President Roosevelt in Inaugural Address Pledges Aid for Forty Million Under-Privileged-Secretary Perkins Tries to Break Motor Strike Deadlock.

in ringing words the ends of the President earth, he pledged Roosevelt his administration to carry on its fight for the social security and material prosperity and happiness of the entire people of the United States. In effect, he promised that the federal government would bring about a better life for one-third of the nation now underprivileged, and that the program of planned economy would be continued. For forty millions who are not getting their share of the nation's material benefits the

"Nearly all of us recognize that as intricacies of human relationships increase, so power to govern them also must increase-power to stop evil; power to do good. The essential democracy of our nation and the safety of our people depend not upon the absence of power but upon lodging it with those whom the people can change or continue at stated intervals through an honest and free system of elections. The constitution of 1787 did not make our democracy impotent.

"In fact, in these last four years, we have made the exercise of all power more democratic; for we have begun to bring private autocratic powers into their proper subordination to the public's government. The legend that they were invincible-above and beyond the processes of democracy-has been shattered. They have been challenged and beaten."

Before the inauguration ceremonies, Mr. Roosevelt and members of his family attended a special service in St. John's Episcopal church. After delivering his address the President reviewed the military parade from a cupola built in front of the White House. In addition to the soldiers, sailors and marines, samples of the Civilian Conservation corps and of the National Youth administration were in the line, as were the governors of 46 states with corporation. But his efforts to bring these two gentlemen together seemed futile. Lewis summoned Homer Martin, head of the striking union, and John Brophy, C. I. O. lieutenant, from Detroit and conferred with them on "strategy". All the union leaders appeared supremely confident, and Lewis insisted the demand that the union be recognized as the sole bargaining agency must be conceded if there were to be any strike settlement negotiations.

Secretary Perkins, after talking with both sides, went directly to the White House. She said she was "keeping the President informed" of developments. The belief was general that it would be necessary to invoke the personal aid of Mr. Roosevelt to bring about a peaceful settlement. Lewis brought about the temporary suspension of negotiations by a statement he gave the press. With brutal frankness he said:

"We have advised the secretary of labor that the 'economic royalists'-and the du Ponts and Mr. Sloan are among them-used their money to try to drive Mr. Roosevelt out of the White House.

"Labor rallied to the President's support when they attacked him. "These same economic royalists now have their fangs in labor, and labor now expects the government to support labor in its legal and logical objectives."

This was too much for Sloan, who started for home with the remark: "We find it useless to attempt any further negotiations in Washington. | trade,

> CONGRESS did not wait for the inauguration to rush through the bill asked by the President extending for two and one-half years his power to control the two billion dollar stabilization fund and to devalue the dollar. Senator Vandenberg and Representative Snell, minority leaders, made futile efforts to amend the measure so that it would call on the secretary of the treasury to submit to congress a complete audit and report upon the operations of the fund after the expiration date in 1939. The fund originated three years ago at the time of the 40 per cent debasement of the dollar. Gold holdings of private individuals, banks and the reserve banks commandeered by the Treasury, were 'revalued". Each ounce of gold formerly valued officially at $20.67 an ounce was arbitrarily raised to $35 an ounce. This resulted in a two billion, 800 million dollar "profit" for the Treasury.

The odd 800 millions was immediately diverted to the Treasury's general account to cover federal expenditures. Two billions were allocated for use as a "stabilization" fund. New legislation was passed authorizing the secretary of the treasury to use the stabilization fund to manipulate the value of the dollar in foreign exchange transactions, to purchase silver and gold and to rig the quotations on United States government securities in the market.

Brine and Salt Cures for Meat

Two Principal Methods Are Used by the Majority of Farmers.

