House Hurriedly Passes New Revenue Bill—Roper Stirs Business Men to Sharp Retort—Young Farouk Becomes King of Egypt.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WITH the extraordinary speed which the appropriation considered in excess of the administration's new $893,000,000 revenue bill was rushed through the house...

As passed by the house the bill provides: 1. A graduated tax on corporation income which, it is estimated, will force distribution of $3,300,000,000 more in dividends and yield the government an additional $620,000,000 annually.

THE $3,000,000,000 Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill, with its threat of currency inflation, was blasted out of its pigeonhole Friday and assured of a vote in the house during the present session.

Five representatives signed the petition to remove the bill from the house rules committee, completing the 218 signatures necessary to bring up the bill.

BEGIN NATION-WIDE PEACE DRIVE

Large Students Conduct Demonstrations; Nye Report Raps Munitions Firms; Peace Plans Advocated

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

THE Gods of war, though they play with the fates of Europe, Africa and the Orient, are feeling their bloody thrones shake a little on the American side these days.

Still rumbling through the land are the thundering accusations of the report of the Nye munitions committee to the United States senate—charges that war scares are planned, started and accelerated by concerns in the international munitions trade, concerns which have been known to foment wholesale slaughter of the battlefronts, that their profits might be greater.

And now in its closing days is the month-long drive of the peace campaign. Speakers from all sections of the country have brought their messages to the students of the United States as a result of this campaign which was started April 22.

The size of some of the turnouts is indicated by the following partial list:

- Cornell 2,300, University of Cincinnati 1,000 out of 4,946, Vassar 1,000, University of Chicago 1,500 out of 5,700, University of Michigan 3,000 out of 10,500, Dartmouth 1,200, Brown 1,500, Harvard 500, Yale 200 out of 3,000, Tufts 800, Syracuse 800, Buffalo State Teachers 200 out of 400, Lewis institute 400 out of 2,500, Northwestern 400 out of 4,000, University of Rochester 250 out of 800, University of Minnesota 600 out of 12,000, Hamline university 200 out of 600, Lawrence college 400 out of 700, Temple university 200, Milwaukee State Teachers 400 out of 1,255, University of New Mexico 150 out of

of the present campaign and to a host of speaking appearances throughout the country on behalf of the peace drive.

The terrible cost of war is graphically illustrated by the Foreign Policy association, in a booklet receiving wide distribution at present. The association declares that the cost of the World War to every family in the United States would buy every family a new car with gasoline to run it for a year; a complete wardrobe for mother, father and two children; a mechanical refrigerator; furniture for the living room; a new radio, and a family ticket to the movies once a week for a year.

Calls Neutrality Impossible. The association goes on to point out that absolute neutrality is virtually impossible because industries employing 2,000,000 Americans depend greatly upon foreign trade. The organization can see three main policies toward foreign nations which are receiving the greatest approval of various groups: Political isolation and economic expansion; international co-operation; and a strict "keep-out-of-war" policy.

Advocates of the isolation theory seek temporary neutrality legislation and go no farther than embargoes on the export of arms and munitions, while the internationalists would extend these embargoes to all materials used in warfare, including loans and credits to nations engaged in fighting.

Internationalists further advocate the delegation to the President of the power of lifting any and all embargoes against a country which has been at acked in violation of the Pact of Paris. Permanent neutrality legislation is the aim of the "keep-out-of-war" crowd. Its platform contains the following:

"Mandatory embargo on arms and ammunition and other war materials to all belligerents in time of war; the prohibition of loans and credits to warring nations, and strict regulation to forbid American vessels and American citizens from traveling in war zones.

"All trade with belligerents shall be at the risk of the shippers."

These people are willing to give up American freedom of the seas, declaring that the United States has nothing to gain and everything to lose in fighting war in Europe or Asia.

