SUPPLEMENTS OF COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

With this week's issue we are mailing supplements containing the proceedings of the sessions of the last Washington County Board of Supervisors. We suggest that each subscriber read over these supplements carefully, thereby becoming familiar with just what our county fathers have been doing in their behalf. The supplement is printed in pamphlet form. After reading the valuable document we also suggest that you file same for future references.

One important question the board failed to do last year was to appropriate an amount or provide for the expense for sending out these supplements, but the Statesman is satisfied that when the board next meets they will provide the necessary funds.

The county newspapers always responded willingly and cheerfully in publishing such news and notices from the different departments of the county without compensation, and therefore trust that the county board will bear this in mind when they take action. We are not going to dictate at this time as to how much we should be paid, but appeal to the board that in spite of the present existing conditions, an amount should be appropriated that will reimburse the publishers for their time and cost of mailing.

ROSENHEIMER REMODELING SALE DRAWS MANY PEOPLE

The biggest sale, as far number of people present and number of sales made are concerned, was held at Rosenheimers Store last Saturday. It was a very busy place from early morning until the doors were closed at night. Many extra clerks were employed to take care of the rush. At noon the crowd was so large that additional clerks had to be employed.

The store, although not completely remodeled, already has the appearance of a large city department store, with no equal for many miles around. The arrangement and placement of the merchandise is readily accessible and can be seen with price marks so plain, that each and every one knows exactly that he must pay for the article he or she chooses to purchase, without asking the clerk the question, "How much is this and how much is that?"

The arrangement of the various department is quite a contrast from what it has been for the past several years. When entering the store, we now find that the gents' furnishing department is to the right and the dry goods department is to the left. In the dry goods department one can readily see a beautiful stock of millinery and ladies ready to wear dresses and coats. The shoe department has been moved next to the office, which arrangement is very compact and neat. In the future no more climbing of ladders to bring forth merchandise for your approval will be necessary. All stock on the shelves is now easily reached and within sight of everyone. We next go to the grocery department where we find the entire north wall given over to shelving for groceries, which displays every item of groceries or other staples in that department which is carried in stock. Throughout the center of the store tables have been placed upon which merchandise is displayed that will be on sale.

Going to the office where of course bills must be paid, adjusted, and other business transacted, is found that the space allotted for this work, has been greatly reduced.

To make the day more cheerful, "Real Beer" and sandwiches were served to all, free and without restrictions. The beer served was that of the good brew made by the West Bend Brewing Company.

All told the day was a success, both to the purchaser, who found many useful and valuable bargains, and to Rosenheimers' because of the vast number of people who were present and expressed their congratulations.

SEARCH WARRANTS ILLEGAL SAYS JUDGE H. M. FELLEZ

Judge H. M. Fellenz of the Municipal court, Fond du Lac, on last week Thursday handed down a decision holding that search of premises occupied by George Perringer and Frank Nitz in Port Washington was illegal, consequently the case against these two men charged with the breaking into and entering the Simon Strachota general store at St. Kilian sometime during the night of February 21, 1933 was dropped.

At the hearing before Judge Fellenz two weeks ago seven shirts and a pair of overalls taken in the search were identified by Mr. Strachota as his property, and it was thought that this information would establish the guilt of the two men. Attorneys for the defense argued that the procedure in searching the homes was illegal.

The freedom of one of the accused, Frank Nitz, did not last very long, as officials of the state reformatory in Anamosa, Ia., were waiting to take him into custody on a charge of breaking parole. It was learned that Nitz was admitted to parole from the Iowa institution after serving two years and eight months of a ten year sentence, but disappeared. Perringer, the other accused man, soon after his release returned to his home in Port Washington.

In Oratory first honors went to Robert Johnson of Slinger. His subject was, "A Little Morality Is a Dangerous Thing." Second place to Gerald Gladoske, and third place to Isabelle Pie, both of the North Fond du Lac High School, the former's oration was "Medieval America" and the latter gave "The American College." Harold Casper and Edwin Rinzel represented Kewaskum in this event.

In the Declamatory contest, Mary Farrell, of North Fond du Lac, who last year not only won first place in the district contest, but also won first place in the state contest, again won first honors. She declaimed "Humors-que." Third place was awarded to Shirley Peschke of Slinger. Her subject was "Honeymoon Wam's." Besides Miss Schmidt, who won second place, Kewaskum was represented in this contest by Doris Mae Rosenheimer.

First place in the Extemporaneous Reading was won by Beulah Luedtke of Lomira, and second place by Mary Farrell of North Fond du Lac. Miss Linda Rosenheimer was the only contestant from the local school in this event.

In Extemporaneous Speaking Gerald Gladoske of North Fond du Lac was given first place, while Wm. Martin, the only contestant in this event, from Kewaskum, was awarded second place.

SYNOPSIS

Motoring through Vermont, Philip Starr, young Boston architect, meets Blanche Manning, seventeen, with whom he is immediately enamored. It being a long distance to Burlington, Starr's destination, Blanche suggests, the village of Hamstead not boasting a hotel, that he become, for the night, a guest of her cousin, Henry Manning, Mary's uncle, who has a true Vermont hospitality, and he makes the acquaintance of her cousin Paul, recognized as her fiance. Starr informs her of his desire to win Blanche for his wife. She tells him of an old family superstition concerning the "Blanches" of the Manning family. Paul Manning is inclined to be dissatisfied. Mary reproaches her for her "conventional" attitude, but makes no progress in his love-making. Philip, from records of the Manning family, learns the sorrowful story of the "Countess Blanche," French wife of a Revolutionary hero, Mary's ancestor, and of the peculiar "curse" she has transmitted to her descendants and the women of Hamstead. The evening of Philip's marriage to Blanche, Paul, under the influence of liquor, bitterly affronts Mary, and tells her their engagement is ended. Mary, at first acutely conscious of her position as a "fitted" woman, is greatly comforted by her lifelong friend, Sylvia Gray, and the love of her two small brothers. Paul, really loving Mary, though with a selfish attachment, finds life a good deal of a blank with her out of the picture.

Driven at last to desperation by loneliness and boredom, he decided to go to Mary and ask to be reinstated in her favor. This seemed easy enough when he first thought of it, but the more he reflected, the more he saw that it might be rather difficult. He had treated Mary somewhat shabbily, he admitted. She was having a very good time without him—he was forced to admit that too—and there was really no special reason why she should ever crave his society. He started on his errand of reconciliation several times, only to turn back, feeling that his stomach was craving in uncomfortable fashion for some reason, and that it might be better to wait a few days longer. At last having spent a Saturday evening at home when every one else under thirty in town had gone off on a picnic, returning in the highest spirits at midnight—Mary was with the Grays and laughing and singing when they dropped her at the front door—he took his courage, what there was of it, in his hands, and sought her out. He found her, late that Sunday afternoon, in an Indian summer, sitting in the fragrant orchard reading a book, a rather solid looking book. She was, Paul thought, looking unusually fresh and contented and attractive.

"Hello," he said, advancing towards her firmly, though inwardly quaking. "Hello," said Mary quietly, without looking up.

Paul's heart gave a queer exhibition of acrobatic powers, as if it were turning somersaults all the way from his throat to his stomach, and then began to thump—to thump so vigorously that he feared it might be audible. He was pleased, and he was beyond all reasonable measure excited.

"Have a good time last night?" he inquired carelessly.

"Yes. Did you?"

Paul choked, and fumbled with his tie. He could not understand why Mary should ask such a tactless question, when she knew perfectly well—he decided to be magnanimous, and ignore it.

to be shown? His recent interview with her, the mere thought of which caused him to grow hot again, did not furnish material for much hope of exhibition. Mary, after all, held all the high cards. His only chance, so to speak, was to lead through weakness up to strength. His pride, if nothing else, told him that it would be better than leaving the game unfinished, even if he lost. His common sense told him that if he did not finish it, he would have smaller hope than ever of another game with Mary. And he wanted to play with her. . . .

Having reached this conclusion, which there was no possible doubt, he decided to act upon it at once. He fairly rushed to the orchard. Mary was still reading.

"Look here, Mary," he burst out. "I'm—I'm—sorry I—I acted as I did the night of Blanche's wedding. In fact, I'm—I'm just as ashamed of it as I can be. I'd give anything if you'd—overlook it."

"Overlook it!" flamed Mary.

"That was the wrong word," floundered Paul. "I meant, of course, I want to ask you to—forgive me. To—be friends with me, if you won't be anything else!"

"Of course, I knew you wouldn't be anything again after—after that! But I can't seem to say what I'm trying to. You know what I mean, though. Please, Mary—"

The girl closed her book, rose, and came toward him, looking at him with that clear and direct gaze that was so hard to meet. But, though he flinched, he looked at her squarely.

"Please," he said again. "I never would have done it if I hadn't been drunk."

She drew back a little. "You speak as if that were an excuse," she said evenly.

"Of course it's an excuse!"

"Of course it isn't. It was—disgraceful, to do what you did, but it was even more disgraceful to get into a condition that would allow you to do it."

