A new stated map of the world was received by our room last week. It was purchased with funds obtained from the sandwich sale.

The first pussy willows of the season were brought in by Harry Ramthun on Monday.

Our 4-H club girls are organizing for the season's work. By all indications there will be a large enrollment.

Movies will be shown in the auditorium Friday afternoon. The picture will be "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." A comedy and a scenic view of Sweden will also be shown.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Mr. Henry A. Reeger of West Bend spoke before the student body of the high school last Friday afternoon on community planning. The hearty applause given at the close of the talk is an indication of the appreciative way in which it was received by the students. Mr. Reeger told of the community work being done at West Bend and gave several worthwhile suggestions for the boys and girls of Kewaskum to think about.

The local Boy Scout troop is meeting Tuesday evening at the school. Their organization and membership is as follows:

The troop at present has a membership of only thirteen. In order to do effective work and make itself felt in the community, the troop should have at least twice our present membership. An invitation is presented by the scoutmaster to boys of scout age to come to the next meeting on Tuesday evening and join the local troop.

THANKS PEOPLE IN SALVATION ARMY DRIVE

FIRSTLY: I wish to make an apology for not having expressed my appreciation sooner, but owing to illness, and other adverse conditions, delay was made necessary. While the committee was unable to reach the quota of $80, they did raise $33.35, and Kewaskum is to be thanked for its support.

SECONDLY: In a crisis like the present one it takes real heroism to give continually to worthy philanthropic and uplifting organizations; it is still more heroic to self-sacrificingly solicit the funds, so I wish to express my deepest appreciation to the committee who so wonderfully put over the Salvation Army Annual Appeal in Kewaskum and other smaller towns of Washington county.

THIRDLY: I want to thank this paper for the generous publicity it gave to our appeal, and made it such a success, when we realize the numerous calls on the press for services of this kind.

FOURTHLY: I want to thank ALL CONTRIBUTORS, who in spite of adverse conditions, and numerous similar calls, gave so unselfishly, and generously to the great work the Salvation Army is rendering the unfortunate of this and other counties. Such contributions are a real bulwark of the nation.

FIFTHLY: I would not overlook thanking those loyal supporters of past years, who, as much as they would have liked to have contributed this year, but because of unemployment, or lack of income, were unable to give. The Salvation Army says, "GOD BLESS YOU ALL FOR MAKING THEIR SERVICE TO THE UNFORTUNATES FROM YOUR COUNTY, POSSIBLE."

Should there be any firms, organizations, or individuals who were unable to contribute during the appeal weeks, and desire to have a part in this great work the Salvation Army is doing for the outcast, the unfortunate, the discouraged, they may have that opportunity by sending in, at any time during the year, a check or money order made out to ROY T. SPONGE, STATE TREASURER, SALVATION ARMY, at 823 North 4th street, Milwaukee, Wis., Divisional Headquarters.

If there are those who after they leave this earth, would still like to continue to brighten darkened lives for years to come, and leave a living memorial to their name, they may remember the Salvation Army in their will. There is a Legacy Department at Divisional Headquarters which would be glad to furnish further information of its work.

In closing, I wish to convey my unbounded thanks, as well as those of the officers and workers of the Salvation Army for your fine co-operation.

Greatfully yours,
Alfred H. Christian
Appeal Director for Wisconsin and Upper Michigan Division.

Friends in this vicinity were shocked to hear of the death recently of David M. Rosenheimer. Many attended the funeral from here and great sympathy is extended to the surviving family and relatives.

Mr. Voecks remodeled his hall during the past winter and added to the appearance by installing slabs from logs to give the hall a pioneer effect. A hot pot luck lunch was cooked in two large iron kettles in the newly constructed stone fireplace.

KOHLER VILLAGE GETS HIGHEST MERIT AWARD

Kohler, Wis.—A Highest Merit Award to Kohler Village, a Wisconsin town-planned industrial community, for its activities in the 1934 Better Homes campaign, has been announced by Better Homes in America. Communities throughout the United States and its outlying territories competed for honors.

The local Better Homes committee, headed by Marie C. Kohler, with the cooperation of the school, churches, village government, Girl Scouts and other organizations, included in their activities a cooking school and a hobby siding cottage tastefully and practically furnished on a modest budget. A library of very good books obtainable at slight expense was exhibited through the cooperation of the Wisconsin LLBrary Commission. Much of the furniture was made of pine and maple by manual arts boys, while slip-overs, curtains and other home-like touches were the work of school girls and women of the village. Emphasis was upon inexpensive ways of doing things. The cottage was open several weeks to visitors.

In ten years' participation in the National Better Homes program, Kohler has previously received three honorable mentions, a special mention, a special prize for the best demonstration in an industrial village, second prize among small communities in 1931, and first rank among small communities in 1932 and 1933. The program each year has been sponsored by the W. man's Club.

R. S. DEMAREST LOCAL FUR DEALER CALLED IN DEATH

Again the hand of the grim reaper has appeared in our midst and struck down another of our prominent businessmen.

Rosier Sylvester Demarest, aged 72 years, 8 months and 15 days, passed away in death at the St. Joseph's Hospital at West Bend Sunday, March 17th, at 10:30 a. m. after an illness of three weeks' duration. He had gone to the hospital for an operation for carcinoma of the rectum, when complications set in and resulted in his death.

Mr. Demarest was born on July 2, 1862, at New Prospect, Fond du Lac county, Wisconsin. When a young man he came to Kewaskum and was united in marriage shortly after to Ida Krahn on April 7, 1897. No children were born of this union. His widow survives him and has the sincere sympathy of the entire community.

Barney, as he was familiarly called by all his friends and acquaintances, was a very widely known fur dealer, and was known throughout the entire country as one of the best judges of furs in the business. He had made the fur business his life study. Always a true sportsman hunter and trapper, he derived much enjoyment from his out of doors activities. He will be greatly missed by all.

Funeral services were held from the Reinder's Funeral Parlor on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Richard M. A. Gadow officiated. Interment was at New Prospect cemetery beside the remains of his father and mother.

IN MEMORY

In sad but loving remembrance of our beloved father Carl Ohmnd, who died March 11, 1935.

In his lonely grave he sleeps,
As the shadows onward fall,
And our loving hearts are weeping,
No more his presence we can call.
Do not ask us if we miss him,
Oh there's such a vacant place,
Oft we think we hear his footsteps
Or we see his smiling face,
A loving one so true and kind,
No friend on earth like him will find
God called him home it was his will
But in our hearts he lives on,
It is true you're gone but not forgotten
Your memory shall never fade,
Our lonely hearts shall ever linger,
Around the grave where you are laid
May God grant you eternal rest.

CARD OF THANKS

We the undersigned wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the kind neighbors, relatives and friends who so willingly assisted us during the illness, death and burial of our beloved father, Carl Ohmnd; for the beautiful floral offerings; to those who furnished cars; to Rev. G. Knies for his consoling words; also to Mr. Miller for the efficient manner in which he conducted the funeral and to those who showed their last respect by attending the funeral.

President's Proposal to Eliminate Utility Holding Companies Brings Storm of Criticism—Treasury Seeks to Simplify Nation's Currency Structure.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Senator Norris

THE President's special message calling for abolition of utility holding companies stirred up a storm that probably surprised even such an astute politician as Mr. Roosevelt. The President urged legislation to abolish those holding companies which they were operated in the public interest.

