KEWASKUM PUBLIC POOL HAPPENINGS

Amateur exercises will be held on Friday, June 5th. The members of the Kewaskum Public Pool Club are presenting a series of classes in swimming, water polo, and other aquatic sports.

SECOND IN TRACK MEET

The county track meet held on the La Grange school field on Saturday afternoon, the local squad of Kewaskum won the 100-yard dash. Campbellport won the 200-yard dash. The Kewaskum team was exceptionally strong, winning several events.

OFFICERS SUMMONED

Village Marshal George F. Brandt, Deputy Sheriff George Kippenhan and Postmaster Frank Heppie were notified by the police on their way to the office when the explosion occurred, which was caused by the yegmen in their attempt to blast open the safe door.

ESCAPE THROUGH BACK WAY

As the officers approached the front of the building, Geo. Brandt, Jr., son of the marshal, drove his car to the rear of the office and fired at the robbers as they made a dash for liberty on that end, but they succeeded through the dark streets and alleys in that vicinity, apparently to a hidden automobile some distance from the post office, with which they made a narrow escape.

DOOR IS WRECKED

The blast wrecked the lock and combination on the vault door so that it could not be opened, until a representative of the Meyer Safe Co., Milwaukee, arrived in the afternoon. The handle to the vault door was missing. A new 15-pound sledge hammer, bearing numerous finger prints, was left behind, which may be of help in identifying the band.

SMALL AMOUNT TAKEN

The postmaster estimated Saturday that about $15 in stamps and cash were taken from the cash drawer but upon full check-up found the amount to be exactly $3.32. There was but a small amount of cash in the vault also as daily deposits are made and the cash taken in Friday had been left at the bank in the afternoon.

LOCAL MEN ATTEND K. C.'S. INITIATION

Several local members of the Knights of Columbus attended a banquet and first degree initiation at West Bend last Thursday evening. Five new members from this village were among the class of fifteen who took the degree. They were Sylvester Staehler, Leo Wietor, Raymond Smith, William Martin and Theodore Schoofs. After the initiation State Deputy Aug. Reiselweber and State Secretary Emmett J. Corrigan addressed the meeting.

MAY BALL

At Lake Auburn Heights on Saturday evening, May 23. Music by the Hawaiian Hillbillies. Chicken lunch. Don't miss it. Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Baker, Props.

ROBBERS FAIL IN ATTEMPT TO CRACK POST OFFICE SAFE

A gang of three unknown robbers failed in an attempt to crack open the safe at the Kewaskum post office early last Saturday morning, when shots fired by a nearby resident frightened the men away before gaining admittance to the vault.

Awakened by unfamiliar sounds about 2:15 a. m., Aug. E. Koch, 22, who resides directly across the street from the post office, jumped up to investigate and saw three men, two of them rather small in stature and the other quite tall, tampering with the front door of the office. He then took proper action by awakening his parents and calling the telephone exchange.

As Mr. Heppie was just leaving his home about a block distant, and was on his way to the scene, when he heard the blast later August Koch explained that the robbers stood in front of the building while the explosion went off.

As Mr. Heppie and members of his family were first to arrive on the scene, there was nothing to be seen or heard, as the men were probably lying on the floor, having previously been frightened by shots fired by Edw. C. Miller, who also resides nearby. In a successful effort to alarm the neighborhood and scare the men.

MISS GLADYS WILKE WEDS ARNO PLAUTZ

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. John's Luth. church at Sherman Center, when Miss Gladys Wilke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Staeger, and Arno Plautz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Plautz, were married last Saturday at 3:30 p. m.

The bride wore a white satin gown with a long train and a tulle veil trimmed with lace, which fell from a lace cap trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of butterfly roses and white sweet peas.

Attending the bride as maid-of-honor was Miss Ruth Plautz, who wore an orchid lace dress and carried an arm bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and white sweet peas. Miss Agnes Plautz attended as bridesmaid and wore a green lace dress and carried Tailsman roses. Little Miss Mildred Staeger, sister of the bride, was the flower girl. She wore an ankle length blue taffeta dress and carried a colonial bouquet.

The groom was attended by Alvin Janke as best man and Raymond Staeger as groomsman. A reception for 75 guests followed at the home of the bride. Decorations were carried out in pink, green, orchid, blue and white.

Out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Paul Manske and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Board of Sheboygan; Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Staeger of Sheboygan Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Plautz, Miss Ruth Plautz, Miss Nelda Staeger, Alvin Janke and Wm. Luebke of Milwaukee, and Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schmidt of Shawano.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB

The Kewaskum Woman's club will hold its annual picnic in the city park on Saturday, May 23. Dinner will be served to club members and their families at twelve o'clock.

The following officers have been elected for the club year 1936-37: President, Mrs. E. L. Morgenroth; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Leo C. Brauchle; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Richard M. A. Gadow; secretary, Mrs. Jack Tessier; treasurer, Mrs. Clifford Rose.

proving business have aided the merchants of the smaller cities and towns. These associations have improved merchandising conditions. They have brought to the smaller merchants all of the advantages which two decades ago were enjoyed by the big houses and they are constantly helping this small town merchant to become an even more vital factor in the economic welfare of his customers.

The local merchant is your friend and neighbor—buying from him has many advantages. You get neighborly treatment; the personal friendship of your merchant and his conscientious interest in your purchases; his personal guarantee which stands behind the goods he sells; immediate attention and personal service. You see the goods you buy and know that you are getting the advantage of his expert buying and selection in the merchandise which he offers.

This is a purely business talk. A resume of existing conditions. It is given here in order that you may have a better understanding of your relationship with your neighbors and fellow citizens.

MISS ELIZABETH LAY TO WED JUNE 6

The following article, pertaining to the forthcoming marriage of Miss Elizabeth Lay, was taken from the Monday evening issue of the News Index of Evanston, Ill.

"Mr. and Mrs. Otto Edwin Lay of Kewaskum, Wis., announce the approaching wedding of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Houston Lay, 809 Simpson street, and Charles Guilbert, 600 Aven street, son of Mrs. Catherine Guilbert of Chicago. The wedding will take place at noon, Saturday, June 6, at St. Luke's church with the Rev. Dean Gerald Moore officiating.

Proceeding the bride to the altar as maid of honor will be her sister, Charlotte, who will be graduated from Milwaukee-Dunwoody college this spring. Miss Dorothy Lee Haugh, a Kappa Alpha Theta sorority sister of the bride from Omaha, Neb., will be a bridesmaid. Lewis Kider and Reed Hammond, students at Seabury-Western seminary, will be best man and usher respectively.

Miss Lay attended Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis., and was graduated from Northwestern university where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta. She took her nurse's training at Evanston hospital. Mr. Guilbert was graduated from the University of Chicago and is to be ordained Tuesday, May 26, by the Rt. Rev. George Crawford Stewart, bishop of the Chicago Episcopal diocese.

