CITY TEAM WINS FOURTH STRAIGHT

The Kewaskum city basketball team won its fourth straight game last Sunday night by defeating Port Washington on the latter's floor by a score of 26 to 23 in a tight game. The score at halftime was Kewaskum 12; Port Wa-

Port was first to score, getting four dazed the crowd with a speedy spurt which netted them nine points while Port was held scoreless. From then on Kewaskum held the lead until the third quarter when the home team again pulled ahead 16 to 15. This was only momentarily as Kewaskum speedily egained the lead and held it until the final whistle ended the fray. The maabsent for the first semester: Allen jority of the game was played with the two teams being but two or three points apart at the most.

Both teams missed an abundance of shots and free throws. Port made 3 out made but 4 out of 14. Eighteen fouls were called by Referee Conway; 10 on Port Washington and S on the locals. Lecher of Port was the only man ousted from the floor on fouls.

Morauski, scoring eight points, and the Yankunas brothers played good ball for Port while Marx played a stellar game for the locals, "Mix" scored

About 40 local fans accompanied the team to Port Washington and their loyal support and lusty cheering did much to help inspire the boys in their ium. A capacity crowd is expected this coming Sunday night when the firstplace Cedarburg Turners come to Kedisputed first place. Kewaskum has won one and lost one game with Ceplace Kewaskum going strong and a this game should easily be the best of the season. Dab of This and That Often Makes Tasty Dish.

By EDITH M. BARBER

SOME housekeepers have a prejudice against leftovers. I do not share and thick. Add the cheese, cut into this feeling. I actually welcome them. Nothing is more fun than to find in the refrigerator a dab of this and a dab of that and to combine them with the help of a few eggs, some white sauce and a few bread crumbs, which may themselves be a leftover, and to evolve a completely new dish.

There are any number of dishes whose names suggest special delicacies and which can be made from leftovers. I am speaking of timbales and souffles which demand a foundation of soft bread crumbs and milk or a white sauce combined with eggs and strained fish. You may even use mixed vegetables or a combination of vegetables with the last pickings from the fowl or roast.

Then there are those scalloped dishes which may be made from any leftover materials placed in alternate layers with buttered crumbs in a greased baking dish. White sauce or tomato juice may be used to moisten them if you like, and I must not forget croquettes which have a very thick, well-seasoned white sauce for their

Be sure to chill your croquette mixture before you attempt to mold it into little ovramids or rolls which are then dipped in sifted dry bread crumbs, beaten eggs and crumbs again. I particulariy like sweet or white potato croquettes because this is such a good use for mashed potatoes when you may have supplied too liberally. These are merely moistened with egg, seasoned with onion juice and parsley, if you have some on hand, before they are crumbed and fried in deep fat.

To Out-Herod Herod

N THE old morality plays King Herod was always depicted as cruel and ferocious and to exceed even him in violence one had to be indeed inhuman.

The expression to out-Herod Herod owes its origin to Shakespeare who used it in scene two of the third act of Hamlet, that famous scene where Hamlet gives advice to the players. We find it so: Hamlet:

"Speak the speech, I pray you, as pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently . . . O, it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb-shows and noise; I would have such a fellow whipped for o'erdoing Termagent; it out-Herods Herod;; pray you, avoid it."

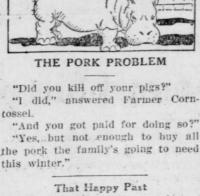

Spectacles Collection Feature of Hobby Show

Boston, Mass.-One of the most interesting displays at the first New England Hobby Collectors' show was that of Dr. C. G. Berger, a collector of old spectacles.

His exhibit included the goldrimmed glasses worn by President Taft's grandmother. Doctor Berger also showed spectacles that were made of wood, some that were tied over and under the ear, a few that were held in place by springs which pressed cork pads against the temples, and still others that had two extra lenses to be, swung into place when the wearer wished to read.

Brisbane Coe, Archer's believed to have left for e previous afternoon, but dy is discovered in a closet home. Vance interrogates in the back, as in Archer's thread attached to a bent darning needle.

