

Far above other low priced cars
in all but cost!
TERRAPLANE

Yes, different from other low priced cars—and far ahead of the rest—in style and everything else that counts! Can we prove this? Just look at a few facts about Terraplane.

Wheelbase, over-all length, inside leg room, head room, shoulder room—unmatched by any low priced car. Unmatched by some costing $125 and $145 more.

"Extras" At No Extra Cost
Of all low priced cars only Terraplane gives you—at no extra cost—a rear opening baggage compartment with more room than the average trunk model, with spare tire lying flat inside.

Power—the same story. Terraplane is ahead of other cars in its price class by as much as 18 horsepower. And no vibration at any speed! Terraplanes with 125,000, 150,000 miles and more to their credit show you what that smoothness means in long life.

23.95 Miles per Gallon
Interested in economy? Here is Terraplane's latest—23.95 officially certified miles per gallon over 352 miles of mountain roads, with three passengers and baggage, in the recent Los Angeles-Yosemite Economy Run.

More...Terraplane is the only leading low priced car with body all of steel and seamless steel roof. And no other car in its whole price range has Duo-Automatic Hydraulic Brakes. (patent applied for) . . . Radial Safety Control (patent applied for) . . . Tru-Line Steering . . . or The Electric Hand, optional at small extra cost.

The most amazing car in the low price field—this 1936 Terraplane. And right down with the lowest in cost for the model and features you want. Come in and see for yourself.

When Bladder Weakness WAKES YOU UP?

Make this 25c test. Remove the cause. Use buchu leaves, juniper oil, etc., to flush out excess acids and impurities which causes irritation that results in restless nights, burning, scanty flow, frequent desire, or backache. Ask for little green tablets called Buketes, the bladder lax. They work on the bladder similar to castor oil on the bowels. In four days if not pleased any druggist will refund your 25c. Otto B. A Campaign Is Coming and it will bring Songs, Slogans, Symbols and—Slanders!

SLOGANS MAY BE SLANDERS, AND VICE-VERSA

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

BACK in 1884 when James G. Blaine was the Republican candidate for President and Grover Cleveland, the Democratic standard-bearer, the followers of the latter raised the cry of "Turn the rascals out!" Despite the scandals of the Grant administration and the dubious victory of the Republican Hayes over the Democratic Blaine, it is doubtful if there were any "rascals" in the Republican party then.

Blaine was among the Democrats at that time. American political history is full of cases in which the "outs" raise the cry against the administration. That was the case in 1854 when the Republicans were turned out after having been in power continuously for 24 years.

In 1855 the Democratic "outs," recalling the misdeeds of the Harding administration, raised the cry against the Republican "ins" but this time it was the Democrats who were elected.

Now we are approaching another "turning point" in our history. The Democrats are now the "outs" and are hearing the familiar cry against them by some of the leaders of the newspapers representing the Republican party.

A CARTOON OF THE 1860 CAMPAIGN
The figure on the pile of rails is Abraham Lincoln, the Republican candidate saying: "Little did I think when I split these rails that they would be the means of elevating me to my present position." In the center is Horace Greeley of the New York Tribune saying: "I assure you, my friend, that you can safely vote my ticket, for we have no connection with the Abolition party but our Platform is composed entirely of rails, split by our Candidate." To that the figure on the left, "Young America," is replying: "It's no use, old fellow! You can't pull the wool over my eyes for I can see 'the Nigger' peeping through the rails."

Another campaign is coming and, just as in the past, we will have our full quota of songs, slogans, symbols and slanders. The latter, especially, the latter, has already predicted that "it's a matter of time before the Democrats will be elected."

What will the Democrats do? Don't worry! You'll hear from them soon—trust Old Dame Rumor and her gossiping, Old Whispering Campaigner, for she will be the first to tell you.

What will the slogans be? It's a little too early to predict that very accurately. But we can expect a variation of "Don't let the Democrats and Bosses Days" might be heard from the Democrats and "Save the Constitution" from the Republicans. However, there will be plenty of different and more potent ones.

The nominating conventions are held in the campaign gets well under way. The only predictable thing about the power of campaign slogans is their utter unpredictability. Often the carefully planned ones are forgotten or replaced, whereas a chance remark or some unexpected incident may produce a slogan which plays a vitally important part in electing a candidate. At least, that has been the history in the past.