Paul had honestly not considered the matter in this light before.

"Well, I guess it was," he said, flushing. "I'll try not to get—into such a condition again. I am sorry. Honestly, I am. Won't you shake hands with me and forgive me?"

"I wouldn't touch you with a ten-foot pole. I certainly won't forgive you. I believe you're sorry now, because you're having a horrid time. But if I forgive you and you began to have a good time again, you would forget all about being sorry and do the same thing right over again."

"I wouldn't—I swear I wouldn't."

"You're not going to have the chance. I must go in now and get supper."

"Well—won't you at least speak to me when you see me—and—so on—as long as I do believe?"

"Yes," said Mary over her shoulder. "I'll do that, if you just happen to see me. I won't if you try to like this, again."

And with this small concession, Paul was obliged to be satisfied. Or rather, he strove to be satisfied and was not. Mary was amazingly pretty, prettier than Blanche, far and away prettier than Rosalie King or any of the girls who worked in the mill at White Water. Why hadn't he noticed that before? And she had "pep"—oceans of it! How could he possibly have thought that she was tame? He had not only acted like a fool, but like a blackguard. He deserved his fate. That was the last conclusion that Paul reached and the effect that it had upon him was more sobering than anything that had happened to him in all his life. He bowed under it, hurt and cowed and a little frightened. Then he pulled himself together, still wincing, and began to try to build together again a stone at a time, the foundation for that happiness which he had destroyed.

CHAPTER IX

Paul was wise enough to guess that his cause would be hurt rather than helped if, immediately after his encounter with Mary in the orchard, he "happened" to see her too often. But he nodded to her when he caught sight of her at a distance, and she nodded back. He did not venture on more than "Hello," or "Good morning" when they met. But after a week or so he remembered that there had been a hard frost the night before, and that the post office was being shingled. This daring attempt at conversation having left him unscathed and even unattacked, he risked stopping a moment, the next day, to warm his chilled fingers over the stove and get a drink of water at the sink. And summoning more and more courage with each new success, he finally appeared one evening after supper and asked Mary if she would lend him something to read. He felt that the desire to improve his mind might be one which would appeal to Mary and cause him to find some slight favor in her sight. Most of all, however, he welcomed any excuse which could be construed as sufficiently reasonable to give him a few words with her.

She held the door half-open without inviting him to enter as he made his request, and the corners of her mouth twitched. He had the uncomfortable feeling that she saw through him perfectly.

"Would you like the 'Autobiography of Charles Francis Adams?'" she asked.

He looked at her miserably. "You know I couldn't make head nor tail of it," he said, in the voice of a prisoner at the bar who pleads for justice.

though he knows he deserves no mercy. "I'm not clever like you."

"You're thorough, when you take the trouble to be. Thoroughness helps in reading."

"All right, give it to me."

Mary vanished, leaving him on the doorstep, closing the door behind her. When she reappeared, she had an formidable looking volume in her hand.

"This is Rex Beach's 'Heart of the Sunset,'" she said demurely. "It took me a little while to find it, but I think you may like it better. If you decide you want Charles Francis after all, come back and get it."

"Well, your cordial invitation is a bribe worth considering," retorted Paul. Then, rather frightened at his daring, he blushed scarlet. Nevertheless he looked straight at her, smiled, and lifted his cap. "Thank you very much for this," he said. "Good night."

Inevitably, a few evenings later, he brought the book back, having, to his intense surprise, thoroughly enjoyed it. Seth had gone to prayer meeting, and Mary was putting the children to bed upstairs and did not hear his knock. After hesitating a minute, he went into the living room, put the volume down on the table, and began to look at the others that were lying upon it. He chanced on a novel of Zane Grey's, glanced down the first two or three pages, and then, genuinely interested, sat down and began to read, entirely forgetting his awkward position as an unwelcome guest. When Mary entered, half an hour later, carrying a huge mending basket piled high with sewing, he started guiltily to his feet and stammered his excuses.

"That's all right," said Mary, tranquilly. "Why don't you read aloud to me while I sew?"

"Do you honestly mean that?"

"If you would honestly like to. You might poke up the fire a little before you start in."

It was not until the tall clock in the corner struck eleven that Mary spoke or stirred. Then she rose, gathering up her piles of neatly folded and mended clothes.

"You must go home," she said. "It's getting late. That's a good story, isn't it?"

"Fine! Could—we could have some more tomorrow night?"

"I've promised to go to White Water with the Taylors. There's going to be a concert."

"Well, the next night, then."

"That's Sunday. I generally go to church—Sunday evenings, now. Father listens for the boys."

"The service is over early."

"Yes, but Thomas walks home with me and comes in for a little while. You can come, too, of course, if you'd enjoy it, but we couldn't read."

This did not sound especially attractive to Paul. Nevertheless, with his new-born caution, and in his gratitude for the unexpected favor he had just received, he decided not to say so.

"Well, perhaps I will. And thanks awfully for letting me stay tonight. I've had a fine time. May I take the book home with me?"

"Certainly—would you like a glass of milk and a doughnut before you go? I made fresh ones today."

"Um—no! Would I?"

They went into the kitchen, sat down beside the table with the red cloth on it, and talked over the story as they ate. They did not agree as to the probable outcome. A friendly argument ensued. When Paul finally got up and pushed back his chair, they were both laughing, and Mary, with a sudden gesture, snatched the book from him.

"You shan't find out which of us is right before I do!" she exclaimed. "You had better come over Monday night and read aloud some more. I promise not to look into it myself before then. Good night."

"Good night," said Paul, briefly and happily. And held out his hand.

It was not until Mary had put her hand in his that she remembered her statement of a few weeks earlier about a ten-foot pole, though Paul had by no means forgotten it. And when, growing crimson, she tried to pull her hand away, she found she could not.

"Good night," he said again, pleasantly and firmly, and gripping hard.

For a moment Mary struggled to free herself. Then she met his eyes. The first lesson in Paul's new course of education had been to learn to look Mary in the face, and as she had said, Paul was thorough. The expression that the girl saw in her cousin's was so full of new-born humility and penitence, and yet so clearly determined to deserve, and claim, the right on which he was insisting, that she could not well see it and remain untouched. She stopped struggling and returned his pressure.

"Good night, Paul," she said softly. "I've had a good time, too," and smiled.

Castles of Normandy
 Less than half a century after the battle of Hastings, Normandy was the center of a vast Anglo-Norman kingdom, which stretched from Scotland to the Pyrenees. Those were the days when men felt more secure inside castle walls than around conference peace tables, and great forts were built everywhere, to which the modern tourist makes trails today. William the Conqueror built and fortified the chateau at Caen, another was the fortress at Dieppe, while close by can be seen the crumbling remains of the romantic castle of Arques. Other castles are to be found, as those of Gisors, Gaillard, built by Richard the Lion-Hearted, till finally the massive Abbey Fort of Mount Saint Michael on the sea coast completes the picture.

Obstacles in Path of Stamping Out Slavery

Of the four principal slave nations, Abyssinia is the only one to make even a start for better things. China, Arabia and Liberia have done little to end slavery, despite protests from the League of Nations and most of its signatory powers.

That fact is the principal reason why Abyssinia was chosen as the spot for the British Anti-Slavery Society's first great campaign against an institution which has persisted since the dawn of civilization.

Ras Tafari, the Abyssinian ruler, is undoubtedly trying to rid his nation of its 2,000,000 slaves, but there are many obstacles in his path.

Abyssinia is half-way between feudalism and barbarism. Many of the chiefs, while recognizing the authority of the king, maintain their own small armies and hold the power of life and death over all their subjects. Many of their soldiers are slaves, and to free them would greatly weaken their owners' power.

Some of the most powerful chiefs own as many as 10,000 slaves. To free them at one stroke would practically bankrupt the slave owners.

One strange angle is that the price of slaves is still constantly going up despite the depression and the fact that slavery will be abolished.

Another difficulty is the fact that slaves are still smuggled into Abyssinia by traders who buy them in the British-controlled territory east of Ras Tafari's kingdom.

Protests made to the British government, it is hoped, will result in the stamping out of this practice in the near future.

Lights of New York

By WALTER TRUMBULL

An actor starting in a movie drama, seated a banquet near the studio back of it, another house stood, facing the next street. The actor and his wife occupied a bedroom in the rear of their home and as he frequently worked at night she became nervous and had iron bars put over the windows. When he came home he frequently before retiring, demonstrated the staff he had done that day. The neighbors told their real estate agent that they were going to break their lease.

"Nobody," they said, "can be expected to live in this place. There is a crazy man next door who rants and raves and who is so violent that they have him locked in a room with bars at the windows. Sometime he might get loose."

No man knows more stories of the stage or tells them better than Ernest Lawford. He says that Sir Henry Irving once was presiding at a big public dinner when a card was handed him bearing the information that Nat Goodwin was among those present. Sir Henry said:

"I have just learned we have with us tonight a great American actor, a man famous in two countries, a celebrated wit whose name is a household word. I call upon him to rise, and present to you Mister—Mister—Mister Nat Goodwin."