I suspected from Wrede's manner he had found his Latin rival with young woman. There was probbly a most painful scene, and poor rede was given his conge. It's very ad. He doesn't like Grassi-he doesn't' at all like him. But I doubt if he eally suspects him of killing Archer though I'm sure Wrede doesn't put it

"That's easy," snorted Heath. "Two good men can do that in a few hours.

"And," added Vance, "you might give this house another search. I'm dashed interested in a blunt instrument that might have been used for striking Archer and the wee Scottie. I noticed that in the fire set in the living room everything was intact in the rack but the poker."

Heath nodded. "I get you, sir. If there's a poker in this house, I'll lay hands on it."

"Stout fella!" Vance continued toward the front door.

"And speaking of dogs, sir," Heath added, "that guy Wrede told me he was very fond of the animals. Owned one before he moved." "Ah!" Vance paused, "Did he mention the breed?" "It was a Doberman Pinscher," Markham informed him.

"Now, that's deuced interestin', y' know," Vance murmured. "Be so good, Sergeant, as to have the bolt on Archer's door fixed while we're lunching. I'll want it in perfect working order when I return." The sergeant grinned broadly. "So that's on your mind, is it? . . . Sure, Pll have it fixed."

We walked through the invigorating autumn air to a small French restaurant in West Seventy-second street near the Drive. Vance talked at length of dogs in general and of Scottish terriers in particular. Finally he smiled waggishly at Markham.

"I know I'm boring you. But you've been thinking much too strenuously all the forenoon. Your brain needs a little relaxation-and what could be more soporific than my cackle about dogs? . . . And while I'm on the subject, I want to tell you, Markham, that the little wounded Scottle Gamble discovered behind the library portieres is a beautiful specimen of what a Scottle should be. Poor little devil. She certainly didn't deserve that wound, and I hope she'll have her revenge by helping us find the murderer. I think I'll phone and see how she's getting along."

He went out and returned shortly to the table. He looked more cheerful "The doctor says she's not as badly hurt as he thought at first. She's eating. No fever. Be pretty normal by

He took another sip of wine, "And that means that I'll be pretty busy tomorrow. Pil have to visit the American Kennel club and perhaps interview a few Scottle judges." "I can't see the connection-" Mark-

"But there is a connection," insisted Vance. "It is no coincidence that a wounded dog is in a strange hostile house at the exact time of a murder. And it's reasonable to assume that it was admitted to the house by the muridentally or f pese. In either case it will be a definite clew. The ownership of the dogand especially the address of the owner-will give us something pretty definite to work from. The migrations of the dog last night will throw much light on the movements of the person who came to the Coe house. From the dog's presence we may argue several very interestin' and illuminatin' possibilities. First, that the dog did not arrive before the murderer, because Archer would have thrown her out-" "Put Archer might have been the person who injured her." "If he had, he would not have le. her behind the curtain beside the IIbrary door; he would have thrown her down the front steps to the street.

"But Brisbane?" "Ah! If it had been Brisbane, then the dog was already in the house, or else she followed him in. If she was in the house and it was he who injured her, he was killed at almost the same instant; for if he had been able to, he, like Archer, would have put the dog outside. Therefore, in case the dog was there and Brisbane injured her, then it follows that the murderer didn't see her or left her there with some definite purpose in mind. As for the dog having followed Brisbane in, I think it highly unlikely. Dogs do not sneak in front doors between strangers' legs-" "But she followed some one in, obviously." Markham argued, "-unless, of course, she was deliberately brought

"That is true," Vance admitted, "and that is a point that puzzles me. She might have followed some one-even a stranger-into the house, provided he had left the door open; but the murderer would scarcely have left the front door open-in fact, I imagine he would have taken pains to shut it securely. And the vicious injury given the dog seems to indicate that her presence in the house was not deliberate-that, in fact, the person who found her was surprised and, perhaps, frightened. Being afraid he would be seen if he turned her out, he acted impulsively and sought to kill her lest she should start barking and attract attention. My conclusion is that the dog's presence was not discovered until after the murder." "Your reasoning is clear enough," Markham told him, "but I don't see in what way it is helpful to us."

