LIBERTY BONDS FOUND IN PESCH TORTURE ROBBERY

Liberty Bonds, totaling $7,000, which were stolen from Michael Pesch and his sister, Katie, on April 23, 1933, were recovered at Chicago last Sunday.

The brutal torture robbery which occurred on the Pesch farm, about one and one-half miles northeast of this village, on April 23, 1933, was believed to be near solution on Sunday, April 7th, with the questioning by Chicago police of two men.

The loot taken from the Pesch home by four bandits exceeded $10,000, of which $7,000 of it was in Liberty bonds.

When the bonds were called in by the U. S. government recently, watch was kept for stolen serials, and Police Lieut. Edward Kelly of Chicago traced $2,500 of the Pesch robbery loot to Al G. Goranson, private detective, and the wife of one Izzy Lazarus.

Kelly took both parties to Chicago detective headquarters, and after long questioning, was told that Goranson obtained his bonds from Lazarus in payment for detective work; while Lazarus said he got the whole $3,500 from an unknown man in payment for a gambling debt.

The story of the Pesch robbery is that four men came to the Pesch home, tied up Michael, who is 57 years of age, and his sister, Katie, two years older, and demanded to be told the whereabouts of their hidden savings.

Katie Pesch was backed against a wall at pistol point while the robbers prepared to apply hot irons to Michael to force him to tell where he had hidden his savings. The latter's silence despite all threats, infuriated the robbers who pressed a red hot poker to his leg and burned a gash two inches long into the flesh. Still refusing to speak he was hattered about the head with a pistol butt and again burned.

Then three of the bandits ransacked the house with Katie Pesch still held against the wall by the fourth. A yell of triumph from the attic informed the fourth man that the cache had been found.

Pesch and his sister were then tied together and the bandits made off. An hour later they were found by their brother, Math. Pesch.

Part of the stolen securities in the form of cashier's checks on the Bank of Kewaskum was later found in a sack which also contained land contracts, deeds, mortgages and other papers.

No trace was found of the Liberty bonds until the Chicago police uncovered them when they were presented for payment.

The police are now working on the case and a solution to the robbery is expected at most any time.

BADGER STATE LEAGUE OPENS SEASON MAY 12

At a meeting of Badger State League officials at Port Washington Monday evening it was decided to hold the opening game of the season on May 12. Kewaskum will again be a strong contender it is hoped, and will probably schedule one or two practice games before the opener.

Joe Eberle and Arnold Martin represented Kewaskum at Monday evening's meeting at which it was decided to admit the Infant Socks of Fond du Lac into the league in place of Hartford, which team has joined the Land O' Lakes League. It was also decided upon to play a split season in the league this year. Then at the close of the season the winner of the first ten games will play the winner of the last ten games for the pennant, unless the same team wins both halves, when no play-off will be necessary.

Twenty games will be played and this season games will also be played on holidays. Thus the season will be shortened so that postponed games can be played after the regular season closes and while the weather is still favorable for baseball.

JOE PENNER OF RADIO FAME DONATES DUCKS

All Horicon is busy these days making plans for entertaining thousands of visitors April 20, the day set for celebration of final victory in the fight to restore the marsh area north of the city known as Horicon marsh as a game preserve and water reservoir.

Wisconsin visitors will include high state officials and men prominent in the long fight led by Louis Radke, president of the Wisconsin division of the Izaak Walton league, for restoration of the marsh. Many visitors from outside the state also are expected.

Possibility of the 40,000-acre marshland as a breeding ground for millions of ducks has received national attention and plans are being made for publicizing its advantages still more. News reels are planned of the liberation.

Since no one apparently wants to buy Joe Penner's duck the radio-stage comedian is going to give it away—a long with 499 others.

Louis Radke president of the Wisconsin Izaak Walton league, advised the state conservation department on Tuesday that Joe (Wanna Buy a Duck) Penner has personally donated 500 mallards for stocking the Horicon marsh in Wisconsin.

The mallards will be liberated in the marsh Apr. 20. Conservation department men expect to liberate more than 1,000 mallards.

The LUCKY LAWRENCES

By KATHLEEN NORRIS
Copyright by Kathleen Norris

SYNOPSIS
The luck that had brought the Bostonian to California just as the gold rush was ending, seems to have deserted the present generation.
The Lawrence family, who have lived on a small farm and the have a family home in Clipperville. The father forced the three children to work so that the eldest child might continue her education. Phil, now twenty-five, went into the iron works. Gail went into the public library and Edith to the bank department of Clipperville's large store.