Several years ago a very rich man, who had in his day made and lost several fortunes, decided that whatever happened he never would be broke again. He therefore created a trust fund of considerable amount. The income was to go to certain specified charities, unless he needed it himself, when, by the terms of the trust, he was to have first call. I don't know under present conditions, just who is getting that income now.

The wife of Jesse L. Lasky, of moving picture fame, is Lottie Lasky, the painter. She really makes a vocation of her work with the brush and canvas and her paintings have been exhibited in galleries in New York, Paris and London. Some of them have been purchased by the Newark museum. Her first paintings were of the Mojave desert. Mrs. Lasky is a slim brunette, who looks far too young to be the mother of her son, Jesse Lasky, Jr.

Elsie Scheffler Payne once ran her own dress shop but her present interest is in life masks. Her first attempt was a mask of her own face, which she colored with rouge, paint and lipstick. Now she does life masks of others and among her subjects have been Franklin P. Adams, Rosamond Pinchoff, Glenn Anders, Francis Leleher, Walter Lippmann, Fricela Innescourt, Dorothy Stiekney and Mrs. Adrian Iselin. She made a mask of Groucho Marx and added the glasses, cigar and mustache. It is so lifelike that if Groucho ever wants a double he can hang the mask on anyone of his height and build and send him up to bat for him.

If you ever wish to locate Reinald Werrenrath and can't trace him by listening for his barytones, look for him in an antique shop. One of his hobbies is bargaining for broken-down looking antiques and then fixing them up and polishing them until they look hale and hearty again. Mr. Werrenrath is good at backgammon, no beginner at poker, and plays solitaire by the hour in a perfectly honest manner. He likes mystery stories and has been known to read them at the dinner table, becoming so engrossed that it is almost possible to feed him spinach, which he abominates. On days when "Music in the Air" has no matinee, he takes a complete rest by going to the theater. His favorite movie actress is Greta Garbo, and he also likes steamed clams.

"How's your son getting on with his art career?"
"In his particular line he has no peer. Drawing checks. He draws 'em beautifully."

My Neighbor Says:

CRUMBLED dried bacon is delicious when added to egg omelet. Left-over bacon can be used this way.

Never starch bed linen. After taking off the line dampen and fold and let set overnight before ironing.

Potatoes will not turn black if you peel them and let them stand in cold water, to which has been added two good sized spoonfuls of sugar, for an hour or more. Then rinse off in cold water and put on to cook in fresh boiling water. Salt water about ten minutes before they are done.

To take rust from nickel, wet a cloth in vinegar and dip in salt. This will take off rust if it is not too bad.

U. S. War Vet to Live in Chateau Willed to Him

St. Louis, Mo.—Charles M. Zeigler of St. Louis has taken his family to France to make their home in a French chateau which he inherited as the result of his war-time friendship with the owner.

Zeigler was quartered in the chateau, owned by Adolphe Bonnet, during the World war. The estate consists of a house and 50 acres of fertile soil located near Arhage, south of Paris.

Zeigler, an insurance man, said he planned to stay in the chateau "for the duration of the depression, at least." He hopes not only to avoid the depression, but to build up a business abroad.

AN APPETIZING VEGETABLE MENU

It's Becoming a Favorite in Many Households.

By EDITH M. BARBER

The vegetable dinner or vegetable plate has taken its place as a staple item in the restaurant menu. It is also a favorite meal in some households where it may be served for luncheon or for the evening meal. If the family is not one of those who demand meat as a necessary part of the main meal of the day.

Sometimes, even for a family of this kind, a vegetable dinner will be allowed to pass if broiled bacon is served with it. It of course gives a savory touch to any meal.

In choosing vegetables for a full meal there should be contrast in flavor, color and texture. Only one representative, for instance, of the cabbage family should be given a show. You should choose among broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage and brussels sprouts. If you need to brighten the color of the combination, red cabbage may be selected. Tomatoes and beets should not compete with it or reach each other in color.

A difference in texture may be made by method of cooking as well as by natural differences. A boiled vegetable covered with a grating of cheese and set under the broiler for a moment seems to change its texture. A glazed vegetable which has been cooked for a moment after boiling in butter and sugar, seems to change in texture as well as in flavor. The same is true of a sauted vegetable.

Usually it is a good idea to select one vegetable for the star part, to treat it in a special manner, and to choose the others in reference to it. A stuffed potato, or a stuffed or baked whole tomato, or a stuffed pepper, a stuffed mushroom or two, or a mold of spinach makes, not more, served with any of these may have a sauce.

Some good combinations are:

- Stuffed baked potato with cheese.
- Sliced broiled tomatoes.
- Buttered string beans.
- Mashed squash.
- Cauliflower Hollandaise.
- Baked whole tomato.
- Carrots with brown butter.
- Buttered peas.
- Creamed turnips, Braised celery.
- Stuffed pepper.
- Buttered beets.
- Creamed mushrooms.
- Asparagus with crumbles.
- Lima beans.
- Stuffed mushrooms on toast.
- Brussel sprouts with butter.
- String beans.
- Creamed cabbage.
- Baked tomato halves.
- Broccoli with Hollandaise.
- Potato balls with parsley butter.
- Buttered peas.
- Spinach. Glazed onions.
- Grilled sweet potato with bacon.
- Fried apple rings.
- Buttered string beans.
- Creamed cauliflower.
- Buttered onions with crumbs.
- Poached eggs on toast with Hollandaise.
- Spinach puree. Buttered peas.
- Broccoli with cheese.
- Buttered lima beans.
- Egg plant with tomatoes.
- Browned potato slices.
- Buttered string beans.
- Spinach mold. Buttered cabbage.

It probably is not necessary to mention that the success of a vegetable dinner depends first and last on the way the vegetables are cooked as well as dressed. Much is written on the subject of the best way to cook vegetables, but I am convinced that the best way for all vegetables is to cook them in heavy utensils with closely fitting cover and to use just enough

AMERICAN ANIMALS

MOOSE

When ducks fly South on whistling wing
To stay away until the Spring,
The bull moose thinks the weather's nice,
He's not afraid of snow and ice!

His winter coat is thick and warm,
And covers all his clumsy form.
Beneath his chin a beard he wears,
His antlers look like rocking chairs.

In summertime, when days are hot,
The bull moose likes to find a spot
Where he can graze on tender shoots,
Or dive down deep for lily roots.

A moose is like a deer, and so
You'll not be much surprised to know
His horns drop off when Spring is near,
But grow out new again each year.

In the Spring—

water to cover the bottom of the pan. I add just a dash of salt and another of sugar when I begin to cook them, and use a low heat. If the least bit of steam shows itself between the cover and the kettle, I lower the heat. In this way flavor and color are preserved. Do not use even the least bit of soda with vegetables in the interest of the preservation of color. It takes away the delicacy of the flavor and is not too good for the vitamins. I confess I think the first point is the more important.

If you do not have heavy utensils with close-fitting covers, you must use more water. And do not overcook vegetables! Cabbage will cook in eight to ten minutes, peas, depending on their tenderness, in six to ten minutes, and string beans in fifteen to thirty minutes. For a quick meal, several which cook quickly may be combined with a canned vegetable or two and a salad.

Guardians of Peace in Colorful War Game

Ever since the entire United States navy was brought to the Pacific coast to remain during unsettled conditions in the Far East, the various divisions have been engaged in brilliant tactical maneuvers off the coast of southern California in preparation for further developments in the Japanese invasion of China. Photograph shows the U. S. S. destroyer Crowninshield plowing through heavy seas off the coast of southern California, leading a parade of destroyers and battleships in maneuvers.

predicted that an increase of 1 cent in the first-class postal rate, if applied to letters for delivery outside the post office of origin, would raise substantially $100,000,000, and that $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 more could be raised by increasing the rate on letters for delivery at the post office where they originate.

The Post Office Department has sought to back up its position by a comparison of revenues at twenty principal offices from letters and first-class packages in the week of September 19-25, the latest for which the detailed figures are available, and the comparable revenues for the week of June 20-26, the last week during which the 2-cent stamp was used. The figures show that the revenue from this source from the twenty cities under the 3-cent rate was 32.55 per cent greater, despite a shrinkage of 11.33 per cent in the postage ounces of letter mail as between the periods compared.

That there was a considerable shift to third-class mail was shown by the fact that for the twenty principal cities in the week June 20-26 the revenue was $428,978 as compared with $580,912 in the week of September 19-25, an increase of $151,934 or 35.42 per cent.

The Post Office department has computed on the basis of all postal revenues from fifty selected cities for the first six months of the current fiscal year that the increases in first and second-class postal rates have resulted in additional revenue of $24,700,000.

THRILL IS DEMAND OF MODERN YOUTH

Find Little Enjoyment in the Simple Playthings.

