-14-"It won't help you to lose your temper," the detective warned him smoothly, "nor to pretend you weren't persuaded of their guilty intrigue. 1 didn't intend acquainting you with this evidence until I was ready to arrest you; but as that was just a matter of hours, you can realize your position."

The lawyer's features grew slightly pale, but he replied scornfully. "That doesn't frighten me, Rankin. What you mistakenly consider an adequate motive gives you no case in court. You couldn't even get a warrant on such flimsy conjecture." "Perhaps not," Rankin admitted. "but I have more proof of your guilt than that. Don't forget you had the opportunity to commit the crime. Throughout the initiation, your hands were free to administer the poison; you stood close to the boy and marched around the chapter room just behind him. . . . And you will find this difficult to explain, Mr. Fletcher!"

Suddenly he place on the desk be fore the lawyer, the hypodermic needle discovered in the roadster, which the city chemist had returned that morn-

But Mr. Fletcher only looked at it in wonder; if he was acting, his selfcontrol was remarkable.

"Explain?" he queried, puzzled. 'Why, it's a hypodermic! What has it got to do with me? It isn't by any chance the needle that . . . that . . .

"Exactly, Mr. Fletcher. I expected you to recognize it," the detective interrupted grimly. "That is the weapon which injected the poison into Jordan's wrist. And I found it while searching your roadster last night: it was hidden in your dashboard pouch!' "In my car? What are you saying, Rankin? I never saw it before in my Abruptly, the lawyer's curiosity had changed to panic. His pallor deepened and he sounded strangely desperate to convince Rankin of his assertion.

Rankin's disbelief was apparent. "Then how did it get there?" he demanded. "In the very machine you drove the night of the initiation. You can't expect me to accept that when you probably hid it there the first chance you had after the boy was peisoned." "But it isn't mine," the lawyer insisted. "I don't know anything about it. Someone must have planted it. You don't suppose I'd have left such incriminating evidence since Tuesday where anyone taking the car might have discovered it? I would have got rid of it."

The very fervor of his denial lent it a sincere ring; and even as he answered the argument, Rankin perceived its validity.

"I'm afraid that won't do, Mr. Fletcher. Under the circumstances, Besides of concealment as any. you tampered with Jordan's shoes." Again Mr. Fletcher's only reaction to the charge was perplexity. "Tampered with his shoes?" he repeated. "I don't understand what you mean." "You visited his room in the dormitories on Tuesday morning to put thumb-tacks in the soles of all his shoes. Only the murderer would do that and for one purpose-to distinguish him at the initiation from the other pledgees, all of whom wore similar gowns. It was a precaution to

"I never touched them, Rankin!" the lawyer cried in alarmed bewilder-

"Just before you reached Croft hall," Rankin ignored the protest, inexorably, "the cleaning woman straightened out Jordan's rooms. She put all his clothing away. And she can vouch as a witness that after you arrived, three pairs of his shoes were scattered about, removed from where she had neatly set them."

"But I tell you they were already lying in the vestibule when I entered: I almost tripped over them. All I wanted was to have a little talk with the boy; I felt that plain speaking would save him future trouble." The detective shook his head. "Yet, not finding him in," he stated deliberately, "you gave the charwoman a cock-and-bull story about being his uncle, and got her to let you enter his quarters. It's hardly likely that some other person stole in unnoticed by her in ten minutes between the time she quit them and opened the door to let vou in."

In answer, Mr. Fletcher spoke so persuasively, extending his hands to stress his argument, that he compelled Rankin's attention.

"Try to judge my state of mind," he requested, "when I called on Jordan. had just proved he was the chap who fled from my wife's bedroom at two-Efteen that morning-who was responsible, I believed, for stealing her affections. Naturally, she enjoyed youth and excitement. She had always loved living at a pace with which I am, unfortunately, unable to keep up. But though I don't blame her, I wanted no repetition of the incident; the boy threatened to disrupt my marital happiness and break up my nome. Therefore, I didn't feel kindly disposed toward him. I was even resentful enough to wish him out of the way; but murder was farthest from my thought." Amazed that for all his shrewdness. the lawyer was so blind to his wife's shortcomings - unless he purposely glossed them over-Rankin merely asked: "And how else did you propose get rid of him?" "By bringing about his dismissal from the university. That would probably cause him to quit Philadelphia and go home; and again insure my peace of mind and the integrity l value in my house. I have enough connections at the college to pull the necessary strings, provided I could prove Jordan's undesirability as a student. But, of course, his expulsion had to be subtly managed for some other reason than my real grievance; that would have reflected my own weakness and necessitated a public scandal. That was why I seized the chance to enter his rooms to learn something about him. It occurred to me I might possibly discover some information among his private effects to use as a weapon against him. It wasn't very likely, I admit, but I was prepared to turn any evidence to my design,"

"Is that what you were doing," the detective inquired, "when Mrs. Hogan interrupted you beside the desk-

Mr. Fletcher answered convincingly, though with no attempt at self-justifi-

"I had just finished going through the room-his bookcase, clothing and the trunk. But I handled only his letters and papers; I assure you I neither touched his shoes nor moved them into the vestibule by the door."

