, the voice of Doctor Beebe was heard from a 2,200-foot level of sea depth and relayed to New York for world-wide transmission. This latest adventure is only in its experimental stages as yet. What discoveries lie ahead in the nature of unknown monsters of the deep are still conjectural—the mysteries of the sea depths have only been superficially touched.

Doctor Beebe's expedition in search of the legendary Sargasso sea ranks in romantic interest with Jason's expedition in quest of the Golden Fleece. Whether Jason ever found his Golden Fleece and what became of it are questions still in the regions of mythland. But Doctor Beebe, at least, rescued the famous sea from the regions of myth and put it on record as being "greatly exaggerated." Time out of mind the Sargasso sea has furnished material for Munchausen stories of lost ships and dreadful monsters of the deep which were supposed to live in a world of floating seaweed rooted to the floor of the ocean. It was supposed to be the Atlantic's "meadow of death," a whirlpool of tangled sea growths that for ages had sucked ships into its depths and devoured them in its meshes. It was the Atlantic's great "port of missing ships," fabled to have leveled its toll in men and vessels from the days of the Phoenicians to the present. Modern ships were supposed to avoid its currents and to fight shy of its seductive floatsam.—Kansas City Star.

Find Centuries-Old Tree

Quite recently some white birch trees which had been buried for centuries were discovered in the vicinity of the village of Riviere St. Jean, Quebec, by a field officer of the topographical survey, Canadian department of the interior. The remarkable thing about these trees was their state of preservation. Specimens were presented to the forest products laboratories, department of the interior, at Ottawa, whose officers state that preservation was due to a surplus of water and a deficiency of air, conditions inhibiting the growth of wood-decaying fungi.

Death Ring Story Revealed

What is the fatal influence of the ancient Mizpah ring worn by Frederick Vusthoff, who shot himself to death recently at his home on Newcastle-in-Tyne, England? That is what Newcastle police are trying to fathom. Unlike other Mizpah rings, which are supposed to bring good luck, this one has brought tragedy. Before Vusthoff acquired it, it belonged to a Newcastle merchant who dropped dead on the street. Its previous owner committed suicide.

Measurements by Electricity

A micrometer that measures and indicates, with absolute accuracy, the one-hundred-thousandth part of an inch has been developed. The gauge is electrical and is used, among other ways, in the assembling of some delicate electrical mechanism, and as it may be read instantly it is a great improvement on the old method.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Get an ointment and use as directed. Fine particles of aged skin peel off until all defects such as pimples, freckles, tan and wrinkles disappear. Skin is then soft and velvety. Your face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin. To remove wrinkles use one ounce Powdered Sandalwood in one-half pint with hand. At drug store.

Youthful Wine-Bibbers

School teachers in the Hungarian village of Lentihy were shocked when their young pupils, some of them only five or six years old, staggered to their desks, began to bawl and stout and give every evidence of being drunk. They were. The village well, its only source of water supply, had dried up, and the children drank the rich Tokay wine of the district instead. Wine is cheaper than water in some parts of Hungary, and several cases have been reported recently of wine being used to put out fires.

AN IDEAL

Mortuary Service, as we conceive it, is no matter of mere routine. It is more a service in which sentiment and sensitivity must be experienced and expressed by the Director of the proceedings, and still, coming at a time of great emotions, practical, helpful experience in the Director must be available.

Polling in Four States on the Liquor Problem

Washington.—The prohibition returns showed Louisiana voted to repeal its prohibition enforcement act, and to petition congress to call a constitutional convention to propose repeal or modification of the Eighteenth amendment to the states.

Wisconsin News Briefly Told

Marinette—Fire destroyed the main box factory and power house of the Marinette & Menominee Box Co. here with loss estimated at $300,000.

Stanley—Three Chicago men, arrested shortly after they robbed the Kristian drug store were sentenced to serve three to seven years in state prison.

Marinette—Lloyd Cramer, 35, was killed in the sulphite mill of the Badger Paper mills, Peshtigo, when his hand caught in a pulley and he was drawn into a conveyor.

Madison—The state bureau of personnel will conduct an examination Nov. 28 for the position of deputy assessor of incomes. There are three vacancies at present.

Kewaunee—Law breakers in Kewaunee county for the next two years will have to deal with Mrs. Jennie Kassner, democrat, who was elected sheriff to succeed her husband.

Milwaukee—Thomas J. O'Malley, 65, who is to be the next lieutenant governor of Wisconsin, and Thomas D. O'Malley, 31, who was recently elected as member of congress from the Fifth district, are father and son. Both live at the same Milwaukee address and both are democrats.