Modern children, at least, among the families of middle class and moderately well-to-do Americans, are satiated with toys at a very early age. Nothing thrills them any more; they have something just as good as the newest toy, although they may want the new toy just the same for the sake of appearances among their neighborhood chums. It is with some misgivings, then, that we read of the annual toy exhibition in New York city. Three entire floors in a mid-town hotel just filled with toy samples. The buyers and the visitors look them over for new hints out what is likely to amuse Junior for at least ten minutes at a time before he concludes that what he really needs and must have is a honest-to-goodness trimmored airplane that will take him aloft.

Back in the old days of the American home the youngsters of ten or twelve made waterwheels in the brook, ran a crazy maze of belts to turning-cotton spools mounted on bits of wire, and had a swell time doing it. Today they turn up their noses at the shiniest new "reloc" edes and demand quite emphatically, "What you bought that thing for?" when they wanted a nidget roadster. Of course, we have no brooks, to speak of, left—and besides they might catch cold or miss taking their spoonful of vitamin D, or something, if they got out of sight of the house. The suspicion grows, however, that a boy allowed to really make his kite, rather than take it, ready made, out of a package; forced to construct his own skis out of barrel staves instead of having them delivered to the door wrapped in cellophane, would get more real enjoyment out of his toys. We may be old-fashioned, but we believe it.—New London Day.

High Postal Rates Cut Flow of Mail

Washington—Advocates of an immediate return to the time-honored 2-cent postage stamp for letter mail are pressing to press their fight in Congress, but whether they will be successful is held to be highly debatable by opponents of such a move. The 3-cent postage stamp for letter mail made its appearance last July and while it is admitted that it has been a considerable success, it has not been a complete success.

first-class mail since then, Post Office department officials have been preparing to back up with statistics their assertion that many millions dollars more of revenue are being received now than would have been collected and added to the revenue under the old rate.

When Congress was considering last summer the rate, which it later voted, former Postmaster General Brown

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings that Affect the Dinner Pail, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare

The drive against depression continues. At this writing legislation affecting the railroads and the issuance of securities is being pushed principally. Rigid restrictions will be placed over security issues. Railroad legislation will be designed to give the rails better opportunity to compete with trucks, waterways and other carriers, and to effect economy in operation. It is believed that a "federal coordinator of railroads" will be appointed by the President, with authority to direct the elimination of wasteful practices and aimless competition among carriers. This plan has the backing of the security owners and the institutional investors' group and of New York savings banks. There has been no official announcement as to whom the rail coordinator will be, but the name of Carl Gray, president of the Union Pacific System, is being put forward and has received wide backing. The President recently announced that there was, as yet, nothing definite about his rail program. A possible exception to this is his broad project for resolving Federal regulation of transportation into a single agency composed of five divisions, each dealing exclusively with railroads, highway and waterway carriers, aviation, radio and telegraphic and telephonic communication.

The Farm Board will die officially on May 2th, unless there is some unexpected change in the attitude of Congress. Death-knell was the signing of the President's farm credit reorganization order. The Board started in June, 1929, with $500,000,000 of government money called a revolving fund. Its speculations in farm commodities attracted international notice. Two-thirds or more of the original fund has been lost.

The Board will be replaced by a different kind of government farm relief body. It is held doubtful, however, if the Administration's farm bill will apply extensively to 1933 crops, due to delay in its becoming law. The bill is frankly an experiment, and if it does not succeed it is promised the plan will be abandoned and another tried.

It was widely said during recent weeks that the best sign of the hour was upping public confidence. Now we find evidences of recovery beginning to appear in the business statistics.

The index of wholesale prices, which has been declining steadily for months, recently made its first sustained rise. Farm products have shown an improved trend. An upturn in car loadings has appeared. There is a substantial increased demand for such household appliances as washing machines, of which sales in February were the best in five months.

Indications toward the end of March were that commercial failures would be the lowest for that month since 1925 or 1926.

Everyone is agreed that recovery will be gradual—most are likewise agreed that there need be no fear of important recessions. New money is appearing, due largely to the war on hoarding, and it is providing jobs and stimulating production.

Business is writing itself down—by enormous figures, as even a cursory glance at current annual corporation reports demonstrates. Millions of dollars are clipped from the figures at which concerns have been valuing themselves. These reductions in assets, of course, require a corresponding decrease in stated liabilities. This is accomplished by cutting surplus or reserves.

As far as the stockholder is concerned this does not change the real value of his holdings in the least. It is simple a change in book value which, in many instances, had no connection with real value. It is heralded as a healthy sign for all concerned.

Tax reduction remains uppermost in the public mind. A definite start has been made with the cut in veterans' compensations, and the 15 per cent reduction of Federal salaries. Many of these cuts have already been commensated to the recipients more or less by the decline in the cost of living. Next Federal move is expected to be drastic reorganization of bureaus and departments to eliminate waste, unnecessary activities and duplication of effort.

The Treasury has been disappointed in the yield from the new miscellaneous taxes. Revenues to the government from sale of such articles as oils, matches, pistols and revolvers, etc., have been below the estimate. On the other hand there was a substantial recent gain in revenue from the automobile and the gift tax.

Tax losses from other sources were offset by a rise in income tax receipts. This is nothing to be proud of because the rise was due simply to higher individual tax rates, rather than to increased personal or corporate earnings.

Easy chairs went out of style almost two years ago. Getting them out of the business man does not have hours enough to get out after every piece of business to be had through hustling. With the Wisconsin Legislature

The assembly passed a bill to license rod and reel fishing in the state at a fee of $1 per fisherman, a measure which is expected to bring the state an additional $75,000 for conservation purposes. The vote was 59 to 31.

The bill provides that licenses shall be issued by the conservation commission or by county clerks to persons who have lived in the state a year. Youths under 18 years of age are exempted and hook and line fishing will be permitted without license as before.

It is proposed that the income from the fees shall be used for propagation of fish. The bill has not been before the senate.

The senate passed a bill by Senator Morr's regulating motor club service. The bill provides that no company shall sell or offer for sale any motor club service without first having deposited with the commissioner of insurance $25,000 in cash or securities approved by the commissioner or a $50,000 bond in the form prescribed by the commissioner and payable to the state.

The cash deposit or bond, the bill says, is required for the protection of the public only. This provision does not apply to any company which has been in continuous operation in Wisconsin for more than three years and has a fully paid annual membership of more than 500 members within the state.

An appropriation of $27,000 for equipment and operation of the state-owned radio station of WLBL at Stevens Point during the next biennium was approved by the state senate.

This sum was included in an amendment to the administration budget bill offered by Sen. Severson. It also included a clause prohibiting removal of the station from Stevens Point except by legislative act.

The Severson bill reducing the salaries of supreme and circuit court judges after next July 1 was passed by the senate, 19 to 11. The house killed without debate the Budlong bill prohibiting members of either house from holding other state, county or municipal office the salary of which is in excess of $300 a year.

A proposed state budget of $41,614,421 for the biennium is before the assembly for consideration after its adoption by a 19 to 10 vote of the senate.

The senate in a night session made net reductions of $281,000 below the $72,972 which the joint finance committee recommended trimmed from the $42,688,303 budget bill introduced by Gov. Schmedeman.

The budget as the senate left it was $15,373,501 lower than the $56,987,922 appropriated by the 1931 legislature for the present biennium and $1,073,972 less than Schmedeman recommended for the 1933-35 biennium. Estimated receipts, however, are still $5,616,815 below appropriations. The joint finance committee planned to make up an estimated $3,250,000 of this apparent deficit by new revenue measures.

One would extend and increase the chain store tax for an anticipated $1,250,000, taking in oil stations as well as other groups. Another would levy on cigarettes and cosmetics to yield $500,000 and a beer tax is expected to realize $1,500,000.

Taxation of the first beer in Wisconsin was assured when Gov. Schmedeman signed the bill for a levy of $1 a barrel.

Milwaukee—Wisconsin's disapproval of the eighteenth amendment has been emphasized by voters in the state in ratifying the proposed amendment to repeal constitutional prohibition of intoxicating liquor. Election returns from 2,395 of the state's 2,829 precincts gave 536,500 votes in favor of repeal and 111,971 votes against. The final official vote is expected to show repeal winning by about 5 to 1. The only county showing a close contest in the referendum was Richland, which favored repeal by the narrow margin of 2,233 to 3,079. Milwaukee county repeals outnumbered the "drys" by more than 10 to 1. Justice John D. Wickham has been returned to the state supreme court bench by a plurality likely to reach 100,000 votes. With about 500 of 2,839 precincts yet to report, Wickham's vote was 239,883, while Rubin was second with 147,812, and votes for the other four candidates totaled less than 100,000. BEGIN PROBE INTO AKRON DISASTER

Naval Court Has Charge of Investigation.

Washington.—A minute and searching inquiry into the destruction of the Akron was opened at Lakehurst by a naval court of inquiry headed by Rear Admiral W. W. Phelps.

The court was ordered by Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, after he and other high officials had heard a personal account of the tragedy from the only three survivors, Lieut.-Com. Herbert V. Wiley and Richard E. Deal and Moody E. Erwin, enlisted men.

