COLD EPIDEMIC HITS MANY

Scores of people are reported to have contracted colds, grippe or light cases of flue that appears to be an epidemic which is sweeping the community, the state and the nation. Health workers blame the epidemic to the sudden changes in the temperature. In most cases the patient is only ill for a day or two with a high fever.

Among the students attending colleges and schools in various cities, who at home are: Ruth and Lehman Rosenheimer, Jr., Maud Hausmann, Pearl Schaeffer, John Louis Schaefer, and Allen Miller, of the University of Wisconsin at Madison; Charlotte Lay, Milwaukee Downer College, Milwaukee: Retha Jane Rosenheimer, Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio; Elizabeth Martin, Wisconsin Teachers College Milwaukee; August Koch and George Koerble, Wisconsin Commercial school, Milwaukee; and Ruth Heppe, of the Northwestern College at Watertown.

BEER MEASURE IS PASSED BY HOUSE

Wets Are Victorious by a Vote of 230 to 165.

Washington.-By a vote of 230 to 165 he house passed the Collier bill legalizing the manufacture and sale of peer -with an alcoholic content of 3.2 per cent. The measure was handed on to the senate and the wets promised prompt action in that body. The prospect is that a beer bill will be laid before President Hoover before the end of January. The Collier bill will face a fight in the senate committees, and final action on it may be delayed until the senate has voted on repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

Passage of the Collier measure by the house represented a Democratic victory and a quick redemption on the house side of the Democratic campaign pledge to give the nation beer pending outright repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. In the final poll Republican wet strength failed to measure up to the 100 votes they had promised. The Democratic leaders surprised themselves by overshooting their mark.

Voting for the bill were 133 Democrats, 96 Republicans and 1 Farmer-Laborite. Against it were 64 Demorats and 101 Republicans. Eighty-one ame ducks were lined up in opposition o the measure. Should the President eto the bill those lame duck votes might prevent its passage over the

Compromise Reached in

Railway Wage Question Chicago.-Continuance of the 10 per cent deduction in the wages of the nation's 1.500.000 railway workers for nine months was agreed on by executives of the railroads and heads of the

The deduction, it has been estimated, costs the workers $17,000,000 a month. The pay deduction, which is carefully differentiated from a reduction in the basic wage scale, will be continued until October 31. The railroads pledge themselves not to serve notice under the railway labor act of a reduction in the basic scale before June 15, and the workers promise not to seek an increase before that time.

Union leaders regarded the agreement as a victory, since it automatically restores the higher rates of the basic wage scale October 31, unless the railroads can force a reduction in the scale after June 15.

CAPONE MOB LEADER SHOT BY POLICEMAN

Frank Nitti Wounded During Raid in Chicago.

Chicago,-Frank Nitti, forty-three years old, principal man of business for Al Capone in the days of Chicago's gangland's prosperity, and now chief of the remnants of the Capone mob, was shot and seriously wounded by Detective Harry Lang of Mayor Cermak's office. During the encounter Lang was wounded in the left arm.

The shooting occurred in room 554 of the La Salle-Wacker building, 221 North La Salle street, headquarters of the Nitti organization. Lang and three other detectives, learning that the place was a hangout for hoodlums. went there in conformity with the mayor's order to break up all meetings of gangsters. With Nitti they found six of his lieutenants.

The gangsters were ordered to raise their hands. All except Nitti obeyed readily. He was the last of the seven. Lang saw him thrust a paper into his mouth and start chewing it up. At this the detective leaped toward the gang leader to try to retrieve the paper, believing it might contain important underworld secrets.

Then, according to the story told by the policemen, Nitti drew a pistol from one of his pockets and fired. bullet striking Lang. Crying "You shot me!" Lang raised his own pistol. which he held in his hand when he entered the room, and fired five times.

Three of the bullets struck Nitti one in the right side of the neck, one in the right side of the chest, and the third in the back near the spinal cord,

ASKS ROOSEVELT'S AID ON WAR DEBTS

Hoover Tells Congress He Plans Commission.

Washington.-President Hoover notified congress that, in the absence of legislation to review the war debt agreements he proposed to seek President-Elect Roosevelt's co-operation in creating an executive commission to begin immediate conversations with Europe toward breaking down the stiffening barriers to world economic recovery.

