By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

TOLLYWOOD, which of late years has probably contributed as much as literature to the and habits, is now going to work on blurred. To make matters worse, the shaping of American tastes our color sense. Producers of moving pictures in the next year are going to and forced the Technicolor Motion Picspend $150,000,000 in Hollywood, more than they ever spent before in any one year, and a considerable part of this vast sum will go into the making of pictures which not only move and talk, but will appear on the screen in all of the natural colors of their scenes and

It is not rash to predict that whole new schemes of decoration, new styles believe this is possible, think back for shadowy figures of the screen had ever been endowed with the power of speech. The picture revolutionized the entire industry and lifted it from a doubtful and often slapstick quantity to one of the most important influences in American life. The picture grossed $3,500,-

Now after many years of effort, moving pictures have been given another dimension, so to speak. We are allowed to see them in their true colors. made into a movie called "Becky Sharp," in which the old varying shades of gray are banished in favor of full reproduction in natural color, bringing It was followed by "Three Little Pigs," to life the polychrome resplendency of Becky's colorful time and sphere in every hue on the spectrum.

Another Step Forward.

Color, say the producers and most of the critics, may be just as much a revolution as was sound eight years ago. It will not come so swiftly, however, for color is expensive, delicate to administer. Mistakes will undoubtedly be made, for color in the hands of a master can make the motion picture a thing of incomparable art, but a bungler could make it as frightful as a Christmas neck-tie. There will be both masters and bunglers. There always have been, in Hollywood, Color in motion pictures is really almost as old as the cinema itself. Only natural color is new.

The first colored movie, like so many other "firsts," was produced by Thomas Alva Edison in 1894. It was "Anna Belle, the Dancer." Every separate panel of film was tinted by hand, like we sometimes tint photographs today. All the colors were there, but not as you would see them if you looked at them in the flesh. The tinting artist was a sort of artistic embalmer. You looked at Anna Belle and said, "My, don't she look natural; they sure did the film audience for color, many films, drawn, some even 1,000 feet in length, were colored by this long and laborious process.

Since Edison's attempt more than 250 methods of making colored films have made an appearance. These are basically split into four different groups as to process: hand tinted, prismatic, thio-indoxyl and tone films. The last named is bracketed into two divisions known as additive and subtractive color processes.

Back in 1928 and 1929, fresh from sound. Warner Brothers decided to cated and wary New Yorker said: go the whole hog and make them

Responsible for Progress.

Although there are other companies -41 of them-in the field, who may later produce better color films, it is in dress, new fads in make-up for Technicolor which is responsible for women will be the result. If you don't the present state of perfection. It was named for the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the alma mater of Dr. Mae West says, "Come up and see | Herbert T. Kalmus, who began experimenting with color cinematography (which is the elegant word for "shooting" movies) upon his graduation in

Meriam C. Cooper in the fall of 1925 returned from tropical jungles with a film called "Chang." Not even the sucthe Crystal Palace ball-room at Paw cess of this film could placate Cooper Paw lake, Michigan. A popular movie, for the loss of exquisite jungle beauty "It Happened One Night," shows long when it was reproduced in varying sequences with Clark Gable riding in shades of gray, rather than in all its based, of course, upon the fairy tale a cross-country bus; a few weeks later | primitive, colored splendor. Cooper a Florida bus line reports that its determined to create color movies and undertaking this is may be understood women passengers have increased associated himself with Dr. Kalmus. Their work progressed slowly, but

It was the first time the color picture. It caused no flurries of excitement. Then in 1928 the boom came-and went.

Two years later Dr. Kalmus improved his process so that a full and faithful range of colors could be shown and images could be given definite outline. By this time nobody in Hollywood could be interested-except young Walt Disney, best known as the father of "Mickey Mouse." Disney had never allowed precedent to interfere with his art. He believed Thackeray's "Vanity Fair" has been in Technicolor and backed his belief with a "Silly Symphony," called "Flowers and Trees," produced by the new process. It was artistically successful. which certainly needs no introduction anywhere in the world where there is a motion picture house and which has often been said (seriously) to have done more than any other one thing to take the mind of the world off the gloom of depression.

Whitneys Take It Up.

Certainly Mr. Disney's porkers ended the depression for Technicolor, for they it was who interested John Hay ("Jock") Whitney and his cousin, Cornelius Vanderbilt ("Sonny") Whitney in color movies. The Whitney millions bought 15 per cent of the shares of Technicolor Motion Picture corporation and organized Pioneer Pictures, Inc., to produce pictures by that process.

One of the first steps of the Whitneys was a wise one. From the New York stage they brought Robert Edmond Jones, whose design work for "Rebound," "Mourning Becomes Electra," "Ah, Wilderness!" and other plays had established him as the leader in

With Jones as the minister of the palette, Pioneer produced an experimental two-reeler, which proved definitely that natural colors had arrived on the screen. The picture, "La Cucaracha," grossed $250,000, more than a good job on her." Yet so eager was any short in black and white had ever

"Becky Sharp" followed. It cost approximately $1,000,000. Whether or not it shows a profit does not concern the Whitneys much. To them, the important thing is that, artistically, it has been hailed by most critics as a success, as the final "arrival" of natural color to the screen. Some critics were cold to it, but they felt that way not because of imperfections in color reproduction, but because of the tremendous possibility that abuse may, and in their opinion, will, destroy color sweeping triumphs in movies with films. As the reviewer of the sophisti-"What someone else, someone other eight more color movies. It has been reported that the next one will contain songs and dances. Every motion picture studio in southern California is already beginning to experiment once more with the colored cinema, or is actually planning the production of a film in natural colors. It costs about 30 per cent more to make a picture in colors than to make it in black and white, not counting additional staging extravagances. It has been conservatively estimated that there will be at least 10 fulllength color features made during 1936, that in three years half the films will be in color and that by the end of five years at least 90 per cent of all the films made in Hollywood, at least, will e in color. One of the most ambitious of the new color movies will be the one now in production at the Disney studios. It will be the first full-length animated cartoon ever made, and will be called 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," of the same name. What a stupendous from the fact that somewhere between 80,000 and 100,000 separate drawings In 1927 Al Jolson sang a song called in 1921 they were able to make "Toll and exposures will be necessary to a "Sonny Boy" in a picture entitled "The of the Sea," with Anna May Wong, a cartoon of this length. It has already been in the making a year and a half another year and a half to complete it. The cost will approximate $350,000.