One of the most puzzling circum stances of the entire case had been the absence of mail to the student; and Rankin's voice was suddenly sharp.

"Letters, you say. That's strange; I found none when I examined his belongings on Wednesday."

"No, because I took them with me," the lawyer explained. "Remember, had to act rapidly and couldn't read them there. I didn't dare risk the embarrassment of being caught. And on a hasty glance, I got the impression that they supplied the very proofs of his looseness and immorality that I wanted. So I pocketed them when the woman entered As it turned out 1 was mistaken; but from what I did read, I gathered they were written by Jordan's mistress-some woman with whom he had been living while at college."

This casually volunteered, but totally unexpected intelligence brought Rankin to the edge of his chair; startled and alert, he stared in sur-

"His mistress? You mean the boy and the writer were having an affair? What did the letters say to give you such an idea?"

"First my attention was caught by a reference to the fact that they had shared an apartment together for some months," Mr. Fletcher related. "He had evidently taken it for her, for she reminded him of their pleasures together and reiterated her affection for him. She seemed anxious to rejoin him after a separation; and the tone of her messages was placating as in to conciliate him, after some difference with him. Other letters, which also acknowledged money he sent her, indicated he was at school during their affair. She mentioned the weekends as the only time he could get away to spend with ner. That meant their intrigue was clandestine and the arrangement secret, while he ostensioly lived respectably at college."

The detective shook his head sober-"That doesn't sound at all like Jordan," ne commented. "My inquiries suggest he was decent, quiet and well-behaved."

"Quiet chaps are often the most deentive." the lawyer returned I was only too ready to credit the letters. At the moment, I was too rushed to discover from where they came and when they were written; and I couldn't tell how long ago their co-habitation occurred. It had apparently ceased for the time being. But if the boy had lived with this woman at any time this year, while at Philadelphia, I had weapon to cause his dismissal."

"Then how is it possible you were mistaken? The facts seem to speak for themselves."

Mr. Fletcher replied slowly, with emphasis. "Because they had another interpretation, which I failed to consider-the correct one." He paused. "Namely, that instead of his mistress. the writer was his wife. Their nuptials were a secret, but even so, the affair was entirely legal."

Where Rankin was astonished before, this revelation left him literally speechless. "His wife?" he exclaimed finally. Good G-d, are you positive of that? have had no inkling before of her existence from any source whatever. "But he's married, nevertheless, ater, in my office, I studied the letters at my leisure and learned the situation. They alluded several times to their wedding iast spring; and she tried to win him back by recalling the obligations he owed her as her husband. This apartment from which she wrote was in St. Louis; he visited her there regularly from the college ne attended last year-Aberdeen, in Hannibal, Mo. But since coming to Philadelphia in September, he has evidently not seen her. For whatever reason they concealed their marriage, it proved useless for my purpose." "And just who is Jordan's wife? Does she write anything to identify

"She signs herself Laura, Rankin," the lawyer replied. "Offhand, I don't remember her address, but you'll find it on the envelopes. My notion is that before meeting Jordan, she was on the stage. And you can probably cull other details of their association from various statements she makes."

The detective asked no further questions about the correspondence. He preferred to study the letters at first hand; speculation as to the new facts promised, the opening of fresh vistas. possible new implications with regard to the crime could await his reading. Instead, he rose to conclude the inter-

"Just one more detail about Monday night, Mr. Fletcher," he said. "What made you return home rather than remain in town? Had you reason to suspect your wife would not be alone?"

"No, it was really my state of mind. After what happened Saturday, I was too disturbed to want to spend the night away from her. Especially with the limousine at my disposal. And so, although my business meeting was not over until quite late, I decided not to go to a hotel." "Where are the letters you took

now. Mr. Fletcher?" Rankin inquired. "In my private safe at home. Naturally, after Jordan died so tragically. scarcely cared to advertise my intentions. And having no opportunity to return them, it seemed best to retain them and keep quiet about the whole business."

"Well, see to it that I receive them as quickly as you can obtain them," the detective instructed. "I must have them this evening; if you wish, I'll send someone for them."

Mr. Fletcher also rose, prepared to leave. "No, that won't be necessary," he returned. "I'll go for them and have my chauffeur bring them in im-

In allowing the lawyer his liberty, Rankin by no means eliminated him as a suspect. His explanation accounted for neither the student's marked shoes nor the needle in the roadster.

It was of course too early to decide how the existence of a wife affected the problem of the murder, if it made any difference at all. But, Rankin reflected, it might change the disposition of the inheritance due the boy at twenty-two. Manifestly his uncle was totally ignorant of the marriage. Had ne learned of it and disapproved, he could have exercised his power to deprive his nephew of the estate for improper conduct. But not knowing, and taking no action, the property still went to Jordan's heir on his death. The question now was whether that heir, in lieu of a will, was Mrs. Jordan or the guardian. That did not, however, free Mr. Merrick from suspicion; for still believing himself, though per haps mistakenly, the ultimate successor, his motive for the crime was as potent as before.

