Cottons of High Style Importance

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

turns to thoughts of spring sewing. If any inspiration is needed to lure the woman who makes her own clothes into a do-it-now frame of mind, it may be found in the aisles and aisles of enchanting spring materials now on display throughout all fashionland. A significant fact about the new fabric showings is the prominence given to cottons which are that amazingly novel and chic as to be almost unbeliev

So completely have some of the newer cottons managed to conceal their identity, one has almost to look at their labels or inquire of the salesperson to make sure that they are what they are, and not perhaps fine silk or woolen as they appear to be. Almost any effect is possible with novelty cotton yarns as they are now being durene-processed, often worked with rayon strands into boucle or soft-twisted finishes, or with silken sheen or perfectly delustered, as the textile realm should prove very encouraging to the amateur seamstress with whom the thought of handling and cutting into costly silk or woolen all but brings on an attack of "stage fright," for although the new and smart cotton weaves are high style and "look like a million," they are in reality inexpensive enough to afford any ambitious home-sewing woman to experiment with them without fear and trembling.

Ribbed and diagonal cotton fabrics are proving of special interest to the Paris houses, such as for instance a type known as durene ribcord, which appeared in dresses, suits, hats, shoes,

A GAIN we arrive at that time of the pandbags, beach clothes, scarfs, and year when fancy or is it stern duty. coats last year, and which, incidentally, is being revived for the coming spring especially by millinery and footwear houses. Diagonals are shown in wide variety, including those of lacy construction on solid grounds.

Shirred, crepey and blistered effects are vastly important. The new cotton matelasse weaves in monotone and two-tone combinations cater to the prevailing feeling for crinkly surfaces.

Fabric laces-that is laces made to be used for dresses and not merely for trimming-are fortuitously popping up again. Among the new durene lace fabrics are effective swirled patterns, minute floral and geometric designs, antique block effects, eyelets and nubs. Both pastel and high colors of spring importance are available. These laces are washable and can easily be handled by the woman who makes her own clothes, at the same time they are a great favorite with the professional designer and dressmaker. #### CAPE TAKES PLACE IN SPRING MODELS

There is more and more evidence of the coming popularity of the cape. It appears almost daily in some new form, in the studios of the well-known designers-as a half-length evening wrap, as a full-length sports over-all as an accessory to the afternoon dress. as the collar on a town coat.

It is made in velvet, tweed, corduroy, satin-practically every imaginable material.

As Mainbocher indicates in a good many of his new spring clothes, the cape looks its youngest when it is short.

He puts it, in a dashing abbreviated form, on the back of little wool dresses; he wraps it around the shoulders of spring suits; he makes it into elbow-length and hip-length wraps to go over young girls' evening dresses.

Slippers for Evening Are Now Shown in All Colors

Cinderella's glass slippers can't compete with the glamorous modern models that go dancing now.

Exquisite new evening slippers tempt from the show windows-all colors, all tints, to match or contrast with the gown. They are fashioned of velvet, doeskin, crepe, satin, brocade, silver and gold kidskin, and are elaborate and ornamental.

The lavish cut-out sandal is passing out of the fashion picture. It is being succeeded by a new sandal pattern in which the tips of the toes and the heels are covered.

Coral Velvets

Could anything be loveller than lounging pajamas of coral colored velvet made with a flattering surplice neckline which is embroidered in a conventional design with white angora? | feta.

COTTON MATELASSE By CHERIE NICHOLAS

If you are going South, or if you are staying at home, for that matter, there is nothing smarter and newer for your next party frock than cotton or silk matelasse. This material which has either a quilted or a blistered or a puffed surface is the rage both here and in style centers abroad. The gown pictured is of white cotton matelasse with a ruche-edged sort of a capelet affair of organdie. The wrap which milady carries is of cherry taf-

What Women Want to Know About Fashions

There is a revival of silver lame for 1 evening shoes. There is a certain charm in veiled eyes that the straight forward gaze never achieves. Accessory fashions have been revolutionized by Paris' latest invention-the velvet glove. A good match with one's velvet frock is a bag of similar velvet, or at least in a matching shade.

