I'M A NEW WOMAN THANKS TO PURSANG

Yes, Pursang contains, in properly balanced proportions, such iron elements as organic copper and iron. Quickly stimulates appetite and aids nature in building rich, red blood even in cases of simple anemia. When this happens, energy and strength usually return. You feel like new. Get Pursang from your druggist.

Surest cash crop.. MILK

America's most important crop is milk—surest and largest source of farm cash. The markets for milk and cream, though often full to overflowing, never fail to bring cash income to the producer. Everyone in the dairy business depends on the development of more outlets for milk and milk products. This takes constant telling and retelling of the story of quality—of cleanliness on farms and in factories. Continuous research and aggressive salesmanship must convince the world that milk is the most important food.

Borden research, invention and selling effort, have contributed for 80 years to the world wide appreciation of milk and milk products.

THIS BANK, in its daily work of rendering helpful financial services, is guided by certain basic principles which we consider fundamental to sound banking. These principles are closely related to the obligations this bank assumes toward its depositors, stockholders, borrowers, and the whole community.

Briefly stated, these are four guiding principles of this bank

- TO OUR DEPOSITORS
This bank holds as its foremost objective the safeguarding of funds entrusted to our care by depositors.
- TO OUR BORROWERS
This bank seeks to grant sound loans to qualified borrowers—always bearing in mind our primary obligation to depositors.
- TO OUR STOCKHOLDERS
This bank assumes the responsibility of so conducting its business that the capital investment of stockholders will be protected and will earn a fair return.
- TO OUR COMMUNITY
This bank endeavors, through good loans and other essential banking services, to serve the vital needs and general progress of our community.

HONESTY and skill in management, which command the confidence and support of its customers and its community, are the means by which this bank seeks to meet its obligations to these four groups of people.

Cattle Make Gain on Good Roughage

Well-Balanced Diet Found Profitable; Calves Also Benefit.

By E. T. Robbins, Live Stock Extension Specialist, University of Illinois.

Cattle feeders with limited grain supplies are finding that thin cattle make cheap and fairly rapid gains on plenty of good well-balanced roughage.

Profiting by their experience following the 1934 drought, farmers went into the winter with a better supply of good roughage than they had that year. At meetings cattle feeders have told about the steady increase in flesh which yearlings and older calves are making with practically no grain for the first few months, a practice which has been recommended by the extension service of the agricultural college for a number of years.

Even calves with just a little grain are gaining about 1½ pounds a day and putting on some fat, getting ready for a short fall feeding the last few months before marketing.

Cattle which are getting much silage usually are receiving much cottonseed meal. Large steers on silage are doing well with an addition of three or four pounds of cottonseed meal a day. When some legume hay is included in the ration to supply protein, less cottonseed meal is fed.

Calves on silage with some legume hay, a little oats and one or two pounds a day of cottonseed meal are gaining nicely. It is suggested that these amounts of the high protein feed should balance the ration to meet fully the needs of the cattle. This is a good plan especially since such feeds are relatively cheap.

Soy bean oil meal is more suitable than cottonseed meal to use without silage.

Overcoming Tuberculosis

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

The first thought in treating a patient is to learn just what is causing the symptoms. Sometimes the symptoms are not very severe or pronounced and the physician has to make a number of examinations before he feels certain of the nature of the trouble.

Thus a few years ago when a young adult complained of being tired all the time and losing weight, the physician would suspect tuberculosis or "consumption," as it was then called, but there might not be much in the way of other symptoms to guide him. There might be very little cough, no pain in the chest, no spitting of blood.

However, since the discovery of the valuable help that an X-ray of the chest can give, this method of examination is now used everywhere to prove or disprove the existence of a tuberculous spot or spots in the lung tissue.

Dr. Barton

Death Rate at Its Lowest.

When we remember that some years ago a victim of tuberculosis was doomed just as a victim of pernicious anemia and diabetes until quite recently, it is gratifying to know that the fight against tuberculosis is now successful. Thus during the past year the death rate from tuberculosis in North America is the lowest it has ever been.

The treatment has not varied during the past thirty years; it consists of fresh air and sunshine, rest, and nourishing food. When the temperature keeps at normal, light exercise is given which is gradually increased up to five hours of light work daily.