CHAPTER II

She walked home in languid twilight. Clipperville was relaxed and after the day, unexpected heat of the spring day. Gail thought that the summer would be upon the world in no time, the hot, dry, inland summer of California. Edith would buy four yards of dark blue dotted swiss, as she always did, and make herself a dainty, cool summer dress to wear with her old-fashioned slippers. And Ariel would get out her cheap little silk slippers and striped socks.

Gail looked at a dress in Muller's window, a blue organza with thin white ribbons hanging in a bunch from the shoulder and waist.
"I thought Alleen Fernald would,"
she said, laughing. "I thought she would have your pardon!" she said, laughing. "For she had really crashed into my window inexcusably."

"That's what Miss Potter said. I'll be rotten," Ariel predicted gloomily.
"Oh, Ariel, I think that'll be simply grand!" Gail exclaimed enthusiastically.
"Ede, did you hear that? Ariel's going to be Lady Teazle!"

"I thought Alleen Fernald would,"
Edith observed, interested.
"Alleen," Ariel explained, her red lips twisting to a sneer, "said that maybe her mother was going to take her east."

Phil came in before dinner was quite ready, grinned at his sisters, and went upstairs. He came down in a few minutes, to sit in the kitchen and wearily, kindly join in the general conversation.
Phil was the quietest member of the family, as befitted his head, the man upon whose shoulders heavy responsibility had fallen in boyhood, and who saw life through sober, sensible eyes.

"Gail, you look awfully pretty tonight," he said, watching her.
"In this old rag?"
"Perhaps Van Murchison's return has something to do with Gail's appearance," Edith suggested archly.
"Oh, is he back?"
"I met him in the Calle," Gail said, rendered absolutely apathetic by Edith's merrily sympathetic manner.

"If there's a new beau in town—" Edith continued rallyingly.
"Oh, shut up!" Gail wanted to say rudely. But she controlled herself.
Dinner was served.

Phil sat, absent-minded and gentle, at the head of the board, sometimes coming out of a brown study to give Sam more gravy or decline carrots for himself.

"What's the matter with Ariel?" he presently asked.
"Why, a lot of them are going to the Standard, and I feel—" Gail began reluctantly, with a glance at her sister's mischievous face—"I feel that—on a school night—"

"What's showing, Ariel?" Ariel answered impatiently, savagely.
"It seems to me—on a school night—I don't see as if it was anything special!"
Gail replied eagerly.

Phil regarded his youngest sister's drooping, butter-cup-gold head sympa-thetically.
"Other girls' mothers let them go, Ariel?"
"They don't ask them!" Ariel answered briefly, bitterly.

"Well, then they're not your sort of girl," Philip decided, with a rather doubtful glance at Gail.
"They're hotsy's," Sam contributed simply.

"They are not hotsy's!" Ariel flamed.
"Well, whether they are or not, you don't want awfully to go, do you, darling?" the oldest sister pleaded.

Ariel made no answer, and the meal proceeded. Philip would go down to night school at eight o'clock, but it was barely seven now, and a general sense of pleasant relaxation and ease held the group. Edith's thoughts were busy with a favorite subject—some sort of Utopia where women wore robes and sandals, and long tables under trees were set with buns and grapes, vine-crowned girls and boys.

Ariel gulped, and sniffed; she hated them all. Gail was thinking about friendly Van Murchison. And Phil was twenty-five, and deeply in love.

He had left Lily at a quarter to six, only an hour and a half ago; left her physically, that is; in spirit he was still with her, still feeling her thin, eager hands in his, her thin, eager lips on his.

Oh, she was everything they said she was—one of the shiftless Wibers married to one of the disreputable Cass boys, common, uneducated, hopelessly not a lady, hopelessly not an intellectual. But she was—Lily, Phil's beloved.

She was the gentlest little thing imaginable. She was twenty-four, and she had been demonstrating ever since her fifteenth birthday her entire ignorance of the world and her inability to cope with it. Clipperville thought it knew why Lily Wibers had gone to San Francisco to take a position, when she was but fifteen. They might have known, they told one another, that she would turn up again, vague as to her business career, and more reckless than ever about her conduct, a year or two later. They might have known that she would pick one of the worthless Cass boys for her mate, and bear him three weak, wet, whining little babies in succession, before he and she parted forever.