Moire velvet is winning the hearts of fashion conscious women. There is increased approval of the silhouette of front fullness with plain back. London women are wearing hats decorated with crystal buckles in the form of an iceberg.

The newest evening cape is of velvet, contrasting in color with the dress, and reaching to the waistline.

WHEN JOHNNY BULL

MADE BAD BARGAIN Nobody wanted northern Minnesota in the early days of the American Republic. The vast unsettled region of forests and lakes was not claimed by the Continental congress, and would today be a part of Canada. if the British had not outdone the Yankees in the game of give away.

A brochure by W. E. Culkin, cf Duluth, on the early history of that region brings out the interesting fact that a British proposal, made following the War of 1812, actually gave headwaters of the Mississippi.

Once in early days, says Mr. Culkin, the Continental congress even latitude as the boundary line.

-16-As McCann reached the boulder field there came to him the faint far-away explosion of a gun. Another almost merged in the first, and a few seconds later came a third sound like the popping of a distant firecracker.

That was all. Carried on the evening breeze to one not keyed by apprehension, they might have seemed friendly greetings of the night. But to Wilson there was something in those sounds that shook his soul. They seemed to him sinister signals of tragedy. For he did not doubt that Phil had been challenged while escaping and that in the flash of guns which instantly followed somebody had been

He listened, nerves taut, heart drenched with dread, but no other shots came to break the stillness. The boy had either broken through or they had got him. Which?

He had intended to lie hidden in the boulder field till he was discovered. and make there a stand against the rustlers. But he found it impossible to wait there quietly while in doubt about Phil's fate. Julia had put her brother in his care. Perhaps the youngster lay wounded somewhere on the trail. He must find out.

Only a few stars were yet out. In the darkness he strode across the park through the grass, headed for the pine hill where he had left Phil and the horses. He wanted to make sure that Phil had at least started for home.

In the hollow back of the pine-clad slope Wilson found the pack horse and his own mount Jim-Dandy. The latter was saddled and tied by a slip knot to a young tree.

He swung to his seat and rode down the hill. The entrance to the gulch was perhaps a hundred and fifty yards from the house. He was still some distance from it when a rider emerged, galloping hard, and made straight for the cabin.

Wilson pulled up. The man had come from the canyon bringing news with him. What was the important message that drove him so fast to his confederates? He would very much like to know. It might greatly simplify the problem before him.

"I reckon we'll not go right now, Jim-Dandy-not till I've had a look at the cabin, anyhow. There's just a chance they've got Phil there."

He left the cowpony in a draw and moved with a long even stride toward the house. His rifle he left beside the horse. It would only hamper him at close quarters. If it came to a gunplay his .45 would be better.

No dog came barking to sound warning of his approach. He came by the rear, to a curtained window of a lighted room.

Inside were four men-Gitner, Jasper Stark, Mark Dunwig, and Kelly Brown. All were on their feet, intent. and one at least frightened. From the edge of the curtain Wilson could see two-thirds of the room. To sweep with his gate the rest of it he had to move to the other side of the window.

Brown stood just inside the doorway telling a story. "An' when he wouldn't stop I let him have it." He made his narrative dramatic by an instinctive crouched gesture of throwing a gun on someone. "He blazed away at me as he went by. Before he turned the bend in the trail I fired again." "Hi: bim?" demanded Gitner with

"Don't know. He sure kept trav-

Jasper's high voice betrayed his fear. "They've got us trapped," he whined. "I told you I didn't want to throw in with you in this rotten game, Carl. By G-d, we've got a rope round our necks right now."

The Texan looked at him scornfully, his legs wide apart, cruel eyes narrowed. "You're one h-l of a pardner, Jas. No guts."

