It does not require an expert mathe. natician to figure out the advantages to be derived from buying from Kevaskum merchants. It is a matter of elementary arithmetic. When a big city nerchant, a mail-order house or a local chain store talks quantity buying and quantity selling he is trying to create a smoke screen of high sounding terms so that you will lose sight of fundamental facts.

Your pencil employed in a little straight figuring will quickly dispel the

Let us see what these figures show. Milwaukee is 41 miles from Kewasum. Other things being equal the larger stores in Milwaukee can save their irged by all big town merchants, i.e., quantity buying and quantity selling. Just how this comes about is obviouslower freight rates, cash discounts, larger group of customers, quicker turnover and possibly a smaller overheal in proportion to the volume sold. But this is only true in comparing the large and small stores in a big city.

COUPLE MARRIED

Miss Cyrilla Schaeffer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Schaeffer of the town of Auburn, was united in marriage to Mr. Alfred Tischendorf, of the town of Ashford, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Tischendorf of Arpin, Wis., at the Holy Trinity church here at eight o'clock Thursday morning, April 30th. Rev. Ph. J. Vogt performed the nuptial rites.

The attendants were Mrs. Edward Weddig, sister of the bride, as matron of honor, and Edward Weddig, brotherin-law of the bride, as best man.

The bride was attired in a beautiful gown of white satin, veil trimmed with chantilly lace and swansonia. She carried Calla lillies. The matron of honor wore a yellow net dress with hat to match and carried yellow tulips, orchids and sweet peas.

After the ny at the church the guests repaired to the home of the bride's parents in the town o' Auburn, where a sedd of he akfant was partaken of by about 40 guests and where a reception was held throughout the day. The young couple will be at home to their many friends on the groom's farm in the town of Ashford, on and after May 15th. May we offer our best wishes and congratulations to the happy couple.

PRACTICE GAME SET

FOR NEXT SUNDAY Another practice game is scheduled for the village baseball team on Sunday afternoon, before the opening league game on the following Sunday, when Port Washington opens the season here.

The local management has tried to book games with Random Lake or Cascade of the Kettle-Moraine league for Sunday but neither team could be secured, the latter because their pitcher, Ninneman, is on the sick list. They are, at present, dickering with other teams, but if none can be bargained with, the boys will have a practice game among themselves, as most of the regular players will be on hand Sunday to get acquainted before the opening game. national convention at Cleveland next June their keynote for their Presidential campaign will be sounded by Frederick Stiewer, the eloquent and handsome United States senator from Oregon. He was selected to be temporary chairman of the convention by unanimous vote of the arrangements committee of the national committee after due consideration had been given the names of several other prominent Republicans. Observers held that the motive in picking Stiewer was a desire of the party leaders to give the convention a western atmosphere at the start, with an especial eye to agriculture. The senator has been actively identified with wheat growing and his home town, Portland, is a center of the northwestern battleground of the November elections. His colleague is Senator Charles L. Mc-Nary, one of the authors of the old McNary-Haugen agriculture bill and by many regarded as a possible dark horse in the Presidential nomination race. Governor Landon said he was glad to was believed Senator Borah also approved himself liberal, and at the same the American form of government.

He has opposed most of the New Deal measures, but has not been uncompromising, as he voted for such acts as the TVA extension, the labor disputes act, and the AAA amendments. He has been active in soldier legislation, including the bonus. He opposed the work relief bill, the utilities bill, the tax bill and the Guffey coal bill. There is a chance that Stiewer may be given second place on the ticketor even first.

Congressman Bertrand Snell of New York, minority leader in the house, was selected to be permanent chairman of the convention, a position he held in the convention of 1932.

THROUGH William Allen White, Kansas editor, the Landon camp suggested to Senator Borah that he abandon his campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination, go to the Cleveland convention as a delegate and Borah rejected the proposition, say- tion leading to his apprehension.

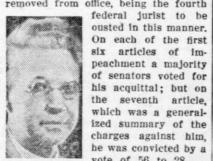

"Naturally I am interested in the latter but after all, a platform of Addis Ababa and all of Ethiopia was the price deplatform, but, after all, a platform doesn't mean much unless you know who is going to stand on it. I am more interested in the latter proposition just

If the Landon forces can control the convention, Mr. White may be made presented the ultimachairman of the resolutions committee. So it was taken that his proposal indicated that the Landon group was willing to accept as liberal a platform as Mr. Borah might desire in order to check dissension within the party ranks. The Idaho senator has made no direct attack on Landon but has indicated that he thought there was too much "big business" influence in the Landon movement.

DISREGARDING warnings by Senator Vandenberg of Michigan against too hasty action, the senate passed a bill introduced by Senator Overton of Louisiana authorizing the expenditure of $272,000,000 for flood control work on the lower Mississippi river and its tributaries. There was no record vote. The bill has no relation to the omnibus flood control measure now pending, which may reach a billion. The sum named in the senate bill is authorized merely to be appropriated and will have to be put in a deficiency appropriation bill. Senator Overton declared it was justified by emergency conditions.

In addition to the 272 million dollars there is authorized an appropriation of 15 millions to be allocated by the secretary of war and used in rescue work

> Conservative Democrats joined with the Republicans in this attack against the bill, but the administration leaders were confident the measure would pass before May 1.

Complete revision of the corporation tax system is the main objective of the bill. It levies a graduated tax on corporation income, based on percentage of earnings withheld from distribution to stockholders in the form of dividends.

The majority report asserted the measure would raise about $803,000,-000 the first year, but admitted that over a three-year period revenue would fall $334,000,000 short of the President's budget-balancing program. It was added that the deficit could be acted on "more intelligently" next ses-

SENATOR KENNETH McKELLAR of Tennessee made an attempt to reduce by $225,000 the appropriation for the federal bureau of investigation, otherwise J. Edgar Hoover's G-men, and failed ignominously. Only McKellar and one other senator were in the hear Stiewer had been chosen, and it affirmative on a viva voce vote, and in the brief but lively debate several proved, for in many ways Stiewer has Democrats, including Majority Leader Joe Robinson, joined Senator Vandentime has upheld the Constitution and berg in denouncing the proposed reduction. The Michigan man's remarks were caustic. Said he:

"I will go as far as the senator from Tennessee in all matters of economy, but it seems to me that this is a peculiar place to start economizing. The bureau says it needs 175 more men. If the senator wants to save 175 men, I will join him in taking that number from the 18,235 employed by Doctor Tugwell's resettlement administration. I will join him in abolishing 175 of the 43,641 jobs under Mr. Hopkins I will join him in removing that number from the 19,548 jobs under the HOLC, or the 2,422 jobs under the long interred NRA."

