BULLET-PROOF * SCHOOL COLUMN GLASS FOILS BANK INTO ETERNAL SLEEP ROBBERS AT, THERESA

Bandits were feiled in an attempt to hold up the State Bank in Theresa last week Thursday noon, when assistant cashier Clarence Bodden refused to submit to orders that it was a "holdup." Bullet-proof glass no doubt saved the life of Mr. Bodden as the bandits before they fled fired three times against the glass. Bodden not fearing the shooting bent down and pressed the alarm button and grasped his own weapon and shot at the bandits thru a porthole. It is believed that one of the shots fired by Bodden seriously, if not fatally, wounded one of the band-

Up to this time no trace has been found of the escaping bandits, although the Carmelite Fathers in the monastery at Holy Hill came upon the automobile that the bandits used parked on a side road at the foot of Holy Hill Thursday afternoon and notified Sheriff Kirsch of West Bend.

The interior of the car was smeared with blood and there was evidence to indicate that a wounded or dead man had been carried to another automobile according to investigations made by Sheriff Kirsch, One theory of the officials, who have started an investigation that the wounded bandit died and the other bandit disposed of the body by throwing him in one of the lakes in the vicinity of Holy Hill,

The auto used in the attempted hold up was stolen from a parking lot at N. Fourth and W. Michigan streets.

Doctors' offices and hospitals in and between Fond du Lac and Milwaukee were closely checked by authorities in an effort to learn the identity of the

FRED E. WITZIG PASSES AWAY

When the citizens of this comunity woke on Wednesday morning and heard the sad news of the sudden death of Fred E. Witzig all were greatly shocked. Mr. Witzig died at the home of his mother, Mrs. S. E. Witzig, on Tuesday evening, March 13, 1934, at about eleven o'clock. Death was due to a heart stroke. During the day Mr. Witzig was about his work as usual After finishing his day's work he went home and spent the evening with the : (mainder of the family and was list, ening to the radio at the time the fatal stroke overtook him.

Mr. Witzig, 47, was one of Kewas. kum's most prominent citizens and businessmen. He followed the vocation of barber for the past twenty-five years. He was born in this village on August 9, 1886, being a son of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Witzig, pioneer residents of this village. His father preceded him in death on June 7, 1926.

Fred, as we always called him, was a very public spirited citizen. He always was in hearty accord with every betterment for the community. His absence among his relatives and many friends will be greatly felt. When the World War broke out Fred was one of sent home being rejected for service member of the Holy Name and St Francis Aid societies of the Holy Knights of Columbus of West Bend ington County Barbers association. Besides his grief stricken mother h age, and two sisters, Mathilda (Mrs. Nic Zeimet) of this village and Rose (Mrs. Edward Smith) of Neenah. The funeral will be held to-morrow morning, Saturday, at 9:30 o'clock

the state of the s

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Have you noticed how remarkably simple is the styling of the new print frocks? One almost gasps at their simplicity-straight narrow skirt, top part frequently in shirtwaist fashion or made ostensibly plain with sleeves which are either three-quarter or full length, often quite full at the armhole or that which is newest of all, fairly close-fitting from shoulder to wrist.

Well now, this glaring simplicity is not a mere happenstance. Rather is it a deliberate move on the part of designers to create along lines that are different. With all their seeming simplicity there is something about these new print gowns which bespeaks the very quintessence of high fashion.

Of course the prints themselves are as new, as new-looking as can be both in motif and coloring. So much so that a last year's print sadly looks it by the side of a today's patterning and weave. For example, there's the new necktie prints such as the one which fashions the very good-looking dress to the left in the picture. To be clad in a frock of necktie print silk during the daytime hours is to declare yourself style-conscious to the This model is designed for immediate wear under one's winter coat. It plays up the idea of simplicity with consummate art. Note the dropped shoulderline, the scarf of selfprint, the slim gored skirt and that which is of greatest significance, the new three-quarter sleeve. One of the joys of gay springtime is the stepping out in-new and fashionable footwear, which is why we are especially calling attention to the smart black kid opera pumps which milady of the necktie-print frock is wearing. These pumps have a beautifully designed simple arrow motif at the side-just that touch which carries them out of the rank and file. The hat which tops this chic outfit is black felt smartly banded with white.

The point about the print centered in the picture is that it has a navy background. The flowers are in tones of mulberry and white. Seeing that fashion has gone into "the navy" so wholeheartedly this spring, navy accessories are inevitable and so with this captivating spring frock accents of this color very modishly appear in hat, girdle and a chic pair of navy blue kid strap pumps with circular motifs piped in contrasting white.

The thing you are bound to remember about the print dress on the seated figure is that it is smocked at neckline and sleeves. As a trimming treatment for prints here is real news. It is our prophesy that you will be thinking so excitedly over this idea you will resolve at once that it is exactly what you will do with the print frock you are going to make up in the near future-smock it! You'll love the color scheme of this print in the picture, too. It's tango red and beige. Sounds intriguing, does it not?

