Anxiously Await Outcome of Struggle Between Right and Left Factions; May Change World History.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

ORDINARILY you can take a Spanish revolution as a Greek revolution, or you can let it alone. The general custom among the majority of observers in America in the past has been to let 'em alone.

In Greek revolutions the government changes hands between matrons and existing performances and, although whole navies are captured, no one ever gets hurt. The ordinary Spanish revolution is different. But because, in the past, the one distinguishing factor being that murder and not jobs then are present, but nobody gets hurt except Spaniards.

Ever since Spain lost her last American colonies some 30-odd years ago, revolution and rebellion have been rife in the sunny island. But because, in the past, the one distinguishing factor being that murder and not jobs then are present, but nobody gets hurt except Spaniards.

When the crisis after the World War came, the Spanish monarchy found itself unable to look after the welfare of its 23,000,000 subjects, who were finding it next to impossible to make a living. An attempt was made to right conditions in 1921 when Primo de Rivera was set up by the Rightist factions as dictator. It didn't work.

New Regime Fails

Ten years later the republic was voted in and King Alfonso XIII was on his sudden way out. Spanish citizens were free men. All the ills of the old times were to be forgotten. Their troubles were over.

But, alas, it didn't work out that way. Actually, the new government had been heralded a few months before its inception by a serious general strike and an uprising among the military forces. There was the world-wide depression to be reckoned with, and the fact that in Spain the currency was deflated, industry frozen and foreign markets for Spanish farmers hopelessly lost.

Primo de Rivera had been driven into exile by rising governmental debts and deficits. Political liberty was supposed to rectify all of these things. Of course it didn't.

When the republic was born 75 per cent of the population was dependent, directly or indirectly, upon agriculture, yet so evilly was it distributed that only one-tenth of the farm population could make a fair living from it.

Immense estates, relics of feudal days, held the really fertile land; the poor peasant was doomed to watch thousands upon thousands of acres of rich land carelessly, wastefully cultivated, or even thrown open to pasture, while he, burdened with heavy debts, had to work a tiny patch of poor land. The great hordes of landless farm-hands, working only half the year, and then at meager wages, were steadily growing.

Small private industries wallowed hopelessly in debt, while great monopolies were so entwined into the government that when there were losses, the taxpayers made them good, but when there were profits the stockholders got them all.

When the republic came into being there were countless and needless bureaus eating the substance of the treasury. A costly and over-large army, with many needlessly high-salaried officers noted for blundering and extravagant "colonial" adventures, was being kept. Unemployment, starvation wages and continued repression from the Right had concentrated the mass of poor industrial workers into a few large cities and had greatly increased their numbers.

Expected Drastic Changes

The people, rightly enough, expected drastic changes from the Men of the Republic. The economic theory of the Rightists, nominally result of hopeless conflict of policy. The Right, bewildered by conflicting policy, between socialism one minute and Fascism the next, froze credits, paralyzed industry and agriculture, and hired armed bands of men to annoy the Leftists and thus provoke the government. In the summer of 1932 it all came to a halt and the Right provoked a military revolt, but intervention of civilian troops on the part of the government quelled it.

Economic conditions failed to improve. There were strikes, riots and demonstrations. The Left was still in a bad way. The peasants led an uprising in 1933. So severely was it put down, the government began to lose the loyalty of the peasants and kindred classes. When later that year the Socialists were driven from the cabinet and the Right assumed what amounted to almost all the power, there were political scandals and months of continued unrest followed. In 1934 the Left revolted upon the calling of Gil Robles into the cabinet. This was nearly a successful revolution and was only quieted by the employment of the Spanish Foreign Legion and paid Moorish troops. Never before in Spanish history had such measures been necessary to protect the government. It was sufficient to instill more confidence and courage into the Left, and to incite the proletariat further against the government of the Right.

Accordingly the Left forced elections and swept the existing government from power. That was early this year. The same old struggle has been going on ever since—the power has not yet definitely come to one side or the other to permit a continuity of action.

But the new revolution, openly and unmistakably a civil war to the bitter end, will leave Spain at last completely Right or completely Left—completely Fascist or completely Socialist.

Americans Leave Spain

The efficiency of the State department and the foreign service has been strikingly demonstrated in the emergency precipitated by the revolution in Spain, which required the evacuation of Americans from a European country since the World War.