SEVEN persons were indicted by a federal grand jury in St. Paul, Minn., for the kidnaping of William Hamm, Jr., brewer, in June, 1933. Some of the accused are already in prison. spective governments in the embroglio. The league was helpless, and having received the discouraging report of the conciliation committee, was compelled to confess it could not find means of attaining peace. France will not consent to the imposition of military sanctions, and Great Britain naturally will not undertake to enforce them by herself. It appeared the poor Ethiopians were to be abandoned to their fate, meaning the extinction of their empire and their exploitation by Italy.

Anthony Eden in his address to the council warned France that she might expect from Great Britain no further support against aggression by Germany than France had given against Italy.

From the north, south and west the Italian armies were advancing on Ador repair and maintenance of flood dis Ababa, and the panic stricken civilian inhabitants of the capital were fleeing from the city. Foreigners sought shelter in the bomb-proofed British legation. The mayor issued all the arms available and the government called on all able men to make a last stand for liberty, saying "it is better to die than to be enslaved."

Latest dispatches said the Ethiopians were blasting the road between Dessye peachment a majority and Addis Ababa, and that the advance of some of the Italian columns had been halted by strong attacks. The emperor was afield with his troops and turned the government at the capital over to Crown Prince Asfa Wosan.

SECRETARY OF LABOR PERKINS reported that employment in manufacturing and nonmanufacturing industries during March showed a gain of 250,000. One division of the steel industry, she reported, had increased its employment above the 1929 level.

Pay rolls in the industries surveyed by the Labor department were $10,000,-000 above February and $20,000,000 over a year ago.

The employment index in the wire making division of the steel industry, she said, now stands at 143, compared with 124.2 in 1929. At the same time she pointed out that four and a half million young people have come on the labor market since 1929 and that employment would have to rise to 125 per cent of the "normal" level to absorb these newcomers.

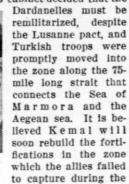

Sixty-six of the manufacturing industries reported gains, she said, and 11 of the 16 nonmanufacturing industries showed improvement in employ-

World war. The Turkish dictator didn't surprise anyone by his action, for he asked permission of the League of Nations some time ago to rearm the Dardanelles. No formal reply had been made, but the British government rather favored giving consent, and the Soviet union openly approves Turkey's move. Italy was displeased, and there was considerable excitement in the Balkan states, especially Bulgaria which borders on European Turkey. The Bulgarians renewed their demand for a corridor giving them a direct route to the Aegean sea.

Probably Kemal's action will not be severely condemned by anyone, for most of the European nations are preparing for war with feverish haste. Austria's army, small but well equipped. held a spring parade in Vienna, and immediately the nations of the little show of military force and their military attaches in the Austrian capital were ordered not to occupy the places reserved for them among the reviewing officials Rumania has increased its military budget to $38,000,000 and created a special fund of $20,000,000 for the development of aviation. Hungary is clamoring for revision of the Trianon treaty and recovery of the territory it lost to the little entente.

The forty-seventh birthday of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler provided an opportunity for a big display of Germany's military power. As the dictator stood on a balcony overlooking the Wilhelmstrasse in Berlin nearly 15,000 soldiers of all arms, with motorized vehicles, passed before him, shouting renewal of their pledges of faith in Hitler. In many other cities of the reich there were like demonstrations.

I OUIS MCHENRY HOWE, secretary to President Roosevelt and for many years his close friend and adviser, died in the Naval hospital at Washington after an illness of more than a year. Mr. Howe was known in the capital as "the President maker," for it was largely due to his efforts that Mr. Roosevelt reached the White House. For twenty-five years, from the day when Mr. Roosevelt and he first met in Albany, he had devoted himself to forwarding his friend's political fortunes. During the Chicago convention and the ensuing campaign his planning and his advice were credited largely with the results attained.

Fond du Lac-More than 75 persons have applied for one position on the Fond du Lac fire department, according to W. A. Coffman, city clerk.

Marinette-Fishermen of northeastern Wisconsin and the peninsula of Michigan figure themselves about $65,-000 richer as the result of this years' heavy smelt run.

Merrill - The Rev. W. H. Schlinkmann, Milwaukee, at a conference here was re-elected president of the Wisconsin district of the Evangelical synod of North America.

Appleton - Two Lawrence college students were injured during a peace demonstration lead by the Veterans of Future Wars when police sought to break up their parade. Reedsburg - Mr. and Mrs. William Daniels celebrated their sixty-fourth wedding anniversary quietly at their home here on April 22. Both are 82 years old and active in everyday work. Fort Atkinson - Elmere Klement, city building inspector, reports a total of $6,665 of building permits issued the first three months of this year, against a total of $931 issued for the first three months in 1935. Neenah - Presentation of Masonic aprons to Fred Elwers, Andrew Ilseng, Peter J. Ladd, David Young and Harvey Young for 50 years' membership in the lodge has been made by Elisha Kent Kane lodge here. Hustisford - A Hustisford farmer shot and killed his two chidren and himself on the wooded Lime Ridge road six miles southwest of here. The farmer and his victims were Arnold Grimm, 38; Wallace, 8, and Erla, 4.

Madison - The Farmer-Labor-Progressive federation will hold its first annual convention in June, Thomas M. Duncan, secretary to Gov. La Follette, and one of the federation founders, announced. The federation is the encircling organization which includes the Progressive and Socialist parties and farm and labor groups.

Neillsville-After hearing testimony that Sheriff Hal H. Richardson of Clark county was driving 70 miles an hour before his car overturned, a coroner's jury named the sheriff as the driver of the car that killed an unidentified man whose body was found in a ditch 200 feet behind the spot where the sheriff's car went off the

Stanley - While playing along the banks of the Wolf river here, three Stanley children found an old tin can, half buried in the mud. The can held about 70 old coins of various countries. The oldest coin was a Norwegian coin dated 1614. Several of the other coins are 300 years old. Most of the coins were from Norway, Germany and Jefferson - Old-time Jefferson residents could not recall a larger monthly cattle fair day than the one held at Jefferson April 21. Both sides of the street, a distance of four blocks, were filled to capacity with farmers and buyers from southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois. Seven month old pigs were the principal commodity offered for sale.