Dunwig spoke, his light blue eyes taking in Jasper with swift furtive appraisal. He was convinced that Stark would betray them to save his own hide if the chance came. "Don't look to me like we're trapped. Not by a Jugful. What's yore brother breakin' his neck to get away for if they've got us? I'd say it's the other way round. Likely two or three of 'em butted in here lookin' for us. This Mc-Cann wanted to make sure about whose cattle were here. He must of left the others an' the horses up in the pines. When yore brother heard the shootin' he figured the game was up an' lit out pronto. I'll bet he was alone up there. Anyhow, I'm goin' up to find out. We'll know then where we're at. With Manuel posted at the Narrows this McCann can't get out down the gulch. My notion is we've got that guy where we want him." Gitner shook a huge fist savagely. "I speak for him. Lemme have him an' I'll sure riddle him aplenty," he cried with a fierce oath

Again the terror that was riding Jasper Stark cried out. "Tell you we're trapped. If ever I get outa here

He did not finish the sentence. But as it stood the meaning was clear enough, a threat to abandon those with whom he was allied, perhaps to betray them. The eyes of Gitner and Dunwig met, and a message passed between them. In that long look he was condemned. For they knew their lives were at the mercy of this weakling who would turn evidence against them whenever pressure was brought to bear. Neither of them doubted that Jasper Stark would save himself at their expense if he could. Every word he had spoken since he burst ! The man was Dave Stone. He had them that this was true.

"First off, we'll all go up to the pines an' see if anyone is still camped there," Dunwig proposed. "That suit you, Carl? If we bump into this Mc-Cann an' his friends we'll fog it out

Gitner straddled to the wall and took a rifle down from the deer's horns on which it rested. "Suits me fine," he boasted. "I always did want another crack at that Wils McCann. I 'most sent him to Kingdom Come oncet."

"I'm sick, boys, Reckon I'll stay here," Jasper said.

"Reckon you won't," Gitner told him with a brutal laugh. "How about it, For a fraction of a second Dunwig's sidling eyes met those of the Texan. "Why no, I 'low he'd better go along, Carl." The man crouched outside the window knew that it was time for him to be gone. He retreated carefully a few steps, then broke into a run. After he reached his horse and had reclaimed the rifle lying near he hes-"Where do we go from here, Jim-Dandy?" he drawled aloud. "Blamed if I know. The gulch is closed. It would be suicide if we tried to make a break down thataway. It's back to the big rocks for me, I expect."

Already the outlaws were pouring out of the house. From where he stood he could have shot them down in comparative safety, but he could not harden his heart to do that, though he knew they would murder him without scruple if they got the chance. Hurriedly he mounted and rode back into the pines.

"Have to leave you here, J. D.," he told his horse. "I'm playin' for time, old fellow, an' you're too big to hide. So I can't take you along."

He left Jim-Dandy with the pack horse and retreated to the foot of the rock wall. The voices of the outlaws came to him, though he could not make out their words. They had evidently found the two animals and were deciding what to do.

The sound of their voices died away. Probably they had decided to wait till morning. Then they would thoroughly search the valley and find him.

Wilson made his way back to the upper end of the park. The big rocks offered the best cover he had seen for a last stand.

CHAPTER XIV

The Old Maid Sheepherder Julia staved at the sheep ranch the night after her brother and his companion started for Guadaloup canyon. It was long before she could get to sleep. The enterprise upon which the two men were embarked was a dangerous one, even though they had gone only to spy out the land. She wished she had insisted more strongly that they take a larger posse, for if they should meet the rustlers and there should be a battle they would probably be worsted. Thinking of it now, in the darkness of the night, their undertaking seemed foolhardy. She was glad of the darkness and the freedom it brought from the need to talk. Her thoughts were of Wilson McCann. What had he meant when he said he would not tell her his opinion of her? She tried to vision again the look that had accompanied the words, and her pulses throbbed with joy and apprehension. He was no friend. The lines in which their lives had been cast made that impossible. But he was the man she loved. No longer did she deny that to berself. It gave her a stinging delight to admit They could be nothing to each other. Never! Never! None the less he was everything to her. It was long past midnight before her eyes closed. They opened only when the tinkling of knives and forks told her that Ethel was setting the table for breakfast. "What time is it?" she asked drowsily.