The President declared for prompt nternational co-operation to check a vicious downward spiral which was stifling trade, nullifying tariff, decreasing consumption and depressing prices under the pressure of unstable the restoration of price levels," involvever possible, and that it seemed impossible to accomplish this result "by the individual and separate action of different countries each striving for separate defense."

His plan, as simultaneously transmitted to Governor Roosevelt at Albany, was to get the maximum trading advantage from the war debts by having the pleas from nondefaulting debtor nations heard by a commission of American citizens which also would include American delegates to the world economic and disarmament con-

By this means the United States, without involving debts in the general economic conference and thus risking mass approach by Europe, would be in a position to offer concessions to individual debtor nations which were willing to reduce armaments and fight to restore the gold standard

Labor receives considerably more than half of the cost of the humber employed in the construction of the average home, it was declared by the National Lumber Manufacturers' as-

If the labor of the woodsmen who cut down the trees, the labor of the sawmill workers who cut the logs into lumber, of the planing mill men who make the doors, sash and flooring; of the various transportation and distributing agencies are considered the portion of the "lumber dollar" going to labor in the construction of a dwelling will be approximately 67 cents, the association finds, A survey in 15 large cities in as many states, made by the United States bureau of labor statistics, showed that the all-material cost in residential construction was 62.7 cents of the building dollar, while labor costs amounted to 37.3 cents.

The "lumber dollar," made up of the cost of carpentry work, lumber, millwork, and other items, was divided between 67.1 cents for materials and 32.9 cents for labor. This classification of material referred to materials delivered on the job and did not reveal the portion of labor going into its preparation, it is explained.-Washington Star.

Highest Paid Short Fiction Writer

CANNIE HURST is the highest paid short story writer in the world today. There's a good reason for that. She knows human nature and under the magic of her touch, the people about whom she writes become real people, not mere literary creations. The plots of her stories are based on incidents from real life as it is lived every day by the common people.

Such are the stories which are appearing in this newspaper. Be sure to read them and talk to your friends about them, for they like interesting stories, too. And Fannie Hurst's stories are interesting stories.

Manitowoc-Paul F. Jost, former treasurer of the town of Centerville, was bound over to circuit court for trial on a charge of embezzling $2,909 of the town's money.

Madison-An average of 8,500 men were employed on the state highway system during 1932. The erection and removal of snow fences is costing the state $150,000 annually.

Kaukauna-The explosion of a chemical vat in the Heinzkill soap laboratories severely burned two employes, Carl Kampf and Ferdinand Nolte, who were drenched with the scalding liquid.

Two Rivers-Operators of 28 soft drink parlors here have petitioned the city council to extend the closing hour for their places to 1 p. m. to prevent the trade from going-to rural roadrouses.

Madison-The state highway commission has recreated the position of traffic engineer, a position to pay $275 to $350 per month, for the announced purpose of protecting roads from damage by freight trucks.

Madison-The northern Wisconsin tobacco pool has arranged to borrow $1,530,000 from the Reconstruction Finance corporation and two banks to pay growers for the 1931 tobacco crop and to continue pool operations. Tobacco is selling around 5 cents per pound, the lowest price since the pool was started 78 years ago.

Madison - U. S. Senator John J. Blaine has indicated that he will be a candidate for public office again but emphasized that it would be an elective and not an appointive office. The senator, in a telegram from Washington, denied that he is a prospective appointee for federal judge in the Western Wisconsin district, as stated in a newspaper report.

Wautoma-Three rural mail carriers In Waushara county are to get substantial salary increases as a result of the elimination of one other carrier and consolidation and extension of routes. The postal department makes a saving under this arrangement, due to the fact that the first 24 miles of every route are paid for at $75 a mile a year, while for extensions the salary is $30 a mile a year.