Only this fall will you begin to see animated cartoons other than the Disney product on the screen in all of the primary colors. That is because Disney, with his customary foresight, acquired a year's exclusive contract on the use of full Technicolor for animated cartoons. That contract expires some time this month. The other cartoons you have seen in colors of late were made by the old two-color proc-

Technicolor is made in the subtracive color process which has been mentioned. There are three separate magazines of film which run through the camera. Each of them photographs one of the primary colors from which all colors are compounded. From each of the negatives a matrix (which may be loosely termed as similar to an engraved plate such as is used in printing) is made.

How It's Done.

A properly prepared film holds the master black. Color impressions are process of imbibition. The dyes used are cyan (minus red), magenta (minus green) and yellow (minus blue). All colors must be transferred to the master black film before the color print is

Such an explanation is, of course, vague at best, but is about all that can be accomplished within the limits of a short article.

The process is foolproof, in that it is impossible to alter the colors. The camera registers the colors exactly as possible are lack of taste in preparing the settings and lack of precision in printing the film.

Certainly it will be no eye-strain to enjoy your favorite star's complete beauty, color of hair, lips, eyes and all. Or will it? For instance you will perhaps be surprised to learn that Myrna Loy has green eyes-but don't fear, for they're beautiful, just the Colorists are predicting that there will be a new vogue for blondes because of color pictures, for the best type for such films is the true blonde with cleanly chiseled features.

And for you girls who would like to get into pictures, here's good news! You won't have to diet so strenuously. Color pictures make you look slimmer! @ Western Newspaper Union.

Time and Its Mysteries Described by Scientist

In the earliest days of civilization in Babylonia some of the priest-scientists who kept watch of the sun and of the so-called sexigesimal system of stars evidently noticed either that the seasons repeat themselves after about 360 days or that many of the heavenly bodies come back to similar positions in the sky after about this same

Doctor Breasted suggests that it may have begun as first one-sixth of a year, there being some evidence using a counting unit of 60, the basis that the ancient Babylonian name for 60, which was "shusshu," originally meant "one-sixth." On this theory, the next step would have been to divide the 360 days of the ancient year, into sixths, thus giving groups of 60 days each, which soon developed into the 60 unit and which still survive after many historical vicissitudes in

U. S. Representative from Georgia. THERE are many reasons why I the house and senate should quickly adjourn this session of the Seventy-fourth congress. Chief among the reasons is the fact that more than 20 of our colleagues-to be exact, 26-are now either in hospitals or at their homes suffering from heart trouble or a nervous breakdown. This congress has worked long, and faithfully, and well, and, personally, I insist that the senate bring its business quickly to an end so that we may agree on the matters that must be agreed upon between the house and the senate, and that all future hearings on house bills, many of which I am for, be extended until a session in the fall or the next session beginning in January. This share-the-wealth, soak-the-rich and save-the-poor legislation, some of which I am in favor of, can wait six months longer, because the rich will not get too rich in a few more months, and the wealth can then be shared and the poor are being taken care of now, and I am personally appealing to the membership of the house to let us adjourn this session immediately.

THE SANE LIFE By DR. HAROLD WILLIS DODD President, Princeton University.

HE devastation of the World I war and its catastrophic aftermath have been interpreted by some as revealing the emptiness of accepted values and the need for newly fabricated loyalties if one is to be modern and free. But every man needs something to live by and to live for, and those who have jettisoned received standards perforce turn to strange gods most astonishingly bizarre and fanciful. In the look ahead which today I urge you to take, be sure to find a place for intellectual and cultural interests outside your daily occupation. It is necessary that you do so if this business of living is not to turn to dust and ashes in your mouth. Moreover, do not overlook the claims of religion as the explanation of an otherwise unintelligible world.

It is not the fast tempo of modern life that kills but the boredom, a lack of strong interest and failure to grow that destroy. It is the feeling that nothing is worth while that makes men | printed chiffon which silhouettes huge Ill and unhappy.

AMBITIOUS NATIONS By NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER Chairman, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

TT HAS become clear that treatl ies count for nothing in the face of national ambition and of what the ruling statesmen regard as transferred from the matrices to this national security. Therefore Japan is master film by the use of what are moving steadily toward the extension called subtractive primary dyes, in a of her control over a vast portion of Asia. Therefore Italy is feeling her way toward the acquisition of new territory and new economic opportunity in Africa, while Germany is, so to speak, tossing in her bed, stirred with ambition to extend her authority toward the south and the southeast.

To deal with a complicated and very real situation such as this will tax the world's wisdom and the world's statesmanship to the utmost. These conditions, serious as they are, become more so when it is realized how closely they it sees them. The only human errors are bound up with the various revolutionary movements now actively going forward in the fields of economics, politics and the social order.

PREPARING FOR WAR By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE

Former British Prime Minister. THE situation from the view-I point of peace is in many respects worse than before 1914.

I was in the business before 1914. Then every one as now was talking about peace, but every one just as now was preparing feverishly for war. The nations were maneuvering for war positions. Watch-for it is going on now. Each of them was as certain as now that their conduct was actuated by a sincere desire for peace and that their armaments were intended exclusively for defense.