Rest is the biggest factor in the treatment because every movement of the body means that a little more air must be breathed into the lungs and if the lungs are to heal they also must be resting, as much as possible.

Causes of Tuberculosis.

When an individual is apparently going down hill physically, face pale, skin pallid or "dirty-looking," loss of strength, loss of weight, dislike for any mental or physical work, pains in joints and muscles, tongue pale, flabby and easily marked or indented by the teeth, then it is not hard to understand that something is certainly wrong in the body somewhere. If little red spots appear on the skin, first on the legs and later on other parts, which spots later become quite large as if blood were immediately under the skin, and swellings appear in the bend of the elbows and knees, the physician knows that he has a well developed case of scurvy to treat.

Scurvy, or scorbutis as it is called, is due to a lack of vitamin C in the food that is eaten and so fruit and vegetables containing this vitamin—canned or fresh—is the immediate treatment. These foods are oranges, lemons, white of egg, later followed by other foods containing vitamin C, that is potatoes, watercress, raw cabbage, onions, carrots, turnips, tomatoes.

However, physicians have been realizing for some years now that there are other conditions in the body in which, though the symptoms are not so outstanding as in scurvy, are nevertheless due to a lack of some necessary mineral or vitamin in the foods eaten; at least not enough of these substances to fulfill the needs of this particular individual.

Thus a patient may be pale, lack strength, have little or no appetite, and an examination of the blood will show that anaemia—lack of iron—is present. Although the iron contained in all the cells of the body is only 1 part in 25,000 of the body weight, nevertheless every one of these tiny cells must have some iron in it if it is to do its work properly. The foods containing, or rich in, iron are meat (especially liver), egg yolk, leafy vegetables—and peas, fresh and dried.

Another mineral that is often lacking, one which is needed for building bone and teeth, building nerve tissue and making the blood more "sticky" and thus helping the healing of sores, ulcers, or other skin conditions is calcium, or lime as it is usually called. The individual wonders why he feels so weak, lacks appetite, and has little resistance to ailments. The treatment here is the eating of foods that are rich in lime. The foods rich in lime are spinach, cauliflower, turnip, dried peas and beans, dates, figs, raisins, milk, cheese, egg-yolk.

It is surprising the way an increase in the foods containing iron and calcium, most of which are likewise rich in phosphorus also, increase the weight, appetite, and general health and strength of many "run-down" individuals.

May Be Drafted

It is possible for an American-born citizen of foreign parents to be drafted for military service on visiting his parents' native land, under war conditions or in the absence of treaty between the United States and such land.

"The lord of misrule" was the master of revels in early times, especially Christmas and other festivities. The term is used as the title of a well-known poem.

AROUND the HOUSE

Items of Interest to the Housewife

For Good Gravy—Did you know that gravy, to be served with roast meat, will taste much nicer and contain more nutriment if it is made with the water in which the vegetables have been boiled?

Shrink the Cord—When loose covers for chairs, etc., are being made, boil the piping cord before using. This little precaution prevents unsightly puckers after the cover is washed.

New Hot-Water Bottles—Have a little glycerine added to the water with which hot-water bottles are filled for the first time. This will make the rubber supple, and the bottle will last longer.

For Stued or Boiled Puddings—Puddings will not stick to the basin if two strips of grease-proof paper are put across in the basin before the mixture is poured in.

Protecting Buttonholes—A row of machine-sewing around button holes in knit underwear prevents stretching and makes them last longer.

Boiling Old Potatoes—Old potatoes sometimes turn black during boiling. To prevent this add a squeeze of lemon juice to the water in which they are boiled.

Salmon in Rice Nests—Two cups of rich cream sauce, one egg yolk, two teaspoons lemon juice, one pound can salmon, one small can mushrooms, one cup rice, two hard cooked eggs. Beat egg yolks slightly and add to the hot cream sauce with the lemon juice. Add the salmon and the sliced mushrooms and heat

Preparing Salted Nuts—An ideal manner in which to prepare your salted nuts, take your blanched nuts, wash oil. Sprinkle nuts very lightly with one cup of nuts in one layer in a baking pan. Heat oven to 375 degrees—occasionally they may be removed from the oven, spread on crumpled newspaper to absorb any surplus oil.

Removing Stains on Vegetables—Vegetable stains can be removed from the hands by rubbing with a slice of raw potato.