Madison-Encouraging results of the enlarged forest fire protection program in Wisconsin in 1932 are shown in a report issued by the state conservation department. The number of fires reported increased from 2,340 last year to 3,168, but due to increased vigilance the average burned area was reduced in 1931 was 640,979 and this year

Chippewa Falls-Beulah Huff, 27year-old farm woman, walked into the district attorney's office here and confessed that she shot and killed her father, States Huff, 75, at their home near here on Nov. 15. The death was originally reported as a suicide, but it developed that there had been a family quarrel and that Beulah had purchased a revolver in a hardware store here a few days prior to the shooting. Miss Huff was remanded to jail on a charge of first degree murder.

Madison-The state department of markets has been enjoined by three federal judges from proceeding with its proposed investigation of alleged unfair trade practices on the part of the big motion picture distributors. An injunction was granted to the allied movie concerns on the ground that they are operating under the federal copyright and interstate commerce laws and that the state department has no jurisdiction to investigate them. It was charged that the big distributors are forcing independents out of business by withholding films from Madison - Out of more than 31,000 gasoline measuring pumps inspected during 1932 by state and city sealers of weights and measures, 7,197 were found inaccurate on first inspection and ordered repaired or adjusted. It is estimated by the state marketing board that 464,874,000 gallons of gasoline were brought into the state in 1931, and that about 371,999,500 gallons were sold through measuring pumps, in addition to 37,200,000 quarts of lubricating oil. The estimated bill for Wisconsin motorists in 1931 included $56,000,000 for gasoline and $9,000,000 for lubricating oil.

Stevens Point - Damages of $2,500 were awarded to Walter Wisniewski, a farmer of Oasis, by a circuit court jury, in his suit against the town of Belmont, Portage county. Wisniewski's legs were broken when his wagon tipped over on a town road. The jury found that the condition of the highway resulted in his injuries.

Madison - Herman L. Ekern, Madison, has been appointed a member of the deep waterways commission by Gov. La Follette to succeed C. A. Lamoreaux, Ashland.

Madison-State Senator O. S. Loomis of Mauston announced that he would introduce a bill in the 1933 legislature giving the circuit courts power to extend the redemption period for mortgages so as to prevent foreclosures and Madison-Plans have been announced for a campanile 85 feet high housing 26 to 35 carillon bells on the University of Wisconsin campus. Graduating classes of 1917 to 1926 contributed $28,542 towards a fund to be used for this purpose.

Grantsburg - Rev. M. R. Fredenbaugh crossed the Mississippi river here to the Minnesota shore in subzero weather and married a couple by lantern light in order to comply with license regulations. The contracting couple took out a license in their home city of Shevlin, Minn., and upon arriving in Grantsburg to be married discovered that the document was not valid in Wisconsin.

Wausau - Officials of Wausau and other nearby cities have requested the state public service commission to issue an emergency order requiring the Wisconsin Valley Electric company to reduce its service rates. Speakers at a meeting here claimed that many Marathon county farm families will be obliged to return to the use of kerosene lamps if they cannot get lower rates on electricity.

Madison - The state conservation commission has no authority under the 1931 law authorizing emergency ice from 274 to 40 acres. The reported | fishing to restrict such fishing to the damage was reduced from $421,501 to unemployed, according to a ruling by $59,320. The number of acres burned | the attorney general's office. At a recent meeting the commission decided that it would open various waters on the condition that fishing be limited to the unemployed, but before definite action was taken the question was referred to the attorney general for his

> Madison-Representatives of chambers of commerce and freight shippers throughout the state met here Dec. 20 to plan an attack on the proposed increase in class freight rates for Wisconsin that is being asked of the interstate commerce commission by railroads. The state public service commission successfully fought the class rate case in 1931, but the interstate commerce commission has reonened the case with the possibility of even higher rates being granted.

Milwaukee-Abolition of the present boxing commission and a five per cent tax on wrestling exhibitions will be recommended by Gov.-elect Schmedeman by the senate committee which has been investigating the affairs of the Wisconsin State Athletic commission. The committee believes that instead of the three man boxing commission now active at a salary of $5 for each working day, a five man commission to work without pay should be adopted.

Portage - A jury in circuit court found Mrs. Josephine Roth of Beloit guilty of two charges connected with the murder of Robert Wilson, Kenosha real estate operator, near Lodi last July. Mrs. Roth was the sweetheart of Frank Tylius, who confessed to the slaying of Wilson and later committed suicide in a jail cell. Experts .estified that notes used to extort money from Wilson before his murder were in the handwriting of Mrs. Roth and she was convicted of conspiracy to defraud and with being an accessory to extortion.

