Secondly: I want to thank this paper for the publicity you gave our campaign, when we realize the numerous calls of this kind made upon the press.

Thirdly: I want to thank the local chairman, the treasurer, all the faithful workers who were responsible for putting the campaign across.

OSCEOLA MAN DIES AS AUTO GOES IN LAKE

William Soyke, about 45, Town of Osceola farmer, drowned at 9:30 a. m. Saturday when his automobile plunged into eight feet of water in Schrauth's pond, also known as Lake Bernice, northwest of here.

Soyke was dead before rescuers who heard his cries for help could reach him. The automobile was found about four car lengths from shore.

Soyke had spent the early morning shopping in Campbellsport and later went to the Schrauth grist mill near the lake to have grain ground. Persons at Campbellsport said that Soyke was a stranger at the mill and that he apparently was unacquainted with the hilly winding road which leads around the lake.

After leaving the mill he drove approximately 100 feet to the west to a wide spot in the road where he intended to turn around. He apparently lost control and the car went off the road and plunged into the lake. The roadway is about seven feet from the shore.

Persons fishing on the opposite shore of the lake heard Soyke call for help as the car plunged into the lake. Irving Dieringer hurried to his car and started for the scene of the accident. He had about a mile to drive.

William Wilke, also fishing on the lake, ran to the scene, while John F. Schrauth, owner of the grist mill, was attracted by the man's cries. Mrs. Walter Meyer also was a witness.

Nearly a half hour had elapsed before the rescuers could reach the car. They found the window on the driver's side open and pulled Soyke out through the door. Efforts to revive him were futile.

Coroner S. B. Mahoney and Under-sheriff G. W. Booth announced there would be no inquest.

The car was dragged from the lake after the arrival of officials.

The dead man is survived by his widow, four children and two brothers, Emil and Al, both residing near Campbellsport—Fond du Lac Commonwealth-Reporter of Saturday, May 5.

CONFESSES HAVING KIDNAPING RANSOM

Chicagoan Is Trapped in the Bremer Case.

Chicago.—With the confession of John J. McLaughlin that he had handled $53,000 of the $200,000 ransom paid for the release of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, who was kidnaped last January, federal authorities in Chicago moved for the speedy removal of McLaughlin and three other alleged co-conspirators to St. Paul. The federal grand jury in St. Paul was asked to return indictments charging the four with participating in the kidnaping of Bremer.

In the meanwhile federal agents were searching for two men who are supposed to have participated in the actual kidnaping of Bremer. These men are Arthur (Doc) Barker and Alvin Karpis, ex-convicts from Oklahoma and members of John Dillinger's band of outlaws, who have been sought as the kidnapers for several months. The federal warrants in which McLaughlin and the three other men in custody are charged with conspiracy to obtain money in the Bremer kidnaping also name a John Doe and Richard Doe, who are believed to be Barker and Karpis.

The announcement that McLaughlin, ex-legislator and former Democratic politician of considerable influence, had confessed to handling part of the ransom money was made by Melvin Purvis, chief of the Department of Justice agents in the Chicago area. At the same time Mr. Purvis revealed that Philip Delaney, thirty-four years old, said to have been until recently a bartender in a loop hotel, was arrested with McLaughlin.

The other two men held by the government are William Vidler and McLaughlin's son, John McLaughlin, Jr. When Vidler was arrested, $2,000 of the marked ransom money was found in his possession. Young McLaughlin had only $85 of the ransom money in a safe deposit box, according to McLaughlin's attorney.

Federal agents said that they did not believe McLaughlin or any of the three other men participated in the actual kidnaping of Bremer.

Madison—The civil conservation corps camps, which have taken many young men out of unfavorable social environments, are believed to have been a big factor in a recent decline of the population at the Wisconsin state reformatory at Green Bay. The fact that the number of reformatory inmates dropped from 811 to 527 in the last 12 months is seen by the University of Wisconsin extension service as evidence of a social change affecting young men.

SENATE'S AIR MAIL MEASURE IS REJECTED

House Committee Insists on Its Own Plan.

Washington.—Further legislative strife over the air mail arose when the house post office committee rejected the senate bill and approved its own scheme for a temporary one-year agreement.