Shawano—Peter and Joseph Stevens, Indian brothers, aged 12 and 13, who recently told authorities here that they killed Ed Angerman, missing Tigerton farmer, have been sent to the state industrial school. It is believed that their stories of the Angerman slaying were imaginative.

Milwaukee—Following the mandate of a referendum vote, the city council unanimously approved a city tax rate of $22.40 per thousand valuation for 1932. The referendum vote was 91,752 for and 81,507 against. A hard fight was made against it by public employes and trade unions.

Madison—La Crosse, Baraboo and Virgo tax districts have been consolidated into a single unit and placed under the direction of Frank Gander, Baraboo. The move was in line with attempts of the commission to reduce the number of tax districts in the state and block out counties in a more practicable manner to expedite administration.

Lancaster—Arthur Biederman, who shot and killed his wife at Mount Hope, met death from a rifle bullet fired by a member of a sheriff's posse three days later. Biederman, who recently returned to this section after serving a prison term in Minnesota for robbery, killed his wife with a shotgun when they quarreled over a game the mother was playing with her five-year-old daughter. The little girl was slightly wounded.

Appleton—The Wisconsin Co-Operative Milk Pool closed a two-day delegate meeting here by voting unanimously for a resolution that authorizes the board of directors to make preparations for a state-wide milk strike unless dairy products dealers raise the price of butter fat 5 cents per pound by Dec. 1. Cheese, butter and condensed milk manufacturers have stated that such a jump in price is not warranted by market conditions and is "utterly impossible."

The senate lineup will show 8 democrats, 12 progressives, 12 stalwarts and 1 socialist.

Cornellus T. Young of Milwaukee, one of three democrats in the 1931 assembly, is being boomed for speaker. It is believed that C. E. Shaffer, chief clerk of the assembly for more than 20 years, will be replaced by a democrat. Governor-elect Schmiedeman will take time out from his duties as mayor of Madison to preside over state budget hearings scheduled to start at the capitol about Nov. 21.

ALABAMA NEGROES SAVED FROM DEATH

Supreme Court Rules in the Scottsboro Case.

Washington.—The United States Supreme court reversed the decision of the Alabama courts in the internationally agitated Scottsboro case, in which seven negro youths were sentenced to death for attacking two white girls.

By a vote of seven to two, Justices Butler and McReynolds dissenting, the court set aside the death sentence and ordered a new trial on the ground that the defendants had not been fairly tried in the first instance.

Thirteen persons were arrested and a policeman was sent to a hospital earlier in the day as the result of a brisk clash on the Capitol grounds between a group of demonstrators and police.

The group, comprising about 100, marched up Capitol hill toward the Supreme court to demand freedom for the colored men condemned to death at Scottsboro.

Capitol authorities had told the demonstrators ahead of time that they would not be permitted to parade. There was a short but sharp struggle. Night sticks rose and fell. In a few minutes most of the marchers were headed back the way they came.

The injured policeman, George Walker, was attacked outside the entrance to the Capitol grounds. He was beaten and kicked, but returned to his post after first aid treatment.

The Supreme court also again upheld the right of private citizens to protection from unlawful search and seizure under the national prohibition laws.

By a 7 to 2 decision the court held invalid a search warrant based only on an affidavit stating that the signer saw cans being hauled in and out of a Newport (Ky.) house and that he smelled the odor and fumes of cooking mash coming from the dwelling.

William Graub, the petitioner in the case, contended that prohibition enforcement agents entered his home armed only with the contested warrant and seized certain articles which were later admitted as evidence against him by the lower courts. He protested the validity of the warrant and the admissibility of the evidence seized, as well as the validity of the affidavits on which it was based.

More Than Thousand Die in South Cuba Hurricane

Camaguey, Cuba.—More than 1,000 persons were known to have been killed, police said, by the hurricane which swept over southern Cuba.

The entire province of Camaguey was laid waste and the town of Santa Cruz del Sur on the south coast was literally annihilated.

Police described the disaster as the greatest in Cuban history. Hundreds of injured were being cared for in improvised hospitals and as trains came in from the province bearing the injured it was estimated that the total death toll might reach 1,800.

Mayor Umberto Rodriguez of Camaguey said his information from Santa Cruz del Sur was that 1,500 were dead and that only 300 persons in the town escaped unscathed. The mayor said a 20-foot wall of water was driven five leagues inland by the terrific wind and that not a single house was standing in the town. One survivor said many persons were washed into the sea.

WELL, folks, I just discovered something that brings back 'mind th' old sayin' about all is not gold what glitters. Something men is more likely 't fool cooked 'n women. But women'll probably be wantin' t' know about this too.

Y see, me an' Henry Miller—Henry's a right smart 'n upstandin' merchant here in our town—well, me'n Henry wuz atalkin' th' other day about things in gen'ral when comes Aunt Letty Moore.