Wisconsin Rapids-Atty. H. D. Billmeyer announced that 15 Portage and Wood county farmers have received certificates terminating their contracts with the Wisconsin Co-operative Milk pool. Billmeyer said that "general dissatisfaction" coupled with the fact that they felt they could receive more for their butter fat elsewhere led the men to void their agreements.

Wisconsin Rapids-The school board announced that 13 teachers, all Wisconsin Federation of Teachers members, definitely have been refused new contracts. Announcement came after special hearings at which 18 teachers whose contracts had been withheld heard charges against them. School board members denied charges from federation officials that refusal of the contracts was based on federation membership.

Madison-The appointment of Harry A. Stuhldreher, one of the famous four horsemen of Notre Dame, head football coach at Villanova, as athletic director and football coach at the University of Wisconsin was approved by the board of regents. Stuhldreher will succeed Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, athletic director, and Dr. Clarence W. Spears, football coach, who were removed by the regents after an invest? gation growing out of charges by John Golemgeske, football captain-elect, that Dr. Meanwell had induced him to circulate a petition among football players asking for the removal of Dr.

Madison-Atty. Gen. James E. Finnegan, in an opinion sent to Thomas W. Callahan, district attorney of Lafayette county, ruled that religious organizations charging admission to a boxing tournament are not exempt from paying a license.

Menasha - The common council set an all-time voting record here. It took 202 ballots to re-elect Edward Forkin city attorney. Councilmen balloted for three hours before filling the office and during that time every attorney in the city received votes.

Madison - Recovery of Wisconsin manufacturing industries is shown by the fact that total employment now is 3.5 per cent higher than ir March, 1935, and 51.4 per cent greater than in March, 1933, state industrial commission records show.

Oshkosh-With thousands of ducks stopping over here on their northern trek, H. F. Krause, town of Utica farmer, found the temptation too strong and killed a lone bluebill duc ... He was fined $55 and his gun was conascated in municipal court here.

Stevens Point-Archie Durand has sued the city for $9,450 for six years' salary as a policeman. He claims he was never legally discharged and that since 1930 city authorities have refused to permit him to work.

Milwaukee-Mike Elloff, 32, and Jonike Tronos, 34, both of Waukegan, Ill., were held under $5,000 bond for a federal grand jury after admitting to a U. S. commissioner that they passed counterfeit $5 and $10 bills here.

La Crosse-La Crosse county supervisors voted to purchase the county airport on French island, previously leased, for $12,500. The purchase paves the way for improvements costing $46,000 to be acquired through WPA.

Champion of the Oil Fields SK any Texas or Oklahoma off-A SK any Texas of Oktaholia on vice with an ar ness and he's pretty certain to answer

"Why, Kemp Morgan, of course!" Ask him why and he will tell you it's because Kemp had more unusual of service. With experiences than any other seeker after "black gold" ever did,

For instance there was the time to this country Kemp lost his best drill. He was you my consta working in soft ground but he noticed promote the that the drill kept going slower and and revival of the slower the farther it went down. Pretty soon it stopped completely. When Kemp tried to pull it out, it was stuck every citizen to se fast. Come to find out that he had hit an alum mine and the hole had shrunk up around the drill so tight that even Kemp couldn't budge it.

Then there was the time a Texas to join the Dizzy by "norther" swooped down on Kemp's win valuable free rig. But it didn't stop him-no sirree! He just kept on drilling, and brought in a 22-inch gusher. It was so cold that the oil froze as it spurted friend," for the upward so there was a solid column of frigid oil. Kemp just took out his knife, hacked it off in three-foot Dr. Pierce's Pellets to lengths and shipped it to the refinery bowels and stomach on flat cars.

That was in Texas but Kemp had a funny experience once in Oklahoma. He drilled a well so deep that it tapped a rubber mine 'way down in Brazil. She began to gush pure rubber, so Kemp just blew his hot breath on it to make it solid, cut it off in 11foot lengths and shipped it to that place in Ohio where they make solid tires for trucks.

When the average driller brings in a "duster," he moves his rig away from there pronto. But not Kemp Morgan! He knew what a tough time the Kansas farmers had digging postholes in the summer when the ground was baked hard. So whenever he'd strike a dry hole, he'd just take his two hands, pull it up four feet and two inches at a time and saw it off. Then he'd ship a carload of these lengths across the state line where they always found a market.

Private Life of Jonah

WASN'T a whale which swallowed I T WASN'T a whate which Jonah, theorizes Stanley Suchwalko, it was a big-mouthed fish in northern Michigan. His friend, Laddie Hornik, captured the monster in 1930.

Laddie inspected the fish, which had laid down its life while being hooked. gaffed and beaten over the head with a pair of oars, and couldn't decide what to do with it. The size seemed to destroy the fish's commercial value and imagine Laddie's surprise, says Madison-Twenty-five stills having Stanley, when the first stranger to arrive bid a fabulous price for the fish's scales.

Laddie. "I'm a spade manufacturer from Moline, Ill.," replied the buyer. "I've got material here for 6,400 spades of the best chilled steel."

Buyer after buyer paid staggering prices for different parts of the fish and Laddie, says Stanley, didn't get wise until a tremendous price was bid and accepted for the fish's stomach. The stomach buyer immediately slit open the fish's belly and revealed the golden throne upon which Jonah had been seated during his long captivity. "It's cheap at half the price." stated the buyer with pardonable satisfaction as he brushed a stray fin from his precious purchase.

The Despondent Grasshoppers A SEASONED maxim of the copy-books is that frequently a real cry does a person good. Leonard Bailer, once a Nebraska farmer, is sure of it.

Rain washed away the railroads around his Nebraska lands; the drouth hit him squarely; then the dust storms killed every living thing and his land was dry as the inside of a grain bin. At this moment, the grasshoppers arrived by millions and settled on his farms

Wasn't a thing for the 'hoppers to eat but they were too tired to move on and Leonard almost lost hope. As a last gesture, however he rushed out among the despondent grasshoppers, sitting there in the dust, and planted several sets of the strongest and hardiest onions he could buy. To his sufprise the onions matured quickly. The moment their bulbs appeared above ground the grasshoppers pounced on them, ate ravenously and burst into tears. "And that," Leonard recalls proudly, "is how my farms were saved. The land was drenched by the tears of the grasshoppers and as soon as they had drowned themselves I was able, of course, to raise a normal crop." Western Newspaper Union.

