FREAK ACCIDENT AT GUMM'S GARAGE

A peculiar accident happened at Gumm's garage on Highway 45-55, about seven miles south of West Bend on Tuesday noon. A large food company truck, being driven southward by Arthur Koepke, 37, of 2084 W. Lapham street, Milwaukee, was forced to take the left side of the road, at the Highway 60 intersection, because of a car having stalled suddenly in front of the truck. In order to avoid striking the stalled auto Koepke swerved sharply to the left, and in so doing, lost control of the truck, which went wild and ran directly into the west side of the garage, plowed through, and pushed out a large part of the south wall before it came to a stop in a mass of wreckage.

Koepke was taken to the hospital at West Bend where it was found that he received lacerations and bruises and possibly a split bone in his right arm. No one was in the garage at the time of the accident.

The Yuletide Spirit

In early Christian countries, no fixed date was established as the day of Jesus' birth. Since about 450 A. D. December 25 has been the recognized date, and in all countries it is a day to be merry and to give gifts. It has been celebrated always in a spirit of gladness and good will.

Since Christmas is so close at hand, the Christmas spirit again casts its spell upon us. It puts light and new life everywhere. It enables us to go back to our work with renewed energy.

The Christmas spirit, especially, means the sharing of cheer and of the good things in life. We give our friends presents whether they are in need of them or not. We do this to spread happiness and good will.

Let us, during this coming Christmas season, spread a spirit of pleasantness, good will, and cheer everywhere, which will put us all on the road to happiness.

GRADE SCHOOL NOTES

The primary pupils are busy making Christmas presents for their parents and making decorations for the Christmas tree.

The pupils of the intermediate room are having a Christmas party on Wednesday afternoon.

The 4th grade is finishing the unit on Norway. All grades in the intermediate room got new arithmetic books.

The 5th grade has finished the study of the Middle Atlantic states.

The 6th grade has finished the study of the British Empire and has now started the study of France.

The 7th grade is reviewing the units studied thus far in social science.

The 8th grade started the second semester of work in hygiene.

There is an attractive display of original Christmas cards on the grammar room bulletin board.

IN THE CLASSROOMS

The Juniors are studying the essay, its origin, most famous writers of that type, etc.

The members of the senior English class are busy working in their higher levels workbook. They are also working on their special interest topics. This work consists of taking notes on the material the students read, making a bibliography of books, magazines and the pamphlets read, and finally, writing the information gathered from the reading into a long theme or topic.

The physics class is studying about "heat" and in connection with this they are planning some interesting experiments. Among them are: Determining which materials absorb heat, the slowest and which hold it the longest

THEO. SCHMIDT RE-ELECTED

Theo. R. Schmidt attended the annual meeting of the Wisconsin State Association of Mutual Insurance Companies at Milwaukee last Wednesday. He was re-elected secretary-treasurer of the association.

time; explaining expansion and contraction of metals by heat, how this fact is put into use in some cases as how it is overcome in other cases.

The sophomores in biology are studying about the life history, economic importance, and the poisonous and the non-poisonous reptiles.

The freshman class in general science is studying about the different types of disease, their cause and cure and also their ways of reproduction.

Mr. Gibson's geography class has begun work on the chapter which is entitled "The Atmosphere." This study includes the composition of air, functions of the different parts, the depth of the atmosphere, its pressure and density as well as the various types of clouds which compose the high altitudes of the atmosphere.

The social problems class, having just completed unit 4 which dealt with the four aspects of health, including mental and public health, housing and community planning, are now at work on the unit which has the interesting heading, "Uncle Sam's Family." It will include such studies as the negro problem, immigration and population.

The senior class in American history is studying "The Nation and the Sections," which deals with the Monroe Doctrine and the Missouri Compromise, and "The New West."

The citizenship class is studying community safety. Health is the first essential in comfortable living, after character and a good conscience, yet health alone will not bring satisfaction to most people. They want to feel that their own homes and lives and the things which they have earned or have had given to them are not molested. Since an individual may not be strong or wise enough to defend himself against those who would disregard his rights, one of the great activities of government is the protection of life and property, or, as the Declaration of Independence puts it, "Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

The junior history class is studying the War of 1812. They are also giving oral reports on Pan-American congress, taken from the weekly Scholastic.

Once a week, accuracy tests are given in the advanced typing classes. The object of the tests is to type for ten minutes without error once during the semester.

The following people have typed one or more accuracy tests without error: Rosemary Haug, Sylvia Maedke, Anita Metz, Charlotte Romaine, Lillian Wedertz, Audrey Koch, Mona Mertes, Ruth Schief, and Bernice Stern.

K. H. S. LOSES TO OAKFIELD

In a close and thrilling basketball game the Kewaskum High school team lost to Oakfield in the latter's gym by a score of 10 to 7. It was a close battle throughout the game with the locals leading 3 to 2 at the half.

When the second half got under way the Oakfield guards started a rally which netted four field goals between them and cinched the game. Kewaskum was held to one field goal but made five free throws, which kept them in the game until the last whistle.

To-night, Friday, December 18, the strong Brandon team is playing in the local gym.

AROUND SCHOOL

On Thursday of last week the student body, by a vote of 101 to 22, adopted the student council form of student government.

The council consists of ten members chosen from all classes as follows: Freshmen one, sophomores two, juniors three, and seniors four. The presiding officer is the president of the student body and is not one of the council members. He is Walter Werner.

The president and all council members are nominated from the various classes but are elected by an all school vote, thus eliminating any possibility of having a council not representative of the student body.

The primary purpose of the council is the planning of various school activities and functions.

The following persons were elected as council men and women: Seniors—Frederick Dorn, Ralph Marx, Frederick Miller and Orin Reysen. Juniors—Louis Bath, Patricia Buss and Lester Borchert. Sophomores—Annette Belkic and Byron Bunkelmann. Freshmen—Curtis Romaine.

On Monday after school the council held its first meeting, at which time plans were made for the annual Christmas party.

Those persons, who, during the second six weeks period, had grades of A or B in all subjects and therefore, are on the honor roll, are as follows:

Freshmen—Violet Eberle, Alice Koepke, Lucille Hansen.

Sophomores—Delores Backus, Annette Belkic, Lucille Thelsen, Beulah Westerman.

Juniors—Bernadette Kohler, Eunice Manthel, Anita Mertz, Margaret Muenk, Charlotte Romaine.

