FORENSIC CONTEST HELD TUESDAY EVENING

The Forensic contest held in the High School auditorium on Tuesday evening was a lengthy but interesting program. In all, sixteen students participated in the various types of forensic work.

The five boys participating in the oratorical contest were first on the program. First honors in this contest were awarded to Herbert Hopkins who spoke the oration, "Mandate to the Future."

The above named contestants will represent the school in the Tri-County League contest for the southern half of the league, to be held at Campbellport, this Friday afternoon and evening.

All who participated in forensic activities are to be highly complimented for the enthusiasm which they have shown in their work. The school is well pleased with the quality of their work shown in Tuesday evening's contest.

STATE SUPERVISOR GILES VISITED SCHOOL FRIDAY

State High School Supervisor Giles visited the school on Friday, April 5. In his report he expressed many comments on the quality of the work of the school and the attitude of the students. His report is too lengthy for publication in these columns and only a paragraph or two of it is here given.

As concerns the work of the school, Mr. Giles writes as follows: "The administrative organization of your school is uniformly commended. Discipline as a problem was not apparent. Pupils moved about the building in business-like freedom unhampered by the police regulations that formerly characterized all schools."

Concerning the painting project which was recently completed, Mr. Giles continues his report with the statement, "I am glad to see that you have been able, with the help of federal funds, to completely decorate your building. This greatly improves the appearance of corridors, class rooms, and study hall. The color combinations are pleasing and the paint of good quality."

No special recommendation for the improvement of the work of the school were made, Mr. Giles, however, favorably supported the move to revise our commercial curriculum. This change has already been sanctioned by the State Department of Public Education.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Reed visited last Friday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Stahl and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Krahn are the proud parents of a baby girl born to them last Sunday, April 8th.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Krain and Herman Krahn visited Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Gust Krahn.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Siegfried and Mrs. Raymond Krahn visited Monday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Peter Fellenz and son, Gordon.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Glass were here and supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Schmidt at West Bend on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Webb and daughter, Marion, of Greenbush visited last Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Ed. Stahl and Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Stahl and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schroeder and Mrs. Evelyn Beyer motored to Cascade Sunday afternoon where they visited with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Suem and family.

Secretary-Treasurer—Arthur Koch, Kewaskum.
Director—Roy T. Grignon, West Bend.

The league voted to adopt the Harwood baseball and to play a twenty game schedule. The opening games will be played on Sunday, May 6th.

The league is composed of clubs from the following villages and cities: Kewaskum, West Bend and Hartford in Washington county, and Grafton, Thiensville and Port Washington in Ozaukee county.

THE MONEY—WHERE FROM?
We, the people of the United States, owe about forty-five thousand million dollars secured by a first lien on every square foot of real estate, every piece of tangible personal property, every public improvement, in the United States.

To pay the interest, averaging four per cent, on this huge debt local, county, state and Federal governments have to collect every year $1,566,863,000. That comes to 12.58 per capita, or a dollar a month from every one of us, including the babies. Of course, it is not apportioned out that way.

Nearly 24 billion dollars of this debt is the National debt; not quite twenty billions is the aggregate of state and local debt. The national debt and the others were about equal up to last year; in the past year the national debt has increased by more than four billions.

It is not to be wondered at that many states, counties, municipalities and school districts are unable to carry on, that school-teachers are going without pay and tax sales have multiplied. The tax burden upon the American people would be almost unbearable in normal times. Now, with incomes of all classes down to bare subsistence levels in the majority of cases, it is an impossible situation.

The interest payments alone on these debts will weigh heavily upon future generations, unless something is done about it. It seems to us that the first thing to do is to cut down expenses to the bone, dismiss most of the tax-eating, unproductive people on the public payrolls, and not run us into any more debt. It will be hard enough to meet the interest on the present debts; heart-breaking to have to add the taxes necessary to keep the public institutions and governments running.

Then we ought, as a people, to consider seriously whether there is any moral difference between public bankruptcy and private bankruptcy. We do not like the word "repudiation," but we do not see how anybody would be much worse off if the whole public debt were to be "refunded" at, say, 1 or 2 percent interest, with provisions that it is never to be paid off. That may be a wild idea, but that is what England did with her public debt after the Napoleonic wars.

Of course, there is only one permanent cure. That is to cut down the costs of government. And that cure can only be applied through pressure at the polls upon the political wasters of our money.

A popular audience decision was given to the affirmative side of the question, "Resolved that the principles of the present Agricultural Adjustment Program should be made permanent," when that question was debated before a recent Farm-Home conference held in Winnebago county. Debaters are considering the possibility of presenting the subject before groups in other parts of the county this spring.

HERE COMES THE BRIDE

By PAUL VANCE

THE little fruit steamer had just arrived from the states—a big event for Port El Sol where everything is reckoned as “two boats ago” or “three boats from now.” The smelly sun-drenched wharf was a scene of mad activity. Dark-skinned shirtless stevedores sweated and swore as they carried enormous packages of merchandise from the ship to pile on empty flat cars or dump into waiting carts.

In the general office the superintendent of the division, Mike Carew, was busily scanning the pile of letters that had just reached his desk. He was a lanky young fellow under thirty, with gray eyes which twinkled merrily when not focussed intently on some object under scrutiny.

The letter he was reading seemed to absorb all his thought. Suddenly he looked up, also rising from his chair. “Hang me for an egg-eating iguana!” In one swift stride he carried the letter to the auditor's desk, where he slung it down in front of another young man.

“Read that, Andy—and weep,” he commanded. “What's he done now?” queried Andy Benton, as his quick eye scanned the sheets in a familiar bold hand. “Got married,” answered Mike, curtly, much as if saying, “He's dead.” Andy picked up the letter for a careful reading. He was a big man about Mike's age, with a mop of fine red hair and sea-blue eyes.

A whimsical smile wreathed his face as he finished. “So that's why he was in such a hurry to get away!” “Yep,” returned Mike. “He did it with malice aforethought. Let's see, when does he say he's coming back?” Andy consulted the letter. “In about three boats—Joe, the sheik. I knew he'd fall sometime.” “Well, he's pulled a fast one on us, anyway. I suppose he figures we've forgotten all the tricks he's played us before. Say!”—Mike brightened. “Let's write him a letter that'll shoot a little worry into him. It's our only chance to break even with him.”

“Fine! The girl won't need to know anything about it, and maybe young Joe will do a bit of wholesome sweating.” As soon as office tasks permitted, Mike fell to work on the letter. He remembered how this same gentleman Joe had quickly revealed himself as an incurable practical joker whose supreme pleasure it was to turn the tricks on his two close pals, so that eternal vigilance became the price of peace for them. And yet, Mike recalled, Joe hadn't been from Port Sol three days before he himself had lamented to his fellow-in-bereavement, “Andy, Joe's as necessary to us as fleas to a dog.”

And Andy had answered, “Yes, we're miserable when he's here and wretched when he's away. He sort of makes us forget what a hole this is.” Thought and emotion in a fine blend wrought the letter which soon went forth addressed to Mr. Joseph Rogers, absent on leave in the United States. A few excerpts will suggest the character of the whole.