One mystery at least Mr. Fletcher's narrative cleared up. Mr. Merrick had been unable to explain the enigmatic bearer checks, each for four hundred dollars, which the boy paid out monthly to an unknown recipient. And since he first searched the student's quarters, they had puzzled Rankin; at the time, they suggested he was the victim of blackmail. Now, it became quite apparent they went to the boy's wife. Even while separated from her, he fulfilled his duty to support her in comfort. But to continue to conceal his marriage, he had destroyed all the canceled checks to her, as they were returned through the clearing house. But where was the woman now? Why did she not appear to inform the authorities of her relation to Jordan or to claim her rights? That, of all the entanglements in the case, suddenly became the most mystifying. Three full days had elapsed since the tragedy: ample time to broadcast the complete details in the papers of every large city in the nation. Yet nothing was heard of her. To locate her, Rankin's obvious course was to communicate with the address from which her letters came. If that proved unsuccessful, it might become necessary to set the vast police network and organization of the country in motion to trace her trail. As it turned out, however, the puzzle was quickly solved and without resort to elaborate activity. While waiting for Jordan's correspondence to arrive. Rankin left headquarters to take supper in a near-by restaurant. He returned after seven, pondering the whereabouts of the missing woman. when Jenks greeted him with the tidings that another visitor wanted to see him.

"It's a young woman, Tommy," he described her with enthusiasm, "and darned good-looking. She came about fifteen minutes ago and asked for whoever had charge of the Jordan case. I let her wait in the outside office."

Though the woman might have been Mrs. Fletcher or indeed, anyone at all, a thrill of anticipation ran through Rankin

"All right, Jenks," he said. "Send her to me in the captain's office." There was no denying the caller's striking beauty, as she entered in a tailored, gray woolen traveling suit.

A lawyer, Edward Fletcher, present at the initiation, engages Ranure in the investigation. A lawyer, Edward Fletcher, present at the initiation, engages Ranure in the investigation. Check stubs show Jordan had been paying $400 a month to some unknown person. A student, Larry Palmer, Mu Beta Sigma member, was drugged on the night of the initiation and the key of the fraternity house stolen from him. Ralph Buckley had been his comtiation of the evening. A St. Louis physician, Dr. Arnold Prince, is brought into the investigation. Conine is stolen from the university laboratory. A student, Ned Patterson, is suspected of purloining it. A letter to Jordan from Edward Fletcher's young wife reveals that Fletcher has of purloining it. A letter to Jordan from Edward Fletcher's young wife reveals that Fletcher has been suspicious of Jordan's attention to her. On the night before the initiation the pledgees were taken to an isolated spot, and abandoned, to get home as best they could. The stolen poison is found in Patterson's room. Rankin finds that on the night before Jordan's death, on his abandonment, he telephoned from a farmhouse to Mrs. Fletcher, who came for him in an auto. In Fletcher's roadster Rankin finds a hypodermic needle. Questioned concerning a watch he had pawned, Patterson admits thefts from the fraternity house. He also admits stealing the poison, claiming he took it with the idea of suicide. Walter Randall is forced to leave school on account of his health. He has a doctor's certificate. About twenty-two years old, she was statuesque without being tall. She had dark eyes, anxious at the moment under her long lashes, and delicate wellshaped nostrils; her red bow lips displayed sparkling teeth. Most lovely was her golden blond hair, visible beneath a chic hat. But her beauty was professional, a type to which Rankin was not partial. A blatant physical allure was enhanced by such heavy applications of cosmetics on lips, cheeks and lashes as to suggest want of refinement. Her eyes, too, reflected an innate insincerity and the coarseness of a self-centered, Leartless mind. She was, the detective felt, shrewd and clever rather than educated or intelligent.

For a bare instant, a strange sensation of familiarity assailed him. It was vague and fleeting, this inexplicable feeling that he had encountered his visitor before. But he could not place her. Still, the notion persisted, troubling him subconsciously, yet remaining tantalizingly beyond his ability to grasp it.

He motioned the woman to a chair and studied her shrewdly as he said: "You wanted to see me? My name is Rankin; I am in charge of the investigation into Stuart Jordan's unfortunate death. What can I do for you, Miss . . .?"

"Mrs. . . " she corrected him swiftly; she spoke agitatedly, as if moved, in nervous, somewhat harsh tones. "Mrs. Jordan. You may not know it, but Stuart was married, Mr. Rankin; and I am his wife!"

CHAPTER X

The Past Indiscretion

"Now, Mrs. Jordan, let me understand the facts," the detective requested courteously. "You say that for the past five days, you were at sea on your way east to New York? On what boat did you travel?"

"The steamship Florida," Mrs. Jordan replied. "I booked my passagesecond-class-in St. Louis, from New Orleans to New York. I started from St. Louis by the Southern express to New Orleans at eight-forty last Saturday night; and reached the docks Sunday morning, about two hours before the boat sailed."

"And you've been on the water since then? You only got in at noon to-

This was Rankin's most immediate concern-Mrs. Jordan's sudden, almost coincidental appearance at this particular juncture. Her movements demanded tracing, first to discover her whereabouts the Tuesday evening of the murder; and just as important, to explain her failure to come forward sooner. "Yes, at the North river docks at twelve o'clock," the woman replied to his query. "The boat was due at nine, but was several hours late; and I took a taxi directly to the Pennsylvania station. But I rested in the ladies' room and shopped about the avenues a bit before starting for Philadelphia." "You had no inkling until then of . . . your husband's tragic death on Tuesday?"