ASA THE ANIMAL TAMER With their eyes riveted on the

Asa was a skilled animal hunter. It was his job not to kill the beasts but to bring them back to zoos and menageries alive and well. It was on one of his return trips that he had one of the most difficult experiences of his career. On this trip he had several very valuable coal black leopards, very beautiful but very rebellious crea tures who resented their captivity and hated their captor. All day long they paced in their cages angrily. One day when Asa was on the upper deck basking in the sunshine he heard a tremendous commotion down below. One of his black leopards had escaped from his cage. His crew was terrified. but they har succeeded in corner ing the beast in behind some very weak crates. Any minute he was certain to spring. Asa had to think quickly. He did not want to shoot for the leopard was far too valuable to lose. A trap would have to be set for him. That was the only way out.

"Don't take your eyes off the leopard," he said quietly to the men who were crouching in a corner, shaking with fear. "I am going to drive him back into his cage. You must help me."

There are five animals drawn one on top of each other in this picture. See if you can distinguish them all correctly.

leopard the men collewed instructions as best they could. Grabbing chairs that were near them for shields, one snarled, "Why don't you kill him before he kills us?" Asa did not answer but he spoke further directions. "I am going to charge him. It's the only way. You surround him in a semi-circle with your chairs in front of you. When he springs I will make a second charge driving him in the direction of the cage. Ready?" The leopard's eyes were green and glassy with fear and hatred. He crouched for a spring. Asa charged. The great cat rose into the air and Asa just had time to swerve to the left so that he dropped a few yards from him. Dazed at not accomplishing any escape and seeing the strange sight of the men behind chairs on all sides of him he stood still for a moment, "Ready men?" spoke Asa softly. "I'll make the second

With a single turn of his lithesome body the leopard was near enough to tear any of the men to pieces. Asa was only a few yards from him. If anything went wrong -But it mustn't. The cage door was wide open. Asa making a noise like a siren to frighten the beast toward the cage made a dive forward. The cat responded but instead of going into the cage he leaped through an opening in the ranks left by one of the men who unobserved by the others who were held spellbound had sneaked away. The leopard was through and bounding for the upper deck.

"Quick men," cried Asa. "Block off that opening to the deck." By going through the center one man reached the opening before the leopard did, and holding his chair before him crouched to guard it. The other men and Asa had followed. "We've only one more chance," said Asa, "to corner him again and move the cage to the corner where he cannot spring and cannot go in any other direction. If this fails I'll guarantee to shoot."

Two men he commissioned to set the cage. The rest were to close in as before as Asa kept his attention, and drove him, Asa shot over the rail to frighten the beast. The sight of the fire and the smell of the powder terrified him and backing up gradually as the men and Asa drew toward him he reached the cage before he sensed his limits. "A little closer men and we'll have him."

The leopard felt the cage behind him. He crouched. "He's going to spring," Asa cried, He fired again. The beast instinctively backed from it and did so just far enough so that he backed into the cage. The men were quick. They closed in with their chair shields and prevented his escape. He clawed through the rounds but could not reach the nen and two of them pushed the slats of his cage down from above fastening him in securely. Asa had savedhis leopard and now if you could see him stretched out in comfort in a natural setting in a zoo you would never suspect his struggle against captivity.