There'll be a red-hot reception committee waiting for you at the dock, all right. That's Dolores, the confidante's niece for one. Says you promised to marry her at the Ball de Independencia. Her lawyer-father claims that a promise made under the influence of champagne is binding. They will be there with all the necessary papers. Then little Margarita Ochoa says you asked her the same thing the same night. She will be there with that killer-brother, Ochoa Hernandez. He says he doesn't need any papers. I've been training that bunch of half-breed kids you always play Santa Claus to so that they'll shout “Papaquito! Papaquito!” when you start down the gang plank.

My advice would be for you to leave the wife in the states and come down yourself a boat or two ahead, just to get things kind of cleaned up. There are no company houses vacant and the G. M. says you will have to stay in the Paris hotel. A lousy place to spend your honeymoon.

Mike signed the letter with a grand flourish, and they mailed it together in high glee. Little Joe was slated to worry—and how!

Another steamer-day arrived. Once more the remote port buzzed with activity. Make sat at his desk scanning the fresh mail. Suddenly he seized one envelope then ripped it open eagerly, but his look of keen anticipation changed to one of consternation which, as he read on, deepened almost to terror.

“Well, am I a bob-tailed olingo?” he moaned. “What happened?” Andy came over. Mike weakly held out the sheet of robin's egg blue stationery covered with feminine script. “Read it—and prepare for the hereafter,” he counseled darkly. Andy read, and then laid the letter back on Mike's desk as gently as if it had been a stick of dynamite. “Gad, what a woman! Looks like you'd put your foot in it this time, Mike.”

“Say!” shouted Mike, enraged by the holler-than-thou accent in his tone. “Where do you get that you-stuff? Didn't you help write that letter?” “You signed it,” said Andy. “I wash my hands of the whole affair.” “Oh, yeah! And who said she was made outa star-dust—that her eyes had cabaged the moonbeams?” “I was only quoting from Joe's letter, as you are entirely aware.” “Well, Joe must have been drunk on tiger's blood. Say, Andy, can't you just picture the kind of forget-me-not of the angels she is? Tall and bony, wears specs, and has shark's eyes. One of those women that gobble at you like a turkey instead of swearing.” Mike gingerly picked up the letter and read it again with interpolations of his own.

“Sir—Your abominable letter addressed to my beloved husband, Joseph Rogers, by a happy coincidence fell into my hands.” (Yeah, fell is the word, all right. I'll bet your octopagan tentacles search every pocket he has) “If your intentions were as nefarious as this letter would lead one to believe, then fate was indeed kind to me in placing it in my hands.” (Fate, and who else?) “It is evident that you are trying to separate two tender hearts whom God hath joined together.” (The Almighty would have to hogle me, old gal—um-m-m—let's see how she winds up—)

“Unless you desist in your attempt to cause trouble between us, I shall never show this letter to my dear husband, who has always spoken of you in the highest terms of affection and esteem.”

I am, Sir, MRS. JOS. ROGERS. A tight feeling caught Mike in the throat. If only the letter had reached Joe first, as intended, he would have read between the lines. But now—what a chance for friendly festivity!

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rogers arrived two boats later. If his job had not required it, Mike would never have gone down to meet that boat. But as it was, he steered clear of the promenade deck where the passengers were congregated. Only once did he catch a glimpse of Joe and a tall straight female.

As he dodged down a companionway Joe spied him with a bunch of officials up forward and pounced on him like a hawk on a chicken. Without a “by your leave” to the astonished officials, he dragged him aft. “Here he is, Myra!” he shouted. Mike chilled at the note of triumph in his voice, but decided to make the best of an awkward situation.

As yet he had seen only the bride's back, but Joe's last mighty shove forced him through the circle around her and placed him practically at her side. She turned to receive him. Mike tried to speak, but could only gasp. He stood gaping at the slender, blue-eyed woman who was Joe's wife. “Kiss the bride, you old pirate,” ordered Joe as he drew them together. As Mike remained in a daze, he whispered, “Old dumb-bell, I wrote the letter. She knows nothing about it.”

Just then Andy loped up for his tenth look at the bride. “Say, you two pikers,” Joe called. “Where's the reception committee?” Mike had to grin. Andy grinned sheepishly back. Again Joe had made them feel miserable and wretched for two weeks—and they still liked him.

Early Transatlantic Flights The United States navy seaplane NC-4 was the first heavier-than-air craft to cross the Atlantic. This was in May, 1919. It left Rockaway, N. Y., with two companion seaplanes on May 8 and arrived at Lisbon, Portugal, on May 27. The trip was made with stops in Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and the Azores. The first airplane to cross the ocean in a single flight was a British Vickers-Vimy biplane, flown by Capt. John Alcock, pilot, and Lieut. Arthur W. Brown, navigator. It left St. John's, N. F., June 14, 1919, and landed early the following day at Clifton, Galway, Ireland. The British dirigible R-34 was the first of its class to cross the Atlantic. It left Scotland on July 2, 1919, reached Mineola, N. Y., via Newfoundland, on July 6, and returned by the same route from July 9 to 12.

Speed of Electrons In one second there pass through the filament of an ordinary 60-watt electric lamp so many electrons that if all the people in New York were set to counting them and if they counted out two a second without stopping day and night for 10,000 years they would still have a few to count!

Map Makers Often Ignore Coral Islands in China Sea—Sought by the Japanese

A group of islands in the China sea, over which it is reported the Japanese may dispute French possession, are so tiny and unimportant that map makers do not show them, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

The group of seven coral islands, reported to include Taitu and Twin Islands, lies approximately 300 miles northwest of Palawan island of the Philippines, and can best be located by drawing a line due east from a point a few miles north of Saigon, French Indo-China, and a line due south from Hongkong, China, connecting the two lines.

The lines will intersect close to the islands. “Perhaps more attention is given to the islands by the navigation chart makers that world map guides, for these and other islands in the southern part of the China sea long have been a menace to navigation. Not far east of the group is a vast area of the sea which hydrographic maps show as ‘dangerous,’ for it has not been sur-

The man in the dock shrugged his shoulders helplessly. “Well, your worship,” he replied, “last month you had me up for stealing in broad daylight. “My husband is a brute, and I've reached the place where I just can't stand him any longer!” said Mrs. Nosey. “Now what's he done?” asked her dearest friend. “Well, you know we were on a 4-party line, and he's gone and had it replaced with a private one, so I can't listen in any more,” she groaned.

Pa's Part

The two village gossips were exchanging the latest news. “And those Richleys,” said Mrs. Jones. “He says very bitter things about his two good-for-nothing sons, but his wife is always making excuses for them.” Mrs. Hayes nodded. “Yes,” she smiled, “she may make the excuses, but he has to make the allowances.”

Not the Same Thing

“Darling,” she murmured, and her voice was shaky, “how do I know that you really and truly love me?” “My pet, I can prove it,” he said. “Why, I can't sleep at nights for thinking of you.” “It'm,” she muttered doubtfully, “that's no proof. Pa can't sleep at nights for thinking of you, but I hardly think it's love.”

"UNWANTED BABY" BIG PROBLEM OF LIFE IN CHINA

More than 24,000 dead bodies of infants were picked up on the streets of Shanghai last year and the news-papers took slight notice of the fact because it was considered too commonplace to have news value.