Only Three Survivors. New York.—With 77 officers and men aboard, the U. S. S. Akron, newest and largest dirigible airship in the world, crashed off the Barnegat lightship on the New Jersey coast during a severe thunderstorm early on the morning of April 4.

Three survivors, including Lieut.-Com. Herbert Victor Wiley, executive officer of the Akron, and two seamen, were picked up by the German tanker Phobos.

Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the navy's bureau of aeronautics and an enthusiastic proponent of lighter-than-air craft was among those lost.

The Akron had left her base at the naval air station at Lakehurst, N. J., for a practice flight. Eight hours later fragmentary reports picked up from the German tanker indicated the great airship would be a total loss. The Akron was 785 feet long with a cubic capacity of 6,500,000 cubic feet and cost $5,375,000 to build.

An unusually severe thunderstorm, with violent displays of lightning and heavy rain squalls, was raging in the region in which the Akron was reported down, reports from other ships to the coast guard indicated.

Omaha, Neb.—The Nebraska farm mortgage moratorium was declared unconstitutional by the district court at Hebron, Neb. TWO STATES VOTE FOR "DRY" REPEAL

"Wet" Victories in Wisconsin and Michigan.

Milwaukee.—Complete returns from the Wisconsin referendum on the prohibition amendment showed 536,800 for repeal and 111,971 against.

All of the fifteen selected for delegates to the constitutional convention to be held in Madison, April 25, are committed to vote for the proposed amendment to end prohibition.

The dries claim not to be dismayed, for they had conceded that they entered the test without hope. Anti-prohibitionists declared they were particularly jubilant because they believed that a great show of strength in the opposition to constitutional prohibition will energize the wet cause in other states soon to act on the proposal referred to the several states by congress.

In the deluge Rockland village, in western La Crosse county, stood out in dry contrast. It voted to retain the Eighteenth amendment by a count of 44 to 38.

81 Michigan Counties Wet.

Detroit, Mich.—Belated returns received made more certain the earlier indication that 81 of Michigan's 83 counties want the Eighteenth amendment removed from the nation's basic law.

The additional figures also confirmed the fact that state will formally ratify the repealer amendment in the constitutional convention at Lansing by a vote of 99 to 1.

GO OVER $1,000,000,000 IN VETERANS' CUTS

Other Sweeping Reductions Scheduled.

Washington.—Official estimates compiled for President Roosevelt by General Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs show that ultimate savings of $1,203,000,000 will accrue under the reduced veterans allowance ordered by the president.

The sharpest contraction of the federal establishment ever undertaken is foreshadowed in orders to all departments and agencies to reduce next year's expenditures according to a schedule which would save more than $300,000,000 from the appropriations already made by congress on the basis of the last Hoover budget.

These economies would supplement the $470,000,000 to be saved in payments to veterans and the $100,000,000 federal pay cut, and bring President Roosevelt's total economies to $850,000,000, or within $150,000,000 of the $1,000,000,000 deficit otherwise estimated.

The head of every government department and agency has been told how much money the administration intends to spend in the fiscal year beginning July 1 and how much he or she is being allotted tentatively. While the schedule is subject to revision after the departments have reported the results of their deliberations, the president has left no doubt he expects the departments to find, in this way, an additional $300,000,000 to help balance the budget.

Since the budget for 1934 totaled $3,441,000,000, exclusive of the sinking fund, as sent to congress by President Hoover, the new move indicates that President Roosevelt will try to keep the normal, recurring operating expenses of the government within $2,600,000,000, and possibly less.

The earlier determination to avoid new taxation is giving way to a disposition to impose one new tax, possibly on sugar, coffee, tea and cocoa, to bridge the remaining gap of $150,000,000 or less in the "normal budget" and, further, to provide for retiring the increased borrowings in the same act which authorized them.

Tulle and Flower Bridal Ensembles

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MAKE way for the Easter bride—she comes! Pretty as a picture, too, for never has a springtime bride had more lovely array at her disposal than that which present-day style creators are placing at her command.

Now that the wedding preparations are on you can feel romance in the very air. You note it in the billowy masses of tulle which are floating in frothy whiteness across the horizon of busy workrooms.

One problem confronting the forthcoming bride is as to whether her nuptial veil shall be daintily modern or quaintly picturesque, or perhaps just discreetly conventional. The trend this spring leans in the direction of novelty. For a real thrill we refer Miss Bride-to-be, who has gone utterly modern in her ideas, to the picture herewith. The unusualness of this headress stamps it as a decided up-to-the-moment creation. These trim or visor forms of tulle are very new and chic.

The little wreath of orange blossoms about the crown—adorable! The tiny tuft which the bride carries which is also fashioned of orange blossoms, what more enchanting in the way of dowery adornment could a springtime bride long for? Wondering about the material for the gown? The answer is white dull crepe with peon d'ange lace for the bodice and the sleeves.

Of course, no self-esteeming bridesmaid is going to allow the bride to totally eclipse her. At least, the maid of honor smiling at the bride in the picture, has seen to it that she share in the glory. Her gown is of the lace in that lusterless quality which is so satisfying to the eye. The love-of-chaque is of pink tulle with pink satiny rose petals embroidered on it, her generously large veil being fashioned of the same—pink tulle in pink is she.

And have you heard about the coming ruffled tulle muffs many bridesmaids will be carrying this spring? They are in delectable pastel tints, either monotone or in rainbow tints. In fact, it's the opinion of some that tulle are newer than the stars of the fashion world. The happy thought in a connection is that the prospective bride may, if she choose, be utterly relieved of the trying ordeal of wearing out in detail with her dressmaker or whoever has her tresses in hand—the matter of these perfectly new tulle fantasies, for all leading party departments and shops carry the most captivating ensembles of all sort and in every conceivable color scheme. And so, whereas in olden days the hurried, hurried bride must needs spend weary days in conference with those who were planning a "picture wedding" for her, now all one has to do is to ask to be seen the latest in hats, veils and accessories. The beautiful ensembles which the dealer will bring forth will be revelation—the entire plan worked out to a nicety and inexpensively with at less cost than could be worked out at home.

SMART THREE-PIECE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This stunning three-piece traveling suit is in green and white. The three-tiered bag is new. The hat is related to the costume in that it is created of novelty straw which is woven in green and white check to correspond with the motif of the tweed. Two distinct fashion trends are here emphasized, that of the color-matched hat which may, as in this instance, be of a different medium or as is often the case the hat is of the same tweed or weave as the suit. The other style point accentuated is the fact of the jacket and skirt being supplemented with a cape which may be worn or not at one's own pleasure, which makes it extremely practical.

DRESS PRINTS USE ANCIENT PATTERNS

Dame Fashion constantly borrows from the past along with all the rest of the world. Now it's the success of the new spring fabrics which relate to the most modern of Egyptian patterns dear to the hearts of our feminine ancestors several generations ago. There's the Egyptian linen which looks like the real thing. Just one of the many spring fabrics which hark back to the days of old line and hoops for inspiration in design.

Particularly popular with these days are the new prints of which employ the small Egyptian patterns in our grandmothers' dresses. These vie for favor with the prints seen frequently in various colored plaids combined with white.

What Women Want to Know About Fashion

Chanel uses cotton for all occasions. Wasp waists for women are returning in Paris. Black and white is a choice unrivalled by colors. Silvery blue is one of the newest colors for evening wear. Designers continue to show a fondness for wide shoulder effects. Cuff bracelets—five inches deep—are a new trick in accessories.

The arrival of spring always brings with it some new vogue fashion. Even for the very young and old Chanel considers careful costume necessary. A revival of paillettes is scattered in evening gowns. Patterns on gowns, slightly greenish in tone, which blinding it with gray or purple.

Government's Fixed Charges Boost Cost

Standing Expenses Exceed 100 Million Yearly.

Washington.—The congressman voting through a big appropriation bill refers to them as "the permanent and indefinite." They don't appear in the regular tabulation of appropriations for the coming year as reported by the house and senate appropriations committee, says the Chicago Tribune.

They are going to cost the taxpayer this year the sum of $1,285,191,000 and in the next fiscal year of 1934 the bill will be $1,345,553 larger, or $1,285,538,581.

They are indeed the "permanents and indefinites" for they are the appropriations which go on year after year on the strength of some past legislation and without the necessity of any annual affirmative action such as is required to authorize payment of the regular current appropriations.

The biggest permanent and indefinite items by far in these years of a public debt of more than $20,000,000,000 are the $725,000,000 to be repaid in 1934 to pay interest on the debt and the $334,000,000 required to be written on the books as the annual contribution to the sinking fund established under the Liberty loan acts.

Other items, unlike most items in appropriation bills, cost the treasury nothing. Such a one is the $71,000,000 to be taken from premiums on converted veterans' insurance and which are set aside for payment of losses and benefits in 1934.

Then there are the incomes from various gifts and donations to government and social enterprises which must be distributed each year. There are revenues from public lands and national forests and Indian reservations. These may be distributed to states to compensate for taxes lost through being lost to nontaxable government property and enterprises.

In addition to these forms of permanent and indefinite appropriations, there are appropriations that go on and on just because their backers were once upon a time legislatively clever enough to get them put in this privilege.

