

A Campaign Is Coming and it will bring Songs, Slogans, Symbols and—Slanders!

SONGS THEY SANG IN OTHER PRESIDENTIAL YEARS

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

LADIES and gentlemen of America! The "greatest show on earth" is about to begin! No, this announcement hasn't anything to do with P. T. Barnum, the Ringling brothers, "Buffalo Bill" Cody or any of the others who have made circus history. This "greatest show on earth" is the quadrennial drama of a Presidential election. So . . . hold your horses, because . . .

A campaign is coming, with its songs, its slogans, its symbols and—its slanders! The singing is already under way. The other night Senator William E. Borah of Idaho appeared in Brooklyn to make a speech which, it was commonly agreed, was his opening bid for the Republican nomination. At that meeting his followers sang, to the tune of "U. S., That Means Us," the following:

Borah rah, rah, rah,
Ring out his name far and wide,
Borah rah, rah, rah,
Join the cheer that swells the countryside,
Let all the nation hear his call,
A "fair deal," a "square deal" for all,
Borah rah, rah, rah,
The choice of Americans all.

And now that the singing is started it's safe to predict that it will continue right up to November 4. For in campaign year America has always "some lyrics." It started away back at the beginning of the republic when George Washington was the inevitable choice for first President of the United States. At that time everyone joined in singing:

George Washington, the hero's come!
Each heart, exulting, hears the sound;
Thousands to their deliverer throng,
And shout him welcome all around!

All of which adulation for the man who was "First in War, First in Peace and First in the Hearts of His Countrymen" was very fine, but, of course, politics being what they were even in those early times, it just couldn't last. Washington's second term was far from being a happy one, for by the time he left office there were two parties, the Federalists and the Republicans (ancestors of the Democrats today), engaged in a bitter contest for power.

John Adams was the candidate of the Federalist aristocrats and Thomas Jefferson of the Republican "common people." Taxes, states rights and other issues over which there was a sharp division of opinion were reflected in the songs sung during the campaign of 1796. The Republicans, resenting the efforts of the Federalists to build up a strong centralized government, sang:

Huzza, my Jo Bunkers! No taxes we'll pay;
Here's a pardon for Wheeler, Shay, Parsons and Day.
Fix green boughs in your hats and renew the old cause,
Stop the courts in each county and bully the laws.
In the next election the Republicans prophetically sang:

Lord, how the Federalists will stare
At Jefferson in Adams' chair.
For Jefferson did defeat Adams and there were eight years of Democratic Republican (paradoxical though that may sound!) rule. But that didn't mean any lessening of political partisanship. The Embargo act, which had nearly ruined New England trade, had made Jefferson very unpopular so that the Federalists during the campaign of 1808 sang:

The motley band of demagogues who rule this happy nation
Has made an end of foreign trade and stopped our navigation.
Embargo's horrid name has drowned the noise of dance and labor,
And snatched the untasted morsel from the hungry mouth of labor!

So the Republicans had some difficulty in electing James Madison, Jefferson's choice to succeed him, but they did manage to do it and he remained in the White House eight years. He was followed by James Monroe and the famous "era of good feeling" in which political partisanship died down, only to be revived when John Quincy Adams, the son of the second President, was elected in 1824. It flamed up even more fiercely in 1828 when the opposing candidates were Adams, seeking re-election as the standard-bearer of the new National Republican party, and Andrew Jackson, the candidate of the new Democratic party.

"Old Hickory's" partisans, recalling his victory at New Orleans, sang lustily:

Freemen, cheer the hickory tree:
In storm its boughs have sheltered thee;
O'er Freedom's Land its branches wave,
'Twas planted on the Lion's grave.

They made the welkin ring with the song which was the real epic of the campaign. It was "The Hunters of Kentucky" which, taking its keynote from the frontiersman's boast that he was "half horse and half alligator," declared:

We are a hardy, free-born race
Each man to fear a stranger;
Whatever the game we join in chase,
Dispensing toil and danger;
And if a daring foe annoys,
We'll show him that we're no boys.

Whatever his strength and forces,
We'll show him that Kentucky boys
Are "alligator horses"!

I s'pose you've read it in the prints,
How Pakenham attempted
To make Old Hickory Jackson wince,
And soon his schemes repented;
For we with rifle ready cocked
Thought such occasion lucky,
And soon around the general's stock
The hunters of Kentucky.

This campaign, however, was as nothing compared to that put on by the "singing Whigs" in 1840 in support of their candidate, Gen. William Henry Harrison, in his race against Martin Van Buren, the Democratic occupant of the White House. Harrison was literally sung into the Presidency. Early in the campaign a Democratic editor had made the mistake of saying about Harrison, "Give him a barrel of hard cider and a pension of two thousand a year, and our word for it, he will sit the remainder of his days in a log cabin by the side of a sea coal fire and study moral philosophy." Immediately the indignant Whigs sprang to the defense of their candidate. They made much of the fact that the Democrats, under the leadership of the broadcloth-clad, aristocratic Martin Van Buren of New York, had deserted the "common people" and were casting slurs upon their General Harrison, "Old Tippecanoe," who was a plain man and a poor man. So they began to sing:

We know that Van Buren can ride in his coach,
With servants, forbidding the vulgar's approach—
We know that his fortune such things will allow,
And we know that our candidate follows the plow.

But what if he does? Who was bolder to fight
In his country's defense on that perilous night,
When naught save his valor sufficed to subdue
Our foes at the Battle of Tippecanoe?

Let Van from his coolers of silver drink wine,
And lounge on his cushioned settee,
Our man on his backside bench can recline,
Content with hard cider is he.

To the plain, honest husbandman true,
And this be our motto, the motto of fate,
Hurrah for old Tippecanoe!

In vain did the Democrats try to overcome the mischief raised by that Democratic editor's remark. It was no use. The "singing Whigs" were crying triumphantly:

What has caused the great commotion, motion,
Our country through?
It is the ball-rolling on
For Tippecanoe and Tyler, too,
And with them we'll beat little Van, Van, Van,
Van is a used-up man,
And with them we'll beat little Van!

And on this wave of singing hysteria another military hero was swept into the Presidency. Four years later Van Buren was seeking the Democratic nomination again but he was turned down and the prize given to the first "dark horse" in political history—James K. Polk of Tennessee. Even before this happened, the Whigs had nominated Henry Clay of Kentucky, who had tried twice before (in 1824 and again in 1832) to be the Democratic standard-bearer. Theodore Frelinghuysen of New York was named as his running mate, so again the Whigs swung into a singing campaign shouting:

Hurrah, hurrah! The country's risin'
For Henry Clay and Frelinghuysen!

Or else they sang the many verses of the famous "Coon Song" of which this is a sample:

The moon was shining silver bright
The stars with glory crowned the night
High on a limb the same old coon
Was singing to himself this tune:
"Get out of the way, you're all unlucky,
Clear the track for Old Kentucky."

The Democrats were capable of doing a bit of vocalizing themselves, so they sang right back:

Farewell, oh! farewell to thee, Clay of Kentucky,
We'll leave thee to wander by Salt River's shore;
We well might have known that thy cause was unlucky,
For the Democrats beat thee so often before!

That song was a true prophecy, for the Democrats did beat Clay again and elected Polk. But the Whigs had their revenge four years later when again they nominated a military hero and began singing the praises of

Old Zach Taylor, bold and steady
Sometimes "Rough," but always "Ready."
For his running mate they named Millard
Fillmore of New York. One of their songs declared:

The ball is opened on both sides,
The parties now have made their choice.
Cass on the Loco donkey rides,
The Whigs for Taylor give their voice.
Pull, boys, all pull steady,
For Fillmore and for Rough and Ready.