They faced one another for an interval of strained silence. Franz was trapped, caught red-handed. He accepted the situation resolutely.

"Put down that ax, you old fool! I'm caught, fair enough, and I've got to go through with it, now. You can't stop me."

"Oh, I can't, eh? Can't stop you, can't I? Well, we'll see 'bout—"

From the doorway of the little cabin Kate Flynn had heard. She heard Tim shout; heard another voice giving answer and the tones of the exchange stirred her to action.

She stumbled forward those last few steps, knees weak with misgiving and when Franz, pistol in one hand, brief case in the other, stepped over the prostrate form of the old man he came face to face with her.

A low breath, half moan, half inarticulate curse slipped from the man. Kate, a hand on the door jamb, swayed backward, sick, as her eyes flashed throbbing and aching, transmitted to her understanding what had happened.

For an instant Franz stared at her. Then an odd smile crossed his face, he shoved the pistol into his holster against his side and he wet his lips.

"Oh, I can't Eh? Can't Stop Ye, Can't I? Well, We'll See 'Bout—"

From his chest a dark stain was spreading on the floor boards.

He tipped up the steps and poised, looking within at Franz, kneeling before the safe.

"What things?" she whispered alarmed for her own safety, now.

"No one near," he reminded her. "However, there might be a little later. We will take no chances."

His palm cut off her words. "No one near," he reminded her.

She commenced to struggle in his grasp, twisting her arm to free it, kicking out with her small feet.

He headed up the lake to where the smoke shroud, now hanging low in the heavier air of approaching evening, obscured all landmarks.

Steve Drake stood aside as the other men clustered about Young Jim Flynn. The men he had saved from probable death and the others whose hearts he had won by that achievement.

LaFane approached him, that grim smile playing about his lips.

Drake experienced an odd let-down on this. The Polar property was safe, with Kate's arrival; Young Jim was finally on the job, capable, competent and his courage had been spectacularly demonstrated.

He drew a slow breath as he thought of the girl. She was more lovely than he had believed. The feel of her lips had stirred in him all manner of incredible impulses.

HOME LIFE MAKES STRONGER APPEAL TO MODERN GIRL

Ordinarily the much-used questionnaire regarding personal matters is not worth consideration, but the conclusion reached by a western college from replies sent by its coeds to a general inquiry as to their intentions for the future, is so nearly what one would expect under prevailing conditions that it seems probable the conclusion is correct.

Here and there women who had broken into the sphere once held exclusively by men were making more than good, and the prospect of a traditional home life for women looked drab and uninteresting.

Hence the answers to the questionnaire. Yes, fellows, the coeds facing graduation are open to matrimony proposals, and under the conditions that prevailed as of old.

SPRING CLEAN-UP

With the coming of spring let us have a thorough clean-up of all parks, streets, alleys, homes, shops and other buildings. Many fire hazards will be removed, health and sanitation greatly improved and the city made more beautiful and inviting.

Many unemployed are waiting for this good work, and many new can make good use of things you do not want and which otherwise would only be stored in attics, closets, basements or other out-of-the-way places.

The village administration, particularly the health and fire departments, commercial and civic clubs, women's clubs, schools, boy and girl scouts, and the public press all can help in this good movement.

Representatives of these should meet early and plan the campaign in detail. Someone must take the lead to call them together.

Following the clean-up comes needed improvements, repairs and painting of buildings and turning vacant lots into gardens or playgrounds.

Schools, hospitals, churches and other public buildings, stores, factories, homes and out-buildings should all be carefully inspected and all fire hazards eliminated and disease breeding conditions removed.

Cities and villages are authorized by law to haul away rubbish. Notices should be published when city trucks will be in specified sections of the city to take away rubbish and trash placed on the curb or along public alleys.

A small expenditure of every property owner will furnish much work to the unemployed and better the condition of those in want.

Let the motto be: "We do our part".
Industrial Commissioner

A NATION OF BUSINESS

The United States of America is a business nation. More than in any other part of the world, the chief interest and mainstay of the American people is business. Let anything, natural or artificial, interfere with the free play of business, which is to say the free interchange of commodities, and chaos and distress result, affecting every individual.

We have been coming through the most distressing upset of business in our whole history. Many of the causes of the upset have been removed. We do not think this is a propitious time to set up artificial barriers to the efforts of business to adjust itself. Nor do we think well of the idea, which seems to prevail in some circles, that there is something inherently discreditable about business and that all business men are to be regarded as actual or potential criminals, to be disciplined, policed and supervised.

To accept that view is to discard the foundations upon which American institutions and American progress are based.

Complete 4-H club projects will be accepted for credit in agricultural studies in the seventh and eighth grades in Bayfield county according to a plan recently outlined by county authorities. It is expected that several new 4-H clubs in that county will be organized on the school credit basis this year.

LARGE INCREASE IN WHOOPING COUGH CASES

Cases of whooping cough reported in Wisconsin during February and March totaled more than 2,500, or twice as many as in the same period a year ago, the state board of health announces, urging parents to make every effort to prevent the spread of this disease.

Whooping cough has no favorite season in Wisconsin, the state records show. Sometimes it is more widespread in summer, as it was in 1933, but it may choose any season of the year for its heaviest occurrence.

Nearly all the deaths from whooping cough in Wisconsin are suffered by children less than three years of age, according to the state bureau of communicable diseases. For the ten years beginning with 1920 there were 63,092 cases and 1,377 deaths of whooping cough reported in the state. Of these deaths, 64 per cent were of children under one year of age; 24 per cent were of children between one and two, and five per cent were of children between two and three years of age. Less than six per cent of all the 1,377 deaths were of persons over three years of age, the statistics show.

Whooping cough is not easy to detect in its early stages, for during the first week or two it resembles an ordinary cold in its symptoms. Then, however, the child begins to have attacks of whooping. At spaced intervals there are 15 to 20 short coughs, then a crowing sound when the breath is drawn in, and sometimes a tendency to vomit.

The whooping state of the disease, says the state board, generally lasts from three to six weeks, and its departure is gradual. There is considerable variation in the seriousness of the attack, with the result that many a light case of the ailment runs its course without being properly diagnosed. The Wisconsin law, however, requires that suspected as well as recognized cases of whooping cough be reported by the family and the attending physician to the local health officer.

Whooping cough is a placardable disease, the state law requiring the placard on every dwelling in which a case is in progress. During the period the placard is displayed, the afflicted children are restricted to the premises but the other members of the household may come and go. The law depends upon the close cooperation of Wisconsin adults in preventing the spread of whooping cough.

The old feeling that whooping cough is still a mild disease that children are bound to contract and might as well contract now and be done with it is not fair to the child, the state board of health declares, citing first that thousands of Wisconsin children grow up without having whooping cough, and secondly that every possible effort should be made to prevent cases of disease that has taken 1,377 Wisconsin lives in the past decade.

For the first six months of life an infant is known to inherit from its mother a natural immunity from several communicable diseases, but apparently this is less liable to include whooping cough than other ailments, inasmuch as many cases and deaths occur at ages less than six months. The disease can also be much of a menace among older children because of complications that may result from it.

Preventive measures against whooping cough, the state board says, should include keeping small children away from other children when whooping cough is in the neighborhood, and a visit by the family physician if whooping cough is suspected. Medical care is essential in whooping cough because proper medications can ease the spasmodic whooping and thus save many lives.