E. Nance, Professor of Animal Hus-bandry, North Carolina State College.—WNU Service, The many methods of curing pork are mostly variations of the two principal methods: the brine cure and the dry salt cure. Common salt is the basis of all meat curing. Sugar is sometimes added to give a better flavor and to counteract the tendency of the salt to harden the meat. Saltpeter may be used also to give the meat a natural red color, it has some preservative effect, too. In curing pork, be sure that all the animal heat has dissipated and that the meat has not frozen. Do the curing in a cool, well ventilated place and, if possible, in a temperature of 34 to 40 degrees fahrenheit. In the brine cure, for each 100 pounds of meat use 12 pounds of salt, two ounces of saltpeter, and six gallons of water. Boil the water and allow it to cool. If desired, add three cups of sugar to this formula. Thoroughly mix the salt, saltpeter, and sugar and rub some of the mixture into the hams, shoulders, and sides. Pack all meat in the same vessel, skin side down, except the top layer should be skin side up. Weight the meat down with clean hard wood or bricks. Dissolve the rest of the salt and other ingredients in the six gallons of water, before the water has cooled. After the solution is cool, pour it over the meat in the vessel until all meat is covered. Repack | them to burn. the meat on the seventh and twentyfirst days.

When the meat is cured, wash it first in hot water and then in cold water and hang it in the smokehouse to drip for 24 hours before smoking.

For the dry cure, use for each 100 pounds of meat: eight pounds of salt, three ounces of saltpeter, and three pounds of sugar (brown preferred).

Mix the ingredients thoroughly and rub half the mixture on the meat, then pack it as for the brine cure. In seven days repack the meat and rub on the other half. The meat should cure three days for each pound of weight of each piece. Then wash it and hang it in the smoke-

Smoke the meat with hickory, oak, or corn cobs to suit the taste. If the smokehouse is fly-proof and well ventilated, meat may be left in it until used. Otherwise, it should be wrapped in heavy paper.

Gilts Better Than Sows

in Raising Market Pigs An eight-year breeding experiment recently completed by the United States Department of Agriculture bears out the belief of many swine chanics. breeders that gilts are more econical breeding animals ture sows.

E. Z. Russell of the Bureau of Animal Industry reports that pigs from gilts were raised at less cost per pound of marketable weight than pigs from mature sows. This includes all periods of growth-gestation, suckling, growing, and fattening.

Three groups were tested in the experiment - mature sows, gilts from mature sows, and gilts from gilts. Pigs from the second group were raised to a marketable weight at 47 cents a hundred pounds less than the first group of pigs, from the third group at 42 cents a hundred pounds less.

One of the advantages in using gilts for breeding, Russell points out, is that if a gilt should prove to be a non-breeder the animal still would sell well as a butcher hog.

There was no drop in the production ability of the gilts from gilts, as the records show that at the end of the eighth year their litters average 1,420 pounds at 190 days of age, the best record for this group for the entire eight years.

Herbs that are grown for their fragrance include ambrosia, lavender, creeping mint, and sweet woodruff. Those grown for use in cooking include bush basil, chamomile, pot marjoram, orange mint, and winter savory.

Lighter draft horses fit into any kind of farm work and the improved multiple hitches allow the use of a larger number of horses for doing the very heavy work.

A few years ago, the ideal weight for a heavy draft horse was 1,600 to 1,900 pounds. Today, the ideal draft horse weighs from 1,300 to 1,600 pounds.

Suggestions on Menu and As most men have who have no Table Arrangements.

SOME readers are interested in informal parties, as requests for suggestions prove. Perhaps you will all be interested in the questions I think perhaps my faith sufand answers.

Unless it first has borne the Of course, some cocktails can also be mixed ahead of time, but the shaker must be refilled often unless you have an unusually large one or several at hand.