The first effective use of the campaign slogan was made in 1800 when the Republican party (the ancestor of the present Democrats) used the cry of "Equal rights for all; special privileges for none." That was in protest against the aristocratic tendencies of the Federalist party and it swept Thomas Jefferson into office over John Adams, who was seeking re-election.

For the next 24 years of rule by the "Virginia dynasty"—Jefferson, Madison and Monroe the Federalist party disappeared from the scene, leaving only the Republicans, who called themselves Democrats, with various names within the party. In 1824 there were four outstanding candidates—John Quincy Adams, Monroe's secretary of state; William Crawford, his secretary of the treasury; Henry Clay, a member of the house of representatives, and Andrew Jackson, a member of the senate.

ANDREW THE FIRST.

Grant's famous "Let Us Have Peace" was used to good advantage as a slogan in electing the "Man from Appomattox" but the corruption which marked his two administrations provided the Democratic opponents of his successor, Hayes, with the best possible type of slogan. So "Tilden and Reform" echoed throughout the campaign in 1876 as a powerful rallying cry for the Democrats. By all the rules of slogan logic, the brevity and the force of that slogan should have won for Tilden but election boards and an electoral commission decided otherwise.

In the campaign of 1884 the Democrats had a winning slogan handed to them on a silver platter by their opponents. The Republican candidate was James G. Blaine and it looked as though his followers with their rallying cries of "Blaine, Blaine, Blaine of Maine" and "As Maine Goes, So Goes the Nation!" would elect him. But his cause received a fatal blow when a group of ministers called upon him and their leader, Rev. E. B. Burdick, declared in a speech that all conscientious Americans should vote the Republican ticket because the Democrats stood for "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion." Blaine did not hear him distinctly enough to realize the gross error and to repudiate this slur upon the religious belief of millions of Americans. So the slogan which the Republicans had attempted to tack on the Democrats proved to be a boomerang and aided in defeating their candidate.

The tariff campaigns were prolific with slogans. Among the most telling ones were "Protection and Prosperity," "Free Trade and Pauperized Labor" and "Free Trade and the Destruction of American Industries," which the practical Mark Hanna boiled down into the vote-getting slogan of "The Full Dinner Pail."

William Jennings Bryan had a strong slogan—strong in its brevity and its capability of being easily remembered—in his "Sixteen to One." But it wasn't strong enough to win the election for him the first time he tried and he never was able to get another which did.

Sometimes a slogan will have a "kick-back" after it has accomplished its purpose. There is no doubt but that "He Kicked Us Out of War" helped re-elect Woodrow Wilson in 1916. And then fate decreed that within six months after his election he should be "in" and not "out" of war. "Too Proud to Fight" was another phrase that haunted him later.

As for the slogans of recent years, they are too familiar to most of us to need much comment. War-weary America turned "Back to Normalcy" with Warren G. Harding in 1920. In 1924 when the Democrats hoped that it was restless under Republican misrule and hot for a change, they learned that it had decided to "Keep Cool With Coolidge" instead of vote for "Better Days With Davis." In 1928 the Democrats, wearing a brown derby and singing "The Sidewalks of New York" asked America to remember its "Eight Years of Wall Street" and to "Give Main Street Years of Wall Street" and to "Give Main Street a Chance." But instead of heeding this advice America voted for "Hoover and Prosperity" and the slogan vanished in 1929 like a "New Deal" and in 1932 elected Franklin D. Roosevelt to get it.

And these are only a part of the slogans which have played their part in American political history. The slanders have been equally numerous. Slogans are often forgotten after the tumult and the shouting of a political campaign dies down. But, unfortunately, that is not always true of the slanders. Even after a candidate becomes President of the United States and is traditionally entitled to all the respect and honor due that high office, the gossips, the whisperers, the just-plain-lars keep up their dirty work. Few Presidential candidates and few Presidents have escaped being the targets of their poison tongues.

"If ever a nation was debauched by a man, the American nation has been debauched by him. If ever a nation has been deceived by a man the American nation has been deceived by him. Let his conduct then be an example to future ages. Let it serve to be a warning that no man may be an idol and that a people may confide in themselves rather than in an individual. Let the history of the federal government instruct mankind, that the masses of patriotism may be worn to conceal the foulest designs against the liberties of the people."