GREECE is mopping up the loose ends of the revolt. Some fighting is reported near the Bulgarian border where one regiment, part of the rebellious Fourth army corps, has declined to surrender, but the revolution is definitely over.

ter decision agrees with that handed down by Federal Judge Nields in the controversial Weirton steel dispute.

CHANCELLOR ADOLPH HITLER'S "diplomatic" cold is over, and he will welcome Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, to a conference beginning March 24.

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY MORGENTHAU revealed plans to dip into profits from gold seizure to repay $674,625,630 of the national debt through the use of gold certificates.

THE maneuver will place in the hands of the federal reserve banks $674,625,630 of gold certificates, which must be used as backing for issue of the same sum in federal reserve notes to retire the bonds.

NATIONAL bank notes issued by national banks against federal securities represent more than one-tenth of the nation's circulating currency.

COMPLETE collapse of the administration's long battle to regulate prices in the steel industry is seen in an NRA offer to give up, and in charges by the federal trade commission of a flasco of collusion.

THE senate passed the army appropriation bill, and it now goes to the house. The measure adds $20,000,000 to the original bill, making the total appropriation of $400,000,000 almost a record high.

ARIZONA'S ambassador to Washington will soon take up his duties in the National Capital. His excellency will receive $7,500 for salary and expenses.

EUROPEAN PEACE

By IVAN M. MAISKY, Russian Ambassador to England. THE "Eastern Locarno" pact, proposed eight months ago by France and the U. S. S. R., is absolutely essential to European peace.

There can be no peace in western Europe unless it is also assured in eastern Europe. It should be clear to everybody that if the fabric is ignited at any corner of Europe, say somewhere in the East or Southwest, the whole European structure would soon be in flames.

DELEGATION OF POWER

By FRANK A. VANDERLIP, Veteran Banker. THE measure before you (banking act of 1935) provides for the establishment of a managed currency system, but it should not leave the determination of the policy in the hands of any regulatory body.

The use of the various levers of control (the open market operations and the variation of the legal percentage of reserves which banks must hold against their deposits) must be placed in the hands of an executive regulatory body, but the decision as to the objective, that is to say, the price level which is to be reached and maintained, should be the responsibility of congress and of congress alone.

IMPORTANCE OF RAILROADS

By JESSE H. JONES, Chairman RFC. THE railroads are not only necessary but they employ a great many people, directly and indirectly—more perhaps than any other industry, notwithstanding possible claims to the contrary by the automobile industry.

It should be remembered, too, that railroads pay a very large amount of taxes necessary in the support of state, county and municipal governments, including our public schools, while exactly the contrary is true of highways, which are built and maintained with tax money.

CUBAN TRADE

By JEFFERSON CAFFERY, U. S. Ambassador to Cuba. THERE are many people who believe that the Costigan-Jones legislation and the trade agreement are of permanent duration.

The trade agreement may be denounced by either party at the end of three years. If these measures are not to lapse, it is essential that the benefits derived from them shall be precisely and conveniently laid before the public in both Cuba and the United States.

A SOFT GENERATION

By BISHOP E. M. STIRES. WE HAVE grown soft. We do not like the word sacrifice. It suggests inconvenience. DIRIGIBLES PRACTICAL

By JOHN J. DELANEY, Congressman From New York. I DON'T hesitate to say that I still think that all development that has taken place should not be summarily dropped because of these disasters. The KENNEL MURDER CASE

By S. S. Van Dine

Copyright by W. H. Wright WNU Service

"But what of Wrede's attempted murder of Grass?"

"That was logical and in keeping with his character," said Vance. "Miss Lake explained it—intense jealousy of his lucky rival. Wrede thought he had successfully pulled the wool over our eyes, and the fact gave him confidence. He knew exactly where the dagger was; he knew the domestic arrangements of the Coe house; he had a key to the rear door; and he doubtless knew of the broken lock on Grass's door. He had probably brooded over his loss of a wealthy bride until he could no longer resist the urge to follow up his—as he thought—successful murder of Archer by the murder of Grass. He would thus have won a complete victory over the forces that had temporarily defeated him. His frustrated ego again. And had it not been for Liang's perspicacity—which Wrede underestimated—and the shift of Grass's arm, he would have succeeded."

"But what," asked Markham, "first gave you the idea that Wrede had committed the murders?"

"The Scottie, Markham," answered Vance. "After having found she belonged to Higginbottom, I ascertained that he had given her to his inamorata who lived in the Belle Maison. And once I had followed the Scottie's trail and knew that she belonged next door, I made a bit of an investigation. I learned from a perfectly honest Irish maid that both Higginbottom and his lady fair—Miss Delafield—had been having a farewell dinner at the time Coe was murdered. I see, I had thought perhaps that some blond lady with a Duplaix lipstick had admitted the Scottie into the Coe house earlier in the evening. But although Miss Delafield used Duplaix lipstick and had undoubtedly called on Archer Coe before half-past seven, it was not she who had let the Scottie in; for the little dog was in the Delafield apartment after nine o'clock that night, and had disappeared some time between then and half-past ten, at which hour the maid instituted a search for her. Moreover, I learned that the Scottie could have entered the Coe house only if some one had unlocked the gate between the Belle Maison and the vacant lot next to the Coe residence. And I further learned that there was no way for the Scottie to escape from the Belle Maison, except into the rear yard. Only some one who had unlocked the gate and opened the rear door of the Coe residence would have given her the opportunity of entering the house. And Wrede was the only person who could have done this."

The following year Hilda Lake and Grass were married, and the alliance seems to have been highly successful. Vance became the owner of Miss MacTavish. He had become attached to her during the days he had nursed her back to health, and the romance (if one may call it that) between Higginbottom and Doris Delafield ran on the rocks shortly after the lady's return from Europe. After her break with the major she showed little interest in the dog; and Higginbottom, in appreciation of some nebulous favor which he considered Vance had done him, made him a present of the bitch. Vance placed her in his kennels, but she did not seem to be happy there; and he finally took her into his apartment. He still has her, and she has been "pensioned" for life. Sometimes I think that Vance would rather part with one of his treasured Cezannes than with little Miss MacTavish.

Seventeen-Year Locusts Have No Female Singers

Confusion of terms long has existed in popular names for the cicada—often called the 17-year locust—the grasshopper and the locust, writes Lynne Greene in the Kansas City Star. There are a number of species of cicada, and all have the same general characteristics, the slight difference being in size, variations in color and wing markings.

The eggs are laid in the bark of twigs. The newly hatched young drop to the ground and, burrowing, feed by sucking the juices of roots. They live in the ground 16 years, with little change in appearance. Toward the end of this period scale-like rudiments of wings appear.

In the spring of the seventeenth year the nymph with its enlarged front feet digs a tunnel to the surface. From late May to early July members of the brood crawl out singly or in droves and, fastening on a tree trunk or some support, split down the bark to liberate the adults, which have a week or so of aerial life, recompensing them for the long period of preparation.

The adult male "sings" loudly and shrilly, by vibrating membranes stretched over a pair of sound chambers, one at each side, near the base of the abdomen. A Grecian poet said, "Happy is the cicada; its wife has no voice."