"It eliminates certain possibilities; it narrows down certain movements of the murderer; and it leads to a specific interpretation of the two crimes-the murder of Archer and the marder of Brisbane."

"Forgive me if I cannot follow your esoteric ratiocinations." "Perpend, Markham." Vance was genially patient. "It is highly unlikely -not to say impossible-that the dog could have followed any one in the front door without being seen. If she had been deliberately admitted, she would probably have not been injured and left behind the portieres. Therefore, in view of the various factors tered the house through an open door. | confused me abominably. Both the room and into the library." Markham nodded slowly. "Yes. All that is quite reasonable. But, after all, anyone could have come in the rear door."

"Provided he knew the lie of the land, was familiar with all the domestic arrangements-and could have obtained a key. Also, provided he knew that all the servants would be away that night."

Vance looked up thoughtfully. "Yes, Markham, already that little Scottie has narrowed down our investigation. Unwittingly she has pointed out several valuable clews to us. She has helped us, no end. And I have a feelin' she's going to tell us a lot more."

It was about half-past three when we returned to the Coe house. The sergeant was bustling about, giving

"I've got something for you, sir." He swaggered a little as he led us into the library and pointed to the large center table, "There's the poker -and it's got blood on it." Vance went up to it and examined it closely. He picked something from it between his thumb and forefinger, and went to the window. "Yes, there's dried blood on it-and also a coarse brindle hair." He turned and nodded. "It was this poker, Markham, which wounded the Scottie. And undoubtedly, too, Archer Coe was struck with this poker. The shape of its blunt end coincides perfectly with the wound on Archer's head." He frowned and looked at the vase in which he had found the bloodstains. "And, Markham, that poker belongs in this room-in that rack beside the fireplace, just in front of the place on this divan where Archer Coe was sitting when Gamble went out last night. More evidence that something sinister and horrible preceded the crime upstairs. And it took place in this room." "And," argued Markham, doggedly, the lights on, and the door bolted on the inside." "Yeah," supplemented Heath, "and with a gun in his hand and a bullet in his head."

'Archer Coe's body was found up-

"That's one on you, sir. You looked at it this morning and didn't see it. I found the poker in that chest-" "The teakwood chest beneath the east windows? You found the poker in that chest?"

Seven Progressives and three Famper-Laborite's also registered affirmative votes. Ten Democrats, five from Georgia, three from Virginia, and two from Indiana, voted with the oppo-

Because of the gag rule adopted by the house, only amendments offered by the appropriations committee could be considered in vital sections of the measure. Such minor amendments as were decided upon went through without serious opposition.

One of the amendments striking out a list of projects that might be included in spending the $4,000,000,000 and left the vast sum to be used for "federal or nonfederal projects" actually broadened the powers of the President. The $800,000,000 will be used at the President's discretion for relief purposes while the program is being put into effect.

Another amendment struck out a subsection which gave the President authority to postpone the end of any existing government agency. This was a move to satisfy certain Democrats and his PWA program which expires and Theo proposed the alibi upon which in June. Another clause granting thority to the President to acquire personal property by the power of eminent domain was also removed, as was the section granting the Chief Executive the power to impose two years' imprisonment on any violator. The only other amendment which succeeded in passage was one which pro-

Minority Leader Snell attacked the bill declaring that the money involved amounted to one eighth of the national income, and that the house was entitled to know what the money was for. Later in conceding the minority's defeat he said that if the opposition was free to speak its mind, the bill would be defeated two to one, but that under the executive lash, there was no chance of defeating it.

NEW DEALERS sighed with relief as the Supreme court recessed, until February 4 without handing down its decision in the gold cases, thus giving the administration more time in which to prepare legislation designed to handle the situation in the event the court renders an adverse decision.

At the same time the court promised to decide a case presenting a clear-cut test of the constitutionality of the national recovery act, and which will probably have considerable effect upon the ultimate fate of the already bedraggled Blue Eagle.