The Democrats, who had nominated Lewis Cass of Michigan for President and Gen. William O. Butler of Kentucky, a Mexican war hero, for vice president, roared back at them:

They come in Democratic van,
From old Kentucky and Michigan,
Within the nation's seat to shine,
In eighteen hundred and forty-nine.
For every state declares it so,
That Cass and Butler in must go,
Next Fourth of March will prove it so,
For thus have freedmen wiled it, oh!

But the Whigs were better prophets when they sang:

He's on victory's track, and he can't be put back,
For the people have said that they trust in old Zach;

GEN. W. H. HARRISON,

A Campaign Song of 1840.

So our brave Rough and Ready in triumph shall
Till the White House is reached, and our victory won!

So "Old Rough and Ready" was sung into the Presidency, just as "Old Tippecanoe" had been and, like Harrison, Taylor lived to enjoy the honor only a short time.

The campaign of Franklin Pierce vs. Gen. Winfield Scott in 1852 was a comparatively colorless one but 1856 was another case of "whoop it up with song and shouting." The slavery question was the big issue. The "Know-Nothing" party, formed largely of pro-slavery Whigs, nominated Fillmore. The Democratic party nominated James Buchanan of Pennsylvania and the new Republican party in its first national convention nominated Gen. James C. Fremont, the so-called "Pathfinder." Thousands of Free-Sollers, with an almost religious zeal, sang:

All hail to Fremont! swell the lofty acclaim
Like winds from the mountain, like prairies affame!
Once more the Pathfinder is forth on his hunt,
Clear the way for free soil, for free men and Fremont!

However, the "Pathfinder" couldn't find the way to the White House, for Buchanan was elected. When the next campaign year came around another candidate came out of the West with the affectionate and vote-gathering characterization of "old"—"Old Abe" Lincoln, the Illinois rail-splitter. So the Republicans sang:

This Helped Elect "Old Rough and Ready."

Hurrah for our cause,
Of all causes best,
Hurrah for Old Abe,
Honest Abe of the West!

And right back at them the Democrats sang derisively:

Say he's capable and honest,
Loves his country's good alone;
Never drank a drop of whisky,
Wouldn't know it from a stone!

Ulysses S. Grant, regarded as the savior of the Union, didn't have much difficulty in winning the election of 1868 so no songs of any importance came out of that campaign. Four years later, when Horace Greeley gave him more opposition, one of the songs which his supporters sang declared that

General Grant's the man
To work for Uncle Sam,
He will lead the van
And beat the Greeley clan.
We'll trust him still to rule the nation,
Rule the nation, rule the nation,
We'll trust him still to rule the nation,
He saved our glorious Union.

During the Hayes-Tilden campaign of 1876, even the little children were familiar with the song that declared

Hayes rides a white horse,
Tilden rides a mule,
Hayes is a gentleman,
Tilden is a fool!

The Cleveland-Blaine campaign of 1884 was noteworthy for its songs, the most famous being the Democratic hymn which declared that

From Maine to California,
The people loudly shout,
"We'll vote for Grover Cleveland, who Will turn the rascals out!"

When Benjamin Harrison was the Republican candidate, his Democratic foes fashioned a song to ridicule him by declaring

His grandfather's hat is too large for him
But Ben has it on just the same.
The McKinley-Bryan campaign saw a revival of the Hayes-Tilden doggerel with McKinley riding the white horse and Bryan riding the mule.

When Alton B. Parker and Theodore Roosevelt were the opponents in 1904 the Democrats came out with the lyrical prophecy that

He will always keep the nation's credit safe and sound,
And will out dishonest men wherever they are found—
He will bury Teddy under forty feet of ground;
Alton B. Parker is his name!

But he didn't. For, to the tune of that popular Spanish-American war song, "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," the Rough Rider went back to the White House for four years. But when he tried to stage a comeback as a Bull-Mooser in 1912 the Republicans sang

We never knew your grandpa, sir
We don't care for that.
We're fighting now for William Howard
And not for Teddy's hat.

During the next two decades campaign songs were not so potent as were slogans and catchwords—that is, until 1928 when Al Smith was the Democratic candidate. Then "The Sidewalks of New York," a song of the "gay nineties," was revived and it swept the country into a frenzy of singing. But it didn't sweep it into a frenzy of voting for the Democratic candidate. Even though "Who? Hoover?" as a good campaign ballad, couldn't compare with the "Sidewalks," Hoover was elected nevertheless.

As for the last campaign, every one remembers how the American people, wanting to believe that the depression was over, joined lustily in singing "Happy Days Are Here Again" and in sending the smiling prophet of that belief to the White House. What will be the outstanding song of the 1936 campaign? That question can be answered better on the morning of November 5 than it can be answered now!

Jiffy Knit Sweater With Matching Hat

PATTERN No. 5517

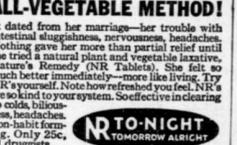

Any four-to-eight-year-old will be warm as toast in this sweater and cap set. The sweater's a "jiffy" knit—just plain knitting combined with yoke and sleeves of easy lacy stitch, and finished almost before you know it. The cap done in a straight strip, gathered at the top, also includes these two stitches, adding a pert pompon for good measure. Choose a colorful yarn, and there'll be no "insisting" she wear it!

In pattern 5512 you will find complete instructions for making the set shown in sizes 4, 6 and 8 (all given in one pattern); an illustration of it and of the stitches needed; material requirements. Send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth St., New York, N. Y.

End of World Idea Stale; Planet Collision Unlikely

We are never deeply alarmed over the annual, sometimes semi-annual, predictions that the world is soon coming to an end (it is a worn-out way of attracting attention to oneself, too). The only manner in which the world can reach annihilation is by some great convulsion among the planets. The mathematical system of the universe must have been worked out long ago, or we should see in our day at least one or two collisions of worlds whirling through space. But they do not collide; and they have not collided since the morning stars sang together.

They are a perfect example of perpetual motion, and, therefore, the deathless inspiration of those earthly souls who think that if perpetual motion car and does prevail in the scheme of cosmos, they can discover the secret. Persons who predict the end of the world are unscientific individuals with indifferent reasoning powers.—F. H. Collier in St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Elimination of Body Waste Is Doubly Important

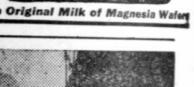

In the crucial months before baby arrives it is vitally important that the body be rid of waste matter. Your intestines must function—regularly, completely without gripping.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—much pleasanter to take than liquid. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system, and insure regular, complete elimination without pain or effort.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 55c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Start using these delicious, effective anti-acid, gently laxative wafers today. Professional samples sent free to registered physicians or dentists if request is made on professional letterhead. Select Products, Inc., 4402 23rd St., Long Island City, N. Y.

The tire that makes its own road

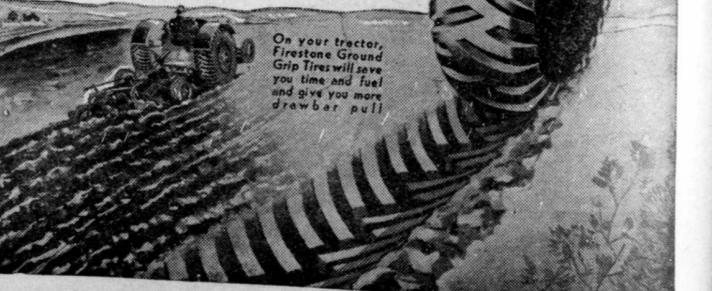

FARMERS everywhere are enthusiastic in their praises of the Firestone Ground Grip Tire—they say it's the greatest traction tire ever built, and so economical. How was it possible for Firestone to build such a remarkable tire? Firestone patented construction features are the answer. Gum-Dipping, a process that soaks every cotton fiber in every cord with pure liquid rubber, prevents internal friction and heat and gives the cord body greater strength to withstand the stresses and strains of heavy pulling at low air pressures.