There may be several broods in a neighborhood, and the adults of one of them may have appeared in 1921; their next appearance would be in 1938. Another brood might be dated 1926-1941, and so on. Each year we have 17-year cicadae.

The First Saddle

The first real saddle is found in the so-called Column of Theodosius at Constantinople, usually ascribed to the end of the Fourth century A. D. It is end of the horse who invented the saddle, not known who invented the saddle. It was developed gradually by the ancients. The Greeks rode bare-backed at first, but a little later employed the saddle cloth. Subsequently pads or rolls seem to have been added. In medieval times the saddle was much like that of the oriental saddle of today, with high peaks before and behind. The side saddle is said to date from the end of the Twelfth century.

Once Alaskan Capital

Sitka, once the capital of Alaska, when the "Wild Land" was under Russian rule, is located on an island amid myriads of isles, one of which is surrounded by majestic Mount Edgecumbe. St. Michael's cathedral was built in 1817 and is in the form of a cross. It is the oldest shrine on the Pacific coast. The equipment still shows the lavish splendor of early Russian decoration and contains the same vestments.

Chic Leather Fashions for Spring

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

LONG comes leather to add to the new spring mode. And such leathers—most beautiful and rich, exquisite in color, dainty and supple, suedes, kidskins and calfskins designed with arresting dressmaker details that bring them smartly into the current high-style parade.

Only seeing is believing as to the perfectly marvelous things being accomplished via leather artistry in the realm of costume design this spring. Which reminds us to say to those who have hitherto held to the idea that garments fashioned of leather belong solely to the sports wardrobe, the time has come to change your way of thinking.

Out Hollywood way where the newest, smartest fashions go on parade in advance of the rest of the world, leather for dress occasions has been accepted with genuine enthusiasm. A movie star of distinction wears a lovely evening gown of shell pink suede. At a smart gathering, an evening mess jacket was noted styled of white suede with a white gaily collar.

A leading designer in the French capital has created a charming evening coat, three-quarter length, of soft, supple brown leather embellished with intricate cutwork design, posed over brown lacquered satin. From Paris also comes the message that the haute couture is creating fetching little daytime dresses suitable for town activities. These attach chamails jumpers in smart new colors to wool skirts. Wide leather belts with bizarre metal fastenings complete the costume.

By the way, if you want your costume to carry a sure-fire style message wear chamails accessories. Swank gilets, boleros, lapels on spring coats and suits are made of chamails. Other jaunty items include handstitched chamails scarves, belts, berets, slip-on gloves and roomy bags with contrast stitching.

You can see from the illustration that the new leather jackets are—well, they are just too good looking for words, that's what they are. For early spring these costumes which top a checked wool skirt with a gay colored suede jacket are not only ideal to wear but they have that out-of-the-ordinary look and being "different" they offer a welcome diversion from the regulation cloth tailleur. What's more, they are as outstandingly modish for town and travel as they are practical for country and sports wear.

The gay colors of the new suede jackets delight the eye. The simple model on the standing figure is in a mosaic rust shade. Its sash-belt and turn over collar are chic features.

The modish sportswoman seated in the foreground is wearing one of the very new jackets that are styled with knit sleeves and collar. You can have it in any smart colors such as Robin-hood red, rust, green or in the much-talked-of amber. Of course the checked woolen skirt must carry corresponding colors. A Tyrolean snuff hat, pigskin gloves and calf oxfords complete this smart outfit.

The wonderfully attractive jacket on the figure seated to the right is most happily tuned to a colorful spring. It goes in for zigzag red, white and blue stitching, which is a chic move on its part, since the emphasis this season is so decidedly on fancy and lavish stitching.

SEPARATE SKIRTS FOR SPRING WEAR

Since separate skirts are so necessary a part of the spring wardrobe and since tweed ones are highly approved, it would seem an economy measure to start with a tweed suit. Jackets are no longer wedded to one skirt, and skirts may step out with any number of jackets, blouses and sweaters, so there is no end to the possibilities.

Outside of the practical feature of skirt and jacket going its own way, there is the practical detail of the cape being detachable, and therefore ready for a career of its own. The objection to a cape jacket on the score that one might tire of the cape is also overcome.

Slipper of Glass Steps From Cinderella's Land

Cinderella's glass slipper has stepped from fairy tale lore into the modern everyday world.

This is the way it's made: Bits of shimmering glass cut to reflect the light are strung along transparent mica straps across the top of the foot while the tip of the toes and the instep are left bare. More strips of glittering glass gird the heel attached to a pale pink kid ankle strap and a tall pink kid heel spike. So, except for the heel and ankle strap, it gives the effect of a foot held by a few twinkling glass bands.

Gray Is Very Smart Color for In-Between Seasons

Gray is just about the smartest in-between season color, fresh and flattering. Shirring and tucking, quilting and smocking are smart manipulations for the gray crepe frock. Puritan collars of immaculate white pique trim charmingly childish frocks of gray metallage.

Often grayed blue or cherry red provides a piquant accent for these new silvery grays. A high style collar for midseason shoes of kidskin, gray appears in a rather dark cast.

What Women Want to Know About Fashions

Ribbon sashes tie in front. Torchon lace is used for collars, cuffs and jabots. Jeweled fruit is the latest in ornaments in Paris. Designers achieve new "swirl" movement with spiral pleats and winding drapes. In the new sports suits, the semi-fitted, hip-length jacket varies the Oriental note.

Bags of fine antelope continue to be popular for smart afternoon wear. When sweaters are worn with separate skirts they should not match the skirt. Quantities of tulle were used by every dressmaker for evening creations. A spring costume which is minus a touch of the patent leather loses much of its chic.

POULTRY

MODEL PULLET SURE TO BE WORTH MORE

Marked Advance in Feed Is Cited as Reason.

By F. H. Branch, Extension Economist in Farm Management, Massachusetts State College.—WNU Service.

A well grown pullet in 1935 will cost about $1.50 or approximately 10 per cent more than last year. The increase over last year's costs is caused by a marked advance in feed prices and a moderate increase in labor charges.

In making calculations, it was estimated that in order to obtain 100 healthy pullets, the poultryman must buy about 250 baby chicks. About half of these will be cockerels, and some losses probably will be sustained during the brooding and rearing season. The cost of the chicks amounts to about 35 cents per pullet. Feed costs for six or seven months will amount to about 90 cents. The labor of taking care of one pullet in a flock results in about 25 cents' worth of labor being charged against each pullet. Overhead costs, including depreciation and interest on buildings and equipment amount to about 20 cents, and miscellaneous cash costs, such as fuel, litter and grit, come to about 18 cents, bringing the total cost to $1.95 for each pullet.

But a by-product of the business of raising pullets is a supply of cockerels which may be sold as broilers, and the return from broilers is a credit, in calculating the cost of raising pullets. Broilers should be worth about 45 cents each, thus reducing the cost of each pullet to $1.50.

These calculations may serve as a basis for poultrymen in computing the cost of establishing flocks this year.

Sanitary Feeding Urged by College Poultryman

Feeding grain and mash in troughs is the cleanest and most accurate method of supplying the poultry flock with their daily grain ration, says G. W. Knox, Jr., extension poultryman, University College of Agriculture, Fayetteville, Ark., and it has largely taken the place of the old method, both unsanitary and uncertain, of feeding in the litter.