Striking out much of the McKellar-Black measure passed by the senate, the house group endorsed a draft authorizing the postmaster general to award contracts for not more than one year to the lowest bidder.

The senate's prohibition against accepting bids from companies whose contracts were recently canceled was stricken out by the house committee. The house group also eliminated the senate's provision for giving broad powers of control over the air mail to the Interstate Commerce commission.

Sponsored by Representative Mead, New York Democrat, chairman of the committee, the house bill would set up a special aviation commission as called for by the senate, but would make its membership five instead of seven.

This commission under both bills would be appointed by the President to survey and report to the next congress its recommendations for a broad policy regarding all phases of aviation. The house draft is understood to be closer to the views of the White House than the senate's bill.

Mead was instructed to seek a special rule to bring up the bill for action as early as possible.

SAYS LABOR MUST HAVE 30-HOUR WEEK

Green's Demand Carries a Threat of Force.

Washington.—Organized labor must force a 30-hour week on American industry even if widespread strikes are necessary to achieve that end, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared in an appeal to all workers.

Green's threat of open industrial warfare came a few hours after President Roosevelt apparently had refused to support the Connery bill legislating a 30-hour week for all industry.

As his reason for demanding a shorter work week, Green pointed out that there are 10,000,000 workers still unemployed. Even if all industries not yet under codes are eventually brought under them, the resulting re-employment, Green declared, will not soak up these workers.

The 30-hour week is the only answer, Green affirmed, adding that it must be achieved by "forceful methods if necessary."

"It is the opinion of labor," Green said, "that a further substantial reduction in the hours of labor must be brought about immediately."

"The drive against unemployment has proceeded in the theory that it could be overcome only through a reduction in the hours of labor and through increases in wages."

"That rule has been followed by those in charge of the administration of the national recovery act in the origination and application of industrial codes of fair practice."

"Both the President and General Johnson realized this economic fact when they recently recommended that the representatives of industry agree to a substantial reduction in the hours of labor and a further increase in wages."

"The employers of labor definitely refused to comply with this request. Labor believes that notwithstanding this refusal a concentrated drive should now be made to compel, through the use of forceful methods if necessary, an immediate reduction in the hours of labor."

"There is no other remedy available. There is none at hand. Industrial leaders, while assuming a negative position opposing a further reduction in the hours of labor in order to overcome unemployment, offer no plan or suggest no practical measure through which the remaining 10,000,000 workers can be given employment."

Leading spokesmen for a substantial part of American industry as represented in the Durable Goods Industries committee, created at the behest of the national recovery administrator, delivered a detailed report of blunt opposition to the Roosevelt administration's program of a general increase in wages and reduction of work hours.

"The committee believes that any further general increase in wages at this time would retard and not encourage recovery," said the report, which was transmitted to General Johnson. "It is the committee's firm belief that in the durable good industries, where purchases can be postponed indefinitely, further increases in costs and resultant increased selling prices would tend to reduce the volume of sales and employment."

MYSTERY AT RABBIT HILL

By R. H. WILKINSON

THE mystery at Rabbit Hill lasted but a week.

Yet its brevity served to detract not at all from the atmosphere of glamour and excitement and heavy intrigue which it created.

Mysteries are not common in our town of Medway.

Those of us who abide here the greater part of the time live a mediocre life, a life of routine that scarcely, if ever, deviates from the path of normality.

Hence, mystery, brief though it may be, logical and disappointing though the solution, because of its sheer incongruity in our staid old town, is something to talk about.

Our mystery occurred two months ago.

The Taylor Winslows, who have occupied the big white house on Rabbit Hill for generations back, departed one bright June morning for an extended motor tour of the White mountains and Canada.

Toward dusk of the same day an automobile containing four people swung into the Winslow's drive and stopped just outside the garage door.

The car was a roadster and two of its four occupants, a man and a woman, occupied the rumble seat.

The four people in the automobile had driven far and were weary. The present setting was a far cry from the city home they had quitted several hours before.

It was restful here and cool. They remained in the car for a quarter-hour or more, conscious of the magic spell of peace and quiet that enfolded them, and thankful for it.