Whatever menu you serve, food and plates, silver and napkins should be arranged on a large table in order. First plates, then the hot dishes, salad, bread, relishes, then silver and napkins If coffee is served with the meal it is usually better to put it on a separate table, unless the latter is unusually

Now about the menu: The main dish is usually hot and must be selected with regard to the fact that it is to be eaten with a fork from a plate balanced precariously, unless, of course, you have enough small tables so that each guest may have a solid surface at his command. Unless, however, you actually set card tables, meats, such as chicken, which demands carving, should be avoided. Very tender cold meats or cold meat loaf may be used if you like. Otherwise, choose one of the following for your main course: Veal paprika with sour cream sauce, oysters in sherry, or creamed with celery, breast of turkey with special sauce, creamed lobster or crab with mushrooms, chicken pie or a casserole of meat.

The other wave of excitement, not to say disturbance, was caused by the President's special message asking congress for a wholesale reorganization of the executive departments and agencies—calling this proposal a plan for moderniz-

One can circulate through the corridors and offices of the Capitol and office buildings and hear mutterings aplenty and even a considerable bit of outspoken criticism by senators and representatives of the two circumstances I have mentioned. There are many members of the legislative branch who are entertaining a feeling that the demand for Supreme court co-operation was equivalent to carrying the ball out of bounds. But that part of the Presidential pronouncement is not likely, in the end, to produce the battle on the floor of the senate or house that will result from some phases of his "modernizing" program.

When the edly the consensus of those charged with responsibility for the job that may be brought in and offered with common sense must be used and discretion employed or else untold damage will be done to the government and to the whole economic structure of the nation, including the taxpayers.

The Presidential reorganization program was sweeping in character and that is the Reorganization reason why it has Program run into obstacles.

For example, the plan calls for placing the interstate commerce commission, the general accounting office, the federal trade commission and the civil service commission largely inside of oldestablished departments over which cabinet officers preside. Now, a cabinet officer is and always has been in the past a political apbacon fat. Add water and salt, pointee, an individual who had been active in promotion of a party campaign and usually one who has made important contributions of money to his party's campaign fund. So, it becomes plainly evident, I believe, that to place such agencies as those I have named in regular departments, is to place them completely under political domination. Where it is good, therefore, to place strictly administrative agencies under cabinet control, it becomes equally dangerous to place under political domination such quasi-judicial agencies as the ICC and the general accounting office. There can be no doubt of that fact. in fat three minutes. Add meat and That is the crux of the disturbance among the legislators under the reorganization proposal.

Those of us who have had long experience as writers and observers in Washington have seen evidence in almost every administration of attempts of politicians to get their fingers into the pie of railroad rate making. They have adopted all sorts of tricks; they have used subterfuges and they have employed strong political pressure time after time to gain control of railroad rate making. Through all of these years since the ICC was established, there has always been enough sane minds in congress who. with White House backing, could resist this political move. Naturally, therefore, it is a matter of some question why President Roosevelt should attempt to toss the interstate commerce commission and its rate making power straight into the laps of the politicians.

Of course, the Presidential message on this point appears on its face to provide against the end that I have mentioned but old timers in congress point out how this wedge, driven only a little further, will bring about political domination of

It is hardly necessary here to set down all of the potential dangers that can emanate from political control of such a vast structure as the Washington.-Two messages to is unlimited in its possibilities. Dancongress by the President have gers are inherent in any program created more of that kind with which the politicians are identified and it appears to be a circumstance in which congress, if it is going to serve the people properly, should call a halt.

As to the general accounting office and the plan to include it in these were Presidential declara- the Treasury again under the rule of an auditor general, the reorganiberate and that means they are zation scheme simply will set control of public expenditures back a quarter of a century. One of the earlier Presidents made no effort he took occasion to tell congress to conceal the use that could be made of the auditing unit of the government when he said, on an occasion where the chief auditor ruled an expenditure illegal, that if it were not possible to change the ruling under the law, it still was possible to change the chief auditor.

> I am not making a charge that the present administration desires to spend congressional appropriations illegally; but one cannot dodge the conversations that are taking place around the Capitol in which legislators recall how President Roosevelt criticized John R. Mc Carl when he was comptroller general for a decision that prevented use of public money in a manner desired by the President. To sum up this particular phase of the situation, one hardly need to say more than that if the auditor general is a subordinate of the Secretary of the Treasury, he is likely to take orders from the Secretary of the Treasury, whoever that Secretary may be. And, since the Secretary of the Treasury is an appointee of the President and serves only at the President's pleasure, in my mind a link is established whereby the White House again will control determination of legality and illegality of expenditures.