The patented feature of two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread locks the massive super traction tread securely to the body of the tire. This patented Ground Grip tread is made wider, heavier and deeper, with scientific spacing between the bars so that the tire is self-cleaning, yet rides smoothly on improved roads. These patented construction features are used only in Firestone Tires. This is why you get greatest traction, longest life and outstanding performance in Ground Grip Tires. They are the best investment a farmer can make.

Equip your car, truck, tractor and farm implements with new Firestone Ground Grip Tires and save yourself time, money and hard work. See this remarkable tire at your nearby Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store, at your Tire Dealer, or at your Implement Dealer. Remember, when buying farm equipment specify Firestone Ground Grip Tires for greatest efficiency and economy.

SYNOPSIS

Antoinette Taft, twenty-three, attractive and ambitious but unable to hold a job, lives in a drab San Francisco flat with her sister Brenda and brother Cliff. Her father, a successful lawyer, is now in the hospital. Her mother, Mrs. Meg, is a nervous wreck. Her Aunt Meg, a former nurse, is also in the hospital. Her father's business partner, Mr. Green, is a miserly old man. Her father's secretary, Miss Bellamy, is a young girl who is in love with her. Her father's lawyer, Mr. Green, is a miserly old man. Her father's secretary, Miss Bellamy, is a young girl who is in love with her.

CHAPTER II—Continued

Tony, Brenda and Barney sat on the lawn, looking at the wide-open window to the dim light. Bruce was snoring softly on the couch. "We can have a light if there's any paper in it," Tony observed. "No, I have to go," Barney said, not stirring. "I wonder why we're all so tired tonight?" he asked, after a moment.

"Oh, so you said the Izak Walton," Brenda remembered to announce suddenly. "The Talbot bought it."

"I wonder thank you for all the first editions that ever were!" Tony remarked. "This observation was permitted to the away into silence. Then Barney asked: "What took Cliff to see?" "Tony reached the switchboard wrong for the Weinstein thing," Tony stated indifferently.

"Who said so?" Barney's words were like bullets. "Cliff did." "What'd he say?" "Well, if you must know, Barney, Cliff was shaking this morning, and Mr. Ridge telephoned. Cliff's first speech was 'The hell.' Then he rushed out like a fire wagon, and the next thing I knew he had telephoned that he was off for Sacramento."

"It'll be on it was all right when he left there," Barney said, after thought. "Was that bad, Barney?" Brenda asked anxiously. "Darling old Betsy, Tony thought she had had so much anxiety in her twenty-eight years!" "The kinder."

"Was it—was it Cliff's fault?" "It was all our faults, I guess. We did the drawings."

"It seems," Tony volunteered, "that they wanted this marble slab to stand up vertically, as it were, and it was cut to lie down sideways, and they said they'd have to take out a piece of wall in the basement."

"Who said so?" Barney asked, in the explosive, incredulous manner he had used before. "Well, that was it. That was the trouble."

Except for repeating under his breath Clifford's own expletive, Barney made no comment on this. There was silence again. "See Bellamy on the Journal, Tony?" he asked.

"Yes, I did. This morning. Nothing came of it."

"Ha!" Barney ejaculated, and at his tone she felt her cheeks flush in the shadows. It was as if Barney felt himself personally charged with the business of getting Tony Taft, who had just so many jobs in the past few years still another.

"What was it that your Aunt Sally had in mind?" "She wasn't at home when I telephoned, so I don't know," Tony said truthfully. "It was none of his business whether she was working or not."

note, "I hate to do what I have to do," she said mildly. "I hate office work, Betsy. If it were the stage, or a newspaper, or doing anything in the movies, I'd work like a dog. But just to go downtown tomorrow and get a job taking letters from young pip-squeaks who haven't the remotest idea what they're talking about, and hang my coat in a locker, and go to a cafeteria for lunch—and go on with it, Brenda, for three years and five years and ten and twenty— It scares me!"

"You'll never drudge along in an office for twenty years or for five!" Brenda predicted, in a troubled voice. "You have!" Tony thought. Aloud she said nothing.

"You'll marry," Brenda said. Tony could feel her cheeks flush resentfully. "Maybe Barney—" Brenda went on boldly.

"I don't think it'll be Barney," Tony answered moderately. "I wish," she went on, her tone warming, "I wish you could have heard the nice little sermon he was just preaching to me! Barney's so outrageously—stuck—on himself!" Tony interpolated, resentfully: "about being on time at the office, and dressing smartly—"

"He didn't!" "He did." "There was a silence."

"It only means that he's in love with you."

"He's in love with Barney Kerr—that's who he's in love with!" "No, honestly, Tony, Barney isn't so conceited! But he likes you so much that he worries about you—honestly, that's it."

"Any man can ask any girl," Tony observed, after thought. "He's never said anything."

"Not on a hundred and fifty a month, with a mother like his."

"He's really in love with the whole family, and I don't blame him, when you look at the family he's got!" Tony said. "He's lonely, and he likes our food, and he can talk about oil circuit with you."

"Oh, Betsy, Betsy," gasped Tony, rushing back to fall at her sister's knees and clutch at her dramatically. "It's the Call! Some Mr. Greenwood of the Call! Betsy, he wanted to see me tonight—I'm to see him at two tomorrow! He wanted me to come down right now. Twenty-five a week—twenty-five a week, and I'm to try the society column! Oh, Betsy, you'll help me, won't you? I mean with the people who come into the store—I mean getting engagements and parties and everything! Oh, Betsy, he sounded so nice! He said he was out of his senses trying to get someone, and I said I couldn't come down tonight—"

"What is it?" Aunt Meggy here interpolated dazedly, from her doorway. "Cliff, blown and pale and tired, was in the hall doorway. "What's all the shouting about?" he said.

"Tony enlightened them ecstatically. "Oh, Cliff, just as I was despairing—I'd been to the Journal today, and there didn't seem a chance—just as I was despairing, this Mr. Greenwood telephoned from the Call, and he wanted me to gather up all the news I can and begin tomorrow—and twenty-five a week, Cliff!"

"That's something like," Cliff said, with his slow smile. "And, Cliff, you know I can do it," chattered Tony. "You know I can, Betsy! Aunt Sally'll help me, and Mrs. Terry!"

"Want to go down now and clinch it?" Clifford asked. "Oh, Cliff, could we? He really did want to see me, because tomorrow's the day he usually has off, and he said I'd have to 'scout around and dig up a lot of mush for the Sunday page! He sounded so cute!" Tony said, in a rush.

"Get your hat on," said Cliff. "I know a man named Burke who works on the sports section. We'll go down. You angel!" Tony called back, flying into her room to change. Brenda smiled at her oldest brother. "She's down and out five minutes ago, no hope anywhere—she's been telling me what a failure she is—"

is that of a wife and mother—" She stopped, her voice thickening. "It is the happiest life," Brenda offered, in a slow voice with notes of pain in it. "If you love a man, that is," she added.

"Ah, but you see I don't," Tony said. "I know that real thing when I meet it. In that newspaper office today—down at the Journal rooms, I mean, I met a man—"

She stopped. Presently she resumed again, a little shamefacedly: "You'd think I'm an absolute fool if I say that something—something flashed between us—between this Mr. Bellamy upon whom I'd never set eyes in my life before, and me—that was nearer—nearer—love, than anything Barney's ever made me feel! He had only to look at me to make me feel silly and cold and shuddery, you know that wonderful feeling that you're going all to pieces and don't care!"

"I don't know," said Brenda, laughing in sudden relief, "and I do think you're silly, idiotic, if you ask me. What do you know of this man?" "Nothing!" admitted Tony, laughing too. "Except that he's somewhere around thirty, and married—"

"Married?" "Yes, of course—he would be." "But that isn't love, Tony."