They might have known that those Casses and Wibers would have a shooting affray, and that Lily's particular Cass would disappear, giving Lily an opportunity instantly to claim state aid and sue for a divorce on the ground of desertion.

Even then she never would say an unkind word of Joe Cass. Lily never said an unkind word of anyone; hers was the most loving heart alive. To Phil she was as pure as the Maid of Astolat for whom her mother had named her.

She lived in the squalid jumble of cabins that decorated Thomas Street Hill. Philip Lawrence stopped at her broken-down gate every night. The world knew now that she had got him, as women like Lily do get fine men, and felt sorry for those lovely sisters of his who were still so entirely in the dark.

Without money, without even sufficient clothing, with this dim old decaying mansion on his hands, with Gail, Edith, and Ariel to settle in life, Philip was nevertheless dreaming of Lily.
Love, with Lily, in a little Spanish house with a breakfast patio—this was all Phil Lawrence wanted in life.

By the time they could barely see their own hands or one another's face there was a sudden interruption, and Dick Stebbins came unceremoniously through the kitchen and joined them.

Sam jumped up to light the gas, and their flushed sleepy faces laughed at one another in the sickly light.
"Eat yourselves dizzy, eh?" said the newcomer, sitting down between Phil and Ariel, and drawing the depleted plate of ginger cookies toward him.

"We're all slowly dying," Gail said, with a nod of greeting. "I thought you might come to supper, Dick," she added.

"I got off early, and rushed out to see Mother."
He sat easily among them, a big, rough-looking young man with bushy dark hair and an Indian-looking skin.
He was rancid-bred, and looked it, although the big hands were skillful and fine enough and his big mouth firm.

"How is your mother, Dick?" Edith asked politely.
"Not so good. Oh, well—she's pretty good." He lighted a cigarette; Phil lighted another. Sam, suddenly hoarse with eagerness, asked for a smoke, and the older brother tossed the little packet over to him with a steady look.

They all knew Dick Stebbins well.
He was perhaps the only man, certainly the only unmarried one, who had the run of the house. The girls neither liked him nor disliked him consistently, or for any good reason.
He was not important; he was merely the son of those homely farmer folk who rented the Lawrence ranch.

"Listen, Are You Engaged?" the Man Demanded Suddenly.

It's a Season of Plaids and Checks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

GOES madly on the rage for checks and plaids.

Where fashions are at their smartest these animated patteringfashions are flourishing with all their might, both for day and evening wear.

The new plaids and checks are as apt to be "all wool and a yard wide" (more likely fifty-four inches) as they are apt to be of washable synthetics, linens or cottons. In fact among the swankiest weaves going you will find linens done in garish, racy plaids which make up too swagger for words—ever so effective for sports wear.

Then, too, topcoats of gorgeous plaids are going places where they never went before, for women are wearing them during the daytime hours about town and for travel as well as sports. Some have fur collars and some haven't, but they are that good looking with or without you will be envying the fortunate who possess them. The girl suited to the right in the picture is wearing a model which is styled with latest details, such as the hand-cut fringe of self material which trims the wide scarf ends and the wide turnover collar. The predominating colors in the plaid for this coat are brown and beige with a streak of orange in its makeup. The same plaid is striking in tones of reds or greens.

Her companion is wearing a check suit and if you are wanting to get into something decidedly stylish for spring here's your cue and no mistake about it. This one is black and white but if you happen to be in some other color mood, there is a check to satisfy, such as green with gray, navy with white, brown with tiger yellow. Then, too, there are tweed checks galore out on the field of action. They are smart, to be sure, but we must say there is a regular landslide in the direction of the simple little checks as pictured.

It is ever so good style to wear a tweed wool check skirt with a jacket of plain or the reverse. It is smart, too, to top a plaid or check skirt with a colorful suede jacket.

Plaid taffetas for daytime frocks, either synthetic or pure silk are making a grand success of it this season.
A shirtwaist dress of plaid taffeta is in the height of fashion. Likewise a one-piece taffeta frock topped with a redingote of wool in navy or black makes an ideal spring costume.

Myriads of simple little morning and informal afternoon frocks choose plaid for their media. The model on the standing figure plays up bias-to-straight effectively. Novel touches such as buttons in alternate colors and little pocket-sets set in on the bias add zest to this mode.