BRITAIN SPEEDS AIR RAID DEFENSE

Steps Up Gas Mask Production to 100,000 Daily; Aim Is One for Every Citizen; Urges Gas-Proof Rooms in Homes.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

GREAT BRITAIN has suddenly become conscious that her "set little isle" is a perfect "set-point" for enemy air raiders. The possibilities of incendiary bombs falling from the skies upon London and other large cities, and the imaginary spectacle of thousands of citizens choking in yellow clouds of pure poison gas have narrowed the British defense program to the point where it is intended that there will be a good gas mask for every inhabitant and a gas-proof chamber in every home.

Schools in air raid defense are being conducted to train instructors who will, in turn, train groups of citizens to protect themselves. Vast propaganda mills are turning out more than one million leaflets a day, dealing with various types of poisonous gases, their use in air raids, and the methods by which they may be avoided. Local Red Cross and other aid societies are being mobilized to carry advance defense units. Newspapers carry almost daily news about the anti-air raids program in every home.

There seems here a feeling of anticipation that some murky night when the sky is dark and the stars are shining brightly, a radio wave will strike every home with the dread "Air raid!" Then as the siren wails, the call, shriek and alarm through the London fog, children and even the old will be wearing the gas mask respirators that make the air safe to breathe. Some are already in the streets, some are waiting for the cover of their homes, where for some time in anticipation of this attack they have been sealed, airtight and gas-proof. Grottesquely masked and masked crews will man the streets in search of unfortunate stragglers. Anti-aircraft batteries will be firing the skies for the death-dealing invaders.

No Air Raid Insurance.

Is this a fantastic dream? If it is, then the British government is wasting huge annual appropriations for air raid defense. The home of the world's most advanced and most needed insurance industry is not insuring its citizens against the possibility of a gas raid. The insurance companies are overlooking millions of dollars in new business.

There is a pretty good indication of the reality of the menace. The insurance companies, with their vast facilities for research, are hesitating far wrong in gauging the danger of a risk. If you have a manufacturing plant in Great Britain, you will find insurance against air raids. You'll find it next to impossible. Many firms refuse to underwrite any such insurance. Some of them will insure a plant for more than a fraction of the cost.

It was only about a year ago the British public was shocked and incensed at reports that Italian air forces were dropping deadly gas bombs upon helpless women and children in Ethiopia. Great Britain, with most of the other powers of the world had signed the Geneva Gas Protocol of 1925, outlawing the use of poison gas in warfare. But today she is not so certain that this is any real protection. She has suddenly realized that, according to reports, one great local authorities throughout the British Isles. One of the most important things it has done, by far, is to arrange with manufacturers for the production of gas masks at the rate of 100,000 a day. It is hoped that by pursuing this program the government can, in time of war, provide every man, woman and child in Britain with a gas mask.

The government is already paying for the first distribution of these respirators, the early production going to police units, volunteer brigades and nursing services. These will be the first in the field should actual defense become necessary. For citizens not enrolled in these organizations, gas masks are being stored in supply depots, ready for emergency.

Co-operation Is Voluntary.

The ARP is continually urging local authorities to organize anti-gas and anti-bomb units. There is now an air raids precautions committee in virtually every borough and county council. These are making the advance preparations for bomb shelters and gas-proof first aid posts, and are training rescue squads.

Preparations have not yet reached the point that the government is making the organization of local rescue and defense brigades mandatory. They are still being invited to join on a voluntary basis.

There is a certain standardization developed among these local groups which will make it easy for the government, at a moment's notice, to convert them all into one vast national organization. Up to date the local authorities have been bearing most of the expense of organization, but it is understood now that the government is in a position to give financial aid to communities where local funds are not available. The government is now purchasing large supplies of bleaching powder for decontamination purposes, respirators and first aid equipment, which will be prepared to distribute nationally in an emergency.

Co-operation in the anti-gas and anti-air raid campaign is being given the government by the British Red Cross society and the Order of St. John Ambulance brigade. Members of these societies are being urged also to join the local precautionary services, and to participate in air raid rehearsals and gas protection demonstrations. The Red Cross in London is conducting a series of lectures on the use and care of anti-gas respirators, the construction of gas-proof rooms in homes and the treatment of gas casualties.

Fear Incendiary Bombs.