"We've been up hours," Ethel told her. "Ann said to let you sleep. She's had her breakfast and started for one of the camps. You don't have to go home today, do you?"

"Think I'd better. Phil's away, you know." "Mr. Rafferty will look after things. He's been doing it a good many years,

During the day Julia continued to argue that she must be getting home, but she made no move to go. The fact was that she was very reluctant to put that half dozen extra miles between her and the men who had gone to Guadaloup. She was not easy in her mind and she knew that whatever news came would reach the sheep ranch before it did the Circle Cross.

Ethel and she washed their hair and let it dry in the sun. The contrast they offered to each other was striking, the one with soft fluffy ripples like molten gold, the other with long abundant tresses black as coal. There had sprung up between them a swift impulsive friendship, an intimacy made possible by their differing temperaments. One was soft and tender and clinging; the other strong and generous and warm-hearted. When Julia talked of Phil the younger girl's blushes came, but when the conversation veered to Wilson Mc-Cann Julia gave no sign of peculiar interest.

Toward evening Ann returned and vetoed Julia's half-hearted suggestion that she must be going. Wherefore the guest stayed another night and was awakened next morning to the odor of frying bacon.

They had not finished eating when man's voice outside hailed the house.

leaving for Texas! It was Julia, not Ann, who asked him questions, "Texas! I didn't know you were even thinking of going. How long are you going to stay there?"

"I'm figurin' on joinin' the rangers there?" "You haven't had any trouble with Dominick or anybody?" He smiled. "No, ma'am, Nothing like that."

"I wish you wouldn't go. Why can't you stay at the Circle Cross?" "Every once in a while I get sorta hungry for Texas." Julia was not one to give up easily, but she did not find it possible to move him from his purpose.

"You talk to him, Ann, while Ethei and I do the dishes," she said at last. But Ann had nothing to say. She sat mute and still while the Texan maintained as best he could a flow of small talk. Presently she rose. "I've got to look at the feed troughs,"

He walked beside her to the cor-top bar of the fence and looked across at the distant Sierras. "Am I driving you away?" she asked at last.

"Why no, ma'am, I'm just restless." "I ought not to say anything about it," she went on, with a flare of her old bitterness. "It's not womanly, I suppose. But you're either my friend or you're not. I want to know which." "I'm yore friend," he said in a low

"All you did was to try to save me from prison and to protect my good name when folks were talking about me. Nothing to speak of, just almost give your life for me. Now you come and say, 'I'm going away,' without telling me why. Is that fair?"

She spoke with such passionate resentment that he knew he could not stand by the reason he had given for leaving. "Maybe not," he said quietly. "Fact is, Miss Ann, I am leavin' on yore account. It's not fair to you for me to stay. I've worked it all out in my mind. Folks have got a fool notion that-that-" "-that I'm in love with you," she finished for him. "No, ma'am, but that I'm right fond of you." "And since it isn' true, you're going away to stop their talk?" "Yes, Miss Ann, I'm going away to stop their talk, but not for that reason. I'm Dave Stone, Texas killer. It won't do any young lady's name any good to be associated with mine. When I go the talk will die right down," She laughed, shortly. "Good of you to be so thoughtful. Why didn't you just send word you were going away?" "I wanted to see you."

"Well, you've seen me now." She held out her hand. "Good-by." He shook his head. "I don't want to part thataway. We're friends."

"Only it's better-for me-that we don't see each other. Friends at a distance. Shall we exchange Christmas cards?"

Stone reflected, smiling a little at her tart suggestion. Women were not reasonable. She ought to see that it was right for him to go, that he could not stay and let people talk as though there were or had been something be tween them. If he walked out of her life the gossips would have nothing to whisper about. Yet it was not a matter he could discuss freely with her.

"If I was like Wils McCann, say, an upstanding young fellow with a good reputation, why it wouldn't be important if folks did talk about us. But I'm different. I'm a bad man, as the sayin' is. My friends suffer from knowin' me. I don't want anything but good to come to you. So I'll just pull my freight kinda casual."