Now before I get any further along, I just wanta put in a word about Aunt Letty Moore. 'Cause Aunt Letty 's about th' smartest woman aroun' these parts even though she's goin' on 73 years come Christmas. An' guess Aunt Letty's forgot more'n most th' women folk hereabouts ever knowed when it comes to cookin'. Leastways, when somebody's cake kinda fergot to come up in th' middle or somethin' else happens, it's gen'ly Aunt Letty who gets called into consultation.

But to get back to my story. In comes Aunt Letty an' she sez, "Henry Miller, she sez it kinda tart too, "Henry Miller, what kinda flour did you sell young Gabe Lawe. Post's wife las' Sattidy?" An' then, before Henry could get started, she sez, "An' why'n't you give her Gold Medal like I tole you no. Now she's gone an' ruined another cake. An' after me jus' gittin' through tellin' her what's what about cake makin'." An' "Sez" Henry gits his ear in. "Hold on there, Aunt Letty. Lemme tell you an' goes over an' picks up a sack of that Merry Sunshine Flour an' takes it on home. How was I t' know but he hez his orders t' get that kind? Course, hed he asked, I coulda told him 'tweren't a fancy flour. Mostly a fancy sack. But I guess Gabe just looked an' see it cost about 40c less'n Gold Medal an' he sez, "Yes!" sez Aunt Letty, "An' Gabe's wife just lost more'n 40c worth of cake on accounta Gabe's bein' took in by a fancy sack an' a few pennies savin'. But when I get through with him, he'll—" An' don't you folks think for a minute th' Aunt Letty didn't tell Gabe 'bout how t' buy flour. Gabe tole me she lit right into him. Made him go back down an' buy a sack of Gold Medal, too. But, an' he kinda brightened up, he figgered the elegant cakes an' bread an' pies an' things he's gittin' these days makes up for it all.

Which only goes t' show you can't go by the outside. You got to know what's on the inside of everything you buy. That's why it pays to ask your merchant about what yer buyin'—an' do what he tells you.

SYNOPSIS

Wilson McCann, young Arizona ranchman, finds an old friend, Jim Yerby, with a broken leg. Julia Stark, daughter of Matthew Stark, inveterate enemy of the McCanns, is rendered first aid. Taking a note from Julia to her father, Wilson is fired on by Jasper, Julia's brother. On the way from Yerby's place to her home, Julia learns her companion's identity and dismisses him in anger, the old feud ranking. Ann Gifford, with her young sister, Ethel, are sheep raisers, and on that account unpopular with the cattlemen. "Night riders" burn a cabin and shoot a McCann ranch hand. Peter McCann, Wilson's father, offers a reward for the disclosure of their identity. Wilson McCann horsewhips Jasper, he making practically no resistance. Matthew discovers his son for his cowardice, and posts notice he will kill Wilson McCann on sight. Ann Gifford's tragedy is the fate of her dead sister. Not betrayed and abandoned by her lover, Jasper Stark and Carl Ginter, known as a "killer," a rider for the Stark ranch, hold secret conferences. A Stark ranch hand, Tom McArdle, slays a short time previously, is believed by the Starks to have been killed by the McCanns, but rumor links his name with that of Nora Gifford.

Because he found himself weakening he took refuge in temper. "Well, you'll not go. You'll stay right here at home. I'll show you whether I can't go off this ranch, without being tagged by you or some one else. You drop this interloper in my affairs, Julie, an' behave yourself. I won't have it."

He swung her round by the shoulders and started her toward the house. As he got into the backboard Phil gave him information. "Red says he saw Wils McCann at the ditch gates above the Three Cottonwoods. He may not be alone. Better let me go, too, Dad."

Matt Stark flung a couple of crisp questions at the cowpuncher and announced his decision. "You'll stay here, Phil. This is my job, an' I'm going to attend to it right now if he's still there. Let go." This last to the wrangler at the head of the dancing colts.

The young horses dashed down the road facing at top speed. Already Phil was saddling, a horse he found in the stable. He rode to the house, swung off, and ran inside. Julia met him coming out of his room carrying a rifle.

"Where you going?" she asked breathlessly. "Wils McCann is down above the Three Cottonwoods. Pretends to be fixin' up the ditch gates. When he came by awhile ago Red saw him. Likely he's waitin' to get Dad if he comes along. I've got to get there before Dad does, so I'm takin' the hill trail."

Her heart contracted with a swift spasm of fear. "Let me go, too, Phil." "No. Who can you do? Besides, I can't wait."

He brushed past her, pulled himself to the saddle, and was off instantly at a gallop. For a moment Julia stood, palsied by dread. Then, with a strong resurgence of courage, she followed Phil out of the house and ran to the stable.