The grain is put morning and night into a V-shaped trough, constructed of one by six-inch material. This method is sanitary, and the exact amount of grain the hens consume can be regulated, Knox pointed out. A light feed is given in the morning, and a heavy feeding, all the hens will eat, is given at night. "Some poultrymen prefer to hopper feed their grain, keeping it before the hens at all times. This method is unsanitary, but the amount of grain fed cannot be regulated as easily as in trough feeding," he says.

"The exact amount fed varies with the breed and the season of the year, and the poultryman must learn to regulate the amount of grain his birds will eat."

Ducks Are Sensitive

Ducks are far more sensitive than ordinary fowls, and mistakes in management frequently lead to a complete moult. Do not imagine that free-range ducks can secure half their living during winter months. Ducks in full lay will consume about five ounces of food daily—approximately two ounces of grain and three of wet mash. For grain use wheat, or equal weights of wheat and corn, fed in troughs in the morning, and they love to shovel it out of a trough containing a small quantity of water.—Montreal Herald.

Do Not Overcrowd

The poultryman who places too many layers in the laying house is headed for small profits and trouble. In small buildings 5 square feet of floor space should be allowed for each bird and in larger ones 3 square feet. If the birds are crowded they will be uncomfortable, competition for feed at the hoppers and for water at the fountains will be keen, they will be more susceptible to disease, and mortality is sure to be heavy. One should aim to have the laying houses not too full and not the opposite.

In the Poultry Yard

The surest way to prevent frozen combs is to provide heat during zero weather.

Turkeys, especially when kept in confinement, require ample supplies of water and grit.

Fowl paralysis did not respond to feeding treatment at the Iowa experiment station. Neither the cause nor the cure for this chicken disease is known.

Hens lay their largest eggs after having reached maturity or after becoming "hens" after their period of pulthood.

Fowl pox is more serious this winter than in previous seasons, according to reports received by the poultry department of the Ohio State university.

The rooster with swollen head and closed eyes has the roup, and should not be in the flock with healthy birds, as this disease is highly contagious and cured with difficulty when present.

Approved chicks must come from flocks and be hatched in hatcheries meeting the requirements for this grade.

Sexed chicks are chicks in which the cockerels and pullets have been separated at hatching time by physical examination.

Keep young turkey hens that weigh 18 to 20 pounds, have good body conformation, long keel bones, broad backs and evidences of vigor.

Extreme Chic in This Frock

PATTERN 9986

If you've been following the latest trend in style news, you know that the classic shirtwaist frock is still one of Fashion's pets. And here's a delightful version of it. The sleeves and shoulders are cut in one to give a nice smooth line, and make them easy as a, b, c to fit. The bodice with a trim slot-pleat at the back to match the chic of its buttoned front closing is smartly gathered to the yoke—the long skirt seams end in jaunty inverted pleats—and the patch pockets follow the latest mode by being rounded instead of square. Make it of a rough crepe and put an impudent little contrasting bow at the throat for added chic!

Pattern 9986 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 39 inch fabric.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, THE STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York.

Twenty-five Years Ago

March 25, 1910
Born to Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schlosser Friday, a baby girl.

Miss Theresa Raetner is now employed in the Jos. Schlosser household.

Chas. McNecke has rented his saloon to John Andrae for a term of one year.

Some of the farmers in this vicinity have commenced plowing and seeding.

Chas. Buss left for Cascade yesterday where he will be employed as a cheesemaker.

The ice on the mill pond has all passed away and the nimrods are already busy catching some of the finny tribe.

John Krautkramer is nursing a very sore foot caused by accidentally stepping on a nail.—Beechwood Correspondent.

G. D. McDougall has quite a curiosity in the form of a six-legged calf. The animal is about a week old and bids fair to reach maturity.—Dundee Correspondent.

John Kimb, of the town of Trenton, agent for the New York Life Insurance Co., was in the village on business Wednesday, and while here turned over a check to Mrs. Ios Gritner for the death of her husband, amounting to $1,488.30, this included all premiums that Mr. Gritner paid to the company for 19 years.

Ignatz Strahmeyer was agreeably surprised by a number of his intimate friends in honor of his birthday anniversary on St. Patrick's Day evening. The evening was spent in the playing of games and a delicious supper was served.

Alvin Gottsleben was at Fond du Lac last Saturday and brought home his father's horse which was taken there a few weeks ago to be trained by Mr. Prickett, an expert horseman. Mr. Gottsleben is well pleased with the way his horse has been trained by Mr. Prickett. The horse drives well, does not shy for the cars nor an auto and is gentle so that anyone can drive her.

FARM AND HOME LINES

In the new 1935 corn-hox contract, there is no allowance to plant forage corn and grain corn in excess of 90 percent of the base corn acreage.

Potatoes are Wisconsin's most important cash crop with a value usually three times that of the Badger cigar leaf tobacco crop.

Peak prices for livestock are not expected to be reached before late summer or autumn, according to federal economists.

A sharp curtailment in the number of sheep in this country appears certain as the result of the severe drought of last season.

The disease threat to the white elm, which has not yet reached Wisconsin, is being vigorously fought by federal authorities over 5,000 square miles in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. The campaign against Dutch elm disease is being waged to save white elms from the fate of the American chestnut which has been practically wiped out in some states during the past three decades.

At least 90 percent of Wisconsin's quail has perished from starvation during the present winter season, according to an estimate by Aldo Leopold, in charge of game management, at the Wisconsin college of Agriculture. The heavy covering of snow which covered their feed supply is held responsible for the condition.

A good way to feed ear corn to wild game birds is to make a cylinder of woven wire, a foot in diameter. Tie it upright to a bush or fencepost, fill it with ears, and cover the top with a gunnysack to discourage crows and squirrels. The birds will eat through the wire and will pull out the empty cobs. Such a wire feeder, once filled, will often last a month.

Burns His Ice

NEW YORK... Dr. W. H. Smith (above), of Franklin Institute here, showed an American Institute audience how easy it is to burn ice. He sprinkled carbide on the ice, poured on water and an acetylene gas was formed. It was lighted and the more water poured on, the greater the flame.

IMPORTANT DAYS in a Chick's Life

The most important spot in the life of a chick is its first week. At no time is the right care more important. The best chicks in the world can be ruined by poor judgment in choosing feed. Start your chicks right on a real feed—Koch's IDEAL CHICK STARTER MASH. It is made especially to suit the chick's delicate digestion.

Our mash insures better feathering, sounder, stronger and sturdier chicks. Feeding your baby chicks is decidedly important because the first few weeks determines your chance for profit. If during the starting period your losses have been low and your chicks have built strong bodies your foundation for profit is laid.

Unemployment Problem Solved; "Babe" Finds Job

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

Don't be alarmed. That "whoosh" you just heard and felt was not the beginning of a whirlwind. It was just the collective sigh of relief of about 100,000 people. For the nation's most appalling unemployment problem has been solved: Babe Ruth has found a job. What was to become of Babe as caused as much consternation as what will happen to the NRA.

The mighty Sultan of Swat, who left his native land to become Uncle Sam's unofficial ambassador to Japan and created more good will in a few weeks than statesmen have in years, returned home to find himself on the outside looking in. He had declared he would not become again an active player for the New York Yankees, who bought him when he was a young pitcher with the Boston Red Sox and then had to build the world's largest baseball stadium to hold the enormous numbers of those most fanatic of all idol worshippers, the baseball fans, who wanted to see him.