The man referred to in the foregoing quotation was none other than George Washington. Those lines were penned by Benjamin Franklin Bache, grandson of the immortal Ben Franklin, editor of the Philadelphia Aurora in 1796. And that was typical of the abuse heaped upon the head of the "Father of His Country" by the Jeffersonian Republican press during the final months of Washington's last administration.

With such a good start, it is especially remarkable that our political history should be filled with slanders and that in the heat of a presidential campaign common sense and common decency seems sunk to unbelievably low depths.

"Bargain and Corruption" was the cry of the Jacksonian Democrats against John Quincy Adams and Henry Clay in 1824 for, as a popular song of that period declared:

Henry Clay was a cunning chap
His debts had thrown him all aback,
So he felt a longing for Treasury pap,
He made a bargain with John the Great,
But Harry was placed in the chair of State,
Heigh-ho, says Harry.

But such a charge as that was mild compared to those hurled during the campaign of 1828 when Jackson triumphed over Adams. "It was a merciless, filthy, scavenging campaign, in which nothing personal concerning the candidates was denied to the accumulating spoils of published privacies—from the temporary legal complications of General Jackson's matrimonial affairs to the billiard table, that piece of 'gambling furniture' at the White House" (then occupied by Adams). So writes Meade Miningerode in his book "Presidential Years."

Considering the veneration in which the name of Abraham Lincoln is held throughout the United States today, it seems strange to look through the newspapers of 1860 and find in their a reference to him in such words as these: "A horrid looking wretch he is, sooty and scoundrelly in aspect, a cross between the nutmeg dealer, the horse swapper and the night man... He is a lank-sided Yankee of the incomeldest visage and of the dirtiest complexion. Fought! After him what decent white men would be President?"

After Lincoln's assassination, the scandal-mongers immediately busied themselves with smearing the new President, Andrew Johnson. He had, they asserted, "been drinking for a month and on the night of that tragedy 'had to be roused from a drunken stupor and taken to a doctor to be sobered up.'" Both Grant and Cleveland were accused of habitual intemperance and an alleged indiscretion in the latter's youth was exaggerated and distorted to make him appear an habitual profligate.

Cleveland's opponent, Blaine, did nothing to stop the spread of this scandal but when Cleveland was offered certain papers which would besmirch Blaine in much the same manner, he paid off the tale-bearer and destroyed the papers. However, a less scrupulous Democratic partisan got hold of the story, which reflected upon Blaine's family life, and published it. It became common campaign gossip and, despite a frank explanation which Blaine was at last forced to issue, the slander continued to circulate. And this was only one of several incidents in the campaign of 1884 which was as bad, if not worse, than the Jackson-Adams campaign of 1828.

At one time Cleveland while discussing with John S. Wise, a political opponent but a personal friend, the death of President McKinley, said: "I don't know whether, after all, McKinley's life, sad as was its ending, was not, taking into consideration everything, to be envied. It is true he was struck down by an assassin. But he was never 'assassinated' in his lifetime. Bodily death is by no means the worst torture which a man can suffer. The torture of lies and misrepresentation affecting what is dearest to us in life is infinitely worse than the mere physical pain of dying."

No doubt other Presidents and other Presidential candidates who have suffered as he did would agree with those words of Grover Cleveland. And American citizens might well remember them when, during the coming campaign, some whisperer seeks to pour in his ear the poison of slander against a candidate, whether Republican or Democrat, Socialist or Communist, or the standard-bearer of any other party.

THE GOAT THAT SANG TENOR
WHEN William McClenahan, newspaper correspondent of Port Deposit, Md., first heard about it, he didn't believe it. A farmer, so the neighborhood gossips said, had a goat that sang in a beautiful tenor voice. How did it happen?
Well, it seems that some member of the farmer's family had been careless and left a phonograph record of "Mother o' Mine" by John McCormack out in the yard. At least, that's the way Mr. McClenahan's story, which appeared in the Baltimore Sun, accounted for it.
The farmer and his singing goat became famous. People came to see it and paid for the privilege of hearing it sing. Then had luck overtook the farmer. The goat stopped singing as suddenly as it had begun. So the farmer bought an expensive record by a famous grand opera star—"O Sole Mio." It was—and fed that to the goat.
The result was fatal. The goat began to sing but suddenly dropped dead. An autopsy revealed the fact that its throat was clogged up with what the veterinarian called "some foreign substance." They were Italian words and phrases. The goat was 100 per cent American, so of course, he choked to death on 'em.