WALL STREET WATCHES FARMER

Wall Street and the financial interests of the nation watch business cycles closely. They know that the farmer is the economic backbone of the country. When the farmer prospers the nation prospers because the farmer is buying liberally. This liberal, rural buying improves business all the way along the line.

CHANGING ATTITUDES

First—the chain store. The chain store has "gone the mail-order house one better." They have stolen every trick in the repertoire of the mail-order house. The old arguments of large buying, large selling have been resurrected, refurbished and paraded before the public. "Leaders of so-called 'bargains' have been constantly offered as bait. Private brands and special packaging have assisted in maintaining a pseudo bargain atmosphere. To all this chicanery they have added the slightest personal touch of salesmen and saleswomen in their local stores.

Second—economic consciousness on the part of the rural buying public has produced a sounder appreciation of true values as offered by the small town merchant.

And it is this second reason which is making the greater inroads into mail-order sales.

Farmers and residents of the small towns who have in the past furnished the millions upon millions in profits for the mail-order houses have come to realize that they can get at least as high quality merchandise at as good or better prices through their home town merchants. Good roads and better merchandising methods on the part of manufacturers have made it possible for small town merchants to compare advantageously with the mail-order house and the chain store.

NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS HELP

Business Is Better Methods Eliminate Mail-Order Houses

LEAN DAYS FOR THE MAIL-ORDER HOUSE

The mail-order house is passing. Each year since 1929 has found a steadily decreasing number of mail-order houses. Many of the smaller organizations have given up the "Ghost," the larger houses have already seen the handwriting on the wall and have changed their policy in an attempt to adjust themselves to the demands of the buying public.

From 1930 to 1934 mail-order sales decreased tremendously. True, in recent months there has been a decided recovery, particularly in the case of one organization who have published this fact on the financial pages of every big city daily in the country. But this particular organization has set up throughout the nation a series of branch stores. While listing themselves as a mail-order house they are actually today a combination mail-order house, wholesalers and operators of retail department stores.

Even then the recovery of the mail-order houses has not been proportionate to the general recovery in the small town and rural community.

GAMES NEXT SUNDAY

West Bend at Kewaskum
Grafton at Port Washington
Mayville at Kohler

Just back from a tryout with the Milwaukee Brewers and Fieldale (Va.) baseball clubs, big Herb Robel on the mound for Grafton, set back the local team 5 to 1 last Sunday afternoon on the winning team's grounds, in a game played in a drizzling rain from the fifth inning on. A fifteen minute intermission had to be taken in the last of the fifth because of the downpour.

Robel, with almost perfect control and a lot of stuff, pitched seven hit ball and fanned nine of Kewaskum's would be heavy hitting players. Airtight support given him and several sleepy plays by the locals made things just that much easier for him. Wozniak pitched good ball but several fluke hits in the punches cut his throat. He took the mound in place of Patterson who failed to start because of a nose bleed suffered before the game which required careful treatment by a physician to stop the blood flow.

Kewaskum's lone marker came in the sixth on a double by Mathias, an infield out and a fielder's choice. Grafton started in their half of the fourth with one run as a result of singles by Goldberg and Spaeth and an error by Claus on Habich's fly ball. Again in the fifth singles by Jack Muenier and Spaeth and an error by Conley, accounted for another run. In the sixth a single by Fries and a two batter by Jack Muenier made it 3 to 1, Grafton. The winning team's last rally came in the seventh on a long home run by Goldberg, a double by Spaeth and singles by Habich and Robel, which added two more counters. At this stage Patterson replaced Wozniak and the scoring ended.

Mathias was the only successful Kewaskum batter with three hits while Goldberg, Jack Muenier and Spaeth proved to be Grafton's big three. Goldberg's fielding around second base was really a gem.

The game was late in starting because of another game played between the Grafton Cubs and Freistadt of the Land o' Rivers league, which preceded the main contest.

Don't forget next Sunday West Bend plays here, which should prove to be a thrilling and very interesting game.

how much do you see Larry Bellamy?"

"Let's see. Two weeks ago, once, when I got into that Oakland mess, and he came out to the house—and Thursday at Ruth's when her niece came; I told you about that. And—let's see—Friday at noon in the office for a few minutes—"

"Don't you see him every day in the office?"

"I do not."

"But, Tony, you know what I'm trying to find out. Do you still feel as you did last winter?"

"Yep."

A pause. Brenda looked thoughtful, shook her head. Tony hummed lightly.

"But, Tony, Ruth. She's been so kind to you."

"I know. That's where the catch comes in."

"Will you see him at Dr. Vanderbilt's house on Monday?"

"Larry? No. He's not coming down."

"Why not?"

"There's something else he has to do. He's bringing Ruth and all of them down to Del Monte tonight, but he's going back tomorrow."

Tony looked up, ready for further explanation. But Brenda had forgotten Lawrence Bellamy's existence.

"Take your oil," she said in an undertone to the child on her arm. "Be a darling and take your oil. There you are! Look at him try to spit it out; he hates his fish oil."

"Can you blame him?" Tony asked sympathetically. "His little world smells of fish already."

Tony looked at the telephone. Larry's voice was at the other end of it; the Bellamy's party would be at Del Monte now. Every fiber of her being seemed drawn toward it.

Lite went on in the contented, almost smug groove that Brenda and Alvin had chiseled out for themselves. The baby went to sleep, and there were tomato salad and bran muffins and a cold custard for supper, with Alvin discoursing upon the superiority of the meatless meal.

"To say nothing of the economy!" Brenda, rather pale, and with her forehead wet, said cheerfully, bringing in the tea.

"But that isn't why we do it," Alvin said quickly, and Brenda echoed loudly. "Oh, no, that isn't the only reason we do it."

After supper Alvin observed that there was rather a good movie up the street. Brenda said she was tired and not eager to go until she ascertained that he really could not go. Then she went with Tony.

"We'll be on the right-hand side of the house, about half-way down," she said to him in parting; explaining to her sister as they walked up the pleasantly straggling small-town street, "in case of a call."

Tony lay awake all night; although through the quiet Sunday she felt like an animal bound in a net; her mind, her soul, the very muscles of her body seemed jerking themselves away from this tame scene of Brenda's interests, Cliff's girl and her mother, and the dull lunch at the Bly cottage—salad and strawberries and hot rolls and pink sliced ham—

"Noblesse oblige," she said to herself sternly.

Brenda was no good at this party; she was sitting in a trance most of the time with Anthony in her lap, saying rapturously to anyone who would listen: "His first little social event, and I do think he's good!" and Alvin was throaty and opinionated. Cliff was so ridiculously absorbed in Mary Rose that he could not see anything else, and for the rest the group consisted of rather awkward little sisters fluttering about tremulously, and observing in gales of joyous laughter that they supposed that they'd all be falling in love now, and Mamma said she didn't want to hear any more of engagements for five years!

Tony threw herself into the business of being charming; she was the personality, she was Cliff's tremendously clever sister, who had so much fun reporting on the Call. She told them some of her adventures, and she saw that Cliff was proud of her; for Mrs. Bly listened in rapt delight and said that Tony was as good as any actress she had ever seen—as good as Georgia Cayvan or Ada Rehan any day. There weren't any actresses any more, Mrs. Bly said regretfully, there were just painted dolls, without any expression in their faces.