The internationalists, likewise, are willing to forego the traditional freedom of the seas, but they also propose consultation by the United States with other signatories of the Pact of Paris in case of violation of the pact; support of the League of Nations providing for United States membership in the League of Nations with the guaranty that this country shall not be required to become party to any action which involves armed force, and American adherence to the World Court. The isolationists oppose these alliances with the League and the Court.

Another argument for peace is the 150,000-word report of the Nye committee, which reveals the bribery and corruption which exists in the international munitions commerce, the resistance to peace efforts and the instigation of war scares by the munitions firms. It even found that it was customary to sell American war patents abroad, where they might be used against American lives and ships in the World War.

The charges were by no means confined to the United States, but also concerned the British armaments industry going on. It was charged that both American and British armaments firms knew about the first German violations of the arms ban of 1924.

How Arms Salesmen Work. The committee told how boot manufacturers sold a "considerable battle fleet" to the Chilean government after the World War, stimulating the building of war machines in other countries of South America and causing general unrest on that continent.

One of the most flagrant examples of this was in Colombia and Peru at the time of the Leticia incident, when the munitions firms kept the two countries well informed about each other's operations. One salesman, after selling a big order to Peru, boasted that he would sell "double the amount, and more modern, to the Colombian government."

One piece of evidence quoted a munitions manufacturer as spurring the activities of representatives with the order to gear busy because "these opera bouffe resolutions are usually short-lived, and we must make the most of the opportunity."

It mattered little that the airplanes, bombs and guns would be used to kill off a few back country Indians in South America.

Here's what the Nye committee has to say about that incident:

"All this may be little more to the munitions people than a highly profitable game of bridge with special attention on all sides to the technique of Fighting Rams of Texas. A curb on the fighting instincts of rival rams has recently been devised by Texan shepherds. It consists of a rubber screen attached to the animal's horns and allowed to drop down over the upper line of its vision. While the ram can then see well enough to graze, it cannot see other leaders of the flock clearly enough for an efficient battle.

Known as "combat blinds," the blinkers are widely used throughout the sheep country of western Texas, where rival rams now graze side by side in security and peace.—New York Times.

Fattening Steers. The advisability of grinding corn for fattening steers depends somewhat upon the feeding method. The practice is less common where hogs are kept in the feed lot to recover whole grain in the manure.

Toward the end of the feeding period, says Wallace's Farmer, ground corn may be advantageous because it will induce the cattle to consume more feed. If no hogs follow the steers, either ear corn or shelled corn should be ground.

Farm Sidelights. Dairy cattle can be fed to increase the organic iodine in their milk.

Germany has ruled that all potatoes grown there must be consumed there.

One of the severest diseases of raspberries in Pennsylvania is crown gall.

Twenty-six different soil types have been catalogued in Polk county, Texas, by the soil conservation service.

Oats weighing 42.6 pounds a bushel were produced last season by colonists in the Matanuska valley of Alaska.

Under favorable conditions, home-grown mushrooms are ready to pick six to eight weeks after spawning.

Septic Tank Is Good Investment

Water-Tight Arrangement Is Sure to Hold Sewage for Bacterial Digestion.

By W. C. Krueger, Extension Agricultural Engineer, New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station—WNU Service.

In early spring when the ground is saturated with water and drainage is impaired by frozen subsoil, the advantages of a septic tank over a cesspool or dry pit for sewage disposal are easily recognized.

Cesspools located in open gravelly or sandy soils operate freely in disposing of sewage but this free movement often causes contamination of nearby water supplies.

Septic tanks, on the other hand, are water-tight and of a size sufficient to hold the sewage long enough to insure bacterial digestion.

There is a second digestion chamber where the effluent undergoes additional digestion and aeration and from this chamber it is dispersed by means of a field the disposal system laid underground in areas removed from the water supply.

Septic tanks may be purchased ready-made or they may be constructed in place. Construction does not present any difficulties to the average workman and the cost of materials for a farm-built tank is generally lower than the price of purchased units.

A frequent mistake is the installing of septic tanks which are too small. Tanks should have an approximate capacity of 100 gallons per person in the family.