Briefly we would call your attention to the new sheer wool prints and the mossy crepe prints and the handsome bordered prints all of which are headliners on the spring fabric pro-

TWO-COLOR DRESSES AGAIN FIND FAVOR

The two-color frock-once a high favorite but lately almost banished from the scene-is staging a fashion comeback.

Though far from holding the spotlight, it is beginning to be seen again in women's spring wardrobes. Sometimes it appears in a frock of one color and the body of the dress in another. Again it is seen in a model whose sleeves contrast with that of the frock, or a trim little dress that has a deep

which has a dropped shoulder yoke yoke of a contrasting hue. And there are other variations of the vogue for two colors.

Larvin puts cherry-red satin sleeves in a black afternoon frock and adds elbow bracelets of the same bright red

She designs a black wool frock with frilled epaulets, sleeves and small collar of apple-green satin and puts a deep U-shaped white wool yoke on a black wool frock to give a contrasting touch.

Tweed Good, Serviceable Fabric for Spring Wear

Another tweel season lies ahead. Once one has acquired the hardy habit of tweed it is impossible to give it up. If one wants durability, and a general all around good fabric friend, it is tweed, and now that weavers have become imaginative in color schemes, one's interest in tweeds is at fever heat. Don't forget that tweeds are not alone used by tailors, but by dressmakers. Not only coats and suits are made of it, but separate skirts, and very trim looking as well.

The tweed hat and scarf combinations are popular, although a preference is felt hats with tweed.

Inflammable Gown

One of the most novel dresses for spring combines silk and straw. It is highly inflammable, therefore imprac-

HOOD COLLAR By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here's the latest-the hood collar which drops the fur to the back. As the season advances you will be seeing all sorts of hood-shaped collars and capelets. Many of them are made detachable, as for instance perfectly stunning hood-capes of furbordered velvet designed to be worn with your new spring suit or cloth street frock. Charming will they also prove later on to wear with summery print frocks and afternoon crepes. Note that the body of the coat pictured is more fitted as to waist and more rippled as to skirt than in the winter models.

Suggestions About Styles for Coming Season

Pleated borders animate hemlines. Evening gowns are slim-hipped and jewelry.

Interest is divided between tailored and frou-frou themes.

The demure charm of the fashions of yesterday has been subtly blended with the smart, slim lines of today. Leopard-skin high shoes, with long gloves to match, form the last idea for feminine "smart dressers" in Paris.

Aviator wings is inspiration for new

Suits have every type jacket from waist length to long three-quarter. Some of the most attractive prints both for day time and evening combine lively reds and greens. Women's sports wear for spring is streamlined, with little ornamentation. Motor costumes are straightlined-almost aerodynamic in form.

SMALL HOME NOW ADVOCATED TO END DEPRESSION

The very best thing to complete the rout of the depression would be a nationwide building program, adding 50,000,000 to 75,000,000 rooms to American homes by use of private capital. So said President Henry L. Harriman of the United States Chamber of Commerce at Buffalo a few days ago. Such a program, he insisted, would do for business what the automobile did a few years ago. And this would be no sudden spurt, for, in Mr. Harriman's opinion, it would take ten years to build merely the houses necessary for a minimum standard of decency and comfort. He estimates the total cost of construction alone at close to $40,000,000,000. And to that may be added more billions for furnishings.

A survey conducted by the National Association of Real Estate Boards in 273 cities reveals a shortage of single family houses in 27 per cent of the cities, and a shortage of apartment space in the smaller cities. The home shortage is more pronounced in the smaller cities and is especially noticeable in New England, the Pacific coast, and the West South Central section.

What this country needs, declared the Southern Lumberman, is not model apartments but small individual homes. And by small homes it does not mean houses costing around $9,000-for which there is, indeed, a market-but houses costing in the neighborhood of $3,000 or $4,000. For these there is a much greater demand, and "the architects and builders and promoters seem to have forgotten that there ever was that kind

The Southern Lumberman thinks that if means could be found to finance such building it would open a very large untapped field of activity.-Literary Digest.

SYNOPSIS

Stephen Drake, with his four-year-old son, is rescued from a blizzard by old son, is rescued from a blizzard by Jim Flynn, big timber operator, whom Drake has robbed. Flynn forgives the theft, and Drake, until his death, impresses on the boy, Steve, the debt they owe "Old Jim." Twenty years later, Steve meets "Young Jim" Flynn, his benefactor's son. Sent by Old Jim, incapacitated through an accident income. capacitated through an accident in which Kate, his daughter, is temporarily blinded, to take charge of the company's—the Polaris—woods operations, the youth is indulging in a drunken sprea. Honing to do somedrunken spree. Hoping to do some-thing for Old Jim, Steve hastens to the company's headquarters, finding Franz plotting against the Flynn in-terests. Worsting Franz in a fist fight, the Polaris craw assumes that Drake the Polaris crew assumes that Drake is Flynn's son, and he takes charge, as "Young Jim." A photograph of Kate, which Steve finds, intrigues him immensely. Steve gains the friendship of LaFane, woods scout. Franz discovers Drake's impersonation. Threatened with disclosure, Steve accuses Franz of attempting to murder him, exhibiting evidence, and the man dare not act. Steve sends LaFane to find Young Jim and sober him up. Steve wins the friendship of MacDonald, who owns timber land vital to the Flynn interests and the Scotsman gives him an option for Polaris to buy his timber.