Hunter Explains His Method of Taking Lions

Kingsburg, Calif.—Kingsburg today knew just how to capture mountain lions. Jay Duce, famous California hunter, told the citizens.

Here's how he captured more than 100 of the big cats during his career as an official exterminator:

First, you take a pack of dogs, get on the trail of a lion, and chase him for miles and miles. Finally, you close him up a tree.

Then, you take a long pole, fix a noose to the end of it, and try to slip over the lion's head. The lion, of course, resents that and jumps from branch to branch in his tree, and from tree to tree.

Then, you persevere. Finally, you succeed in slipping the noose around the lion's neck and tie the rope to the trunk of the tree. Then, you slip up your dogs (because they probably would attack the cat when he came down) and yank the lion from his perch and onto the ground.

After that, all you have to do is to slip a stick over the lion's body, tie the stick to a pole, get some help, and carry the lion away.

Quite simple, Bruce says.

First Woman Typist in Celebration

Mrs. Charles L. Fortier of Milwaukee, daughter of Christopher L. Sholes, inventor of the typewriter, and the first woman typist in the world, participated in the celebration marking the sixtieth anniversary of her father's invention.

Mrs. Fortier, although now near eighty, is still an expert typist and has never been without a machine since 1866.

It is believed that the tree marking the location of the fifth chest was cut down; thus, until a few weeks ago, nothing more was known of the missing treasure.

The vast sum comprising the fifth fortune has not been estimated, but it is said to represent many thousands of dollars, besides probably heavy premiums that will be paid on coins bearing old dates. There are 1,100 coins, all very thin yellow gold, presumably doubloons.

So great was the shock to the Sylvesters at finding the fortune on the creek bank near their home that the older man was confined to his bed for several days, with an attending physician. Three bodyguards were placed at the shanty in the desolate thicket to protect the family.

Hundreds of residents from Forrest, Greene and Perry counties have visited the farm, and mineral rods, picks, shovels and implements of every description have been in constant use along the placid stream.

"MISS HUNGARY" Miss Rose Tyukody, eighteen-year-old beauty from Passaic, N. J., who was selected from thousands of Hungarian girls living in the United States as the most beautiful of them all. She was crowned "Miss Hungary." The prize that went with the honor is a free trip to the World's fair in Chicago.

Ex-Army Aviator Pilots Chinese Airmail Plane Fresno, Calif.—An air mail plane which makes regular trips up the Yangtze river in China has at its controls a Fresno (Calif.) man, until recently a United States army flyer. He was Lieut. Hewitt F. Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mitchell of Fresno. He took a three-year mail contract in China after concluding his army training at Crissey field at San Francisco.

Huge Cracks in Earth Alarm Andean Villagers Arica, Chile.—The appearance of great crevasses, some five miles long, near the Andean mountain village of Socoroma, on the Chilean-Bolivian border, has terrified the inhabitants and completely mystified scientific investigators.

The huge cracks suddenly appeared in nearby mountainsides without the tremors and subterranean noises that usually accompany such phenomena. Daily the crevasses increased in length until now the longest one extends almost six miles and reaches to a great depth. Most of the cracks are 10 to 15 feet wide.

Officials of Arica department, in which Socoroma is located, have made preparations to evacuate the 700 inhabitants of the town at the first sign of danger.

Boys to Seek Gold on Haitian Estate

Butte, Mont.—The "pointers" learned by Hiram Marceyes, twenty-one, and Walter Bakke, twenty-one, on gold mining in a prospectors' short course at the Montana School of Mines in Butte this winter will be applied by the pair in far-off Haiti.

Marceyes and Bakke plan to placer-mine for gold on land owned in Haiti by Marceyes' aunt, Mrs. Rose Miller of Missoula. Hundreds of streams course through the 100,000-acre estate and gold hunters of the past found many indications of rich deposits.

The 1934 post office and treasury appropriation bill an attempt was made to bring the permanents and indefinites into line by a simple order that all such appropriations should hereafter be on an annual basis. But before the bill reached its final approval that order was stricken out.

There is, for example, the permanent appropriation—in the sum of $6,620,460 for 1934—to be paid out in state subsidies for vocational education. Part of it goes to pay teachers of agricultural subjects, part to teachers of industrial subjects and home economics, and part to that happy body of bureaucrats, the federal board for vocational education.

Another permanent appropriation is the $3,000,000 for meat inspection by the bureau of animal industry. Nobody knows why this service should be placed in the permanent category. All in all, there are promising pastures for an economy committee to graze in the field of the "permanents and indefinites."

At least they performed the service of getting these appropriations out in a group where they could be seen and considered and the ground work was laid for hearings at which department heads may be summoned. In Mr. Griffin's words, "to show cause, if any, why the permanent appropriations over which they have jurisdiction should not be repealed or converted to the status of regular annual appropriations so as to be annually subject to examination and review."

More than $60,000,000 of the permanent and indefinite sums annually expended might so be reviewed and the department heads who spend the money made to show cause why it should not be put on an annual basis. In the economy amendment added to

Big Fortune in Spanish Gold Revealed in River

Mississippi Gives Up Coins 800 Years Old.

McLain, Miss.—Rising from a historical background of pre-Civil War days, a fortune of Spanish gold minted 800 years ago has been discovered in southern Mississippi. The discovery has awakened new interest in the early history of the state, and has caused historians to delve deeper into some of the legends. It also has thrown an interesting light on early accomplishments of Gen. Andrew Jackson and others.

Only a short distance from the boarded up shack of Ab and West Sylvester, discoverers of the glistening Spanish coin, can be found the skeleton of a swinging bridge said to have been built by Jackson.

Choctaw Indians once inhabited this land, and according to an old folk tale, the chief's daughter fell in love with the property owner and they later married. When the government sent the Indians to a new reservation the Indian woman left her husband and went with her tribe. The land was left to the white man, who later married an American woman.

As a vast sum of foreign money had come into his possession, he was compelled to bury it in five different locations until after the Civil war. Later thieves stole a map of the money locations from him and dug up three of the caches. Forrest Lea, a farmer, still later unearthed a fourth chest, which contained Spanish gold coins, jewelry and a gold pocket knife.

It is believed that the tree marking the location of the fifth chest was cut down; thus, until a few weeks ago, nothing more was known of the missing treasure.

The vast sum comprising the fifth fortune has not been estimated, but it is said to represent many thousands of dollars, besides probably heavy premiums that will be paid on coins bearing old dates. There are 1,100 coins, all very thin yellow gold, presumably doubloons.

So great was the shock to the Sylvesters at finding the fortune on the creek bank near their home that the older man was confined to his bed for several days, with an attending physician. Three bodyguards were placed at the shanty in the desolate thicket to protect the family.

Hundreds of residents from Forrest, Greene and Perry counties have visited the farm, and mineral rods, picks, shovels and implements of every description have been in constant use along the placid stream.

"MISS HUNGARY" Miss Rose Tyukody, eighteen-year-old beauty from Passaic, N. J., who was selected from thousands of Hungarian girls living in the United States as the most beautiful of them all. She was crowned "Miss Hungary." The prize that went with the honor is a free trip to the World's fair in Chicago.

He was Lieut. Hewitt F. Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mitchell of Fresno. He took a three-year mail contract in China after concluding his army training at Crissey field at San Francisco.

Huge Cracks in Earth Alarm Andean Villagers Arica, Chile.—The appearance of great crevasses, some five miles long, near the Andean mountain village of Socoroma, on the Chilean-Bolivian border, has terrified the inhabitants and completely mystified scientific investigators.

The huge cracks suddenly appeared in nearby mountainsides without the tremors and subterranean noises that usually accompany such phenomena. Daily the crevasses increased in length until now the longest one extends almost six miles and reaches to a great depth. Most of the cracks are 10 to 15 feet wide.

Officials of Arica department, in which Socoroma is located, have made preparations to evacuate the 700 inhabitants of the town at the first sign of danger.

Dies at 162 Lisbon.—Dom Joao, II, king of the Messorongo tribe, died in Angola, Africa, at the reputed age of one hundred and sixty-two.

The Fable of 1875 and 1925

By GEORGE ADE

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

ONCE upon a time an esteemed Old Lady who had been a reigning Belle during Grant's Second Administration, sat back watching the Antics of a reformed and purified World, wondering what it was all about. She was like every other living person beyond Sixty. It seemed to her that all the non-Ordinary Traditions had been hit in the Head, that Civilization was being vamped by frivolous innovations and that the whole Works had gone blooey.

One of her important Discoveries was that Young People are not what they used to be. She didn't suppose that any one else had noticed it but she simply couldn't get over the Way in which the Jimmies and Janes were taking it for granted that they owned the Universe.

This honored Old-Over had a Grand-daughter and Namesake who was a mere Slip of a Thing 19 years old, who was endeavoring to establish a World's Record for Speed and Endurance. Very often Grandmother would ask, "Have't her Parents any Control over her?" The correct answer to the above question was: "NO!"