The justices during the next two weeks will write opinions on cases heard recently, including in all probability the momentous suits testing validity of congressional action in canceling gold payment clauses in $100,000,000,000 worth of public and private securities. It is expected that the court will render its decision soon after February 4, since it has shown a disposition to rule as quickry as possible in all matters involving New Deal legislation.

EGISLATION which would permit the small investor to buy government securities and which provides for radical changes in government financing has been introduced in the house by Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee.

The bill, prepared by the Treasury department, places the administration squarely against inflation. It provides authority to raise money necessary for the public works, social security and similar measures, meet federal deficits, and might even be used to provide funds for payment of the soldiers'

Under provisions of the measure there would be ten year bonds in amounts as small as $25, and as explained by the Treasury department, would be sold below par. There would be no interest, but each six months. the bonds would appreciate in value at the rate of 21/2 per cent, plus con-pounded earnings. Huge sums are involved: first, the creation of a revolving bond authorization fund of $2,500,000,000; and second, the consolidation of the two present revolving funds of $10,000,000,000 vinces.

> WHITE WACED, under the glare of the courtroom lights, but apparently cool, Brune Richard Hauptmann took the stand to begin his fight for

Under the smooth questioning of Chief Defense Counsel Reilly he related the details of his life up until the torate out of Ethiopia was seen by who were opposed to Secretary Ickes, time of the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, European statesmen. Explostation of is apparently relying for acquittal.

Hauptmann declared that on the night of April 2, 1932, when $50,000 was paid to a man in St. Raymond's cemetery, New York, he, his wife and a man named Kloppenberg had been at home until about eleven o'clock and that he did not leave his home at all that evening. He also denied that he vided that an accounting he made for had been absent from work on the day all moneys spent. the kidnaping took place.

Two witnesses introduced by the defense to establish Hauptmann's allbi were not entirely satisfactory. Chrisfinn Frederickson, Bronx : laker, said Hauptmann's wife had been employed in his store as a waitress and counter girl and that the accused had called afor her on the night of March 1. Upon cross-examination, however, he stated that he was not sure, but that it must have been so because it was Hauptmann's custom to call for his wife whenever she worked late. Mrs. Frederickson also stated that Mrs. Hauptmann worked late on the night of March 1, but was unable to say whether Hauptmann had been at the bakery. She stated, however, that she had seen Isador Fisch, furrier friend of Hauptmann who died in Ger-many, on the eve of his sailing for Germany in November, 1932. She said Fisch displayed a large sum of money, but she was unable to say whether it was in greenbacks or gold certificates. Throughout Hauptmann's testimony Colonel Lindbergh continued to stare at him. During the court session, Lindbergh reiterated his belief that Hauptmann's voice was the same as that of the mysterious "John" who had hoaxed him out of the ransom money nearly three years ago.

WAR flamed again in Manchukuo as Japanese troops struck suddenly at three points in Chahar province in northern China. Three fortified cities were shelled, and there were indications that the drive had only be-

The Japanese attack came as a surprise since it was reported that negotiations for a peaceful settlement of the dispute over Chahar province had been nearing a successful conclusion. Japan had asserted that Chinese troops in Chahar had invaded Jehol. Military authorities declined to an nounce the real objective of the drive. The district which the Japanese troops occupied is about 150 miles long by 50 miles wide, and is said to contain valuable gold mines.

Japan's action is seen by Chinese leaders as a determined gesture to intimidate Mongolian princes Mongolia and to cut the overland route connecting Peiping with Urga, capitalof Seviet controlled Outer Mongolia.

The situation is viewed with considerable apprehension by Soviet Russia. The drive will bring Japanese military operations into direct contact with the borders of Outer Mongolia, and practically all high officials of the territory who have been attending the Soviet anniversary celebrations in Mescow have hurried back to their pro-

TAPAN'S foreign minister, Koki Hirota, warned Soviet Russia that she should stop fortifying the Siberian frontier north of Manchukuo if friendly relations are to be continued between the two countries. His remarks, made in an address before the imperial diet, had special significance in view of reports that Japanese troops are invading Chahar province to prevent Sovietization of that region. Russian fortifications in the Far East, particularly of the strategic crossings of the Amur river, are becoming increasingly irksome to the Japanese army in Manchukuo. Other projects to which Japan is objecting are doubletracking of the Trans-Siberian railway to Vladivostock and remodeling of the strong fortifications of that Pacific port.