Seniors—Dorothy Becker, Ruth Mary Fleischman, Viola Hawig, Jeannette Krautkramer, Ralph Marx, Dorothy Smith, Jeannette Werner.

FORMER WAYNE MAN HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Erwin Gritzmacher, formerly of the town of Wayne, a son-in-law of Mrs. Chas. Geidel, who formerly resided in this village, but who is now a resident of West Bend, had a narrow escape from death last week Friday at the White House Milk company plant at West Bend, where he is employed. He was cleaning a large storage tank at the plant when he slipped and fell, rendering him unconscious. His condition was not discovered until some time after the accident when he was taken to St. Joseph's hospital and an x-ray taken to determine whether or not his skull was fractured. Fortunately, however, no fracture was found and he was allowed to return to his home on Tuesday. His very many friends here are glad that the accident had no more serious results and that he may regain complete recovery soon.

GRAFTON VICTIM OF LOCAL TEAMS

The village basketball players started out another week of competition at Grafton on Sunday evening by winning two games at that place. In the Land of Lakes league contest the boys nosed out Grafton 29 to 26 after a hard fight, to earn a .500 average in the standings. In the preliminary the Bees easily won their game by a score of 17 to 5.

The main game was probably as closely contested, fast and interesting as any game of the year will be. Fortunately a godly number from here witnessed this excellent game, in which the lead was Kewaskum's most of the time but never by more than a few points. At the quarter the locals led 9 to 8, at the half 15 to 13, the third quarter 21 to 18, and finally 29 to 26, after a wild last quarter.

Led by K. Honeck with 10 points, the boys were really "on" and showed a great improvement over their first game. Kewaskum made 12 field goals to Grafton's 9, but trailed in free throw making, 8 for 12 to 5 for 13, in a game marked with frequent fouls due to the very close observance of Referee Thiel.

Free throws missed—Kewaskum: Stenscheke 2, K. Honeck, Marx 2, Schaefer 2, Miller; total 8 Grafton: Woltring, Wegner, Dickman, Habich; total 4. Referee—Thiel (Waukesha).

BEEES 17; GRAFTON 5

In the first game the Grafton seconds were downed in an easy fashion 17 to 5, for the locals second straight victory. Kewaskum led throughout the entire contest and at halftime 9 to 0. The lineup for this game included the following: Kewaskum—L. Rosenheimer, Harbeck and L. Spaeth, forwards; Furlong, center; A. Hron, H. Rosenheimer, Wedder and Landmann, guards. Grafton—Ferry, Schreiber, Woltring and Fromm, forwards; W. Spaeth and F. Spaeth, centers; Anshuetz and Meyer, guards.

WEDNESDAY'S GAME POSTPONED

On Wednesday evening of this week the local team was also scheduled to play a Land of Lakes league game at Port Washington, but this game was postponed indefinitely due to the fact that the Port team could not obtain permission to use the gym on that evening. Kewaskum was all set to travel to that city and try for their second straight victory of the week but, no doubt, will have to wait until after the holidays to accomplish this feat.

SUNDAY NIGHTS GAME

HERE ALSO POSTPONED

According to the Land of Lakes league schedule the Campbellsport Firemen's team is supposed to play in the local gym this coming Sunday evening, Dec. 20. This game has also been postponed by the local management because of interference by the church cantata which will be presented here that evening, in which several members of the basketball squad are to appear. This game, according to present plans, will also be played in January, and the team's next game will be on Jan. 8, when the strong Cedarburg Turners will play here.

CANTATA SUNDAY EVENING

Do not forget the Christmas candle-light cantata which is to be presented by the vested choir of the Peace Evangelical church Sunday, December 20th, at 8:15 o'clock.

The hymn choir will sing an offertory hymn with the senior choir. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

They both felt suddenly confused. She put down the pencil he had been writing with, and arose from the table with a gasp. "Could you walk or sit somewhere while?" she asked.

"I'll walk," she said.

She strode across the yard to the path along Julia's garden fence. Julia followed her sweetpeas pulling off the faded blossoms.

"You certainly have a fine garden," she said.

"It's not quite so good this year," Julia said.

The soft part of the afternoon lay over the valley.

"You're going to sit a little while up there on the rock by the sycamore," she said.

"I'll do as far as I can," she said, following them with her eyes to the shadow of the creek in full view of the house and garden.

They felt strangely happy to be released from all places where they had been in company with other people. And I nearly didn't come, only another job came along that my Dad had to look after himself.

"Would you have minded that so much?" Cynthia asked.

"Yes," he answered.

There seemed to be nothing more to say. She withdrew her hand and let it lie in her lap. It seemed different from the other one and in communion with all the rest of her being.

Julia was now at the gate of her garden. She stood looking at Cynthia and Reuben.

her. She glanced at him, her eyes turned down Wolfpen.

They had been led far deeper than the surface of their talk since the half-confused moment by the drawing table. Cynthia began to realize that she had both dressed Doug in a word and set him before them as a symbol of their new relationship. Nothing else seemed to exist except this entranced moment of creating a new experience with another human being. Her open hand lay along the delicate green moss covering of the stone dividing it into cool points with her fingers. Reuben dropped his long brown and briar-scarred hand gently upon it. It was warm and alive among the moss fronds.

"I never even dreamed of finding anybody like you when I started up here. And I nearly didn't come, only another job came along that my Dad had to look after himself."

"Would you have minded that so much?" Cynthia asked.

"Yes," he answered.

hill toward the barn. Everything was stirring again into life for feeding-time.

"I like to come down this valley this time of day," Reuben finally said as they neared the yard. "It seems like everything is doing just what it was intended to do."

"If you look close you can see Sam climbing back to Cranestee Shelf," Cynthia said.

"I see him," Reuben answered.

Abra! was already in the yard. He smiled boyishly, and when Cynthia had gone into the house, he said to Reuben, "Oh, you've been surveying."

Reuben smiled at Abra! He liked his spirit and his energy.

"Yes, Abra! There's a lot to be surveyed on this place."

CHAPTER XI

Near the end of an afternoon some days later into July Reuben Warren drove the iron spike of the Jacob's staff into the ground below the mill and brought to a close the uncertain line around the Pattern lands. Day after day from dawn to dusk they had pushed it through the ax-cleared way through the timber, climbing over the ridges that lay lifeless in the noontday heat and down into cool damp hollows where the birds gathered in the afternoons. Then they had marked off the portion for Shellenberger, cutting across the place from the jutting point on the Big Sandy watershed overlooking the river where the long ridges rolled into form out of blue and indistinct space, to the rich earth at the foot of the Pinnacle on Gannon creek in view of Cranestee.