The other dress is interesting, too, in that it is made of a star print—little stars instead of the dotted theme and you can get this material with white stars on navy or red and other combinations. A deep pointed collar of white pique and large white buttons tune into the scheme of things most cleverly.

NAVY AND YELLOW

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

It is good-looking, this girlish frock and hat to match, is it not? It is a film-folk fashion and you know it is smart and advance if it originates in Hollywood, as it has. Ruby Keeler wears it. Attention is especially called to it because of its navy and canary color scheme. Navy for the foundational color with either white, yellow or pink is the talk of town this season. The smart set are carrying out the idea by wearing accessories made of natural toned chamols skin.
The dress pictured is of navy wool with accents of canary colored roughtextured crepe.

Turquoise Preferred
The turquoise has the preference among evening jewels, appearing effectively with white crepes and satins and especially with black velvet. Big turquoise buttons trim a black velvet dress cut away in front to show a fan-pleated underskirt of black tulle.

Lace With Tweeds
Bows of soft lace are being worn with tweed costumes.

Timely Tips From World Fashion Centers Rough straws are decidedly on the program.
There is a great demand for lingerie blouses this spring.
The smartest bracelet for wear with spring sports costumes has a Scottie talisman.
Bareback shoes are something new.
Little lace veils are very much a part of the new straw sailor hats this season.

"SKIMMER" NEWEST WHIM OF HATTERS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The "skimmer" is the newest whim of the hatters, with madness its chief distinguishing charm.
The skimmer is the 1935 version of the pancake sailor which has been with us, off and on, in recent months.
Only now it is flatter and crazier and generally more exhilarating than ever.
You clap it on the side of your head at whatever angle best suits your current mood, batten it down with a band around the back or even a hatpin, and then go out and join in a sporting battle with the spring breezes.
There is one redeeming feature about the new skimmers. They have done away with the unsightly elastic bands that decorated last spring's version of this particular style of headgear, and have substituted bands of ribbon or felt or straw to match the hat.

New Silhouette Featured by Alix and Schiaparelli There is much discussion and some difference of opinion expressed concerning the new draped lines which had their most prominent exponents in Alix and Schiaparelli dresses. These influences, variously related to the Hindu, the Persian and the Iranian, are best known in the sari-draped togas familiar in Near East photographs.
The draping is in a soft, statuesque line, swirled round the body in a continuous movement from ankles to head.
Several arrivals consider it a significant new silhouette trend, promising more for later season development.
Others are inclined to disregard draping, considering it too extreme.

Spring Accessories Matter of Importance to Fashion Accessories are going to be matters of prime fashion importance this spring for there are "ginger and snap" in the way they are put together. Here is the way one chic Parisian accents a black and white check suit: Yellow straw hat with black band, yellow blouse and yellow chamols gloves, blue cufflinks in the buttonhole, black suede bag and gloves.

Getting Out
Officer—What is your business?
Prisoner—I'm a locksmith.
Officer—Then what were you doing
in that place we just raided?
Prisoner—I was making a bolt for the door.

Tough
"Scientists recently dug up the remains of an old Roman prison and found some petrified prisoners, the paper reports."
"They must be those hardened criminals you read about."

GENTLEMEN OF THE JURY

The prosecuting counsel was having a little trouble with a rather difficult witness. Exasperated by the man's evasive answers, he asked him if he was acquainted with any of the jury.
"Yes, sir, more than half of them," replied the man in the box.
"Are you willing to swear that you know more than half of them?" asked counsel.

"If it comes to that, I'm willing to swear that I know more than all of 'em put together," came defiantly from the witness.—Answers Magazine.

HONK! HONK!

Friend—Didn't you know enough to get out of the way of an auto?
Victim—No; I'm not used to walking.
You see I own one of the things myself.

A Bit of Luck
"Oh, yes," said Jones, "my wife speaks six languages, you know."
"Well, I shouldn't worry," put in his friend.
Jones stared searchingly at him.
"What do you mean by that?" he asked.
His friend smiled back at him.
"Well, she can't speak more than one of them at a time, can she?" he replied.—Answers Magazine.

Weight of Wo
Tramp—Lady, won't you help a poor man that lost his family in the Yorkshire flood and all his money in a crash?
Housewife—Why, you are the same man that lost a family in the South Wales flood and was shell-shocked during the war.