"Entangling Alliances"

Washington, in his farewell address, published September 17, 1796, said: Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the tolls of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor, or caprice?" It was Jefferson who said, "Peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations-entangling alliances with none." This was in his first inaugural address.

IN THE FIRELIGHT The fire upon the hearth is low, And there is stillness everywhere, And, like winged spirits, here and

The firelight shadows fluttering go. And as the shadows 'round me creep, A childish treble breaks the gloom, And softly from a further room Comes: "Now I lay me down to sleep."

And, somehow, with that little prayer And that sweet treble in my ears, My thought goes back to distant And lingers with a dear one there;

And as I hear my child's amen,
My mother's faith comes back to Crouched at her side I seem to be.

And mother holds my hands again. Oh for an hour in that dear place, Oh for the peace of that dear time, Oh for the childish trust sublime,

Oh for a glimpse of mother's face! Yet, as the shadows 'round me creep,
I do not seem to be alone—

And "Now I lay me down to sleep!" Similar in theme to "In the Firelight" is this poem:

NOW I LAY ME DOWN TO SLEEP "Now I lay me down to sleep: I pray the Lord my soul to keep," Was my childhood's early prayer Taught by my mother's love and care. Many years since then have fled; Mother slumbers with the dead; Yet methinks I see her now, With love-lit eye and holy brow, As, kneeling by her side to pray, 'Now I lay me down to sleep; I pray the Lord my soul to kee

Oh! then at night in prayer I'd bend, And call my God, my Father, Friend, And pray with childlike faith once

The prayer my mother taught of yore,"Now I lay me down to sleep; I pray the Lord my soul to keep."

. . . The author of that poem was not a widely-known poet, as Field was, but a banker. He was Eugene Henry Pullen, who was born in Baltimore in 1832 became a vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic in New York, served as president of the American Bankers' association in 1895-96 and died in Brooklyn in 1899. His poem was published many years before Field's appeared and, although the similarity between them has often been commented upon and has led to some confusion as to the authorship of the two, the likeness is not close enough to justify any suspicion of plagiarism on Field's part.

There is another famous mother poem which was once the cause of a heated controversy as to its authorship. This was the familiar ROCK ME TO SLEEP, MOTHER to sleep!

. . . The author of "Rock Me to Sleep, Mother" was Elizabeth Akers Allen who was born in the town of Strong, Maine, in 1932. Her mother died while she was still a child and her father took her to live in the town of Farmington. There, at the age of twelve she began writing verses. the first of which appeared in a New Hampshire newspaper under her pen name of "Florence Percy." In 1847 she began contributing poems to a Vermont newspaper and eight years later she became assistant editor of the Portland (Maine) Transcript. Her first volume of poems, "Forest Buds From the Woods of Maine," was brought out in 1856, and the success of this book enabled her to go abroad three years later. While in Rome, Italy, she wrote "Rock Me to Sleep, Mother" and sent it to the Philadelphia Post, in which it was published in 1860. It immediately became popular, was widely reprinted and set to music by several different persons, although the author remained comparatively unknown.

In 1860 she was married to Paul Akers, a well-known sculptor and a native of Portland, Maine. In a little over a year after their marriage Akers died, as did their daughter, Gertrude, and the bereaved wife and mother returned to Portland to take up her work on the Transcript again. In 1863 she was appointed to a post in the War department in Washington, She lived in the capital during the stirring years of the Civil war, and was one of the throng of horror-stricken spectators who witnessed the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's theater.

In 1866 her second book, "Poems by Elizabeth Akers (Florence Percy)," including "Rock Me to Sleep, Mother," appeared. In that year also she was married again; to Il. M. Allen, and soon afterwards eccompanied her husband to Richmond, Va., to live. "It was during her residence in that city that the extraordinary discussion arose concerning the authorship of her poem, 'Rock Me to Sleep, Mother,' says the Cyclopaedia of American Literature, which continues:

"It was claimed by no less than five aspirants to the honor of its composition. Mrs. Allen took no pains to vindicate her claim until, in 1868, A. M. W. Ball of Elizabeth, N. J., ventured to print a pamphlet containing affidavits of a number of his friends, who thought they, remembered that he had written something of the kind ten or twelve years before. Then the real author was compelled to deny that she had stolen her own poem; and the controversy was conclusively settled in her favor by an elaborate review of the whole case, taking up a full page of the New York Times."

Among the better known "mother poems" by modern writers should be included this one by Theodosia Garrison:

I think the gentle soul of her Goes gladly in some pleasant place, With the old smile time may not blur Upon her face.

She who was lover of the Spring. With love that never quite forgets Surely sees roses blossoming And violets.

She who so loved companionship may not think she walks alone, Failing some friendly hand to slip Within her own.

Those whom she loved aforetime, still, I doubt not, bear her company; Yea, even laughter yet may thrill Where she may be.

For God is gentle to His guest, And, therefore, may I gladly say, Surely the things she loved best Are hers today,

What better expression of the spirit of Mothers' Day than that last line-"Surely the things she loved best are hers today"?

"Marry Him!" Says Mrs. Clyde Beatty, Whose Hubby Is Terror of Jungle Cats, but Kitten Around House.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

IRLS, what would you do if you woke up one of these spring mornings and discovered that you were in love with a lion tamer? With a guy who stares the King of Beasts right in the eye and makes him sit sulking in a corner like a disciplined schoolboy? Who wrestles hand-to-hand with a man-eating tiger and wins the decision? Who walks into a cage with thirty or forty assorted jungle cats of both varieties twice a day and makes them do his bidding? Who even keeps a lion around the house to take care of the scraps from the dining table?

Don't laugh. It might happen to YOU. This is spring. Spring is the open season for romance. And spring is the season for the opening of the circus.

It happened to a little Russian-American girl just about three years ago. SHE fell in love with a lion tamer, a lion tamer who does all those unbelievable things we were just talking about. And what did she do? She married him.

Follows Hubby's Footsteps.

She married Clyde Beatty, the little, curly-headed fellow who is generally considered the greatest animal trainer of all time.