Glamorous Midsummer Silk Prints

how extravagant, how eloquent or picturesque, fall short of describing them. It is impossible to capture their beauty of color and design and release it via mere words. Like the full blown rose that reaches perfection of bloom in midsummer, the lovely prints now worn, especially the sumptuous evening prints, have reached to such heights of glamorous beauty one's very being thrills at the sight of them.

The enchanting gowns here pictured are self-explanatory as to why women continue to adore prints. The superlative loveliness of the stately model to the left in the group carries the message that no happier choice can be made in the way of a summery evening gown than a filmy, vaporous white waterlilies touched with pink and green shadows against a misty black background. The scarflike arrangement which falls across the shoulders, floating in summer airiness at every move, is typical of current styl-

This print is vivid with splashes and dashes of warm tropical colors-as gay, as gorgeous as a bird of brilliant exotic plumage.

The lovely dress with a cape centered in the picture has a story of fascinating interest to tell. It is of violet-gray mousseline de soie. Huge flower appliques, cutouts from a silk IDSUMMER prints are simply gor- poppy print, are festooned on the capgeous. Adjectives, no matter forming a garland about the shoulders, also spiraling around the skirt in double file. The soft sash is of chartreuse green silk taffeta.

This gown is especially significant in that it demonstrates the use of cutout florals from printed fabric as a trimming feature. Designers are doing very clever things along this line of thought. One striking effect is the lei or garland which is worn about the shoulders like a boa or necklace, or is used to finish low-cut necklines, that is made entirely of cutout flowers taken from gay printed chiffons or crepes or whatever the silken material may be. Boutonnieres made of the same print as the frocks with which they are worn are also smartly in vogue. Perhaps one of the most unique and charming adapations of cutout print florals is seen in sleeves which are formed of the flower motifs which are caught in the center only, the petals fluttering out as if they were real flowers. These flower sleeves contrast a monotone frock. By the way, advance news in regard to fall fashions places special emphasis on the approaching vogue of contrasting sleeves, such as lace or silk print or embroidered sleeves used with monotone silk

Again, speaking of the use of cutout print motifs, cunning collar and cuff sets are formed in the manner described above. The theme is one that may be handsomely worked out for bridesmaids' hat and muff sets.

The flair for beautiful prints also expresses itself in that several dressmakers are making up plain chiffon over printed satin slips. The effect is entrancing. A timely hint for your next party dress.

now into Gail's heart comfort came creeping back, new interest, new hope -the still small voice of the Lord. Thus began the new life, in the unchanged setting of the old. Gail did not know whether what she dreamed and what she wrote was good or was not good, nor did she care. It had to come, and the coming was a sort of ecstatic bearing-a giving of life. In April she had the letter: a dozen typewritten lines:

"Dear Miss Lawrence: "The readers report that, delightful as this story is, it is 'not quite in our tone.' The feeling of the Atlantic is that, when a tale is as intimately true to life as this is of yours, the tone is according to a note surely a tone for the Atlantic to adopt. "It gives us much pleasure to accept so admirable a story. "Very truly yours.

> "The Editor" The dull old grimy kitchen swooped and soared about her. She had been hulling strawberries, putting every twelfth one into Danny's expectant mouth, open at her knee.

The letter from the Atlantic had strawberry juice on it; no matter. It shook like a tacking sail as she read it. "Phil! Look here a minute." "My-Gawd!" said Phil, upon read-

"Read it, Sam!"

don't suppose I'm-I'm going to write!" "Well, for heaven's sakes," Lily said patiently, "the way you carried on, I thought some one was dead!"

Gail sat at the table, her elbows resting on the worn oilcloth, pressing the crushed letter against her face. She felt as if her body had taken wings and was about to lift itself up into the had established her shapeless person wearily on his knee. Phil's eyeglassed eves looked over Lily's head.

"'Bout time something good came to you, Gail," Phil said simply. His sister felt the words to be an accolade. "Oh, I can't believe it-it isn't me!"

Gail whispered. "It's-it's the Lawrence luck, coming back!"

She got up and carried the glass dish of strawberries into the dining room. She lifted the cover of the pail, and poured the lightly tumbling hulls down into it. Then with a damp old rag she wiped the oilcloth, afterward at the sink rubbing her finger tips with a withered half lemon. And all the time the juice-stained letter blazed in the breast pocket of her old midshipman's blouse like a burning jewel.

CHAPTER X

So came Clippersville to be proud of another Lucky Lawrence. A thousand pleasant little episodes, as the summer wore along, told Gail that she was famous and that her old friends and when Lily was home and neighbors were glad. The Challenge ran her picture with a flattering article. Patrons of the old library, coming and going in the hot afternoons, smiled at her over the the trunks of the oaks and broad desk top.

"Tickled to death to hear we have an authoress!" the women whispered, nodding and smiling. Gail would flush brightly, joyfully, in return. She saw them all differently now, these busy, strained young mothers, with their babies in rompers and sun-bonnets; these shapeless big middle-aged women with their corsets showing under their dingy voiles. They were her marionettes now; they moved to the strings in her fingers. Walking home, in the burning bright sunset, she looked at the hills that ringed sleepy Clippersville, those gauzy, transparent hills that were the color of the sky all summer long. She looked at the great oaks and the locusts that lined the Calle, and the magnolias and peppers on the lawns. She looked at the stout women in cottage gardens; women with hair wetly, smoothly dressed; women watering marigolds and wallflowers in the afternoon shadows. They were all beautiful

She did not know why.