SYNOPSIS

Wilson McCann, young Arizona ranchman, finds an old friend, Jim Yerby, with a broken deg. Julia Stark, daughter of Matthew Stark, daughter of McCana, is with him. Jasper, Julia's brother, attempts to assassinate Wilson. Ann Gifford, with her young sister, Ethel, are sheep raisers, and on that account impopular with the cattlemen. "Night riders" shoot a McCann rider. Peter McCann, Wilson's father, offers a reward for the disclosure of their identity. Wilson McCann horsewhips Jasp T, he making practically no resistance. Matriew Stark posts notice he will kill Wilson McCsnn on sight. Ann Gifford's tragedy is the fate of her dead sister, Nora, betrayed and abandoned by her lover. Jasper Stark and Carl forences. A Stark rider, Tom McArdle, is bewell by the Starks to have been killed by the McCsnns, but rumor links his name with that Nora Gifford. Matthew Stark is killed, from mb/sh. Julia finds him dead, with Wilson McCann stooping over him. She and Phil, her younger brother, accuse McCann of the killing, despi'e his vehement denial. Wilson is shot from the chapparal, while standing over Matthey Stark's body. Believing him dying, the Stark's have him taken to their home. Dave Stone Stark rider, a Texan with a record as a 'kil'e'," openly doubts Wilson's guilt. Jasper da damherited by his father's will. Wilson Mcand is restored to health. Jasper Stark, de-pits the girl's aversion, seeks to persuade Ethel Gifford to marry him, holding over her the threat of revealing Ann as the slayer of Tors McArdle. Ann drives him from the ran.h. Later she admits to Ethel that she killed McArdle, Nera's betrayer. No action as to Matthew Stark's killing is taken. An anon ymous letter to the sheriff charges Ann Gifford wit. McArdle's murder. Dave Stone, hearing this, confesses to the sheriff that he killed Ardle, the slaying being the result of Mc-Arde's betrayal of Nora. Stone is confined in Mesa. Jim Yerby finds Jasper k and Gitner urging the lynching of Ston or McArdle's murder. He tells Ann Gifford, who insists she killed McArdle and Stone is to shield her. With Phil and Julia she rices to Mesa to tell her story and save Stone.
Julia meets Wilson McCann and appeals to for assistance. McCann "kidnaps" Jas-

"You wouldn't take advantage of me chisaway, Wils," he wheedled, "I ain't got a thing in the world against youall. This family feud is plumb foolish. Tha's what I said to Jule. I says. 'Let's take Wils home an' nurse him. I says, 'This shootin' was Dad's fault anyhow, an' Wils is a good fellow.' Honest, to G-d tha's what I told her. Wils. We looked after you right at the Circle Cross, didn't we? Done everything for you that we could?"

"I'm not going to hurt you," the other said with disgust. "No use lying to me. It don't buy you anything. . . . Move on up the bank here an' knock on the door."

Through the gloom the shadowy outline of a building had emerged. It was the back of the stone jail. Jasper knocked on the iron-studded

"Wils McCann with a prisoner.

That you. Mike?'

"Yep. It's sure enough you, Wils, The deputy was already unlocking the door. His question had been surplusage, for he had recognized the voice. Nevertheless Rand's revolver covered the men as they entered. "Whachawant?" he demanded. "Why, I brought a trouble-maker along with me, Mike," answered Wilson. "I figured he was better here than shootin' off his mouth at the Gilt Edge. Got a cell handy for bim?" "You've got no right to hold me without a warrant. I won't stand for it a minute," blustered Jasper, now much reassured as to his safety.

"Incitin' to riot, Mike. Better hustle him into a cell. This is liable to be our busy night. I'm going back to get that Gitner if I can. If we get these two birds in jail an' nobody knows where they're at, the mob is going to drift around for avhile lookin' for its leaders. If we can stand 'em off a few hours there won't be any lynching. Mostly mobs are what you call temperamental."

Rand was Irish and ready to fight. If there was a chance to save his prisoner's life he was more than willing to take it. The appearance of a friend willing to play the game out with him was tremendously cheering. He knew the McCanns well. If they rallied to his aid there was a likelihood of suc-

"Boy, I'm with you till Yuma gets snowbound," he cried with enthusiasm. "We'll put Mr. Stark in Number 40 an'

boy was giving a message to the big Texan. "Gen'lman says Mistah Stark would like for to see you at the back "doah, Mistah Gitner."

Busy though he had been drinking and exhorting, Gitner had missed his fellow conspirator and wondered where the had gone. That Jasper should send for him to hold a whispered conference away from the crowd was quite probable. Gitner swaggered to the rear of the saloon without an instant

He walked out of the back door straight into a forty-five, the barrel of which pressed against his stomach. "Hands up, Gitner," came the hard crisp order. The Texan had no option. His hands moved skyward. Deftly McCann removed his revolvers.