Tramp—Yes, lady. I'm the unfortunate guy on the face of the earth.— Pearson's Weekly.

More Delightful Than Permanent Campaign Speaker—Fellow citizens —Ah—er—um, as I was about to remark, I believe that the generality of man in general is disposed to take an undue advantage of the generality of—Man in Audience—You better sit down. You're coming out at the same hole you went in at.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Playing Safe
The hotel clerk was growing impatient as the prospect took so long to read the names on the register. "Just sign on that line, please," said the clerk.
The prospect was indignant and retorted: "Young man, I'm too old a hand to sign anything without readin' it."—Kansas City Star.

THAT'S SOMETHING

"Has Brown ever had much of a gold on you?"
"He succeeded in pulling my leg once."

Voice o' the Masses Social Uplifter—Do you know that one-half of the world doesn't know how the other half lives?
Voice from the Rear—It's a good thing some people know enough to mind their own business.—Kansas City Star.

Rainproof
Skeptical Miss—Can this coat be worn out in the rain without hurting it?
Fur Salesman—Lady, did you ever see a skunk carry an umbrella?

Out of Season
"What I want to do," said the economist, "is to persuade our young people to stick to the farm."
"It's a good idea," replied Farmer Cornstossel, "but it's out of season.
Come around when gettin' up at five o'clock in the morning 'n't such cold work."

At the Usual Rate
King Arthur—How much wilt thou take for that suit of armor, Lance?
Sir Lancelot—Three cents an ounce, Sire. It's first-class mail.

Getting Out
Officer—What is your business?
Prisoner—I'm a locksmith.
Officer—Then what were you doing
in that place we just raided?
Prisoner—I was making a bolt for
the door.

HIS VIEW
Blinks—What do you think of this home loan plan?
Jinks—Not needed. Why bother about having a home any more when you can't keep any of the family in it as long as there is gas enough in the tank of the car to get away from it?—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Saving Idea
Robert, eight, had prayed long and ardently for a baby sister but with-

'em out anyway."

Lays Out Work for Congress

Washington, President Roosevelt has submitted to congress a list of the legislation he deems necessary to be passed before the present session adjourns. He has divided it into two categories—"must" and desirable. If congress enacts only the list of "must" legislation and passes over the other group of bills which the President considers desirable, it is made to appear that the membership of the house and senate is due to suffer some of the torrid temperature and the uncomfortable humidity of a Washington summer. The President said he must have legislation extending the National Recovery administration, providing social security, eliminating public utility holding companies, increasing the loaning power of the Home Owners Loan corporation, extension of the so-called nuisance taxes which expire by limitation of law on June 30, and revision of the banking laws.

In addition, the President made known that he would like to have enacted legislation to take the profits out of war, whatever that may mean. He previously had sent a message asking enactment of a law providing for expansion of the American merchant marine through the use of ship subsidies, and he also desires to have enacted legislation setting up machinery for the settlement of labor disputes. This legislation is in the congressional hopper in the form of a bill by Senator Wagner, of New York.

The President would like to have amendments to the agricultural adjustment act in order to eliminate some of the weaknesses which the AAA people admit exist. The air mail contract situation is another matter with which Mr. Roosevelt has been concerned. Seasoned observers recognize that this list of "must" legislation, not to mention the desired legislation, is sufficient to keep congress grinding away far into the summer. They recognize likewise that if the desired legislation later becomes of such concern that the President wants to place it on the preferred list as well, the membership of congress must be prepared to forego summer trips of any kind.

Pets of Their Own

Since a good many members of congress have grown tired of being called rudder stamps for the administration, they naturally have turned attention to legislation which they think will be helpful to their own bailiwicks, to themselves personally or from a party standpoint. Thus there have been promoted numerous pieces of legislation for which some individuals, at least, entertain greater fervor than they do for measures that were drafted by President Roosevelt's official family and transmitted to congress as administration legislation. It is the general observation that an individual, representative, or senator frequently will go much further in fighting for legislation that is his own brain child than for legislation placed before him on a silver platter such as administration proposals have been. Consequently, individual or group measures are constantly cluttering up house and senate legislative calendars. This is a factor meaning delay for administration bills.