"Who says you're a bad man?" she demanded. "Why, everybody. That's understood."

"Do you think you are?" "I expect that's not a fair question, he answered, and again a smile blotted out the impassive coldness of his poker face: "Probably Carl Gitner justifies himself to himself. But the fact remains that I killed Tom McArdle and have killed others."

"No. I killed him," she said, looking straight at him. "I'm telling the truth, Miss Ann.

"Maybe so. I don't know about that. But whether you did or not it was I that killed him. It was my thought, my impulse, and it's my sin." She stopped a moment, shivering at the "I'll have to pay for it all memory. my life."

> She rejected that with an impulsive gesture. "That's ridiculous. Even if it were true I wouldn't let it influence me. But it's not. People think differently of you now. They know you're not like that Gitner or Jasper Stark."

"No. but I'm still Dave Stone." "And I'm Ann Gifford, an old mald sheepherder." She looked down with a wry little grimace at her dusty khaki skirt, her coffee-brown hands, and her cactus-torn boots.

"That's not quite how I think of you," he differed. She looked directly at him a faint color beating beneath the deep tan on the thin face. "How do you think of me?" Stone measured his words in order not to say too much. "I think you're a mighty fine an' handsome young woman, one I'll be grateful to as long as I

"But that's all?" "Why, I don't reckon I know what you mean, Miss Ann."

The girl pushed on breathlessly. afraid her courage might fail. "You kissed me once. Why did you do that? Because you were grateful?"

A muscle twitched in his immobile ace. "If I did wrong that time-" She brushed that aside impatiently. 'Who's talking about right or wrong? Do you-care for me, Dave Stone, or

"You know I do." "You're not-just grateful?"

"What's the use of going into that?" "The use? I'm a grown woman, hard and tough like the desert. I know what I want. Don't treat me like a china doll." There was in the manner with which she faced him something of the lean ferocity of the cast aside all feminine coquetry, all grandmother, saying: desert she had mentioned. She had the allurement of her sex. For she knew that unless she broke through his reserve now he would go away with the word she hoped for unspoken. The situation was beyond finesse.

"Am I treatin' you like a doll?" he "I certainly don't aim to do asked.

"Do you claim that you're frank with me-or fair?"

"Fair? Yes, ma'am." "Not in the least fair. Haven't I any right to help decide about my own life? You want to shield me from what people might say, even at the expense of shutting me off from living." She flung toward him a little appealing and rueful smile. "Why are you making it so hard for me, Dave Stone? I don't want to go all the . Or don't you really care?"

In that long meeting of the eves the barrier between them was burned away. He knew, by the clairvoyance of love, that nothing else mattered. If he had been a "bad man" he was now one no longer. That belonged to yesterday's seven thousand years. He was at the sunrise of a new day. He had sloughed his past as a forest creature does its horns.

So he took her in his arms and told her, as lovers have since time began, how wonderful she was and how amazing this experience that had come to him. As she looked at him she wondered how she could ever have thought that face impassive and those eyes

An hour later they remembered that this is a world made up of more than two. Slowly they moved toward the house. A cry startled them. Julia was standing on the porch with Ethel. Her hand pointed up the trail.

A horse and rider were coming down it in a very strange way. The man in the saddle sagged forward in the seat like a drunkard. He lurched unsteadily from side to side.

Julia ran to meet him. She stopped the horse and helped the rider dismount. "Phil." she cried.

Our Dollar Mark

The dollar mark—$—originated in hurried printing of the letters U. S.—United States—on federal currency. By error the letters were printed one up-on the other from which came the dol-lar sign. The dollar was originally de-signed as 8-8 because the dollar was in the beginning divided into eight parts —each known as a reel.

has not the money with which to carry on, and evincing a determination to avoid a deficit at any cost, Gov. Schmedeman delivered a budget message to the legislature Jan. 27 in which he recommended a total reduction of $14,000,000, or 25.09 per cent, in appropriations as compared with those of the current biennium. This is $20, 000,000 less than the budget requests.