For a couple of years she peeled potatoes in their home at Rochester, Ind., where the circus spends the winter, while Clyde's lion-around-the-house sat at her feet and roared for more table scraps. But like all good wives, Harriet knew that she must keep herself interested in the things that appealed to her husband. And she did-with a vengeance. She became a lion tamer herself and now appears every day in the same circus with her husband. She is today the only trainer in the world who "works" a lion, a tiger and an elephant in the same cage at the

The story of this remarkable pair is one of those romantic dramas under the big top that endow the circus with much of the glamor it still holds for millions, young and old, even in this fast-moving

The story really begins about sixteen years ago in Chillicothe, Ohio. There was a circus playing in Chilligood for a candy girl. Combined with her natural flair for dancing inherited from Russian ancestors, it got her into the circus ballet.

Harriet Gets Up in World.

From the ballet it wasn't much of a jump-figuratively speaking-to the flying trapeze, and Harriet accomplished it, quaintly enough, with the greatest of ease.

And then she fell. No, not from the trapeze (although she did that, too, once). She fell for the dapper little man who looked the bold, bad lions in the eye and made them wilt.

Mr. Beatty looked the petite aerial artist in the eye-and HE wilted. The little giant whose leer could turn a jungle roar into petulant whimper just rolled over on his back and purred like a kitten. The daredevil with nerves of steel became putty in the hands of a woman-

And now, girls, if your best boy friend happens to be a bookkeeper, a farmer, a clerk, a lawyer, a truck driver, a doctor or even a newspaper man, here is your chance to find out what a thrill it is to be wooed by the world's most courageous lion tamer. You have Harriet Beatty's word for it first-hand. Imagine the Thrills, Girls!

"What," Mrs. Beatty was asked, "is it like to be wooed by a lion tamer?" "Oo-oo-oo!" She girlishly giggled. "It ees very sweet!"

"How does a fearless, dominating

Harriet Beatty is the only trainer ever to work a lion, a tiger and an elephant in the same cage at the same time.

ion of a stripling youth of fifteen in | ship?" he town of Bainbridge, a few miles tway. It was a big day for the boy. It vas also a big day for the circus, alhough that was not proven for quite a w years.

Clyde Beatty never went back to Bainbridge. He got a job as a cagepoy for the polar bear act. He was pretty small, but there was something in his eye, and they took him.

Tames Dame Fortune.

Two years later Clyde was working his own act-not with polar bears, but with the great cats who would kill a man with a single bite and do it willingly.

Over the years Clyde and his cats were to reach the heights - heights from which they have not yet descended. In rapid succession came top silling in the Big Show, moving pictures and, finally, ownership interest in one of the major circuses. Clyde is now part owner of the Cole Brothers circus, in which he and Mrs. Beatty

To catch up Mrs. Beatty's part of the story now: She was born in Chicago of Russian parents not too many years ago. Her name was something you have to sneeze in Russian but in English it became just plain Harriet Evans. In 1930 the circus was in town and advertised for girls to sell candy. Harriet needed a job, and she joined up with the show. Like Beatty she never left it.

Harriet is a tiny wisp of a thing, with deep-set, serious eyes betrayed by a smile that curls at the corners. Her soft, delicate, blonde beauty othe, and its fanfare drew the atten- | male like Clyde act during a court-

So now you know.

"Oo--oo-oo! He ees very sweet!" "Well, now that you are married, haven't you found that a lion tamer is something of a terrible tyrant around the house?" "Oo-oo-oo! He ees VERY sweet!"

When Clyde and Harriet were married he insisted that she quit working. She did for a while. She didn't like to be around when Clyde was risking his life with the cats, anyway. She was afraid of them. But she raised a cub, Leo on a baby's bottle, and that cured her of a great deal of her fear. Leo is a year and a half old now and, according to Harriet, "ees very sweet," but some of the Beattys' house guests don't think so. Leo is an affable sort for a jungle beast, but he is as large as a small draft horse and likes to play. Women folks don't warm up to him very easily. "He rips their stockings and that annoys them." says Harriet. "And his teeth are getting big now. When he bites you it hurts."

She Knows No Fear.

Leo's teeth are a couple of inches long and about as dull as the business end of an ice pick. But they can't be very terrifying to a little lady who spends a few minutes every afternoon and evening now in a cage with a fullgrown lion, an Ill-dispositioned tiger and a lumbering pachyderm, all natural enemies.

This is the new act which Harriet devised and, with Clyde's guiding hand to tutor her, works in the circus this year. She makes the great cats leap through charms all who meet her. It was too | hoops of flame to the elephant's back and ride around the ring the best of friends. So adept a trainer is she, she has never yet had a "close call" in the cage. Such luck has not fallen to the lot of her husband. Clyde works as many as 43 assorted lions and tigers in the same cage at once. He makes them perch upon stools and assume all kinds pal of "Daffy," a dog in the circus. of positions and formations. Menelik, a new cat with the act this year, sits on his haunches and waves his paws around in the air like a prize fighter entering the ring. A tiger rolls over and over and then chases his tail at Clyde's command. With such goings-on amid a horde of wild beasts, it is not an infrequent happening for one or two of the cats to rebel. Clyde's closest shave came in winter quarters when he was rehearsing his act preparatory to opening the 1932 season. Samson, one of the older and larger lions, attacked him and put him in the hospital, hovering between life and death for sixteen weeks. Had not a tiger then attacked the lion and diverted its attention, Clyde must have been a goner.

Lion Kills Cage Boy. Samson, incidentally, is one beast you would not like to be meeting some night down a dark alley. The writer personally saw him sink his teeth into the shoulder of another trainer Allen King, one night, and King, too, would be a dead man today if a tiger had not come to his rescue. (It must not be supposed that the tiger in either case was trying to save the trainer's lifehe was merely after a nice, juicy bite of lion meat on the hoof). Last winter Sammy succeeded in killing a cage boy who carelessly left the "chute" door open while working. The two cats have a natural hatred for each other, and when this hatred works up to a certain pitch a fight sometimes results in the cage, with disastrous results. In Muskegon, Michigan, last season a fight almost broke up the show and resulted in the death of a cat or two. Across the state in Bay City the season before a rumpus in the cage caused a pistol in Beatty's holster to discharge, wounding him severely in the leg. He went on with the act, however, and it was not until some time later that the slug was removed by a doctor. He loads his gun with nothing but blanks now. Clyde Beatty has never seen an African jungle, but then Edgar Rice Burroughs wrote the whole "Tarzan" series of savage jungle lore and he hasn't seen one either. Clyde buys his cats from zoos and animal dealers. He looks for lions and tigers with spirit, cats who will fight back when he encourages them. That's one of the reasons that his every appearance in the cage is a nearly-mortal ordeal, one that leaves him soping wet with perspiration and with nerves so unstrung that he will talk to no one, even his wife, for 20 minutes after the act.