Government officials in Washington were said to be favorably impressed with part of Hirota's address which referred to Japan's desire to avoid further expansion of armament. It is hoped that negotiations will be resumed soon for another agreement to replace the renounced Washington treaty which established the 5-5-3 ratio for the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

RECOMMENDATIONS that America's air defense facilities be greatly increased will be made by President Roosevelt in a special message soon to be sent to congress, it has been indicated by those close to the administration. A frumber of recent developments point toward some action by the Italian government. Premier Mussolini recently took over the office of minister of colonies; Gen. Emilio de Bono, former minister of colonies, named high commissioner of Italian East Africa; military roads have been constructed through Italian Semaliland to the Ethiopian frontier, and the Italians have recently taken over a bigger share in the operation of the Dibouti and Addis Abbaba railway, Recent history affords a number of precedents for the Italian government to follow. Japanese intervention in Manchuria was "to restore order and reduce Chinese banditry," and Italy might use the excuse of reducing Ethiopian banditry as a reason for invasion. The British action in Egypt and the Sudan, and the French subjugation of Tunis also offer parallel

War in Ethiopia would involve considerable expense due to the rugged. nature of the country, and this is seen by some as a reason why the Italian government has not acted sooner. The Ethiopian emperor has been buying all the arms and munitions he can, it has been reported, in preparation for the impending trouble.

The Townsend Plan.

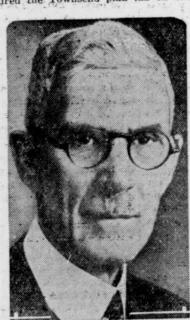

The President is by no means the only one who has proposed an old age security plan. Sweeping the country like wildfire has been the idea of Dr. Francis Everett Townsend, His more ambitious plan, which claims 25,000,-000 signatures on petitions to congress, also claims to be able to doctor all of the ills of the depression and create a prosperity the like of which the world has never seen. Oddly enough, it is based upon a fundamen-

The Townsend Old Age Revolving Pension Plan, acclaimed and supported by 25,000 Townsend clubs scattered throughout the United States, would pay every American over sixty who is not an habitual criminal $200 a month on the condition that he spend the enof in the United States within the month. The necessary $20,000,-000,000 would be raised by a federal tax. They haven't decided what kind. There has been no centralized opposition to the plan for the simple reason that business leaders, finding an expressive voice in Dr. Raymond Moley, former assistant secretary of the poorhouse. turnover of business transactions, it is claimed, would increase the national income by $240,000,000,000 to $300,-000,000,000; but this is based also on the presumption that the physical circulation of money has much more to do with income than it has. Last year, $32,000,000,000 were paid out in wages, salaries and other forms of labor income; yet total retail sales were less than $40,000,000,000. So $24,000,000, 000, paid to 10,000,000 people, is expected to produce up to $300,000,000,-000 worth of business, when $32,000,-000,000 paid to 40,000,000 persons produced less than $40,000,000,000. One of these, as I reported to you previously, has already been decided. In that instance, the Supreme court by a vote of eight of the nine judges determined that President Roosevelt had gone beyond the powers accorded him under the Constitution in prohibiting export of oil from the state where it was recovered.

Within a very short time now the most important case of all affecting the New Deal will be decided. I refer to the so-called gold cases. Five questions are before the court and if it decides adversely to the government's claim on any of them, the monetary policy upon which the New Deal has beeen operating becomes virtually null and void. The court heard lengthy arguments by high powered lawyers on the part of the government and on the part of private citizens who claim that their rights have been abridged by the Roosevelt money policies and they naturally are seeking redress.