Two years ago the legislature appropriated $56,987,922. The gove. for recommends $42,688,393 for the biennium starting July 1. In connecti with a recommendation that the one-tenth mill tax for forestry purposes be restored in place of the $600,000 annual appropriation, he said, "This is the only tax that may be levied on oneral property with my approvai." He also declared himself unalterably opposed to a general sales tax, but indicated that incomes would be surtaxe' for unemployment relief if that became necessary. The budget bill, he pointed out, would permit towns, villages and cities to use their state highway allotments, totaling $4,000,000, for unemployment relief.

The message calls for almost complete suspension of capital expenditures and drastic cuts in maintenance and operating allowances. For the benefit of those who might think the reductions too drastic, the governor warned that even if all his recommendations were carried out the state would still be $9,193,759 short of a balanced budget for the biennium.

As his plan to overcome this shortage the governor advanced the follow-

Enforce rigid economy throughout the state government to build up the treasury balance of June 30, above the estimated $4,500,000.

Levy a state excise tax on leer, following its legalization, to yield $2,-000,000. Divert $1,000,000 of the gas tax to the general fund. Enact legislation to increase receipts by making more departments selfsustaining. Continue the authority of the emergency board to reduce state expenditures as much as 20 per cent below the new allotments.

The reductions in specific appropriations, $4,329,094 for boards, commissions and departments, $2,248,298.21 for the board of control and institutions, $2,102,410.47 for the university and $787,894.61 for teacher colleges, will compel lower salary levels. These reductions are from the 1931-'33 appropriations, which, however, were reduced somewhat by the emergency board. In addition, Gov. Schmedeman specifically recommended a $5,000 maxand reductions in the salaries of supreme court justices, circuit judges, court reporters, highway commissioners and highway engineer, state architect, state engineer and legislative librarian.

In the agricultural field, Gov. Schmedeman recommended that the state fair be suspended until the state could afford to reopen it and that the aid to county fairs be cut from $300,-000 to $150,000 annually. He asked that the department of agriculture and markets administration appropriation be reduced $265,000 for the biennium and that the bovine tuberculosis retest be put on a six-year basis instead of three, with a biennial saving of clared three cuts had been granted in $550,000.

Interest and penalty charges or all delinquent property and income taxes payable in 1932 would be wiped out by a bill introduced in the senate by Senator Rush of Neillsville, if the delinquent taxes are paid by the end January.

Although many counties suspended tax penalties last year, as suggested in a proclamation b . C . La Follette, no legislative authorization has been given. In cases where tax certificates have been sold to individuals, the bill would permit the counties to redeem the charges and cancel the certificates.

A three-month extension, from March to June, in the date for payment of property taxes collectable in 1933 is asked in a bill offered by Senator Shearer of Kenosha. No penalty or interest would be charged, but the tax would be advertised as delinquent and the property owner charged 'or adver-

A bili offered by Assemblyman James C. Hanson of Deerfield would reduce the salaries of senators and assemblymen from $2,400 to $1,500 a biennium. Since the constitution does not permit members to raise or lower their own salaries, the cut, if it is approved, will apply to future legislatures.

CHANCE GIVEN TO PAID UP NATIONS

Those Not in Default Asked to Debt Parley.

Washington .- The State department announced on behalf of President-Elect Roosevelt that debt negotiations will be held after March 4 with the six countries that paid their December installments to the United States.

Secretary Stimson, who several days before had invited Great Britain and Italy to send delegations to Washington, was instructed to extend similar invitations to Czechoslovakia, Lithuania, Latvia and Finland.

The defaulties, headed by France thus were placed in a separate and unenviable category. No provision was made to reconsider their obligations. Officials explained the door would be closed to them until they pay up or make arrangements to square accounts. They must take the initiative. This procedure was accepted as a direct bid to France and the four other defaulters-Belgium, Poland, Hungary and Esthonia-to step to the cashier's window if they expect any favors from the Roosevelt administra-

The invitations made clear that debt discussions would be concurrent with and conditioned on consideration of general economic problems. In this way, it was said, Roosevelt will demand trade concessions for the United States in return for any debt reductions, and will attempt to clear away barriers to world recovery. It is hoped to stabilize currency and promote return of the gold standard.