Bambino, who answered to the name of George Herman, when they called the roll for soup in St. Mary's orphanage three decades ago, wanted a manager's job. When he left on the barnstorming tour which found him still able to paste the old pellet higher than Mt. Fujiyama and farther than Japan's imperialistic ambitions, he little doubted that there would be a sufficiency of such posts awaiting his return. Baseball owed it to him.

But there were none. Baseball, which the Babe's wagon-tongue had lifted from just a swell game to a giant industry, had no place for him. Even his own Yankees didn't want him. They would have hired him, yes, because there would have been bloody revolution in Manhattan if they neglected him entirely. But they didn't want him. That was apparent.

It hurt the Bambino, of course. But it was his own fault. The Babe is like a big, shaggy, playful dog that is always doing something cute. He senses that he has done something that pleased you very much, gets pretty cocky about it, proceeds to jump up on you, sets his dirty paws on your nose, clean shirt and has to be spanked. In short, he lacks diplomacy.

At the close of the 1934 playing season, with his batting average having shrunk to .288, his home run total to 32, and his salary to a mere $35,000 per annum, and his forty-one-year-old legs about as steady as those of the card table you borrowed next door for Tuesday's bridge game, the Babe announced to all and sundry that he was through as an active player.

His Diplomatic Way. With all the diplomatic aplomb of the puppy dog we have mentioned, he went straightway to Col. Jake Ruppert, who manages to find time between his beer fountains and his yacht to run the affairs of the New York American league ball club. The colonel's eyebrows lifted in mute surprise, no doubt, because the time was hardly ripe for the curtain to rise on the annual melodrama that these two seasoned Thespians are wont to enact for the benefit of the press each year, before signing to give our hero more money for circling the bases than the President gets for running around the Democratic platform.

"Are you satisfied with your manager?" asked the Babe, making no effort whatever to keep the question secret from the press and the public. Colonel Ruppert replied that he was. Edward G. Barrow, general manager of the club, further evidenced complete satisfaction with Manager Joe McCarthy.

It was not the first experience of its kind for the Babe. When Miller Huggins died a few years ago, Babe asked for the job. The Yanks have never considered Ruth of managerial timber and didn't then. They made Bob Shawkey manager; when he failed in a year's trial they imported Joe McCarthy from the National league. Babe has always been petulant about this "injustice" and in consequence there has always been a coldness between him and McCarthy.

With Ruth publicly declared to be after McCarthy's job, the Yanks and Colonel Ruppert were on the spot. They felt obliged to retain the Babe should he resign as a player, but could they countenance an open hostility between their manager and one of his men? Babe was getting old; could he still draw at the gate? To draw the fans, New York has to have a winner; could the Babe stand the gaff? McCarthy was almost sure to keep the Babe on the bench; would the fans put up with it?

Now to change the scene for a moment, things were happening in the town where the Bambino began his big league career. The Boston Braves, struggling along as a second-rate club for years, were losing money. Something had to be done.

Sitting in a box at a Braves game one afternoon were Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the club, and the then Mayor James A. Curley, now governor of Massachusetts. Business was bad. Curley convinced Fuchs that the Braves must secure some great star to offset the gate attraction of the Red Sox, whom Tom Yawkey's dough had bought into a winner. He went himself to talk to Ruth on the night of Ruth's departure for the Orient. Babe was willing enough to go to Beantown, but there were too many obstacles in the way and the thing was presumably dropped right there.

When Ruth returned, it was generally accepted that he would sign again with the Yanks as a player. Colonel Ruppert refused to be left on the spot. He telephoned Fuchs in Boston and asked him if he wanted the Babe. Fuchs responded by catching the very next rattler for Manhattan.

On February 27, Ruth was made assistant manager of the Braves, signing a three-year players' contract at a figure variously reported at $20,000 to $25,000 a year. He was also made vice president and granted a share in the receipts which should make his earnings from $40,000 to $50,000 a year.

Boston, where the fans like their Babe even better than their native beans, went wild. Babe was toasted at dinners. Rosy predictions were made for the revival of winning baseball in the Hub. Numerous inspired citizens even offered to buy stock in the club, which was badly in need of fresh capital. And right in the midst of all this cheering the playful puppy again forgot his diplomacy and got muddy feet on the master's shirt.

"I will take over the complete active management of the Braves, in 1936," said the Babe. There had been an undercurrent ever since the news of his signing that the capable Bill McKechnie, wily Scot who managed the Braves, would get a raw deal. Predictions were that Ruth would take over the reins from the popular McKechnie before July 4 of the present year, or even before the first of May.

Already in a ticklish position, despite the fact that Ruth had been in the fold only a couple of days, the Boston management announced magnanimously that when Ruth was made playing manager, McKechnie would be moved up to the executive post of general manager, with more dignity and more salary.

Babe Ruth is popular for the same reason that Jack Dempsey was. Science and skill are great stuff for the coaches and the trainers, but what the fan who waits in line hours for a bleacher seat practically in the next county wants is the knockout punch. Nevertheless it is this real, natural, boyishness of Ruth's that make him the idol he is.

Babe leaves the American league without his career having slumped to an anti-climax. Joining the National league, he will stimulate ticket sales all over the loop, especially in Boston, where no less than 46,000 fans turned out to fete him in his last American league game last year and in the Polo grounds, where the Giants hold forth and where he gained his greatest fame. He is expected to pack the parks in Cincinnati and Pittsburgh, which have never had a glimpse of his mighty clouting. This is healthy for baseball.

Chicago, too, will be interested when he steps to the plate against the Cubs. For the Windy City fans will never forget that world's series of 1932 when he created what was probably the most dramatic scene ever enacted in baseball. All through the series he had ragged the Cub players unmercifully. Already considered almost a doddering old man, he strode up to bat at a crucial moment. Deliberately, he took two strikes. Jostling the Cub bench all the time, then pointed to the farthest distant point of the bleachers in center. Came the pitch, and whack! went the ball right to the spot, one of the longest drives ever seen at Wrigley field. The Cubs were licked from that moment.

What a personality like this will do for the Braves and the National league is a foregone conclusion. He will still bang a few over the fence, especially with the short barriers in the senior circuit. Nine of the Braves' exhibition games in the South are with the Yankees, and they are drawing record crowds.

them continuously at the ball park, consequently he is regarded almost in the light of a deity. Ladies who couldn't tell you the name of the governor of their state can recite Ruth's life-time records in their sleep.

An orphan himself, Ruth is never so much at home as when he is entertaining the children at an orphanage or other institution. Once when the Yanks were in Minneapolis also happened to be in town. Newspaper men saw the story possibilities of a meeting between the Sultan of Swat and the Queen of Rumania, and a time for the queen to receive Ruth was arranged. Earlier in the evening the Babe visited an orphanage. The youngsters felt immediately in love with the genial behemoth and begged him to linger. Meanwhile frantic calls were coming from the hotel; for he was already late for the reception. For a moment he listened to the pleas of the tiny fans, then he returned to the telephone. "I got a date," he said. "I got a date."