The festivity dragged on. Tony sat next to Dr. Bly at luncheon and painted so attractive a picture of the young Tafts and their orphaned struggles that the doctor said feelingly that he wished that his own daughters hadn't been born with all the Landvae money behind them; it wasn't a good thing to have life so smooth.

"Safer for girls than for boys, though," Tony observed, listening attentively. The doctor fervently agreed: nothing ruined boys like too much money.

And all the while Larry was close; perhaps playing golf on the Pebble Beach links, his white shirt open at his brown throat, his dark head bare. The blue sea rippled in a dazle of spring sunshine, and the gulls flew about crying their shrill piping cries, and the Blys fluttered about like gulls, and the guests admired too, pleased when the guests admired the wide porch and the view, so urgent with the little damp sandwiches and the fruit punch. Mary Rose in blue; Geraldine and Heloise in blue; Pauline in yellow. The youngest of them, a rawky and beautiful sixteen, was fondly called "Baby," and the sisters interrupted each other in eagerly telling Tony how smart she was, and how the boys liked her already.

It was a hot day, a rarely hot day for the ocean shore. It had brought forth an eruption of picnics and excursions; cars twinkled in black lines along the cliffs; every little cottage was gay with guests. Tiresome glaze—tiresome people—rich, sticky,illy food; Tony endured them all with a sort of clinging of mental and spiritual forces. At Del Monte and Pebble Beach everything would be cool, elegant, ordered; the men in white, the women on the awnined terraces and in the cool deep rooms in frocks that had come halfway around the world.

If tomorrow were like today Joe would have heavenly weather for his housewarming. Ruth, Mrs. Patterson, Caroline would be there—not Larry. He was going back to the city; he did not dare come, he did not dare risk meeting this girl in white who so dutifully amusing the Blys, so respectfully raising blue eyes to tire some old Dr. Bly at the head of the long table.

"But I'm prejudiced where Cliff's concerned, Doctor. I've never known him to do anything that wasn't generous and wonderful and good. He deserves a wife like Mary Rose!"

"Well, she's a good child, she's a good child!" And the doctor took off glasses to wipe his smiling eyes.

Tony had another night with Brenda; another adoring morning with Anthony's bath and bottle and nap.

On Sunday morning Joe came for her in the car, and she and Ruth and Caroline and old Mrs. Patterson were carried off into the hot still satin-blue world of beaches and water, towering eucalyptus and crouching cypress trees.

"Now, listen, don't expect too much," Joe warned her. "It's only a shanty, really, but I've sort of fixed it up—"

"I'll love it."

He turned in at a field gate, followed a wavering dirt road toward the shore, brought them triumphantly to a small bare white house that stood ridiculously square and harsh upon the edge of the cliff. Joe enthusiastically displayed the four-square rooms that he had had cleaned, cut into more spacious proportions. This wasn't finished—this was going to be great, but it was hardly started, of course. Here was where the bath was going to be—wouldn't that be great? And here—this was all in a mess, the man who had been doing it had broken his leg—but look, bookcases here—wasn't that swell?

Outside they heard the same story. Seeds had been planted all along here and there; the roses all were in, but you had to keep the gunny-sacking over them.

"Carrying chops and buns and coffee down to the rocky shore, Joe said to Tony:

"Come down here and run it, and I'll tear the whole place down, or buy you the Alexander place over at Pebble Beach."

"I like it just as it is!" Tony, laughing as she stretched a hand to his, stepping carefully over the boulders he took like a stairway, stopped and Caroline, and Larry had started up the beach to a certain rock pool that Joe said was unique in the entire world. He had taken more than fifty specimens from it and believed there were more.

Tony washing cups in the tide edge, had told the others to go on, she would stay with Mrs. Patterson. But now the old lady was quite frankly asleep, and when Larry came back for Tony to say that she would go on with him and join the others.

"How goes it, Tony?"

"Badly," the girl answered, with a brief little rueful laugh.

"Yes, I know. It goes badly," he agreed seriously.

They walked along, Larry yarding the camera at Ruth, a hundred yards ahead, who had stopped to look back.

"Oh, dear!" Tony said, in youthful despair. After a minute she went on, in a different tone: "Then I'll tell you what I'm going to do, Larry. I'm going to New York. It's a long way away, and I would have to work terribly hard there. I could get on a newspaper there. I have to get away, Larry. There's no happiness here."

The man said nothing. They were crossing a rise of rocks now, and he stretched a hand to her.

"And I hope," Tony said, finishing her sentence, "that I will forget it all."

"I am afraid you will," he said in a hard voice.

"Ah, Larry my dear, never be afraid of that! I'm not like that. I've never cared before, not for anyone. I'll never care again this way. We have to— to separate, and to—to get over it—"

Tony said, under her breath, "we'll not see each other, Larry, not hear each other's voices!"

And then, after a silence: "Larry, do you think I ought to go?"

The man hesitated a moment and then said briefly: "Yes, I do."

"It will kill me," Tony said.

"If you go, at least you shan't worry about money—salary," he said. "I've newspaper friends there; I'll take care of that. Grant and Kate, and Odd and Mabel—wonderful people—they'll keep an eye on you."

"Larry!" she burst out, "don't— don't ever forget me!"

"There'll never be anyone else— We've no time now," Larry said hurriedly, "when are you going back to town?"

"Tonight. Brewer of the Chronicle, and his wife, and some cousin or sister or somebody, are going up, and I meet them at the hotel at five."

"Could you get out of it with the others and drive up with me?"

Tony considered, her color fluctuating. "When would we get into town?"

"About half-past one."

"Oh, Larry, I would love it so!"

"Get out of your engagement, then, and I'll pick you up at the hotel at half-past nine. You can get some dinner there?"

"Surely. But, Larry—"

"But what?" he asked, in the unencouraging, the almost harsh manner he had used throughout.

"I shouldn't."

"How'd you mean you shouldn't?"

"I mean," Tony said hesitatingly, "that I won't tell Benny. That sort of feeling."

"I see," he said, troubled.

"It's just driving up to town with you. And Ruth thought nothing of our driving up from Santa Barbara!" the girl argued.

"Yes, but it's different now," Larry reminded her honestly, in a tone that brought the color suddenly to her face. "But we won't see each other much, from now on. I go to Los Angeles on Wednesday night."

"And Cliff is to be married five weeks from yesterday, and after that—yes, then I'll go East," Tony said.

"Life is ahead of you, my dear. With your beauty, your wit—the something that makes everybody love you, that makes you Tony."

"Don't talk that way," the girl interrupted steadily.

"You're very beautiful in that white outfit, Tony."

"If you think I am!"

"I'll stop at the hotel, anyway, at nine-thirty tonight."