Prefers Cats to Cameras.

Even so, Clyde says he is more afraid of Hollywood than his cage of cats. He has made three pictures, "The Big Cage," "The Lost Jungle" and "Darkest Africa." The latter is a thriller serial which he completed this winter, and it's Hollywood at its daffiest. It's full of Bat Men, wild hairbreadth escapes, volcanic eruptions and heroic feats.

In making the picture, Clyde was badly bruised by some of the Bat Men, did not succeed in effecting a couple of the hairbreadth escapes, was rather painfully blown up in one of the synthetic volcanoes and had to rest up for a week after performing the final heroic feat.

The last named incident occurred when the director casually asked Clyde if he would mind "rassling" a tiger bare-handed, on the plea that it would be "sure-fire picture stuff." Clyde was finally talked into it, but only on condition that the match take place after the rest of the picture was finished, so there would still be a picture, even if there was not any more Beatty. The match was long and furious and Clyde got pushed around plenty before winning the deciding fall. "Pretty good," conceded the director, "pretty good. Now let's try it just once more with a little more of the old pep!" Clyde's reply has been deleted so that this newspaper can be sent through the United States mails.

Oo-oo-oo! It ees not very sweet! Western Newspaper Union.

LIGHTFOOT DISCOVERS LOVE

WONDERFULLY handsome was Lightfoot the Deer as he stood back proudly as he received the congratulations of his neighbors of the the great fight with the big stranger who had come down from the Great Mountain. In them was a look of wistful-Paddy the Beaver, his head thrown ness. Lightfoot walked down to the edge of the water and drank, for he was very, very thirsty. Then he Green Forest who had seen him win turned, intending to once more take up his search for beautiful Miss

When he turned he faced the thicket in which Miss Daintyfoot was hiding. His keen eyes caught a little movement of the branches. A beautiful head was slowly thrust out and Lightfoot gazed into a pair of soft eyes which he was sure were the most beautiful eyes in all the Great World.

He wondered if she would disappear and run away as she had the last time he saw her. He took a step or two forward. The beautiful head was withdrawn. Lightfoot's heart sank: then he bounded forward into the thicket. He more than half expected to find no one there, but when he entered that thicket he received the most wonderful surprise in all his life.

There stood Miss Daintyfoot, timid, bashful, but with a look in her eyes which Lightfoot could not mistake. In that instant Lightfoot understood the meaning of that longing which had kept him hunting for her, and of the rage which had filled him when he had discovered the presence of the big stranger from the Great Mountain. It was love. Lightfoot knew that he loved Miss Daintyfoot, and looking into her soft gentle eyes, he knew that Miss Daintyfoot loved him. @ T. W. Burgess .- WNU Service

N ORDINARY piece of string is A the only object that you require for the mystery of the vanishing knot. You start by tying a single knot in the string; but do not draw the knot tight.

Then, to keep the knot where it belongs, you tie the ends of the string in several tight knots that would require a few minutes to untangle.

Everyone sees the single knot between the two loops. All know that it is impossible to remove that lone knot without untying the ends of the cord. Yet you have only to turn your back for three seconds and the knot is gone!

There is a simple secret to this mys tery. When you turn your back, draw the single knot to the top, so it joins the tight knots at the ends of the string. Two loops have become one; and the string may be examined. WNU Service.

The phrase "in order to" is defined: "For the purpose of; to the end that." With such meaning, and without an infinitive or noun following the phrase. it has been used by the following writers: Clarke (1655); Evelyn (1672); Spotswood (1711); Burke (1773); Harriet Martineau (1837), and Goulburn (1869). With an infinitive object, the expression has been used by Steele (1711); Goldsmith (1774); Cruise (1818), and Chamber's Encyclopedia (1868) .- Literary Digest.

columns a year or more ago that the campaign of 1936 Break in would bring forth Party Lines some of the most political alignments that this country had ever known. It was apparent, even during the battle for ballots in 1932, that a gigantic shake-up in the voting alignment of citizens was in the making. These things are now being demonstrated and more proof of the changing times seems just around the

We all have seen how such outstanding figures as former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, the Democratic Presidential nominee in 1928, have boldly flouted President Roosevelt and his New Deal theories and we have witnessed such vitriolic outbursts as those by former Senator James A. Reed, that old-line Missouri Democrat, and we have watched with interest the hauling and filling by Jeffersonian Democrats who find New Deal fantasies to be a bitter pill to swallow. Lately, there has come another most interesting situation respecting partisan alignment.

Although the action received much less attention than I believe it deserves, the determination of the Virginia Republicans in their recent convention at Roanoke to refrain from placing a Republican candidate in the field against Senator Carter Glass constitutes, to my mind, one of the most extraordinary twists ever to take place under our two party system. That convention, acting utterly without precedent, took the position that it was better to leave the field clear for the election of the veteran senator than to precipitate a political battle by naming a Republican candidate.

The reason for the action of the Virginia Republicans is quite clear in one way. They felt that Carter Glass, although a life-long Democrat who has carried on his share of bombardment of Republican principles and policies. could do the country more good from their standpoint than could be attained by placing a Republican condidate against him without chance of success. To state this premise in another way: Carter Glass does not swallow the New Deal as a whole and when he finds objectionable features in the Roosevelt program, he is independent enough and has the strength of character to voice his feelings. Doing this as a member of the majority party in ed add three cupfuls of milk and cook | the senate necessarily has more weight until a creamy sauce is made. Add than all of the criticism of the New two-thirds of a cupful of good cheese, Deal that could be voiced by a Republican-if one could be elected in Virginia-and the Virginia convention chose a course which it believed would best serve the nation as a whole.

But it is the circumstance of a party convention refusing to engage in battle that interests me most. Under such circumstances, the old idea of party loyalty becomes not only illogical but ridiculous. Instead of a call to battle, we see what amounts to a call for support of a theoretical opponent. Of course, in the opinion of many, Carter Glass is the outstanding exponent of conservative thought in the Democratic party and if he speaks for conservative thought in the Democratic party he is almost speaking for conservative thought in the Republican party. It is easy to see, therefore, why the Virginia Republicans adopted the course they did but where does that leave party loyalty? What does it mean as to the future alignment of political thought?