Reuben peeped through the slit in the sights to the yellow point still catching the sun above the shadows in Wolfpen.

"Thence north eighty-three degrees thirty minutes east to the beginning," he said to Sparrel and the others and entered it in the note-book. "I guess that finishes it."

It was like saying good-by to one of the family.

Tomorrow Reuben would be leaving this place where he had lived through the days of spring and early summer. He would ride in silence behind Sparrel to Pikeville and then by boat down the Big Sandy, sitting on the prow to watch the Pattern lands he had surveyed come into view and recede and return home.

He had had enough experience in the changing world to foresee that the loveliness of Wolfpen could not survive the wave of development which would one day sweep over it. He was sorry.

He stood by the kitchen window, smelling the scent of poplars and pine trees on the light breeze from the hollow. Cynthia found him there for a minute alone. The note-books and the deeds were tied in a bundle on the table by the compass, ready for the journey. In the corner were the pins, the chain and the staff.

"I guess it's all finished," he smiled.

"I hate to see you go," she said.

"I'm sorry I can't make the job last any longer. It just seemed to get done."

themselves to the discipline of a supervised lumbering operation.

It was partly Shellenberger's air of detached authority which they found barely tolerable. Not that he kept his own counsel and ate only at Sparrel's, but that he went among them as though they were trees or mules, and acted so superior by virtue of his ownership of Sparrel Pattern's timber and not by right of character, one man to another, as it was among the Big Sandy men.

It was more especially Mullens. He had his own superiorities as boss of the work. He said little to the men beyond a few terse orders. Moreover he had his own methods for felling trees, determining log lengths, constructing the dam, for every single detail of the logging. He insisted on telling these men who had lived their lives in the hills and swung axes since they were striplings, how to fell a tree, how far above the ground they should cut, and where to stand when it began to lean. Sometimes they would do as they were told; more often they would do as they liked and meet the sour looks of Mullens with a passive and child-like silence.

They were difficult and individual as children, and Mullens did not know what to do about it. So he swore at them and marked on each tree the exact spot where he wanted it cut. If he then stood by and watched, they would cut low; but when he turned away they would straighten their backs and cut high.

And since they were not accustomed to hiring out for a wage, they did not know whether they should ask about the time of their pay or just wait until the job was finished up. Sparrel seemed to take it as being all right, so it must be, but a little resty money would come in handy.

This general unrest culminated in the latter part of August. The occasion was the accident and first casualty on the job. They were chopping the great poplars in Dry Creek. Grover Sims was standing near by watching them bring down one of the finest of them all. Mullens happened to be there at the moment the tree began to lean. He shouted sharply to Sims to jump up the hill out of the way. They were startled by the shouting of Mullens and the loud cracking of the stump and crashing through the smaller trees. In nervous confusion he sprang full into the path of the falling mass. It caught him squarely, knocking him down as though he were a reed, pinning him under the heavy trunk, and crushing in his lungs. Had he stayed where he was before Mullens shouted, he would have been safe. The moans had ceased by the time Sparrel got to him. It went quickly through Dry Creek that it was Mullens' fault, and if he had kept his mouth off of the boy it wouldn't have happened. And why, anyway, should they be down here in a lumber camp at the risk of their lives, working for a foreigner like Mullens when they might just as well be at home and their own bosses as they had always been?

They quit. They were quiet about it. Some of them told Mullens they allowed they'd better get getting back home now, what with the corn about ready to cut and things about the place to be attended to, and they'd just have their time. Mullens said he couldn't pay them until Shellenberger got the money. And they said that they reckoned if it wasn't handy they'd just wait around for it, and it better not be too long. So while they were burying Grover Sims on a Big Brush, Shellenberger took one of Sparrel's mules for two days and when he came back there was money to pay them.

The work was at a standstill.

"So now what?" Shellenberger said to Mullens.

"Go down-river and get me some men who know how to be told what to do," Mullens said.

The month of August was going by on the rumor of these troubles at the camp. In other Augusts, the thought of the disputes among men never came into Wolfpen or disturbed the head of Cynthia. The talk had always been of the growth the lambs had made, of the rams and ewes to be sold or slaughtered, of the thickness of the clover in Stack Bottom, of whether the time for the making of sorghum would be earlier or later this year than the one before, of the late corn in Julia's patch, of the steers for the drovers, of the progress of the bees, of the size of the potatoes where Julia had graveled, of the absence of sickness and the probable price of 'seng. And the words were framed at leisure a few at a time from day to day as one member or another of the family observed the course of life about them. These things were not mentioned this year.

Cynthia felt the alteration in herself and noted it in the others and thought on it as she tried to finish the cloth that had been already too long in the loom. "I never in my life got such a little bit at a time done on a piece. 'Pears like a body's day is so tied up with other folks' doing I can't get any work done and out of the way. Part of it is the way nobody doesn't seem natural. Mother acts like she was tired all the time and she doesn't show off her flowers when Amy comes or offer her any seeds and she doesn't say much. I don't see when she's going to dry apples and make jelly and put things away. Daddy goes around like he had a trouble bound on his shoulders. He works down around the mill so much I don't know how he's ever going to get herbs for his medicine and the corn in and the hay made and the sorghum. Jasper works in the fields with a sorry look on his face, and I reckon he wants to marry. And Abra! is so excited about everything I can hear him flopping in his bed at night and ramming his knees with a bang into the wall. And there's Jesse working on through his big book and looking at his steer and I know he is right nervous about going off over to town with so much to do about the place before winter and all these strange men coming here from down-river, and the hard feelings about Grover Sims getting killed. And there's Cynthia. What about you? You think about him and his maps and papers he's working on, and about how you're to get over to the Institute for a winter and about silly things in the trees that you'd just better leave to old Mr. Stung Shellenberger and his black man. But it's not nice to call even him bad names."

It was more especially Mullens. He had his own superiorities as boss of the work. He said little to the men beyond a few terse orders. Moreover he had his own methods for felling trees, determining log lengths, constructing the dam, for every single detail of the logging. He insisted on telling these men who had lived their lives in the hills and swung axes since they were striplings, how to fell a tree, how far above the ground they should cut, and where to stand when it began to lean. Sometimes they would do as they were told; more often they would do as they liked and meet the sour looks of Mullens with a passive and child-like silence.