Congress created the general accounting office in order that it would have an agency independent of the Chief Executive and the executive departments to keep tab or how those executive agencies expended the money which congress appropriated. That was the reason why the office of comptroller general was made to carry a fifteenyear appointment with removal only for malfeasance or misfeasance. Now it is proposed to tear down that structure and bring the whole auditing organization under a cabinet officer. But there is another phase to be considered. It has been my good fortune to be in Washington during the entire life of the general accounting office as well as for several years before. Of my own knowledge, I can say that the general accounting office has recovered millions of dollars of illegally disbursed funds as well as prevented illegal disbursement of other millions. It is a plain case, then, in which sound and honest administration has resulted because in cases where temptation for illegal use of public money has existed, administrative officials have resisted the temptation since, like the potential chicken thief in the country, they know that the sheriff or the constable or the state police are watch-

There seems to be more support for inclusion of the civil service commission in the form of a civil service administrator under an executive department than there is support for breaking up of the federal trade commission as the President proposed. Neither of these agencies has such an important bearing on the public as a whole as do the other two I have discussed. The plan to make the civil service administration subject to cabinet control was softened considerably by the President by inclusion of a proposal to make all government employes below policymaking grades subject to civil service laws. That is a big step forward, provided it is not a ruse to permit packing the lists with adherents of one political party or the other, whichever may be in power.

The federal trade commission, like the interstate commerce commission, is a quasi-judicial body. There has been objection to its present setup as prosecutor, judge and jury but many legislators bekeve this can be corrected without emasculating the agency and destroying its identity by putting it into an executive department. It ought to be free and independent and ought not to have any politician in a cabinet chair telling it what to do when it seeks to make business be hone.

So, it is with the courts of the country. It is my conviction that the federal courts have been the one bulwark in the preservation of our democracy at times when waves of public sentiment have surged forward in channels that were doomed to bring about destruction of all that is good in the republican form of government. To suggest, even, that the third branch of the government should "co-operate" is only a step from the proposal to make such quasi-judicial agencies as the interstate commerce commission and the federal trade commission subject to party platforms and political

MILK MUST BE

Milk salesmanship is vital to the dairy farmer. Bottle by bottle and pound by pound, milk and its products must be sold to the millions. Selling is the final step that turns milk into money. For 79 years Borden has worked at this highly specialized job of selling. Every day Borden advertising and Borden salesmen in this and other lands are at work selling the products of milk. Constant year-in and year-out effort to broaden the market is one reason why America has become the world's largest producer as well as the largest consumer of dairy products. The dairy farmer benefits accordingly.

STRIKES SET TO 'SWING' MUSIC

'Sit-Down' Strikers Have Their Fun, but Strict Self-Discipline Is Reminder That Objective Is Serious Business, After All.

Card games help to while away the time for sit-down strikers in Cleveland, while others in a Flint, Mich., plant are shown leaning out the windows to greet relatives and friends. AHATMA GHANDI may have started the sit-down strike. Maybe it was the miners of Hungary or Wales. Or again, it might have been French factory workers. But it took Americans to set it to "swing" music.

America's new strike technique, as fostered by impressarios John L. Lewis of the Committee for Industrial Organization and Homer Martin of the United Automobile Workers of America, may be of grim purpose and persistent determination, but it is also light in spirit.

Take a typical scene about a striking automobile body plant. Of considerable advantage if the Parked along the curbs and in the plant is located on the street, and street outside the plant are scores of cars containing sympathizers the success of the strike depends with the workers or simply the idly curious. Have they come in the hope of seeing some excitement-a riot, perhaps? No. They have come and other supplies to come in. If to listen to one of the nightly concerts played by the strikers' orchestra! And as the closing strains of strike sits down on its stomach. If "Pennies From Heaven" or "It's a plant has windows which open to De-Lovely" float out the windows the street, supplies may be passed down plant, there is a of the shu chorus of honking applause from the audience.

