its second Badger State league game of the season on the home field last Sunday to a strong Fond du Lac club by a 5 to 2 score in an interesting contest. The loss dropped the team into a tie for first place with Kohler and Grafton, who won their games

Big Francis Spangle on the hill for the visitors proved a little too tough with his fast ball. He allowed only seven hits and fanned eight, but luckily escaped being scored upon in the pinches a number of times. Marx pitched a good game, allowing nine hits and striking out five, but was

No runs were scored by either team until the fifth inning when Fond du Lac jumped into the lead with a three run barrage. They scored again in the sixth and ninth. Kewaskum got one run in the sixth and another in the eighth. Outstanding fielding by Skinner and Bixby saved Spangle in the ninth inning.

Claus, who replaced Kudek in left field, came through with two hits out of two attempts and Jagmin banged out two for four, one a double. A home run and a double by Felda was the best for the visitors. Kronforst and Ohlrich also collected two hits

The Fond du Lac team is gaining strength rapidly and is one of the best in the league at present, which will provide plenty of trouble from now on. Besides, the team was "hot' Sunday and the result was an upset victory over the league leaders. Spangle, their new twirler, has won two straight. The game by innings:

COUNTY LEADERS WARN MOTORISTS OVER HOLIDAY

NUMBER 39

Washington county safety leaders today joined the State Higr:way Commission of Wisconsin i urging motorists of Kewaskum and Washington county to walk and drive carefully over the three days marking the Fourth of July holiday.

State highway officials have estimated that 10 Wisconsin residents will be killed in traffic accidents over the week-end, if the present accident rate continues, and that the number may run to 19," it was pointed out today by Harold J. R'ley. He declared that Washington county safety leaders are anxious to have this county's record free from all Fourth of July fatalities this year. "Through the press and over the radio, state and county safety leaders are appealing to motorists and pedestrians to use extreme care over the Fourth of July. Only through the assrming of individual responsibility, can we hope to cut down on the number of automoble accidents to be expected in heavy traffic over a double

Safety leaders advocate starting ong trips in the early morning when traffic is lightest, and urge motorists to conclude their day's driving before nightfall, thus escaping the added dangers and fatigue of night driving. Passing on curves and hills should be absolutely avoided, and every intersection should be the signal to slow down, for death and injury will lurk there. More people will be killed by excessive speed and careless driving on the straight roads than elsewhere; fast driving will be especially hazardous over the Fourth when the state may see its heaviest traffic flow. If every pedestrian would keep off the rural pavements and cross city streets only at intersections on the nights of July 3 and 4, much of Wisconsin's death toll could be avoided, the state highway commission be-

OT only do some of the vast government dam projects provide subjects for controversy in political circles, irrigation for desert wastes and electric power for vast producing areas. They are assuming a new importance in the lives of our people, especially at this time of year. They are becoming major attractions for summer va-

Mr. Average American, with two weeks out of the year for his vacation, likes to cram just as much into that fortnight as he possibly can. His mountains must be gigantic, his vistas colossal, his waterfalls terrific and his automobile trips long and rapid. He is usually somewhat impressed by the Grand Canyon.

Small wonder then, that sights such as Boulder dam, the Grand Coulee and the Bonneville dam projects interest him. They are big. scenic and wonderful. And because they are government projects they have that patriotic appeal which is characteristically American.

The United States government hardly planned Boulder dam as a summer recreation project, and it is not yet as well equipped to entertain the thousands of tourists now visiting the dam as it will be in the near future. But in great throngs the vacationers come and after their souls have been satisfied with the enormity of it all they find they can have one whale of a time in, on and around Lake Mead, above the dam and the largest man-made body of water on earth.

Will Develop Appeal.

After all, swimming in the heart of a desert is a thrill that should appeal to the American temperament. The clear blue water in the shadow of the mountain peaks and the great dam is also a magnificent setting for boating, fishing and aquaplaning.

In an effort to encourage the movement already started the government has ordered the national parks service, together with the bureau of reclamation, to launch a program designed to make the Boulder dam region more attractive than ever. First of all a number of public bath houses were built on the beach, which is artificial like the lake and a short distance from Boulder City, home of the workers on the project. Floating rafts have been provided, and life guards sit upon high seats to guard the safety of bathers, just as if this might be only one movie house in Boulder City—there are enough natural curiosities and marvels to make the visitor lose his taste for night life. Within 200 miles are, in addition to the beautiful canyons mentioned above, the Joshua Tree National forest, the Painted Desert, Petrified forests, the Mad Valley of Fire, Eldorado canyon, and many other sights, including many Indian settlements. Nature in remarkable mood exists up and down as well as across. You can descend to 360 feet below sea level in Death Valley and, f you are agile enough, you can get up 12,500 feet on San Francisco

The government is stocking Lake Mead with bass, and although the fishing is not yet quite up to par there will be all you can take care of in another two years. Bridle paths are being laid out and within a short time there will also be plenty of dude-ranch facilities nearby. The building of tennis courts as well as desert gardens is included in the plans. There are good hotels near Boulder dam, and there is a government camping ground where the visitor may camp for nothing.