Presently the man in the rumble seat stirred and sat erect.

"Let's go inside, Bob. It's getting cold, and there's a fireplace in there."

At the exact moment he uttered the words the young man was conscious of an unexplainable sensation of weirdness.

For no reason whatever he found himself staring into the darkness beyond the car; he sensed, he thought, a mysterious presence other than that of his companions.

The youth looked at the girl. Her eyes were open and her face had assumed an attitude of listening.

Those in front were rigid and still. The crescent moon had disappeared behind the pines.

It was dark and deathly still. The young man who had spoken uttered a laugh that somehow lacked in mirth, and at the exact moment the sound left his lips something neither soft nor hard yet seemingly malleable crashed against his head.

He reeled, groaned, instinctively lifted up his arm, only to have it beaten down.

One of the girls screamed, and then the other.

The young man at the wheel swore, and pressed his foot against the starter button.

The roadster leaped ahead, disappeared inside the open door of the garage and stopped.

Ten minutes later the village telephone operator had summoned Medway's police chief from his regular evening beat in response to an urgent summons. Chief Tom Carmody clamped the switchboard receivers over his head.

"Hello," came a voice. "Chief Carmody? This is Bob Winslow. I'm up at Taylor's place on Rabbit Hill. Come up right away, will you? Somebody's hurt!"

Chief Carmody, who himself was not immune to a little excitement now and again to relieve the monotony of a law-abiding community, made short work of the two miles to Rabbit Hill.

He listened to Bob Winslow's account of what had happened, examined the wound on Harry Carter's head, made mental note of the frightened expressions on the faces of the two women, and, flashlight and gun in hand, went out to investigate.

After ten minutes' time Bob Winslow began to wonder what had happened to the chief, and when another ten minutes had passed without word from him, went himself to investigate.

Bob found the chief lying in the drive before the garage, a nasty wound on his head, his sensibilities departed.

pointed a special officer to guard Winslow estate.

But nothing of an unforeseen nature occurred throughout the night.

Toward dusk Bertha Winslow's wife, became uneasy, and when they all return to Boston.

But both Bob and Harry were staying on.

They wanted to get at the bottom of the mystery.

By this time all Medway was over the strange happenings.

As darkness descended folks began to gather in little groups, before the house, as if expecting some phenomenon to take place.

It was close to ten o'clock when of the spectators, disbelievingly from Chief Carmody, ventured over the yard on a tour of inspection.

Five minutes after he had appeared the watching populace began to groan and, rushing to the spot, eyed the curious person crouching through the shrubbery as if petrified.

He had, he avowed, been attending the dog following, a special was organized and a thorough made of the Winslow grounds buildings.

But not a particle of evidence might lead to a solution of the mystery was uncovered.

It was all very strange and mysterious, providing Medway natives enough material for novel creation to last them for months to come.

On the third night the posses maimed on guard at different points on the premises.

And despite their studious vigilance two of their number were struck by the same mysterious force.

The townfolk were becoming alarmed.

Bob Winslow and his friends shared grave concern.

Chief Carmody was puzzled and a little angered by it all.

There was, he said, absolutely nothing to work on.

In all his 20 years' experience as police officer he had had nothing like this nature to contend with.

People began reciting tales of ghost and weird happenings; stories of ghouls and vampires and lost souls.

All in all they created quite an atmosphere of unreality, an atmosphere augmented by the actual unexplained assaults on at least five persons by a strange mystery force that came of the darkness and disappeared without leaving a single telltale mark.

Another two days passed and other guard was assaulted.

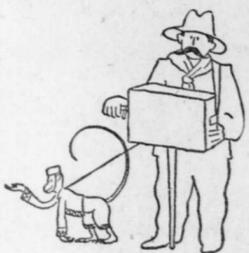

Chief Carmody, in accord with his own wishes and those of Bob Winslow, was on the point of summoning outside aid to solve the mystery when Taylor and his wife one afternoon drove into the yard and got about in bewildered fashion a crowd of people and half-dozen guards posted about the place.