"Well, maybe it isn't. But it's something—something a girl wants to have before she gives in, Brenda. Just the shape of his mouth—it's quite hard and large, and the look in his eye—he looks up and smiles at you quite a while after he's finished speaking—"

"Antoinette Taft!" "I know, I know how it sounds, I admit that it's supremely silly! I only used it as an illustration.—What on earth—" She said the last words on an odd note of fright. For the telephone was shrilly ringing.

She ran out in the narrow hall. Brenda's face was a study in varied emotions as she listened to the conversation, which was by turns puzzled, awed, excited, rapturous.

"Oh, Betsy, Betsy," gasped Tony, rushing back to fall at her sister's knees and clutch at her dramatically. "It's the Call! Some Mr. Greenwood of the Call! Betsy, he wanted to see me tonight—I'm to see him at two tomorrow! He wanted me to come down right now. Twenty-five a week—twenty-five a week, and I'm to try the society column! Oh, Betsy, you'll help me, won't you? I mean with the people who come into the store—I mean getting engagements and parties and everything! Oh, Betsy, he sounded so nice! "What is it?" Aunt Meggy here interpolated dazedly, from her doorway. "Cliff, blown and pale and tired, was in the hall doorway. "What's all the shouting about?" he said.

"Tony enlightened them ecstatically. "Oh, Cliff, just as I was despairing—I'd been to the Journal today, and there didn't seem a chance—just as I was despairing, this Mr. Greenwood telephoned from the Call, and he wanted me to gather up all the news I can and begin tomorrow—and twenty-five a week, Cliff!"

"That's something like," Cliff said, with his slow smile. "And, Cliff, you know I can do it," chattered Tony. "You know I can, Betsy! Aunt Sally'll help me, and Mrs. Terry!"

"Want to go down now and clinch it?" Clifford asked. "Oh, Cliff, could we? He really did want to see me, because tomorrow's the day he usually has off, and he said I'd have to 'scout around and dig up a lot of mush for the Sunday page! He sounded so cute!" Tony said, in a rush.

"Get your hat on," said Cliff. "I know a man named Burke who works on the sports section. We'll go down. You angel!" Tony called back, flying into her room to change. Brenda smiled at her oldest brother. "She's down and out five minutes ago, no hope anywhere—she's been telling me what a failure she is—"

"Failure, shush! She's only twenty-three." Cliff was lighting a cigarette. "How'd it go in Sacramento, darling?"

"Oh, I think I butched the switchboard, all right. However, we think we can work out of it."

Cliff put on his damp overcoat again, as Tony came out radiant and fresh in her dark blue coat and small hat, and they went away together.

Typewriters were clicking; there was a ripping sound as paper was torn from there; there was a constant eccentric chatter of a telegraph machine from the wide littered desk marked "Associated Press." Tony saw men wearing green eye-shades, eyeglasses men; saw one very handsome big dark fellow scolding away about something to an older man at a corner desk.

Mr. Charles Greenwood was a dark little weasel of a man who occupied a corner desk shut away from the general office only by a nicked and battered fence of dark wood and gate. He was in his shirt-sleeves and smoking a cigar when Clifford and Tony were ushered into his immediate neighborhood.

The desk before the city editor was heaped high with the society pages of recent Sunday papers. He had evidently been clipping and pasting desperately; he indicated a drawer full of uninviting-looking letters.

"We got to have a page of this stuff, good," he said, "for Madame La Duchesse. That's the swell stuff, see—the Burlington crowd, the la-di-dahs, see? You know that crowd, don't you?" he broke off to ask suspiciously, looking up at Tony.

"Well," Tony answered firmly, without the flicker of an eyelid. "Well, now, look here. You'll have 'Ducky's' desk; that's what the boys called our last Madame." Greenwood broke off to say, appealing to their sympathy. "She was a hellion; she just raised hell in here, and she's left everything in a mess! Now, when you came here to leave your name—when was that?"

"Three times since Christmas," Tony reminded him. "You said that you thought you could handle it?" His eye was suspicious again. "I can."

"I understand that every Thursday we've got to have a whole page of it with two photos?" Her heart failed her for a second. "Certainly," Tony said, with a reassuring nod. "Tony said, with a reassuring nod. "You can clip a lot of it for tomorrow, see?" the harassed Greenwood further explained. "Look over the papers; I've got the Oakland papers here too, and pick out whatever looks good to you. I won't be here, but you give it to Mr. Florence—he's that drunk-lookin' crook over there—"

"All right!" the fat man at the desk said significantly. "All right."

"Get it all together and hand it in before ten tomorrow night. And you'll have to get your own column, too—say about sixteen items—get 'em good, because we've been running down lately, and the old man was raising hell about it today. You run round among your friends, and you'll pick 'em up easy. Then, if you run into any good stuff—women scrapping—bring that in, that's always good. Keep your eyes open—oh, and by the way, you'll do that dance down at the Burlingame club next week, will you?"

"Certainly," Tony agreed, her head spinning. "All right, then—you take all this stuff along to your desk—MacGrath!" shouted the city editor, "help Miss—help Miss Taft to take all this stuff to the Duck's desk, will you, and run it up to a typewriter somewhere, and get her some paper. She's going to do our Sunday page tomorrow, and boy, will it be good! All right, Miss Taft, I'll see you Friday—keep your shirt on, and ask the boys for anything you want. Oh, and by the way, root us out a couple of good pictures tomorrow for Sunday. I didn't get round to it!"

Tony and Clifford and the amiably burdened MacGrath went to a cluttered desk by a black window that was trickling rain. Everyone looked at them; Tony did not dare raise her eyes.

She found her new domain frightfully dirty and the typewriter frame empty.

"I'll have Laren get you a typewriter downstairs," said MacGrath, in embarrassed apology. "There isn't a decent one on the floor. Looky, here's the book they keep the names in—who's in society, and who's married to whose sisters, and all that."

Tony clutched the shabby leather record eagerly. "Oh, that'll be priceless!" "He's all right," confided MacGrath, with a jerk of his head toward the city editor's desk, "only he curses a lot."

"Could I—just to get this stuff in order—could I come down tomorrow early—say about ten?" she asked. "He told me to come in at one. But I'd like to get started—"

"Oh, gosh, come at seven if you want to!" MacGrath said with a stare. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Something About a New Broom—and a New House Dress!

PATTERN No. 1787-B

A house dress, after all, is a house dress—yet it needn't be "just another house dress," as convincingly demonstrated in this unusually trim and clever design. The V neck front and back is made in a contrasting material and emphasized by the effective use of bright buttons. The short and comfortable set-in sleeves are finished with pointed cuffs, also in contrast and button trimmed. The blouse is gathered to the skirt under a self-fabric belt, and the skirt features a full-length front panel with novel pockets achieved by the distinctive cut of the side pieces. These pieces, pointed and button trimmed, harmonize with the motif used in the collar and cuffs, and Wasters See Devastation of Own Making and Condemn It is those acts called trivialities that the seeds of joy are forever wasted, until men and women look around with haggard faces at the devastation their own waste has made, and say the earth bears no harvest of sweetness, calling their eternal knowledge.—George Elliot.

Universe Is Pouring Out Its Wealth to Lover of Nature

Daily the lover of nature gathers the fruits of seed sown in the beginning of the world. For him no season is dull, for each is successively absorbing. In spring he is entranced by the awakening of myriad forms of life; summer reveals the maturity of all creation; autumn brings the fulfillment of earlier promises; winter lulls life to sleep, with its assurance of the resurrection. All weathers are one: The rains of spring nourish all nature; the heats of summer mature and ripen its fruits; the frosts of winter give rest and peace; in all he rejoices. Each day is good. In the morning life awakens with him; through the noon it works; the peace and quiet of evening shed their benediction upon him.

He knows no dull moment; he seeks not to hurry time. If he is delayed he may discover something never before seen by man and his impatience is forgotten. His youth is filled with the joys of discovery; in middle age the marvels about him hold his interest undimmed; he awaits old age with calmness, for he is one with the universe and is content.—Edward A. Preble.