For many years a vaccine for the prevention of whooping cough has been widely used, and although it has not been so successful as have preventives of some other communicable diseases, it is worth trying for the good that it may do when whooping cough is present in the community or neighborhood, the state board advises.

An average price of 29.75 cents a pound for wool was received by wool producers of Pepin county members of the Wisconsin Wool Cooperative according to a report made at their recent meeting. Over two hundred members of that county attended.

Ten thousand dollars worth of eggs were sold by the Milwaukee county Poultry Association during the past month, according to a report. The Association intends to extend its market.

While disappointment has been expressed in some quarters that the government's recovery program has not brought about a greater degree of business revival, such an attitude should not be taken too hastily, states the Guaranty Trust Co. in its monthly survey. Remarkable improvement that has taken place is a matter of record.

"Thus far, the New Deal as a whole can hardly be said to have succeeded or failed. . . . The crucial point will arrive when the Government ceases to pump huge quantities of public funds into the economic system and business is left to sustain itself. . . .

"The value of the new deal in the long run will depend on . . . its capacity to meet maturing obligations without resorting to ruinous taxation or to paper money issues, and on its ability to regulate, in the public interest, the vast and complex economic forces that it has undertaken to bring under centralized control."

Exactly thirty schools in Rusk county now have school forests. Plans have been made to have a memorial planting in each school forest. Each pupil from the first grade up will have his own row of trees for which the pupil will be responsible.

Seventeen rural clubs have entered plays in the one-act drama contest to be held in Dodge county. This work is largely the result of five districts leaders' training schools held in that county during the past month.

Economic Highlights

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

Easter has come and gone again. Instead of peace on earth and good will toward all, there is unrest, class hatred and actual revolution in many parts of the world. Politics has become the "biggest business." It bids fair to consume savings and capital of many countries. Taxation grows and the constant fear of wars drains the public treasuries to prepare for war.

With growing talk of fascism, communism, and socialism as a remedy for worldly troubles, we as a nation should not lose sight of one outstanding fact, namely: that we, the people of the United States, are the government. No other form of government ever gave such complete control to "the people" as does our own constitution.

We have no ruling class here that it is necessary to revolt against in order to protect ourselves. By the ballot, we, the people, have the power to express our views in a more emphatic, orderly and speedy manner than can ever be accomplished by force.

In these days of unrest and discontent we should remember these facts. We should appreciate the great government that we have. We should get down on our knees and offer a prayer of thankfulness that our ancestors, through trial and suffering created a constitutional form of government that gives each and every one of us the greatest liberty and equality of opportunity of any people in the world.

Our constitution is the poor man's greatest heritage and the rich man's only protection.

One of the most startling statements of the year, whether it be comedy, error, or tragedy, came from Dr. Wirt, superintendent of Gary's school system. He quoted remarks he claims were made to him by "brain trusters" to the effect that if they could prolong the country's destitution they would cause the American people to demand that the government operate industry and commerce; that they believed they had Mr. Roosevelt in a swift stream from which he could not turn back or escape and that they believed they could keep him there until they were ready to supplant him with a Stalin. Dr. Wirt's full statement is astounding. Taken literally, it is evidence of a well laid program to fool the president and destroy our present form of government. Congressman Bulwinkle of North Carolina, has demanded an investigation. In reply to interviews Dr. Wirt says in regard to his comment, "I meant every word of it and I'll have more to say if I am called before an investigating committee in Washington." Also he stated he is willing to "be a sacrifice to get the people to thinking about what is going on." Comment is impossible until an official investigation has developed further facts.

But in spite of national and international problems business must go on. AUTOMOBILES—Incomplete reports indicate passenger car sales for March exceed combined January and February totals or a gain of 86 per cent over March 1933.

STEEL—Prices are being advanced along with wage increases in steel and bituminous coal industry.

RETAIL TRADE—Spring buying satisfactory. Easter shopping throughout larger part of country added generously to upward trend of consumer buying that has been in evidence for several weeks. Increase in retail trade has not been matched by any proportionate gain in the activity of basic industries.

FREIGHT—Carloading for week ending March 24, showed drop of 2.8 per cent, but the total was still 26.8 per cent above like period in 1933 and 8.4 per cent above 1932.

LUMBER—Total number of employees increased 2.82 per cent in February over January and increase in payroll amounted to 2.38 per cent. Last year there was a 4 per cent decline in these items.

SPRING CLEAN-UP

With the coming of spring let us have a thorough clean-up of all parks, streets, alleys, homes, shops and other buildings. Many fire hazards will be removed, health and sanitation greatly improved and the city made more beautiful and inviting.

Many unemployed are waiting for this good work, and many need to make good use of things you do not want and which otherwise would only be stored in attics, closets, basements or other out-of-the-way places.

The village administration, particularly the health and fire departments, commercial and civic clubs, women's clubs, schools, boy and girl scouts, and the public press all can help in this good movement.

Representatives of these should meet early and plan the campaign in detail. Someone must take the lead to call them together.

Following the clean-up comes needed improvements, repairs and painting of buildings and turning vacant lots into gardens or playgrounds.

Schools, hospitals, churches and other public buildings, stores, factories, homes and out-buildings should all be carefully inspected and all fire hazards eliminated and disease breeding conditions removed.

Cities and villages are authorized by law to haul away rubbish. Notices should be published when city trucks will be in specified sections of the city to take away rubbish and trash placed on the curb or along public alleys.

A small expenditure of every property owner will furnish much work to the unemployed and better the condition of those in want.

Let the motto be: "We do our part!"

A NATION OF BUSINESS

The United States of America is a business nation. More than in any other part of the world, the chief interest and mainstay of the American people is business. Let anything, natural or artificial, interfere with the free play of business, which is to say the free interchange of commodities, and chaos and distress result, affecting every individual.

We have been coming through the most distressing upset of business in our whole history. Many of the causes of the upset have been removed. We do not think this is a propitious time to set up artificial barriers to the efforts of business to adjust itself. Nor do we think well of the idea, which seems to prevail in some circles, that there is something inherently discreditable about business and that all business men are to be regarded as actual or potential criminals, to be disciplined, policed and supervised.

To accept that view is to discard the foundations upon which American institutions and American progress are based.

Complete 4-H club projects will be accepted for credit in agricultural studies in the seventh and eighth grades in Bayfield county according to a plan recently outlined by county authorities. It is expected that several new 4-H clubs in that county will be organized on the school credit basis this year.

LARGE INCREASE IN WHOOPING COUGH CASES

Cases of whooping cough reported in Wisconsin during February and March totaled more than 2,500, or twice as many as in the same period a year ago, the state board of health announces, urging parents to make every effort to prevent the spread of this disease.

Whooping cough has no favorite season in Wisconsin, the state records show. Sometimes it is more widespread in summer, as it was in 1933, but it may choose any season of the year for its heaviest occurrence.

Nearly all the deaths from whooping cough in Wisconsin are suffered by children less than three years of age, according to the state bureau of communicable diseases. For the ten years beginning with 1929 there were 62,992 cases and 1,377 deaths of whooping cough reported in the state. Of these deaths, 64 per cent were of children under one year of age; 24 per cent were of children between one and two, and five per cent were of children between two and three years of age. Less than six per cent of all the 1,377 deaths were of persons over three years of age, the statistics show.