Fame hasn't really spoiled him. He still gets a great kick out of the attention paid him. The writer accompanied him to a talk to Ruth on the night of Ruth's departure for the Orient. Babe was willing enough to go to Beantown, but there were too many obstacles in the way and the thing was presumably dropped right there.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—Most observers and thinking citizens have been inclined to take little stock in the talks of Senator Long and Father Coughlin, the radio priest, concerning plans for redistribution of the national income. But it can be denied no longer that Long and Coughlin have developed a gigantic following of people who lack information as to the fallacies of the arguments, however logical they sound, that have been spread by these politically smart showmen.

One reason that serious attention to their proposals is now necessary is that some of their arguments are being advanced from high places in the federal government. I refer specifically to the testimony before the house committee on banking and currency by Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve board and as such the titular head of the national banking system. Mr. Eccles did not quite take a leaf out of Huey Long's book. He approached the position of the Louisiana senator, however, when he proposed a redistribution of income, whereas Senator Long has urged a redistribution of wealth.

Mr. Eccles suggested in his testimony in effect that it would be all right for a man with say ten million dollars in capital to keep that sum, provided his income was redistributed. Mr. Eccles went back to the days immediately following the World war to illustrate his argument and showed that at the top of the post-war boom "one tenth of one per cent of the families at the top of the income received as much as 42 per cent of the families at the bottom of the list." Furthermore, he said that the single average family in the big income class got as much as four hundred families at the bottom of the income list.

"This one-tenth of one per cent was unable to use the income in consumption," he continued. "They therefore had to find an outlet in the investment field. As a result, the capacity to produce increased out of all proportion to the capacity to consume."

So Mr. Eccles took the position that a solution of the depression was a redistribution of this income with the idea that it would increase purchasing power in the lower brackets. The governor offered no explanation of how those in the lower income class were going to obtain possession of the redistributed income of the rich because his argument stopped at the point where the government would take this money by taxation.

That is the recognized weakness of the programs advanced by Senator Coughlin and the serious testimony by Governor Eccles showed no ability to solve the problem.

On top of the outbursts by Long and Coughlin and the serious testimony by Governor Eccles comes Senator Nye of the North Dakota progressive, with a bill in the senate to create a central bank. Senator Nye's action has caused many humorous expressions. Here we have a senator who has fostered, even boasted about, progressive ideas and has called himself a liberal. It is necessary only to recall that the father of the central bank idea was the ultra-conservative Alexander Hamilton, the first secretary of the treasury.

Senator Nye advances a bill which he thought that the central bank would avoid hamstringing of credit. I think financial experts all agree that this is true. The thing which Senator Nye overlooked, however, is that Mr. Hamilton's central bank collapsed and brought ruin and grief to thousands. The reason it collapsed was because in removing control of the banking facilities from experienced bankers, the whole thing had been turned over to the control of politicians who, generally speaking, are experienced only in the North Dakota senator should advance as a liberal scheme the creation of a central bank which one hundred and fifty years ago represented the height of conservatism.

The Nye legislation was offered in the same week that Governor Eccles had proposed in his testimony on the banking bill in the house that the Federal Reserve board should have complete control of the credit expansion and contraction in this country. I believe most persons will have difficulty in considering the two schemes as separate and distinct. They certainly fit together.

It is to be noted that there are at least ninety-nine radical members of the house of representatives who are convinced that the federal reserve system has failed of its purposes. Most of them have been repeating without rhyme or reason the accusation that bankers are "refusing" to make loans. They think, therefore, that if there is a central bank or if credit control is placed in the reserve board and taken away from the federal reserve banks where it now resides there will be additional loans forced out of the commercial banks. His story is fallacious. No business is going to borrow money when it doesn't need it and neither is any person in his right mind going to make a loan unless he has at least reasonable assurances of repayment.

It will be recalled that President Roosevelt at one time spoke disparagingly of the "refusal" of the bankers to make loans. The President subsequently learned that attempts to pump money out of banks must fail for lack of borrowers. I think everyone acquainted with conditions must agree that the Eccles idea and the Nye legislation mean absolutely nothing in the way of recovery aids, for it has always been true, you can lead a horse to water but you cannot make him drink.

The fallacies being put forward by Senator Long and Father Coughlin, and now being nibbled at by Governor Eccles and Senator Nye obviously have been accepted by thousands of people. Senator Long claims that at least six million persons are supporting his scheme. It would seem to be the time, therefore, for citizens to begin to analyze the trend of events, if they are influenced by such leadership.

In connection with this trend, it is interesting to observe how much trouble Senator Long and Father Coughlin already have caused for the administration. It must be said frankly, Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers thus far have not found a way to deal with them. They have tried fighting back and each time they have succeeded only in furnishing fresh ammunition for the Long-Coughlin team. Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader in the senate, made one of his greatest speeches of criticism of Senator Long's schemes, but the result was a leaf out of Huey Long's book. He approached the position of the Louisiana senator, however, when he proposed a redistribution of income, whereas Senator Long has urged a redistribution of wealth.

Mr. Eccles suggested in his testimony in effect that it would be all right for a man with say ten million dollars in capital to keep that sum, provided his income was redistributed. Mr. Eccles went back to the days immediately following the World war to illustrate his argument and showed that at the top of the post-war boom "one tenth of one per cent of the families at the top of the income received as much as 42 per cent of the families at the bottom of the list." They have tried fighting back and each time they have succeeded only in furnishing fresh ammunition for the Long-Coughlin team. Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader in the senate, made one of his greatest speeches of criticism of Senator Long's schemes, but the result was a leaf out of Huey Long's book. He approached the position of the Louisiana senator, however, when he proposed a redistribution of income, whereas Senator Long has urged a redistribution of wealth.

Mr. Eccles suggested in his testimony in effect that it would be all right for a man with say ten million dollars in capital to keep that sum, provided his income was redistributed. Mr. Eccles went back to the days immediately following the World war to illustrate his argument and showed that at the top of the post-war boom "one tenth of one per cent of the families at the top of the income received as much as 42 per cent of the families at the bottom of the list." Furthermore, he said that the single average family in the big income class got as much as four hundred families at the bottom of the income list.

"This one-tenth of one per cent was unable to use the income in consumption," he continued. "They therefore had to find an outlet in the investment field. As a result, the capacity to produce increased out of all proportion to the capacity to consume."

So Mr. Eccles took the position that a solution of the depression was a redistribution of this income with the idea that it would increase purchasing power in the lower brackets. The governor offered no explanation of how those in the lower income class were going to obtain possession of the redistributed income of the rich because his argument stopped at the point where the government would take this money by taxation.

That is the recognized weakness of the programs advanced by Senator Coughlin and the serious testimony by Governor Eccles showed no ability to solve the problem.

On top of the outbursts by Long and Coughlin and the serious testimony by Governor Eccles comes Senator Nye of the North Dakota progressive, with a bill in the senate to create a central bank. Senator Nye's action has caused many humorous expressions. Here we have a senator who has fostered, even boasted about, progressive ideas and has called himself a liberal. It is necessary only to recall that the father of the central bank idea was the ultra-conservative Alexander Hamilton, the first secretary of the treasury.