"Get my saddle all ready," she cried to Sam Sharp the wrangler as she snatched up a rope and flew to the corral. Julia led her mount to the gate where the wrangler was waiting with saddle, bridle, and blanket.

The man slapped on the blanket, adjusted the saddle, and cinched it expertly. Julia kept urging him to hurry. "What's all this racin' an' hurry about?" he wanted to know.

"That Wils McCann is down the road waitin' for Dad. We just heard it."

She called this back over her shoulder as the pony found its stride. Julia swung into the cut-off that led to the hills. She rode fast, not sparing the horse, for an urgent spur was driving her. If she could arrive in time she might avert a tragedy. Just how, she did not know, but she would find a way. It was not possible that a woman would kill each other if she flung herself between them. Surely they would not do that.

The buckskin she rode was a good traveler, but she seemed to crawl over the ground. The hills were steep and rough, the declivities sharp. She deflected, trying to save a few hundred yards, and presently found herself in a thicket of cactus and mesquite that grew more dense as she proceeded.

Out of this she worked, desperately aware that she had wasted invaluable minutes. An open draw offered promise of faster progress. This led to a pocket, the sides of which were precipitous. It was just as she reached the summit that the sound of a shot appalled her. She spurred the buckskin in the direction from which the report and came, recklessly, careless of danger, of a fall from the plunging nose. All her being was obsessed by terror. She was that of her father. In the center of her forehead was a small round hole. He was dead beyond any question of doubt.

him and the scene of this tragedy. But he had something to tell her, as soon as she was in a condition to listen. Besides, he could not leave her alone with her dead while she was still hysterical.

A twig snapped. Instantly McCann stiffened to alert and crouched wariness. The weapon in his hand shifted over a little, but that scarcely perceptible movement meant that he was ready. His eyes searched the chaparral foot by foot.

The sun glistened on a rifle barrel. At once McCann moved swiftly so as to place the girl's horse between him and that shining tube of steel.

Out of the brush a face peered, searching the landscape. The shifting eyes found in the same instant of time both McCann and the grief-stricken girl, and a second later the supine figure over which her grief was spending itself.

Julia had looked up when McCann ran for the shelter of the horse's body. She glanced round quickly, caught sight of the gleaming gun barrel, and rose hurriedly.

"Look out, Phil. He's killed Dad," she cried, in a panic of terror. Without a thought for her own safety she ran straight across the open toward the mesquite thicket to protect her brother.

A shot rang out. McCann crumpled up behind the horse. Julia heard herself cry out, and even in that moment of fear felt a sense of puzzled wonder. For she had been looking at Phil and she was sure he had not fired.

Phil dragged her down behind him. "He's layin' a trap for me," he told her, almost in a whisper.

But Julia, looking over his shoulder, knew this could not be. For the man's head lay in the sand, his rifle six feet away by the fall.

Again there came the crack of a rifle. "He's dead, but you didn't shoot," she murmured, horrified.

"Can't be dead," the boy answered. "How can he?" "Some one shot—and neither you nor he did. I'm going to see."

"No," he protested. But she was gone before he could stop her. Phil scrambled to his feet and followed.

One glance at McCann was enough to show that this was no ruse. He lay still, either dead or unconscious. The boy stooped and found where a bullet had gone through the shirt.

"He was shot from behind, looks like," he said. "But—who?" Julia asked, white to the lips.

"Jas may be," Phil said it reluctantly. "I saw some one dodging in the chaparral. Looked like Jas, but maybe it wasn't. Anyhow, I stopped to find out if he slipped away. I wish to God I hadn't. I might a-been on time."

They had walked over to the place where their father lay and were kneeling beside him. With her handkerchief Julia wiped from the forehead of the cattleman the little stain of blood showing where the bullet had entered his head. Her slim body was shaken with sobs. The face of the boy was working with emotion. The blow was staggering. The virile dominant personality of their father would never again rule their activities. He had gone out of life as the flame of a blown candle vanishes.

"One of us 'll have to go get the wagon," Phil said presently in an unsteady voice. "Dad musta left it somewhere near."

"Yes. You go, Phil." She was clinging to him, quivering with grief. They cried in each other's arms. After a little, Phil spoke gruffly, ashamed of his own distress. "I'll be moving. Sure you don't mind stayin' alone, Sis?"

it . . . that it would be in the open. He was shot from the chaparral." She did not believe that he was guiltless. She could not think that. And yet—

"What do you mean?" she asked. His head sank into the sand and his eyes closed.

Reluctantly she moved toward him, drawn by his great need. He was the enemy of her house, the one who had brought disaster irremediable to it. But he was, she believed, a dying man. The eternal mother was in that hour stronger in her than the daughter of her father.