Whooping cough is not easy to detect in its early stages, for during the first week or two it resembles an ordinary cold in its symptoms. Then, however, the child begins to have attacks of whooping. At spaced intervals there are 15 to 20 short coughs, then a crowing sound when the breath is drawn in, and sometimes a tendency to vomit.

The whooping state of the disease, says the state board, generally lasts from three to six weeks, and its departure is gradual. There is considerable variation in the seriousness of the attack, with the result that many a light case of the ailment runs its course without being properly diagnosed. The Wisconsin law, however, requires that suspected as well as recognized cases of whooping cough be reported by the family and the attending physician to the local health officer.

Whooping cough is a placardable disease, the state law requiring the placard on every dwelling in which a case is in progress. During the period the placard is displayed, the afflicted children are restricted to the premises but the other members of the household may come and go. The law depends upon the close cooperation of Wisconsin adults in preventing the spread of whooping cough.

The old feeling that whooping cough is still a mild disease that children are bound to contract and might as well contract now and be done with it is not fair to the child, the state board of health declares, citing first that thousands of Wisconsin children grow up without having whooping cough, and secondly that every possible effort should be made to prevent cases of disease that has taken 1,377 Wisconsin lives in the past decade.

For the first six months of life an infant is known to inherit from its mother a natural immunity from several communicable diseases, but apparently this is less liable to include whooping cough than other ailments, inasmuch as many cases and deaths occur at ages less than six months. The disease can also be much of a menace among older children because of complications that may result from it.

Preventive measures against whooping cough, the state board says, should include keeping small children away from other children when whooping cough is in the neighborhood, and a visit by the family physician if whooping cough is suspected. Medical care is essential in whooping cough because proper medications can ease the spasmodic whooping and thus save many lives.

For many years a vaccine for the prevention of whooping cough has been widely used, and although it has not been so successful as have preventives of some other communicable diseases, it is worth trying for the good that it may do when whooping cough is present in the community or neighborhood, the state board advises.

An average price of 29.75 cents a pound for wool was received by wool producers of Pepin county members of the Wisconsin Wool Cooperative according to a report made at their recent meeting over two hundred members of that county attended.

Ten thousand dollars worth of eggs were sold by the Milwaukee county Poultry Association during the past month, according to a report. The Association intends to extend its market.

Economic Highlights

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

Easter has come and gone again. Instead of peace on earth and good will toward all, there is unrest, class hatred and actual revolution in many parts of the world. Politics has become the "biggest business." It bids fair to consume savings and capital of many countries. Taxation grows and the constant fear of wars drains the public treasuries to prepare for war.

With growing talk of fascism, communism, and socialism as a remedy for worldly troubles, we as a nation should not lose sight of one outstanding fact, namely: that we, the people of the United States, are the government. No other form of government ever gave such complete control to "the people" as does our own constitution.

We have no ruling class here that it is necessary to revolt against in order to protect ourselves. By the ballot, we, the people, have the power to express our views in a more emphatic, orderly and speedy manner than can ever be accomplished by force.

In these days of unrest and discontent we should remember these facts. We should appreciate the great government that we have. We should get down on our knees and offer a prayer of thankfulness that our ancestors, through trial and suffering created a constitutional form of government that gives each and every one of us the greatest liberty and equality of opportunity of any people in the world.

Our constitution is the poor man's greatest heritage and the rich man's only protection.

One of the most startling statements of the year, whether it be comedy, error, or tragedy, came from Dr. Wirt, superintendent of Gary's school system. He quoted remarks he claims were made to him by "brain trusters" to the effect that if they could prolong the country's destitution they would cause the American people to demand that the government operate industry and commerce; that they believed they had Mr. Roosevelt in a swift stream from which he could not turn back or escape and that they believed they could keep him there until they were ready to supplant him with a Stalin. Dr. Wirt's full statement is astounding. Taken literally, it is evidence of a well laid program to fool the president and destroy our present form of government. Congressman Bulwinkle of North Carolina, has demanded an investigation. In reply to interviews Dr. Wirt says in regard to his comment, "I meant every word of it and I'll have more to say if I am called before an investigating committee in Washington." Also he stated he is willing to "be a sacrifice to get the people to thinking about what is going on." Comment is impossible until an official investigation has developed further facts.

But in spite of national and international problems business must go on.

AUTOMOBILES—Incomplete reports indicate passenger car sales for March exceed combined January and February totals or a gain of 86 per cent over March 1932.

STEEL—Prices are being advanced along with wage increases in steel and bituminous coal industry.

RETAIL TRADE—Spring buying satisfactory. Easier shopping throughout larger part of country added generously to upward trend of consumer buying that has been in evidence for several weeks. Increase in retail trade has not been matched by any proportionate gain in the activity of basic industries.

FREIGHT—Carloading for week ending March 24, showed drop of 2.3 per cent, but the total was still 26.3 per cent above like period in 1933 and 8.4 per cent above 1932.

LUMBER—Total number of employees increased 2.82 per cent in February over January and increase in payrolls amounted to 2.38 per cent. Last year there was a 4 per cent decline in these items.

While disappointment has been expressed in some quarters that the government's recovery program has not brought about a greater degree of business revival, such an attitude should not be taken too hastily, states the Guaranty Trust Co. in its monthly survey. Remarkable improvement that has taken place is a matter of record.

"Thus far, the New Deal as a whole can hardly be said to have succeeded or failed. . . . The crucial point will arrive when the Government ceases to pump huge quantities of public funds into the economic system and business is left to sustain itself. . . .

"The value of the new deal in the long run will depend on. . . . its capacity to meet maturing obligations without resorting to ruinous taxation or to paper money issues, and on its ability to regulate, in the public interest, the vast and complex economic forces that it has undertaken to bring under centralized control."

Exactly thirty schools in Rusk county now have school forests. Plans have been made to have a memorial planting in each school forest. Each pupil from the first grade up will have his own row of trees for which the pupil will be responsible.

Seventeen rural clubs have entered plays in the one-act drama contest to be held in Dodge county. This work is largely the result of five districts leaders' training schools held in that county during the past month.

FAVORITE SPRING FROCK

PATTERN NO. 8178—Daytime fashion for spring and summer are distinguished by interesting sleeves and slim skirt lines. This design answers all the requirements for an attractive spring or summer dress for the street. The tucked sleeve softly flared at the elbow, the gay butterfly effect of the jabot, the molded hip lines and flaring hem all contribute to the pleasing appearance.

In the matter of selection of materials, pastel crepes, periwinkle blue, moss green or the new soft shade of dusty pink are the first suggestions for spring. For summer, printed voile, batiste or triple sheer could be used effectively, with white accessories.

For PATTERN, send 15 cents in coin (for each pattern desired), your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE to Patricia Dow, Kewaskum Statesman Pattern Dept., 115 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Highest Paid Short Fiction Writer

FANNIE HURST is the highest paid short story writer in the world today. There's a good reason for that. She knows human nature and under the magic of her touch, the people about whom she writes become real people, not mere literary creations. The plots of her stories are based on incidents from real life as it is lived every day by the common people.