She had letters from persons, faraway unknown persons, praising her story when it was published. Gail answered them simply, unable to believe the words that flowed from her fountain pen. She could presently write:

"If you liked 'Simply Impossible,' I hope you will like 'Post Office Closed Tomorrow.' It is coming out very soon in some magazine."

The great Barnes Rutherford, ill. idling in a palace on the Maine coast, wrote her. He, sixty-five, the dean of the greatest profession of all, could find time to write to a little Clippersville girl, and tell her he thought "Simply Impossible" was a good story!

Even more touching were the literary folk of Clippersville. It had so many! Wistful, discarded men and women, living in shabby little gaslighted cottages smothered in dusty vines, suddenly appeared on all sides, and proudly claimed kinship with the writer. Gail accepted their condescensions graciously; she knew that she was not of their ilk.

Miss Libby Gatty had sold a story to the Black Cat twenty-five years ago: a story that one of the judges had thought deserved first prize. Miss Lou Bennett had known Edward Townsend, who wrote the Chimmie Fadden stories, when she had been in New York with her uncle in 1897, and had met Archibald Clavering Gunter.

"Oh, my uncle knew everybody!" said Miss Lou, tossing her withered head, growing splotchy in the face at the mere exciting memory. "He knew Frank Munsey; he knew everybody!"

Tottering old Kane Rissette had had quite a literary experience as one of the publicity agents of a big railroad in the days before he drank so hard. He lived with a widowed sister now, and Min Rissette Riggs kept him in order. He delighted in remembering all the literary lights who had come into the office of the railroad magazine and paid their written, and sometimes rhymed, tributes to California.

Then there were the poets, most of them women. They tremblingly brought out for Gail's inspection their hoarded clippings, discolored strips of newspaper or magazine pages. Mrs. Jadwin. who ran a boarding house down by the flour mills, had once won a twenty-fivedollar prize for a poem called "Cloud "Oh, my dear!' said Hatty Schenck, who wrote women's club news for the newspapers all over the state, and nature poems beginning "Hail!" and whose pen name was "Lillian Lynne." "Oh, my dear, is there any moment in the world like the one when you know you're getting it, you're in the mood? For, you know, I can't always write," Hatty rushed on "Sometimes . . . "

There were times when she just felt dull and blank, as if she'd never written a line. And then, suddenly, perhaps when she was in the kitchen with Mamma . . .

"Oh, I know!" Gail would sympathize, with dancing eyes. And all the time, deep within her. she knew that she and Hatty were not alike. She knew that she could lean down to Hatty, but that Hatty could never reach up to her. It made her humble, and sometimes, when it came to her with a fresh pang of realization that only Edith could have shared all this truly, that only Edith would have appreciated it-indeed, that she owed much of it to the poem-loving, bookloving, truth-loving little sister-she felt a deeper sorrow even than the younger sorrow had been. Lily sat sewing or idling on the side porch in the afternoon, and the three little boys worked in the wide yard.* Sam and Phil had carried their work as far as trimming off the dry limbs of oaks and peppers; the shorn trees sent rich lacy shadows across the new sheen of the grass.

"Lily, what's for dinner?" Gail would ask out of a dream.

"The cream puffs and corn and the peaches, and there's a lot of cold rice. I thought maybe poached eggs." "It's too hot for meat." Silence again.

"Thinking up another story, Gail?" "Well, there's one kind of teasing "I can kinder tell by your eyes when you're thinking of your sister," Lily said once. "Edith?" "Well, I was thinking of Ariel, then."

"Ariel . . ." Gail always spoke the name on a long sigh. "She couldn't wait," she would muse aloud sorrowfully. "Doesn't it seem funny, Lily, for a person to go away-just as if she had died-and never to write-never to send any word?" TO BE CONTINUED.

Losing Its Rattle Contrary to the popular belief, you cannot always tell a rattlesnake's age by the number of joints on its rattle. This reptile is born with nothing more than a horny nob at the end of its tail, but after three days it sheds its skin and a joint is added to the nob. The skin-shedding process is repeated several times a year, and with each succeeding molt another bony ring is added. Until it has accumulated four or five joints the rattlesnake cannot make more than a faint rustling sound, but as the number of joints increases it is able to express annoyance by rapidly vibrating its tail, producing a shrill "rattle" which may be heard 20 yards away. When the number of joints exceeds seven, they generally begin to break off, so that when an elderly rattlesnake loses its temper it also loses Edith's going, the unthink- matic. BALANCED RATION FOR YOUNG TURKS

Adequate Nutrition Needed in Early Growth.

By L. E. Cline, University of Nevada, Agri-cultural Extension Expert. WNU Service.

Unless young turkeys are fed a proper ration during their period of most growth, they are likely to show very poor net returns at marketing time. All the needed elements of nutrition must be provided in adequate quantities and in proper proportions to obtain maximum development. These requirements are not always taken seriously by some turkey raisers.

At the present stage in their growth, the young turkeys are building their skeletons, muscle tissues, feathers, and body organisms at a rapid rate, all of which requires special kinds of food in definite proportions.

Many of the ills of their turkeys which are so discouraging to turkey growers at this time of year are the direct result of malnutrition, and can be corrected through a properly balanced ration if prompt action is taken. Loose, flabby crops, which often become troublesome, are the result of insufficient protein. Turkeys up to two months of age should have at least a 25 per cent protein ration. After this time the protein can be gradually reduced to 14 or 16 per cent at fattening

If the proportion of total ash in the feed exceeds 7 or 8 per cent, there is great danger of the young poults developing leg deformities. At the first showing of leg trouble the per cent of ash in the ration should be looked into and lowered if too high.