She knelt beside him, looking for the wounds. A stain of wet blood in the back of the shirt showed that he had been shot from behind. The sight of it gave her a little shock, for she recalled what Phil had said about seeing some one who looked like Jasper. And he had told her, Jasper had, that he intended to get Wils McCann. Had he done it? She hoped not. Murder from the chaparral was a dreadful thing, a crime wholly alien to the frank and passionate temperament of the girl.

Water was needed, and Julia had not brought a canteen. She took the dusty hat of the man and ran to the canal, where she filled it with water. This she carried back carefully.

In one of his pockets she found a knife and used it to cut away the soaked shirt clinging to the wound. With the handkerchief taken from her neck she bathed the muscular back. Apparently he had been shot through the lung, well up near the shoulder, and in the right side.

The eyes of the wounded man flickered open and fastened on her. She was now sponging his face and temples with a clean strip torn from the handkerchief. Silently he watched her. As he lay there weakly it seemed to him that some healing property passed from her to him through them. It came as a conviction that he was not going to die, that he would get well.

He did not ask what she meant to do with him. It was possible she might think she had answered sufficiently the call upon her humanity and leave him here to perish. It was possible that after she had done the man who had shot him would creep up through the bushes and make an end of him. But he did not believe that either of these would occur. She would look after him somehow, even though she thought he had killed her father. He must set her straight on that. He could not let her go on thinking it.

"I didn't kill yore father," he said a second time. "Even if you didn't, what's the difference? Your friends did. You were here waitin' for him."

"No," he denied. "I was alone—none of my folks was with me." "I don't believe it. If you didn't fire the shot you know who did." She said it in all the bitterness of green young grief.

And instantly she knew, as her eyes challenged his, that she had hit upon the truth. He had not himself shot her father, but he could give her the name of the man who had done it. Her heart hardened. She rose, turned her back upon him, and walked away. He had lied to her. He was as guilty as though his own finger had pulled the trigger.

The minutes dragged. Julia could not get the wounded man out of her mind, even when she was stooping over the body of her father and brushing flies from the folded hands. Perhaps he had died since she had left him. Suddenly she could stand it no longer. Quietly she walked back to him. His quiet eyes met hers.

"Are you thirsty?" she asked. "Yes." Again she took his hat for water. She held it to his lips while he drank, supporting his head with one arm beneath it.

There came at last the sound of wagon wheels. She called, to direct the driver of the backboard. The rig halted into sight. Her brother Phil had brought with him Sam Sharp, the stableman.

They put the body of Matthew Stark into the wagon. Hard-eyed, Phil looked at his wounded enemy. "What about him?" he asked harshly. "We'll take him home with us," Julia said. "We can't leave him here. He's a dying man, you know. We'll take him to the ranch and send word to his father."

Sharp backed his young mistress. "That's right, Phil. I reckon we got to take him."

They lifted him up and put him beside the dead man. McCann's face was touched by an acridly sardonic smile. "You're all plumb good Samaritans," he murmured.

Phil had galloped ahead to prepare the ranch for the homecoming of him who had ruled as autocrat for many years. Among those gathered were Dominick Rafferty, the foreman, and the Texans, Stone and Ginter.

Rafferty scowled at the wounded McCann. "What about this buzzard?" he asked, callously. "What's the idea in bringin' him here? Couldn't you bump him off where he was at?"

Julia was white to the lips. The ordeal of bringing back her father had proved almost more than she could endure. "Don't talk like that, Dominick," she begged tremulously.

"How you want him to talk?" Ginter asked with an ugly sneer. "Do you figure we'll let this hombre get away with what he's done?"

Julia dashed one look of anger at the Texan. "You'll do as you're told, Carl Ginter, or you'll get your time." "You're boss now, are you?" the big Texan snarled.

"Don't push on yore reins, Carl," advised Rafferty. Boy and man, the foreman of the Circle Cross had been with Stark for more than thirty years. He was devoted to him and his family. Even though he might not approve of what they had done he had no intention of siding with anybody against them.

Julia took control of the arrangements. "Take Father to his own room," she gave orders. "And carry this man to Jasper's room. Will you send some one for Doctor Sanders, Dominick?"

Before the doctor left town on his way to the Circle Cross it was known all over Mesa that Wils McCann had got Matt Stark and that he was himself desperately wounded and a prisoner in the hands of the enemy. Within two hours it had reached the Flying VY and Peter McCann was organizing a rescue party.

"Better go kinda easy to start with," Wes Tapscoot suggested. "I figure we're aimin' to spy out the land this trip an' not exactly call for a show-down. This business asks for some deep-plomancy, as the papers say."