Authorities of Lithuania have decided to make the inmates of their prisons pay for their keep instead of being a burden to the state.

I'M SOLD

It always works

Just do what hospitals do, and the doctors insist on. Use a good liquid laxative, and aid Nature to restore clocklike regularity without strain or ill effect.

A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the real secret of relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has become. It gives the right kind of help, and right amount of help. Taking a little less each time, gives the bowels a chance to act of their own accord, until they are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit. The action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve any sluggishness or bilious condition due to constipation without upset.

Mr. Jacob Batzler received the news of the death of his brother, John, which took place Feb. 1st at Wheatliff, Wyoming. Mr. Batzler, who left for the West 24 years ago, died of a heart attack. He leaves three brothers, Joseph of Appleton; Adam of Theresa and Jacob of here.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Strachota, daughter Agneta, Rev. John B. Reichel, John M. Flasch attended the funeral of the late Michael A. Jacobs at Deaver Dam Feb. 8. Due to the weather and roads they were unable to leave until Monday. They arrived home Wednesday, being snow-bound again at Campbellsport.

New uses for silver fox fur and a steady consumer demand have helped the fur trade to keep pace with the young and rapidly growing fox farming industry in the United States. In less than 15 years the annual crop has increased from six thousand pelts in 1923 to more than 170 thousand pelts in 1934.

An increase in hog slaughter next summer and the following winter is indicated by the latest pig crop report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The 1935 fall pig crop was 31 per cent larger than the 1934 fall crop, and a 24 per cent increase in the number of sows to farrow next spring is reported.

Mrs. Wm. Henning has been ill with the flu at her home for the past two weeks, but is able to do her housework and is getting better at this writing.

Mrs. James Flynn has been seriously sick at her home for several weeks a week ago the county trunk plow plowed out the road so that the doctor could get there.

Mr. Charley Kutz, an old pioneer died here at his home on Saturday night, February 22nd, where he resides with Mr. and Mrs. Herman Kutz. He had been sick for over a year. His remains were removed to Kewaskum.

Two members of the game reserve of Milwaukee were placing feed hoppers among several farmers here Sunday for pheasants. They received two tons of feed at Milwaukee and each member distributed a certain amount. He left a hopper and 200 pounds of grain with Vincent L. Calvey to be given to the pheasants and more feed will follow if needed, at intervals.

Relatives and friends were very sorry that they were unable to attend the funeral of Mrs. B. G. Romaine, held Saturday afternoon at Campbellsport, on account of snow-blocked roads. We want to thank Mr. Charley Norris and Mr. Ed. Cook for their efforts in trying to break through the road in time.

They and plenty of snow-bling to do which made it too late after the diversions were made passable—it couldn't be helped.

Mr. Charley Norris ploughed through county trunk F from Waucoosta to the county line Saturday afternoon, making a double track. About twenty of the neighbors assisted in the work, and even some of the ladies helped. The milk haulers have had a hard time gathering their milk with sleighs and horses in the severe cold and stormy weather, as best they could. Our mail man, Mr. Richard Hodge, was unable to come farther than Dundee and that was with great difficulty. The mail was left at Weiss' store and the neighbors delivered it to each other as best they could.

Build Entirely of Steel

The New McCormick-Deering All-Steel Manure Spreader

STEEL frame, steel box, steel bracings—ALL STEEL all the way through. This is what you get in a new McCormick-Deering All-Steel Manure Spreader. The rusting, non-warping box is of heavy-gauge galvanized steel containing copper. It is low for easy loading and has a capacity of 60 to 70 bushels.

The McCormick-Deering has five spreading speeds. The upper saw-tooth, non-wrapping beater, the lower spike-tooth beater, and the widespread spiral shred the manure and spread it in an even layer over the soil.

Remarkably light draft is provided by the use of eight roller bearings and Alenite lubrication.

When Bladder Weakness WAKES YOU UP?

Make this 25c test. Remove the cause. Use buchu leaves, juniper oil, etc., to flush out excess acids and impurities which cause irritation that results in restless nights, burning, scanty flow, frequent desire, or backache. Ask for little green tablets called Bukets, the bladder lax. They work on the bladder similar to castor oil on the bowels. In four days if not pleased any druggist will refund your 25c. Otto B. Graf, Druggist.

It is expected that approximately one-half of the soybeans harvested last year will be used in the manufacture of industrial and feed products such as flour, soy sauce, diabetic and infant foods, breakfast food, lard and butter substitutes, candies, roasted beans with a nutlike flavor, health drinks, paint, varnish, glue, plastics, printing inks, oil cloth, linoleum, rubber substitutes, glycerin, insecticides and livestock feeds.

Italy Feels the Pinch of Sanctions

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

AN oil sanctions stop the war? The answer seems to be "yes" if the League can succeed in cutting off all oil supplies to Italy. Estimates of the experts recently assigned by the League of Nations to make a survey of the situation indicate that six or seven months of a complete oil embargo would bring Italy to cease his operations in Ethiopia.

Increases, the difficulty becomes apparent. Lastly, some of these substitutes have to be mixed with imported petrol, anyway. There is plenty of ground for the supposition that the cry for oil sanctions has subsided considerably with the indications that Italy is achieving a victory far from complete in East Africa. If such sanctions do come, it is likely they will only apply to shipments over and above the normal shipments.

Insisted that it has maintained most of that reserve through increased taxation, the floating of bond issues, the wedding of government credits and the realization of foreign credits held by private citizens. Prices of foods and other items in common use skyrocketed after Italy had felt the pinch of sanctions for a little while. Gasoline rose from 85 cents to $1.20 a gallon; wheat went up 20 lire a quintal. Coal, soap and textiles followed. Factories shut down because there were no raw materials to manufacture, or because of the prohibitive prices on raw materials.

Normally, Italy uses 1,500,000 tons of oil annually. With the war operations now going forward in Ethiopia, she now is burning it up at the rate of 2,500,000 tons. Of her normal importations of 1,500,000 tons annually, Rumania furnishes about 35 per cent, Russia 22 per cent, Persian sources (controlled by Great Britain) 12 per cent, Latin-American sources (also controlled by Great Britain) to a large extent 14 per cent, the United States 10 per cent and all other sources 7 per cent.

During the past year, when Italy imported 2,500,000 tons, Rumanian shipments leaped to 41 per cent of the total, Russia shipped 16 per cent, Persia 15 per cent, Latin America, 15 per cent, the United States 6 per cent and other sources 7 per cent. Because of the delay in the application of oil sanctions, it is believed that Italy can go along through the rainy season and pick up her military operations in autumn.

The temporary let-down in fighting will make possible the saving of considerable oil, and will thus stretch out the period of Italy's "reprieve" a few more months. How long after that time Mussolini can keep going depends upon his success in securing fresh supplies. The answer to this lies largely with the nations who are not members of the League. The United States has not yet made up its mind whether its new neutrality act will contain the provision that exports to belligerent nations must not exceed their normal proportions. One of the things holding up the League embargo, of course, is the fact that member nations are waiting until it can be determined what kind of action will be taken by the non-member nations.

Pepper Used as Spice. Pepper is one of the oldest spices known. It originates used it as a condiment. Pepper differs from most other spices in that its pungency resides not in the volatile parts or essential oil, but in a substance of a more fixed kind, which does not rise in the heat of boiling water. The pepper which, when ground, is the famous black or white pepper, grows on a creeping vine, usually at its best in a moist heat of a low-lying tropical forest. When pepper is cultivated on a large scale it is a common practice to plant trees to support the creeper and provide shade. When the berries are changing from green to red they are collected, and dried in the sun until they become black and shriveled. In this condition, they are ground to a fine powder. If white is required the black skins are removed.