Pruning Peach Trees in View of Obtaining Growth. Peach trees can be pruned successfully at any time during the dormant season.

Some growers prefer to prune early in the fall in the belief that the wounds are well healed over by spring before the sap flow starts.

Others claim that spring pruning is best owing to danger of freezing the wood during severely cold weather.

Their theories, however, are hardly borne out by tests.

There is one distinct advantage to late winter pruning as compared to early winter pruning.

If one knows there is no chance of getting a peach crop because of excessively low temperatures during the winter, a different method of pruning can be used than when there is a probability of having a fruit crop.

Smoked Pork Sausage. Smoked pork sausage is made by grinding the meat into coarse particles or one-fourth-inch-sized cubes.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

IF YOU expect the household to be well done either by yourself, the maid or the woman who comes in by the day, it is up to you as the homemaker to see that proper tools are supplied.

Keeping up with household exigencies requires an attention to detail that is amazing.

Efficiency. The efficient homemaker looks ahead. She knows her household equipments and is ready with fresh supplies before there is a hampering lack.

Some are chosen and some are not, as you remember. And this is one of the "summer" chosen!

It is surprisingly easy to make, and with the aid of the step-by-step chart, illustrating the cut and fit of the new slit sleeves and the way to pleat and stitch-up the youthful bodice, you will immediately realize how automatically it goes together.

THE FUNCTION OF DOORS is to open and close entrances and exits, thereby permitting or excluding circulation of air currents, sights, and sounds.

Wide doors separating adjoining rooms or halls and rooms which it is desirable to throw together when doors are open, may swing on hinges or work on rollers.

RANDOM LAKE POST OFFICE IS ROBBED

Burglars escaped with $400 in stamps, a money order book and a record book early last Friday morning by blowing open the safe in the post office at Random Lake, Neighbors, who heard the explosion at about three o'clock believed the disturbance to be thunder.

Later, Harry Heinen, hotel proprietor, was the first to notice an open rear window in the post office. He notified the postmaster, W. J. Hand, and Sheriff County Sheriff, Jos. J. Dreps. Nitroglycerine had been poured into a crack in the door of the safe.

COUNTY NURSE SETS DEADLINE AT MAY 11TH

All Washington county children who are to be vaccinated against small pox or given toxin-anti-toxin against diptheria, shall report to his or her family physician some time before May 11th, advises Miss Berdina Hill, County Nurse.

May 11th is the deadline for this project because serum will be available, from the county to the physicians, for that period only. The price, previously announced, is 50c per child.

...said, in a persuasive, sensible tone. "He's not done anything wrong! And you haven't anything to do with it anyway."
"I certainly haven't anything to do with it," Miss Wallister agreed, with red cheeks and a rising voice, "for I neither know nor care what you're talking about!"
"Well, then will you just let me talk one moment more?" Tony asked simply. "I don't think you understand yet why I came over here to talk to you. The point is this: Did you have all your teachers give out postal cards to the students in the various classes, and have them, as a part of their business course, write into Shafts' and ask for information about the 'Undergrad Club'?"
"I don't know whether I did or not," Miss Wallister answered with a snap. "If I did, I see no reason why I shouldn't!"
"There is no reason why you shouldn't do that," Tony admitted. "It was telling them to say that they saw the advertisement in the Sun that—well, that interested us. Naturally, the Shafts people thought that the Sun was getting forty responses to the ad to every other paper's one."
"I don't know anything about it," Miss Wallister said, in the pause.
"You don't remember Mr. Opps giving you instructions that that was to be done?"
"I tell you I don't remember anything about it."
"That's funny, for he does," Tony said musingly. "Now, listen, don't get angry at me, Miss Wallister," she added disarmingly. "I'm a working woman like yourself. They give me certain assignments on my paper, and I have to follow them up. I don't know anything about this story, and I don't care anything, except to do my end honestly. All I know is that Mr. Fitch, our managing editor, called me into his office this morning and told me that he had been suspicious of the means by which the Shafts' advertising had been handled over here, and that Mr. Opps—" Tony glanced at a note in her hand. "Mr. Kern Opps," she said, "had admitted that he had used the schools to further the interests of his brother-in-law's paper. Now probably you had no responsibility in the matter at all—you were merely acting upon his orders."
"If I did that or anything else," Miss Wallister said with angry promptness, as Tony paused to look at her hopefully, "you may be very sure it was acting under orders!"
"I should suppose so," Tony conceded.
"You don't think for a moment that I'd take a step like that on my own?"
"When was this?" Tony asked, adept now at closing the net. But the shrill, harassed, anxious assistant superintendent was too quick for her.
"I don't remember the incident at all, and I'd advise you to talk to Mr. Opps."
"Someone else in the office talked to him," Tony explained patiently; "he admitted it, and said that he was quite within his rights. Maybe he was, I don't know. The point is that you are his assistant, and we want to know whether or not you feel that that was a perfectly justifiable thing to do."
"I don't think it matters what I feel." With that she reached for the phone and put in a call for Mr. Opps.
"It would matter in this way, Miss Wallister. Honestly," Tony said, smiling. "I am merely making this sug-