"We'll three of us go—you an' Lyn an' me," McCann decided. "An' Dusty will follow with a wagon to bring the boy home."

"If we get him," amended the foreman. "If they don't give him up I'll round up the boys an' tear the ranch house to pieces," Peter answered, his mouth set grimly as his eyes held as jade.

"Sure you will, an' we'll find the boy's body when we finally get in. There's more'n one way to skin a cat," Peter McCann. "If you set any store by that boy—an' I reckon you do—I'd not run on the rope today, by gum. I'd jest naturally act like I was mighty sorry the way things had turned out an'—"

"You want me to tell the Starks that Wils was to blame—after the old man had posted him all over the country? That it?"

"Not exactly, Pete. Put play yore cards close. Lemme ride ahead an' see how things stack up. I'll bring Doc Sanders out to you an'—"

"I'm not going home without seeing Wils. You can't talk me outa that, Wes."

Privately Tapscoot was of opinion that the Starks would never let McCann into their house alive. It was not reasonable to expect it, with old Matt lying there dead at the hands of Peter's son. But he did not say so bluntly.

Grandfather of "Billy" Sunday Versatile Man My grandfather was the most versatile man I have ever known. There was seemingly nothing that he could not make. He made wagons, the wheels and all parts of them. He could build houses and lay stone walls. He made a turning lathe and made bedposts, spindles for banisters, made bureaus, water wheels and many other things.

He had a blacksmith shop and made horseshoes and wedges with which to split wood. He could dress a millstone on which to grind corn and wheat. Before he built the mill for sawing lumber and grinding grain, he and the neighbors had to drive to Burlington, 20 miles away, to mill. He made all the ax handles sold by the hardware stores in Ames, Iowa.

He made a loom upon which grand-mother spun yarn and made cloth from which she made dresses and cloth for suits. My clothes were made from homespun until I was sent to the orphan's home. While the clothes were ill-fitting affairs, they were warm. You couldn't tell from looking at my pants whether I was going or coming—Rev. William A. (Billy) Sunday in the Ladies' Home Journal.

WISCONSIN NOVEMBER CROP REPORT

Increases are reported for Wisconsin this year in the production of corn, oats, barley, rye, wheat, flax, apples, cranberries, and sugar beets. Smaller crops than last year are estimated for potatoes, tobacco, beans, buckwheat, and hay, according to the Crop Reporting Service of the Wisconsin and United States Departments of Agriculture at Madison. The most spectacular change from last year is the splendid corn crop which is quite general throughout Wisconsin. This year's corn crop in Wisconsin is now estimated at $1,585,000 bushels, or 40 per cent larger than last year and the second largest crop in the history of the state.

All of the small grain crops turned out better than a year ago, and of the late harvested crops, apples, cranberries, and flax are also better than last year. The total apple crop of the state is now estimated at 1,914,000 bushels, which is nearly five per cent more than the good crop harvested a year ago. Cranberries are making a production of 75,000 barrels for the state, which is a two-thirds larger crop than last year, and the state is tied for second place with New Jersey, which normally ranks second.

The potato crop, which has for years been the leading cash crop in the state, is nine per cent smaller than last year. Lack of rain in central Wisconsin during the latter part of the growing season is the principal reason for this decline. The potato crop of the state is now estimated at 22,750,000 bushels compared with 24,524,000 bushels a year ago. The tobacco crop in Wisconsin is the smallest in a number of years, it being only about three-fourths as large as a year ago. The estimated production for the state is 55 million pounds compared with 57,520,000 pounds last year. This decrease in production is due almost entirely to reduced acreage by Wisconsin tobacco growers. Buckwheat production in Wisconsin is estimated at 101,000 bushels, which is a little over five per cent under last year's crop.

UNITED STATES CROP CHANGES

In the United States, production increases are reported for corn, oats, barley, rye, flax, and sugar beets. Decreases are reported in the national crops of wheat, potatoes, tobacco, apples, buckwheat, and cranberries. The national production of wheat is over 50 per cent smaller than last year. Decreases reported for the other crops are buckwheat over 20 per cent, potatoes 4.5 per cent, tobacco 36 per cent, and cranberries 20 per cent. Increases in the United States are corn 14 per cent, oats 13.8 per cent, barley 58 per cent, rye 31 per cent, flax 15.3 per cent, and sugar beets 11 per cent.

DISTRIBUTION OF MONEY ALLOTTED TO WISCONSIN BY THE RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION

In a statement released today, the Wisconsin Taxpayers Alliance explains the method of distribution of the money allotted to Wisconsin by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, for unemployment relief:

"The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has allotted to Wisconsin a certain amount of money for unemployment relief. The governor has entrusted the supervision of this amount of money to the Industrial Commission.