Senator Nye advances a bill which he thought that the central bank would avoid hamstringing of credit. I think financial experts all agree that this is true. The thing which Senator Nye overlooked, however, is that Mr. Hamilton's central bank collapsed and brought ruin and grief to thousands. The reason it collapsed was because in removing control of the banking facilities from experienced bankers, the whole thing had been turned over to the control of politicians who, generally speaking, are experienced only in the North Dakota senator should advance as a liberal scheme the creation of a central bank which one hundred and fifty years ago represented the height of conservatism.

The Nye legislation was offered in the same week that Governor Eccles had proposed in his testimony on the banking bill in the house that the Federal Reserve board should have complete control of the credit expansion and contraction in this country. I believe most persons will have difficulty in considering the two schemes as separate and distinct. They certainly fit together.

It is to be noted that there are at least ninety-nine radical members of the house of representatives who are convinced that the federal reserve system has failed of its purposes. Most of them have been repeating without rhyme or reason the accusation that bankers are "refusing" to make loans. They think, therefore, that if there is a central bank or if credit control is placed in the reserve board and taken away from the federal reserve banks where it now resides there will be additional loans forced out of the commercial banks. His story is fallacious. No business is going to borrow money when it doesn't need it and neither is any person in his right mind going to make a loan unless he has at least reasonable assurances of repayment.

WATER FLEA OF GREAT VALUE IN SCIENTIFIC WORK

Dr. Anno Viehoever of Philadelphia has been experimenting with the water flea. That tiny creature is transparent. Under the microscope one can watch its muscles contract and relax, its breathing go on, its meals get chewed, digested and disposed of, its heart pulsate, and its eyes gleam as it glances this way and that.

A wonderful feature of this, this tiny relative of the shrimp, lobsters and crabs. Human beings have but a single lens for each eye. The water flea's well-fused eye has twenty lenses. No fish can catch it unawares, for it can look in virtually every direction at once, and dodge away from threatened danger. The water flea even responds to ultraviolet light rays invisible to human eyes.

Drugs act on the water flea very much the same way as on human beings. Doctor Viehoever administered chloroform to one of these almost invisible creatures. Then, with the aid of a camera and a microscope he took motion pictures showing just how the chloroform was slowing down the action of the water flea's heart.

Such an investigation as that means opportunity to study the chemical and physiological mechanism involved in the action of drugs. It means opportunity, for instance, to try to find out what combination of substances the physician must use to regulate a misbehaving heart beat in human beings and to try to bring it back to normality.

Hard for Lip Readers. Deaf students of a Madison avenue school of lip reading are told at the start to watch not only the lips but the tongue, throat muscles and the expression of the entire face. There are many problems. Thirteen words look alike, and so do "man," "mad," on the lips, like "bad" ("man," "mad," "band," etc.); twelve look exactly like "fade" ("vein," "feligned," etc.); "juice," "chews," and "shoes" look alike, and so do "honor" and "otter" (although you can be fairly sure that it's "honor").

We were interested to learn that the word "king" is the hardest word to lip-read in the English language; the "k" and the "ng" are deep in the throat, and the short "i," hardly moves the lips at all. Men's lips are harder to read than women's, because men's lips are less flexible.—The New Yorker.

Newly Designed Doughnut Million-Volt Generator

Dr. WILLARD H. BENNETT of Ohio State university's physics department, with his newly designed doughnut million-volt generator, for use in the study of nuclear disintegration. Because it is much smaller and less costly than the models previously used for the same voltage, the new generator is expected to greatly increase the possibilities for study of the atom and its nucleus. The generator will be used in operating a high vacuum tube at extremely high voltages, to produce high-speed particles which disintegrate nuclei of atoms and change the chemical elements. The new generator is of the electrostatic type and has a high voltage shield in the shape of a sphere with two holes on opposite sides. The shield is charged by means of a silk belt which passes through these holes.

CATTLE HUNTING NOT EVEN SPORT IN EARLIER DAY

For two centuries man's chief occupation among the gauchos, or cattle ranchers of the Argentine pampas was the pursuit of wild cattle, according to an article in the National Geographic Magazine. "Stupendous numbers were slain merely for hides and tallow, as was true in California when Dana saw it and wrote 'Two Years Before the Mast.'" says the writer. "Besides the many hides sent to Spain and smuggled out to other lands, countless thousands were used on the pampas for making clothing, huts, tents, sleds and even fences.

"Cattle were so cheap that a rider would kill one merely to cut meat enough for his lunch. One Argentine historian says soldiers used to shoot a beef so that they might tether horses to its horns, there being no trees.

"It was easy to capture them. A band of gauchos simply surrounded a herd. Then each man, armed with a long-handled pica, or lance with a sharp blade like a half-moon, hamstring as many animals as possible before the herd broke away. This done, the gauchos dismounted, skinned the fallen animals, and abandoned the meat to carrion birds and wild dogs.

"Hides took the place of money. When, by the Treaty of Utrecht, England attained the sole right to import slaves into the River Plate country, she stipulated that the blacks should be paid for with hides and tallow.

"From hunting cattle mostly for their hides, the folk of the pampas turned by 1830 to the export of dried beef. This went to feed slaves in the West Indies, where their labor was then building up the tobacco and sugar industries. Jerky (salt beef) is still made by the ton in the meat-drying shed on the big estancias, and sometimes huge racks of it, like haystacks, are piled in the open air."

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

REDWING THE BLACKBIRD GIVES WARNING

CREeping toward sleeping Danny Meadow Mouse Reddy Fox managed to keep quite out of sight of anyone in the Smiling Pool. But there was one person to whom Reddy gave no heed. In fact, Reddy did not see him at all. It was Redwing the Blackbird, sitting on top of an alder tree on the bank of the Smiling Pool. Redwing had not seen Reddy until the latter had almost reached the Smiling Pool. Then, happening to look in that direction, he had caught a glimpse of something red moving in the tall grass. You see, he was looking down and therefore could see what those on the ground or in the water could not see.

Now Redwing does not fear Reddy Fox. There is no reason why he should. But Redwing has no love for Reddy Fox. He knows that Reddy would gladly catch him if he could. So the instant he was sure that it was Reddy creeping through the tall grass, Redwing flew out directly above Reddy and began to scream. "Danger! Danger!" he screamed. "Here is Reddy Fox! Danger! Danger!"

At the first warning note from Redwing, Grandfather Frog dived into the Smiling Pool with a great splash.

There wasn't any real need for him to do so because out on that big green lily pad of his, he was quite safe from Reddy. But Grandfather Frog always feels more comfortable in the water when any kind of danger is around. All along the shore of the Smiling Pool, half grown young frogs dived into the water in a panic. They knew what had brought Reddy over to the Smiling Pool.

Of course at the first note of Redwing's voice the eyes of Danny Meadow Mouse flew open. The instant he saw where Redwing was hovering in the air as he screamed he knew that Reddy Fox was just beneath him and that meant that Reddy was right back of Danny himself. What should he do? Where should he run? To turn back would be to run right into Reddy's mouth. There wasn't a hiding place near. It was useless for him to try to outrun Reddy, for Reddy could catch him in two jumps. Was ever a meadow mouse in a more dreadful position? There was Reddy Fox behind him and the Smiling Pool in front of him. To Grandfather Frog, whose big goggle eyes showed just above the surface of the water, it looked as if Danny Meadow Mouse would soon be no more. He couldn't see one little chance for Danny to escape.