Stuck-up eyes and nostrils, as well as puffy sinues, are often the result of insufficient fresh green feed. Deformed breasts and back bones also are caused by this deficiency in vitamin A which can be obtained from green feed. Serious loss to the turkey farmer can result from the lack of green feed or a proper substitute,

A properly balanced ration may cost more per pound than one which is thrown together without thought of the turks' needs. Since this is the time when the foundation for the turkey crop is being laid, it is poor economy in the long run to skimp on the principal means of building the flock.

Water Glass, Lime Water

to Preserve Eggs for Year There are two methods of preserving eggs which are practical for the average family. One is to preserve them in water glass, and the other is to keep them in a solution of lime water. Water glass is available at most drug stores, and is reasonable in price. The material is dissolved in water and the eggs should be immersed in the solution.

A solution of lime water may be made by dissolving burnt lime in water and pouring off the clear solution after the lime has settled. The clear solution is used for preserving the Only clean, fresh eggs with sound shells should be put in these solutions to be preserved. Stone fars make satisfactory containers for preserving eggs in this way. Usually eggs can be kept in good condition for a year in either water glass or lime water solution .-Massachusetts State College.

Line Breeding

A definition of line breeding given by a prominent poultry breeder is: "Line breeding is a form of systematic inbreeding in which an effort is made to keep away from too close inbreeding. It is really, in its ordinary use, breeding confined to the blood lines of a single family. The details of this practice vary considerably with different breeders, but the purpose is the same in each case, namely, to avoid the necessity of introducing blood of another strain or family with the disastrous results to the uniformity of the strain which often accompanies such introduction of blood. Line breeding, whether known by this name or not, is almost universally used by successful breeders, but is often accompanied by the occasional and judicious introduction of outside blood."-Missouri Farmer.

Breaking Broody Hens

Broody hens should be confined in a salt-bottomed or wire-netting floored coop for three or four days. When confined they should be fed laying mash and given an ample supply of fresh water. A grain diet will prolong the broody period. Hens that are not easily broken of the broodiness should promptly be culled out of the flock, since they spend so much time trying to set that they cannot be profitable to the busy poultryman who has a large

Egg-Canning Grows

Notwithstanding sharp competition from China, the egg-canning industry in the Chicago market has shown a steady development in recent years, and four companies are now operating in this market, with an annual output valued at over $500,000. The progress of the egg canning industry in Chicago has become a highlight in recent years. The business runs into approximately 150,000,000 pounds annually. A case of eggs yields from 35 to 36 pounds of the shelled product.

"Standard of Perfection"

Every breeder should know the requirements set up in the "Standard of Perfection" for his breed and variety. says a writer in the Los Angeles Times, He should become especially familiar with the standard for size and body conformations. Six-pound Rock hens, for example, are not standard; they should weigh seven and a half pounds. The "Standard" says that Rhode Island Reds should be "a rich, brilliant red except where black is specified." Buff color falls short of this standard.

The success of any sponge cake depends first upon using fine granulated sugar, well sifted (several times) flour, and preferably cake flour, and upon the baking. What Is Wealth?

A woman has said in court that with $200,000 to her name she would not call herself rich. In another court a bankrupt said that he did not feel wealthy on $10,000 a year and sometimes was very hard up. An actress who had more than $20,-000 a year has told how she had to spend $30,000. These people have missed a lot of fun. A man who feels rich because he has a dollar in his pocket is fifty times as well off as any of them. His is a grand and glorious feeling. - Manchester (Eng.) During the first six months of 1935, this bank made 50 loans totaling approximately $50,000.00. In this territory there are many people who have maintained their credit standing and reputation for financial responsibility throughout the difficult years just passed. To such individuals we are naturally making loans. Through them we are putting dollars to work in this community and trade territory. Sound loans are an important part of our business and we are ready to consider them at ALL times.

Statesmen in Geneva Struggle to Prevent Italo-Ethiopian War - Progress of the New Deal Measures in Congress.

Aloisi, Italian delewas "entirely unacceptable." However, hope was not abandoned for there was a chance that modifications could be made that would satisfy the demands of the Italians, Unofficially, it was said the British-French formula dealt with these 1. Conciliation and arbitration is to ciliation commission. 4. Signatories of the 1906 treaty-Great Britain, France, and Italy-will lend their good offices to obtain a general broad solution of the conflict. Italy was expected to protest against time limits fixed in the draft of the projected peace formula.

One deadline was set for September 1. by which time the arbitrators on the Italo-Ethiopian conciliation commission, who would resume their work, would be required to report to the league council.

Another time limit was set for September 4, when the three powers and Ethiopia would be required to report their findings to the league council. In any event the council would be scheduled to meet September 4. One important concession was made to Italy in the formula. It was agreed that the ownership of Ualual, scene of the frontier conflict involved, should not be discussed. The Ethiopian contention has been that responsibility for the border clash could not be established without the ownership of the locality being first determined. Emperor Haile Selassie met his chieftains in council at Addis Ababa and they told him it might be now too late to prevent war for their tens of thousands of fighters were eager for hostilities to begin and could hardly be restrained. The emperor, however, sought to hold the chiefs back. At the same time he issued another defiant note informing the world that Ethiopia never would accept an Italian or other mandate, adding: "No amount of prosperity under foreign domination would compensate for the loss of independence."

Mussolini seized control of Italy's metal and fuel imports for use in the expected war, and several thousand more soldiers and workmen sailed for

I ED by George Huddleston of L Alabama, the members of the house who opposed the "death sentence" in the utilities bill scored another victory over the supporters of that plan of the New Dealers. Sam Rayburn's motion that the house agree to the senate action on the bill was defeated, 210 to 155. Rayburn argued, pleaded and threatened, but to no avail. He warned the representatives that those who voted against his motion would be incurring the wrath of the administration, and at the last moment had read testimony before the senate lobbying committee to the effect that a New Jersey man had suggested the utilities companies start a whispering campaign regarding the sanity of the New Deal leaders. Still the big majority in the house insisted on rejecting the Rayburn motion. Then the house, by a vote of 183 to 172, adopted a resolution which virtually called for the exclusion of Ben Cohen, administration lobbyist, from future conferences on the bill.