HINTS ON HOW TO BAKE CAKES

Texture and Flavor Almost Equally Important.

By EDITH M. BARBER

BAKE is a large term. Tradition says that the Italians developed sweet breads, which eventually became cake and pastry as we know them today.

They cake is on the menus of almost every household. Many women still make cakes as regularly on Saturday as they market for the week-end.

When a cake is done it will, of course, be light brown, and will shrink from the sides of the pan; it will spring back when pressed with the finger, and will not "sing." If a cake is brown and yet still "sings" turn out the fire, but leave the cake in the oven a few minutes more.

Turn the pan upside down on a cake cooler or wire rack and allow it to come out of the pan without any assistance.

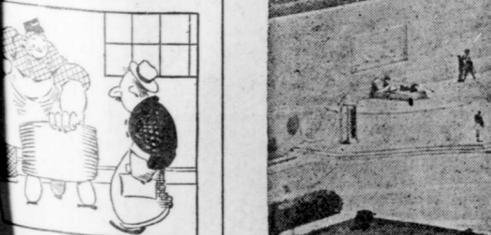

Standard Buttery Cake. 2 cups cake or pastry flour 3 teaspoons baking powder 1/2 teaspoon salt 1/2 cup butter 1 cup sugar 2 eggs 3/4 cup milk 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Mix and sift flour with baking powder. Turn the pan upside down on a cake cooler or wire rack and allow it to come out of the pan without any assistance.

PERPETUAL. The yolks and whites of eggs are separated separately. The texture of the cake will be lighter. If beaten together the texture will be closer, but the cake will keep moist longer.

GERMPROOF. Are you sure your place is germ proof? Dead sure. I give it the germ test.

HAS NATION TO LEARN TO PLAY?

Leisure Problem From New Point of View.

The use of leisure, as most of us are aware, is the final test of civilization. When, therefore, a gentleman like John W. Davis expresses the fear, as he did a short time ago, that less than eight hours of work a day will lead to the demoralization of the American people he is impugning their capacity for the mass to pass this test.

However, there can be no question that the NRA program substantially to reduce the hours of toil for an entire population while providing every one with a living wage, will, if successful, present an immediate problem. It is perfectly true that the American people, considered as a whole, do not now know how to play.

Print With Plain Is Style Formula

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THAT new style formula which calls for gay print combined with a monotone weave is taking the world of fashion by storm. The idea has so captivated designers they are working their imagination overtime in order to play up dramatically to this challenge to their genius. The three fetching costumes in the illustration tell an eloquent story in regard to this new and thrilling print-and-plain movement.

Let us consider first the perfectly charming model in the center. It requires genuine artistry to produce anything like this. The manner in which the daisy motif of the print is worked to relieve a straight waistline and to unify blouse and skirt is nothing less than a stroke of genius. The lining of the jacket which, by the way, reflects the very fashionable coolie-coat influence is also of the daisy print. White gloves, a navy hat and pocketbook and navy shoes carry a last word style message.

Did you think it a redingote ensemble—the costume to the left in the picture? It does look the part, we will admit, but in reality it is a voguish one-piece dress of navy sheer with a swish of startling print dashing its way down the entire front of the frock. The collar may be worn open to show revers. Of course you have made mental note of the jaunty little white Breton sailor which this fashionable young woman is wearing. The wee feather brings just the right color note to this nobby headpiece.

Surprise number one is that the costume to the left is not a redingote ensemble and now for surprise number two which is to the effect that the costume to the right in the group is just that—a redingote model. This redingote of unusual styling buttons at one shoulder and down the side under the arm. While it looks as if it might be a one-piece dress it is really an entirely separate item and can be worn as a coat with any frock. A black sheer fabric fashions it and it tops a print crepe gown in yellow and black. Her black Milan straw Breton sailor is definitely chic.

So high does enthusiasm run for this alliance of print and a solid color you will find all sorts of neckwear fancies and accessories to wear with your one-color dresses made of gay Mexican and Roman-stripe or plaid prints. The new bib collars with cuffs to match are animated with cunning pleatings and bright buttons. Plaistrons of print silk which cover the entire front of the bodice and are tied about the waist are quite the rage. Try one of these with that navy or black frock which calls for a freshening spring touch. You will be elated to see what one of these neckwear sets of startling print can do to a hitherto somber frock.