His Unlucky Day
"YES, sir, I believe in that superstition about Friday, the 13th, being an unlucky day," said the Oldest Ranger in Yellowstone park. "I recollect one of 'em in particular."
"I was out on patrol and discovered I didn't have a bite of food in my grub bag and only one shell left in my trusty tin of gun. Well, I sneaked through the woods till I saw a brace of quail sittin' on a bush so I maneuvered around 'em so as to be sure of gettin' both of 'em with one shot."
"I let fly 'em, by golly, when I went to pick up them two birds I found that I'd killed six more that was sittin' on the other side of the bush. Just then I heard a big commotion out in a little lake nearby. There was a big buck deer that had been skinned by my shot and had run out and got himself mired down."
"I run out to help him but before I could get to him he drowned. As I was carryin' him to shore, I sank down in the mud 'n' water up over the tops of my boots. So I took 'em off to pour out the water and darned if there didn't flop out of 'em a dozen of the finest trout you ever did see."
"Well, I strung the quail 'n' the deer 'n' the trout on a pole so I could carry 'em easier. But my struggles to get the load up on my shoulders was just too much of a strain on my suspender buttons. Darned if one didn't fly off with such force that it killed a rabbit 100 yards away."
"When that happened, I jest decided I wasn't no use to try to do any more huntin'. Seemed like it was my unlucky day, it bein' Friday, the 13th."

Man Overboard!
MEN who go down to the sea in ships frequently see or hear about some unusual occurrences. J. W. Putman of Anaheim, Calif., who once served in the United States navy, is no exception to that rule.
One hot, sticky day as the battleships and cruisers were steaming along off the coast of China a typhoon suddenly swooped down upon them. Despite the howling wind and raging waters, the vessels managed to keep their alignment.
In the midst of the storm a lieutenant decided that he wanted a cup of coffee. So a mess boy started across the deck with a cup of coffee, a pitcher of cream and a bowl of sugar on a tray. Just as he was about to open the door to the officers' quarters, a 61-foot wave swept across the deck.
It picked up the mess boy, juggled him for a second on its crest, then carried him 305 yards astern and deposited him at the door of the officers' quarters of the next ship in line. Opening the door, he walked in and said, "Here is the coffee you ordered, lieutenant. One lump, or two, and shall I pour in the cream?"
It had all happened so quickly that the mess boy didn't realize he was on another ship until the officer roared out: "I'm a captain, not a lieutenant! I didn't order any coffee, and what are you doing here?"

Indians Traced to Yellow Race
The original red man, the American Indian, came from pure yellow stock and did not carry any black strain from admixtures with natives of Oceania, reports Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of anthropology of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington. He brands as "fabulous" the theories that natives of the Oceanic islands left their imprint on the American continent. These islands were occupied by the Melanesian peoples only as recently as the first millennium before Christ, at which time the New world had been populated for several thousand years from Mongolian stock. Skulls have been found in the Americas which seem to indicate Melanesian origin, but these always prove to fall within the variations known to occur among the Indians, declares Doctor Hrdlicka.

Daniel Webster Impressive
One description of Daniel Webster, when replying to Hayne on the floor of the senate, is as follows: "Webster arose to speak to packed galleries. In appearance he was grave and dignified. He had the noblest head America has produced—smooth-shaven, heavy-featured, with swarthy skin, brilliant eyes and beaming brows, and his rich voice had the range and melody of a chime of bells. The simplest man could follow his plain diction, while his logic and weight of argument delighted and convinced the most learned."

Alluring Daytime Frock With Distinctive Yoke

The yoke of this frock is unusual and a distinctive departure from the obvious round or squared-off affair, because it extends out over the shoulders and forms flaring little caps—caps which conceal two inverted pleats and which are transformed into lovely loose raglan sleeves. The blouse gathers at the yoke and waist in front and back, rendering fullness and a soft drapery appearance. The twin panels in the skirt give you height, and the skirt an added swirl. Two huge gathered pockets in unison with the blouse are interesting features and very practical. Make a self-fabric belt trimmed with a diamond shaped buckle and two harmonizing buttons, and notice how smart and up to the minute your frock will be.