"Counties, or local governmental units located in counties not under the county system of poor relief may make application for an allotment, but this should be done only after every reasonable effort has been made to raise the necessary funds by the counties and local governmental units. The Industrial Commission feels its responsibility to see that the allotment of the money is made in such a manner that it will be approved by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Some of the provisions that are laid down for the allotment of these funds are:

"1. Counties and local units are not entitled to an allotment until it is shown that financial need exists and that the method of relief administration conforming to certain standards. Furthermore, the relief program must be supervised by a qualified person who plans frequent home investigations of persons receiving relief."

"2. As it is necessary to centralize unemployment relief administration into as few local agencies as possible, towns, villages and cities, not under the county system and having less than 10,000 population, must unite with other communities until a unit of approximately this population is formed before applications for a share of the relief funds can be entertained by the Industrial Commission.

This does not mean that a city having a population of 10,000 or over is necessarily a unit in itself, as it is often necessary to enlarge such a city unit to include the territory immediately surrounding the city.

"The question may be asked as to how such units may be organized in counties not operating under the county system of outdoor poor relief. It is usual for the officials of the various towns, villages and cities interested in forming a unit to first call a meeting of their supervisors. A representative is then appointed from each district to meet with the representatives of the other districts which are interested in the formation of a unit. At this meeting an executive committee of 3 to 5 members is chosen. This executive committee then makes application to the Industrial Commission for an allotment. If it is granted, the commission assists the committee in selecting a director of poor relief for the unit."

"The question may occur as to what advantage there is in forming such a district over that of organizing the county as a unit for the administration of poor relief. Some cities, towns and villages, not under the county system, consider it more advantageous to form a unit of this kind than to go under the county system for the reason that the unit may be easily dissolved when the emergency passes or when it is no longer possible to obtain additional funds from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation."

C. O. Moser, President of the National Cooperative Council and Vice-President of the American Cotton Cooperative Association, recently pointed out that the prosperity of the farmer depends upon four things:

- 1.—The cost of his production.
- 2.—The volume of his production.
- 3.—The price he obtains for what he produces.
- 4.—The price he pays for what he buys.

FOUR FARM PROBLEMS

As Mr. Moser observed, the first two are largely the problems of the individual. The next two are mainly the problems of the farmer as a group. They are the reason for being of the cooperative movement.

No single farmer, dealing with a large buying or selling organization, can have a voice in price. He must take what he is offered or lose the business. When he joins with thousands of other farmers whose problems and hopes are one with his, the shoe is on the other foot. The buying or selling organization has met its equal—and the price is much more likely to be a fair one.

Not cooperative, of course, can raise prices to the desired level in times like these. What they can do is keep them higher than they would otherwise be and prepare the groundwork for future achievements. All over the country the cooperative movement is making gains, both in strength and membership, and the results are beginning to show. When the economic clouds finally clear, an organized agriculture can be ready for a period of prosperity unprecedented in this century.

AMERICA IS RAPIDLY FORGING AHEAD

It is a relief to have something besides politics to talk about, now that the election is over. We are among those who believe that the United States of America will travel along the predestined course regardless of politics and politicians. They and their activities may impede or reflect the course of events momentarily, but in the long run the destiny of this republic is in the hands of its people, and over these nearly one hundred and sixty years since we established our independence as a free nation, our people have always, in emergencies, exhibited a sane, underlying common sense, which, we believe, is still to be relied upon.

One of the things our pioneer ancestors in America learned was to take the bitter with the sweet. They endured hardships far beyond anything we of today can imagine, in their determined effort to establish homes for themselves and enduring heritages for their children in the new land. Sometimes we forget that everyone who lives in America is a descendant of an immigrant. We all owe some to adventurous pioneer stock. Some of us are only a generation or two removed from the ancestors who left their native lands because they could no longer tolerate the conditions under which they were compelled to live, and came to America in search of a new freedom. Some of us come from older stock that has been developed in America through generations. But whether we are the children of recent immigrants or the descendants of the earliest Pilgrims, we all have in our very blood something of the same strain of independence and self reliance, without which none of our forebears would have ventured to cross the ocean. It is that spirit which has made America, and it is that spirit which will carry America forward, to greater achievement than we have ever dreamed of.

LESS FEEDER CATTLE IN WISCONSIN THIS YEAR

Madison—Considerably less stocker and feeder cattle are in Wisconsin this year than in 1931 according to the state and federal crop reporting service. While the feed supply is somewhat better than last year, uncertainties of the market have restrained cattle feeders.