No one dares to make a prediction concerning pending action by the Supreme court. It can be only a guess at any time in advance of a rule by that group of men because with one or two exceptions since the nation was number of suits. founded, its decisions have never leaked out ahead of the time they are formally handed down from the bench.

Lawyers throughout the land are watching and waiting for the court's findings. But the most fidgety of all lawyers are those in the government who recognize that an adverse decision by the court will flatten our the New Deal and force a wholesale revision of policies. I am told that this group of lawyers is none too certain of its ground. True, they made what is recognized as a strong argument in support of the government's position but the difficulty seems to be from their standpoint that the Constitution was written before the brain trust came into action and the Constitution itself provides the only ways by which it may be changed. Brain trust ideas, however good they may be, nec sarily. Constitution to which the nation ad-

Among the questions before the Supreme court in the gold cases, that one brought forward by a suit to com-Question pel the government to pay gold in redeeming one of its own bonds is by far the most important. Indeed, that case can be said to have an overwhelming importance. If the court rules that the government cannot void its contract-for a bond is generally recognized as a contract-to pay back the borrowed money under the term named in that bond, then the seizure of gold by the government in 1933 likewise is voided. In other words, every person holding a government bond containing a promise to pay in gold is entitled to have that gold from the treasury. It takes no stretch of the imagination to see what effect that will have on the whole money program. Likewise, if the court determines that an individual who has promised of that agreement, the administration agreements or bonds containing the promise to pay in gold are in general use and have been written since time immemorial the amount of such payments is virtually incalculable. I have heard many estimates of the total amount of money involved by the socalled gold clause but I hesitate to use any of them because it is patent on the face of things that an accurate figure is impossible. One can get down to brass tacks on the effect of affirmation of the gold clause, however, by the simple application of the ratio of gold to the present dollar. When those gold contracts were written & dollar in currency was redeemable for a dollar in gold. At that time gold 'was valued at around $21 an ounce. The Roosevelt administration arbitrarily increased that value to a few cents over $35 an ounce. Without going into all of the details it means that to gain the same amount of gold now which a dollar would have brought prior to the Roosevelt administration action one will have to pay $1.69. To state it another way, if the gold contracts involve $1,000,000,000, those who are obligated to pay in gold will have to pay $1,690,000,000 at the present rate. Obviously, debtors under that circumstance will find themselves between the upper and nether millstones, well squashed, if the court rules adversely to the government's policy.

> It is to be noted, however, that during the ten days in which the court heard arguments in the gold cases, a considerable number of senators and representatives sat glued in their seats in the gloomy old Supreme court chamber under the dome of the Capitol. They were obviously wondering. None of them thus far has offered publicly a suggestion as to what he will do in event the monetary policies are overturned. After all, if the Roosevelt program is upset, congress simply will have to enact some new laws and that was the chief reason why so many of the congressional leaders were seen in attendance at court.

The court will rush its decision. Of that there can be no doubt. Always, it has put cases of paramount importance to the nation ahead of those that affect only a small number of private litigants. Everyone believes, therefore, that in this instance the Supreme court has laid aside most of its other work in order to devote its attention to a thorough-going examination of the present problems.

Lawyers tell me that if the court refects the Roosevelt policies as untenable under the Constitution, congress will have to put through some new laws on the subject at break-neck speed in order to avoid a hiatus that would flood the courts with an unprecedented

Determination of the same production for cotton in 1935 that was used as the base in 1934 is accepted as in line with the administration's plans for raising prices artificially through curtailment of production. It had been expected that the 1935 crop might be as high as 12,000,000 bales. But since the administration has decided to carry on further its experiment into artificial price raising fields by production limitation, some of the background of that policy and the American relationship to world conditions warrant examination. The American production until a few years ago was about 60 per cent of the world's cotton output. Now it is down to about 43 per cent of the total. Last year, the world consumption of cotton, according to the Department of Commerce figures, declined by about 700,000 bales whereas the world consumption, excluding that used in the United States, increased by something over 1,300,000 bales. It is to be noted further that although American exports in general increased last year, the quantity of cotton shipped last year fell off by approximately 28 per-