"We're going down the alley," he explained in a low voice. "I don't aim to kill you unless you make some fool break. Do that, an' it will sure be yore funeral."

"What's the play if you're not axin' to kill me?" Gitner asked. "You'll find out. Now move-not too fast-an' don't look back. I might change my mind."

The Texan moved. He never argued with a man who had the drop on him and meant business. It was safer to watch for a chance and plug the fellow when he was not looking. Wilson followed at his heels, the gun ander one eage of the coat he wore unbuttoned. They reached the street annoticed, crossed it without observation, and passed into the gloom of the

"To jail." "What for?"

"Raisin' a riot."

The prisoner made no complaint about the illegality of this proceeding. It was high-handed of course, but the man behind a gun has the privilege of being that if he chooses. There was no use trying to talk McCann out of the advantage he held. Gitner did not attempt it. His cunning mind concentrated on the practical problem of es-

The chance came as they were picking their way down into the small gulch. It was so dark that McCann was following close on the heels of the other. Gitner stumbled and fell. His arm swept out, caught the younger man's legs below the knees, and dragged them out from under him.

The revolver flew out of Wilson's hand as he went down. Before he could stop himself he had rolled down the steep ground on top of the Texan. They went to the bottom of the incline together, now one and now the other on top.

In the scramble of wildly flying legs the two men clung fast. But in that instant, while they were locked in each other's arms, Wilson realized that he was no match for his opponent at this kind of rough work. He was lighter by twenty-five pounds and he was still weakened from the effect of his recent wounds. To survive, he knew it would be necessary to break the other's bearlike hug. Otherwise his ribs would be crushed and the breath driven out of his body.

They landed in the creek bed with Gitner on top. The Texan laughed in savage triumph. He had his enemy at his mercy and knew it, though Wilson was still trying with short arm jolts to the jaw to break the viselike grip that encircled him.

"I gotcha, by G-d," the Texan grunted.

He shifted his hold. One hand pinned down the fist beating like a piston rod against his face. The other found the throat of the prostrate man the sinewy fingers tightening until Me-Cann strangled for breath.

Wilson knew he was lost unless he could escape from the grasp of steel encircling his neck. Yet it was by no set plan that he hit upon a way of saving himself. In his agony he drew up his feet and straightened them with swift force. The effect was astonishing. Gitner let out a shriek of pain. His throat hold loosened momentarily. Again McCann brought up his heels and raked them savagely down the calves of the other. Gitner tore himself free, and got to his feet. The man's trouser legs were shredded and his limbs bleeding. The sharp spurs on Wilson's boots had ripped through to the flesh and roweled it merciessly. He stood there cursing, furious with rage.

Before he recovered his reason the man on the ground covered him with his own revolver, drawn from the belt Wilson had fastened above his hips. "Reach for the roof," McCann or:

The Texan glared at him savagely. His huge doubled fists worked spasmodically. He wanted to fling himself on this young fellow and stamp the life out of him. But under the menace of the forty-five he dared not attempt it. McCann still struggled for breath in a world which swam in bubbles before his eyes. But Gitner did not know that. The big fists slowly moved up over the bullet-shaped Teutonic head

"If I had a gun-" The subordinate clause was a threat which needed no conclusion to be understood.

"I'm still borrowin' it. Don't you Slowly Wilson rose. Every moment he was breathing less raggedly and was seeing more clearly. "If you're quite sure-you don't want to start something else, Mr. Gitner-we'll be moving on again," he said with an effort. They traveled up the sandy wash, climbed from the creek bed, and were admitted into the jail. "How's everything, Wils?" the dep-"Why, fine as silk. Brought you an-Gitner. Room 27 for you." When Rand had locked up the Texan he led his friend down the cor-

"One of these is a lady," the deputy explained dryly. "A lady!" McCann's mind flew to Julia Stark. Had she been so unwise as to come to the jail with the idea that she could be useful? It would be like her. She was both impulsive and unselfish.

"Why yes, a lady! Come right in an' meet her." Wilson followed him into the office.