Here's another suggestion, why not a boutonniere with gloves to match of multi-colored or checked print to wear with your spring tailored suit? Perhaps an audacious plaid or stripe scarf tied in a huge bow to wear with your navy or brown swagger suit is more to your liking. By the way, had you heard about the increasing popularity of brown prints? This movement is worth watching. Many of these smart brown prints are patterned with lovely fresh spring yellows and vivid orange with a dash of pure white.

STRIPE VELVET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Summer velvets are proving a great attraction to the style-conscious woman who is looking for the newest and the smartest materials. It can readily be seen from this picture that summer velvet in two-color stripe makes an exceedingly smart swapper sports coat. You can visualize this in navy and white or brown and beige or other combinations, for this most desirable velvet comes in various color alliances. The hat is trimmed, in a most effective manner, with a two-color velvet ribbon.

NUN INFLUENCE IN PLAYTIME STYLES

Playtime costumes for modish moderns recalling the habits of cloistered nuns have stepped upon the fashion stage as a novel note in spring fashions.

Though the black dinner costumes were lightened by gayer touches than a nun ever donned, and gold necklaces and earrings brightened the ensemble, the long-sleeved dinner frocks with demure high necks, the halo hats worn by the mannequins, the serenity of their faces and walk, lent a touch of the habit worn by the French "religieuse."

Madame Lanvin showed a long-sleeved, high-necked dinner gown of scarlet red crepe with an instep length black faille coat and a black halo hat. The mannequin, whose hair was swept serenely back from her face, wore two great gold ball earrings and a belt of golden nail heads. Another striking costume combined a long-sleeved frock of black lace, a long black faille coat and hat.

Manish Lines Disappear in Latest Spring Suits

Femininity is the essence of that new spring suit.

Though a trimly tailored effect of simplicity is still the rule, the hard manish line in vogue for several seasons has been tossed on fashion's scrap heap. Wools are often a little softer, silhouettes look less as though they had been sketched by hard black crayon on white paper, accessories such as golden small or silver seashell fastenings are decidedly feminine.

Metal-Threaded Organdy

Organdy gowns, woven with metal threads or splashed with shimmering sequins, are designed with full sweeping hems which billow about the wearer's feet.

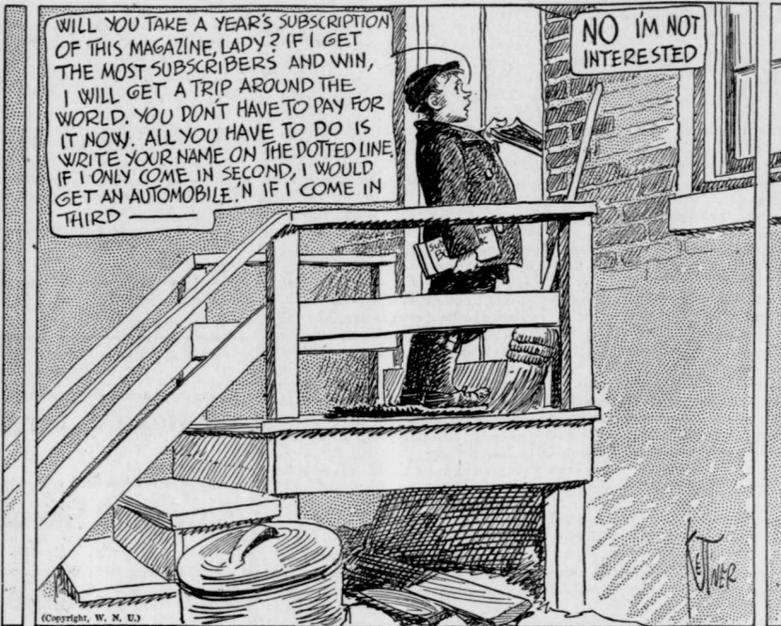

Ideas About Spring Styles Briefly Told

Buttoned-at-back treatments have a prewar favor. Square, padded, exaggerated shoulders are no longer seen. Formal spring evening frocks have waist-length or hip-length capes. Flower-trimmed necklines are very gay and fluttering and springlike. There is a marked tendency toward crisp materials for day and evening wear.