...porters here asking you how it happens that you forgot the whole thing entirely, and probably several kids delighted to get their names into the paper by saying that they remember filling out the postcards and being instructed to say that they saw the advertisement in the Sun."
Miss Wallister was sitting facing Tony, her narrowed eyes speculative behind her glasses, her face red. Presently, without removing her gaze, she leaned slightly toward the left and opened the lower drawer of her desk. From it she took a postal card and tossed it to Tony.
"There!" she said. "I'd rather have spoken to him about it first, but since he's given you the whole thing, I'm not going to lie about it. Mr. Opps and I have always been friends, but I thought at the time he was taking a chance, and you can say that I was acting under his directions. I could have reported it to the board, of course; it didn't seem to me important. The children are having business courses, and we encourage them to consult the newspapers for ads and rates and everything else. Our boys keep a regular stock and bond board going, and the girls take turns week and week about acting as stenographers."
"I think that's a splendid idea," Tony murmured, her hand trembling as she put the precious postal card securely in her bag. "I wonder if the other high schools have practical courses like that."
"I don't believe they do." The assistant superintendent aired her views quite eloquently. Tony hated to remember afterward that Miss Wallister offered her a caramel from a limp bag before she went away.
Tony went into the office at six o'clock to meet a sour greeting from the city editor.
"Get anything on the Oakland thing?" he asked.
"Yep."
"No, did you?" Greeny asked, impressed. "Better go right in; here, I'll go with you."
When they were in Mr. Fitch's office Greeny said: "Miss Taft is on that Oakland school superintendent story."
"Get anything on it?" Fitch asked harshly.
"I got it," Tony said simply, experiencing the most thrilling sensation the newspaper reporter ever knows.
"She talk?"
"Miss Wallister?"
"If that's her name—yes."
"Yes. She talked. There's one of the postal cards," Tony said, displaying a card printed in ink script with the words: "I am a student in the Oakland high school. Having seen your advertisement in the Sun I am very much interested in the Undergrad club, and would be glad to learn the conditions of membership."
"Where'd you get this?"
"She gave it to me. That's Opps' handwriting; that was the model."
Mr. Fitch held it in his hands for a few seconds, considering it. Then he said, "Wait here a minute."
Presently the managing editor came back, and with him Mr. Arnoldson and a young man introduced as "Mr. Philiber." The last was a notary public.
"You say you got the Opps story?" Mr. Arnoldson said. Tony quaked with happy pride and awe.
"You're going to tell us only the simple truth, Miss—Taft," Arnoldson said, pushing a comfortable revolving chair toward her, "and so you needn't have the slightest uneasiness at Mr. Philiber's taking it down. Just be careful, that's all, and be sure of what you say. You have no objection to having it witnessed afterward?"
"None whatever," Tony said, feeling excited and important. She talked carefully, not exaggerating. The surrender of the postal card finished the story, and the notary indifferently asked her if she would swear to it. Tony had done this before. "To my share of it," she agreed.
"Well done, Miss Taft," Mr. Arnoldson said then, going away. Mr. Fitch echoed the praise, and with his Tony knew that they were extraordinarily exhilarated.
"Who's got Opps' story?" Tony asked, turning toward the city office between Greeny and Mr. Fitch.
"That's the interesting part of it, Miss Taft," Frank Fitch exclaimed. "No one has talked to Opps yet. But we'll get his story now fast enough, without any trouble! She's squealed, and that'll bring him right into line."
Tony stopped short, and the men stopped with her.
"You mean he hadn't talked?"
"None. We thought it was best to handle it this way," Fitch said complacently. "I sent a man over to talk real estate with Opps this morning at half-past eleven. Opps had some interest in a development called 'Paradise Oaks' over there. This fellow suggested that he drive out with Opps to see the place; that's why he wasn't in his office when you were talking to his assistant."
"Oh, but I lied to her," Tony began, in a hard voice.
"You got your story, and that's all the Call expects of you," Frank Fitch said smoothly. "Thank you!" He closed his door.
She and Greeny were out in the city room now. Tony looked at the man voicelessly for a long minute.
"She'll lose her job," Tony said, breathing hard.
"Oh, no, she won't!"
"Greeny," the girl demanded, holding herself in, "is that fair?"
"Aw, shucks, what's the diff?" Greeny pleaded. "That's the way Fitch has gotten where he is, and he's the smartest man in the business. There's nobody can run a story to earth the way Frank can. Opps had no business to do it, and if he gets hell for it, it's coming to him."
Tony went to her desk and sat down. She felt sick. Indifferently she tried to bring her mind to her so-called notes; it was no use. She had been absorbed in her assignment all afternoon; she had run down his story for Fitch, whom she despised, and in doing so had injured, perhaps ruined, a harmless, nervous, hard-working woman of forty, who had believed in her and listened to her and taken her advice—and even, as Tony writhed to remember, had offered her forlorn lit-