This is not an indication that the strikers are a bunch of loafers, bent on having a good time. It is actually one of the applications of "big business" methods to striking. If organized recreation makes happier industrial workers, so it makes strikers happier-and more effective. Concerts are a part of an efficiently-administered program of discipline and education which is a far cry from the conduct of strikes of the past.

Long Known in Mines.

It is also a far cry from the earliest "sit-down" strikes, which are mis-named, for the strikers do not actually sit down very much. They only remain inside the plant in to keep up the appearance of their which they worked, guarding the property against invasion by 'scabs' until their demands are Perhaps John L. Lewis, long known in mine labor circles, adapted this idea from a practice of miners over many_years past. A miner who was not being given enough timber to "shore" his place would squat and refuse to load any coal until the timber arrived. The superintendent usually lost no time in getting it to him.

The first stay-in or sit-down strike to gain wide attention was that in the mines of Pecs, Hungary, in 1934. Miners down in the shafts refused to come up and even threatened to commit suicide en masse if their working conditions and pay were not improved. A year later the same idea was adopted by workers in colleries of Wales.

The sit-down strike became so widely applied in France last year it produced a crisis which was relieved only when the government, in a great hurry, passed a new collective bargaining measure and several other labor laws.

Strikers "Protect" Property.

In the United States it first received wide attention when employes of art and theater projects of the WPA "stayed-in" but refused to work until their demands were Workers claim that when they strike inside a plant, they actually protect the property. But while they are there, the company cannot put anyone else on their jobs. Company officials claim this is trespassing and illegal.

First act of the union when a sitdown strike is called is to choose groups of pickets and captains, to cial union messengers transport through the gates or hoist up to the windows.

There is no liquor for anyone. For, while there is no objection to the strikers' having a good time during their siege, the objective is too precious to risk what even one lone striker might do if he were "not himself".
Discipline in some plants approaches military standards. The rules, self-imposed, are rigidly obeyed; the few infractions are punished swiftly and severely. The old fraternity house method is used in the majority of cases; the non-conformist is made to "assume the anover a table or box, after which his fellows vigorously apply barrel staves upon the strategic spot. The offense is seldom repeat-

The orderly conduct of the strikers is aptly illustrated by one plant. Men Do Own Washings.

A bugle call arouses the men from their slumbers at 7 a. m. Some take advantage of the shower baths pro vided in the plant; everybody washes well, behind the ears and all. Forty-five minutes later in the company cafeteria the breakfast sent in by the women folks is served -fruit, cereal, milk, coffee, rolls and doughnuts. For lunch there will orderly for long unless their minds be stew, dessert and coffee. At night meat, potatoes, vegetables, coffee and dessert.

When they have finished breakfast, the men patrol their assignments. The plant is kept almost as clean as it is when there is no strike on. They do their own laundry in some cases; the conveyor lines resemble back yards on wash day. Some of the men, of course, send their laundry home.

Time is not allowed to drag. When the work is done the strikers may, if they wish, attend classes which are conducted under the auspices of the union officials. Here they may be instructed in public speaking, economics, physical culture and, to be sure, labor problems.

Propaganda With Entertainment. There are generally two important meetings every day. The ers and their families or friends outstrikers' executive committee meets and discusses the progress of the movement at noon; later on are employed in attempts to get there is a general meeting at which the men out and home for a few all the strikers are advised as to hours; guards are told that Sam what is going on. After dinner at night there is invariably community entertainment, pneumonia. Pickets soon learn to such as might be found in a boys' camp. Radios provide music for before giving a striker a pass-out community singing part of the time. In addition, a not-half-bad orchestra can usually be rounded up from fortable as might be imagined. In the ranks of the strikers.