Are Earthquakes Possible?

Mead lake itself remains the biggest vacation attraction. It was created by the backing up of 41,518,-125,000 tons of water from the dam. ica whether or not this great, un-

Bonneville dam rises in some of the ruggedly beautiful country of the Northwest. The wild Columbia has cut a chasm two-thirds of a mile deep through the mountains. Bradford island causes the river to split into two rapid streams, roaring, whirling and throwing spray. From the island to the Oregon shore is the power station, and from the Washington shore to the island is the spillway. The power house and spillway are connected by an earthen dam which runs across the island and is 170 feet high. The entire chain, which is 3,850 feet long, will create a lake 65 miles long, upon which steamers will one day travel into the Cascade mountain

Cost Is $45,000,000.

Bonneville dam will have cost $45,000,000 by the time it is completed. With Grand Coulee dam it forms the first serious attempt to harness the Columbia, which river network is the second largest in the country. The river basin, which extends into the states of Idaho, Washington, Montana, Oregon, Nevada, Utah and Wyoming, is said to be five times as large as England.

It has never been possible before a short distance inland, but Bonnedam will attempt to change all that. In the dam is the world's highest navigation lock—a lift of 72 feet. On the Panama canal it requires three great locks to lift a ship only a little higher at Gatun lake. Bonneville itself is 42 miles east of Portland, but it is hoped that the locks will enable steamers to go 200 miles inland along the river.

The town of Bonneville has sprung up near the dam to house most of the workers on PWA project number 28. It is composed chiefly of tarpaper shacks such as the traveler might have seen in the earlier days of the West when the railroads were being built.

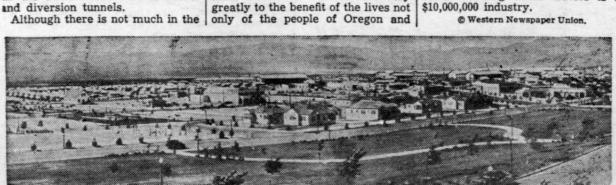

It is not likely that the living quarters of the construction workers needed to be built substantially enough to last a long time, for this is one federal project which is going ahead as it was planned. There have been no delays for political reasons or for lack of funds; only those caused by the river in some of its unsociable moods. Since the first surveyors came, things have moved right along. The excavating was done promptly, cribs and framework were installed, cranes and derricks started to work, and it was not long before Bonneville approached being a fact.

Where only a few rugged boulders once deterred the stream as it roared through a wilderness of cottonwoods and firs, today rise arched spillways and huge power intakes. The cost of the project was somewhat more than it was first estimated. This is because of an intricate system of locks and "ladders" for fish, for the salmon must be allowed to pass Bonneville to reach the headwaters of the ## Indians Are Skeptics.

Here is one point upon which the government and nature may not be able to get together; perhaps if the President's magic voice could explain it all to the fish over the radio everything might be all right, but there are those who say the salmon will never use the ladders. These unbelievers include most of the Cayuse Indians along the Columbia, whose ancestors were taking salmon out of the river long before the white man ever dreamed there was a new world beyond the western sun. "Bonneville means end of salmon," says their chies, George Red Hawk. And today the Columbia produces more salmon than any other river in the world; salmon fishing in its waters is a $10,000,000 industry.

tions of the congress lately deserve proposal decided to go about the job

Makes News One of these was probably as courageous a position as any group of senators ever has taken. The other action-by majority of the housewas shot through with the utmost cowardice and selfishness.

Lately, a group of senators, nearly all Democrats, took their political lives in their hands and delivered to the senate a report from its judiciary committee advising defeat of President Roosevelt's proposal to add six new justices of his own choosing to the Supreme court of the United States.

In my time in Washington, I believe I can say without qualification, there never has been a committee action in the house or senate in which the President, as the leader of the dominant party, received such a castigation on a legislative proposal as was given Mr. Roosevelt by Democrats who constituted the majority of the senate judiciary committee. They did not mince words in any respect. Whatever may be the merit of Mr. Roosevelt's proposal to add six justices of his own choosing to the highest court, the majority report of the judiciary committee left no stone unturned in disclosing objections to the proposal as opponents of the court reorganization scheme see Almost on the same day that senate Democrats were, in effect, breaking or revolting from the President's leadership, the Democratic majority in the house killed off a proposal for new taxes in the District of Columbia that would have resulted in taxing the salaries of representatives and senators and their office staffs. They were brazen about it. They were not going to vote an income tax upon themselves and they made no effort to conceal their reasons for refusing to accept the recommendations of a special tax subcommittee which was acting for the permanent committee in the house of the District of Columbia.