Mrs. Jordan compressed her lips and an expression of pain flashed across her lovely brow. She smiled sadly.

o'clock this afternoon, when I first bought a newspaper. You can imagine the shock-that first account of a student's death at Philadelphia"-she paused, shuddering-"and then to read it was murder, and the victim was . . . Stuart."

"Yes, it must have been dreadful," the detective agreed. "And then you came immediately to headquarters?" "By the very next train, at five o'clock," Mrs. Jordan replied. "I have only just arrived and checked my luggage at Broad street station, Mr. Ran-That luggage, she described at his request, consisted of two large suitcases, one of black patent leather, with heavy surrounding straps, and the other, slightly smaller, made of brown imitation hide, held together by clasps. She also had a brown and well-worn overnight valise.

"Before you came east, Mrs. Jordan," Rankin then pursued, "you lived in St. Louis, didn't you?"

"Since I married Stuart. We then took an apartment, not in his name, of course, where he might be with me, whenever he could get away from Aberdeen university. For the last few weeks, since the end of January, I've had the place shut up and moved to the Fenton hotel, because that was easier than to go on housekeeping."

"Why did you decide to come to Philadelphia just at this moment? Rankin probed shrewdly. "Had you any particular reason for joining Stuart?"

"I was going to rent quarters here to be near him again," the woman explained. "He missed me terribly and planned that we should live together again this spring, under an arrangement similar to that in St. Louis." "Did you know of the boy's impending initiation into the Mu Beta Sigma fraternity?" Mrs. Jordan responded reflectively Merely that he had accepted a bid and was pledged to it, but not the date he expected to become a member.

That was all he wrote me." "I see." Rankin sat back in his chair, nodding. "Now, with regard to your voyage," he proceeded blandly, "a few details would be useful to prove you were aboard the Florida these last few days. Merely as a formality."

"As a matter of fact, I didn't travel as Mrs. Stuart Jordan," his visitor replied unhesitatingly. "Before my marriage, I was an actress and played in various musical and dramatic companies. I used my stage name, Laura Du Monte. My actual name is Dumont and I generally adopt one or the other."

"Still, no doubt some of the passen gers and the ship's officers would remember you and could vouch for your movements. Whom did you meet?"

The actress shook her head and smiled. "Not many people, I'm afraid. The truth is I'm such a miserable sailor that I was confined to my cabin throughout the voyage. So I saw only the nurse, Miss Anna Sumner, Doctor Ireland, the ship's physician, and the cabin stewardess, Mrs. Amy Winters, who cleaned my cabin and brought my food. But they can certainly tell you all about the trip."

LAGUARDIA CHOSEN NEW YORK'S MAYOR

Fusion Nominee Beats Both McKee and O'Brien.

New York .- A civic revolution, reaping the whirlwind of James J. Walker's seven lush years in city hall, found the Tammany Hall political machine shartered and a reform group headed by Maj. Fiorello H. LaGuardia in complete domination of the next municipal administration.

LaGuardia, fiery, independent leader of a coalition of Republicans and anti-Tammany Democrats, overwhelmed both Tammany's candidate. Mayor John P. O'Brien, and a second major opponent, Joseph V. McKee, recovery party nominee and protege of Postmaster-General James A. Farley, by a plurality of more than 250,000.

The complete vote, considered a stiff s thack for Farley's prestige as chief political director of the administration. was:

LaGuardia, 858,551. McKee, 604,055. O'Brien, 586 100

With LaGuardia were swept into office the fusion party's candidates for comptroller, president of the board of aldermen and the borough presidents of Brooklyn, Queens and Richmond, to give the party thirteen out of the sixteen votes on the board of estimate and control which is the dominant agency of the New York municipal Tammany was not without one piece of political comfort. Out of the battle it had saved one of the most coveted posts in the administration It elected William C. Dodge district attorney, not only over fusion's aristocratic Jacob Gould Schurman, Jr. whose ancestral history goes far back into New York's own, but also over Fer dinand Pecora, recovery party candi date of recent national fame for his conduct of the United States senate's investigation of Wall Street.

Tammany also clung to the borough presidency of Manhattan, returning Samuel Levy to office by a narrow margin over fusion's candidate, Langdon W. Post LaGuardia's organization support came almost wholly from the Republican party. His chief backer was Samuel Seabury, who conducted the state legislative investigation that ied to the forced resignation of Mayor Walker, and to disclosures which aroused the people of this city to a white heat against Tammany evils and extravagance.

PROHIBITION ENDS ON DECEMBER 5

Four More States for Repeal Settle Its Fate.