-12-"Never mind. Just try to get any evidence on me for anything, now, and see how far you'll get! Just because you've gotten hold of an option don't think you'll pulled Polaris up by its boot-straps! Not yet, you-"

He broke short as the Laird opened the door, bearing in both hands the precious jug.

Steve thought for a moment that Franz was only awaiting a chance to go on and unmask him before the Scot and he was prepared to meet any such move with an admission of the truth. The option was made out to the company, to no individual, and he would claim rightful possession of it no matter what came.

But Franz said no more and Drake put this down to the other's knowledge of MacDonald, his whims and moods. Likely Franz did not dare, in this mellow moment, wield the club he

They drank together and Steve folded the document, slipping it into his breast pocket.

"The time is none too long now, Mr. MacDonald," he said, bound to leave before any complications arose. "I'll have to be on my way, now. This means a lot of quick work in Chicago." "Ay, Seven days, James,

"I'll see you. I trust, on the seventh day, sir. My thanks for your hospitality."

With no more farewell, except a curt nod to Franz, he left them and strode down to the river.

The option in his pocket was a warm, living weight against his breast, a charge to keep, a trust to guard. Where his own safety was concerned he would have laughed at any menace Franz might present, but more than his personal safety was at stake, now. He bore the hopes of Old Jim Flynn in his pocket and until he had it safely recorded in public files he could not

His canoe was waiting, having been brought down-stream from where he had fished by one of the Laird's Indians, and as he launched for the first stage of the journey he had a flash of a pursuer, ruthless and determined. Drake was unarmed; he well knew that the shoulder holster beneath the other's shirt was not empty. . . . He did not hasten so long as he was in sight of the MacDonald establishment, but when he rounded the first bend he bent forward and paddled until his canoe leaped and weaved at the drive of the blade. He knew the country and the trails well enough, but Franz knew them more intimately than he. The landing above Twenty Mile rapid was the obvious place for one to leave the river and take to his legs for transport. To run the white water, of course, would cut miles from the journey but the risk of tragic disaster was great.

He speculated as he speeded along, trying to put himself in Franz's position, trying to reason as Franz would reason. When he reached his decision he commenced to smile with tongue in cheek. He relaxed his paddling and chuckled and sat back, drifting with the current.

He could hear the grumble of the treacherous water below, and ran his canoe into a shallows where it was screened by overhanging alders and stub cracked warningly and, wriggling, kicking, he let it go and grasped living wood and with a heave swung himself sideways and up, until he lay along the bole, panting furiously as he drew branches about himself for concealment

He could see his canoe, tossing like a chip, enter the first white water and disappear around the sharp bend.

So much accomplished! Now, he turned his face up-stream. Franz was approaching, making in toward the trail landing. He leaped out as the bow touched rock and stopped to grasp the thwarts and lift the canoe out and checked all movement, then moved slowly into the trail, scanning the rocks and earth.

Steve chuckled. No sign was there for him to see! Even at the distance he could detect Franz's bewilderment. He went a short distance up the trail and returned, scratching his head and peering down into the head of the A moment before, Franz had had Drake in sight. The only place he could have left the river was at that trail; leaving it, he could not have failed to leave signs. Easy!

Franz evidently made up his mind. He stepped into his canoe again and started down the current. Balancing gingerly. Drake worked his way toward shore and ran along the ledge to the trail, feeling his breast pocket to be certain that the precious paper was still there.

"Limits!"-bitterly. "When I didn't want to come in here, you beat me up; when I tried to leave you did it again. Now it's nothing but coffee for both of us. Enjoying it, are you?"

"Much. . . Yes. You're sober, now; you've been sober most of a week. There's a little rifle yonder. In that birch sits a grouse. If you weren't ashamed to show how shaky you still are you'd try to get him because you're hungry. When you are able to take your living from the country, we'll feed. Not before. I can stand it longer than you can." After a time he said:

"I'm glad you're ashamed."

"Go to h-l!" LaFane smoked on.

"He was depending on you and you turned him down. Think of that! An old man, laid up with smashed bones, his back to the wall, and you turned him down. . . I recall how gentle he always was with kids. I should think they'd break their necks to do things for him."