...the mashed caramels in a paper bag! Tony sat brooding. Quite suddenly taking the telephone, she asked for Mr. Bellamy's office; she must talk to him about it.
Mr. Bellamy was in Los Angeles and would not be back until tomorrow. A dullness, a blankness seemed to follow the announcement; Tony sat for a while with her head in her hands.
Fitch had gotten her into this; Frank Fitch, whose morals were the scandal of the office, had snarled deceived her into deceiving this other woman! Antoinette Taft, who had always prided herself upon being honorable—fine—! No, she couldn't bear it.
She seized a piece of paper and slipped it into her typewriter. It was the engraved city room correspondence paper upon which she sometimes wrote social notes.
"Dear Mr. Greenwood," typed Tony, her breath coming hard, her eyes glittering and tearful with anger.
"Herewith I tender you my resignation from the staff of the Call. I want to thank you for all your kindness to me, and to assure you that

Five minutes later the doctor reached the house. A man was lying on a settee with his mouth wide open, while a hysterical woman was waving a kipper close to his mouth.

...the Call. May I talk to you for a minute, Miss Wallister?"
"Surely," the high-school superintendent had been entering a box on her desk, outside of her office by the empty classrooms, and she glanced at the clock.
"I'll keep you a minute; I'm just going to get out of my car," Tony said, smiling. "But this is a queer little bit of business, and I wanted to talk to you about it. You're assistant superintendent of the Oakland schools, aren't you, Miss Wallister?"
"Yes, Miss Wallister," she said.
"Mr. Opps is the superintendent of the Oakland schools, isn't he?"
"Yes, Miss Wallister, he is. He's a little uneasy, and Tony's a little nervous, and they're both a bit of a mess."
"I'm sure you'll be able to help them," Tony said.
"I'll try," Miss Wallister said.
"I'll be back to you in a few minutes," Tony said.