Burning Tanker Salvaged in Mid-Ocean

IN TOW of the British cruiser Frobisher, the Glasgow tanker Valverde is seen here lying deep in the waters of the Atlantic ocean, after a harrowing experience that tried the souls, and proved the heroism, of its crew. With a volatile cargo aboard, that included 8,000 tons of crude oil, and 4,000 tons of gasoline, the crew of the Scotch tanker fought a blaze that, if it had got out of their control, would have spelled oblivion for themselves and their floating home. They succeeded in quelling the fire, but only at cost of disabling the vessel, and a rope from the British fishing boat Guardian was a welcome sight to the sorely pressed crew. The cruiser Frobisher then came up and took the crippled vessel in tow and brought it safely to Bermuda.

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes

COMING BACK TO LIFE

A MAN in Victoria, British Columbia, has just instituted proceedings to bring himself back to life!

Returning home, at the age of seventy, after an absence of several years, and offering his frayed savings bank book to obtain funds, he found that he had been declared dead and his estate divide among his relatives in other places. Let us hope the poor man is able to recover the life's savings on which he counted to support him. To my mind, however, that is not the only dramatic phase of this bit of news, which will impel the thought of how it must feel to be "dead"—wiped out and forgotten—and come back to life.

only a short stay to scenes of happiness in our past—say a summer resort that had lived in our memory with a wish to return to it. We know now that places can in fact remain the same and yet change in everything that made them dear to us. So we have always that fear of disillusionment for the friend returning to an old home, to scenes of her childhood, hoping to pick up the broken threads.

But to be regarded as dead—and return with thoughts of the future in terms of a dearly remembered past—how must that be!

It is a safe guess that the recovery of his money will not be the most painful part of the adjustment to his old home of this man who has been "dead" and come back to life!

This Week in Washington

Reports of the doings of the legislators at the Seat of Government by Congressman M. K. Reilly

For the past ten days or so, our country has been exercised by radio talks representing in a measure the pros and cons of Mr. Roosevelt's recovery program. I have often said that we are living in a changed and changing world; indeed we are. At the time of the birth of our republic, it would have taken weeks and months for an idea to travel throughout the thirteen colonies. The battle of New Orleans was fought three weeks after the treaty setting the war was made, and it took George Washington many days to go from Mount Vernon, his home, to New York to be sworn in as President of the United States. Now, in a twinkling of an eye, millions and millions of citizens, and even those who live in foreign lands, through the magic of the radio can all, at the time, listen to a speech for or against some great economic or financial problem.

The American people constitute a great forum before which in the future pleas that will make for the continuation or death of our industrial Democracy will be made, and not weeks but days only will have to pass before great torrential changes in public opinion on economic problems may result.

The writer is of the opinion that the New Deal cause and people in general would receive much better educational results from the air battles of today if those engaged in such a contest would cut out epithets, wise-cracks, and what might be termed personal abuse. The people are looking for light today, not for the whys and wherefores of the speaker, on the problems he may see fit to discuss. Ideas inimical to the American economic system cannot be drowned by ridicule and abuse of the proponents but must be met by cool logic and argument, by the marshaling of facts to demonstrate that the remedies and panaceas they offer have no basis on which to rest. It is hoped that if this great air battle continues, that the contestants will stick to logic, facts, and arguments and forget about personalities.

Since my last letter the Senate has done practically nothing except to continue to wrangle over the Public Works Bill. Huey Long seems to be obsessed with the idea that he has received somewhere or somehow from the people a commission to stop all legislation in the Senate if he cannot have his way.

The House passed the bill which it had under consideration last week amending the Home Loan Bank Law, the Home Owners Loan Corporation Act, and the Housing Act, and that measure has now gone to the Senate. No opposition was offered to the final passage of the bill, which added one billion, seven hundred and fifty million dollars to the fund that can be used for refinancing mortgages for distressed home owners. The House also passed the Deficiency bill, the first one this session. A Deficiency bill is written for the purpose of taking care of odds and ends of necessary public expenditures, which were not covered in regular appropriation bills. During some sessions of Congress, two deficiency bills are passed but since the budget system was set up in Washington, and also since the Comptroller's Bureau has been operating, there has been a closer check of expenditures of the different departments and a tighter rein held on disbursements, with the result that deficiencies in any department, that is overrunning of allotted sums, are not looked upon with favor. The House will spend the rest of the week on the consideration of the Agricultural Appropriation bill. This is one of the most important appropriation bills to be considered this session or any other session of Congress, because it deals with appropriations necessary for the operation of Agricultural bureaus which involve the biggest and most important unit of our whole economic life, Agriculture.

I am receiving a great many letters from my constituents making inquiries about the usurpation of the money issuing power by the bankers of this country. We have in circulation today about five and one-half billion dollars of all kinds and one of which sum about $800,000,000 represents the circulation of national bank notes that is issued by national banks, backed by bonds which they have placed with the Treasury of the United States to serve as security for the note issue.

Our national bank system was a child of the Civil War and was considered to be a necessary financial setup at that time. The idea was that it was necessary for the government, in its fiscal operation, and necessary for the country to have some method whereby the volume of the currency could be contracted and expanded to meet the demands of industry. The theory was that whenever the banks believed that the business world needed money, they would deposit bonds with the Treasury of the United States to get more money to give out to industry. If they believed that there was too much money in circulation, the banks would take the bonds back and call in the money issued on said bonds.

The wrong thing about the whole system was and is today, that the bankers collected interest on the bonds they deposited with the Treasury of the United States and they also got interest on the money secured by such bonds, which they loaned out to their customers. Banks are charged only for the money furnished them by the Treasury a little in excess, if any, of the cost of the actual printing of the money. It is a peculiar fact that when the Home Owners Loan Corporation Act was passed three years ago, bankers were given the right to increase their circulation by about one billion dollars, but few of the national bankers took advantage of that privilege, and it is stated that less than twenty percent of that sum was ever issued. The fact of the matter is that a great many national banks never took advantage of the privilege which they had to issue money on notes.

The writer believes that this system of allowing national banks, or any banks, to issue money is all wrong. However, this note-issuing privilege of the national banks is all past and any discussion of the national bank issuing privilege is all water over the dam. The Secretary of the Treasury has called all bonds upon which the national bank notes have been issued in the past and by July first there will be no more national bank notes in circulation in this country.

At the present time, the national banks of the country have with the Treasury of the United States about three hundred million dollars in cash and six hundred million dollars in bonds as backing for the note issues. About six hundred millions of the profits accrued to the Treasury as a result of the devaluating of the gold dollar will be used to redeem all outstanding government bonds used as a basis for issuing national bank currency.

The point I want to make, however, is this: the note issuing privilege of national banks did not cause in the remotest degree the present panic and has had nothing to do with our present industrial depression. It is true that international bankers, by selling to the American public billions of worthless foreign bonds, have accentuated the panic with millions of our citizens who lost their savings through the purchase of worthless foreign securities and who are therefore more or less out of the buying crowds that gather around our counters of trade.

In a later letter, I shall give some information regarding the Federal Reserve System, about which we hear much in the press and over the air today. The Federal Reserve System may not have worked out as intended and may not have functioned one hundred percent but many things are charged up to the system in connection with the present industrial depression which have no basis in fact upon which to rest.