One of the most fearful possibilities of an air raid is a rain of incendiary bombs. These of late years have been developed to a very high degree of efficiency, and are capable of spreading disastrous fire rapidly with terrific toll. The Barnes Borough Council of London has recommended to the ARP a type of local organization which is regarded as having considerable merit in fighting the incendiary bomb as well as poison gas. The Barnes engineer suggests that his borough be divided into fire-fighting areas, with a volunteer sub-brigade, trained in the use of respirators, in each area. These brigades would be equipped to put out fires caused by incendiary bombs. Camouflaged trenches would be used for protection against gas attack.

DEPUTY of the DEVIL

by Ben Ames Williams

He nodded, humbly, accepting this; and a little later they returned indoors.

Doctor Greeding that night was unable to sleep, but lay with his eyes open, staring at the ceiling. Dawn found him with burning eyes. He went to swim, and found in the water peace and contentment for a while. But later, after he had dressed again, the sultry heat settled down once more, smothering and stifling him. He relieved Mary Ann's vigil by Dan's side, and saw that Dan was better. Infection must almost certainly have set in before now, if it were to be feared at all; and Mary Ann pointed this out.

"His temperature's normal," she whispered. Dan was still asleep. "I think the danger is past."

Doctor Greeding nodded. "I think so," he agreed. "It's only a matter of nursing now, of avoiding complications."

"I'll see to that," she promised, and left him. He recognized the fact that his task was done, that Dan would live.

But with this miracle accomplished, his life was left completely empty now; and at the thought, great weariness oppressed him. He who all night had been unable to sleep, suddenly surrendered to deep slumber. He went to the couch in the billiard-room and lay down; and when presently Nancy came and found him there, she covered him over tenderly. He slept till almost noon, while the others moved quietly so that he might not be disturbed.

And he woke to peace, a content and ordered mind. . . .

Dan was fretful that afternoon. The heat irked him, and returning strength gave him sufficient energy to resent it. Nancy was distressed by his mood, till Mary Ann jubilantly reassured her.

"It's the best possible sign," she said. "When a sick man begins to be sulky and bad-tempered, you may know he's getting well."

So Nancy was amused. The early afternoon she spent with Dan—Doctor Greeding was in his room, and she and Dan found themselves involved in one of those arguments without either a beginning or an end, which may arise between two people who are close to one another. He was flushed with something like anger when Mary Ann returned and found them so, and Nancy said laughingly:

"Mary Ann, you stay with him for a while. He's unbearable! I'm going swimming!" She spoke to Dan. "Don't you wish you could? It will be so beautifully cool!"

Dan growled, half angrily: "That's right, make it tough for me. Go on, get out of here!"

She kissed him on the forehead. "I'm going!"

"Kiss me right," he demanded. "Don't peek like that."

"You don't deserve it," she protested. "But—there." And she left him with Mary Ann.

She swam, then lay on the wharf, half-asleep. The afternoon was stiflingly hot; but to the northwest, clouds were banking, and she heard a far roll of thunder, and thought a shower was near, and was grateful for the approach of this relief. After a while she saw her father come down to the beach and go into the water, and she called ironically: "Beautifully cool, isn't it?"

"Great," he agreed. He said: "Shower coming!"

She nodded, and watched him lazily, through half-closed eyes. He swam slowly, strongly, out into the lake. He often did this; often swam from the island to the mainland half a mile away. That he should do so now was not remarkable; but she called: "Going across?"

He did not answer, probably did not hear her. She thought of joining him for the long swim, but was too much at ease.

The clouds yonder came racing toward her, a dark wall streaked now and then by lightning's flame. She watched these flashes, thrilling to the beauty of them, waiting ardently for the slashing of rain across her body.

Doctor Greeding swam straight away from shore, yet not with any purpose in his mind save to commit himself to the embrace of the cool water. Once or twice he paused, floating on his back, utterly relaxed, resting. The island, the world, was far away. Floating thus, he thought, suddenly, that Myra was here beside him; and this was absurd, because Myra had never been a strong swimmer, never ventured far from shore. Yet it seemed to him that she was here, smiling tenderly, her eyes full of the sublime and forgiving love of which only women are capable.

It was treacherously beautiful and comforting to think of her close to him; he turned on his side to face her, to speak to her. . . . But she was not here.

He heard Nancy's halloo: "Are you all right, Father?"

He shouted: "Yes, of course."