Lace tailor-made dance frocks are high fashion. Sports suits appear in crisp linens and piques brightened by colorful accents. Purples and helios are being featured as fashionable colors in summer fabrics. Vera Borea will be famous this year as the originator of clips and buttons made of real sea shells.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

BY MICHAEL K. REILLY, M. C.

The House spent the past week in consideration of the Rayburn Bill for the regulation of stock exchanges.

The bill passed the House on Friday by a vote of 280 for and 89 against. Party lines were split, eleven Democrats voting against the bill, and twenty-two Republicans and four Far-Left laborites for the bill.

The bill passed on Friday is designed to bring about Governmental supervision and control of the Stock Exchanges in this country. There is a general feeling on the part of millions of our citizens that our Stock Exchanges while necessary institutions in our commercial and industrial life, are run too much in the interests of those engaged in the Stock Exchange business. The Rayburn bill is not intended to interfere with the legitimate functioning of our Stock Exchanges, but it is intended to prevent Stock Exchange practices that are considered detrimental to the general public.

While the writer voted for the Rayburn bill, he did not approve all of the provisions of the bill. He believed that legislation for the control of our Stock Exchanges should not be attempted in any one bill, but that certain outstanding evils should be corrected at this time, and that other evils left for the consideration of future Congresses.

The bill as passed by the House, provides for the regulation of the Stock Exchanges by the Federal Trades Commission, and the successful operation of the Rayburn bill, if it finally becomes a law, will depend upon its same administration, by the Federal Trades Commission.

The writer has confidence in the Federal Trades Commission, and believes that it will be the policy of the Commission to make such rules and regulations for the control of the Stock Exchanges as will be in the interests, not only of the Exchanges themselves, but also of the general public.

On the hearings had on this bill, many members of the Stock Exchanges of the country, appeared and advocated regulation by the Government of these bodies. While the Stock Exchanges have done much in the past two years to clean their own door-steps, the general opinion seems to be that in order to accomplish the desired results, in the control of Stock Exchanges, it was necessary to write the Rayburn bill, or some similar bill in the statute laws of our country.

Of course, informed people understand that the Stock Exchanges of the country, were more or less responsible for the accentuation of the panic that began in 1929. As a result of practices permitted on the Stock Exchanges, the country was fed with a lot of false propaganda regarding stock values, with the result that the country simply went on a wild stock buying spree and our citizens suffered a loss of probably $50,000,000,000. This huge monetary loss has meant much to the buying power of the country.

About a year ago, or at the last session of Congress, there was a bill passed for the control and regulation of the security business in this country. That was the first step taken by Congress to bring the sale of securities and the operation of our stock markets under Government control and regulation.

There is a decided difference of opinion as to how the securities law has worked. Its friends say that it has accomplished the purpose for which it was written, and its opponents say that it has interfered with the free flow of capital with the result that industrial operations have been curtailed and recovery interfered with. This interference with business they claim, has been the result of two drastic criminal penalties, provided for violation of the law.

There are several bills pending in Congress at the present time, to amend the Rayburn Securities Bill so as to tone down the penalties provided by this law. The principal purpose of the Rayburn Stock and Bond Bill was to require corporations or individuals contemplating the issuing of stock, to file with the Government at Washington, truthful statements, giving full information to the buying people, as to the institutions or persons whose bonds or stocks were to be offered for sale to the public.

It has been estimated that during the four or five years prior to the panic in 1929, $50,000,000,000 worth of bonds and stocks were sold to the American people, and at least $25,000,000,000.00 of such stocks and bonds have turned out to be worthless. Now, the Rayburn Stock and Bond Bill is intended to stop the sales of such stocks and bonds, in the future by requiring companies intending to issue stocks and bonds, to tell the truth to the people, about the financial setup of said companies. The idea being that if the people knew the truth, they would not buy such stocks and bonds.