DEMOCRATIC congressmen started the week briskly determined to push through the President's "soak the rich" tax bill at this session. Opposing them with equal determination were a number of the hardest fighting Republicans who insist that consideration of taxation be postponed until next winter and that meantime the question be studied carefully in connection with the budget for the next fiscal year. These Republicans are urgently calling for an early adjournment of congress. Senator Hastings of Delaware has introduced a resolution setting August 10 as the day for quitting and was trying to have it brought up for consideration before passage of the tax measure. Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, often mentioned as a Presidential possibility. also demanded postponement of the tax legislation until January, and he gave out a statement denouncing the administration's plan as a "sterile political gesture" which would raise "only a little extra pocket change" and declared that "we chatter of taxes in An executive order from the White House directed the secretary of the treasury to make available to the senate committee all incomes, excess profit, and capital stock tax returns to the extent necessary in the investigation with the so-called "holding company bill or any other matter or proposal affecting legislation." DRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S bill to bar suits for damages growing out of the abrogation of the gold clause in government obligations was the subject of violent debate in the senate banking and currency committee, and it emerged with an amendment offered by Senator McAdoo which permts suits already filed and those that may be filed within six months after the effective date of the act.

Senator Glass and six others on the committee bitterly opposed any such bill at all, and this presaged another fight in the senate on the question of evading the constitution by closing the courts to citizens. It will be recalled that the Supreme court held the act of congress abrogating the gold clause in all contracts, public or private, invalid with respect to the government's own obligations. It held that holders of gold clause securities were not entitled to enrich themselves at the government's expense as a result of the dollar devaluation, but indicated that actual damages would warrant recoveries.

FROM the Communist Internationale in Moscow comes the word that the reds are planning a strike "of unprecedented scope" by seamen and dock workers on the Pacific coast of the United States, beginning in September. Sam Darcy of San Francisco, an millions to offset known deficits in American delegate told about it. He repeated what had already been said by Earl Browder, general scretary of the Communist party in the United States, that Communists were responfor Uncle Sam. It will not pay the sible for the seamen's and dock work-

PASSAGE of the bill to restore $46, 000,000 of Spanish war veterans' pensions was completed when the senate accepted the house measure, the only opposing vote being cast by Senator Hastings of Delaware. This nullifies the various adjustments made by the President for the purpose of economy to carry out the party pledge of a reduction of at least 25 per cent in the government.

FREDERICK H. GILLETT, who represented Massachusetts in the house for many years, for six years was speaker, and thereafter served as United States senator, died in Springfield, Mass., at the age of eighty-three. Able, dignified and unfailingly courteous, Mr. Gillett was highly esteemed by his fellow congressmen, whatever their party affiliation. In his home town he was known as a politician who said little and did much.

JAPAN will probably have another cause for complaint against the United States. Secretary of the Navy Swanson has announced that strongly fortified naval bases will be established in the Pacific ocean upon the expiration of the naval limitation treaties on January 1, 1937. He said he considered the creation of naval stepping stones the Pacific an inevitable result of the treaties' expiration. He revealed that the navy Sec'y Swanson long has given consideration to Pacific fortification problems and that impetus had been given to the study since Japan's abrogation of the naval treaties.

The necessity for adequate bases in the Pacific was demonstrated forcibly last May during the annual fleet maneuvers off Hawaii and the Aleutian islands. According to reports, the navy high command in a report of the lessons learned in the exercises strongly recommended an Aleutian islands

The United States naval bases are few and far between as against those of Japan and Great Britain, which lie along the principal courses of English and Japanese traffic lines. The American bases are relatively obsolete.

SOVIET Russia sustained a major naval loss when the submarine B-3 collided with a surface vessel during maneuvers of the Baltic fleet and sank immediately. Her entire crew of 55 officers, seamen and cadets perished. The sub, which was built near the close of Russia's participation in the World war, will be raised if possible.

GERMANY'S diplomatic note concerning the Communist attack on the liner Bremen in the port of New York took the form of a request that the offenders be punished but asked for no apology. Acting Secretary of State William Phillips, in his reply handed to the German charge d'Affaires, Dr. Rudolf Leitner, told briefly the efforts of the New York police to guard the vessel and to subdue the mob, and pointed out that some of those who took part in the attack were arrested. The German note said the incident constituted an insult to Germany.

In his press conference President Roosevelt declined to comment on the affair. Asked about the protest of Jewish organizations against the German government's religious attitude, the President intimated that the administration's view was fully expressed pressed sympathy for anyone who was denied religious liberty. Representative Dickstein of New York told the house that no apology was due to Germany for the Bremen incident and that neither the federal for it. He asserted the attack was made possible by "a selfish desire on the part of the skipper of the Bremen. who would not take police advice to halt visiting to the ship and lose the revenue of visitors."

Over in Germany the saner men in authority recognized that the Nazis were going too far and were probably headed for a fall if not restrained. Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank and economic dictator of the reich, uttered a solemn warning to the anti-Jewish and anti-Catholic forces, declaring that the great task which the German people must fulfill to comply with the wishes of Hitler cannot be fulfilled unless "all disturpances are ended, be they in the intellectual or economic field."

Among developments in the current campaign against the Steel Helmets. the World War Veterans' organization. the Schutzstaffel or "black corps" formed to protect the person of Hitler, gave out a warning that it must be reckoned with in the event of a showdown against "state enemies," and asserting its complete loyalty to der fuehrer. The proclamation closed with these ominous words:

"For many reasons it would be deeply regretted if the Steel Helmets, by their own fault, should come to a dishonorable end."