The course followed by the Virginia Republicans is not more strange than the action of Presi-On the dent Roosevelt him-Other Hand self who has indorsed Senator Hiram Johnson of California and Senator George Norris of Nebraska, with almost boyish enthusiasm. Senator Johnson and Senator Norris have not been regarded as regular Republicans but they have been flying the Republican banner for a good many years. Yet, the President verbally pats them on the back and offers his blessing.

During the same period, we have watched Mr. Roosevelt playing touchand-go with the La Follettes in Wisconsin. Of course, the La Follettes catalogue themselves as Progressives other users of energy. but they never have had a great deal in common with the old-line Demo-be. One of them remarked confidentially to me that he believed he would have to consult a clairvoyant before he could say whether he was going to support the New Deal or oppose it or try to straddle the fence. Of course, his remark was in a humorous vein but it epitomized the thought and, I may say, the worry of a very great many partisans at this time.

So, we have a picture six months ahead of the actual casting of the ballots in which party lines are torn asunder for countless hundreds of more or less important party figures. I think everyone agrees that the condition comes from the development of New Deal principles and policies under dust

Washington .- I suggested in these | the leadership of President Roosevelt. There will be many who are now doubtful as to their course who will realign themselves with the New Deal because they were originally Demoamazing oddities in crats and there will be many who will again follow the Republican banner down the stretch. But it seems to me that three years of Roosevelt probably have established a greater segment of independent voting strength in this country than had resulted from a quarter of a century of partisan politics before. The situation must be construed then as indicating that hereafter those who stick definitely in party harness will continue to stand hitched because they have political aspirations and ambitions or because economic conditions in their communities are better fostered by the party with which they have aligned themselves. Beyond that, it seems to me, citizens, in most cases, will vote in increasing numbers for the man instead of the party.

The 'Quoddy project designed to produce electric power in quantities never before turned out, was to cost $40,000,000. The great job of excavating a slit across the face of the state of Florida to let ships go direct from the Atlantic to the Gulf without going around the toe of the state was to cost $150,000,000.

Only a small amount, that is, a small sum compared to other New Deal expenditures, had been wasted on the ship canal plans before it was tossed into the limbo of forgotten things, but something like $10,000,000 already has een used in the attempt to make the moon work through the medium of the tides of 'Quoddy bay. Both projects can be charged up to politics and experiments and probably the country will be better off to take the loss and avoid the use of further money.

The President fully intended to go through with his plans respecting these two projects until he ran into vicious opposition in congress. Too many representatives and senators realized that they were going to have the names 'Quoddy bay and Florida canal hurled at them through the coming campaign if they voted their approval by including additional funds or these projects in the relief appropriations. I don't know what is going to become of the homes, the model city, erected for workers near the 'Quoddy bay project. Photographs of this village indicate it to be a community of which any resident might be proud. It was constructed to assure the workers on the 'Quoddy project a comfortable place in which to live. They still have the comfortable place in which to live because the government still owns the homes but what is to become of those people and what disposition is to be made of the property is something else again. Thus, development of electric power from the tides of 'Quoddy bay has been an engineering question that has raged for years as a controversy. It has recurred frequently as a political matter but never until the New Deal came in were any tangible steps taken to install electrical equipment in that bay where the tides run higher than anywhere else in the world.

Most engineers have contended that it was impossible to place in the bay equipment that Faced could function satis-Difficulties factorily while at the same time producing electric current at a rate that would bring a return on the tremendous investment necessary. Further than that, no one yet has been able to show where so much electric energy could be marketed. The territory is sparsely settled and the industrial production is small. The older sister's complete absorption in her new role made Tony feel oddly lonely. She had no part in Brenda's life now, much as they loved each other, much as they loved to be together. Brenda was only a background for Alvin, and Alvin felt for his handsome, successful young sister-in-law only the rather nervous liking of a busy and worried young doctor toward the person closest, after himself, to his wife. Tony was smartly dressed, successful; perhaps Alvin Atwater was a little more conscious of Brenda's tiredness and paleness, the flatness of Brenda's purse, the inevitability of dishwashing and bedmaking for Brenda, when Tony was by.

On a hot February day, the last of the convention, they took their lunch down to the shore of Pebble Beach and lay talking on a warm strip of sand that lay between the rocks.

"You go up tonight, Tony? Ah, it's been so delicious having you, even for this long," Brenda said. "You've done me-I can't tell you how much good! I was sort of dragging about, and I didn't seem to have any ambition about Iago's clothes, and you've braced me so wonderfully. I knew you would! And tell Cliff, and tell darling Aunt Meg-"

She was full of messages for them all. But Tony knew that she and Alvin only asked of them, just now, to be let alone. They had lost Bendy for a while; they were all eclipsed by the figure of Alvin. But she would come back.

"Oh, my dear, we forgot to look up Doctor Vanderwall at Carmel!" she exclaimed suddenly.

"We could do it this afternoon!" Brenda said, stricken.

"We could not. This is too nice!" But after a moment Tony reconsidered it. "Perhaps I should," she said reluctantly. "Ruth is sure to feel hurt if I don't!"

CHAPTER XVII

They had nad their lunch now, and the little basket that had held eggs and cookies and lettuce sandwiches was empty. The sun was beating down steadily; there was shelter, down here in this little ingle of beach, and a sense of security and protec-

Brenda said on a long yawn: "Let's do it; let's be decent. We can go home by way of Carmel and look him

"All right." Tony dropped her head on her arms again. "Does he like you?"

"Madly. If we find him at home ou'll see.'

"Well," Brenda protested laughing, pleased with the idea, "he probably doesn't display it in company." "Oh, but that's just what he does." "Had he asked you?"

Brenda asked it a little self-conciously, and Tony, looking up quickly, laughed with a suddenly flushed face. "Re-peatedly. In company and out.

"And you don't like him?" "I admire him enormously. I think ne's splendid. He's tall and fair and full of fun-he's nice."

'Not reliable?" "As reliable as death! He's young." Tony said. "But he's going to be one of our Best Known Americanswith capitals, Bendy."

"Then, why? No money."

"As a matter of fact, he has money. After he'd sent me enough violets and orchids to sink the Bremen, I asked Ruth. He's rich. At least, to our way of thinking he is."