Face Loss of Trade. If Italy can keep buying oil from non-member nations, the members would share the possibility of losing a good share of their oil business for a long time to come, if not permanently. Some of them are trying to console themselves into thinking that immediate losses will not be very important because a settlement may be effected within the next few months. Italy is attempting to ameliorate its own situation through the adoption of substitutes for oil, and the building of new factories, installation of transformers, and similar preparations are well under way. The process, even when it gets moving well, is a costly one, however, and it is doubtful whether Italy's solution to the problem of oil sanctions lies in that direction. Some estimates place the total annual saving in oil by that means could be only about 10,000 tons at the most.

Royalty Sets Example. Italy's king and queen set an example by sending their wedding rings to Mussolini and the populace quickly took up the idea, thousands upon thousands of persons turning over their own gold rings and receiving iron rings in exchange. In colorful and, indeed, piffling ceremonies throughout the country. After the depletion of the gold reserve to a point somewhat under $400,000,000, the Treasury department has from the indigofera plant have never been artificially produced, and consequently the three primaries used in the inks of color photography have varying densities.

New Blue Dye Is Valuable Addition to Photography. The Imperial Chemical Laboratory at Huddersfield, writes a London (Eng.) correspondent in the Detroit News, has announced the discovery of a blue pigment which, it is declared, may go a long way toward making color photography a perfect duplication of nature. As may be known the hues of sepia produced from the secretion of a cuttlefish of that name, of the carmine from the cochineal insect, of the blue from the indigofera plant have never been artificially produced, and consequently the three primaries used in the inks of color photography have varying densities. So far a yellow has been produced which has the same density as the red, but blue had been the stumbling block. The newly discovered pigment is as long as the identical density of the yellow and red. It is called "Monstral blue," and in addition to being fast in light, and unaltered by heat of 150 degrees, acids and alkalis, it is also insoluble in oil, alcohol and nitrocellulose solvents. In addition, it has been proved that the "light absorbing" qualities of the pigment make it a nearer approach to the ideal blue for three-color printing. This means that instead of using two different blues to produce good greens and purples, only one blue will be necessary in future; or if only one standard blue is used now, the vividness of both these colors will be increased.

Home Seed Tests Are Recommended

Corn Can Be Readily Tried by Use of Well Known "Rag Doll" Plan.

By G. H. Dungan, Associate in Crop Production, University of Illinois.

With much of the seed corn intended for next spring's planting below standard because of early frosts and late maturity of the crop last fall, poor stands can be avoided only through home testing this winter. Seed corn should germinate at least 90 per cent to assure a good stand. Prospective seed supplies can be tested readily at home by the use of the well known "rag doll" tester. This tester is made by placing 100 grains of the chosen seed stock on a dampened cloth, covering the samples with another cloth and rolling the two pieces together loosely. The tester should be kept damp and at a temperature of about 80 degrees.

Testing the samples before late winter will give the farmer opportunity to secure additional seed supplies before planting time if the available supply does not measure up to the required germination standards.

While it is too late to improve the germination qualities of corn that was cured improperly after picking in the fall, frequent inspections of the stored supply will help keep the seed in good condition. This is especially necessary if there is an abrupt change from a cold, dry condition to warm, damp weather. During such a change the moisture condenses and collects on the cold grains of corn and may ruin the seed if allowed to remain until the weather again turns cold. A small stove or other heating equipment in the farm seed room will dry the corn and prevent such damage.

Small Hotbed Will Grow Ample Supply of Plants

A 6 by 6-foot hotbed, when properly handled, will grow sufficient plants for the average farm garden and a few extra for the neighbors, writes a correspondent in the Indiana Farmer's Guide.

Hotbeds should have a southern exposure and be protected from strong winds. Build a frame 6 by 6 feet, using 2-inch thick material. The top or north end of the frame should be of 2 by 10-inch material and the front 2 by 10 inches. Build the sides flush with the top and bottom which will give the proper slope for the sash. A pit may be dug for the manure or the manure may be placed on the ground, built up and the hotbed placed on top.

Use approximately 15 inches of fresh horse manure that does not have too much straw. Fork this over a few times until it starts to heat, then place it in the pit or pile it square on the ground, place the frame and put in 2 to 2½ inches of a good rich soil. If the soil is dry, water thoroughly but do not soak. Place the sash on the frame, bank around the sides with manure or soil and in a few days heating will take place. Seed should be sown when the temperature drops to 75 to 80 degrees.

Warbles Resist Salt. Some stockmen have long believed that salt treatments—either dry salt or brine—are effective in killing grub or warbles in the backs of cattle. But a scientific test of salt applications showed that they were virtually if not entirely ineffective. J. Stochlik, of the United States Department of Agriculture, tested a strong brine rubbed over the hair of several animals and found that it did not kill grubs. He injected brine into the holes in the hide and the grubs survived. And he rubbed brine repeatedly over the lumps in the back of a steer from which the hair had been clipped. His conclusion was that the frequent brushings were more effective in killing grubs than the brine was. As a result the bureau of animal industry is not recommending the simple salt "cure" for grubs. It is simple enough, but it does not cure.

Dairy Cow as Producer. It's a fact that a cow in a given length of time produces about six times as much protein food material as a fattening steer. A 1,200-pound steer in a year produces 548 pounds of dry matter for human food and he is then out of the picture. A dairy cow turning out 18,000 pounds of milk produces 2,200 pounds dry matter for human food; in addition gives birth to a calf and starts out doing the same trick all over again. To produce this amount of milk our dairy cow had to consume upwards of eight or nine tons of feed in the form of grain, high protein concentrates, hay, silage, and pasture. Here is a factory taking in raw material annually that amounts to ten or eleven times her own weight. Then she turns out a product of a highly intricate formula that weighs again six or eight times her own weight.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Down on the Farm. The corn plant has more than 1,000 possible industrial uses. Florida, low ranking dairy state, is increasing the number of its cows. Pruning of fruit trees may be done in the early winter, as well as in the spring months. Eighty-five out of every one hundred farms in this country have no electricity in any kind.

A twenty pound pig has enough weight to supply a dinner for 12 persons. "Leakiness" in butter is the result of not enough working to keep the moisture in the butter. Since manure is not a balanced fertilizer, superphosphate should always be used with it. If clear glass milk bottles stand in the sun, the milk soon develops a delicate tallow-like flavor.

Tells of Playing "Yellow Dwarf" With Victor Hugo

In the garden at Hauteville House Island of Guernsey, where Victor Hugo dreamed away 14 years of exile, M. Herriot met an old Guernsey man, aged seventy-two, M. Marquand, who had been an intimate friend of the great poet. "I often played cards with him," related M. Marquand. "Victor Hugo liked especially to play yellow dwarf. I almost always won, sometimes as much as six francs an evening. I would go home and my father would say to me, 'You've had a good dinner, great honor, and pennies to last the week.'" "How old were you?" asked M. Herriot. "I was twelve," proudly answered the champion at yellow dwarf.—Kansas City Star.

Do You Ever Wonder Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE? Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well - Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN. He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief. Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this: You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this—and see that you get what you want.

WORK TO AVERT FLOOD

FOND DU LAC—With regular crews augmented by several extra men, city officials took steps Monday to meet high water conditions on the Fond du Lac river following a two-day thaw of huge snowdrifts piled up by storms in the past month. Crews used a power saw and hand saws to cut a channel 100 feet wide through the ice into Lake Winnebago. Hot water from a factory was also turned on the ice to thaw it, so the water could run away.

150 PERSONS SNOWBOUND

HARTFORD—Over 150 persons were forced to seek refuge in the neighboring village of Nenno over the recent week-end from the big storm. The group was marooned for four days before the highways were opened. From 40 to 50 of the people were housed at Nesburg's tavern, while another 30 congregated at Grabow's garage and tavern. Remaining refugees were scattered at various other places.