Conservation Notes

Madison, Wis.—A pack of timber wolves, headed by one animal that leaves a paw print five and a half inches across, is being hunted in Vilas county by a small volunteer army organized by the conservation department.

The pack is held responsible for the killing of 17 deer. One wolf, weighing 99 pounds, has been shot and more than 30 men headed by Conservation Warden Hartwell Paul are still trailing the pack.

The size of the leader of the pack is a matter of speculation. Warden Frank Long recalls that he shot a timber wolf that had left a paw track of five inches and the animal weighed 135 pounds. The track of the pack leader now being trailed is a half inch larger. The hunters had a demonstration of the power of the big Vilas county wolf when one of the dogs caught up to the pack and lost its life. Powerful wolf jaws crushed the dog's head and ribs as it tried to flee from its huge adversary.

The conservation department hopes that it can bring pine martens back to the forest areas of this state to keep down the population of red squirrels. The little fur bearers feed on squirrels and the hope is that the red squirrels can be brought back to the point where they belong in nature's balance. Conservation Director H. W. MacKenzie points out that the red squirrels are notorious robbers of birds' nests; that a diminishing number of birds means more insects to destroy trees and hamper the state reforestation program. The first of the pine martens to be used for propagation purposes have been acquired at the state game and experimental fur farm, Poyette, with the hope that successful propagation methods can be worked out.

Three of the 800 lake trout tagged in Green Bay and Lake Michigan last fall by the conservation department have been recaptured and one of the fish had traveled to the Michigan side of the lake. The fish was finally caught in Little Bay de Noc by an Escanaba, Michigan, fisherman. It traveled from 12 to 16 miles from the place of tagging.

Lake trout less than 20 inches long removed from Great Lakes waters by commercial fishermen have had little if any chance to reproduce, according to studies by Dr. Edward Schaeberger, conservation department biologist. His studies show that lake trout of this length are about four years old and that they seldom spawn up to that age. Dr. Schaeberger said that one of the interesting results of his studies was to show that lake trout feed on smelt.

Dr. Schaeberger speculates on the value of artificial trout propagation. "Assuming that an average of 6,816 eggs are produced by each ripe female and there is a 75 per cent hatch, 5,112 fry should be produced to replace each ripe female," he says. "It would be interesting to know the percentage of survival of the fry to maturity. If only one per cent survive to maturity, each ripe female would then have 51 offspring."

Frank Suthers, who has been planting fish for the conservation department for 40 years, had the longest service record of any man in the department. The recent anniversary was marked by a surprise party given by members of the department. One of the state's big forward steps came under the new rule where all fish are planted under direct department supervision, Mr. Suthers says. He says that this system saves about 25 per cent of the fish.

Dr. E. H. Cary, former president of the American Medical Association makes a bid for popularity among the nation's youngsters by declaring that forcing children to eat spinach for the iron it is supposed to contain is the bunk. So far as the iron is concerned, he said, it would be just as well to let a kid suck a 20-penny nail.

Washington Letter

Weekly Letter of Happenings at the Seat of Government by Our Congressman M. K. Keilly

On last Monday the House resolved itself into a grand jury for the purpose of hearing charges of misconduct against Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter of the Southern District of Florida.

Under the Constitution the House does not try persons held to be subject to impeachment, that is, to be guilty of misbehavior, high crimes and misdemeanors in office. The House simply decides whether or not the case is of such a character as should be submitted to the United States Senate for trial. In other words, in matters of impeachment, the House of Representatives is the indicting body and the Senate of the United States is the trial body.

Impeachment charges in the House go to the Committee on Judiciary. The Judiciary Committee generally appoints a subcommittee to investigate the facts as to why a certain judge or public official should be cited before the United States Senate for the purpose of being impeached or removed from office.

The House spent five hours on last Monday considering the impeachment resolution presented by the Judiciary Committee. The subcommittee of five that investigated this case were divided three to two, three for impeachment and two against it. The members of the Judiciary Committee also were divided as to whether or not Judge Ritter should be impeached. The final vote in the House was 181 for impeachment or in favor of the resolution proposed by the Judiciary Committee and 148 against the resolution. The two principal charges against the Judge were that he had granted exorbitant receivership fees to his former law partner and that he had received a $4,500 bribe from the said former partner, Judge Ritter, a gray-haired man over sixty years of age, sat in the House gallery all the afternoon with his wife listening to the debate on the floor regarding his right to continue as a United States Judge.