New York .- Prohibition received its death blow from elections in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Utah, which with the 33 states which previously voted for repeal, gave the necessary 36 states for ratification of the Twentyfirst amendment to repeal the Eighteenth amendment to the Constitution. Then along came Kentucky, voting the same day, and voting for repeal, but not counting its vote until the day North and South Carolina, where the drys made an energetic campaign. stood by the prohibition amendment, being the only states so far to take that position. The repeal majority in Ohio and

Pennsylvania was large, and that in Utah, where the Mormon church was against repeal, was surprisingly big. Prohibition's funeral was definitely set for December 5 when returns came in from Kentucky, the thirty-seventh state to vote for repeal. With Kentucky's convention set for November 27, followed by those of Pennsylvania. Utah, and Ohio on December 5, that day will mark the formal obsequies. Had Kentucky voted dry, the knell of prohibition would have been delayed for one more day, until December 6. when the Maine convention meets. ## Critics of "Short Bible" Speak Up

Scholars' Version Has Not Pleased All Readers of Holy Writ.

The "short Bible," a new book translated, arranged and introduced through the University of Chicago Press by Professor Goodspeed and tionists and sportsmen of our land the late Prof. J. M. Powis-Smith, who recently sent forth the praised and condemned "American Translation of the Scriptures," has been given to the public.

The bright red volume, which begins with Amos and ends with Titus, may well be called a scholar's eye view of Holy Writ taken from the lofty vantage point of scholarly detachment. According to Professor Goodspeed, the book was prepared in order to keep the Bible from being left on the dusty shelves with reference books, encyclopedias and family albums.

All of the previous combination of favorable and unfavorable criticisms | of Smith's and Goodspeed's American translation of the Scriptures will enough so to indicate a belief in the varying values of different books by printing some and leaving out some. of begattings in Leviticus, the dronasking that the children's heads be sential as the Sermon on the Mount or the call of Isaiah.

To these latter critics Professor flatly denies the equality of the books those who wish to preserve the book that in the short Bible he has tried literary and historical importance. To those who demur against his scissorings, Doctor Goodspeed replies that his book has not supplanted the whole Bible, but that the short Bible stands as a challenge for each to make his own selection just as even the cover-to-cover believers underline in red ink the passages that have most meaning for them.

"The short Bible is not a substitute for the Bible," said Professor Goodspeed, as he voiced the reasons' for presenting the new book, "but the Bible is so large and so bewildering to the average man that I nave long felt that a bridge to its understanding has been necessary. Give a person a page or two of the grandeur of Job and he will see that it is immense and he will want more of it."

In reply to those who complain against the departure from the canonical order which begins with Genesis and ends with Revelation, Professor Goodspeed replied that the present canonical arrangement is of late origin. Luther rearranged the New Testament "as it taught Christ," by putting the books of Hebrews, James, Jude and Revelation virtually outside of the canonical books as a sort of appendage or "a sour quartette singing off key," he said. Tyndale's English Bible followed Luther's arrangement, Doctor Goodspeed

Books appearing in the short Bible, Doctor Goodspeed explained, follow their order of origin. When questioned as to how the dates of the writing of Biblical books can be determined, Doctor Goodspeed said that there has generally been greater difficulty in assigning dates to the late books of the Old Testament than to the earlier. Historical scholarship, he added, has made greater strides in overcoming such problems in the past generation than in many previous centuries.

Additions to ancient books by later writers can be easily detected by those who are familiar with the history of language in the developments and growth of ideas, Doctor Goodspeed explained. Anachronisms found by scholars in the Bible are as easily detected as if, in modern times, some one claiming to write as an eyewitcess of a Revolutionary war campaign would write of General Washington's official motor car. Biblical anachronisms, Doctor Goodspeed said, are no less glaring to historical scholars than that.

Therefore, present-day scholars assign the seventeenth place to Genesis in the order of the Old Testament books, and the writings of Paul as the earliest of the New Testament books.-Los Angeles Times.

NEW DEAL ASKED FOR REMNANT OF WILD WATERFOWL

"America's wild waterfowl should have a new deal," says Dr. T. Gilbert Pearson, president of the National Association of Audubon Soci-

"Unless the best foresight, thought and honest convictions of conservaare speedily and effectively translated into action, there may yet be witnessed in this generation a cessation of hunting of wild fowl as a sport," says Doctor Pearson. "Those best acquainted with the past and present status of wild ducks and geese cannot but be profoundly convinced that there has been a steady decline in the fortunes of these birds; so great, that present numbers are but a pitiful remnant of the vast congregations which in former days thronged our lakes, bays, sloughs and marshlands. All those who have at heart the interests of native game birds should not forget that this decrease in our wildfowl carries a solemn warning and has a tragic counterpart in that of our shore birds hold good for the short Bible and to which, at the beginning of the presthose criticisms many new ones will ent century, had been so greatly rebe called forth by the new work. For duced in numbers that upon passage instance, what right, it is asked, does of the Migratory Bird treaty act in a world-renowned scholar have to 1918, only six species belonging to change the canonical order of the this extensive group were permitted books of the Bible? Such tampering | to be hunted; while today open seawith Holy Writ, it is suggested, is sons exist on only two of those birds, equaled only by a temerity profane the Wilson's snipe and the woodcock.

In discussing the factors contributing to the decrease of wildfowl. To many Bible readers the long list | Doctor Pearson listed them as follows: "The extensive draining of ings of the Chronicles and the Psalm lakes, ponds and marshes, with the accompanying spread of agriculture; dashed against the stones are as estithe enormous increase of hunters, the amazing construction of highways, together with the almost universal use of motor cars, which has Goodspeed has nothing to say, for he made quickly and easily accessible almost every part of the country, the or even of their portions. But to use of the magazine shotgun, the custom of killing birds from baited from the attic's dust, he declares shooting stands as well as other minor causes that are a part of the to include everything of religious, destructive processes of civilization." -Detroit News.