"Does he know you're down here?" "I'm not sure. He goes skimming about from Montara to Laguna-hunting rock parasites, I believe it is. He sent me a frightful English magazine with an article in it about the parasites of Kennebunkport or something."

Brenda was silent for a long while Then she said simply:

"You're not happy, are you, Tony?" "I ought to be," Tony temporized. "I try to be. Sometimes, when I look back on the old days," she said, "and remember how young we were, and how poor we were, and yet how we used to laugh and carry on and sing-

"Ask away, Bendy." "Is it Barney?" For a minute Tony stared at her me as the siren who wrecked his life Tony said amusedly, looking very handsome in her thin white frock, with a white hat on her dark hair, and her skin all the browner by contrast. "She'll spoil the life out of him. And she has money, and that's what his mother wanted. He'll be all right!" "Then if it isn't Barney, who is it?

It isn't this doctor," Brenda mused. Tony was silent for a space lying facing her sister with her elbows planted in the sand, and her chin in her palms.

Brenda was silent for a while. Then she said:

"Does he know?" "Yep," Tony answered briefly.

"Tony, she doesn't know!" "Of, of course not, of course not," Tony said impatiently. "There's nothing to know, anyway. I broke downthe night you were married, it happened to be, and blubbered out something-I don't know what, and a day or two later he said we would act as if it had never been-and that's all

"You mean," Brenda said, troubled, "that he pretended-tried to pretend that there was nothing to it, that you must just forget it?" "What else, in heaven's name, could

Brenda was silent; watching and

She got up, and took the basket, and walked toward the car. Brenda followed her; spoke again timidly. "Does it-it must!-get easier?"
"No," Tony said. "It'll never get easier. I'll never get over it." They drove for a while in silence. "Where you going, Bendy?"

"Well, aren't we going down to see Doctor Vanderwall's place?" "Oh, I forgot. Isn't it pretty late?" Brenda answered the question with another. "You really don't like him, do you? -Here he is!"

Here he was, in the busy little straggling main street of Carmel; his big arms full of bundles from the grocery, his round fair face shining with pleasure in the full light of the descending sun. Brenda saw him tumble his purchases into his own parked car, and come up to Tony's side of the car, and rest his folded arms there as he talked. What he was thinking was in his blue eyes: that all the world was just this one slender girl with a white hat on dark hair and a brown hand lying close to his.

"Tony!" he said. "Ye gods, what luck;" Brenda, glancing sidewise at her sister, saw that Tony was looking her loveliest; her dark blue eyes close to his own. "Where are you gals going?" Joe demanded. "Have you time to come down and see the place?" "I thought you told me that it was in a mess, Joe, and you wanted us to get the whole overwhelming effect at the housewarming?"

"Ah, well, I did-ah, well, I do," he said, laughing confusedly. They were talking alone now, for some

"Let me-no, I can't," Joe said, remembering. "I'm taking poor Allenthe fellow who has the place next to mine, you know, to the hospital tonight. They're having a bad timetwo klds, and he's got this bone rot, or whatever it is, and I promised I'd go over and get him, after dinner, and take him to Watsonville. She's got a brother who's a doctor there."

"Joe, you're good. You're always doing such kind things!" "When are you going to do one-just a little, casual one?"

"There you go." "I know. I said I wouldn't, didn't I? But think of it. Tony. You and me, shopping here at the Piggly, and then driving home with chops and asparagus and honey for your biscuits?"

"I do think of it, Joe," Tony said, very low. After a moment she went "Suppose you liked some splendid woman, worth three of me, Joe, only you never could get her? Would you leave me for her?"

The blood rushed up under his fair skin.

"I couldn't, I suppose. It's like that, of course."

"It's like that." And now the blue eves were raised, looked full into his own. "So you see, then," said Tony. "So I see then, I suppose," he said after a moment, shrugging. When Brenda turned around they were both laughing, and Tony was saying of Joe's oceanside farm: "It must be simply disgusting!"

But afterward, when she was saying good-by in Brenda's little apartment, she was serious again. Brenda had shyly detained her, a thin hand on Tony's shoulder, and had asked: "Do you-do you imagine he's unhappy too, Tony?" "Larry," Tony had said rather than asked. "I don't know." Tony rested her head against Brenda's temple, like a tired child. "I love you, Bendy," she said. "You're sweet. Weekly Letter of Happenings at the Seat of Government by Our Congressman

There are 37 million wage earners in this country whose incomes would be seriously curtailed by the 2 per cent transaction tax, which would result in an increased cost of living to them of 20 per cent. When living expenses go up, the purchasing power of wages goes down, I know it is contended that under the McGroarty bill wages will go under way. Every farmer in the county up also. Wages would have to go up, will be visited, the committee men in but in fixing the increased cost of living, as a result of the 2 per cent transaction tax, at 20 per cent, no account has been taken of a raise in wages, and if wages do go up the cost of living will have to go up that much more.

The big argument used by the advocates of the Townsend plan is that it will create a tremendous purchasing power, with the result that farms and factories will be unable to supply the demands for their products, that unemployment will cease, wages go up, and we will have back the prosperity of 1928 and 1929

If the original Townsend bill which provided for the payment to every person over sixty years of age, no matter how much money or property he or she might have, $200 a month, providing he or she would quit work, and the sum required to finance the plan, in excess of what the 2 per cent tax would bring in, to be furnished by the Government through the issuing of new money, would become a law, there can be no doubt at all but that increased purchasing power would result through the enactment of such a law.

But, as stated before in these letters, the original Townsend bill, has been scrapped and with it has gone the idea of $200 a month to all pensioners and the Government furnishing any of the sum necessary to pay the pensions. There is a new Townsend plan or second McGroarty bill, which relieves the Government from furnishing any money to finance the plan, and promises the pensioners, not $200 a month, but only an equal share in the sum that the 2 per cent transaction tax will produce after taking out the cost of operating the plan, so to speak. Your local community is, in the final analysis, an economic entity.

What is true economically as regards nations is true to a lesser degree as regards cities or communities. England has a slogan, "Buy British." Germany and France, in fact most of the European countries, have similar slogans which are enforced by high import duties. In the United States we have the "Made In America Club," organized to promote the sale of American goods in this country.

We in the community of Kewaskum should follow the example of nations by purchasing everything possible here in Kewaskum. In this manner, and this manner alone, can we keep our money at home working for us to bless and build our community and, thereby, benefit every resident of Kewaskum and every farmer in its en-