It is to be remembered, as has been reported in these columns, that Mr. Roosevelt is unable to ward off criticism of some of his proposals. Indeed, there have been Democratic criticisms and Democratic opposition to a greater or lesser degree to all of the legislation he has proposed since congress convened last January. All of which is by way of saying that congress faces weeks of committee work and floor debate despite the fact that the house Democratic leaders still retain rather solid control of a sufficient majority in the lower house of congress to drive through any pet measures of the administration. In the senate the situation is decidedly different.

Included in the legislation being fostered by individual members is the bill that would permit cabinet officers to appear on the floors of congress for questioning and explanation, such as occurs under the British and French parliamentary systems. The administration does not want this bill. It will have to exert some pressure to avoid passage. The reason is that the Roosevelt administration is no longer one in which the cabinet is dominant. Cabinet officers are only part of the scheme, and if congress wanted to inquire about the handling of relief money, which it probably will desire, it must talk with Administrator Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins is not in the cabinet. The same is true of NRA and to some extent to the AAA, although Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture theoretically is a superior officer to Administrator Davis. The administrator is definitely opposed to the passage of bonus legislation for the former soldiers, sailors and marines and it looks like a Presidential veto will be necessary to bring it through. The same is true of inflationary proposals of which there are many. The situation is one, therefore, in which Mr. Roosevelt will be constantly on his guard to prevent action which he does not want as well as being fortified at all times with pressure to put through the legislation he has described as necessary. Thus it is seen he is confronted with many complications which did not disturb him in the first two sessions of New Deal congresses and these complications mean a longer life for the current session.

Some "Must" Legislation

Let us examine the status of the legislation which the President said must be passed. The extension of the National Recovery administration is still far off. Senate hearings are Just ended and the house is still behind. No action can be taken in either body for several days. The present law expires June 15.

Recently Mr. Roosevelt sent congress a very bitter message demanding public utility holding companies and demanding legislation eliminating them from our economic structure. The house committee considering this legislation is just winding up its work and the senate committee which has jurisdiction has taken no action at all. It must be said that a bill of this nature is not likely to be passed because investors in these companies are not going to have their investments destroyed while they sit by. These investors are doing more than just making faces at congress. They are receiving in opposition to the holding companies legislation, anything that ever has happened in the memory of this correspondent.

The banking legislation which Roosevelt has proposed, or which he proposed for him by Governor Hoover, the New Deal and radical groups of the federal reserve board is being opposed equally as bitterly as well organized as that of the holding companies bill. It can be said that opposition to banking legislation is even stronger because in this fight the President will be opposed by all the members of the Glass of Virginia, who must be regarded as the most virulent of all the Democrats in the senate. The banking committee has about done its work with hearings on this bill but the Glass opposition will be felt not even set a date for committee consideration.

The social security bill about which Mr. Roosevelt has done much talk because it is distinctly a reform measure, has finally been redrafted in a house while senate leadership is able to get together on any project respecting it. Some senators were split up this bill and pass the bill providing for old age pensions, and the other parts of the bill will be a slow death. On the house side the Capitol there is a vigorous national dispute going on with Senator Roosevelt's official family on one side and some on the other. They have been unable to reconcile differences and the President has the job of reconciling the two families in the hands of his house leadership. It was the only way, according to astute observers, that he could avoid being dragged into a personal quarrel among members of his official family.

The legislation to increase by $50,000,000 the loaning power of the Home Owners Loan corporation probably will get through the senate without more ado. The house passed the bill because it could not do otherwise and individual members residing in the districts. Included in this bill is a line that promises a good many dredged jobs for politicians and that is natural that the party in power is going to overlook this possibility.

There remains on the "must" list, only the proposal to extend nuisance taxes which expire at the end of June. It is probable that a bulk of these levies will be cut off by congress as necessary but to stand there is some tendency to enactment of the bill until the end of the session. The President can see how much money the administration proposes spending and he wants to be prepared to raise the additional taxes against this money. The outgoing because fear in some quarters about the size of the national debt. Besides, it will be much easier to pass new taxes in this session of congress than in the next session opening January 3, 1936, where new taxes would be used against the party leadership in campaign speeches by the opposition.

About the Future

One cannot fail in tramping through Washington these days, to note the look for the deal and for the deal and for the deal. In fact, some hard-boiled servers lately have been heard to say that Mr. Roosevelt is suffering from too much ballyhoo. He was put on a pedestal that made of him the eyes of many persons somewhat of a superman. He himself is regretting having contributed to this situation by his many campaign promises of which he has found abundant practical as remedies in leading country out of the morasses and into a more satisfactory economic future. In truth, the President's own colleagues have continued to regard him as an individual capable of doing which no human can accomplish. This combination of circumstances declared by many to be unlikely, is already brought, a definitely political reaction from the President's standpoint.