REJECT HIGH SCHOOL BIDS

LOMIRA—All bids for an addition on the local high school have been rejected as it was found that they far exceeded the estimated cost of $37,000. The lowest bid was $45,180, or about fifteen thousand more than the school board has to spend. The board is now planning to raise more money or else revise the plans so that the cost will be lowered before construction can be started.

WOMAN IN CROSSING CRASH

WEST BEND—Mrs. Leonard A. Oelhofen Jr. of this city had a narrow escape from death or serious injury recently when a Ford car she was driving was struck by a Chicago & North Western railway switch engine on the Division street crossing here. The unattended engine was stopping near the crossing and just as Mrs. Oelhofen started across the engine began moving and hit the car, although both machines were moving slowly and little damage was done.

HOLD FATHER AND SON NIGHT

CAMPBELLSPORT—The first Father and Son banquet ever held in this village was greatly enjoyed by all 49 participants last week Tuesday evening when the Lions Club had sons of members as guests at their dinner meeting at Berg's hotel. There were 24 guests and 25 members present. An instructive talk by Chas. J. Glass and three reels of motion pictures were featured. A prize was also given to the boy consuming the most at the banquet.

PLAN TO DYNAMITE ICE

SHEBOYGAN FALLS—Due to the unusual amount of snow and the thickness of the ice on the rivers, a plan has been suggested by the common council to dynamite the ice above the two dams in the city to avoid a calamity when the spring break-up sets in. It is feared that unless the ice, which is tightly wedged against the dam, is not removed the pressure will become so great when the thaw commences that both dams will be completely demolished and will result in untold damage to property.

FIRE PERILS MEAT MARKET

PLYMOUTH—One of the most serious fires in this city for some time occurred last week Wednesday when a blaze broke out in the basement of the Matt Lauer meat market and resulted in an estimated damage of over $2,000. The fire was largely made up of burning asphalt which was being used in the construction of a new refrigerator in the basement, and the burning of this made the fire seem worse than it really was due to the thick, black smoke. Firemen found it necessary to use gas masks to enter the building.

SNOW HELPS FOXES ESCAPE

CEDARBURG—High snow in pens on the various fox farms in the south part of Ozaukee county has permitted a number of foxes to escape by leaping over the fences. Hunters organized a posse to recapture the animals, one of which was seen on the streets in this city and others scattered in this vicinity. One of the animals was shot at Germantown and returned to the fox farm at Thiensville, although some are still at large.

ARMSTRONG

Norman Anholdt of Kohler visited friends here Sunday. William Albers transacted business in Sheboygan and Plymouth. Mrs. Emma Seefeld visited relatives in Fond du Lac for a couple of weeks. Miss Hazel Blackmore is a patient at St. Agnes hospital, Fond du Lac, where she is undergoing treatment. Miss Rose Ann O'Brien, a student at the Oshkosh State Teachers' College, spent the week-end at her home. Mrs. Frank Blackmore and children are spending sometime with Mrs. Blackmore's parents at North Fond du Lac. James Foy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Foy, who has been confined to his home with a severe cold, is improved. Schools of this vicinity which were closed due to the drifted roads and severe cold weather have resumed classes.

THOUSANDS HELP

Thousands of citizens have been taking part in the conservation department's feeding program. Besides hundreds of individuals spending their own time and money in the co-operative effort to save the birds, sportsmen's clubs, civic clubs, the N.Y.A., W.P.A., C.C.C. erosion service, resettlement administration, Milwaukee Izak Walton League and other groups have been active. Farmers are playing a big part in the feeding program. The program is probably the greatest mobilization of the lovers of wild life ever seen anywhere. It is estimated that bird feeding activities have increased a thousand per cent over last year in Rock county.

AID OTHERS

"Song and insectivorous birds and the smaller game animals, such as rabbits and squirrels, should not be neglected during the present emergency," Mr. Grimmer says. "Bread, meat scraps, weed seed, scratch grain, cereals and suet are excellent for song birds. Rabbits and squirrels will readily consume almost any variety of grain. Alfalfa and clover hay is also excellent for rabbits."

MUST CONTINUE

One big danger pointed out by Mr. Grimmer is that people will slacken their bird feeding interest with the coming of mild weather. "Recurrent thaws and freezing will make it even more difficult for birds to secure feed," he says. "We, therefore, stress the urgent necessity of winter feeding efforts on the part of every individual who is interested in wild life. Emergency feeding, necessary in all counties, is probably best carried on by the use of ear corn which may be spiked or tied to trees, brush, fence posts or corn shocks a few inches above snow level in localities where birds congregate. Corn shocks should be torn open and ears husked."

TOM CAT HELPS

The Karakul lamb born at the state game and experimental fur farm near Poyette recently managed to get through the cold spell in comfort with the aid of a hot furnace and a big tom cat. Dr. E. F. Graves, department pathologist, visited his lamb patient one night in the basement where it had been given a bed near the furnace and found the lamb and cat huddled together in sound sleep. The tom cat was a stray animal that came to the farm only a few days before it was adopted as a bed-mate by the lamb.

ELMORE

E. Dellert of Milwaukee spent the week-end here. Lehman White of Dundee visited the H. Scheurman family Monday. Adolph Flitter of Campbellsport is harvesting ice on Lake Bernice. Mr. and Mrs. Norman Kleinhaus of Fond du Lac were village callers Sunday. Mrs. Kilian Emmer of Minneapolis was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Weis Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Becker of Kewaskum visited the Fred Stoll family on Tuesday evening.

Conservation Notes

Madison, Wis.—Tabulations by the conservation department from reports of forty counties indicate that so far comparatively few birds are found dead but a more accurate estimate of the actual bird loss awaits a period of moderate weather and open roads.

Tabulation of an upland bird survey by the department shows for the present the finding of 151 dead quail, 92 pheasants and eight Hungarian partridges. These were reported to the wardens in forty counties.

"There is no question but what our quail have been hard hit and that in some counties at least forty per cent or more of the birds have been wiped out," W. F. Grimmer, state superintendent of game management, says. "However, during even a normal winter we lose a large percentage of the quail. The birds often die during severe blizzards within a few feet of the finest type of cover where feed is being supplied regularly. In comparison, it is estimated that pheasant losses in most counties have been comparatively small. The same is true of Hungarian partridge."

NEW RECORD

It is estimated that there are from 35,000 to 50,000 bird feeding stations in Wisconsin in the most extensive feeding program ever attempted in any state. More than ten per cent of the game division's budget is allocated for bird feeding and from $7,000 to $8,000 are spent for grain for winter feeding. Individuals contributions in grain and money amount to many more thousands. The biggest contribution, 80 tons of grain, came from Kurtis R. Froedter, Milwaukee.

AID OTHERS

"Song and insectivorous birds and the smaller game animals, such as rabbits and squirrels, should not be neglected during the present emergency," Mr. Grimmer says. "Bread, meat scraps, weed seed, scratch grain, cereals and suet are excellent for song birds. Rabbits and squirrels will readily consume almost any variety of grain. Alfalfa and clover hay is also excellent for rabbits."

MUST CONTINUE

One big danger pointed out by Mr. Grimmer is that people will slacken their bird feeding interest with the coming of mild weather. "Recurrent thaws and freezing will make it even more difficult for birds to secure feed," he says. "We, therefore, stress the urgent necessity of winter feeding efforts on the part of every individual who is interested in wild life. Emergency feeding, necessary in all counties, is probably best carried on by the use of ear corn which may be spiked or tied to trees, brush, fence posts or corn shocks a few inches above snow level in localities where birds congregate. Corn shocks should be torn open and ears husked."