Her blue eyes met his for the fraction of a second; there was time for no more. They scaled a slippery rise of black wet rocks; Joe reached down a bracing hand to Tony; they were at the pool.

CHAPTER XXI

Mysterious movement, mysterious colors pulsed in it as they all looked down. Ribbons of seaweed in every shade of purple, metallic blue, scarlet, cream color, shell pink, waved in the green clear water. Starfish and baby crabs, flowerlike anemones, violet prickly sea urchins and huddled colonies of blue-black mussel shells were all there, set in a Botticelli background of tiny sea flowers, starry sea blossoms and polished bits of rock.

When they all walked slowly back across their own earlier footsteps in the wet sand the tide was going down, and a rich blanket of fog was pushing in against the lazy western sunset. Stiffly, wearily, they went to the cliff, and stood for a moment to look at the wide panorama of the glittering sea, and packed themselves into the car.

"Where to, Tony?"

"Brenda's, please, Joe."

"Tony," said Ruth, "we all drive up Tuesday. Could you stay?"

"Ruth, I'd love it. But I'm going back with the Brewers tonight; they pick me up at the hotel at five. I've got to turn in a column tonight."

"Come up and have dinner with us Wednesday night, Tony, and play bridge," Ruth said, at Brenda's doorway. "Joe's coming in, Larry'll be in Los Angeles."

"Wednesday? I think I could."

In a great rocker on the porch, inconspicuous behind a pillar, Tony watched the pleasant intermingling streams of hotel life come and go. Her suitcase was at her feet. The Brewers came, and she went down and talked to them; came back to her secluded chair. The die was cast now.

At six o'clock the wide drive, the porches and steps of the hotel were deserted; everyone was dressing for dinner.

"I Am Afraid You Will," He Said in a Hard Voice.

corrected herself. "I could like it," she said. "I'd tile the floor of the big room and put a big terrace off toward the north."

"Well, blast it, those are just the things I want you to tell me!" Joe protested. They were down on the damp sand now, among the big rocks; there was shade here from the headland that ran out to sea, on the south; the waves were creaming in in lazy interlocking circles.

"Joe, Joe, Joe darling," Mrs. Polhemus murmured, established in her scarlet stripes and scarlet hat against a great boulder, her strange black eyes staring far out to sea, "it's too beautiful. Your house—yes, it could be improved in minor details. But this—is this matchless!"

"We-e-e, this is what I bought, after all!" Joe reminded her, well pleased.

The rotund buns were toasted; the coffee poured like smoking amber into the white tin cups; the chops were sizzling in the last stage of perfection when there was a hall from the cliff. The four women and Joe looked up. It was Larry.

Tony, her hands occupied with her chop and her cup, merely waved at him as he came down the rocky stairway; she could wait, now.

"I got homesick for all of you, driving in last night, so I telephoned Arnoldson, and we had our talk at breakfast this morning, and I started right off again! I thought I'd like to have a look at Joe's housewarming, and then maybe we could all have dinner at the lodge tonight. But I've got to turn in early and get an early start in the cool of the day tomorrow. Or maybe I'll go up tonight."

The conversation was happy, desultory. They were all relaxed into comfortable positions; the food was good. "What's that man out there doing?"

"Abalone fishing. They send them up to San Francisco."

"Are they any good?" asked Caroline.

"Only," Tony answered, "when they have garlic and tomatoes and onions and eggs and cracker crumbs to disguise them. They're like clams. You have to have everything else to go with them."

"Clams and hot butter. Just hot butter," Joe rhapsodized. "Clams need nothing more."

"Ugh!" Tony ejaculated, shuddering. "I gather you don't like clams." Larry said. It was the first time he had spoken to her. The girl raised lazy lashes and glanced at him; looked away again to sea. Caroline Polhemus' swift look went from one to the other; her forehead wrinkled faintly.

Presently Tony and Larry had their moment. It came when Ruth, Joe, Borah Loses Ohio Primary—House Defeats Frazier-Lemke Inflation Bill—Tugwell's Report on His Resettlement Administration.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SENATOR WILLIAM BORAH banked heavily on success in the Ohio Presidential preference primary, but the Republicans of that state turned him down decisively in favor of their "favorite son," Robert A. Taft, son of the late President Taft.

of the Department of Agriculture would be transferred to his department. But Secretary Wallace objected strenuously, and lately so much has been taken out of Mr. Ickes' hands that Senator Lewis cut his bill to the one paragraph, making the change of title and leaving off "and works."

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATOR HARRY HOPKINS issued an order to state WPA directors instructing them not to employ armed guards, not to spy on workers and not to blacklist workers who organize.

OPPOSITION in the senate finance committee to the corporate profits tax in the administration's $803,000,000 revenue bill was so strong that both Democrats and Republicans sought for some compromise.

INDENBURG, the immense dirigible, carrying 107 persons, mail and freight, made the flight from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst, N. J., in 61 hours and 57 minutes and was welcomed by thousands of Americans.

RESPONDING to a senate resolution, Rexford Tugwell made a report on the activities of the resettlement administration of which he is the head.

PARK TRAMMELL, veteran United States soldier from Florida and a staunch supporter of all New Deal measures, died in Washington of a cerebral hemorrhage which followed an attack of influenza.

SOME two thousand delegates were present when the annual convention of the American Red Cross was opened in Chicago by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the national chairman.

SECRETARY ICKES' supporters were easily defeated by the Harry Hopkins forces in the house fight as to whether the Public Works administration should share in the handling of next year's relief funds.

BECAUSE the League of Nations council would not immediately recognize Italy's annexation of Ethiopia and the creation of the new Roman empire, Premier Mussolini recalled his representatives from Geneva.

NEWTON D. BAKER and Dean Acheson, counsel, for five power companies that are trying to block the government's municipal power program, met with defeat in the District of Columbia Supreme court when they sought to subpoena correspondence between President Roosevelt and Secretary Ickes.

IF THE house concurs in senate action, the title of Harold L. Ickes will be changed from secretary of the interior to secretary of conservation.

MARIAM told the council the greater part of the country west of Addis Ababa remains free and independent and continues to defend itself.

MUSTAPHA NAHAS PASHA, leader of the Wafd or Nationalist party in Egypt, has become premier and formed a new government in which he holds also the post of minister of the interior.

TALL TALES

As Told to: FRANK E. HAGAN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

TREMENDOUS TURNIP THINGS are done in a big way, down in the Ozarks.

That's what Len B. Mitchell learned on his journey to Hot Springs, Ark. Mitchell stayed overnight in the cabin of a hospitable mountaineer, and after supper had been disposed of and the sound dogs fed, he and his host discussed life's problems.

"I cleared four square acres here when I moved in, built this cabin and an eight-foot fence from the timber," recited the mountaineer.

"Then I planted the land to corn that wouldn't grow. Next I tried a field of turnips. The only turnip that came up was exactly in the center of my cleared ground but the growing it did, more'n made up for the failure of the rest of the crop.

"That turnip grew and grew and nothing would stop it. I just wish those turnips that didn't come up could have seen it. My, but they'd been ashamed.