When the revolution broke, Ambassador Bowers was at his summer house at Fuenterabia, on the coast, five miles from San Sebastian, the Summer capital, where were stationed Messrs. Johnson and Schoellkopf. Cut off from communication by telephone with his Summer embassy and prevented by barricades and fighting from going to San Sebastian, Mr. Bowers was taken off by the cutter Cayuga and subsequently established his em-second in power in the republic and today represented by the rebelling Fascist generals, was that of repression, wage-reduction breaking-up of labor unions, and concentration camps for forced labor—all the principles of Fascism. The republic was to substitute higher wages, new and fairer distribution of land, government control of industry, resettlement and rehabilitation projects and a security program.

But the early republican government found itself torn between two loyalties. It attempted to steer a middle course, providing legislation only upon pressure from Right or Left and, naturally, leaving only a bassy on the vessel to cruise in Spanish waters so as to be of aid to Americans.

At the outset the situation in the Spanish capital was serious, with firing in the streets. The United States embassy stocked all the food it could get and stored water in large reservoirs for a siege. Then American nationals were directed to go to the embassy. A total of 160 went there, including Filipinos and Puerto Ricans. The embassy also received official requests to harbor nationals of Belgium, Sweden, Finland, Turkey, Chile, Panama, Cuba and Austria, and did so.

The Man Who-o-o'

Tales and Traditions from American Political History by FRANK E. HAGEN and ALMO SCOTT WATSON

A SPEECH OF NOMINATION

MOST of the reason for the title of these little stories—The Man Who—is supplied by the orators at political conventions who place the name of candidates in nomination.

Today from the loudspeakers come to most of us convincing talks, startlingly free of modesty, which extol the virtues of this favorite son or that one as his name is placed before convention delegates.

But the most successful of these nominating speeches occurred long before static was a household word. It was made in Chicago at the Republican convention of 1880 by James A. Garfield, and made honestly, in behalf of the nomination of John Sherman.

Its net result was that Sherman failed to win the nomination but Garfield succeeded. So that Garfield, later a martyred President, actually is the man who nominated himself.

Here is how it happened. President Hayes had pledged himself not to be a candidate. When the convention opened it was plain that great efforts would be made to nominate General Grant for a third term. James G. Blaine was a formidable candidate but Grant had been presented in a glowing burst of oratory from Roscoe Conkling, a bitter enemy of Blaine.

Garfield's speech in behalf of Sherman followed Conkling's effort. Instead of qualifying merely as an anti-climax it is described by those who were there as an outstanding oratorical triumph.

Grant, Blaine, Sherman, George F. Edmunds, Elihu B. Washburne and William Windom divided the votes until the thirty-fourth ballot. Then Garfield, whose speech still resounded in the minds of the delegates, received 17 votes.

He immediately took the floor and protested that he was there only in the interest of Sherman, whose candidacy he managed. He was ruled out of order. On the next ballot his strength had increased to 50 votes. On the thirty-sixth ballot, with 399 votes, he received the nomination which his epochal speech had asked for another man.

ORIGINAL STEAM-ROLLER

THE steam-roller may not cover ground with the speed of an antelope, but it gets there just the same.

First of the steam-roller tacticians to appear on the American political scene was the illustrious Marcus A. Hanna of Ohio, whose effective maneuverings behind the scenes still serve as an outstanding lesson in the political primer.

Steam-roller methods of attaining the objective, which in this case was the nomination of William McKinley for President, were first utilized by Mark Hanna in the Republican convention of 1886. And they succeeded.

Hanna had observed the amazing switch of delegates to James A. Garfield in 1880 when the latter was earnestly and honestly pleading the cause of John Sherman of Ohio. Sherman tried again in 1888, this time employing McKinley as his convention manager.

At one stage of the proceedings, the report spread that if McKinley would say the word the strength of the delegates would be thrown to him. He promptly put an end to the movement, his vigorous interruption of the roll-call, for he already had received a vote, ending with a demand that: "No delegate who would not cast reflection upon me shall cast a ballot for me."

Hanna was impressed, as were many others. From that day he moved his support from Sherman, who had been defeated three times, and began to groom McKinley for the presidency.

The opportunity came in 1896. When the convention met, only "regular" delegates were seated. The national committee o.k.'d them, one by one, by the vote of 35 to 15. And it just happened they all were McKinley men.