Shipments of stocker and feeder cattle, inspected through markets, into the corn belt states were very small in October, showing a decrease of 10 per cent under the relatively small shipments in October 1931, nearly 20 per cent smaller than the October average for the preceding five years, and the smallest for the month in 12 years.

Most of the decrease from last year was in the shipments into states west of the Mississippi river, which were the smallest for the month in 14 years. Shipments into the area east of the Mississippi, while smaller in October 1931, were larger than in any of the four years preceding 1931.

The reduced shipments from markets in October were due in part to the very small supplies of cattle at markets during that month. Cattle receipts at seven leading middle western markets in October 1932, were about 15 per cent smaller than in October 1931 and were the smallest for the month in at least 15 years.

Reports from the western states indicate that the number of cattle to be fed in most of the states except Colorado, will be as large or larger than the number fed last year.

One good dairy cow producing 450 pounds of butter fat in a year will produce as much net profit for her owner as nine poor cows producing but 150 pounds, D.H.I.A. records show. But more important than that is the fact that the nine cows throw onto the market 25,000 pounds more milk and 900 pounds more butterfat to add to an already over-supplied market.

THE WHEAT FARMERS' PROBLEM A SERIOUS ONE

The price of wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade has recently touched the lowest figure since the year 1852. In Liverpool, the great international grain market, wheat has been selling, according to London newspapers, at the lowest price since the days of Queen Elizabeth in the 1500's. The price in Liverpool controls the price everywhere in the world, because the wheat from all the world is traded in there, and the price of any commodity is always fixed in the cheapest market.

The real reason for the present low price of wheat is, of course, not only the farmers of the United States but the farmers of the whole world have produced more wheat than the world can consume. And, like most of the rest of the economic ills that are troubling us, this condition traces back to the war. During the war some 67,000,000 men were taken out of their regular employment into the armies of the world. They had to be fed. The price of wheat went up to $2.00 and more a bushel.

The result was that, not only in the United States but in every other wheat growing country, every acre of land that could possibly be induced to grow a few bushels of wheat was put under cultivation. These so-called marginal lands were never fit for wheat production on an economical basis in normal markets, but millions of farmers, once they had planted them to wheat, did not see or would not be warned that they could not continue to use these marginal acres profitably in peace time.

It seems to us that the only permanent solution for the problems of the growers of the wheat, cotton, tobacco, corn, potatoes, and the other staple crops whose markets depends upon not only our own production but would trade, is to find some way whereby the acreage planted throughout the nation to these staples should be limited to fit the probable needs of the world. Farmers cannot do this individually. They must either organize in the co-operative associations, which include practically 100 per cent of the growers of each staple, or eventually we believe they will have to submit to governmental regulation of production, which is certainly a far less desirable alternative.

WISCONSIN GETTING READY FOR SALE OF BEER

When the state legislature convenes in Madison shortly after the first of the year, one of the important issues the democrats will be prepared to meet, will be that of how beer is to be sold and manufactured in the state.

Most of the Democratic leaders are confident that Congress will modify the Volstead Act in time to permit the Wisconsin legislature to pass laws to conform with the federal laws.

Preliminary steps have already been taken by the leaders as to how they would like to have the beer sold. This plan has as yet not been announced. It is believed by these leaders that Congress will define 2.75 or 3 per cent beer as non-intoxicating, and will give the states the right to limit the sale and distribution of beer under modified federal legislation.

The 1929 session of the state legislature repeal the state prohibition law known as the Severson Bill. This was in conformity of the wishes of the voters, who by a vote of almost 2 to 1 in a referendum held in April 1929, asked that the law be repealed.

If Congress legalizes beer in the short session which convenes in December, the legislature in Madison, which will be under Democratic control will immediately pass the necessary laws in speeding the return of the sale and manufacture of beer.

NEW AUTO LICENSES READY

The new Wisconsin automobile license plates are now ready. Most owners of passenger cars have received from Secretary of State Theodore Domman application cards for the 1933 plates. Several have already received the new plates, the color of the numbers being white on a dark blue background. To obtain new license plates it is necessary to present the certificate of title for the car along with the application card and the correct registration fee. The fee will be the same as for the last year. For passenger cars this ranges from $10 to $18 according to weight of the car. Cars registered in Wisconsin or five years are entitled to a discount of 25 per cent of the fee, but the minimum is $10.00.

If a car is bought now, either a new or used one, registration can be obtained for 1933 at once and no fee need be paid for the remainder of this year.

A single change in farm methods of substituting motor power for horse power has caused a decrease of 6,462,028 head of horses and mules on farms in the United States, between 1920 and 1930, and has shifted about 25,000,000 acres of land which in 1920 was growing horse feed, over to production of grain, hay, wheat, animals, or dairy products, a recent report indicates.