It happened that One Day the Old Lady couldn't stand it any longer. Little Genevieve, the Child Wonder, had been to an all-night Party. Along with 4 G. M. she had brought a Pack of Comanches into the House and had shown the Ice-box how to take a Joke. She came up for Air at Noon and was propped up in her theatrical Pajamas, having the whole House wait on her, while she found Fault with the eggs, the Toast, the Coffee, the Weather and all of her Relatives. For one thing the Service was no up to the Ritz and she didn't like to have the Curtains lifted so high and her Name was misspelled in the Paper and everything looked dark for the Princess.

Queen of the Flappers. The Old Lady sat in fixed amazement for a while, surveying the Eighth Wonder of the World, and then she said: "When I was a Girl and went to a Party, I always came down to Breakfast next morning and, what's more, I came down early and helped Mother."

The Queen of the Flappers gave her respected Grandmother the cold Once-Over and then said, "You were a Simp."

"Possibly so, from the Standpoint of a modern Snipe who has become so superficial and self-centered and selfish that she regards her Parents as House-Servants. In my Day it was an imperative Rule that Young People should respect their Elders."

"Mebbe you had a better Bunch to work on," said little Genevieve. "When they were giving out Relatives I almost drew a Blank. I've tried to put up with Mom and Pop, but you'll have to admit that they're a couple of Giffles. Both of them can sleep standing up. They don't seem to be hep to what's Transpiring. I told them a Month ago I wanted a Roadster just like Bernice is driving. It is one Duck and the price is only $490. Do you think I can get those two Swozzies to buy one for me? The old Tight-Wads keep talking about the money. Don't they know that a Cutie can't hold the Boys any more unless she has her own Bus? And you know how these fat-haired Pappas are. They don't like to ride in a Lizzie. You can't blame them, can you? No, I want something that will cut across Lots and climb a Tree and if those two Kloodies think they can work off a Fliv on me, they've got another Guess coming."

All during this Rave the kind-faced Rolfe of by-gone Days stared at the dainty little Grand-Daughter and sighed deeply.

The Coy Debutante and the Bustle. "I am wondering," she said at last, "if there is left, anywhere in the World, such a thing as a Chaperon. I saw one last Season and she was, if you will pardon the Modernism, a Pip. She was a Grass Widow, aged 28, painted a Creamy White, with a shing' Nob and she wore about eight Queens of clothing. As a Guardian for Young Girls I would say that she was hand-picked. In 1875, when I had my Coming-Out Party, the Girls were brought by their Parents and no Young Gentleman ever asked for Permission to Call until he talked with the Mother and had flashed his Credentials."

"I get you," said Genevieve. "You are now going to pull a line of Chatter about the Good Old Days of 1875, but you will never get away with it. I have studied Ancient History and I am wise to that Golden Age of Chivalry, when every popular Bachelor had the map covered with Trailing Arbutus and the coy Debutante wore a Bustle which made it practically impossible for her to sit down. You are panning me because I don't want to play the Melodion and attend Lectures on the Holy Land. You think I am a Hussy because I don't want to sit in the Hammock all Day and read Tennyson. I will admit that I cannot get a Kick out of the One Finger Exercise or the Herring-Bone Stitch. Probably I am immodest because I do not wear a lot of steel Harness. In the year 1875, which you are boosting so strong, you and the others couldn't take a Full Breath but you were Nice Girls. And you were concealed within ruffled Balloons which trailed on the Ground behind you, kicking up the Dust and collecting 10,000,000 Germs every Day."

"I will admit that we tried to hide our Ankles," said the Old Lady. "At Least we tried to hide Something. It seems to me that People could find out in the Newspapers about you girls wearing Bloomers without you proving it to them. And just because you have shed your Corset, is that any Reason why you should be a Contortionist every time you dance? Is it absolutely necessary that you should attempt to crawl into the Gentleman's Vest Pocket? And is it because you are afraid of catching Cold that you make it impossible for any Draft to come between you? I am a petrified Fossil, propped up on the side-Lines, and tolerated because I own a little Real Estate and I am 22 Miles behind the Parade, but I am asking just the same."

"There is no use trying to explain it to a Has-Been," said little Genevieve, wearily. "I suppose we should all wear something with Lace at the bottom and sit by Ourselves, over in a Corner waiting for the Gentlemen to bring us some Chicken salad, but them Days are gone forever. You can probably remember when the principal Instrument in an Orchestra was the Flute and The Blue Danube was Hot Diggity-Dog Likewise the Lancers, which I would classify as the Zero of Indoor Sports."

"Everything which happened before this year is evidently Antiquated and N. G.," said Grandmother. "I will admit that the Orchestra which used to play for our Dances did not have any Steamboat Whistle or Derby Hat. But they made lovely Music. And when I say Music, I mean Music. I don't mean an imitation of a dying Pig or a busy Day at the Insane Asylum. Furthermore, any Gentleman who came to a Party all lit up like a Cathedral would have been given the Gate. Nowadays all of our Best Young People gather around him and give Three Hearty Cheers and then follow him to the Cloak Room. It's a terrible Situation."

Grandma Takes the Count. "It sure is," agreed Genevieve. "Most of the stuff is synthetic. By the way, Granny, now that you are all wound up, why don't you bawl me out for being a Bob? Go on and tell about the Good Old Days when every Gal had a Horse's Tail hanging down her Back, and when she did it up she put in a couple of Soft Pillows and then wore a Rhine-Stone Comb, just to make the Whole Thing more blab. Then, after she got an 18 inch Hat, with a Kitchen Garden around the Terrace and a Velvet Bow on Top, and clasped on her Cameo Brooch and pulled out her Puff Sleeves, if she wasn't a Gawk you're crazy. A Woman had so much Junk above her Shoulders in those Days, it gave her the Neck-Ache to carry it around. Give me, indeed, the Snappy Days of Yore! Give the Sweet Young Thing a Buggy Ride and a Ball of Pop-orn and she'd be contented for several Days. I figure that, to please the sup-annuated Fologies, all of us blue-eyed Bessies should go back to playing Charades and working Card-Board Mottoes. Also ride in Victorias, have a Tally Pull once in a while and take Lessons on the Harp. We must be rather Rough House, as I learn that we are being criticized severely by all those who are cheating the Old People's Home by running around on the outside. They have talked incessantly for a number of Years but they have not, so far as I can learn, headed off a single Petting Party. I must now leave you to play 18 holes, attend a couple of Teas, take in a shake-up Party at a Man's Apartment, dine at a Road-House and dance all night at the Cross-Eyed Goose. If the Police don't get me, I'll see you Tomorrow at this hour."

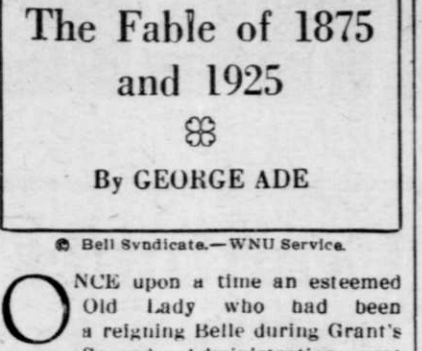

Saying which she departed, leaving Grandmother on the Ropes.

MORAL: Do not repress the joyous, criminal Instincts of Youth.

Old Habit Justified That old habit of a woman looking under the bed for a male intruder has produced results. When a woman returned to her rooms in Los Angeles and switched on her bedroom light she started to look under the bed. She saw a man's shoes and heard a muffled cough. Frightened but with presence of mind, she ran to another room and telephoned for police. Two policemen came and dragged the intruder from his hiding place.

World's Sweetest Plant In the hinterland of the Matto Grosso Dr. J. Gerald Kuhlmann, botanist of the Brazilian department of forestry, claims to have discovered the sweetest plant in all the world. This little bunch of sweetness is called "kabehe" by the Indians of the section, but its more scientific name is Stevia reboudianna. It had its origin in Paraguay, being first discovered there in 1890. One might say offhand that any plant of such sweetness must be a variety of sugar cane. Yet it doesn't even belong to that family. But it possesses great medicinal values.

On the Funny Side

BEAT HIM TO IT

The young man crawled into the august presence.

"Er—I would like to speak to you on a very important matter."

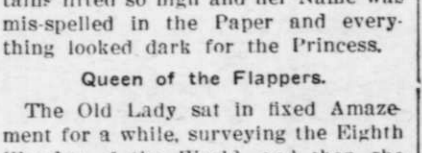

"Well, what is it?" growled the father of the girl, in no very encouraging tones.

"I want to marry your daughter."

"Want to marry my daughter? That's a good one. What on earth gave you that idea, you poor mutt?"

"Now, now," soothed the young man, who saw defeat and who wanted to get some satisfaction from the interview, "you are prejudiced against the girl; she's all right, really."—Montreal Herald.

Russians Educated to Read Soviet Journals

Russia today has three times as many newspapers as under the czar, and ten times as many newspaper readers. Pravda, the Moscow organ of the Communist party, tops all other dailies with a circulation of 2,300,000. Izvestia, the official daily of the Soviet government, comes second with 2,000,000 circulation. There are 2,230 central regional and district newspapers, daily and others, with a total circulation of 33,000,000. With a total population according to the latest census of 154,000,000 and an average of literacy of 567 per 1,000, the total number able to read is about 86,200,000.