"Shut up!" the boy snapped and averted his face. "No. I'll keep reminding you of it, and of what you might have been able to do to me, and of what you can do for him and to me if you make up your mind to it. A fine man, your father; not the kind most men would turn down. . . Young Jim winced and LaFane's lips twitched as if he wanted to smile.

CHAPTER VII

Down into the rushing maw of the river went Franz. Spray lashed his face, the canoe bucked and reared like frightened, living creature. He grazed a rock and although the touch was light the jolt all but upset him. He shot between protruding boulders with scarcely a hand's breadth to spare and straightened out for the run down a stretch that was white from cliff to cliff.

He was forced to work frantically to keep himself in shallows because protruding rocks were so thick outside that no craft could thread them. He skirted a lodged tree top, canoe rasping through the outer branches without disaster, but was turned crosswise of the current. For a long moment it seemed as though the pull of the river would defy his efforts to straighten out and that the canoe surely must capsize, but he put into the paddle every energy of his splendid body. The bow responded, swinging slowly at first. . swinging faster, threatening by that spin to bash the one rock with even a greater vigor than the current alone could have impelled. But he won. Our water supply may come from a distance found that there are a good many cases of simple goiter which result from a lack of iodine among school children, especially adolescent girls. For this reason physicians recommend that iodine salt be used. This is the simplest way of making sure that iodine supply is sufficient. In certain states, such as Michigan, where simple goiter was a common ailment among school children, the percentage of cases has been cut down enormously by the educational work of the state board of health, which advises the inclusion of iodine salt in the diet. Certain cities have put iodine into the water supply, but this is a rather wasteful method of supplying it. The only objection to the use of extra iodine is the fact that a few persons have an over-active thyroid gland which should not be stimulated to further action by iodine. These are the persons who have a tendency toward another type of goiter known as exophthalmic, which is the condition opposite to simple goiter. Simple goiter usually can be easily prevented or cured by making sure that there is plenty of iodine in the diet, especially in the case of adolescent girls. "Slanguage" Offered as New, Expressive Word

If language stands for legitimate words, why should not "slanguage" stand for those expressive, but illegitimate words which seem to grow of themselves? The supplementary volume of the Oxford English dictionary, the greatest work of its kind in the world, includes not only many new words which have come into use during the last few years, but also much slang.

Mr. Dooley once said: "When we Americans are done with the English language, it will look as if it had been run over by a musical comedy," and America is certainly responsible for some of the more striking examples found in this supplement. For instance: graft, once-over, dope, stepon-the-gas, wise-crack, wow. Other new words defined include futurism. robot, pacifism, radium, talkies, tank, loudspeaker, lipstick, slimming, psychoanalysis, pussyfoot, photostat, profiteer, ga-ga, bubbly, slapstick, and all-of-a-doo-da

Whose Fault?

If a Child Won't Play with Others?

Parents who understand children know where to place the blame when a youngster mopes, keeps to himself, or is "ugly" toward others. Sluggishness ruins any disposition, and that's what is usually wrong But it's just as wrong to dose that child with sickening cathartics. Until 15—or older—a child's bowels need but little aid—a very mild form of help. Stronger things often upset the stomach or weaken the bowel muscles. For the happy solution of this problem see what to do, in the next column:

There are happy, healthy boys and girls who have never known the bitter taste and violent action of castor oil—or similar cathartics. The only "medicine" they ever get —or ever need—to help the bowels is plain California Syrup of Figs. The senna in this fruity syrup has the natural laxative action assists Nature as it should. Next day, the child feels and acts himself, and has a normal appetite. But

The popularity of her fashion articles undoubt_ edly is due to the fact that she tries, as she says, to consider the current styles from the viewpoint of the average American woman, and to write a. bout the type of clothes in which this average woman would be interested.

CHERIE NICHOLAS

Extremes in styles do not interest her and consequently, they have no place in her articles. The illustrations show no freak models. The average woman, Miss Nicholas feels, wants her clothes to be fashionable, but she also wants them to be serviceable, practical and economical, and it is clothes of that kind that she pictures and about which

A McCormick-Deering Drill for every Grain Grower's Needs

Good Seeding Pays for Itself

DRILLED grain always stands a better chance than broadcasted grain, particularly in dry weather. When you drill your grain it reaches the bottom of the seed trench and is covered to the proper depth. All the seeds germinate, grow, and ripen evenly. An even, heavy crop invariably is the result. And the extra yield more than pays for your work of seeding carefully with a drill.

McCormick-Deering Grain Drills are the result of one-hundred years of manufacturing and engineering experience. And farmers in this district who use McCormick-Deerings say these drills are doing their stuff in the field. They're mighty hard to beat!

There is a complete line of McCormick-Deering Grain Drills. Sizes from 10 to 28-furrow. Models for horse or tractor use and for various kinds of seeds. We'll be glad to show them to you.

FOR MORE JOBS

THE COMPANY OF THE PARTY OF THE

Urges Industry and Banks to Do Their Part.