Newspaper reports of the times describe the proceedings as a farce. But at any rate they were successful for McKinley's principal opponent was courting the southern vote, many of whom could not prove an unbroken chain of party fealty, and therefore were not seated.

The result was an outstanding majority for McKinley on the first ballot, Thomas B. Reed of Maine running a tired second, flattened under the weight of the original steam-roller, today an accepted part of our national politics.

Little Things

Little things! Life and death, prosperity and ruin, happiness and misery, hang upon little things; they are like the lynch-pin to the wheel, on which depends the safety of the vehicle; they are like the rudder to the vast mass which it guides; like the slender nerves to the hollow muscles.

Polka Dot Tunic Frock

Even the slenderest of clothes allowances will permit including this clever tunic frock in your wardrobe. It's the very dress you've been wanting... so perfect for town, country, commuting and vacationing.

The tunic has a blue polka dot on white ground and flares partly from a tiny waist held by a patent belt. The lines conform to the current wide shoulder vogue while puffed sleeves push up at the shoulders a la Margot. You may wear the neckline open hav-

Right Leg Proved to Be the Wrong One

One day a customer asked an enterprising tailor if he had any trousers made especially for one-legged men:

"Certainly," replied the tailor. "Dress trousers?"

"Yes, the best you've got."

Hurrying into the rear of the store, the tailor snatched up a pair of trousers and snipped off a leg, and presented them to the customer.

"That's the sort of thing I want. What's the price?"

"Eight dollars, sir. The price is very reasonable."

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

When blankets are washed at home do not wring them dry. Instead hang them outdoors on the clothesline to dry.

Raisin sauce served on steamed or baked cottage puddings makes a good Winter dessert and one advised for children.

Custard pies should first be started to bake in a hot oven to set the crust, then the heat of the oven should be quickly reduced so that the custard may cook slowly.

After washing white silk stockings or gloves and rinsing them thoroughly be sure to hang them in the shade to dry. This will keep them white.

Left-over cauliflower can be dipped in cracker crumbs and egg and fried in deep fat and served for luncheon or supper.

Before heating milk in a sauce pan rinse the pan with water and the milk will not scorch so easily.

Brass door knockers exposed to the weather will stay bright and shiny if they are rubbed with paraffin before being polished.

When you have potatoes left over from a meal do not peel, as a cold potato keeps better with the jacket on. If peeled, it dries on the outside and must be trimmed before using, and that is wasteful. Also, an economical way to prepare mashed potatoes is to boil them in their jackets, peel and then mash.

You Guess It A young parson had taken for his text at his young men's class the parable of the Wise and Foolish Virgins. In conclusion, he said: "Now, you young men, which would you prefer? The five wise virgins with the light, or the five foolish virgins in the dark?" The vote was unanimous.

Up and Down The deep-sea diver was hard at work on the ocean bed. Suddenly an urgent voice came over the telephone which connected him with the boat above. "What's the matter, chum?" he asked. "Come up quickly," he heard. "The captain's just told me the bloomin' boat's sinking!"

THE DOCTOR HELPS JACK

Comic strip panel 1: Jack is worried about school work. The teacher says he's listless and inattentive. The boy doesn't seem to feel well and isn't sleeping well either. Scram up to your room why scribble around and listen to them criticize you? He has no appetite, either. Look at him—I think I'll take him to see the doctor tomorrow!

Comic strip panel 2: Jack says he needs a hot drink. The doctor says he needs a hot drink. The right kind of a hot drink is very beneficial—try giving him Postum—made with hot-milk! All right, doctor—I'll try it—if you think the change will help. Curses! I was afraid of this! Now I'll have to beat it!

Comic strip panel 3: Jack shows remarkable improvement lately. Mother says it's because he switched to Postum—made with hot-milk! Later, Jack says his work shows remarkable improvement lately. Mother says it's because he switched to Postum—made with hot-milk! Of course, children should never drink coffee. And many grown-ups, too, find that the caffeine in coffee disagrees with them. If you are bothered by headaches or indigestion or can't sleep soundly...try Postum for 30 days. Postum contains no caffeine. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. Try Postum. You may miss coffee at first, but after 30 days you'll love Postum for its own rich, satisfying flavor. It is easy to make, delicious, economical, and may prove a real help. ### Europe Watches Struggle

Yet what is important about this war is not which government, Right or Left, emerges victorious, the choice of the majority of people. It is the fact that there is a serious fight. This is a bloody and cruel war. Homes, theaters, hospitals have become ammunition centers and barracks. Snipers spit death out of store windows, cannon wheels near the surfaces of plains, the drone of bombers disturbs the calm of lashed Spanish skies.