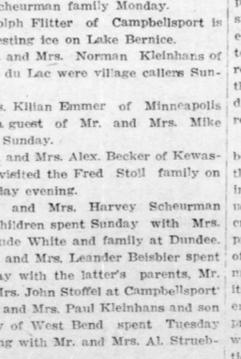

TOM CAT HELPS

The Karakul lamb born at the state game and experimental fur farm near Poyette recently managed to get through the cold spell in comfort with the aid of a hot furnace and a big tom cat. Dr. E. F. Graves, department pathologist, visited his lamb patient one night in the basement where it had been given a bed near the furnace and found the lamb and cat huddled together in sound sleep. The tom cat was a stray animal that came to the farm only a few days before it was adopted as a bed-mate by the lamb.

Washington Letter

Weekly Letter of Happenings at the Seat of Government by Our Congressman M. K. Reilly

The Social Security legislation of the last Congress has begun to function. The past week the first National Social Security grants were mailed out to the States that have provided legislation for taking care of their dependents.

The Wisconsin check amounted to almost $400,000.00 and it covers the months of February and March and will go to about 15,000 pensioners who have come within the Wisconsin law. Under the terms of the national law the United States Government pays 1/2 of the pension up to $15.00. As is well known Wisconsin has a pension system whereby $15.00 more will go to those who come within the terms of the law, thereby making $30.00 a month for single dependents and where husband and wife come within the law they will receive $60.00 per month.

While the writer is of the opinion that $30 a month is not in all cases an adequate pension, it constitutes a very good beginning in a field heretofore left to the States alone. Now because of the Social Security Act of the past session Congress the welfare of our dependent people, our dependent children and the blind has become a matter of national concern.

At the same time that the check for the old age pensions was sent to Wisconsin and other States, another check for $52,149.00 was sent to Wisconsin for aid to the blind, there being about 2,000 applicants for this kind of a pension, and $200,000.00 was sent for the aid of dependent children, 20,000 in number.

Last week in the Senate and the present week in the House were what might be called agricultural weeks. During the past two weeks both Houses have been considering a new agricultural relief bill. The reader will recall that some time ago the Supreme Court declared the old AAA known as the Triple A, written for the relief of agriculture to be unconstitutional. After the Supreme Court decision representatives of all the farm organizations came to Washington to consider the agricultural situation and to devise and propose legislation to take the place of the Triple A.

The Triple A was declared unconstitutional because the Supreme Court held that it was designed to control and regulate agriculture and thereby invaded the province and jurisdiction of the various states in that particular line of legislation. The Supreme Court held that agriculture was a local business and not subject to regulation by Congress.

The two bills passed by the House and the Senate are in a general way similar but in many respects differ. The bills now will go to conference and just what will come out of the conference no one can tell. The big point of controversy in both Houses over this new farm bill revolved around whether or not the new bill did anything for the dairy industry. The old Triple A, designed to help agriculture through raising prices, had two ways for functioning: One was through the processing tax levied on certain staple farm products, and the other was through crop curtailment. The crop curtailment plan provided that farmers who received the benefits of the provisions of the Triple A should take out of the production of cotton, wheat, corn, etc., a certain percentage of his acreage for which crop act he would be paid. The dairy farmers complained that the land taken out of the production of cotton, wheat, corn, etc., should not be put to grass and forage crops which would result in the increase of dairy cattle and beef cattle to the detriment of the beef and dairy business.

It was not said in the Triple A what should be done with the land taken out of production, but the Secretary of Agriculture provided in the crop agreements signed by the farmer that the land thus taken out should not be used for productive purposes that would bring them in competition with other farm industries.

The fight in the Senate and the House over this new type of legislation was waged on behalf of the dairy farmer to put into the new bill a specific declaration that the land taken out of production should not be used to produce more milk and more beef. This amendment was defeated in the Senate and the House by a large majority. The contention of the sponsors of the bill as it was written was that the incorporating in his new legislation of a specific requirement that the land taken out of production should not be put to certain crops would constitute the regulation of agriculture, and bring the law within the prohibition laid down by the Supreme Court in its recent decision nullifying the Triple A.

It might be stated that all the members from Wisconsin voted in favor of the amendment that would prevent any increase of acreage for dairy and beef use as the result of the curtailment of crop acreage in other lines of farm products. It is hoped that as a result of what is known as the Jones Amendment put on to this bill shortly before its passage in the House the conference will be enabled to work out some program whereby the dairy industry will not suffer any increase in production as a result of the new farm relief bill.

The new farm relief measure is entitled, "A Bill for the Conservation of Agricultural Land Resources, Largely Through the Prevention of Soil Erosion and the Increasing of Soil Fertility." While the Supreme Court has held that agriculture is a local and State industry the work of preventing soil erosion

Only One Low Priced Car is FIRST in Everything That Counts

... TERRAPLANE

JUST COMPARE

THIS with THIS

Terraplane alone among all popular low priced cars gives you this:

- Full 115-inch wheelbase.
- 195 inches over-all length.
- Most power—88 or 100 horsepower—with freedom from vibration at all speeds.
- Body all of steel, with seamless roof of solid steel.
- Most inside room—145 cubic feet—more leg and shoulder room, and widest rear seat.
- Completely new style—best insurance of the investment value of your car.
- The only rear opening baggage and tire compartment on 5 and 6-passenger models that can be had in any low priced car without extra cost. Spare tire lies flat inside.
- Duo-Automatic Hydraulic Brakes (patent applied for), two braking systems operating automatically from one brake pedal. And a third braking system from the easiest operating parking brake in the world.
- Extra deep "V-type" windshield—far added beauty and wider vision.

In every other popular low priced car this is what you get:

- 2 to 6 inches less wheelbase.
- 5 to 12 1/2 inches less over-all length.
- 3 to 18 less horsepower than Terraplane's 88—and not nearly as smooth.
- Body only partly of steel—or steel body with "soft-top."
- Less inside room—less shoulder and leg room—narrower rear seats.
- 1935 styling, changed only in details. Far more likely to be out of date by 1937.
- No rear opening baggage and tire compartment, except in cars where trunk models are available—at considerable extra cost. Spare tire mounted outside on all other models.
- Single main braking system—either hydraulic or mechanical—without complete reserve braking system and without Terraplane's type of easy acting parking brakes.
- Nothing like Terraplane's deep "V-type" windshield in any other low priced car.

The list of Terraplane advantages doesn't stop with those listed here. There's greater ruggedness, proved by owner mileages of 125,000, 150,000 and more. Greater economy, too, certified by thousands of sworn owner statements... emphasized again just the other day in the Los Angeles-Yosemite Economy Run when a Terraplane averaged 23.95 officially certified miles per gallon over a tough 352 mile stretch on mountain roads. And dozens of other features... all at a price down with the lowest for the model you want. Come in and see and drive a Terraplane.

NEW TALKING PICTURE TO BE SHOWN

Greater Farm Profits and Getting the Most from Tractors Are the Subjects of Two New Sound Pictures to Be Shown by Local Implement Dealer

L. Rosenheimer, local farm equipment dealer, will hold open house for the farmers of this vicinity to see the new talking motion picture, "Sheppard & Son," a sequel to "Partners," shown last year. They will be aided by representatives of the John Deere organization.

Farmers in other localities, who have seen the picture, declare it to be a short course in modern farming, with new and better ways of doing things, new ways of saving money, new methods to increase crop yields.

The picture is a continuation of the story of Mr. Sheppard and his son, Dick, to get the most from their John Deere tractor, with animated drawings of the workings of the motor and cooling system. This picture is declared to be decidedly worth while, and suggests many helping hints in adding to the economy and satisfaction to be derived from a tractor. The meeting will be in session from 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning, March 7th, 1936, in the L. Rosenheimer Show building in Kewaskum.

"We invite every farmer in this vicinity to be our guest and we particularly want the boys to come," says L. Rosenheimer.

"We are planning to make this a social affair, but at the same time very worth while one to farmers and their families. We are counting on a big crowd coming in to enjoy the day with us."

John Deere Day is proving especially popular with farmers as evidenced by the picture above which shows an interested group at one of these meetings.