Decorating for Christmas— Some Handsome Window and Room Ornaments That Are Inexpensive

WHILE windows may have been decorated for Christmas before now, the arrangements indoors seldom are made until the day before the holiday. The freshness of the beauty is wanted without any diminution. If the novelty has worn off, some of the zest of Christmas is lost. This is so true that many homemakers refuse to have windows trimmed more than a day or so prior to Christmas.

If you happen to be among this latter group, let me suggest that you take sprays of a tree that is misshapen and so very cheap and make a splashing bow of red crepe paper for each and hang one in every front window downstairs. Or have one in each downstairs window that is discernible from the street.

their shape when ends have been thrust inside the baskets close to their opposite sides. The handles can be wired or glued to the baskets.

Bouquets.
Bouquets of Christmas greens in vases can be put in rooms other than the living room and dining room, and give their beauty of Christmas about the house. Be sure to use vases and bowls that have broad standards, lest the uneven weight of the greens tips them over.

Household Questions

Ink stains may be removed from wall paper with a solution of equal parts of ammonia and hydrogen peroxide.

To give a new flavor to your ham try pouring spiced pickle juice over it before baking.

When tying children's shoes, tie string in bow first, then the loops in a single knot. They will not then easily become untied.

Keep an empty snap card on hand and when taking snaps off old garments snap them on the card. This will save time looking for them when they are needed.

Good Deeds
How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

Heaven doth with us as we with torches do;
Not light them for themselves; for if our virtues Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike As if we had them not.

—William Shakespeare.

Gentle Ways
BUT curb thou the high spirit in thy breast,
For gentle ways are best.

In Good Company
Company is one of the greatest pleasures of the nature of man, for the beams of joy are made hotter by reflection when related to another.

Theories might work, if human nature didn't interfere.
A young intellectual tries to get along without emotions and presently makes the horrible discovery that he has lost them.

Coarseness isn't much better than outright immodesty.
The Present Moment
Try to be happy in this present moment, and put not off being so to a time to come.

Wages of sin is death—and the wages of foolishness is paid out of the same purse.
Many men when asked for their candid opinion, make up something on the spur of the moment.

The man who makes no mistakes does not usually make any.

Reading makes a full man—meditation a profound man—discourse a clear man.

A man may frequently think and say he is misunderstood, but the man who thinks he is and doesn't care sufficiently to say anything about it, is the most admirable.

The prodigal son came of a good family. That is why he came back.
In order to make a friend, you have got to like a man well enough never to want to give him a dig. Many men never make any.

Pest "Protects" Country
Nigeria, part of British West Africa, is rich in tin, but few white men are able to live there. It is a country manifestly for the Nigerians. A native leader, once proposing to erect a colossal statue to the savior of Nigeria, was naturally asked to what great statesman he referred; to Wilberforce, perhaps? "Not at all," said the Nigerian, "the mosquito!" "True enough, for if not for the mosquito the white men would flock there in thousands.

TRACTION MEANS GROUND GRIP! GROUND GRIP MEANS "FIRESTONE"!

TRACTION on unimproved roads in bad weather is a problem which has long baffled tire engineers. Sure footing on a muddy football field is also a problem. But during the wet, slippery football season of 1936, thousands of players depended upon the cleats of their shoes to bring them through for the winning play.

During 1937 thousands of car, truck and bus owners will depend upon the rugged rubber cleats of Firestone Ground Grip Tires to pull them through snow, mud, sand, or over any unimproved roads.

The scientific tread of the Ground Grip Tire is so distinctive in design and so unusual in performance that it has become known as "the tire that makes its own road." It is almost unbelievable how these super-traction tires dig in, grip, and pull you through. They are self-cleaning. Chains are not necessary. Equip the rear wheels of your car, truck or bus with a pair of Ground Grip Tires and save time, money and trouble.

If you have not already equipped your tractor and farm implements with Ground Grip Tires do it now—they will save you 25% in time and fuel costs, reduce vibration, and provide greater comfort.

Call on your nearby Implement Dealer, Firestone Tire Dealer, or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today. Start now to reap the many advantages of the Firestone Ground Grip Tire—the greatest traction tire ever built!

Twenty-five Years Ago

December 16, 1911

We noticed among the names of marriage licenses issued this week by the county clerk that of William Hallet of Milwaukee and Miss Emma Staats of South Germantown. These two people are very well known here, the latter having owned the millinery store occupied by Miss Elsie Brandt for a number of years.

Ben H. Mertes, who has for the past few years been assistant cashier of the Citizens' State Bank of this village, left last Sunday for Newburg to take charge of his new duties as cashier of the State Bank of that village.

The local mill dam broke open again last Monday when the high water washed the west end of the temporary brush dam away. The owners have a crew of men busy repairing same again. Whether or not a new dam will be built next summer is a question, but if there will be we are informed that it will be built of concrete.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Reysen last Wednesday, twins, two boys.—New Pano Correspondent.

The malt house whistle is again heard. It was blown for the first time in several months last Tuesday evening at 5 o'clock. It will hereafter be heard every day at 7 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Judge John Muehle's of this village performed his first wedding ceremony when he united in marriage last Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, Mrs. Ed. Glander of the town of Scott and Louise Wollert of the town of Waupun, Fond du Lac county.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Wilkie, living near Beechwood, in the town of Scott, are the proud parents of triplets since last week Wednesday. The trio consists of two girls and a boy.

King Edward Abdicates and Is Succeeded by Duke of York — Pope Stricken With Paralysis — Wallace Promises Better Farm Program.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

LOVE and the British constitution are the winners in the great contest that has stirred the vast empire to its furthest borders.

George VI

Edward's fateful decision was communicated to the house of commons by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin.

"Realizing as I do the gravity of this step I can only hope that I shall have the understanding of my people in the decision I have taken and the reasons which have led me to take it.

"I conceive that I am not overlooking the duty that rests on me to place in the forefront the public interest when I declare that I am conscious that I can no longer discharge this heavy task with efficiency and with satisfaction to myself.

"I have accordingly this morning executed an instrument of abdication in the terms following: "I, Edward VIII of Great Britain, Ireland, the British dominions beyond the seas, king, emperor of India, do hereby declare my irrevocable determination to renounce the throne for myself and my descendants.