Right and Left have taken arms against each other. All Europe watches. For years the continent had been a tinder box, awaiting a match to set it off. Crisis after crisis has been passed and another great war has been averted or postponed, sometimes ever so narrowly. May not this develop into the next of these great crises? What will France do if Italy sends aid to the Fascists? What will Germany do if Red Russia interferes on the other side?

The Spanish-American war may be arbitrarily taken as the real beginning of the political disintegration of Europe.

"From Denmark, we of Wisconsin have borrowed heavily in the development of our dairy industry. Our dairy testing program was in reality initiated by a Dane, Halmar Rabild, who began the great movement of herd improvement in a sister state. Wisconsin had the good judgment to borrow the program, and today we are really heading out upon a program which shall build and develop the dairy industry upon lines which shall give still greater assurance of efficiency in production."—C. L. Christensen, dean of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

Indications are at present that there will be an average tree seed crop this year, from a survey recently made. Though it is yet early to gather cones or seed, a mid-summer survey is made to determine what is available for collecting in the fall. The spruce cones ripen first, in early August, followed by pines in September and acorns and hardwood seed in late September and early October.

When we go to bed in pajamas, we are wearing the sort of clothing that is worn as ordinary daily dress by vast numbers of the natives of India. "Pejama" is the name in that country, and long ago British people in India found that this native style of clothing was best for night wear in hot climates. So they started to wear "pejamas," and when they came home to England they introduced the sleeping suits here, with the name slightly altered.—Pearson's Weekly.

FOR QUICK RELIEF USE DOCTORHEAT
Produces a Rich Flood of Soothing Infra-Red Heat That Penetrates
Relieves Many Forms of Pain or Muscular Spasms

You've probably had the occasion to apply heat for pain relief—body has. But the next time you feel an ache or aching pain, instead of fusing around with a hot water bottle, heating pad, water or hot towel—just plug in Doctorheat, relax and see how easily effective this new home lamp really is. Doctorheat produces a flood of infra-red radiation that penetrates deep into the tissues, congestion, soothes and invigorates.

Absolutely Safe! For treating numerous diseases, infections, rheumatism, neuralgia, muscular soreness, infra-red radiation produced by Doctorheat has been found by medical men to be highly beneficial as well as absolutely safe. As a matter of fact, you can rely on self to the comfortable warmth of Doctorheat for hours, with no burning, no peeling of the skin. And even an infant's tender skin is not harmed by soothing Doctorheat—so you know it's safe without any doubt.

High Quality! Doctorheat is a high quality lamp in every respect. It is carefully made and finished, worthy of any home surroundings. Operates from any convenient light socket—offers you the choice of handy table model or floor model. After using Doctorheat, you never give it up. Buy one now!

Without any obligation kindly give me free demonstration of Doctorheat.

McCormick-Deering Corn Binders

Save Time Cutting Corn

WHEN your corn is ready to cut, depend on the McCormick-Deering Corn Binder to do this heavy job for you, quickly. It has a long record of successful, reliable performance throughout the corn belt. It does the work of 5 to 7 men. The McCormick-Deering gets all the corn—even the leaning and down stalks. The throat spring pushes the corn over against the elevator fingers so that cutting and carrying to the binding mechanism is positive. The reliable McCormick knot-ter assures binding every bundle. Short corn is bound equally as well as tall corn, because the butt pan, which provides evenly butted bundles, has a wide range of adjustment. Clear, open sides permit easy removal of undergrowth. The shielded gear drive excludes trash and undergrowth and gives long life. A bundle loader can be furnished at additional cost. Let us show you these features that have made the McCormick-Deering the popular binder among corn growers.

SYNOPSIS

where Clancy was waiting beside a card table that Elkins had set up. I was grateful to have the work on the handkerchief, grateful to Mitchell for trying to range me on the side of the investigators.

There were three people, I thought, on whom suspicion might justifiably rest; there were the Prince and Princess Rancini and Letty Van Alstyn, but there was not a scrap of evidence against any of them.