Before he had left for Tucson, Sheriff Le Page dropped in to Stone's cell. "If there's a thing more you need to make you comfortable, Davecigars or newspapers or a book to read -why, speak right up an' I'll see you You're shielding me now. That's why you gave yourself up, so that people wouldn't blame me. And I had treated you mean-wouldn't let you be my friend. Then you do this for me. But I won't have it. I'm going to stop it. I'll tell them I did it and they'll let you go." Ann ended on a rising note close to hysteria.

The gunman was close to death. The dull roar of its menace echoed up to him from the street a block away. He did not think of that now. In his blood there drummed a beat of joy. In that hour he was nearer to the woman he loved than ever he had been before.

"Nothing to that," he said quietly. "This is a private grudge an' those holding it will git me if they can. You're not in this. What's the sense of you mixin' in? It won't help me any, an' you'll get in bad yoreself. If I was you I'd go straight home an' not say a word to anybody. Maybe things will work out all right for me. You never can tell."

His coldness chilled her, but she would not give up. "Go home!" she repeated. "Leave you here to die when-when-" She put her hands up to her face and broke into violent sobbing.

was worried about it?" Before he had finished speaking there rose a sound such as Ann had never heard before. It had in it something of the wild beast's triumphant scream when it has brought its kill to bay. Then, without another word, she was gone. Again there came to him on the light night breeze the ominous yell of the man-hunters.

A Toast to the New Year

DB JUDSON went down to breakfast New Year's morning with his shirt cuffs dangling. He had watched the old year out and the new year in at his young sister's party and had promised to " go skating with the "crowd"

by nine in the morning. "What in thunder do you mean by swiping my cuff buttons, Peggy?" he said to his sister. "Only this," cooed Peggy, who was eighteen and uncommonly pretty. She held up her hands, showing the cuffs of a blouse of masculine cut. "I needed them, dearie, so before you were awake I came in and got them. Don't be huffy, sweetheart, it's New Year's day." "Well, you needn't be so absurdly good-natured," growled Bob. "No, dearest!" said Peggy. "But It's New Year's day and I've made some resolutions. One's to be very good-natured. And I'm beginning on you. I have made out some for you. too," she added. Tom read in small, rather childish writing, these resolutions thought by

"Oh, no," said the girl. "It would seem as if I had been very impertinent upon him with a "Why, Marmaduke. If we ever met again. But I shall always be grateful." Then the door closed and Tom in much confusion traced his steps homeward. It was a quarter to seven when he reached

"Tom, you have broken one of your resolutions the first thing," chirped

"I've broken more than one," said Tom dismally. "I've flirted with a girl, knocked a man over. I've felt as if I wanted something all to myself, and if I get half a chance I'll be engaged before next year. Say. Peggy, Sally lives somewhere in Bedford street, doesn't she?" "Twenty-six," said Peggy. "And I shouldn't wonder if you'd better remember that, because you'll have to see Sally's cousin home. You see, she's the extra girl tonight." Then the telephone bell rang and Peggy was absorbed for many minutes. She burst in upon Tom in the dining room, where he was finishing dinner alone. "Tom, hurry. I am afraid you'll have to get Sally and her cousin Burton James was going to meet them here and they were coming alone, but the cousin-Madge is her name-had the most awful experience, perfectly awful. A man followed her. They walked along and then he took her arm, wanted to make a date with her and everything. Madge didn't know what to do, it was so dark and lonely. But she says the nicest man came along and saw her difficulty and knocked the man down and took her home, then left without letting her know who he was. Wasn't that splendid? Now the girls are afraid to come alone for fear that other man will

Of course, Tom hastened to 26 Bedford street, and of course the affair ripened into a romance, and long before the year was out announcements were made of the engagement of Madge and Tom.

New Year's Suggestion

Offered by Thoreau A New Year's suggestion is contained in the following passage from Thoreau:

'A man must attend to nature close ly for many years to know when, as well as where, to look for his objects, since he must always anticipate her a little. Young men have not learned the phases of nature. They do not know what constitutes a year, or that one year is like another. I would know when in a year to expect certain thoughts and moods, as the sportsman knows when to look for plover." This is a glimpse of the higher, poetic range of our subject-the heaven which cometh by observation. "Observation without record, however, falls short of its possibilities for both value and enjoyment. Memory will retain general impressions and the larger outlines, but ought not to be trusted for exact details, and will soon