Pravda and Izvestia send matrices of their pages to many other cities where they are used the same day in producing local editions. Izvestia is sent from Moscow to Leningrad by a system of facsimile wire transmission and reprinted from photographs.

The Peasant's Gazette, issued in Moscow every three days, has a circulation of 3,000,000, and in addition to the Moscow issue, prints fifteen regional editions.

About thirty papers in all are printed in Moscow, including organs of the various government commissions and trade union publications. Letters from workers and peasants are among their chief features, and the government estimates 2,000,000 volunteer correspondents are contributing, telling of conditions on the farms, in the factories, in all parts of the Soviet Union.

Sixty languages are used in publishing 600 newspapers which serve minor nationalities throughout European and Asiatic Russia. In Central Asia, which was practically without a press in pre-war days, forty-nine papers are published in the Uzbek, Tadjik, Kirghiz, Turkoman and other tribal languages.

EDITORIAL

Weekly News Letter

From Washington

By Michael K. Reilly, M. C.

The most important piece of legislation that became a law the past week was the District of Columbia Beer Regulation Bill. This Bill had already been passed by the House, and it was passed by the Senate this week and also signed by the President. In signing the Bill President Roosevelt announced that he thought it would be a model Beer Regulation Bill for the whole country.

It may be of interest to the reader to know that the District of Columbia was made dry territory by Congress in 1917, and since that date, it has not been possible to have a legal sale of intoxicating liquors of any kind in the District.

The District Beer Bill provides for three kinds of licenses: wholesale licenses for the brewery; an on sale license for the restaurants and soft drink parlors; and an off sale license where beer can be bought but not drunk on the premises.

Bars and the celebrated brass rail have been eliminated. All beer when consumed in a place having an on sale limit license must be consumed at tables.

The bar has always been held to be an incentive to treating, and the idea of abolishing the bar has been to lessen the opportunities or urgency for treating.

The fact of the matter is the treating habit has been responsible for much of the abuse of liquor of all kinds in the past. It is too bad that we cannot adopt in this country the German idea of a "Dutch Treat"; whenever a man would go into a drinking establishment order and pay for his own drink.

Under the District law, you cannot buy a bottle of beer in a place that has an on sale license, and take it home with you. If you want to take beer home, you must purchase it at a place that has an off sale license.

The District of Columbia license law also divorces the brewery industry from the ownership and control of the retail establishment handling their product. Licenses for on sale, or off sale, will not be granted to any building owned directly or indirectly by any brewer, or those who are interested in a brewery. The idea is to make the retailer absolutely independent of the brewer.

This District of Columbia Beer Bill gives broad powers to the Beverage Board, consisting of three members, as regards the number of places to be licensed, and the qualifications of the licensee.

Another provision of the law is that the lessee of the building who desires to receive an on sale or off sale permit to sell beer, cannot get that license without the consent of the owner of the building. This requirement is made undoubtedly because of the penalty provided for the sale of intoxicating liquor in those places, by the licensee, which carry as a penalty the padlocking of the building. It was thought that the owner of the building should have something to say in view of the penalty as to whether or not he would trust the tenant to conduct an orderly establishment in the sale of beer, were he permitted or granted such a license.

Washington only has one brewery at the present time, although in 1917 it had three breweries. This Washington brewery, and the writer believes that most of the breweries of the country also, was in not making midnight deliveries of beer.

On yesterday, Friday, at two o'clock there was no beer left in Washington. It was estimated that a million glasses of the amber fluid had been consumed in about a half day in Washington.

It would appear from the comments of connoisseurs of real beer that the breweries unloaded in their first sales, their stock on hand of near beer, but in the enthusiasm and desire to quench thirst to celebrate the coming back of beer, the palate ceased to be critical and the near beer passed just the same as real beer.

If the first day consumption of beer in Washington and throughout the country is any standard by which to judge of revenue returns, Uncle Sam will realize more than two hundred million dollars a year from the beer tax. This addition to the Treasury's revenue will be welcomed indeed, and besides the different States also will be the recipients of large sums from their tax on beer.

The morning papers announce that President Roosevelt is favorable to the idea of guaranteeing of bank deposits. The writer had a talk the present week with the Secretary of the Treasury and from that interview it would appear that the successor of Andrew Mellon in the Treasury Department was not opposed to a consideration of a proposal of guaranteeing of bank deposits.

This attitude on the part of the President and his Secretary of the Treasury represents a radical change of thought of the two dominating powers of our political and economic life on the question of furnishing the people of the country a banking system that will always be able to pay out. Heretofore these ideas were not received with favor, particularly in the Treasury Department. The banking business was held to be a business that concerned nobody but the bankers, but we have learned that the banking business concerns vitally the industrial and economic life of our country.

Senator Glass, one of the authorities on the banking situation in this country and a man, who has always vigorously opposed the guaranteeing of bank deposits, is now the author of a bill, just introduced, which provides for the guaranteeing of bank deposits not by the Government of the United States, but by the banks of the United States.

There is no question at all but that our banking situation has accelerated the present industrial depression. Neither is there any question at all that the tying up of something like eight billion dollars of the deposits of the people in closed banks is a serious handicap today to every effort to bring about a revival of industry.

These are strenuous times when the Government of the United States and our country are up against conditions and not theories. Nobody can prophesy at this writing what legislation will not be passed, by the present session of Congress.

There is a determination on the part of the President, his advisers, and both branches of Congress as represented by both parties to do something at this session to start up the industries of the country and to prepare to work.

I believe the President of the United States has an open mind. I believe his Secretary of the Treasury also has an open mind, and that both of them are willing to favor such legislation, although it may appear unwise and unprecedented, that in their judgment is required to meet the necessities of our present industrial plight. Isn't going to be a question as to whether or not such legislation has ever been written before, or even thought of before, but the question will be, will it help to start our country back and up on the highest of prosperity?

Visitors to Washington from the District during the past week were: E. Broughton, Sheboygan, Chas. Hill, Rosendale, and Mrs. Norma Sheboygan.

FARMERS APPEAL TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Monday nine township chairmen of the Farm Holiday association met at Fond du Lac and drew up telegrams which were signed and forwarded to President Roosevelt by the township chairmen, demanding the enactment of refinancing measures which would reduce their payments in mortgage to 3 per cent, including both interest and amortization. The telegrams were also sent to the President by the chairmen read as follows:

"The Holiday association of Fond du Lac demands agricultural mortgages not to exceed 3 per cent, including interest and amortization, farm marketing measures as suggested by John M. Simson."

The telegrams were signed by the men, who are chairmen of the Holiday association in their respective township, namely: Reuben Backlund, Fond du Lac; P. A. Krimer, Ashford; T. O'Brien, Eden; Will Doyle, Field; Otto Brill, Calumet; Paul Osceola, Dr. W. F. Cary, Emery; Jeffrey, Springvale; Frank A. Forest.

The Holiday association has a membership of a few thousand in Fond du Lac county. Many telegrams were also sent to the President during the past week.

Mr. Simpson, who is referred to in the telegram, is president of the National Farmers' Union. The association believes that they should be guaranteed a definite return in the present same as public utilities and other industries, whose income they are assured by state and federal laws.

The Holiday association has given Congress until May 1 to carry out the legislation they demand. If the demands are not met the strike will be carried on in a peaceful way, holding all of their produce from the markets.

The average cow, compared with the year's record in Wisconsin Dairy Improvement association, produced 1322 7,963 pounds of milk and 305.1 pounds of butterfat. The cow in Wisconsin produces enough milk to estimate 5500 pounds of milk containing 209 pounds of butterfat.

ORIGIN OF NEWS

The word "news" is commonly supposed to be derived from the adjective, new. It is said, however, that its origin is traceable to a custom in former times of placing in the newspapers of the day the initial letters of the cardinal points of the compass. These letters were to indicate that the paper contained intelligence from the four quarters of the globe.

There are prospects that the growing season of 1933 will see a widespread use of emergency hay and pasture crops such as soybeans, sudan grass, oats and peas to make up for the reduction in the regular hay and pasture crops.

NO CONTRACTS FOR TEACHERS

Teachers of the Cedarburg schools were informed last Wednesday that while they would be re-engaged for the 1933-34 school year, the board would sign no contracts with them, that salaries would not be fixed, and that the present salary scale was subject to a substantial reduction. Last year the teachers received a 5 per cent pay cut.

The above situation is the result of delinquent tax payments. Over 25 per cent of the city taxes have not been paid, although tax payers have been granted an extension without penalty to June 1st. There is enough cash available to pay the teachers for this year, but what cash will be on hand to carry on the balance of 1933 depends on further tax payments.

It is believed that at the time of the annual school meeting the tax delinquencies will be cleared up considerably, and that a more accurate budget can be drawn up than under present conditions.—Cedarburg News.