No, there were four. I had to be honest with myself; I couldn't pretend. There was Alan Deck. And against him was all the evidence they had.

I wanted to see Deck. I wanted to talk with him. Not here, with Clancy at hand—yes, here, even though we could say nothing that mattered. If I could see him again, I thought I could find an answer to that worrying uncertainty in me.

The handkerchief was a difficult business. The handkerchief had been so thoroughly washed that I began to despair of uncertainty in my experiments. Not about the rust marks; those I did make sure of.

Then, in one of the corners, close under the fold of the hemstitched nap, I found traces of stain that yielded a blue reaction.

"That's blood," I said.

In the intervals of waiting and drying I walked up and down the gallery.

I found myself wishing to get at the records of these pictures to begin the real work for which I had come. For a few moments I forgot the night-mare of that murder. I grinned at the Magdalen, attributed to Titian, analogous to the one at Naples, and then I was caught by a lovely little Virgin whose suppliant, adoring curves and pure, poignant ecstasy made me yearn to prove her the creation of Angelico that she was labeled.

As my mind bit on these familiar realities my nerves steadied, and when I went down to the policeman to make my report I was feeling more like myself.

Alan Deck was with Monty Mitchell, and when he saw me he came forward quickly, with a "Good morning, accomplish!" in his mocking way. Monty said, "Find anything?" And they both came with me while I had my moment of impatience, making my report to Donahay.

I used all the words and technical terms that I thought he would not know but the main facts were clear—blood in one corner, and five marks of rust.

Donahay nodded, as if he had guessed it all the time, and I moved away with Deck. Mitchell stayed with the inspector. I remember seeing him turn the handkerchief about very slowly in his hands.

Deck said thoughtfully, "That blood rather disposes of the theory that the diamonds might have been put there by some one who just picked them up—afterwards."

And at my assent he said, "Well, that's that!" in a hard voice.

Grant now appeared before us, announcing that a buffet luncheon was being served in the dining-room. As I went to wash my stained fingers I saw Miss Van Alstyn in the hall ahead of me. As she paused at her door, opposite that closed door behind which Nora Harriden was lying, I saw the maid, Anson, stop her, holding something in her hand.

"Yes, I threw it away," I heard Miss Van Alstyn say. "It's broken—throw it out."

"It's so pretty," Anson murmured. "If you don't mind my keeping it—"

"As you like," said Miss Van Alstyn indifferently and disappeared into her room.

Out of an impulse of friendliness for that pretty Anson I turned and asked her what she had.

"It's for the hair, miss, only the comb is broken," she told me. "Maybe I could get another fixed on. It's so pretty—"

It was pretty—a sharp-pointed crescent about four or five inches long, glittering with bright brown stones. The comb, at right angles to the crescent, had been broken sharply off. I picked it up; it seemed a little large and too heavy for anywhere except the back of the head, above a froth of curls. It was of some solid brown metal and I thought another comb could easily be soldered on.

"It's worth it," I told Anson, and she said she had been afraid to carry it away without asking, for fear it had fallen in the basket by mistake.

I was reflecting that costume jewelry, to Miss Van Alstyn, was not worth repairing, and then, staring at those hard, pointed ends, that solid metal—

If a woman had a thing like this in her hands . . . if she struck out with it, furiously. . .

"When did you find this, Anson?"

Last night, she told me. When she had been arranging the room for the night.

"Were the broken pieces of the comb in the basket, too?"

"I did see some broken pieces. But they went with the trash. They couldn't have been fixed."

"With the trash? Where did the trash go?"

"Why, in the incinerator, Miss," she answered, eyes widening at my questions.

"And was the incinerator going?"

"Last night, miss? I couldn't say. I know it hasn't been going this morning for that policeman gave orders not to have anything burned."

I turned the crescent about. No sign of a blood film over any of its bright-ness—but blood could be superfluously washed off in running water. A blow with it, a jab with one of those viciously pointed ends, would have broken down the comb. . . . She might not have thought to wash off the pieces of the comb. . . . In imagination I saw Letty Van Al-styn snatching this crescent from her hair, striking out recklessly. . . . Anson was staring at me. I handed it back to her, saying something about my interest in limitations to excuse my absorption in it. . . . Letty Van Alstyn came out of her room, passing down to luncheon, and in the vague smile she averted over us I felt a sharpening of curiosity.