Such are the stories which are appearing in this newspaper. Be sure to read them and talk to your friends about them, for they like interesting stories, too. And Fannie Hurst's stories are interesting stories.

McCormick-Deering
No. 3 Field Cultivator

MAYBE it's Quack or Johnson Grass . . . perhaps it's some other noxious weed . . . but—nine chances out of ten—weeds in your fields are stealing fertility from your crops and lowering your yields and profits.

After deep plowing, use this McCormick-Deering Field Cultivator on your land and yank out those fertility-robbing weeds by the roots. Then rake them up and burn them!

This cultivator is great for summer-fallow, alfalfa cultivation, or seed-bed preparation. It does good work under all conditions because its entire weight can be thrown on the gangs when the going is tough.

Bring your weed problem to us. We can supply this cultivator in different sizes with sweeps best suited for attacking your weeds.

Fond du Lac—A 400-pound safe stolen from a Wadsworth filling station here was found behind a schoolhouse on highway 151 between Beaver Dam and Waupun. It had been broken open and looted of $300.

Wausau—Edward Fromm, head of Fromm Brothers, Inc., one of the largest silver fox ranchers in the world, located near here, has completed arrangements for an elaborate exhibit at the 1934 Century of Progress.

Kenosha—A 10 per cent wage increase for 1,300 employees of the American Brass Co. was announced here. The increase is effective as of April 1 and covers all of the plants of the company in the nation, with a total of 10,000 employees.

Madison—The state supreme court held that the city of Green Bay had no authority to levy taxes for the years 1929 and 1930 against the property occupied by the Green Bay Moose Lodge on the ground that the lodge was entitled to the statutory exemption provided for fraternal organizations.

Milwaukee—Nine persons were killed as floods, caused by recent heavy rains and melting snow, centering in northwestern Wisconsin, swept over them, washed out roads and bridges, marooned residents in their homes and places of occupation, causing untold damage to urban and rural communities.

Kenosha—Sale of liquor in Bristol township, Kenosha county, will be permitted for the first time since the village of Bristol was founded 100 years ago. The licensing of taverns was favored by a vote of 173 to 158. Only one of the 332 voters in the township failed to express an opinion on the liquor question.

Maunson—Two more men went to prison for the $5,000 hold-up of the Bank of New Lisbon last July 10. They joined six others behind the bars. One more robber remains to be captured and tried, authorities say. Mike De Stefano and John Monaco, both of Chicago, were the two found guilty by a jury and sentenced to 15 to 40 years in the state prison by Judge C. M. Davison of Beaver Dam.

Madison—Advocates of municipal ownership of utilities lost in seven Wisconsin municipalities and won in five. Neenah, Waupun, Cambridge and Mount Horeb favored acquisition of local private utility plants and Washington water plant. Fond du Lac, Horton, Two Rivers, Stevens Point, Pittsville, West Salem and Peshtigo opposed municipal ownership.

Madison—Out of 12 Wisconsin cities voting on establishment of municipal liquor stores, only two—Barron and Monroe—voted to establish such stores. Barron voted 271 to 258 for the stores. It also favored tavern dispensation of beer by a 461 to 185 vote but banned tavern sale of hard liquor by a 306 to 235 vote. Monroe voted only on the liquor store issue. Richland Center, ever true to prohibition, not only decided overwhelmingly that it wanted no liquor store, but the same majorities ruled against sale of beer and hard liquor. Strangely, the voters elected Levi H. Bancroft, an outstanding wet, their mayor.

Milwaukee—Results of the recent election here show a defeat for the socialist party. The socialists lost one alderman when former Ald. William Esser, nonpartisan, defeated Ald. John Warchow in the twenty-sixth ward. Morris Stern, socialist candidate for circuit judge in branch 9, newly created, was defeated by Richard J. Hennessy nearly 2 to 1. The charter ordinance providing for appointment of the city treasurer, city attorney and city comptroller, a proposal supported by Mayor Horn and the socialist party organization, was defeated more than 2 to 1. Judge Max Nohl defeated Douglas J. Mangan for the municipal judgeship 3 more than 2 to 1.

Kenosha—In the last five months Kenosha workers have lost $500,000 in wages because of strikes, according to a report issued by Senator Conrad Shearer, secretary of the Kenosha Manufacturers' association. Industry has suffered irreparably, Shearer said, because orders intended for Kenosha have gone elsewhere.

Appleton—County Highway Commissioner F. A. Appleton was vindicated in his fight against charges of negligence when the county board voted 24 to 17 against ousting him.

Comes New Enthusiasm for Laces

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

HOW about it, have you caught the Parisian inspiration for lace? Of course you have, or will have, before the season is far advanced. It just isn't possible to tread the highways and byways in fashionland and remain immune to the lure of lace.

In the couturier showings for spring and summer, 1934, come before our enraptured eyes a continuous procession of frothy, frilly, filmy dance and dinner frocks created of tulle and lace by such artists as Lelong, Mainbocher, Dilkusha and a host of other designers of high degree. A very new, very lovely and very chic idea is to animate slim, figure-fitting soft lace gowns with myriads of crisp tulle ruffles at shoulders and hemlines. One such is fashioned of shell-pink lace with crisp, sheer ruffles posed at the arms with billowy fullness about the neckline achieved through a fro-frou of many ruffles. The all-black lace gown with crisp black tulle ruffles or fine pleatings is a particular favorite.

In contrast to the airy-fairy types of flattery lace and tulle is the gown of classic lines fashioned of handsome soft mat lace, a lace, by the way, which is outstanding in the mode. In the illustration we are showing an exquisite evening dress of white mat lace made especially by Molyneux for one of the major social events of Paris. It took the first prize at a ball.

It would be a mistake, however, to carry the thought that the new laces are limited to the languid, glamorous social life. As a matter of fact, the most exciting doings of lace are taking place in the realm of tailieurs and sports clothes. Especially attractive and eminently practical for days are the suits of beige lace with jackets of navy serge or the jacket of beige serge of green net with blouse of simple lace.

Lace for bathing suits, too, makes real news, and for hats, the handbags, for ravishing neckwear and for entire dresses, ensembles and blouses, for gloves, too, if you please, and we must not forget the "darling" lace-covered slippers that will dance in sweet strains of music under starry skies.

Because a dress is fashioned of lace does not mean that it may not be smartly wearable and conservative. The afternoon dress of green wood lace on the seated type in the picture is just such—one of the outstanding models of the house of Lelong. It is a princess model and is finished with a draped collar held by one of the new polished wood clips.

A delicate web of black chiffon lace for the bodice top enhances the feminine allure of the dinner and afternoon gown centered in the group. Exquisitely thin cobwebby lace of the sort have captured the heart of the fashionable world this season. Able in black, in white or pale beige, in every imaginable pastel tone. In contrast between this lace and the soft mat velvet of the dress illustration serves to emphasize the high neck which is held with a crystal bar. The close writh sleeves display the delicately traced lace patterning to perfection.