"Well sir, before I could harvest that lusty vegetable it got so big it pushed down my eight-foot fence on all four sides."

On his return home, Mitch stopped again at the cabin. And he was questioned by the mountaineer.

"What's going on in the city?" asked that worthy. "Any manufacturing?"

"Yes," answered Mitch, "where I went they are building the largest kettle ever known. It's 440 feet across and 79 feet high."

"What in tarnation will they use it for?" asked the Ozarkian.

"They'll cook your turnip in it," replied Mitchell.

THE DEFEATED BEAR BRIEF as the deer hunting season is, hundreds of city dwellers invade the Wisconsin woods every fall.

Two of them established a camp consisting of cabin, supply of canned food and condiments, and a nearby spring for drinking purposes.

One day, and this is vouchered for by August C. Hennig, American Legion leader in Illinois, the hunters returned to camp and found they had left the door of the cabin open.

Bear tracks were sprinkled liberally outside and within the cabin signs of an invasion were unmistakable. Canned goods weren't disturbed but a two-pound bag of dried apples and a six-pound sack of salt were missing.

The hunters sped immediately to the spring and found the bear had knelt there for a long draft to wash down his salty luncheon.

Following the trail again, the hunters traveled only 200 yards when they discovered Mr. Bruin, growling helplessly and swollen to immoderate proportions. The long drink had made the dried apples swell and the bear's expanding stomach had grown larger and larger until finally his feet no longer touched the ground.

The four-cornered balloon was at once dispatched by the nincompoops. Before securing the pelt, one of them, who was musically inclined, deflated the bear by inserting a reed instrument in its side and practicing the finger-movement for such tunes as "Over the Waves," as the boat subsided.

When the bear was completely deflated the hunter had become recognized as an accomplished musician.

PALE AS PASTE HIS personal physician, Doctor Ramsey, once concocted a sticking substance of unparalleled strength, asserts Harry W. Ewert of the Chicago Board of Trade weighing department.

"Doc kept the ingredients of his great invention secret," Ewert says. "But I can tell you it was composed partly of a mixture of parboiled fish-bones, mustard plasters and worn out Scotch pocketbooks.

"My friend's only difficulty was in obtaining capital necessary for its manufacture in bulk. So he decided to demonstrate its holding qualities.

"The doctor wheeled out his small stunt plane one day and hired an aviator to fly it. He dropped a small line, approximately the dimensions of a human hair, from the plane and grabbed hold of it. Then he clung tight while the aviator made a perfect takeoff.

"Doctor Ramsey rode through the air with the greatest of ease for more than two hours, dangling from the hairline, which of course, was fastened to the plane by the sticking liquid.

"When they alighted it was necessary to bury away three and three-quarter inches of the plane's surface with an acetylene torch in order to detach the hair.

"The doc was pale as paste after his adventure but the demonstration proved a boon to everyone, including the manufacturer who sold doc a new plane."

TRANSATLANTIC AIR SERVICE BEGINS

Hindenburg Will Make Crossings Regularly; Schedules Are Also Planned for Heavier-Than-Air Flying Ships.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

Biggest news in the New York newspapers the first Sunday in May was not on page one. It was not even in a news story. It was an advertisement buried way back in the travel section of the first.

What the ad said: "Travel Event of 1936. Travel by Air in 2 1/2 Days by the World's Greatest Airship, 'Hindenburg' of the German Zeppelin Company."

St. Louis, N. J., to Frankfurt, Germany. Staterooms with running water. Spacious dining room. Smoking room. Cabin room. 800, including 100 for children.

regularly and so often from Friedrichshafen and Pernambuco, Brazil, that no one even notices its comings and goings any more.

Mariners have long considered the weather of the North Atlantic something to be feared, and they are borne out by the New York weather bureau, whose chief, Dr. James H. Kimball, made surveys of January flying weather over the China Clipper's route in the Pacific and the route which will be followed by the German planes across the Atlantic. He laid out both routes in 12 degree squares; it was learned that the mildest square in the Atlantic route was twice as stormy as the roughest square on the Pacific.

"Can't Improve the Weather"

Doctor Kimball pointed out that the weather had always been like this over older, safer one. It is certain that the most important developments in transatlantic air travel will come from the heavier, faster craft.

Nevertheless, the dirigible will retain a grandeur that can be easily understood. Anyone who has seen the Graf, the Los Angeles or the Hindenburg knows that the zeppelin compares with the airplane as a giant ocean liner compares with a cabin speedboat; the one is ponderous and majestic, the other is sleek and swift.

The Hindenburg on her maiden American voyage carried 107 persons, of whom 51 were passengers. The passengers found all the comforts of a first class hotel, according to the account of James McVittie, Chicagoan who made the trip and had had his reservation in since 1931. There was room for dancing, parlor games and luxurious dining. There was a fine bar. There were berths as comfortable as you would find in a pullman car. There was even a radio broadcast of music and speeches from the spacious salon of the ship.

In an address from the ship as it sped across the sea, Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran of airship navigation who accompanied Capt. Ernest Lehmann as special adviser, told of the wonders experienced by those on board.

"America is ahead of us," he said. "About three hours from now we will be approaching Nantucket lightship and tomorrow morning before sunrise we will have left Sandy Hook behind. Our trip from coast to coast will have lasted just about fifty hours."

Describes Inspiring Day "I want to greet you all in just these few words. This present trip is like a dream to me."

Earlier in the day we had a marvelous piano concert. Now our passengers have gathered in the social hall and smoking room, having a grand time. All this at a speed of ninety miles an hour and an altitude of 1,000 feet above the clouds.

"Many passengers told me today all this seems unreal. How long will it be until all this will have become just the ordinary thing, that will cause fear to nobody, and will hardly be mentioned in the newspapers?"

"You know, this trip and those that are to follow are only experimental. We want to be on safe ground before proceeding to the inauguration of regular airship travel across the Atlantic. The beginning is indeed encouraging. I think we could learn a lot during this trip, and I am convinced that in due course we shall gather enough experience that will enable us to cross even in unfavorable weather conditions, not employing too much time."

"The interest is tremendous..." Sir Hubert Wilkins, the noted explorer, who, with his wife, was a passenger on the Hindenburg, expressed an opinion that the airship was the more desirable mode of travel for journeys of more than 15 hours over the water.

Zep May Replace Liner "There is no doubt in my mind," was the way Sir Hubert put it, "that if airships were built in such numbers as to bring down the cost of construction, they could be operated on a higher profit basis than the big sea-going liners of today."

The primary purpose of the Hindenburg's crossings this summer will be to attract financial backing for a combined German-American transatlantic passenger service, Doctor Eckener admitted.

The United States had cooled off to almost zero in its sympathies toward airships as a result of the Akron and Macon disasters, but it is hoped that the new "zeps" making regular trips will win back America's confidence. There was a scheme in 1929 to back such an air service.

this part of the ocean and would likely continue to be.