Washington.-President Roosevelt launched a new recovery drive before thousands in Constitution hall who cheered his demand for more jobs and applauded his assurance that the country is heading neither toward Communism nor Fascism.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke before 5,000 representatives of code authorities. He asked industry further to shorten hours of labor and to increase hourly wage scales. The treasury, he said, cannot forever carry the unemployment burden. With that plea was a summons to the people to impose fair practices upon the "selfish few."

When the President concluded his address to the main meeting he visited an overflow meeting of code authorities in the other end of the large Constitution hall.

In his main speech Mr. Roosevelt promised summary government action against so-called "chislers." Through his speech ran a thread of optimism and assurance. 'The recovery test, he said, is succeeding.

With this plea to delegates of code authorities whose industrial and commercial plants employ 90 per cent of American labor, Mr. Roosevelt strode confidently into the second year of his administration.

"Think back a year ago," he told his audience. "You know where the banks stood at that time; you know where your own business stood. And if the banks come along, my friends, we will have the three great elements of American life working together: agriculture, industry and the banks. Then we can't be stopped."

Without mentioning the case of the Weirton Steel company which has attracted wide attention, Mr. Roosevelt reiterated the right of employees to organize and to choose their representatives by "free choice."

"The first task of industry today." Mr. Roosevelt said, "is to create consuming power. Therefore, I give to industry today this challenge: 'It is the immediate task of industry to re-employ more people at purchasing wages and to do it now.'

"Only thus can we continue recovery and restore the balance we seek. It is worth while keeping in the front of our heads the thought that the people in this country whose incomes are less than $2,000 a year buy more than two-thirds of all the goods sold here.

Mr. Roosevelt in effect called for a boycott against those who refuse to fly the Blue Eagle. He said common sense required the consuming public to compel the selfish few to play the

He promised protection for small business and demanded that the letter and spirit of the law be imposed to prevent actions which are:

1. Clearly monopolistic. 2. Wink at unfair trade practices.

3. Deny labor free choice of representatives. 4. Hostile to the public.

The President said he wo tolerate such actions. A bill for a compulsory, universal 30-hour work week was reported favorably by the house labor committee as President Roosevelt's program for voluntary reduction of hours was assailed at the NRA code conference. Rep. William P. Connery, Jr., Democrat, Massachusetts, fathered the bill which was given unanimous support by the committee. It would prohibit any decrease in wages.

Farley Orders Cut

in Mail Service Washington .- As part of the economy move by the department, Postmaster-General Farley has instructed postmasters throughout the country to curtail mail service. While maximum mail deliveries are fixed for the majority of the cities, the postmasters are allowed to use their discretion in paring down the service. Generally, it is explained at the department, it means the lopping off of a delivery where there have been three or more made or in some cases where a smaller number of deliveries are daily practice.

DR. ALICE WYNEKOOP GUILTY OF MURDER

Jury Gives Chicago Woman 25 Years in Prison.

Chicago.-Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop was found guilty of the murder of her daughter-inlaw, Rheta Wynekoop. The jury fixed her sentence at 25 years in prison.

The jury required only ten minutes' deliberation to determine her guilt. The vote stood eleven to one on the first ballot and became unanimous on the second.

Two jurors stood out for the death penalty until almost the end of the hour spent in fixing her penalty. At one time the voting ran eight to four for life imprisonment until, a majority being hungry for supper, they compromised on 25 years with the reflection that the sixty-three-year-old physician could not live to regain her freedom under that penalty.

The invalid Doctor Wynekoop, her once notable reputation at last destroyed, received her sentence with the same stoic calm with which she confronted suspicious police the night of last November 21 when they took her into custody after finding Rheta's chloroformed, bullet-pierced body in a blanket on the doctor's operating table at the Wynekoop home.

Princess Awarded Big

Sum in "Rasputin" Suit London.-Princess Irina Youssoupoff, niece of the late Czar Nicholas, was awarded £25,000 ($125,000) damages in her $2,000,000 libel suit against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Ltd., producers of the film, "Rasputin and the Empless."

The award followed upon a trial filled with sensation after sensation rivaling the story of Rasputin himself. Princess Irina announced, during the trial, that she intends to sue every theater where the film has been exhibited throughout the United States and Great Britain.

the character Natasha in the picture was a libel against her and her character. Attorneys for the producers maintained the character was fictional.

83 American Couples Divorce Mill Victims

Cuernavaca, Mexico.-At least 37 per cent of the divorce decrees obtained in the state of Morelos by Americans in the last six months are fraudulent and legally worthless, a high American source asserts.

Eighty-three American couples are known to have been victims of a "mail order" divorce mill in that time. it is said, and further investigation is expected to reveal others.

Members of the ring were reported to have obtained the bogus decrees by inserting duplicate and triplicate blanks under sheets containing records of genuine divorces which were signed by the proper authorities.