Scrubbing my stained fingers, brushing out my hair, I tried to fit the pieces together in this pattern. . . . Suppose Letty were guilty—how about that scene at the window? Well, that could have had nothing to do with the actual murder—it might have been Deck, or Rancini or Harriden for all his denials. . . .

Suppose it had been Harriden. Suppose he had gone on down to dinner, and Nora had been in bed, restful, hysterical, when Letty had dropped in, on her way down. Nora might have surmised that Letty had seen, pointing with his stick, and he told us of his swimming feats at Capri and his riding record at St. Moritz and of his shooting triumphs in Scotland.

For a time I was amused at this distraction; no one could have imagined that we three people, promading up and down those stately avenues, chatting of tournaments were three members of an isolated household darkened by death and shadowed by suspicion.

Mitchell said very little—he had small chance against the prince except through interruptions. But he created a diversion by suddenly tripping over a rug and emitting a succession of fervent damns as he hopped about distressfully. "It's this confounded ankle—strained it a year ago. May I borrow your stick?" he asked the prince.

I thought Rancini passed it over rather reluctantly. At the time I imagined he fancied it as part of his own costume. Mitchell leaned on it as he walked along with us, refusing to return to the house. "Be all right in a second."

Then Rancini began telling about his peace in Rome that he was doing over and about his efforts to collect the tapestries and furniture that he had previously sold. I gathered that he was doing all this with his wife's money.

It was when we returned to the house, and Mitchell was passing back the cane, declaring himself completely recovered, that he made a casual-sounding observation.

"This is one of those trick things, isn't it, prince? Isn't there a spring I feel here—?"

"But yes," said Rancini, without the slightest hesitation. "You press this—please take your hands away. I do it—I know this thing. So—like that. And out comes this little toy."

What came out was the point of a substantial looking knife, quite a stabbing tool. "Another press and a bayonet," said Rancini, laughing.

"Quite a toy," Mitchell commented, eyeing it quizzically.

"And not such a toy at that. In Rome now, the streets are safe, but in Paris, when one is late—in the quarters of a little milliner, perhaps—"

"With a jealous lover around the corner," Monty Mitchell suggested.

"Si, si!" Rancini laughed, then under his breath to me he murmured in swift Italian, "When the heart is empty one must pass the hours, and I strolled up at his smile and asked to see the knife again.

I looked hard at it. The sharp, strong point seemed bright, unstained.

CHAPTER VIII

Mitchell said very naturally, "A useful thing, that! A pity Nora Harriden didn't have one at hand when that fellow set on her."

Not a quiver of Rancini's face, as far as I could see. Perhaps the fact that there wasn't a quiver, that his voice was blandly expressionless meant something. Smoothly he agreed, "It might have made all the difference."

We were back in the house again, its walls shut upon us, closing us in to tension and uncertainty and the strain of our own thoughts.

Mitchell went off to Donahay, coming back just for a moment to report that no trace of the pendant had been found. When I went to Anson to get the crescent, with a little inaudible speech about my interest in imitation stones, she told me that Miss Van Alstyn had asked for it back, giving her instead a star of brilliants.

She was immensely pleased and I immensely puzzled.

Letty Van Alstyn had been indifferent to the broken ornament. Why the fate of that broken ornament. Why the impulsive, to find her but she wasn't in her room; my maid at last located her in the Keller sitting-room, with Mrs. Crane and the two Kellers, playing at bridge.

"I don't think they liked my barging in on them, and Miss Van Alstyn looked frankly wondering when I asked for the crescent. Yes, she had taken it back, she told me, her eyes reverting to the cards; she rather thought she'd get herself another one and so didn't want a duplicate about. Certainly I could look at it if I wished; it was somewhere in her room, she supposed vaguely. "Just ask Anson to find it." I closed the door upon her faintly breathed but perfectly audible, "Extraordinary."

But Anson could not find that crescent. She promised to bring it up to me when she did. "Maybe she locked it up with her jewels," she suggested.

Snake Bite Clots Blood

The fact that snake bites cause a clotting of the victim's blood has long been known through observation on animals bitten. As a result of many experiments it was found that the poison of some snakes of the same type the venom caused clotting in some cases—the reverse in others. Cobra poison, for example, did not clot the blood. But the snake poison that was likely to be of most use to sufferers from bleeding was provided by the deadly Russell's viper of India, a snake which annually takes an appalling toll of human life in that country.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

© Bill Syndicate—WNU Service.