"I won't put myself on record," Tony glanced at her notes.
"This is all I have," she said.
"Kern Opps admits use of stamped postcards supplied by the Sun in classrooms; says he was entirely justified. Opps may not be any too secure in his seat when this comes out. You're his subordinate, and naturally you did what he told you to do. But I should think—"

"Mr. Opps is out," she said, turning back to Tony. "You were going to say—"

WASHINGTON LETTER

Weekly Letter of Happenings at the Seat of Government by Our Congressman Michael K. Reilly

Of course the claim is made that the McGroarty bill would increase jobs through the retirement from work of our citizens over 60 years of age who are employed at the present time. The urge to retire from business, however, would be much less, when the promised pension would be $30, $40 or $50 a month as under the 2nd McGroarty bill than if the pension were to be $200 a month. So, it is quite evident that very few people who are at work today and who are over 60 years of age will be tempted to retire from business or work under the terms of the second McGroarty bill.

Under the second McGroarty bill the three, four or five billion dollars that would be raised by the 2 per cent transaction tax would simply transfer money or purchasing power from the pockets of our citizens receiving wages and income, to the pockets of another class of our citizens who would be on the pension roll. The greater part of the said sum would come out of the pockets of the masses of our citizens, who at the present time consume all their income in living expenses, and consequently what they would pay into this pension fund under the 2 per cent transaction tax would not increase purchasing power, but it would simply be transferring purchasing power from one class of our citizens to another. The only increase in purchasing power would come from that small class of our citizens who today receive incomes above $2500 a year. Again, the increased cost of living would cut down the purchasing power of our lower salary citizens probably just as much as the purchasing power of the country would be increased through the tax contributed by the higher salary citizens who receive incomes of $2500 a year.

You take the head of a family who is receiving less than $2000 a year, and 60 per cent of the families in this country in 1929 had such an income, he can not afford to pay a 20 per cent increase in living expenses, and if he does have to pay such an increase he will have to cut down his expenditures for the support of his own family just that much, purchases 20 per cent also.

Another argument used against the Townsend plan is that it will ruin the small business man, because as a rule the stock of goods that a small business man would have for sale would be subject to more transaction taxes than the stock of goods of a chain store, for instance. The big fellows would be able to eliminate many of those 2 per cent taxes, while the little fellow would not be in any position to avoid such taxes.

The argument is also made that the Townsend plan would require an army of Government employees, and that the cost of operating the system would be hundreds of millions of dollars a year. I do not think there is much in this argument if we are to raise, as Dr. Townsend proposes, 20 or 24 billion dollars a year to take care of our people over sixty years of age, who are dependent. It does not cut much figure whether we spend a hundred million dollars more or less a year in operating the plan. The question is, is Dr. Townsend's old age pension plan, a good thing for the country. Of course there will have to be a large army of employees. There will be 8 million pensioners to check up. There will be ten million farmers and business men to check up to see whether they are playing honest with the Government, but it would seem that a great many of the personnel required to operate this plan might be drawn from that class of our citizens who are over sixty years of age, on the pension roll, but capable of rendering services in this new set-up.

The argument is also made that the McGroarty bill would close our stock and produce exchanges. I am not very much impressed with this argument. It is undoubtedly true that a 2 per cent transaction tax would slow down the stock exchange and produce exchange business of the country, but that it would put such exchanges out of business is very doubtful.

Opponents of the Townsend plan believe it is economically unsound to tax 92 per cent of our citizens in order that 8 per cent might have a standard of living higher than millions have who would be required to pay such taxes. Under the Townsend plan you would have millions and millions of American citizens who are compelled to live on incomes of less than $1500 a year, citizens with families, paying a 20 per cent increase in cost of living in order that 8 per cent of our people, many million of them without responsibilities other than themselves, might have $2400 a year to live on. We have millions of mechanics, and workers, teachers, clerks, bookkeepers, stenographers, etc., and millions of farmers who never made $1500 a year clear. How long would this class of our citizens consent to an increase of 20 per cent in their living expenses in order that 8 million of our citizens might have a much higher standard of living.