Washington. - The United States Supreme court, for the second time since the New Deal came into being, decided 5 to 4 in favor of a major principle of the Roosevelt program. A five dollar fine imposed upon an insignificant Rochester, N. Y., storekeeper became, through the majority opinion of the court, a vital factor in the future determination of the constitutionality of such national policies as those of the agricultural adjustment administration and the NRA. The decision upheld the right of the New York state milk control board to license milk dealers and fix the prices they must charge their customers.

As in the recent 5 to 4 decision in the Minnesota mortgage moratorium case, the court declared that the interest of the public was paramount to any private right.

And as in that earlier case and others where the division has been over the so-called issue of "conservative" versus "liberal," the split in the court was the now well known one, setting Chief Justice Hughes and Associate Justices Brandeis, Roberts, Stone, and Cardozo on the liberal side, and Assosociate Justices Van Devanter, Sutherland, McReynolds and Butler on the side of conservatism.

Justice Roberts delivered the majority opinion, so important to the Roosevelt economy of centralized planning and control, which held that government might regulate any business, might prescribe rules for the conduct of any portion of that business including the setting of prices, so long as due process is observed, and the means taken are relevant and not discriminatory.

Justice McReynolds handed down the dissenting opinion with its warning that to abrogate the bill of rights under plea of every emergency is to destroy the Constitution at the very time it is most needed.

Dr. Sarah Dean Convicted of Killing Dr. Kennedy

Greenwood, Miss. - Convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment, Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean won her fight to remain free on her $10,000 indictment bond pending court action on a motion for a new trial.

The court granted 90 days for preparation of arguments on the motion and tentatively set a further hearing me from taking rat poison-cigarettes, for June 2 at Indianola, Miss. Doctor Dean's attorneys told the court she was ill, suffering from a chronic stomach ailment.

The verdict, representing a rejection of the woman physician's sworn testimony that she did not poison her admirer, Dr. John Preston Kennedy, with a whisky highball, came after 13 hours and 52 minutes of deliberation. The trial lasted five weeks.

he had been playing was a gold one, battered and none too clean. It might have been used as a missile in moments of boredom during such a tea party as this one, for instance, but undoubtedly it was gold. Apart from the dents which gave it a history of carelessness or temper it was dedicated in a man's handwriting to "Dearest Cary-with everlasting love." It was this engraved inscription, so amazingly indiscreet, which made Balfour turn to the girl on his left. Balfour was given to playing hermit in his stronghold on the hill; his somewhat infrequent novels were numbered among events. Tall, thin, gravish, immaculate, unmarried, he was as aloof as a cuckoo, but when he came forth, bland, patient and heroic, he played the social game with ability, and hoped, in spite of cynicism, for a little fun. It was his hobby to laugh.

"Are you Cary?" he asked. "Yes, worse luck," she said.

She was pretty, with splendid shoulders, thoroughbred, or, as it amused him to put it, gold. Somewhat battered, however, he was bound to confess, like the case. She, too, had the appearance of one who had been used, or had used herself, as a missile, because her edges had been dented and there was irony round her mouth. It was a pity and he was sorry. His psychological eye read quite easily in her face and in her nicotine-stained fingers and slightly out-of-date frock a history as dented as the cigarette case which had been pushed beneath his

"Why worse luck?" he asked. She would lie as all girls lied, and every woman, according to her creed.

"Because I hate myself," she said simply. "However, would you like to buy a cigarette case? It's gold. You can have the dents pushed out." "Buy it? But what would the man say who wrote 'Dearest Cary-with everlasting love'?" "He wouldn't know," she said. "He works in Shanghai, you see. I intended to go to town to hock the poor little thing. I can raise enough money on it to buy the only things which keep

"You're lying, my child," he said. "I never lie," she answered. "That's why not a single soul believes a word I say. I've pushed this thing under your hand so that you might ask me about it and having heard the truth play the gallant person and save me going to town."

He considered that some one's dearest Cary was dramatizing herself, was using her cigarette case for the purpose of achieving limelight. However, there were the possibilities of amusement in all this. He might add to this. I'm dead against long enanother laugh to his collection, which was good. "How much do you want?"

he asked. "Five dollars is the usual sum." she

"If you will throw in the dents and tell me what put them there I'll double the price-though I shan't believe a word." Upon which, quite briefly, she told him that she was engaged to be married to a Harvard man who worked in Shanghai for his firm. There was everlasting love on both sides, but she was twenty-seven, and there was no hope of their marriage because his salary was low. Her father and mother were dead and for several years sho had been living with a disagreeable aunt. "Like Micawber I am hanging about waiting for something to turn up, afraid to take the bull by the horns and strike out for myselfwhich answers the unpleasant ques-