ORE disasters in the Far East. More disasters in the Antung, an important city in Manchukuo, was engulfed by a terrific flood; a thousand persons were drowned and practically the entire population of 110,000 was rendered homeless. Formosa was ravaged by another typhoon which took many lives and did vast damage. Along the Han and Yangtse rivers the surviving Chinese were striving to keep alive and at the same time to bury the tens of thousands who died in the floods there.

LONG the line of providing help A for white collar workers, Harry L. Hopkins appointed four technical assistants to direct the employment of painters, musicians, writers and actors. They are: Nikolai Sokoloff for music, Hallie Flanagan for the theater, Holger Cahill for painters and sculptors, and Henry G. Alseberg for writers. With $300,000,000 available for the estimated 750,000 white collar people on relief, scores of surveys, censuses, traffic studies, and similar projects have been provided for those with no particular skill.

Controversy from responsible positions in the Virgin islands to jobs in Washington. He has taken Paul M. Webber Wilson from his post in the islands to the federal parole board here in Washington, Each man has accepted his new appointment and in so far as a current controversy is concerned, the book

It will be recalled that Governor Pearson and Judge Wilson long have been at loggerheads over Virgin island affairs. The battle was bitter. It came to a head when Paul Yates, executive assistant to the governor and a former Washington correspondent, resigned his job and came back here with a bag full of charges against his former chief. The Yates allegations ranged all the way from minor charges of poor judgment to gross accusations. He succeeded in getting a senate committee investigation and it was at that time that the Pearson-Wilson feud flared so openly that administration officials here were dragged in and the whole scope of differences aired. As a matter of fact there is every reason to believe that Governor Pearson was far from a successful executive in the islands. He frequently aroused the ire of natives and, according to testimony adduced by the senate investigation, had very little to show for the sums of money he expended in attempting to give the Virgin islands a new lease on life. All of the information tends to establish that the islands continue to be "an effectual poorhouse" just as President Hoover described them on the occasion of a visit during his term as Chief Executive.

But Governor Pearson had his supporters in the administration. Chief among these was Secretary Ickes whose department is responsible for administration of the islands. Just why Mr. Ickes has been so enthusiastic about Governor Pearson's regime is not fully disclosed in any evidence here except that the interior secretary has certain ideas about social reform that some unkind critics refer to as pure socialism which Governor Pearson had been attempting to impose apon the island inhabitants. Governor Pearson has expended vast sums of PWA funds in the islands in his efforts ormation. It seems, however, that the schemes were not as practical as they might have been and so trouble started in a rather extensive fashion.

The President stayed outside of the row until in the course of the senate inquiry Senator Tydings, a Maryland Democrat and usually an anti-Roosevelt Democrat, received a letter from Mr. Ickes. Mr. Ickes accused the investigating chairman with having whitewashed a witness whose testimony was all anti-Ickes and anti-Pearson. The senator flared up in a big way at that letter. His reply is likely to become a classic in official correspondence. He did not mince his words. After voicing his general conception of the attitude exhibited by Mr. Ickes and accusing him of attempting to interfere in the investigation, Senator Tydings informed the interior secretary that he may as well attempt to run the Department of the Interior and let the senators run the senate. He used just about those

That was the signal for Mr. Roose velt to take a hand. It was easy to see that a few outbursts of that kind and Mr. Ickes might have found himself in a splendid position to resign from the cabinet. So the President got the feudists into his office, singly sion. I wished I could take our young friend one day to the zoo when something in the weather or something else which could not be helped had adversely affected the dispositions of the residents there. For that is one place where there is no "affectation," no "artificiality"-and no breeding, which | the dark blur of a rhino breakfasting in other words is consideration for

C.-WNU Service. | way treeled to be a local service of the THIOPIA, a familiar name in the headlines these days, boasts a long and imposing history. The kings of this ancient empire are traced from Ori of 4478 B. C. to Haile Selassie the First of A. D. 1935-with time out, naturally, from the date of the Deluge until the fall of the Tower of Babel. According to tradition the queen of Sheba was an Ethiopian. She may possibly have lived in what we now call Ethiopia, and certainly she included it in her extended domain, Modern Ethiopia includes more than 350,000 square miles of the rich and productive northeastern African plateau. It is mainly a mountainous region, much broken by deep valleys. Arid, semi-desert country surrounds it on every side. It does not touch the sea, although some Ethiopian feudal chieftains like to grasp a marine telescope as they pose for a formal pho-

In the population there are, perhaps, 5,000,000 Christians of the true Ethiopian (Hamitic-Semitic) type. They are the inheritors of an ancient civilization under whose feudal form of government are estimated to be 7,000,000 Moslems and pagans. The latter are mainly negroes.

The country is surrounded by African colonial possessions of Great Britain, France and Italy. As the Ethiopia of Solomon's time, it probably included all of these adjacent territories, with an Egyptian frontier, and that part of southwestern Arabia known today as the Yemen and Hadhramaut.

There is in Ethiopia a very evident mixture of Asia and Africa. Some of the blood came from ancient Palestine, some from Arabia, and some from the shores of the Caspian. Authorities do not agree as to the elements in this African melting pot of races. But the Ethiopian claims with pride a strong relation to the Semites.

Getting Into Ethiopia.

The front door entrance and port to Ethiopia is Djibouti, French Somaliland. The French are commendably of their 500-mile railway from the coast directly inland to Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital. This railway is the outside world. Djibouti is, therefore, very important to Ethiopia. It is headquarters for an Ethiopian consul

There are two kinds of trains now on the efficient but expensive little Franco-Ethiopian railway. On Sunday and Wednesday mornings a train later in Addis Ababa. Each Tuesday evening departs the "through express," which does the 500 miles in 36 "fast" train, not in pullmans, but in adjustable seats. On the three-day trains sleeping is done at little wayside hotels the two nights en route.