One object of the legislation passed on Friday last, is to keep money out of the stock markets, so that business and industry can be properly financed. During 1929, and for several years previous, so much money flowed into the stock markets, that it was said there was not enough left for legitimate industry and business in the country. So, in regulating the stock market, Congress is trying to do something to regulate the amount of money that is to be used in speculation and thereby help business in general by leaving more money to finance general business.

FARM FIRE PROTECTION

In order to ascertain the experience and value of city or village fire departments responding to farm fire calls, we sent out a questionnaire to all fire chiefs of the state.

Reports received so far give a record of 1,540 such fires during the years 1932 and 1933.

In 602 of these fires enough of the building on fire at the time of the arrival of the department was saved so that it could be repaired.

In 802 additional cases the building in which the fire originated was destroyed, but the fire was kept from spreading to other buildings.

In 135 cases the fire spread to other buildings before the department arrived.

These reports show that in 1,405 cases the fire was confined to the buildings in which it originated, and further show substantial salvage on buildings of origin.

Nothing could show more clearly the great value of farm fire protection by regular city, village and community fire departments.

Established and well-equipped departments can give such protection within a radius of seven miles, and it is up to town boards or individual farmers to make mutually satisfactory business arrangements for such service.

There are in Wisconsin many unincorporated villages, hamlets and thickly settled communities where it would pay to organize and equip fire departments in charge of a few well-trained men.

One volunteer chief prepared a large map, drawn to scale, on which are shown approximately 500 sets of farm buildings, which his department protects, on call. All highways and their construction and condition are indicated on the map. The farms are numbered. On a card index pertinent facts concerning each farm are recorded, particularly available water supply. The particular card is studied on the way to the fire so that the information gathered is fresh in the mind of the chief, and a plan of procedure can be mapped out.

The farmer must practice fire prevention, should have some first aid fire-fighting equipment and should make arrangements for protection by regular departments.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION

Hatcheries under the code are now required to use eggs that weigh at least 15-6 ounces a piece, and average at least 23 ounces to the dozen.

The Senate spent the past week, on the air-mail bill which it passed, on the consideration of the tax bill conference report, which it agreed to, and in consideration and passing the Corporate Bankruptcy Bill, known as the Wilcox Bill, passed by the House at the last session of Congress.

I take it that the reader will be interested in this Corporate Bankruptcy Bill, which really is a bill permitting municipalities to go into bankruptcy. Under the Bankruptcy law as it stands today, a municipality cannot, like an individual or a partnership, go into bankruptcy court, for the purpose of turning over to the Court, all partnership and individual property, in full satisfaction of debts.

This bill was very much opposed, particularly by the individuals, corporations and institutions that own municipal securities. Many of our municipalities are heavily bonded. It is estimated that there are about $20,000,000,000 of municipal bonds in existence today, and that many citizens are unable, at the present time, and perhaps will never be able to pay their bonded debts in full. This new law will give such cities, through court proceedings an opportunity to arrange compromise settlements with their bond creditors.

While an individual can go into bankruptcy, if he owes a certain amount in debts, without consulting his creditors and get rid of all of his debts, providing he turns all of his property over to the Court, under the Corporate Bankruptcy Bill, no attempt on the part of the City to get rid of its debts or to compromise its debts can be put over, unless the proposal is agreed to by 75 per cent of the people who hold the cities' bonds.

Of course, such a thing as a municipality going into bankruptcy has never been thought of before, but we are living in a day and age when we find it necessary to do a great many things never thought of before.

Nobody knows just how this bill will operate. It is feared that many cities that can pay their bonded indebtedness will take advantage of the law, but it will not do the city any good unless 75 per cent of the people who hold its bonds agree to accept the offer made by the city in settlement of its indebtedness. Of course, this law will probably have an unfortunate effect upon municipal financing, at least for some time. People may not be disposed to buy municipal securities, when the municipality has a right to go into bankruptcy.

The writer is of the opinion that because of the provision of the law, requiring that a city's offer of settlement must be approved by the owners of 75 per cent of the city's bonds, before such offer of settlement can go through any city that is really able to take care of its bonded indebtedness will be prevented from escaping such obligations, through the machinery set-up by this law.