Traced to Roman Writer The phrase "took to their heels' has an old-time flavor, and the very well read may have come across it in the "King Cambyses" of Thomas Preston, which dates 1561. However, for its origin we must go back a bit further, to classical antiquity! For its author was the Roman writer of comedies. Terence, who lived in the Second century B. C. It was in the second scene of the fifth act of his 'Euruchus," that we find, "I took to my heels as fast as I could !- Kansas City Times.

Why Children Need a Liquid Laxative

The temporary relief children get from some synthetic, habit-forming cathartic may cause bowel strain, and even set-up irritation in the kidneys. A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to give the child "a double dose" a day or two later. Can constipation be corrected in children? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say many mothers who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Give the dose you find suited to the system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until the bowels are moving regularly without aid.

An approved liquid laxative (one that is widely used for children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The mild laxative action of this excellent preparation is the best form of help for children—and grown-ups, too. The dose can be regulated for any

RE-AMORTIZATION DOES NOT BAR DOOR TO FURTHER LOANS

Getting one's farm loan reamortized dees not deprive a farmer borrower of the right to another land bank loan nor to a commissioner's loan, states Leo. T. Crowley, general agent of the Farm Credit administration in the 7th district, in answering some queries from puzzled farmers. Even secretarytreasurers of some national farm loan associations have been erroneously telling farmers that reamortization shuts the door to further benefits, it became known at the Land Bank of St. Paul a few days ago.

"Reamortization does not bar a com nissioner's loan to the farmer who has had his loan reamortized," says Mr. Campbellsport spent over the week- Crowley. "Reamortization simply means that the farmer has been allowed to put into the body of his loan the son, Richard, spent Saturday with Mr. delinquent payments which he was unable to make because of drouth, low Mr. and Mrs. Art. Hayward - Hayward, in a special election, voted, 326 to 124, to acquire the distribution system of the Lake Superior Power Co. in this community.

Chetek-A merger of the Wisconsin Society of Equity and the state unit of the Farmers' union was unanimously approved by delegates to the Equity society's annual convention here.

Madison - Brack Gillespie, Antigo, was appointed by Gov. Schmedeman to fill the unexpired term of the late Ed Buchen as sheriff of Langlade county. The expiration date is Jan. 7, 1935.

Oshkosh-Seven Oshkosh men who refused to work for groceries distributed by city relief authorities were sentenced to 21 days each in the county fail by Municipal Judge Silas Spengler.

Chilton-Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Mc-Hale celebrated their golden wedding anniversary here Nov. 6. Mr. McHale has been a resident of this city for 61 years. His wife was born in the nearby city of New Holstein.

Madison-Definite assurance that the Janesville Chevrolet plant will employ about 1,500 persons when it reopens late this month was given him in a conference with General Motors company representatives, Gov. Albert G. Schmedeman announced.

Fond du Lac-Henry Dolen, 89, Civil war veteran, resident of the county since boyhood, died at his home in North Fond du Lac. Dolen was sergeant in Company A, 2nd regiment Wisconsin cavalry, and served four years in the Union army.

Superior-Iron ore shipments from the Lake Superior district for the season to Nov. 1 showed an increase of 14.285,979 tons over those of the same period last year. A total of 17,020,183 tons was shipped this year, as compared with 2,734,204 tons in 1932.

Waukesha-The first conviction under the Caldwell bill regulating milk prices was obtained in municipal court here. Layne Jenkins, 21, Waukesha dealer, charged with selling milk for six cents, was fined $50 and costs. The price ordered by the department of agriculture and markets for the Waukesha district is nine cents.

Mayville - Wisconsin's last outdoor blast furnace has ended its career. A landmark of the state, having stood here since 1845, the blast furnace was dynamited and junked. The furnace was owned by the Mayville Iron company which moved from the state in 1928. The land on which the furnace stands is wanted for other uses.

Madison - Frank McCorison, Madison salesman, was held without bail nding trial tentatively set for Nov. 27 on a first degree murder charge in connection with the shooting of Gundar Felland, first casualty in the present farm strike. Three farmers identified McCorison as the man who fired the shot which killed Felland in the picket lines.

Madison-Warrants for six investment dealers and bankers were issued here based upon indictments returned by the Dane county grand jury investigating financial institutions and practices here. William H. Hobbins, president of the defunct Capitol City bank, who already is under a prison sentence appealed to the supreme court, was among those named in the indictments.

Appleton-Thrice Walter M. Singler, militant organizer and president of the Wisconsin Co-operative Milk Pool and its state-wide strikes, tried to address 1,500 farmers gathered in a school hall here and thrice his efforts was shouted down with a flood of boos, hisses and catcalls. The farmers convened here to organize the Outagamie Farmers' Protective league which unanimously went on record as opposed to the produce marketing strike.