For several years now, we have been hearing more and more of efforts by foreign nations to increase thier cotton production. Brazil has been making a determined drive to develop cotton as a major product. Mexican cotton production has increased in a substantial way. Egyptian cotton production is on the increase. The British to pay in gold must observe the terms | guidance has served to spur production of cotton in India and at the moment is again in a hole. Since contracts, there is no sign of any slacking of the increase there. All of this is happening while our own southern cotton fields are being limited in their capacity to produce that staple commodity. The combination of circumstances here and abroad has produced much action back, and inside it has a Johnny discussion. Arguments of the New Dealers in behalf of production curtailment are too well known to need repetition in these columns. But the jacket, as do the calfskin kiltle tongues opposition argument which, last year, was none too vigorous has taken on new beret adds yet another note of jauntistrength. One of the points now be- ness. ing stressed by those opposed to crop curtailment is the assertion that this experiment shows clearly one of the greatest obstacles to planned economy New Dealers have made much of planned economy on a national scale. Their critics now are declaring the New Deal philosophy to be fallacious because, it is argued, national planning is not enough. If it is to succeed at all, the critics say, planned economy must be carried out on an international scale. That is, to be truly effective all nations must join in and must agree to abide by whatever plan is drafted.

With that belief in mind, opponents of crop curtailment are chiding the New Dealers these days with questions as to whether they believe the Brazilians or the Egyptians or the Mexicans will accept any cotton restriction agreement.

FASHIONS INSPIRED BY PEASANT THEMES

Peasant themes, with their lovely ends orfulness and freshness, are inspiring the season's fashions. In virtually every branch of apparel there are innum-erable details that bear the unmistak-able imprint of peasant inspiration.

Materials, with the new fringed edges in rustic fabrics, the peasant print cottons in sports frocks, and the combinations of gay colors, like red and green, purple and pink, are distinet changes from the modern trends. Bloused bodices and gathered skirts, belts embroidered in peasant colors and motifs, raffia, cord-tied details and heavy linen and cotton laces in accessories further establish the pre-eminence of this influence.

Reports of the doings of the legislators at the Seat of Government by Congressman M. K. Reilly

The Supreme Court of the United States in recent days has taken the spotlight. Our government is made up of three branches, executive, legislative, and judicial. Ever since the beginning of the administration of Mr. Roosevelt, the executive and legislative branches have had the stage, but now the Supreme Court of the United States whether or not the acts and legislation of these other two branches to help the country economically, squares with the ideals of government as set forth in the Constitution of the United States.

The Supreme Court is really an unque contribution to the science of government in our country in the set-up of a republic. Legislative branches of government were known before and se acts of the legislative and executive branches of government was something

During the past week, the Senate continued its consideration of the World Court Protocol. There is no telling at this time just what the Senate will do with the proposal to make the United States a member of the World Court. This World Court proposal has been before the Senate many years. Of course, at the present time, as the reader probably knows, we have a judge sitting on this court, Ex-Secretary Kellogg of Minnesota. In order to become effective, the World Court proposal now pending in the Senate will have to receive a two-thirds majority. The friends of the proposal are hopeful it will receive such a majority and those opposing it contend that the proposal will fail by about two votes. The Senate also passed during week a bill to extend the life of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for two years. This bill also provided for the liberalizing of several features of loans to industry.

Last year, a survey was made of the demand for loans to industry and the report was that seven hundred million and power to make such loans was granted to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and to Federal Reserve Banks. Both loaning institutions have loaned to date less than one hundred million dollars Under the new amendment, it is believed that much more money can be loaned to help out small industry, industry that heretofore could

The House since my last letter passed the four billion eight hundred million ollar relief bill, which is part of the President's program to take men off of the dole and put them to work. This bill contemplates putting to work three and one-half million people, thereby changing that many people from dole to

There was quite a little talk in the consideration of the bill as to who would administer the law but the genera) opinion is that the President is set aside for specific projects. The President insisted that he be given a free