In the regular employes' meetings and "parties" when there is no strike on, the company seldom fails to include propaganda designed to promote happier relations between employer and employe. And in the parties of the strikers there is plenty of propaganda supplied by the leaders to keep up enthusiasm for the strike. Mixed in with the "swing" music and hill-billy songs is an occasional paraphrase of a familiar ballad-a new lyric reminding the strikers of the advantages to be gained if they will continue to be persistently patient. Perhaps the importance of the sitdown strike as a weapon of labor depends upon the very discipline which has been developed and maintained. It is not hard to see that an idle mob, banded constantly together for days, might get out of hand, act rashly and by some act of violence defeat its own ends. @ Western Newspaper Union.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued -17-

People came and the house was full. Lucy and her family from Pattern Landing, Jenny and her family from Horsepen Branch, all came bearing baskets of food for the wedding. Cynthia gave them welcome, trying as usual to convince herself that these were her sisters, born of Sparrel and Julia in this house, and married here as she herself was about to be. But they with their silent men remained strange to her, even though they took possession of the house and acted as if it were their own wedding. The children were irrepressible, climbing become imbecilities when about the barn and sheds, watching the sheep and the newborn lambs, feeding the horses and mules: they were her nephews and nieces more than her sisters were sisters. She liked them around her. "They will grow up in their turn, I reckon, to carry on the place. Unless they're like Abral and Jesse. What, I wonder, will my chli-dren grow up to be like, not born on

Wolfpen but down at the mouth of People from Gannon Creek came all morning to be at the wedding of Cynthia Pattern. It was also their third journey within a year; "I'm sure glad to go there to a wedding, after all the trouble they've had in that house." The womenfolk took over the big kitchen, the men the barn, the yard and the barn-lot. They were impressed, as always, by the ingenuity of the Pattern men in inventing improvements around the house. They commended Jasper on the place he had to start out with, they asked Jesse about the law, and Reuben about the business boom in the Ohio Valley. Shellenberger, returning from Pittsburgh and the river towns, condescendingly joined them. The biggest business in history was sweeping to the west now. He might consider leasing and buying up Gannon Creek land in reach of the creek for lumbering.

Sheriff Hatler and his deputies came, pleased with the law. They thought they had captured the man who murdered Sparrel. They had him in jail over at Williamson. The sheriff was going over there in person after this wedding of Cynthia Pattern, the daughter of Sparrel. He talked a great deal: "A good match this is, That young Warren feller has a head on him. A fine surveyor, too, they say. Doing big things down the river. Getting the finest girl in this valley, if you ask my opinion. A fine couple they make. Yes, she give up Doug Mason long before he got smashed. Sparrel told me. Yes. sure, Doug's a good boy all right, but not the one for that girl, much less now. But I tell you, boys, I'd rather put a rope around the neck of the dirty devil that waylaid Sparrel Pattern than put an arm around the purtiest girl in these hills, 'pon my honor I would. Have a drink to it."

Amos Barnes came over with the Fergusons, having stopped with them the night before. He had set aside this day ever since he had married Jasper and Jane Burden at Pikeville.

Cynthia almost grew to love Jane for they way she came into the house after her marriage to Jasper. Jane was radiant in her own happiness: it overflowed her heart and expanded to include the whole Pattern household. She maintained the most admirable poise between the new mistress of the house as Jasper's wife, and a guest of honor at Cynthia's wedding. There were no bristling or stuck-up city ways about her. She was helpful, unobtrusively managing the details of the kitchen and assigning guests to the bedrooms. The womenfolk spoke of it: "I reckon she can carry on a place right well-Jasper's wife is a mighty fine girl.-Yes, she takes right a-hold of things.-She'll be a good manager.-Jasper might have gone further and fared worse.-Julia always said she was a fine girl.—She comes from mighty good people, Jane Burden does. -Wolfpen's a good place and I don't reckon it'll suffer any with her in the Jasper moved around as the head of the house. It amused Cynthia, when she had time to give it a thought, to see Jasper consciously trying to act the role of Sparrel, imitating his stride across the yard, his phrases of welcome to men and women, his inflections, his courtesy and manner in the house. There is nobody else in the world he could better pattern after, though, and I don't reckon anybody else besides me notices it. Maybe it'll come natural to him after a while."