For five years, with an annual hop day which she made too short, Bal four's capable secretary had kept the lamp of loyalty blazing on his root The tumult in her soul which had been caused by her love for this aloof, distinguished man had gradually died away. So that Doris Minton was a very happy girl. Except, that is, for the haunting fear that one day he would announce his engagement to some impossible person who would ruin the rest of his life. Just at the moment, however, when the sky was even more cloudless than it had ever been, dearest Cary made an energetic entrance into that house on the hill She was carrying a portable typewriter in one hand, a vanity case in the other and was followed by a taxi driver bearing several bags. Hearing a cheery "Hullo" followed by "Here I Doris became covered with am." goose-flesh and stood frozen to the Balfour remembered her and was bound to confess, and gladly, that if ever he had seen a girl in her second blooming he saw her in dearest Cary who belonged to the man in Shanghai. "This is going to be the most awkward thing," he said, "that has ever happened to me." But the sentiment in his nature drove the cynicism out. "I can see that this means at least twice as much work for me. Miss Minton in the morning and you in the afternoon. But I think that you had better meet as infrequently as you can." "Perfectly fine," she said.

Doris and dearest Cary remained on speaking terms-and what could be worse than that? They spoke to each other in cutting words and hurled metaphorical bombs. Balfour's life, like that of a traffic policeman, was a far from happy one. He commenced that curious practice, before the end of a month, of concocting imaginary telegrams which should call him to New York. Some one had got to die. His house was no longer a home. It was a front-line trench. And yet, as the book had to be finished by a certain date, what was he to do? Should he beat a quick retreat, engage another secretary and continue to work in New York? Or might he get out of this trouble by an offer of marriage to one of the girls and the retention of the other to type? There was a huge dent in his case-especially when he discovered that he was deeply in love with Cary, who was undoubtedly gold. It was on the tip of his tongue to say to her, "I find that I'm in love for the first time in my life. I'm ready to drop my selfish habits, my cynicism and egotism and lay every decent thing that's in me at your feet." But was it decent to take advantage of the man who worked in Shanghai? He didn't think that it was. It was true that Christmas was over and that the time for making presents had therefore slipped away, but one night after dinner he took Cary by the elbow and led her in his room. Doris remained at the radio, but although it was a symphony orchestra she never heard a sound. He said in his most cynical manner, "I want you to listen gagements. They make so many dents. As Christmas is not so far behind I'm going to ask you to accept a present which, if you'd been here, I might have given you then." "What on earth do you mean?" With the merest suggestion of a stammer he came up to the scratch. "Pocket this envelope, will you? It contains a little check. I want you to buy some frocks with it, book yourself a passage to the man who lives in Shanghai, and, after having had a honeymoon in some romantic placethey're always to be found-settle down and live happily ever after, as I firmly believe you will.' Cary took the envelope and, as it was rather dark, put it to her lips. "You're the only living person," she said, "with the gift of finding the sort of words that are proper to a thing like this."

And when he felt her hand on his arm he trembled in every limb. She was utterly wrong, as it happened. He had lost that gift just then.

"So you think I'm a rotten secretary and you're giving me the push?" "No," he said. "You're an excellent secretary, my dearest Cary, but you'll make a better wife. Then, too, to be perfectly honest, I'm thinking about Miss Minton and her faithful excellence."

"Who's the liar now?" "I am." He raised her hand to his lips. "But let me give you a tip. Remind the man who lives in Shanghai that, round about Christmas time, a somewhat elderly novelist may do little things like this."

A wireless came from the ship. "God bless you, my dear friend." Well, three young people were happy-Doris was still quite young, and so was the man in Shanghai-and Bal-

Grape Cultivation Proved to Have Been Common Since Earliest Times

the oldest agricultural pursuits known to man. Explorers penetrating the innermost depths of the tombs of ancient Egypt have found grape stones or seeds very similar to the type of seed now prevalent, says Pathfinder Magazine. Among the Greeks in the days of Homer vine cultivation was an ancient art. Italy, in Virgil's time, had already laid claim to being the world's foremost grape-growing country. Many of the methods of cultivation employed in Italy today vary but little from those described by ancient Roman writers. Penetrating still further, even past the dawn of our known history, grape stones have been found among remains of Swiss and Italian lake-dwellings, showing that cultivation of the vine was not unknown to prehistoric man.

There are about 40 known species of grapes but the largest number are native to the North American coninent. Lief Ericson, Norse navigator

It is true that he was the first man to eat tomatoes (which he raised himself) in Newport, that vegetable having up to that time been considered poisonous.

Fried Pineapple With Boiled Ham Is Tempting.

By EDITH M. BARBER THE menu of the quick meal is especially good for a chilly evening when we are hungry. After a brisk walk, there is nothing like a good hot soup, especially if it is onion soup, because it is so filling within itself.

I have omitted the usual vegetable of the main course. Instead we will serve with the broiled ham pineapple fried in the fat which remains after pan-broiling ham. I am rather fond of cooking ham in a pan rather than in a broiler. Of course, you must poor off some of the fat as it cooks, but seems to me that the meat is less this way, especially when you have serving the butcher cut it very thin.