"Weather gets no better," he said in his report. "You can improve airplanes and motors, but you cannot improve the weather. With the help of radio, however, and a better knowledge of existing conditions, it is possible to outwit the weather. That is the way the Atlantic has got to be flown—by outwitting the weather."

Zeppelins are able to outwit the weather by flying around the storms. This is because of their greater cruising range and the fact that, if worst comes to worst and they run out of fuel, they at least can remain in the air as a free balloon for some time. The fact that all that needs to be done to keep the ship above the water if the motors stop is to let out a little ballast gives the "zeps" a safety advantage over the airplane on the long inter-continental trips.

But improvement in ships and motors has come quickly in the past few years and today the heavier-than-air ships are much safer than they were even two or three years ago. They have increased in range and efficiency; they now have the added advantage of the controllable-pitch propeller, which gives them a sort of "gear shift" comparable to the automobile, and radio and the robot pilot have removed much of the hazards and rigors of navigating them.

An airplane depends upon sustained forward speed to keep it aloft, and if the motor stops for a fraction of a second (which means that if any one of thousands of delicate parts goes wrong, even with the wear and vibration of many hours of flying through all kinds of weather at high speed) it must land.

"Zep" Is Grand Sight But the zeppelin only flies 60 to 90 miles an hour, normally, and the airplane flies two or three times that fast. Since mankind has never yet refused a new, faster mode of travel for an ice which would have been extended across the Pacific as well as the Atlantic, but the depression wiped it out.

Meanwhile, America may perhaps look forward to having Doctor Eckener's expert advice in any future plans for lighter-than-air craft. It was rumored in the press that the venerable pioneer for refusing to allow the Hindenburg to be used for political ballyhoo, would take a job in this country.

Uncanny Decorations Among the most uncanny decorations are those of the grotesque animals painted on the sides of elephants' heads during festivals in India. They are drawn in such manner that the one visible eye of the painted animal is represented by the elephant which, in moving, gives the painting a life-like effect.—Collier's Weekly.

Ground ear corn goes well with alfalfa pasture for fattening steers. It reduces the danger of bloat. In tests at the University of Illinois the steers fed corn-and-cob meal on alfalfa pasture bloated less, gained as fast and made somewhat cheaper gains than those getting shelled corn on similar pasture. With bluegrass pasture the shelled corn proved superior to ground ear corn in both rate and economy of gains.

Crops Classified by Effect on Soil

National Farm Program Lists Them All in Three Groups.

By L. R. SIMONS, Director of Extension, U. S. Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

Crops are classified in three ways to determine bases and rates of payment under the national soil conservation program. These are soil-depleting, soil-conserving, and soil-building crops.

Classified as soil-depleting are the crops that take plant food out of the soil or leave the land exposed to severe erosion. The soil-conserving crops do not necessarily add fertility to the land, but hold the soil in place and help to maintain plant food in the soil. The soil-building crops are those which, when used in certain ways as when plowed under as green manure, definitely add to the fertility of the soil.

Furthermore, says the United States Department of Agriculture, two classes of payments are provided. The first is called a soil-conserving or diversion payment and is made for substituting soil-conserving and soil-building crops on soil-depleting "base" acres. The maximum acreage on which this payment is made is 15 per cent of the soil-depleting base acreage on a farm in New York state. The rate of payment for the entire country is $10 an acre, but varies according to the productivity of the land. It may be slightly larger or slightly less in parts of New York state.

The second type of payment is called a soil-building one and is made for planting soil-building crops on land which has produced at least one harvest crop, other than wild hay, since January 1, 1930, or for approved soil-building practices on crop land or pasture. These payments will be made at rates and for practices recommended by the state agricultural conservation committee and approved by the secretary of agriculture.

Work Animals Need a Balanced Ration

For economy and efficiency, the horse and mule are hard to beat. Good work animals supply a highly satisfactory form of pulling power for farm implements and machinery, and they utilize feed crops that can be grown at home. But to get the best service out of work stock, care must be exercised to feed it properly.

Corn, oats, and barley are about equal in feeding value, but corn is a little cheaper, usually, for feeding mature animals. Barley should be crushed or ground before feeding. A great variety of other crops are suitable for horse or mule feed. For each grower, the best type to feed is that grown on his own farm. Professor Ruffner of North Carolina State college stated:

Among the hays and roughages fed with good results are: Lespedeza, timothy, clover, corn stover, soybean, cowpea, alfalfa, and peanut. When timothy and ear corn are fed, it is well to include a quart of wheat bran each day to balance the diet.

Animals at work need 2 to 2 1/2 pounds of feed, dry roughage and concentrates combined, for each 100 pounds of live weight. A 1,000-pound mule should receive 10 pounds of hay and 10 pounds of grain.

When animals have plenty of good hay or pasture, and are not working, the grain feed may be cut in half.

Drying Grass

A number of experiments in the United States have shown that artificially dried grass has a higher feeding value than grass which was exposed to inclement weather in the hay-making process. Now comes a report from England that hay-making as practiced there also is a wasteful process. In which losses of some 25 per cent occur, and that even hay made under favorable natural conditions from mature grass is of comparatively low feeding quality. The English investigations have shown that grass cut young—that is, from five to eight inches high—and dried by hot air or other gases, compressed and stored, will retain practically unimpaired the qualities it possessed as fresh grass.—Wallace's Farmer.

Down on the Farm

Two tomatoes, one on top of the other, are being grown in Scotland.

Women on farms in this country work an average of 64 hours each week, and many of them work as high as 77 hours.

Strawberries are one of the few fruit crops from which the grower may obtain a return on his investment in a comparatively short time.

A new role is seen for the "plant doctor" in coming years, that of forecasting severity of crop diseases for the next growing season.

In using orchard implements care must be taken to prevent injury to the trees.

A rancher in Maui island, Hawaii, reports having 1,000 cattle on cactus without water for four months. Succulent leaves, and dew on the leaves supplied all the "drinks."

A new sweet corn for the South, developed in Texas, is so able to resist drought that a fair crop of roasting ears was reported if no rain fell from planting to harvest.

Ground ear corn goes well with alfalfa pasture for fattening steers. It reduces the danger of bloat. In tests at the University of Illinois the steers fed corn-and-cob meal on alfalfa pasture bloated less, gained as fast and made somewhat cheaper gains than those getting shelled corn on similar pasture. With bluegrass pasture the shelled corn proved superior to ground ear corn in both rate and economy of gains.

HOW ARE YOU TODAY

DR. JAMES W. BARTON Talks About

How "Extras" Add Weight

"SOME people dislike to be fat because they regard the extra weight as a physical handicap, others consider a slender figure more graceful, and still others realize that excessive body weight is a menace to health. But whatever the objections to being fat, correct body weight is now widely recognized as an essential to enduring health and a long life."