I favor old age pensions. I believe that the greatest forward step taken by this Administration was when it passed the National Social Security Act.

I believe the old age pension problem is a problem to be solved by the nation and the states. At the present time under the National Social Security Act a dependent citizen 65 years of age can receive a pension of $30 a month, and a husband and wife $60 a month, providing the states will furnish one half of the pension fund. I do not think it is asking too much to have the various states, provide $15 or $20, or if it should be deemed necessary $25 a month for the support of their dependent citizens and the Government of the United States to furnish the balance.

I do not look upon the National Security Act as a perfect law, but it does constitute a good beginning along the line of providing economic security for millions of our citizens. It is possible that the Government of the United States should provide two thirds of this pension fund instead of 1/2 and it is also possible that the pension should be, $40 or $50 a month, but that is a matter for the future, after a trial of the present law.

The one big problem in paying pensions is where to get the money. If our country will come up out of this valley of depression and get back on the highway of prosperity, that we were traveling prior to 1929, there will be no difficulty in raising pension funds in the state and the nation that would pay $50 a month.

The second McGroarty bill, it is claimed by its friends, would raise about five billion dollars a year, or about one-fourth of what is required to pay $200 a month pension. However, it is a fact that when the Townsend plan was under discussion in the House over a year ago the opponents of the McGroarty bill declared that the bill would not produce in excess of three or at most four billion dollars a year. We will assume that the bill would produce five billion dollars a year. Where will the larger part of the said five billion dollars come from? From the pockets of the rich? No. From the pockets of the 80 per cent of the families of the country who have an income of less than $2500 a year, the people who are today over-burdened with taxes.

Nations Battle Over Codfish

Nations have gone to war over the codfish, says the Boston Herald. French, Dutch, Swedes, Danes, Scots, Limeys, Bluenosers, and Yanks have all done battle for him at one time or another. In the old days, fishermen caught them on hooks with naked clams and other shellfish for bait, but now they are simply swept up from the floor of the ocean in big nets dragged by powerful steam or Diesel trawlers.

Have you protected your home and your property against the next storm?

It may be a tornado or another cyclone or merely a windstorm, but with a policy in the WISCONSIN FARMERS' MUTUAL HAIL AND CYCLONE INSURANCE COMPANY OF JUNEAU, WISCONSIN, you will be protected against financial loss.

THE WISCONSIN FARMERS' MUTUAL HAIL AND CYCLONE INSURANCE COMPANY OF JUNEAU, WISCONSIN, operates only in Wisconsin, and due to its low assessments, prompt payment of claims and sound financial condition as shown during thirty-eight years of existence, it has become the OLDEST AND LARGEST COMPANY of its kind in the state. The membership fee is only $2.50 for a term of five years, and one assessment is levied each year on the first Monday in October. The 1935 assessment was $1.00 per thousand.

Don't wait for the storm to strike. Insure today in a sound, reliable company.

THROW OFF the BURDEN

When you purchase merchandise outside of your own community you willfully assume an enormous burden of high realty values. The cost of operating a store on a desirable corner in a large city is enormous. High taxes on fictitious realty values, high insurance rates, high liability rates, cost of elevators, etc., are all added to the selling price of the merchandise of such a store. Your out-of-town purchases further increase your burden of realty values because they deprive local merchants of that much business and permanently remove from your community the money so spent. This money, in turn, decreases local values to a point where the real estate values of your own community will show a loss. Under such conditions taxes would have to be materially increased if the same standard of civic welfare is to be maintained. Compared with Kewaskum goods at local prices you cannot buy as economically elsewhere. Why assume a portion of the cost of big city, high realty values? Throw off such a burden.