SHADES OF VIOLET BLOSSOMING GAYLY

Purples and violet shades are blossoming gayly in fashion for spring, 1934. Last season some purple was seen in boucles and knitted frocks, and this year it is out in cottons and linens. For a long time it was felt that heliotrope, orchid and violet shades were impossible in wash fabrics, as they came out in dull, muddly shades and did not hold their colors. These objections have been overcome, and the new violet range in handkerchief linens, French linens, gingham, or gaudies and shirtings are among the smartest of the season's offerings. Cotton frocks in these colors are sometimes combined with little jackets of purple wool or velvet.

This new trend is as important for children as for grown-ups.

ORGANDIE CAPE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Organdie capes are writing a charming chapter into the history of summer wear. The theme of these dainty little added wraps is being made much of designers. At Paris social gatherings you see them created of the fascinating colorful sheers fancy fabrics. The gown is of white tulle with dots, for dots of every size from tiny to large are the rage of the season. There's nothing smarter than white with navy for evening wear.

Authentic Tips About the Season's Styles

Hats of fish skin are being worn in Paris. A plique bib with ruffled edges is an attractive and practical piece of neckwear.

Line green is an unusual but favored color for blouses to be worn with navy blue suits.

Black, navy or brown bags, fashioned of rain-proof materials, may be had in numerous chic styles.

Capes are being shown everywhere. Umbrellas that are transparent are a great help on crowded streets.

Embroidered sheers are in favor for afternoon blouses of a frivolous type.

Sports colors in shantung shirtings include turquoise, dusty pink, and white.

A white lace cravat, shirted and starched to a crisp freshness, is an ideal touch of contrast for a white frock.

How It Started

By Jean Newton

"Where There's Life There's Hope"

THIS is an old saying, with which we are all familiar. It finds expression in practically every instance of dangerous illness in which the outcome is in doubt.

The authorship of the saying is credited to the English dramatist, John Gay, who lived from 1688 to 1732 and whose "Beggar's Opera" is still presented on the stage.

But a considerable time before, the Roman statesman, Cicero, whose life span was from 106 to 43 B. C., also said, in his "Epistolarum ad Atticum": "While the sick man has life there is hope!"

House of Lords Amazed at Convicts' Impudence

London.—Dartmoor prison has been reckoned one of the toughest of British penal institutions. The prisoners mutinied there in 1932.

Now the bishop of Exeter thinks the trouble is that they do not have compulsory attendance at Sunday service. Instead of going to chapel, the convicts lie on their beds and read novels, the bishop told the House of Lords.

Out of a total of 200 Church of England prisoners, the Sunday congregations often numbered only five, said the bishop.

And the growing tendency towards impudence in modern crime is reflected in the conduct of the prisoners. The prison chaplain received a threat that if he didn't make the concerts more amusing the prisoners would get him dismissed, said the bishop.

The bishop himself withdrew his application to hold a service for the inmates after the mutiny, when the governor told him that he could not be responsible for his safety.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

Naturally, many things get lost in New York. It is entirely possible and in fact quite easy, for a human being to lose himself from the millions so effectively that even the police can't find him.

Yonkers down to Wall street every morning, recently celebrated his ninety-third birthday. He gave up riding in the subway several years ago but still attends to business.

A friend just back from a business trip to Cleveland told me a story that gave me a chuckle. The Press of that city runs a comic strip, "Dolly Duck."

WHEN stewing fruit add one teaspoonful of vinegar or lemon juice to every pound of fruit. This will save you one-third the quantity of sugar you would otherwise require.

It is advisable to purchase your household linens and cottons of standard makes and you will be more assured of their wearing qualities.

A feather brush is the best to remove dust from gilt picture frames. On no account use a linen cloth, as it wears the gilt off and deadens its brightness.

If you get cake too stiff never add more milk, but beat an egg and add it gradually until the desired thickness is attained.

INDICT GRANDMA AS SPOILER OF THE LITTLE ONES

Now the psychologists are hopping on poor old grandma. First it was the parents that were responsible for all the complexes that children developed. They fastened on the little dears complexes with sinister names which, it was alleged, led to much of their unhappiness and mischief and maladjustment to the duties and responsibilities of later life.

But now Dr. Garry Cleveland Myers, psychologist and child-training expert from Cleveland, insists on children without grandparents. He declared the revered silver haired matron is the worst mischief in bringing up children.

The psychologists have discovered nothing new. Their chief contribution is an overemphasis, which splits the ears of the groundlings and makes the front page. It has long been common folklore and observation that grandparents, stern with their own brood, are overindulgent with their children's children.

And before the modern scientific indictment of parents and grandparents, the old Romans made the uncle the goat. In fact, they had the same word for nephew and spoiled child. It's all pretty tough on the kids to have to carry on not only with the weight of heredity but to have to go through environmental association with their parents and grandparents and collateral relatives.

But what to do about it? There are few such exceptions as Pallas Athene.—San Francisco Chronicle.

All Happy

STEWES DESERVE CAREFUL STUDY

Not Flat and Tasteless When Properly Served.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THERE is nothing for which we more need standards in our own cooking than for the preparation of less expensive cuts of meat which are sometimes classified under that uninteresting title of stew. If you dignify them by an interesting name such as "beef à la mode," "blanquette of veal," "casserole of lamb" and so on, you immediately get a new set of mind towards the dish which, however, must be prepared with care and seasoned with art to be worthy of its name.

By the way, few people seem to realize that the French are as famous for their preparation of inexpensive meats as for more elaborate dishes. In almost all these dishes the meat is browned in fat. Often a clove of garlic or some minced onion, often both, is cooked at the same time. Vegetables and a variety of seasonings are then added. Liquid is poured over the meat, which is covered closely. The slow cooking then begins, either on top of the stove or over a very low fire in the oven. Browning or "searing" the meat keeps in the natural juices and gives more flavor.

Perhaps you have all had stews where the meat itself is stringy and tasteless, even if the gravy which surrounds it is well seasoned. There are one or two "white stews" made from veal or lamb, usually served with dumplings or noodles, that are very good, but in general a colorful brown stew is more delicious. Some recipes for browning only part of the meat. Sometimes meat is rolled in fat before it is browned to give a certain amount of thickness to the stew. You may add more thickener just before serving by mixing a little flour with cold water to a paste and stirring it in. The addition of a cooking wine or a wine flavoring to the liquid improves the flavor, or you may add a very little vinegar to take the place of the wine.

There are several very good canned stews on the market at the moment, as well as canned beef hash. The busy housekeeper who has not time for the long cooking which a homemade stew of this sort demands will find real satisfaction in some of these never failed products. Most of them are well seasoned, but you may add an individual touch of seasoning if you add a little water and let them simmer while you are getting the rest of your dinner. The meat should be well cooked and not stringy, well flavored, and the gravy should be smooth, not watery, and well seasoned.

Ragout de Mouton.

Put three to four pounds of neck of mutton into pieces. Brown in two tablespoonfuls of dripping or butter and remove to a dry pan. In the remaining fat fry two or three slices of onion and two cloves of garlic until light brown. Stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour and when brown add one cupful of canned tomatoes and one-half cupful of water. Stir over the fire until sauce is thick; add salt, pepper, parsley, a bay leaf and a sprig of thyme. Return meat to sauce. Cover and let simmer for an hour. Add twelve potato balls, two of three small turnips cut into dice, two sliced carrots and cook about three-quarters of an hour longer until vegetables are tender.