"I thought I heard you call."

"No. I'm all right."

He could see Nancy standing by the springboard, looking toward him; his eyes devoured her for a moment more. Then he swam on, toward the outer shore.

Nancy watched him, his head a dark dot on the lake's mirror surface, and she watched the approaching shower. A veil of rain obscured the farther hills and swept down to the lake and darkened the water and raced toward her. It was a deluge, hiding everything. She saw it reach her father and conceal him from her eyes; and she stayed awhile there on the wharf, welcoming the cool downpour on her body, holding up her face to the sweet, rain, opening her arms as though to a lover.

The shower continued for half an hour; but long before it ended, she was almost chilled; and she went up to the house to dress. She was in her room when the rain ceased, suddenly; the shower moved away down the lake withdrawing like a curtain, like a wall.

It had swept away the hot, stale, stifling air which had oppressed them for so long. Then suddenly the sun shone, wetly, smilingly; the world was washed bright and clean and beautiful. Nancy had a great sense of well-being, of security. She came downstairs.

Mary Ann and Jerrell were with Dan. She saw Professor Carlisle on the veranda, and went out to him.

"This is better, isn't it?" she said happily.

"Sunshine after rain," he assented. "Nothing more beautiful." Then he asked slowly: "Where is your father?"

She looked out across the lake. "He swam over to the other shore, I expect," she replied.

He said, in mild surprise: "That's a long swim."

"Oh, he often does it," she assured him, assent to some remark, as though accepting the explanation of some matter which for a while had puzzled and disturbed him, and his brow cleared, and trouble left his eyes.

It was in fact impossible, in the bright radiance of the sunshine, to believe that in this world so newly washed and cleansed, any dark bluish cloud remained.

No trace of Doctor Greeding ever was found. He had vanished as if withdrawn by some superior power after he had served his purpose.

(THE END)

Murmurings of Spring

"IF YOU'D take a few steps, Sis, I believe I'd be inspired to answer that question, 'Did you ever see a dream walking?' You are nothing less than devastating—truly a menace!"

"You meow so sweetly, Connie. I'm a bit suspicious that this little peplum frock of mine has got you catty. Your eyes really aren't green by rights, you know."

Connie Sews Her Own.

"How could you? I think my dress looks as nice on me as yours does on you. Why practically all of the girls at the Laf-a-Lot last night wanted to know where I found such a lovely frock. Not one of them guessed that I made it myself. And did I feel elegant when I played Mendelssohn's Spring Song on Diane's new baby grand! The girls said I fit into the picture perfectly. I thought if only Dwight could see me now."

"I still say my two-piece with its piped peplum, cute little buttons and stream-lines is the No. 1 spring outfit in this woman's town."

Mother Happens Along.

"Girls, girls, if your tails were only half as pretty as your frocks you'd be better off. Sometimes I wonder if you wouldn't be more appropriately titled The Cheek Twins, rather than The Chic Twins."

"Okay, Mother, you win. Let's change the subject by changing clothes. We'll put on our collottes and join you in a round of golf, how's that? Gee, Mother, you never look sweeter than when you're wearing a casual young two-piece shirt dress. The plaid pique is just the thing for you, too. In fact, Mom, you're just about tops from any angle."

The Patterns.

Always a Loser

He who rests satisfied in merely defending himself against sarcasm and abuse is always a loser.—Goethe.

Smiles

Sissies

"Had you the car out last night, son?"

"Yes, dad. I took some of the boys for a run."

"Well, tell the boys I found one of their little lace handkerchiefs."

How Could It Be?

"Yes, sir, these are the ruins of a building that was in existence 2,500 years ago," declared the guide.

"What rubbish!" one member of the tourist party answered. "Why, it's only 1937 now."

DISTURBING THE PEACE

Friend—Put on the muffler, man!

Film Star (pointing)—That's the third night running she's been out with her husband. Some publicity stunt, I suppose.

Wanting Practice

"Gram'ma, if I was invited out to dinner somewhere, should I eat my pie with a fork?"

"Certainly, Vernon."

"You haven't got a piece of pie in the house that I could practice on, have you, Gram'ma?"

And So He Did

Judge—Why did you steal the woman's carpet?

Tramp—I did not steal it.

Judge—She says you stole it.

Tramp—She said, "Take that carpet and beat it."