It is still fresh in the minds of men and women throughout the country how President Hoover was overthrown as a superior person. It is administrative way. Mr. Hoover was from too much ballyhoo to be greater than any other man. He served as President with the exception of Woodrow Wilson during the depression came and the country turned against Mr. Hoover utterly powerless. With a power congress on his hands and a defeated people, Mr. Hoover was a man that must have been expected to be the more bitter of the two because of the greater distance because of the greater glamor that had been around him.

IMPORTANT DAYS in a Chick's Life

The most important spot in the life of a chick is its first feeding. At no time is the right care more important. Feeding your baby chicks is decidedly important because the first few weeks determines your chance for profit. If during the starting period your losses have been low and your chicks have built strong bodies your foundation for profit is laid.

Our mash insures better feathering, sounder, stronger and sturdier chicks. Feeding your baby chicks is decidedly important because the first few weeks determines your chance for profit. #### DANNY MEADOW MOUSE WISHES HE HAD STAYED HOME

WHEN Danny Meadow Mouse crept into the little hole in the bank of the Smiling Pool his heart was beating so fast it hurt. Then, too, he was so tired that it didn't seem to him he would be able to move again for a long time. You see, crossing the Smiling Pool was a long swim for such a little mouse. He had been in the water for a long time before, and so of course swimming tired him much more than it would have done had he been in the habit of swimming every day. It wouldn't have been so bad if he hadn't been obliged to swim just as fast as he possibly could. As it was, the Big Pickerel who lives in the Smiling Pool had almost caught him. So between his terrible fright and his hard work Danny was quite used up.

It Was the Head of Snapper, the Big Snapping Turtle.

Very quickly from fright and weariness. This is a wise provision of Old Mother Nature. If it were not so they would not be prepared to meet unexpected new dangers. So it wasn't a great while before Danny once more felt quite himself. He crept to the entrance of the hole in which he had found safety and peeped out. He wanted to see if Reddy Fox was still on the other bank of the Smiling Pool, and what his chances of getting back home in safety were. The Smiling Pool was as calm and peaceful and lovely as if no such thing as danger was ever known there. Over on the other bank Danny could see Reddy Fox. It was evident that Reddy had not given up hope of getting a meal of some kind at the Smiling Pool. Danny's big cousin, Jerry Muskrat, had just climbed out on the Big Rock with a lily root. This he began to eat.

Just watching him made Danny hungry. Grandfather Frog had once more climbed out on his big, green lily pad. Danny looked down into the water and his heart gave a little jump. Half hidden under some lily pads was the Big Pickerel who had so nearly caught him. Danny didn't need to be told that the Big Pickerel was lying there in the hope that Danny would once more take to the water.

Suddenly an ugly black head with wicked looking horny jaws was thrust out of the water in the middle of the Smiling Pool. It was the head of Snapper the big Snapping Turtle, and the very sight of him made Danny shiver, for he knew that nothing would suit Snapper better for a dinner than a fat meadow mouse. More than ever Danny wished he had stayed at home.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I heard a woman tell another that her husband reminded her of a furnace. What do you think she meant by that?

Truly yours, ROSE Z. PESEY. Answer: She simply means that he smokes all day and goes out at night.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I heard two men discussing animals. One said that while in India he saw a "man eating tiger." The other said that once while in Boston he saw a "man eating rabbit." Do you believe that?

Yours truly, IKE KANTSEIT. Answer: Well, it's possible.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I heard two actors talking the other day and one of them said he was looking for a man to take down some foot notes. I am a musician but have never heard of footnotes before. Were they kidding? If not, what instrument were they talking about?

Sincerely, SIM PHONY. Answer: Foot notes, my dear sir, come from a shoe horn.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am a girl eighteen years of age and for the first time in my life I went "stunning" last night. I felt hungry and went into a cheap restaurant and was surprised to see men eating with their knives. Can you tell me why people eat with their knives? Sincerely, I. PHEEL FINE. Answer: Merely to sharpen their appetites.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I heard my folks say as how fish gives yuh brains. If what they say is true, what kind of them there fish shall I eat? Yours truly, ALF. ALFA. Answer: Judging by your letter, I suggest a whale. © The Associated Newspapers, WNU Service.