I am quoting from "Diet and Like It" by Mabel E. Baldwin, Ph. D. Doctor Baldwin states further, "If one is overweight and decides to reduce, the most obvious need is for a diet that will cause loss in weight. But for the welfare of the individual it is also necessary that the diet be one that will maintain the body in a state of excellent health and vigor while the loss in weight takes place." Of course the thought in the above statement is that if food is reduced weight must necessarily be reduced, but if the food is reduced too rapidly, or if certain vital foodstuffs are reduced ill health or worse may follow.

The body needs only simple foods but yet there must be a great variety of these foods—vitamins; minerals—lime, iron, phosphorus, magnesium, iodine; animal proteins—eggs, fish, meat; vegetable proteins—beans, peas; carbohydrates or starch foods—sugar, bread; and fats—butter, cream. And each of these foods must be present in suitable amounts.

Size of Meal No Guide "Nor does the size of a meal give the correct idea of how much actual fuel or food value there is being eaten, for a pound of shelled almonds is equivalent to nearly thirty pounds of tomatoes and so neither the weight nor the bulk of the meal gives any idea of how much fat it will produce."

"Food values are measured in calories. High calorie foods are those of which only a small amount is needed to supply a large number of calories such as olive oil and other fats, sugar and confectionery."

Lettuce is a low calorie food as are three medium-sized heads of lettuce equal in value only one tablespoon of olive oil. High calorie foods such as fats, flour, and sugar, contain little or no water whereas most fruits and vegetables, low calorie foods, are three-fourths or more water. "A lunch of a cup of soup, lettuce, a tomato, a small slice of whole-wheat bread, and a tangerine—a small orange, will weigh about a pound and a quarter. Another lunch consisting of a pork chop, two fried sweet potatoes, a slice of white bread, and a piece of chocolate cake of ordinary size will also weigh a pound and a quarter but will furnish more than three times as many calories."

Desserts Add Pounds High calorie foods are less bulky than low calorie foods, which is the reason that many people have a greater tendency to eat too much of the high-calorie foods than of the low-calorie foods. Also most of the foods that are eaten between meals or after the food eaten at meal-times is already sufficient, are high-calorie foods. "A man eats a sufficient amount of food for his energy requirements for the day by the time he reaches the dessert course at dinner, and then eats a piece of cake. This 'surplus' or unneeded amount of food will yield 200 to 300 calories and will increase the body weight by one ounce. Or, a woman obtains from her usual three meals a day a sufficient amount of energy to meet her needs and eats during the afternoon a dish of ice cream, several nuts, or a few pieces of candy. She will obtain from them 200 to 300 calories, and she will, likewise, increase her weight by one ounce."

Suppose either of these people indulges to this extent only once every four days; by the end of a year the increase in weight will still have reached five or six pounds."

With the above simple statements of fact by Doctor Baldwin it can readily be seen how easy it is to acquire many pounds of fat, without being what is considered a "big" eater.

It is the little "extras" of the high calorie foods that put on the excess fat, very gradually it is true, but nevertheless they put it on.

Indigestion in Children Mothers are often at a loss to understand why their youngsters sometimes lose their appetite, may have a headache, and may have vomiting spells.

This condition is sometimes called acidosis. As these attacks occur from time to time they are sometimes called "cyclical" vomiting attacks, as they appear to come in cycles.

It has been suspected that it may be one, or more than one, article of food that causes these attacks, but making skin tests and actually testing out certain foods has proved of no assistance in finding the cause of these attacks.

Dr. K. Tallerman in the British Medical Journal thinks that these attacks are much like or related in some way to migraine—one-sided headache—and he therefore recommends that the fat foods be cut down in the diet.

Spanish Heroine The maid of Saragossa was a heroine of Spanish history named Augustina. In the siege of Saragossa by the forces of Napoleon in 1808-09 Augustina's lover was slain. She took his place in the artillery and served with great heroism.

Divided Skirt and Shorts Combination That Equips the Young Lady for Sports

PATTERN NO. 1875-B

You know yourself that half the enjoyment of any sport is spoiled if you aren't correctly dressed, and really there's no excuse for not being equipped for any active sport when a model such as illustrated is so easy and inexpensive to make.

The divided skirt is suitable for golf, tennis, bicycling, riding and hiking. It assures plenty of room and comfort, buttons on the side and supports the most youthful blouse. Note the sports pocket, Peter Pan collar, raglan sleeve and dainty feminine bow.

Instead of the divided skirt, you may have shorts if you prefer, for the pattern is perforated at just the proper length. Notice the small sketch.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1875-B is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 16 (34) requires 4 1/2 yards of 35 inch fabric. For shorts only, 3 1/2 yards is required. Send 15 cents for the pattern.

Holland Tunnel Engineers Didn't Consider Esmeralda

Perhaps it was due to an oversight by the engineers who designed the Holland tunnel, under the Hudson river in New York city, but at any rate Esmeralda, a circus giraffe, just couldn't be squeezed through recently. Esmeralda was on a truck and the driver realized the grave danger of decapitation just in time.

Someone suggested slipping Esmeralda in sideways, but the truck wasn't large enough to hold her length. The problem was heatedly debated for some time. Finally the George Washington bridge was suggested and tried, and Esmeralda arrived safely at the circus grounds.

AMAZING NEW STOVE USES 96% AIR-4% FUEL

Housewives Everywhere Now Can Enjoy Modern Gas-Cooking Service At Low Cost, Thanks to W. C. Coleman's Invention

Utilizing the principle of carburation used in present day automobile engines, W. C. Coleman, noted inventor and pioneer manufacturer of gas-pressure appliances, has invented an amazing new cooking stove that makes its own gas from ordinary lead-free gasoline.

An ingenious device converts liquid fuel into vapor gas—then mixes it with fresh, live air—so that the fuel, when it reaches the burner, is actually about 96% air and 4% vapor gas. This remarkable invention has effected fuel-saving economies which, combined with the heating efficiency of the Coleman patented Band-A-Blu Burners, makes the new Coleman Safety Range cheaper to use than wood, coal or kerosene.

Housewives everywhere express appreciation for the convenience, safety, economy and beauty of a stove which provides cooking equaling that of the finest city gas range.

Readers of this paper wishing full information about these wonderful Coleman Ranges will receive beautifully illustrated literature and a valuable stove check chart by addressing a postcard to Mr. W. C. Coleman, Dept. WU-237, Wichita, Kansas.—Adv.

Habits Live

A MIE*, the philosopher, was never wiser than when he said: "habits count for more than maxims, because habit is a living maxim, become flesh and instinct. To reform one's maxims is nothing; it is but to change the title of the book. To learn new habits is everything, for it is to reach the substance of life. Life is but a tissue of habits." Each good habit we weave in our teens means a better and happier life to its very end.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Weekly Letter of Happenings at the Seat of Government by Our Congressman
Michael K. Reilly

HOUSE PASSES NAVY BILL

The present week the House passed the Navy Bill which carries an appropriation of about $500,000,000. This bill as it passed the House provides for the Government building up to the naval quota.