"In token thereof I have hereunto set my hand this 10th day of December, 1936, in the presence of the witnesses whose signatures are subscribed.

There followed a request that the accession of his brother to the throne be expedited, and accordingly enabling legislation effecting the abdication and the accession of the new king was promptly introduced and put through the house of commons and the house of lords.

The new king was proclaimed with the traditional ceremony following an assembly of the accession council made up of privy counselors and other distinguished persons.

That evening the ex-king went on the air to broadcast a message of farewell to the half billion people who had been his subjects.

Edward left England for his self-imposed exile and probably never will return to his native land.

FROM Manila came belated dispatches telling of the worst disaster that ever befell the Philippines—a great flood which swept through the fertile and densely populated Cagayan valley in northern Luzon and destroying possibly thousands of the inhabitants.

FRANCE and Great Britain united in an invitation to Germany, Italy, Russia and Portugal to join them in an effort to end the Spanish war by mediation.

STRIKEN with paralysis that affected both his legs, Pope Pius XI was believed to be in a serious condition because he already was afflicted with asthma, arterio sclerosis and high blood pressure.

MEMBERS of the American Farm Bureau federation, assembled in Pasadena, Calif., were told by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace that the government would provide a better farm program than the AAA; but he also said the farmer must be willing to accept "small increases in the imports of certain agricultural products."

PLANS of John L. Lewis and his associates in the C. I. O. for organizing the automobile industry workers seemingly are greatly furthered by the formation of a joint council of the United Automobile Workers of America and the Federation of Flat Glass Workers.

FOR the first time the government has taken a hand in the steel labor crisis. The national labor relations board has issued a complaint charging the United States Steel corporation and its subsidiary, the Carnegie-Illinois Steel company, with "interfering with the self-organization of employees" in Carnegie's 21 plants.

WITH the launching of the Gneisenau, her second 26,000-ton battleship, Germany moved another step toward her goal of a navy large enough to bottle up the Russian fleet.

Berlin correspondents believe the new German fleet will have reached 420,000 tons by 1942.

FRANCE and Great Britain united in an invitation to Germany, Italy, Russia and Portugal to join them in an effort to end the Spanish war by mediation.

FOURTEEN persons perished when a big Dutch airliner crashed near Croeyden airport in England soon after taking off in a dense fog.

The Man Who-o-o Tales and Traditions from American Political History

THE LADY CANDIDATE EVER heard of Mrs. Belva Lockwood of New York? She was the woman who was twice a candidate for the presidency of the United States on the Equal Suffrage ticket.

In 1822, two years before her likenesses were seen on presidential banners, Mrs. Lockwood obtained the admission of women to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mrs. Lockwood was a practicing attorney herself. For three years she had been empowered to appear before the Supreme Court of the District but was barred from the United States body by lack of precedent.

The speech of Mrs. Lockwood at the 1877 convention was convincing to her hearers. Contrary to current recollections of the masculine type of woman who first demanded political equality, she is described in a convention report as entirely feminine.

Mrs. Lockwood was a candidate in 1888 as well as in 1884. She was active in public life almost to the day of her death in 1917, when eighty-seven years old.

THE presence this year of a nationally known newspaper publisher on the ticket of a major political party has excited interest in the part newspaper men have taken as candidates in the past.

One of them who was very active was Horace Greeley of New York Tribune fame, a candidate of the "Liberal Republicans" and endorsed by the Democrats to oppose the reelection of Grant in 1872.

Greeley was made a presidential candidate by a reform group of Republicans which found its nucleus in Missouri with the election of one of its leaders as governor and later held a national convention at Cincinnati.

During the war, Greeley, a chronic sufferer from nervous disorders, had been erratic in his editorial positions, shifted them frequently—always with the belief that he was expressing what most people wanted.

While the South was still under arms, he had declared with great passion that the war should not end while slavery existed, yet petitioned Lincoln to appoint him commissioner to arrange a peace.

When the Democrats met at Baltimore a little more than two months after Greeley's nomination they adopted the Greeley ticket because they felt it their only means of opposing Grant.

A small group, it is true, broke away from the main body of Democrats, held a second convention in September at Louisville and placed a third ticket in the field.

Grant didn't fuss around with the election. He won overwhelmingly. It was the first time since the Civil war that all the states voted and Grant carried all but six of them, getting 272 electoral votes.

The states Grant didn't win—Missouri, Maryland, Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Texas, were fairly representative of the territory which hated Greeley. But Greeley died before the results were known.

"Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men"

But There Wasn't Much of Either in Some Sections of United States 150 Years Ago.

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Peace on earth, good will to men! For ages that has been the theme of Christmas time the world over and, although the years of war now seem to be passing low over Europe and the people of many nations are being ridden by suspicion and fear and dire poverty, America looks forward this year to a happy Christmas of peace and prosperity.

It has not always been thus in this country. One hundred and fifty years ago there was little enough of either peace or good will in some sections of the United States, which was then still in its infancy as a nation.

In the year 1786, you had a picture of the people of the original thirteen states, you would have found a surprising lack of it, even though they had lately stood shoulder to shoulder in fighting for their freedom from Great Britain.

And if you had visited western Massachusetts you would have seen the spectacle of armed men marching over the hills and through its valleys, ready to plunge their state into the horrors of a civil war.

In December, 1786, the incident which has come down in our history under the name of "Shays' Rebellion" was mounting to its climax and Christmas of that year saw, not peace on earth, good will to men, but a people, driven to despair by poverty and high taxes and a loss of faith in their government, resorting to armed force to right their wrongs.

Shays has written Daniel Bowdoin and his men down as "rebels" but make no mistake about it they were more than just a lot of malcontents trying to overthrow a stable and just government. Shays and many another had been "rebels" also in 1775—but they were known as "Patriots" then. When they took arms again, it was for the most fundamental reasons that had driven them to revolt ten years earlier. The "rebels" of 1775 were simply the "Patriots" of 1786, grown grimmer with hardship and disillusionment and hope. So they started their rebellion to put into practice the abstract principles for which they had fought in the Revolution.

After the Revolution, affairs were in a chaotic condition in the states and especially in Massachusetts. Little "hard money" was in circulation and the increasing taxes could do little to help the depreciated currency of the Confederation. What had been true of the Continental currency during the Revolution was true of this paper money. Soldiers coming home from the war found a mountain of debts awaiting them and there was no banking law to save their banks from failure or their stocks of furniture from seizure by the sheriff.