MARRIAGE

By ANNE CAMPBELL

ABOVE the din of the children, Above the sweeping and dusting, Above the ugly and sordid, Like a white bird thrusting Into the heavenly blue, There rides the thought of you!

Above the worry and planning, Above the day's endless labor, Above the ceaseless adjustment, Like a shining saber Cleaving the clouds that will form, Is your love, true and warm!

Above the monotonous hours, Above the wreck of our dreaming, Above the illness and sorrow, Like a bright star gleaming, Shines ever constant and true, Your love for me, my love for you!

Picture of San Francisco Bay in 1937

UPON an aerial photograph of San Francisco bay, with Oakland in the background, architects for the San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge have drawn, in scale a representation of the world's largest bridge, 8 1/4 miles long (nearly four miles over water), which will connect Alameda and San Francisco counties. The west half of the bridge is a suspension structure comprising twin suspension bridges anchored into a huge concrete monument in the center. A double-deck tunnel pierces Yerba Buena Island, occupied by army, navy and lighthouse services, and the double-deck bridge continues over a 1,400-foot cantilever span, 5 through truss spans, and 14 deck truss spans before it lands on a fill extending out from the Oakland shore. At the eastern shore, trestles carry the bridge traffic out to three branches—one for Berkeley, one for Oakland, and one for the business section of Oakland and Alameda. The piers of this bridge—51 in number—set new marks on engineering frontiers, going deeper below water than any previous substructure has heretofore been built. Some of the piers go as far as 237 feet below low tide. The two suspension bridges have 2,310-foot main spans. The lower deck carries two tracks for interurban electric cars and three lanes for heavy trucks, and the upper deck carries a 58-foot highway for six lanes of automobiles. The clearance for ships at high tide is 227 feet, 37 feet higher than the masts of any ship now afloat.

Lost in the Woods

To "What's the use of being king?" did she answer, "the privilege of working hard, of worrying much, of subordinating personal desires, and—perhaps of serving a little?" Did she reveal the disillusioning fact that one of the chief privileges of power, as of success, is the unceasing struggle to hold that possession? That happens to be more true of kings today than it used to be. But it is a law of nature that the top of any heap is the place where you have to guard against falling. What's the use of being on top if you can't have what you want? Boy, "you said a mouthful!" © Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

CUTTING PATCHES FOR QUILTS

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

When making a patch quilt the patches must be cut out right if the finished quilt is to look neat. Sewing seams the same width is also very important. These two points should always be watched as work progresses, to obtain good results, and not have trouble after work is well under way. Cut the patches from accurate cut-out diagrams. The cut-out diagrams shown here are a set for the "Dresden Plate" and "Basket" quilts, and include allowance for seams. Any width for seams may be used but always use the same width in one quilt, to come out right. Directions for use are very simple. Place cut-out on material so the longest dimension follows the weave. Mark outline with pencil and cut out material carefully.

Send 10 cents to our quilt dept. and we mail you both of these fiber cut-outs set No. 83a and 10a. Address Home Craft Co.—Dept. D.—Nineteenth and St. Louis avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

Candle as Timepiece

There is one man in England who still times his work by candles. He is George Ashley, who burrows deep in the earth at Brandon in Suffolk, searching for the flints which his mate, Herbert Field, chips to fit the old flintlock guns still used in primitive places. They are two of the last flint-knappers, and old Mr. Ashley is surely the only man in England who prefers a candle to a watch as a timekeeper. Though he is seventy-one he still makes his way each morning down a shaft fifty feet deep, looking for flints as did Stone age men in pits close by when they wanted to renew their arrowheads and axes. Besides his lunch he takes with him two candles, and when these are burned through he climbs up out of the pit and goes home. They tell him when his day's work is done.

THE BOY SAID A MOUTHFUL

THE king of Yugoslavia was asked what he wanted for Christmas. "A motorcycle," he answered. "But, Peter," said his grandmother, "you can't have that—you're much too young to ride a motorcycle!" "But I am the king!" said Peter. We will not envy the king's grandmother the job of enlightening him. The question reminds us of similar ones, asked by adults. "What's the use of being boss, when I'm not free to do as I please?" "What's the use of my position, when it only complicates life for me?" "What's the use of success, when it does not bring me happiness?" Did his grandmother tell the boy king that his mistake was neither an