Representative Rainey of Illinois, Democratic floor leader, predicted that 'no reduction or cancellation of war debts" would result from the conferences to be held after President-Elect Roosevelt takes office, March 4.

"The conferences won't amount to anything, in my opinion," Rainey said, "because the American people are not going to stand for a reduction in the debts. "The debt conferences should be linked with the world economic conference. The thing to do is to bring about a removal of international trade barriers so that trade can be revived. ### Abraham Lincoln Always Of, By and For the People

"So long as there is a man willing to work, but unable to find employment, the hours of labor are too long." The words quoted above are not those of a modern-day economist; they came from the mind and lips of one who long ago had his finger on the pulse of American affairs. Hecame from the people and rose to high estate and esteem by mere force of character and indomitable will. Hewas more self-educated than learned. He held no degree from a great university; he discovered no new planets; he flew no oceans; he amassed no collosal fortune. Yet he did, at a timewhen it required a degree of courage rare in history, stand firm for his convictions. Class meant little to him beyond a division set aside for self-centered ends. He was of by and for the people. He had visions, yet was not visionary. His judgment may not have been infallible, yet it was based on logic and foresight. His work was arduous, yet he never turned aside. Hard labor was his portion in early life, his choice later. Of lowly origin, he rose to heights never dreamed of. Outwardly uncouth, perhaps, but polished as the finest steel beneath. Rough at times, perhaps, yet tender as a woman to those in distress, he who spoke the words quoted saw far into the future and the thought came from the heart.

He was the workers' friend. He is so still. As long as the world exists, down through the ages will reverberate Abraham Lincoln's forceful words of consolation and encouragement to all who earn a livelihood by the sweat of the brow. The world may never see his like again, but his memory will never perish.

Lincoln's Many Failures

Lincoln ran for the state legislature and was defeated. He became partner in a dry goods store that failed and left him to pay the bills. His personal property was offered for sale to satisfy a judgment and was bid in by a friend. The girl he loved and to whom he was engaged, Ann Rutledge, died. He was elected to congress and at the expiration of his term became a candidate for commissioner of the general land office and failed to get the appointment. He was offered the governorship of Oregon territory, and his wife refused to let him accept it. He was a candidate for the senate and lost, for the Republican nomination for vice president and lost, again for the senate and lost. His soul tempered by adversity, he became President and a world figure.

GOOD BREAKFAST MOST IMPORTANT

Orange or Tomato Juice Makes Fine Starter.

By EDITH M. BARBER

What do you have for breakfast? That question can usually be answered in one sentence because most of us are creatures of habit as far as this first meal is concerned. Most of us start the meal with fruit. We continue with bread, toast or rolls, perhaps both, and, of course, coffee.

Bacon or eggs, or both, are the most common addition, although they may reasonably be varied with sausage, or some other breakfast meat, such as scrapple or creatued chipped beef.

Orange juice has become in the last few years one of the most used forms of fruit served at breakfast. Some people alternate this with tomato juice and also grapeiruit juice and grape juice, as a starter for the day.

It seems as if there should be no directions necessary for the preparation of orange juice, but there should 1 at least a warning that fuice must be prepared almost the moment of using. Do not try to save time in the morning by getting it ready the night before, as orange juice begins to change in flavor almost as soon as it is removed from the fruit. There are a number of good "extractors" on the market; some of them hand, and one juice preparation comparatively easy. cold. I think it is best prepared at serving time.

Sliced bananas are also popular breakfast fruit, whether served on top of cereal, or with orange juice. Many people use two fruits for breakfast considering fruit juice as appetizer and serving sliced bananas or dates on cereal, or serving baked apples, or pears, or stewed fruit as well.