To the veterans returning to a state of affairs and to the disheartened farmers, trying to eke a bare living from the soil, it seemed that the machinery of the state's government was operating to oppress them. Especially did they hate the lawyers who fattened off their misfortunes, and the sheriffs and other court officers who did the actual seizures of property.

By 1786 so great was the feeling against the lawyers that virtually all members of that profession were defeated in the spring legislative elections. Moreover, the new legislature was asked to regulate the lawyers and reform the courts. A bill to restrict law fees was passed in the house of representatives but defeated in the state senate. This fed the rage of an already inflamed populace.

"Was this a real government of the people and for the people when a little group of senators could checkmate the will of the elected representatives?" the aroused farmers, mechanics and other working men began asking.

By the time the legislature, blind to the needs of the people and deaf to their pleas for relief, went home, the men of Massachusetts were ready for desperate measures. All they needed now was a leader around whom to rally for action to gain the rights which they had understood from the Declaration of Independence, were theirs. They found such a leader in Daniel Shays.

In the Fight for Liberty. When the news of Lexington and Concord spread through western Massachusetts in April, 1775, Shays was twenty-eight years old, but recently married and trying to make a living for himself and his bride on a little farm in that part of the colony. Born at Hopkinton of parents too poor to educate him, Shays had hired out as a farm hand in his early youth and had gradually drifted westward. He had managed to save a little money so when he came to the village of Pelham, where land was cheap, he was able to buy a few acres of thin soil on a bleak ridge above the bottom lands of the Connecticut valley.

Shays immediately joined an Amherst company which disbanded after 11 days. But he was in the fight for liberty for good so he re-enlisted. By the time he reached Boston he had been made an ensign and for bravery at Bunker Hill he was made a sergeant. During the five years he served in the Continental army, he was in the march on Ticonderoga, he was at the surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga, he served under "Mad Anthony" Wayne at Stony Point and he starved and froze with the other veterans of Washington's army.

On the promise that he would be made a captain, he enlisted a company but he had to wait for two years before the captaincy was forthcoming. Meanwhile he had become conspicuous enough among the minor officers to be one of a number who received swords at the hands of Lafayette, the gallant young Frenchman who had joined Washington's army.

An Unwanted Sword. Daniel Shays must have smiled grimly when the sword was presented to him. He had a sword. He didn't need another one. What he did need greatly was money to send back to Massachusetts where his wife and children were in want. So dire was their distress that he did what seemed to him the logical thing to do—he sold the sword. And because he thus violated the code of an "officer and gentleman," his brother officers ostracized him. Soon afterwards he resigned his commission and returned home where some of his neighbors—even his father-in-law—also snubbed him for what he had done. No wonder he was an embittered man when he retired to his farm near Pelham.

But he soon found that the plain people of that section weren't much concerned over the sword incident. His war record outweighed that. So they elected him to the committee of safety and the next year made him town warden. Other veterans returning from the war came to visit with him, to talk over their war experiences and as the problem of taxes and debts grew from bad to worse, to discuss ways and means of getting relief from an intolerable situation. By the time the legislature had adjourned without making any attempt to provide that relief they were ripe for revolt and they looked to Shays as their natural leader.

Drillmaster for the Rebels. So he began drilling old soldiers and new ones in the courtyard of Pelham tavern. Evidently his fame as a drillmaster had spread for there came requests from Worcester for him to come there to recruit, organize and drill "regulators for the suppression of tyrannical government."

During the summer of 1786 county conventions were held all over the state to give voice to grievances and draw up petitions to the legislature. On August 22 delegates from 50 Hampshire towns met in Hatfield for that purpose. Shays represented Pelham at the meeting which opened with the adoption of a resolution that "this meeting is constitutional" and closed with "an address to the people now in arms." But it advocated no violence.

In contrast to its moderation was the action taken in the eastern part of the state where Middlesex farmers, meeting in historic Concord, gave voice to their protest in more violent language. They denounced the senate, protested against the legislature holding its meetings in Boston (where it would be under the domination of the rich merchants and war profiteers), condemned the size of government salaries, the rate of lawyers' fees and the costs of the courts. In particular they demanded redress from unequal taxation on farm lands and mercantile property, demanded the repeal of the riot act, passed by the last legislature, and called for the restoration of the act of habeas corpus which had been suspended as disorders throughout the state had grown.

In the face of this rising storm of wrath Gov. James Bowdoin was singularly inactive. George Washington, seeing the precarious condition of the new nation under the Confederation and fearful of its fate, wrote to ask why Massachusetts did not redress grievances if they existed or suppress sedition if they did not. Governor Bowdoin neither redressed or suppressed.

A Crisis at Hand. When it came time for the courts to sit again, everyone knew that the crisis was at hand. Court sessions meant more seizures for debt, more men went to jail. So in many parts of the state, armed bands prevented the courts from convening.

Governor Bowdoin, his hand forced at last, called out the militia to suppress the rebellion. But the militiamen were far outnumbered by Shays' "regulators" even if they had not been in sympathy with them, which most of them were. As the time approached for the meeting of the Supreme court in Springfield late in September, Shays knew that he and his men were in danger of indictment for stopping the lower courts. The only thing to do was to stop it also. So he led 600 men there, paraded his men in front of 800 militia commanded by Gen. William Shepard, and sent in a request to the court for it to adjourn. The judges did so forthwith.

Next the legislature was called into special session but it vacillated between granting the people's demands and upholding law and order. Finally it compromised by voting a bill to make taxes payable in produce. During this time Shays had been laying low, hoping that the threat of his armed men would result in the needed reforms without actual recourse to arms. When the governor called out 2,000 militia to guard the Cambridge court house while court convened, not a Regulator appeared to interfere.

Shays' Rebellion in Massachusetts Was Protest of People Driven to Despair by Poverty and High Taxes.

One reason why small herds average higher in production than larger herds is that each cow in a small herd can be more easily fed and managed according to her special requirements.

In a recent survey of the New Jersey Herd Improvement associations it was found that cows in a herd of nine averaged 8,445 pounds of milk a year and the average cost of food per pound of butterfat produced was 36.2 cents. A cow in a herd of 18 animals averaged 8,174 pounds of milk a year and her average feed cost per pound of butterfat was 38.2 cents, while yearly milk production of a cow in a herd of 27 cows was 7,423 pounds and the feed cost average for each pound of butterfat was 41 cents.