Cynthia wanted to be married in her mother's wedding dress. "It will be like having her here herself," she thought. "Maybe she is. The way I used to talk about Grandfather Saul stalking around over the place. In her dress, enveloping me in her, that would be a good omen of happiness like hers." The dress had been long in the cedar-lined closet. It smelled of the trees and was scarcely faded. The shoulders and the waist were exact in their fit, but the skirt was an inch and a half too long. Jane and Lucy bent on their knees and pinned it up; then they ran a neat hem around its wide fullness. "If I had been only two inches taller, or an inch, say. Lucy and Jenny are tall. But I have better shoulders and a waist like Mother's and it's no real trouble to stitch

She was beautiful in this gown, so daintily quaint; the heavy coil of black hair above the smooth soft skin of her forehead, her cheeks pinkflushed, and the look in her eyes as they turned up to Reuben's. People spoke of it. She stood with him on the porch by the door to the parlor so the people could see the ceremony. All Wolfpen was aglow with the day, the sense of new life throbbing through the hollow.

me remember all you folks." Shellenberger brought gifts: a gray telescope with leather bound edges and brass corners and yellow straps around it, and a silk umbrella.

"You've been mighty good to me, you and your folks. Here's a little present for you. I wish you much happiness." That was all he ever said about the board money. The people thought the gifts princely, in keeping with Shellenberger and the fine words on a cultivated tongue. Cynthia at first hardly knew whether to take them or not. But the telescope was a beautiful piece of luggage for a young bride going away for the first time on a far jourey, and she had never had an umbrella. "A body doesn't pay money for a place to sleep and a bite to eat in our country, anyway. I reckon it was right nice of him to think of it." In the evening when the people were gone away, Hessie Mason remained, silently waiting a chance to say a word to Cynthia,

"Ma was a right smart worried she couldn't come." "I wish she could have come, Hessie. You tell her." (Should I ask her about Doug? or just let it pass like it is? Ask, just as if nothing ever happened.) "And how is Doug?"

There was reproach in the sallow eyes as Hessie spoke, "He still frets a sight. He's been calming down some now. He's learning to do things all right now. He plowed the garden yesterday. If he turns his head to the off side, he can see the furrow. He stumbles a bit, and when he cuts too wide a swath he gets in a fit of temper. It makes a body right heart-sick to watch him. If some people had done the right by him it wouldn't never have happened. He won't give up. He's going to do all the plowing. I reckon he'll get along all right. All this she uttered in a slow even voice.

"I hope he does, Hessie." "He's powerful proud. He knew he couldn't have you after it happened to him. He'd kill hisself to try to do about the place just like nothing happened. He won't let anybody say anything about it."

This seemed to be the thing she wanted to say, more with her eyes full the stone jars in the doorway and of reproach and the tone of her solos

While Jesse and Reuben were strapping the small trunk and the new telescope on the pack-mule, Cynthia made a last visit about the house. She went through each room. She took down the Boone powder-horn and Sparrel's pioneer clothing and looked at them. She went into the medicine-room to smell the herbs her father had left there. She charged Jane to watch over the things her father had left in the desk by the mantel. She went into the weaving room for the last time and sat by the loom, feeling the tears form, lifting in her hands a ball of yarn, the last one Julia had dved. "It isn't so easy to leave everything. Maybe Jane will learn to use it. She takes hold of things. But it isn't so easy.' Then she took the two volumes of the history worn yellow by Sparrel's thumbs through the years when he read to her, and a few packets of the flower-seeds Sparrel had gathered from Julia's garden, and packed them to carry away with her.