There is a great deal of controversy between the so-called "big navy" people and the "small navy" people. There is no difference at all between the general views of our citizens as to evils of war and the desirability of doing away with future wars, but the big point of controversy is just what is the best method for bringing about an era of no wars, and prior to that time of bringing about world disarmament. There is no question at all but that the world today particularly in these distressed economic times, is suffering from tremendous war expenditures, squandered by all of the nations of the world in keeping up their respective war equipment, so to speak.

The policy of the present administration and of the past administration is based on the belief that the best way to exercise our influence, in particular as regards the reduction of naval armaments, is to build up to the international quota allowed to the big nations. For several years our country tried to bring about world disarmament, as far as naval armament was concerned, by example but it was found that we got nowhere in our attempt to bring about naval disarmament through a refusal on our part to build up to the international treaty quota.

Personally, the writer is not very much enamored with a large naval building program. He would much prefer to see a part of the sum devoted to the building up of our air service. The history of the Italo-Ethiopian contest shows that the Italian victory was due largely to the work of the so-called "battle air craft" and it would appear that in the future we can protect our country from invasion and, in fact, will have to protect our country from invasion through the power of our air fleets.

The House also passed this week the conference report on the State, Navy and Commerce Department appropriation bill.

The House has under consideration today, Friday, the first Deficiency Appropriation Bill for the fiscal year, 1936. There are two kinds of appropriation bills passed by Congress: what is known as the regular appropriation bill that is supposed to carry the budget allowances and the House and Senate allowances for the operation of the different Departments of the Government for the fiscal year. But, it frequently happens that some of these Departments over-spend their allowances and near the end of the fiscal year, and the present fiscal year will end July 1, 1936, it is necessary for Congress to bring in deficiency appropriation bills to take care of the excess expenditures of certain Governmental Departments over their regular annual appropriation.

The Deficiency Bill that is before the House today carries the sum of about two billion three hundred million dollars. However, only about 25 million of this sum is what might be classed as a deficiency appropriation. So, this first deficiency bill for 1936 is not really a deficiency appropriation bill but rather a supplemental appropriation bill.

Of course, the big item in this 1936 Deficiency Appropriation Bill is the appropriation for relief for 1937, of about one and a half billion dollars. There is also the appropriation or emergency conservation work, also in a measure relief work, for 1937 of about 250 million dollars, and the appropriation of about 200 million dollars for carrying on the Social Security program for 1937.

The fact of the matter is the large appropriations of the present session of Congress have been greatly augmented by the bonus payments to be made in June and the relief requirements for 1937.

The CCC camp situation would indicate that business is recovering, that is, there is an increase in its pay rolls. There is a deficiency in the CCC camps of about 30,000 boys, that is in keeping the quota up to about 350,000 boys, the authorized limit of the camps when established. It is stated that an average of 10,500 boys left the camps each month since July last, to accept private jobs.

Of course, the Government is doing all it can to encourage the young men in these camps to get into private work. The director of the Civilian Conservation Corps work, Mr. Robert Fechner, has stated that if he could get the business men of the country, or some of them, to accept his recent invitation to visit the camps that many of the CCC boys would be selected to go into the army of unskilled and semi-skilled employees.

There is no doubt at all but that the CCC camps have been of great benefit to the country, particularly to the hundreds of thousands of boys who have had an opportunity to spend some time in these institutions. It is altogether probable that when the country gets out of this depression the CCC camps will still be continued as a kind of clearing house and preparation course for hundreds of thousands of the young men of the country; in other words, to give them a certain preliminary training that will prepare them to fit position in the industrial world.

The House paused for an hour in its legislative work on Thursday of this week to pay tribute to the memory of the late Joseph G. Cannon, four times Speaker of the House of Representatives, and for 46 years a member of that body, and for more than half of that period a dominating influence in national legislation. The occasion was the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Mr. Cannon.

Joseph G. Cannon, or "Uncle Joe" as he was familiarly called in his later years, served longer in the House of Representatives than any other man. He did not serve continuously for 46 years because he was defeated two times, but with the exception of four years he remained a member of the House of Representatives for 46 years.

Democrats and Republicans both joined in paying tribute to Mr. Cannon, not only to Mr. Cannon as a man and a citizen and a member of the House, but also to him as a Speaker of the House. Mr. Cannon was the Speaker for eight years. Cannon served as Speaker of the House during the period when the Speaker, no matter whether he was a Democrat or a Republican, was more or less a Czar.

In the days of Joe Cannon the Speaker of the House of Representatives had more power than the President of the United States, or in fact, more than any other ruler in the world, as far as shaping legislation was concerned. In those days the Speaker appointed all Committee chairmen and all Committee members. It was said of Joe Cannon, and perhaps it was true of other speakers, Republican and Democrat, that no man was ever put on any Committee until Joe Cannon found out how the members stood on legislation that was likely to come before Congress.

However, the situation is now changed, and the Speaker has been shorn of much of his autocratic power. In the last year that Joe Cannon served as Speaker of the House the rules were changed so as to take away from the Speaker of the House the right to appoint Committee chairmen and members, and that power was lodged with a Committee of the House, The Ways and Means Committee performs that function for the Democratic side of the House, and a special Committee on Committees makes up the Republican list of committeemen. These Committees report to the House their work, and as a matter of course the House approves the appointments made by the Ways and Means Committee for the Democratic side of the House and the committee on Committees for the Republican side of the House.

In the opinion of the writer there is less partisanship in the House today than there was in 1913 when he first came to Congress. While the leaders of both parties are anxious to develop and gather political ammunition for their respective campaigns, on the whole there is more good fellowship, more cooperation and less of a tendency to obstruct the party in power than in former years.

I still have a few copies of the 1935 Agricultural Year Books on hand, and will be glad to send one to anyone sending in a request.

More Miles Per Gallon is Good More Miles Per Dollar is Better

Enthusiastic sales talk often begins and ends with gasoline mileage. Some salesmen would like you to believe it is the whole story of automobile economy. But drivers ought to know better.

Gasoline mileage is more of a telling point than an economy factor. Here are the big items that make the Ford an economical car:

More value for every dollar you pay.

Lower cost for repairs and service.

Long life, slow depreciation.

The up-keep cost of today's Ford is the lowest of any Ford ever built.

Quality means economy and the 1936 Ford V-8 gives you more real quality than any other low-priced car.

I'm SMART! are YOU?

I am just an average good citizen; one of the hundreds here in Kewaskum.

I own my home, a car, a radio, and my home is equipped with all the conveniences that I can afford.

Why do I think I am smart? Here is the reason. Everything that I buy is purchased right here in Kewaskum.

I get the most out of my money and in order to do this I cannot buy outside my home town.

You see, if I spend my money elsewhere it is gone—never to return. But if I buy locally my money goes from one of my neighbors to another, enriching in a small way each one through whose hands it passes and eventually some of it again finds its way back to me.

Then, too, buying locally means that the local merchants can prosper and by their leadership can help this town to grow.

I get more dollar-for-dollar value and the assurance that everything that I buy is as represented. If not I feel that my neighbor and dealer will see that I am satisfied.

I'm smart and you, too, should follow my motto.