In some households, especially where there are children, we find hot cereat on their tables every morning. These are likely to be varied from oatmen! to a wheat cereal. Perhaps a ready to-eat cereal will also be offered. One of the great advantages of this type of cereal is the fact that it is always ready, and that several brands can be served at one meal without additional labor to suit the tastes of the mem bers of the household. Men especially are likely to have a special favorite and to eat it day after day. I know one man who has had, not one, but two shredded wheat biscuits, for every breakfast since he went to college.

Men are rather more addicted to the very good habit of eating eggs for breakfast. Nutritionists tell us that It is important for the adult to have eggs several times a week, especially

How it Started By Jean Newton

Why It Is "Exaltation" T FIRST glance, there would not appear to be any relationship beween the words "altitude and "exiltation" but the lover and students of words quickly discovers that no con nection could be closer, that they are both in fact grounded in the same "Exaltation" we know, connotes effervescence of the soul or spirit. This. however, is really a metaphorical interpretation of what the word originally indicated. "Exaltation" is derived from Latin roots embracing the idea of lifting or raising. Directly, bodily and identically as it was in its original Latin. the English and Romance languages took it over, so that in itself it con tains the part of the word "altitude" which we know means "height." Gradually, it took on imaginative trimmings; so that it came to mean a lifting or raising of the spirits to the heights of joy or enthusiasm, to the pinnacle of religious fervor.

To make putty stick to window panes, use a small quantity of white lead; mix thoroughly with the putty.

You probably will not believe it until you have tried it, but the usual egg sauce served with fish can be made a new and interesting dish by adding some sliced blanched almonds and some white malaga grapes to it.

To clean oil painting cut a raw octato in half and rub over painting. This will make it like new.

WALTER NEW YORK TRUMBULL

Capt, Ashley McKinley has been telling me of the downward voyage made by the Eleanor Bolling, one of the ships of the Byrd expedition, from ew York to Little America. It seems that the entire crew, with the exception of Captain Brown, the first mate and the chief engineer, were strictly volunteers, all being members of the exploring party. One or two of them may have had active experience in a rowboat or even have sailed a catboat, but none had really done anything to impair his standing as an amateur. Dr. Laurence M. Gould was second mate, because of his position as second in command to Admiral Byrd and because he was able to use a sextant. When he was not seasick, he was a very valuable second mate. . . .

The ship got out of New York harland a couple of Scandinavian professionals were signed. From the time they took over, it was possible at all times to blow the whistle without stopping the ship. They weighed about 130 pounds each. Entering the New Zealand harbor, Captain McKinley had been promoted to the wheel. If the ship had been an airplane or a dirigible, he would have been an expert pilot. As it was, a small misunderstanding arose between him and the captain.

"Port," ordered the latter, meaning apparently that he wanted the wheel turned to port. But Ashley McKinley naturally thought he was referring to the ship. The captain was so surprised at the result of his command that the ship like a cat chasing its tail, made practically a complete circle to port before he recovered his power of speech. But by the time the Eleanor Bolling reached Little America everyone, including the captain, first mate and chief engineer, had obtained a lot of experience and all were

Motors Supplant Steam for Vessels

Washington .- "The Decline and Fall | of American Shipping" might well be the secondary title for a volume just issued by the bureau of navigation and steamboat inspection of the Department of Commerce which traces the shipping industry from 1787 to 1932. When Washington became President there were fewer than a half-million tons of merchant sailing vessels flying the American flag.

When Robert Fulton sent his Clermont flying up the Hudson by steam power in 1807 at an astounding speed which almost any boy today can du plicate on a velocipede, these half-million tons had increased to one and a quarter million. Then began in earnest the conflict between sail and steam, but sail held its own so that when the war with Mexico broke out in 1846-1847 sailing tonnage under the

The clipper ship reached its proud peak in the '50s, when sailing tonnage afloar ceached four and a half million tons, compared to three-quarters of a million steam tons.

The sailing ship began facing its de feat in earnest as the southern states y'elded at Appomattox, and from then on the supremacy of sail over steam was definitely over.