In view of this survey, and because of the prevailing high prices of grain and hay, it would pay every dairyman this winter to regard each of his cows as a distinct machine and treat her accordingly.

Feeding all cows the same amount of grain mixture results in seriously underfeeding the high producers, while the low-producing cows reduce the net returns from the herd by being overfed. Every cow should be given all the good roughage she will eat, but high producers need more grain than the less productive animals.

Because of the different fat tests of their milk, separate breeds of cows require different amounts of grain, and feeding grain to the animals according to the following scale is recommended:

Holsteins: Feed 4 pound of concentrates for each pound of milk above a yield of 16 pounds daily.

Ayrshires and Brown Swiss: Feed .45 pound of concentrates for each pound of milk above a yield of 14 pounds daily.

Guernseys: Feed .55 pound of concentrates for each pound of milk above a yield of 12 pounds daily.

Jerseys: Feed .6 pound of concentrates for each pound of milk above a yield of 10 pounds.

Grasshoppers Were Busy During the Past Summer. Fortunately, farmers have the American trait of being able to laugh at misfortune. Take the recent grasshopper plague, for instance, which produced almost as many stories as 'hoppers,' says a writer in the Country Home Magazine. Here are a few from an Iowa correspondent: In Kansas the chickens got so fastidious they took the grasshoppers apart, eating only the second joints. . . . A South Dakota woman had to stand guard over her Monday wash to keep the 'hoppers from eating the clothes off the line. . . . In Iowa a farmer woke up after a noonday nap to find the back out of his shirt and part of a pitchfork handle gone. . . . Probably none of them equals the true story of the grateful Mormons who erected a monument to the sea gulls from Great Salt Lake, which destroyed a plague of grasshoppers. . . . Unless it is the current one about the residents of Cedar City, Utah, who sold fifty barrels of grasshoppers to a California fish bait company. Then a Hollywood film crew dug a trench 125 feet long, crammed it full of dead 'hoppers' and made a Chinese locust plague scene. The farmers who harvested the 'hoppers got $10,000.

Trees Tested 20 Years. Twenty years of experimentation have brought about knowledge as to the relative value of various types of tree for shelterbelt planting, which is proving of great assistance in planting projects in the drought areas. At Mandan, N. Dak., the first test trees were planted in 1914. Eighteen types of tree were set out. Seven survived the extremes of temperature and the periods of drought. Of these, the Chinese elm, the ash and the box elder were found most effective.

Woodchuck Aids Farmer. For years, farmers have killed one of their friends, although they were unaware that it was a friend they were killing. The woodchuck, which seems to have no particular purpose in nature, actually is an excellent cultivator. It has been estimated that a woodchuck will bring about 100 pounds of subsoil and rock to the surface each year, thus aiding in the building of fertility in the subsoil and also providing better entrance of rain water to the lower reaches to which plant roots extend in their search for moisture.

Pumpkins for Cows. According to the Missouri experiment station, pumpkins including the seed, are worth about one-fifth as much as good mixed hay, pound for pound, and about two-fifths as much as good corn silage for dairy cows. Pumpkins are high in water and fairly low in dry matter. As a general rule, about twenty to thirty pounds per day is about the average allowance for a cow. Cutting the pumpkins into small chunks is the common method of preparation.

"Black Teeth" in Pigs. The milk teeth or baby teeth of pigs are often called "black teeth," and are quite likely to be dark in color. These should be replaced by permanent teeth before the pig has much occasion to use them. Sometimes the deciduous teeth are called "needle teeth" because they are sharp and have long points. Such teeth may interfere with eating or nursing, says Hoard's Dairyman, but the color is an unimportant factor.

Easier to Care for Small Herd

Fewer Cows Can Be Managed According to Individual Requirements.

NOONDAY LUNCH FOR YOUNGSTERS

Food Should Be Both Tempting and Nutritious.

By EDITH M. BARBER

WHAT are you giving the children for lunch when they come running in from school these crisp winter days? If a noon dinner is the custom of the household or if there are small children who must have their main meal in the middle of the day this meal will be the usual type dinner with meat or eggs or a cheese dish, potatoes, at least one other vegetable and a simple dessert. If, however, dinner is served at night the lunch will be a problem by itself.

First of all there should be something hot like soup or cocoa. Nothing tastes so good as my own remembrance of this in my childhood days. At the same time the hot beverage seems to stimulate the appetite for the rest of the meal.

If a milk soup is chosen for the main dish with such a soup as vegetable or fish chowder, plenty of crackers, or toast, and a dessert even the hungry boys will be satisfied if they can have several helpings.

Of course it is a good idea to add a salad of some sort unless it is to be served for dinner. Perhaps you will say that your boys don't like salads. I have found, however, that "cole slaw" is not considered a salad by many men and boys and that it is always well liked. Of course every mother should aim to teach her children to eat and like all foods and the salad habit is a good one.

Eggs and cheese dishes are also a good choice for luncheon. Baked eggs with tomatoes or with cheese sauce, cheese toast, creamed eggs, a tomato rarebit, or toasted cheese sandwiches are a few suggestions. A combination of rice or macaroni with cheese and tomatoes is usually liked.

Hot cocoa or a cereal beverage made with milk is better on a cold day than plain milk. Cocoa made by the easiest method is fortunately better than when it is made in a more intricate way. I am giving you here the simple method which always gives a smooth finely flavored beverage.

Cocoa.

1/2 to 3/4 cup cocoa (according to taste)

1 teaspoon flour

1 cup cold water

3 cups milk

2 to 4 tablespoons sugar

Salt

Mix the salt and cocoa and the flour, add the water and cook in the top of a double boiler over the direct heat for three minutes after the mixture begins to boil, stirring constantly. Add the sugar and milk, heat until it begins to look foamy. Beat with an egg beater to prevent the scum forming on the top and serve at once or place over hot water and cook until ready to serve. Leftover cocoa may be reheated and served, as the flavor improves rather than deteriorates by standing. For young children half as much should be used.

Egg and Tomato Casserole.