Just outside my window I can hear a slight clicking every time the members of my household turn on the taps in their kitchens. That clicking reminds me constantly that water is expensive down here in this seaside cottage where I am spending a month.

By and by, when I close the cottage a man with a key will come along, unlock a meter and take its reading.

Then just before I am leaving he will hand me a slip of paper which will inform me what I owe him.

These boys on the Maine coast are careful, as they should be, that no summer dweller gets away without making matters square with that meter.

One becomes acutely aware of the necessity for economy as the little counting device in the meter clocks off the pints, quarts, gallons and barrels that the families around here use.

And as the little machines click out their information I become impressed with the fact that time has a value of which I have been thinking too lightly.

Why would it not be a good plan to meter one's time in the same way?

Every minute, every hour clicked its message in my ears, so that I would know just how much time I am using and just how much I am allowing to go to waste, it might be a good thing for my bank account—such as it is—and prompt me to put a check on the needless escape of the one thing with which we are all endowed while we live, namely, time. When one learns to budget that time to devote a part of it to work and a part of it to play, he is, or ought to be on the way to an intelligent control of life—which, as far as you and I are concerned, is the time allotted to us from our birth on to our disappearance from the planet.

It would help almost everybody to note now and then how the years are passing, what we are doing with them, and what we are getting out of them as they come and go. . . .

As the poet observes of the minutes, "we cannot strive to grasp them all," but we can grasp and hold many more than we do if we remember that every click of that meter means a second used or lost forever.

What our time allowance is we shall have no means of knowing. But we can if we are careful get more out of existence as it passes than we usually do.

So, when you hear that meter spinning in the cellar, or the clock ticking on the wall, you will realize that your life is being slowly measured out to you.

Keep as careful track of it as you are able to.

Get as much out of every working hour—and every playing hour as it is possible, and when it is all over you will know that you have made the best possible use of a life which you might, by heedlessness, have wantonly squandered.

Famous Mutiny

The most famous mutiny in maritime history broke out in 1797. Mutineers led by Fletcher Christian rebelled against the discipline of Lieutenant William Bligh and set the commander and 18 men adrift in a small boat in which they made a remarkable voyage of safety.

The Hollywood movie version makes it appear Bligh's official cruelty was extraordinary in the British navy and that the mutiny caused whipping of sailors to be ended. It wasn't extraordinary, and sailors continued to be lashed for another 100 years.

It wasn't Bligh's cruelty, but the regret of the men at leaving their paradise in Tahiti, that caused the mutiny. The average age of the 23 mutineers was twenty-six. — Philadelphia Inquirer.

Our Country

We cannot honor our country with too deep a reverence; we cannot love her with an affection too pure and fervent; we cannot serve her with an energy of purpose or a faithfulness of zeal too steadfast and ardent.

OLD IDEAS ABOUT LIGHT AND SEEING ARE DISPROVED

Scientific research has exploded and outmoded many ideas about eyes and seeing, which are important in our everyday lives.

For example, seeing is not done with the eyes alone. Seeing is a partnership between our eyes and light. Be the light ever so bright—we cannot see without eyes. And though our eyes may be perfect, we cannot see without light.

And, contrary to general opinion, some eyes require more light than others. Children and old people need more light than average adults to prevent eyestrain.

The light that is good enough for one task is not necessarily good enough for another. Sewing and studying require more light than reading a well-printed novel.

One bright light for your reading or work is not enough. Light must be diffused about the room so that sharp contrasts between light and shadow do not cause the eyes to adjust themselves repeatedly, resulting in eyestrain.

The eyesight of the average person is not exceptionally good. Here are the facts: One school child in every five, forty college prisms over fifty years of age have defective vision.

Science also says, homes with electricity are not necessarily well lighted, neither are homes without electricity necessarily lighted poorly. The lighting in many homes with electricity can be improved by increasing the sizes of bulbs, diffusing the light and fitting lamps with light-colored shades. For homes without electricity, there are modern gasoline and kerosene pressure mantle lamps that supply light which is the nearest like daylight of any artificial light.