Madison-The legal rate of interest which may be charged by small loan companies operating in Wisconsin was fixed by the state banking department at 11/4 per cent a month or 15 per cent a year. The present rate is 42 per cent. The new rate, effective on loans paid on and after Dec. 11, 1933, is experimental, however. It is subject to change at a later date pending an audit by the banking department of the operations of the small loans companies to determine what the effect of the reduction under the new rate

Madison-The University of Wisconsin department of hydraulic and sanitary engineering and the state board of health have announced plans for the second annual six-day school for sewage plant operators, beginning Jan. 8, 1934. The purpose is to give operators more familiarity with basic principles used in sewage treatment and to describe various methods for overcoming operating difficulties. Fourteen lecture and discussion sessions and four-hour daily laboratory periods are scheduled.

Madison-Gov. A. G. Schmedeman directed all law enforcement agencies of Wisconsin to keep highways cleared of farm strike pickets, prevent destruction of property, and suppress violence 'at all costs." The governor's drastic action followed a meeting held in Madison, at which the Wisconsin branch of the National Farm Holiday association, the Wisconsin milk co-operative pool, and the National Farmers' union voted to ignore the truce agreed upon in Des Moines at a conference of governors and to prolong the Milwaukee-The federal government has been drawn into the farm strike picture in Wisconsin. The theft of 10 army rifles from an American Legion. hall in Omço, Winnebag ; county, where strikers and pickets have been active, was reported to government agents here by the sheriff of that county, who requested aid in the investigation. Coincident with the discovery of the theft of the rifles, officials of Sheboygan county are notified of the robbery of seven sticks of dynamite from the Sheboygan Lime works, This was the second theft of dynamite reported since the farm strike went into effect.

Madison-Trouble which threatened when 200 farmers from all parts of the state assembled at a scheduled mortgage sale at the Dane county courthouse was averted by announcement that the sale had been postponed for 30 days. The postponement was to give Charles Ruel, Mt. Horeb, owner of the farm, time to obtain a federal mortgage relief loan, the sheriff said.

Jefferson-Miss Elda Attenberg of this city, while driving her car a few miles from town, ran over and killed a rare species of gray fox.

Ladysmith-Fred Pearson, farmer in the southern part of Sawyer county, has a new barn made of odd construction. It is made of rammed earth pounded into forms with three hardwood pounders. The dirt sets so hard it has the consistency of cement.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK L. L. STEVENSON

New York.-In Greenwich village, 1 saw a battered old truck that seemed to be conveying a colored picnic somewhere. A colored man was at the wheel with a colored woman, evidently his wife, at his side, while the body of the truck seemed to fairly swarm with children of assorted ages and sizes garageman, explained that it was not a picnic. Tony was born and raised in Greenwich village. He has never lived anywhere else. So he knows the village and its people. The truck, he said, is a business enterprise. Its passengers constitute one family. The family carries on the business. So the number of children instead of being a detriment in the struggle for existence, is really an assistance. In fact, the more children, the greater the gross income.

The battered old truck is the official waste remover of the village. A number of apartment house owners are also willing to make small contributions. With a wife and a flock of children, the truck owner doesn't need any You'd think their throats were made of tin.

They shake the rocks with savage roars.

killer whales.

To make new soles for boots and slippers!

To stretch his massive neck and shoulders;

And if you heard this frightful din,

And use the skins to cover boats.

The trash is taken to the family home, which is a Morton street cellar. There it is sorted. Practically all of it is salable in one form or another. Much furniture, in various states of repair, is collected. That which is salable is trucked up to Harlem and sold there either to individuals or to dealers. The papers are baled and sold, the market for old paper being decidedly bullish at present. The stuff that can't be sold either is trucked to dumps or is used to supply heat. And after Tony had told me that, I agreed that it wasn't any picnic.

Speaking of junk, there is the old German, an ex-member of the navy of his country and a jeweler by trade, who has a shack up on the Hudson near the shack colony known as Hoover city, which Riverside drive residents tried hard to eliminate but which is still very much in existence. Near the shack of the German a sailboat is moored. It is only a small craft which he constructed in spare time with whatever materials came to hand. But it furnishes him a living. In the little boat, during the summer. he cruised up and down the Hudson, sometimes going as far up as Albany. While cruising, he keeps a sharp lookout for junk ashore, his specialty being brass. And tecause of the little boat and through his industry, he now has no fears for the winter even though he isn't able to find work at his trade.

Mention of Riverside drive causes me to recall that the woman who feeds the pigeons at One Hundred Fourth street and the drive is not deterred by weather. No matter how hard the rain may be falling, she comes out with rice and wheat and spreads a banquet for the birds. The pigeons do not seem to mind the rain, either, as they collect in great flocks and wait patiently until their benefactor appears. They are so tame and lazy they won't get out of the way until assistants. Thus he has no pay roll, I actually forced-by the feet of irate pedestrians. I've been told, or read somewhere, that officially all the pigeons in a city, not privately owned, are the property of the mayor. But I've never seen Mayor O'Brien feeding pigeons, though City Hall park has one of the largest colonies in the city.