The first day of this railway journey ends usually at six in the afternoon, at Diredawa, the first town of importance after the train enters Ethiopia. It is on the fringe of a plateau 4,000 feet above sea level and a 200-mile climb from the coast. An interesting side trip, from Diredawa is the old Mohammedan walled town of Harar, four hours away by rough motor trip or a whole day by muleback. Camels, horses, or mules are available as a means of transportation, but the mule is considered the most appropriate for one of actual or apparent high station in life.

The second night of the three-day train journey is passed on the banks of the Awash river, one of the peculiar streams of the world. At this point it is a swiftly flowing river in a deep canyon. Rising on the Ethiopian plateau, it turns northeastward toward the Red sea, but loses itself in the Danakil lowlands short of its natural destination. Awash consists mainly of a small railway yard, a one-story brick building housing a hotel under quasi-Hellenic management, a scattering of native shacks, and many cats. Food and accommodations are simple and the most essential thing is a good mosquito net.

Addis Ababa, the Capital.

The train gets under way again the next morning at dawn and rolls through lovely grass and forest lands, where gallop many herds of gazelles and antelope. Occasionally one sees on the far side of the Awash River canyon. About four o'clock in the aftnoon of this third day the sprawling city of Addis Ababa is sighted in a in sections not too far from export forest of blue gum trees, across a rolling, grassy plain.

The one-story frame buildings which and customs depot at Addis Ababa have been replaced by handsome stone structures opened in 1929. Familiar sights at the station are the bales of hides and skins collected from the interior provinces for export to Europe and America; stacks of coffee bags; piles of elephant tusks, and bales of American cotton piece goods, which way tracks" quarter. It has also legations, consulates, hotels, many American motor cars, airplanes of sorts, and some presentable business buildings. On one of the two principal elevations of the city is the ever-interesting market place. Here once stood the great tree which served for generations as a gibbet. The other main elevation is crowned by the group of buildings which make up the imperial palace. The most imposing edifice on this designated "Hill of the Gebbi" is the Audience Hall of the Conquering Lion of the Tribe of Judah, constructed of stone and given its high-sounding title by order of the late Emperor Menelik. Menelik claimed his title by vir-

Resources of the Country

After the professions of priest and soldier, agriculture is the principal occupation in Ethiopia. The country is very fertile, though methods of cultivation are still primitive. Many fine beef cattle are produced, and the people are great meat eaters. They have what might be called a ceremonial custom of eating a bit of raw beef as a sort of hors d'oeuvre. In addition to the ordinary kinds of stock, Ethiopian farmers in parts of the country raise civet cats for commercial purposes. From these animals they obtain a liquid musk marketable to French and American perfumers at $2 an ounce. The chase is also a commercialized industry in Ethiopia, and naturally ivory heads the list of its products. Veteran hunters and traders say that most of the ivory passing through Addis Ababa comes from eleresponsible for Djibouti. It is the base | phant herds in the western and southwestern parts of the country.

Many an Ethiopian leopard involun tarily contributes his skin to American Ethiopia's only modern connection with | feminine fashion. As many as 100,000 of these spotted skins have gone to American furriers in a single year. Also monkey furs are an item of profwho gives intending visitors their itable trade. A shy member of the monkey tribe, called the guereza, lives in the trees of the Ethiopian highlands. Their long, silky, black-andwhite fur was worn by the Ethiopians as capes until Parisian dressmakers leaves Djibouti to arrive three days | fancied it as a trimming for feminine finery. Lately the Ethiopian government has decided to protect its wild game by requiring the taking out of hours. Passengers can sleep on this licenses and payment of hunters' fees. Ethiopians appear to enjoy litigation, whether friendly or otherwise, and it is more often friendly than otherwise. One of the important centers of the market place in Addis Ababa and in other large towns is the courthouse. It consists usually of a sizable wooden booth, with benches on three sides for the judges and their friends. The fourth side is entirely open to the market ground. In front of this open side gather those who have complaints to be heard. They are given all the time they desire to argue their own cases, for time is of small import in Ethiopia.

Where Fine Coffee Is Grown.

The Harar district, town and province, is the center of production of cultivated coffee in Ethiopia. The bean produced is of excellent quality and ranks next only to Mocha in world markets. It is called "long-berry Mocha" and is sold to a discriminating clientele in the United States. Although the Harar plantations are descended from seed introduced from the Mocha district in Arabia, Ethlopia is the home of coffee. The tree was found originally by Arab travelers in the Ethiopian province of Kafa, from which it took its name. Seed was taken from Kafa to Arabia, and thence came back to Harar. According to the Arabs, the cultivation of coffee also spread to other parts of the world from the Yemen, in southwestern Arabia.

In Kafa and adjoining parts of southwestern Ethiopia may be seen today vast and virgin forests of coffee of the indigenous variety. It necessarily grows without cultivation or care and thousands of tons of the berries fall to the ground in waste each year. The outer fringes of some of these forests are worked by natives trading centers, where the market value of coffee is known. Egypt buys much of this coffee, shipped via Kharformerly made up the railway station | toum, in place of former importations of the Brazilian product. Lions are numerous in the Harar district. They are the fine blackmaned fellows so alluring to the biggame hunter. Probably other kinds can chew one up just as thoroughly, but the Harar fellow is particularly respected. When an Ethiopian kills a lion, he has the right to demand a special audience from the emperor during which to declaim and act out horseback, or five minutes by motor, the feat. Afterwards he is privileged to wear the mane and skin as part of