First Ban on Sports

Excavations in progress at Pompeii may reveal the first sports ground ever recorded to be disqualified because of disorderliness by the spectators. Men working under the direction of Professor Majuri, curator of the excavations, have brought to light a wall which is believed to form part of the ground in which teams from Pompeii and Nocera staged an athletic contest in 79 A. D.

History records that hundreds of Noceranans went to Pompeii to see the match. While the result was still undecided a decision of the referee was challenged, and Pompeian and Noceran spectators came to blows. The matter was referred to the emperor, Nero, who disqualified the Pompeian grounds for ten years. — Montreal Herald.

Cattle Imports Peril U. S. Herds

Foreign Beef Is Feared as Disease Carrier to U. S. Livestock.

By FRANK RIDGEWAY
Farmers in the United States are jealous of the disease-free condition of their herds and flocks and insist that stringent measures be maintained to prevent the reintroduction of foot-and-mouth disease and other human and animal plagues through increasing importations of foreign animals and meats.

Livestock producers have become alarmed over persistent efforts being made in Washington to lower embargo bars that aid in keeping out highly contagious foreign diseases. Through their organizations farmers and ranchmen oppose the proposal of high ranking New Dealers to change restrictions now imposed on Argentine imports. Present regulations forbid the importation of meat products from countries where rinderpest or foot-and-mouth disease exist. Federal officials propose changes that would permit the re-zoning of the Argentine and admission of meats from zones declared free of these two maladies.

Farmers' representatives say that "the efforts to break down the present embargo are wholly based on economic grounds, and are pursued with a careless disregard of possible grave consequences." Lives of human beings, as well as cattle, hogs and sheep, are involved. Foreign meat is not needed; farmers in this country even now find it difficult to sell, at a satisfactory profit, the meat animals they produce.

Officials of the American National Live Stock Association believe "no one can fairly claim that imports of meat products from any zone of Argentina under present conditions would not constitute a dangerous threat to our herds and flocks."

They point out that the disease-free condition of live stock in this country has been attacked in great expense. "That condition," says the association, "should be maintained in the future at all costs. No diplomatic coup, no international intrigue, no pressure from foreign-trade enthusiasts or well-meaning but misdirected free-trade advocates should be allowed to undermine it."

Farmers wonder why this nation should spend millions to clean up diseases and then have foreign trade policies that threaten to undo all the good work. The United States is the only nation that has ever successfully stamped out foot-and-mouth disease.

Western cattlemen cannot forget the big foot-and-mouth disease outbreak in California in 1924 when nearly 100,000 of their cattle, sheep, hogs and goats were destroyed to stop it.

● Tell him of the value, educationally, he will derive from reading this noted feature writer's historical articles as they appear regularly in this paper. He will probably say: "Sure, I like history, Pop, but . . ." But too often it's ponderous and drained of the vitality that makes history the stirring story that it is. Then recall to him the skill with which this man makes dramatic phases of his country's history read like lively fiction.

● Show him that Mr. Watson's articles sometimes digress to other fields of American interest—to popular science, sports, the fine arts, industry, literature—to developments that will MAKE history . . . but read like romance.

You can feel secure in this guidance of your child's reading because Elmo Scott Watson's articles always are authoritative and are based upon the most painstaking research. In addition to writing these special articles, Mr. Watson serves as an instructor in feature writing at Medill School of Journalism, Northwestern University, and is co-author of a new book on the subject that has been adopted as a textbook by leading journalism schools throughout the nation.

The Little Tin Soldier HAS MARCHED AWAY

"OUR Billy! Twenty-one?—Why, I just can't believe I can remember when he had to stand on tiptoe to reach the cookies on the table."

"But chubby legs WILL lengthen, and a small boy steps into manhood. Soon he'll be buying a ring and they'll come out of a church with shy faces and shining eyes. As you did—how many years ago?"

Their path will be a little easier than yours—how you've toiled to make THAT possible! And they'll have more outside help too. Advertising has come forward in the last few years, and brought a hundred servants to the modern home.

Their road will be marked with familiar names. They'll choose the reliable, advertised trade-marks—whether a breakfast foods, a radio, or a new car. They'll know that an advertised product has to be an honest product—honestly proved by thousands of buyers before them.

They'll take on new responsibilities—just as you two did. Advertising will help them meet these new problems a little easier, a bit better. And they'll come out, all right—you needn't worry about THEM!