Boiled rice will go very well with the ham. If you like you may stir in a little minced onion and the remaining bacon fat, or you may prefer it plain. Possibly you will like to make a gravy with the fat as a foundation and pour it around the rice when you

I am suggesting strawberry cake which you may prepare just before you serve it, or the night before, if you have time, If you want a still more elaberate dessert, you may serve it a la mode with vanilla ice cream. Instead of the fresh berries, canned fruit may be used for a dessert of this sort. Just be sure that the fruit is well mashed before you nour it over the cake. You may reserve a few whole berries or slices for a garnish.

that yachting party off Barnegat when a gentleman, who has been doing a lot of prowling about the waterfront lately, spoke up and announced that if anyone is interested in a yacht, now is the time to go shopping. Everywhere he went he encountered bargains. Yachts that cost many thousands are being offered for a songwith very few singers. Naturally when the great financial blizzard struck, yachts were the first luxuries to be sacrificed since, according to all authorities, a steam yacht is the most expensive luxury known, being even more costly than a racing stable. Hence the bearish trend of the yacht market.

Many fine yachts were not put into commission last year and will not be this year. Several instances were cited of yachts that could be obtained for the accumulated storage charges.

The assignment of special seats to Turkish women on ships and trains originally aimed at the seclusion of Mussulman women from the other sex. Heavy curtains in the street cars have separated the two first rows from the rest for that purpose. After the reform this separation was suppressed both on ships and railways, having lost its raison d'etre, but it has persisted on the street cars, where the special seats remained even after the curtains had been removed.

LAST SILK DRESS OF CONFEDERACY MADE WAR PRIZE

A recent acquisition of the Army Aeronautical museum at Wright field is a small portion of the gas bag of a balloon used by the Confederate army for observation purposes. This is a portion of a larger piece presented to the National museum in Washington by the son of Prof. Thaddeus S. C. Lowe, the latter having figured very prominently in the aerial activities of the Union army. This piece of cloth is valuable not only as a reminder of the use of aircraft in the Civil war, but of the ingenuity displayed by a povertystricken army in providing equipment. General Longstreet, in "Our March Against Pope," relates an interesting bit of history in this connection as experienced by the opposing forces.

"It may be of interest," he wrote, "to relate an incident which illustrates the pinched condition of the Confederacy, even as early as 1862, The Federals had been using balloons to examine our positions, and we watched with envious eyes their beautiful observations as they floated high in the air well out of the range of our guns. While we were longing for the balloons our poverty denied us, a genius suggested that we gather together all the silk dresses in the Confederacy and make a balloon. It was done, and soon we had a grotesquely patterned ship of many and varied hues which was ready for use in the seven days' campaign. We had no gas except at Richmond, and it was the custom to inflate the balloon there, tie it securely to an engine and run it down the York River railroad to any point at which we desired to set it up.

"One day it was on a steamer down the James river when the tide went out and left the vessel and balloon high and dry on a bar. The Federals gathered it in and with it the last silk dress in the Confederacy. This capture was the meanest trick of the war and one which I have never forgiven."

Patriotism, sacrifice, ardor and romance, quite aside from its aerial activities, hang about that varnished and faded silk .- Washington Post.

THIS MONEY QUESTION

As nearly as we can understand the money situation and the new gold val. uation, it comes down to this:

A dollar is still one hundred cents Ten cents still make a dime. Ten dol. lars is still one eagle. The "devaluation" of the dollar is not a reduction of the dollar to 59.04 cents, it is a reduction of 40.96 per cent in the amount of gold that a dollar will buy. The price of gold is now $35 an ounce, instead of $21.26, or whatever the old price was.

The dollar, in other words, is now legally and permanently cheaper in the world's markets. It takes more dollars to buy commodities in international trade. We sell our surplus products to the rest of the world in dollar prices. Other nations have to acquire dollars in order to pay us for them. The Senate spent a great deal of time in the past few days, discussing recently passed by the House. The increasing the farmers' returns. While the processing tax appears to have worked very well in the case of wheat, tobacco and cotton, it has not worked so well in the case of pork, and there is some question as to whether or not it should be applied to beef. The New Deal in Washington has many angles For years it has been the practice of the leaders of the successful political Army in a national contest, particularly the legal leaders, to come to Washington after election and take up the practice of law and politi's in the national Capitol. Since the creation of the interstate Commerce Commission, Tariff Commission and Federal Trade Commission and other like Commissions and Boards, Washington has become a fruitful field for lawyers with more or less legal ability, but with considerable political pull with the reigning Administration.

Well, the New Deal has hit this practice, and by an order of the President, men high up in the counsel of the party, both state and national, have been requested to sever their political connections, or quit their practice be. fore Government Commissions and Boards.

Five Democratic National Committeemen and one National Democratic Committeewoman have recently resigned their party positions in conforming to the President's desire.