The House of Representatives will now appoint a board of managers. This board will be selected from the members of the House Judiciary Committee and will have charge of this impeachment case before the United States Senate, where the Senate will sit as a jury. In other words, the members of the House, or this board of managers will act just the same as the prosecuting attorney and his assistants act in presenting the evidence in a criminal court in Wisconsin.

Only eleven times in the history of our country has the Senate sat as a court or jury to hear and try an impeachment case. The last case tried by the Senate was the case of Federal Judge Harold Louderback of the Northern District of California, in 1933. Judge Louderback was acquitted. Of course the most celebrated impeachment case ever tried before the United States Senate was the trial of President Andrew Johnson in 1868. This perhaps was one of the most famous impeachment cases in all the history of the world's impeachment trials, and matches up with the impeachment trial before the British Parliament of Warren Hastings. President Johnson was also acquitted but by a very close vote.

The members of the Cabinet gave to President and Mrs. Roosevelt a dinner on the evening of March 4th at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington. Up to the present Administration the Cabinet members have generally given individual dinners to their Chief and wife, but during Roosevelt's term in the White House there has been one Joint Cabinet dinner to the President and his wife. After this year the 4th of March will kind of fade out of our history as an important date. Up to the present time, with a few exceptions in the early history of our country, Presidents have always been inaugurated on March 4th. The next President of the United States will take office on January 20th next, and hereafter undoubtedly Cabinet dinners, either individual or collective, given to the President of the United States and his wife, in off years will take place on the 20th of January instead of the 4th of March, at least until another Constitutional amendment may change the date for inaugurating the President.

For four days this week the House of Representatives has been considering the District of Columbia Appropriation Bill. The House has on its calendar every other Monday what is known as the District of Columbia Day when the ordinary legislative work of the District is performed by Congress. However, when it comes down to appropriating money to run the District that work is done by a subcommittee of the great Appropriations Committee of the House, and it was that committee that had the floor this week.

Every time Congress gets around to appropriate money to run the District of Columbia said money is made up of funds appropriated from the District and also from the Federal Treasury. Years ago, the appropriations for the District of Columbia were made up of equal contributions by Congress speaking for the whole country and by Congress assessing taxes on the property of the District of Columbia and her citizens for running of the city of Washington. This ratio was known as the 50-50 tax ratio between the Government and the District. Later, when Washington grew larger and the proportion of residential property to Governmental property increased, the ratio of 40-60 was established, that is, 40 per cent of the running cost of the City of Washington to be paid by the Federal Government and 60 per cent by the citizens of Washington. While the old 40-60 ratio is still on the statute book Congress has not been paying much attention to it in the past few years, with the result that the amount contributed by the nation to the running cost of governmental Washington has fallen way below a 40-60 ratio, established by Congress, the writer believes, in 1920.

The Appropriation Bill as reported to the House carried $45,000,000 but only $2,700,000 of that sum was to be paid by the United States Government. The Budget provided that the Government would pay $5,700,000 to help run the City of Washington during the next fiscal year, but the subcommittee having in charge the bill, cut off $3,000,000 and left the contribution of the nation at about $2,700,000. It would seem that the ratio of tax burden between the National Government and the City of Washington may have been too high when the ratio was 50-50, but there can be no doubt at all but that it has gone down too low today when the National Government will contribute only $2,700,000 out of $45,000,000 necessary to run the District of Columbia. Of course, there is an eternal conflict going on between the District of Columbia and Congress as to what would be a fair tax payment on the part of the National Government. Many of the citizens of the District claim that the property of the United States Government should be assessed just the same as any other property, and in that way only can the Government meet its tax obligations to the District. Of course it would be a rather difficult if not impossible task to assess or appraise all the United States property in the District of Columbia. In the last few years the Government has probably spent $150,000,000 in constructing magnificent buildings, many of them being more ornamental than useful from the standpoint of Governmental needs. It will never be possible to settle the revenue battle between Congress and the District by assessing the property of the United States Government just the same as the citizens of the District but it does seem that there ought to be a fair basis whereby in the providing of money for the running of the National Capitol, the Nation can assume its just share of the tax burdens of the District of Colum-