6 hard-cooked eggs

1 can tomatoes

Salt

Paprika

6 cloves

3 tablespoons butter

3 tablespoons flour

1 cup milk

1/2 cup tomato juice

1/2 cup grated cheese

1 cup buttered crumbs

Cut hard-cooked eggs in half and arrange around edge of greased casserole. Drain tomatoes and place in center of dish. Sprinkle with salt, paprika and cloves. To make the white sauce, melt the butter, stir in the flour, add the milk and tomato juice and stir over the fire until thick and smooth. Add cheese and season to taste and stir over a very low fire until cheese is melted and smooth. Pour over tomatoes and eggs. Cover with crumbs and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit).

Vienna Noodles.

1 package noodles.

1/2 pound ham, boiled and chopped

1/2 cup cream

1/2 cup cracker crumbs

2 tablespoons butter

Cook noodles in boiling salted water until tender, drain in colander and let cold water run through them. Butter a bread pan, dust with cracker crumbs. Place a layer of noodles, then the ham, then the rest of the noodles. Pour the cream over this, sprinkle cracker crumbs on top and dot with bits of butter. Bake one hour in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) until brown and crisp. Remove from pan and serve hot.

Baked Salt Mackerel.

Soak mackerel over night. Drain, dredge well with flour and pepper. Put in a greased pan and half cover with rich milk. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) about 15 minutes until tender. Add one-fourth cup of cream and cook ten minutes more.

Orange and Onion Salad.

3 oranges

2 spanish or bermuda onions

French dressing

Slice the oranges after peeling and arrange with slices of onion on a bed of lettuce or endive. Dress with french dressing and let stand at least one hour before serving.

Living Room Colors

Richer wall colors are now commanding attention for living rooms—shades like forest green and cocoon brown. The reason is greater eye comfort, a more intimate, cozy and an easier background to display room furnishings.

Stained Surfaces

Stained surfaces are usually finished with varnish or shellac. Two or more coats are used, the number depending upon the wear to which the surface will be subjected.

CHURCH PLANS WIN SUPPORT

WEST BEND—A representative group of Methodist Episcopal church members Tuesday night pledged support to a movement to erect a new church to replace the present 67-year-old structure on Fifth avenue here.

County Agent Notes

MEAT CUTTING AND MEAT CANNING SESSION TODAY

An instructive and interesting meeting on meat cutting and meat canning was held in Washington county today. Friday, Dec. 18th. The sessions started promptly at 9:30 o'clock and at 10:00 o'clock. A morning and afternoon session were held at each of the two places where the demonstrations were conducted. Professor James Lacey presented the meat cutting lessons, and Miss Charlotte Clark explained and demonstrated modern canning methods to the visitors.

Two meetings were held, one at the Slinger village hall, Slinger, and the other at the Washington County Farm Home, West Bend.

LIME PROGRAM DISCONTINUED

The Washington County Lime program has been temporarily discontinued because federal funds allotted to the project have been used up. It is expected that additional funds for the continuance of this project will be provided in the near future. Approximately 1400 tons of agricultural lime have been delivered to Washington county farmers since Oct. 1.

ADDED TO ASSOCIATION

The name of Jake Martin, Allenton, has been added to the northeastern Washington County Dairy Herd Improvement association.

STATE FAIR RANKED THIRD

Wisconsin's state fair ranked third in attendance for 1936 among 38 state and district fairs making reports at the International Fair convention in Chicago, announces Ralph E. Ammon, manager of the Wisconsin fair.

ACCOUNTANTS AVAILABLE

The services of trained accountants of the department of agriculture and markets are available at actual costs to cooperative associations of Wisconsin for the preparation of their income tax, surtax, excess profits tax and capital stock tax returns, and for auditing purposes, Commissioner F. Schultheiss pointed out today.

NEW BABY CHICK BOX LABEL

A new Wisconsin baby chick box label is now being designed for use by hatcheries cooperating with the department of agriculture and markets in the production of U. S. approved, certified, and record of performance chicks. C. Howard King, department specialist in charge of poultry and egg marketing, reported today.

The new label is to be a combination of the old Wisconsin chick grade label and the one just designed by the National Poultry Improvement Plan and offered by the U. S. department of agriculture. The combination will appear in the outline map of Wisconsin together with colors distinguishing the three chick grades.

Upon the request of several hatcheries, the new label is also being prepared in a small size suitable as a sticker for mailing materials, King said.

1937 SCDA PROGRAM

That the 1937 federal soil conservation program is being built very largely upon the 1936 plan, is the official information which has been received at the offices of the Washington county committee.

Local farmers have been assured that several new features have been included that were based upon suggestions made by Wisconsin farmers at community meetings held last October. Although complete details of the new program are not yet available, it is understood that the program will continue the use of payments for shifting crop acreages and for the performance of approved soil building practices. Some added opportunities are provided for soil building payments with less emphasis being placed on shifting acreages.

County Agent Skalsky has been advised that there will be included among the 1937 program provisions such things as—protection from drought losses even though the stand on the soil conserving shift acreage is killed; provisions for payments to vegetable and orchard growers and to farmers with extensive areas of good pastures; protection to corn growers against increased plantings of corn for grain; elimination of a special base for flax, and continuance of the 1936 tobacco and sugar beet base acreages, as in 1936 and at the same rates of payment.

Wisconsin crop land will be grouped as either soil depleting or soil conserving, it is reported. Because of the 1936 drought, land ordinarily a part of soil conserving acreage may be used for emergency forage crops. Soil building allowances will start at $20 per farm. Vegetable growers have an allowance of $1 an acre on vegetable crops for single cropping, or $2 an acre for double cropping. Shift payments will average $9 an acre. On grain-corn farms, they are increased by 3 cents on each dollar. The maximum shift is 15 percent.

and new operating economy

THE ADDITION of a new 60-horsepower engine to the Ford line for 1937 brings you a new, low price and gives you a choice of two V-type 8-cylinder engines. 85 horsepower for maximum performance. 60 horsepower for maximum economy.

The 60-horsepower V-8 engine was originally developed for use in England and France, where fuel costs are high. It has been proven there for two years with brilliant success. Now, brought to America, it creates an entirely new standard of modern motoring economy!

The "60" engine, available in five body types, is built in exactly the same body size and wheelbase — to the same advanced design — with the same comfort and convenience as the "85." And it delivers V-8 smoothness at speeds up to 70 miles an hour.

Two engine sizes—but only one car and one purpose—to give you more miles and more satisfaction for your money in 1937.