Blanquette de Veau.

Cut three pounds of breast and shoulder of veal into pieces and put into a heavy saucepan with two or three slices of onion, two sliced carrots and one clove of garlic and one tablespoonful of minced parsley. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and add two cupfuls of cold water. Cover and simmer over a low fire for an hour and a half. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, stir in same of flour and add to the meat, stirring over the fire until the sauce is smooth. Add one cup of sliced mushrooms and continue cooking fifteen minutes. Remove the meat from the sauce; heat platter. Then beat two egg yolks with the juice of a half lemon. Add a little of the hot sauce and stir this mixture into the saucepan and continue stirring.

Link Around World Telephone Service

Washington.—Around the world telephone conversation, linking men's lives in every important capital and commercial city is imminent, according to engineers. Already the earth is completely encircled by chains of telephone connections. From the United States men can talk across the Pacific with Manila, across the Atlantic through Amsterdam, Berlin or Brussels to Manila again or eastern oceanic points.

here. Some authorities expect it within two or three months. "Tests have been conducted between the United States and Japan about a year, indicating the prospect of regular service in the near future," Stanley Shoup, communications expert in the Department of Commerce, said.

During the last twelve months the United States opened telephone connections either for regular or special occasions with Russia, Venezuela, Manila, Guatemala, Panama, Costa Rica and Nicaragua. Earlier it opened communications with virtually every nation in Europe and South America and even with the far-off continent, South Africa.

and Bandung in Java, which is the terminus of two chains to Europe and a junction between Europe, Australia and New Zealand. Manila and Bandung are connected already.

All this development has come since March 10, 1976, when Alexander Graham Bell conversed in Boston with a companion seated in another room a few feet away. Most of the American international telephone development has occurred since 1922, when only Cuba and Canada were linked with the United States.

JOHN MARX, VILLAGE TREASURER

sufficiently dry, is considered safe.

Years of breeding at the University of Wisconsin Experiment Station has developed two lines of barley which are recommended for the State—the Pedigree Oederbrucker and the Pedigree No. 38. The rough bearded Pedigree Oederbrucker was the earliest barley developed at the Wisconsin Station and is excellent in malting quality. The Pedigree 38, which was produced five years ago, is a very high yielding variety and much more comfortable to handle. Malting tests by the United States Department of Agriculture have shown it to be equal in malting quality to the Oederbrucker. For quality malting barley, therefore, we have your choice of either the Pedigree Oederbrucker or the Pedigree 38.

Some people in order to sell seed are making claims that Oederbrucker is superior in malting quality to No. 38. This is contrary to facts. Both barleys are excellent in malting quality. Buyers are not paying any difference in price for either barley of the same grade.

The one difficulty experienced with No. 38 barley is due to threshing too close, and in that way exposing the end of the kernel.

If threshing is done properly, there is no difference in malting quality between No. 38 and Oederbrucker barley. The No. 38 barley is preferred by most farmers due to better yields and to being smoothed awned and being more comfortable to handle.

Washington, April 12, 1934 (Auto-caster)—The new "strong man" in the Administration is W. Averell Harriman. He is practically running the NRA now, and is slated to be its head when General Hugh Johnson retires or is moved out of his present post.

People always speak of Averell Harriman as "young" Harriman. He is 43, which is about the average age of the men who run things in Washington. He is the son, however, of the late E. H. Harriman, and old-timers who remember his father, the great railroad builder and financier, still think of the present head of the family as a boy. But before he was thirty he had proved himself a man of great administrative ability in his own right. The great shipbuilding plant which he constructed during the war was his first single handed entry into the world of affairs. Since then he has proved himself a sound and farseeing business man in many directions.

Already under "young" Harriman's direction, the administration of NRA is shaping itself more to the liking of those who come under its jurisdiction.

DAVIS AND AGRICULTURE

Much the same sort of thing can be said for the new management of the AAA under C. C. Davis, successor to George Peek as the manager of the Government's relations with agriculture. Some of the agricultural groups, at least, seem better satisfied, though there still is the probability of some sharp clashes between the AAA and the milk co-ops.

There is an acute realization here, even among the President's strongest supporters, that the Administration's program is not quite as popular with everybody as the earlier absence of criticism led many to believe.

The first real show of opposition to the Roosevelt policies is beginning to make itself felt. The result of this, serious in some quarters, will be a letting-up in the pressure to put some of the more radical social reforms into immediate effect. It is also having an effect upon Congressional thinking which will be reflected in Congressional acts between now and adjournment.

Congress is far more conservative, left to itself, than the President is. So long as Congressmen got reports from their districts indicating that the people were unanimously behind the President, they felt that they were on. In doing their duty to their constituents in accepting everything that came from the White House without question.

THE PICTURE CHANGES

Now many of them are getting a somewhat different picture from the home districts, and the tendency is to listen to advice from other quarters and make their own decisions as to what to do about such things as amending the securities act so as to make it easier for industry to finance itself, modifying the stock exchange bill so as not to cripple legitimate trade in securities, and scrutinizing such proposals as the compulsory five day, six-hours-a-day proposed in the GOOD printing service consists of more than delivering a certain amount of ink and paper in the form ordered. much-heralded Wagner bill.

The outlook is that the stock exchange bill and securities act amendments will be passed before adjournment, which is now tentatively talked of as around May 15th. There may, also, come out of the legislative mill some new inflation measure, such as the Dies silver bill which provides for acceptance of silver at a premium in payment of farm exports.

In short, Congress is in a temper now to resume its prerogatives as a co-ordinate branch of the Government. It mustered strength enough to re-enact the Federal offices and veterans compensation bill over the President's veto, and the skies didn't fall. It may take the bit in its teeth and bolt, but that is hardly likely if as is anticipated, the pressure from the White House is relaxed and the general feeling of the folks back home is still one of the admiration for the President. And nothing as yet indicates that there is not a pretty large majority of the people who still feel that way.

FEDERAL RELIEF CONTINUES
The ending of the CWA does not mean the end of Federal relief for those in distress. But the new policies to be pursued under the $550,000,000 available for aid to those in need will not be disbursed haphazard, but the effort is to be made, according to H. L. Hopkins, administrator of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, to spend this money where it will put the recipients on the way to self-maintenance.

For this purpose, the needy of the nation have been classified into groups, rural, "stranded" and urban. Rural relief is expected to take the form of landless, homeless, cashless farmers and set him in business again with a piece of land with adequate equipment for maintenance and intelligent supervision and instruction to enable him to gain at least a livelihood from the soil.

The so-called "stranded" people are those who have been left high and dry by the shifting of industries away from the centers where they formerly worked, and the substitution of machinery for man-power. The program for relief is to set them up, as far as possible, on subsistence homesteads, some growing industrial centers, where they may be expected to be doing some time in the future. Means they, also, will be put in the way of self-supporting when their jobs.

REAL WORK NOW

In cities the relief program is expected to be under state direction, most instances. It will be carried out somewhat on the lines of the CWA, except that the work to be done will be paid for in a twenty-four hour week for each worker, will be either purely necessary public work or in operation with private industry. The molition of unfit habitations under the spreading slum clearance program and the building of modern homes for the poor in their place is one of the important phases of this relief program.