> Leaning over the wall of the observatory at Inspiration point, I watched a long string of barges being shepherded down the Hudson by two small tugs. One of the captains waved and immediately the old desire to be a barge captain arose within me. Soon there will be barge colonies at Coenties slip and elsewhere and the captains won't have anything to do except keep ship and sit around and yarn until spring.

To "Bite the Dust"

IF EVER a phrase bore all the earmarks of 100 per cent American slang, certainly "to bite the dust" would seem to fill the requirements: yet, it would be hard to find one more rooted in antiquity or the classics. Among the earliest recorded uses of this expression, which we understand to be a reference to a person who is killed and falls to the ground, or to one who is knocked down-are in Homer's "Illiad," book two, and Ovid's "Metamorphoses," book nine.

It was the translation of these famous works that popularized the phrase "to bite the dust"-put in tongues the world over.

The stunning dolmanlike three-quarter-length velvet wrap illustrated to the right at the top, is that sort. Velvet in a lovely corbeau blue fashions this exquisite garment. The lining is a lighter blue, and the lavish fox which, borders this model is creamy pale beige.

Another from among the aristocrats in the realm of evening wraps is posed elow to the left in the group. Here velvet of sumptuous mien dramatizes the luxury of the present season. In point of styling detail it is a masterpiece. Collars which fence about the neck as does this one, bespeak the newest of the new.

Before we proceed with this story of velvets-beautiful, we want to take time to call your attention to the handsome jeweled hair ornaments and the glittering bracelets which lend glamorous accent to the appearance of each of the ladies of fashion posed to the left (above and below) in the picture. Hair ornaments are real style news, also bracelets set with precious stones.

Over her charming gown of stately white satin, milady posing to the right below wears a gorgeous floor-length coat of ruby transparent velvet. It has a scarf collar of self-velvet, for to add to so richly colorful a wrap would be but an anti-climax.

Here is a most style-worthy dinner gown from more than one point of view. In the first place the hammered crepe of bemberg mixture in a lovely starlight blue which fashions this prettily feminine frock is not only good to look upon but it is all that a delightsomely wearable and genteel fabric should be. Of course you took in the charm of the flattering opentop sleeves at first glance. For that matter who wouldn't, for what an adorable fashion it is!

Do this for Your Child in

TWO WEEKS

How to rid any boy or girl of sluggishness or constipation and build a big appetite. The trouble with children who will not eat is usual stasis. The symptoms are a tongue that's always coated, bad breath, poor color, dull eyes that are often a bilious yellow. No appetite, no ambition-even for play. Hard to get to sleep, hard to wake in the morning.

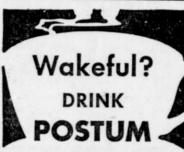

There's an absolute remedy for this condition. It gives listless youngsters the appetite and energies of a young animal! They eat! They gain! They keep well!

It's not the stomach, but the bowel condition that keeps children from eating. But the trouble is in the lower bowel-the colon. California syrup of figs is the only "medicine" that is needed to stimulate the colon muscles. The very next day, your child is eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the syrup of figs a few days and you will see amazing improvement in appetite, color, weight and spirits. Any drug store has the real California syrup of figs, all bottled, with directions. Nature never made a nicer acting or nicer tasting laxative. (It is purely vegetable.) Remember California syrup of figs when sickness, a cold or any upset has clogged a child's bowels. WARNING: Even when it's something to give children, some stores will try to substitute. So be sure the bottle says CALIFORNIA Syrup

The NRA has its pioneering work behind it. Now it is gradually developing into a more national, better organized governmental bureau. Last change branches. They cover, in groups, Extractive Industries. Construction and Machinery, Chemicals, Leather and ottiles and Clothing, Each branch has an administrator all its own, makink a sort of five-men cabinet to Administrator Hugh Johnson, Persons who wish to report a code violation to the NRA have only to go to the postoffice, procure a blank, fill it out and file it with the local NRA compliance officer. He makes an effort to fix matters up, and if he fails he passes it on to his immediate superior, the Divisional Administrator. He takes a crack at it and in event of failure, sends it up to the National Compliance Board If it flops, General Johnson gets it next, If necessary, he can turn the charge over to the Federal Trade Commission or the Attorney General. General Johnson always has a lot of fights on his hands. Most recent was with the Federal Reserve Board's Bulletin It said that late industrial declines have occured most severely in industries which have been affected by codes. The General shook his head and stated that the situation was precisely the reverse of that, and that code industries have been going forward. So the reader can take his choice. A more important fight of the battling General's, is his long-standing feud with Ford. The other day he traded in his Lincoln for a Cadillac, announced that Ford would get no government contracts. Showdown will come soon, when automobile makers are required to send in their employment statistics. If Ford refuses, as everyone believes he will, next round will probably take place in

The business picture is confusing. Best of late signs is in the quarterly income reports. The utility group was the only major one to make a poor showing so far as profits were concerned; steel, motors, chemicals, etc., produced definite advances for the nine months as compared with last year. One of the most striking changes was General Motors, which for three-quarters of the year, had an 800 per cent jump in profits.

Current indicators aren't so good. Steel operations were recently down to 28 per cent of capacity, where 59 per cent was reached in the second quarter. The index of automobile production slipped to 46, with seasonal adjustments made, where it was 60 last quarter.