The District of Columbia committee, examining the budget for the seat of the federal government, was confronted with a deficit in the district finances and instructed its tax subcommittee to develop new sources of revenue in order that the District of Columbia might not to navigate the Columbia more than | get into debt. Among the taxes proposed was a tax on income of residents of the District of Columbia, which is synonymous with Washington, and it provided for taxing earnings here whether the person who earned the income was a resident of the capital city or not. That was too much. The majority in the house of representatives just could not take it. They voiced their objections openly and, being superior in numbers to those who believed that income in the District of Columbia should be taxed, they forced the tax bill back to the District of Columbia committee for revision. Indeed, they went further. The line of criticism of an income tax that would touch the sacred salaries of congressmen and senof forcing the committee to bring in a tax bill that would increase the tax on property in the federal area. Now, it is a fact that few members of the house and a very small number of senators have bought residences in Washington. They usually live in apartments or hotels or lease homes for the period that congress is in session. Consequently, a real estate tax will not and senators.

The indictment brought against the President's court plan by the senate judiciary Court Plan committee was quite unusual in Report many respects.

In the first instance, it was approximately fifteen thousand words in length; being in that regard probably the longest and most comprehensive analysis that any congressional committee ever has made of a piece of legislation. Certainly, it is the most extensive examination to be included in a committee report in the last quarter of a century.

Every argument advanced by the administration in support of the plan was picked to pieces and held up to public gaze; every possible reason for expansion of the court by the addition of six new justices was scrutinized and denounced and, then, the committee put forth some of its own ideas.

"It applies force to the judiciary," the committee said in a sentence that constituted one paragraph and thereby was emphasized.

"The only argument for the increase which survives analysis," the report added, "is that congress should enlarge the court so as to make the policies of this administration effective."

The bill was found by the seven Democrats and three Republicans who constituted a majority of the senate judiciary committee, to be 'a needless, futile and utterly dangerous abandonment of constitutionprinciple." It charged that the 'American system' of independence of the courts would be violated and that if the bill were to be enacted into law, "political control" over the judiciary branch of the government would pass into the hands of the President.

With the presentation of this terrific attack on the bill to the senate, a second unusual circumstance developed. Those Democrats who

Washington .- Two actions of sec- | were opposed to the President's more than ordi- of fighting the measure on the floor nary attention. in a manner seldom seen in the congress. These opponents from the Democratic ranks got together and chose Senator Wheeler of Montana as leader of the Democratic opposition to the Democratic President's court revision program. They gave him full authority to act, in-cluding the selection of a steering committee, a committee on strategy, to aid him.

Thus, in the senate now we have three major leaders. Senator Wheeler will speak for the court opposition; Senator Robinson of Arkansas as the leader of the Democratic party in the senate will lead the fight for passage of the court bill; and Senator McNary of Oregon will head up the Republicans as usual. Since all of the Republicans and Independents excepting only Senator La Follette, Progressive, of Wisconsin, are opposed to the court revision plan, Senator McNary and Senator Wheeler are working hand in glove against the regular Democratic line-up headed by Senator

It appears that the President is going to be badly defeated on this piece of legislation, but it is too early to be sure. Mr. Roosevelt is a powerful figure and he has political knowledge that must be de-'scribed as remarkable. He has with him in the senate some exceedingly able political strategists. It is thus a battle of wits.

Mr. Roosevelt has said several times that he will accept no compromises. There is a very definite feeling at the Capitol, however, that the President will be glad to have a compromise if he can get one and save the bill from complete wreckage. On the other hand, Senator Wheeler and his strategy committee have announced in no uncertain terms that they will defeat the bill or any compromise that s offered. Time alone can answer the question of what will come out of the President's proposal. At this writing, the odds certainly are against the President on the calls to mind the investigation by the joint house and senate committee that is now under way. This committee, made up of five representatives and five senators has begun a search to find out how taxpayers avoid taxes or reduce the amounts they would otherwise have to pay by various trick schemes. The committee has been given fifty thousand dollars with which to make the investigation and it is receiving able assistance from Under Secretary Roswell Magill and other Treasury experts on taxation.

Contrary to the outlook when Mr. Roosevelt released a vicious attack on tax dodgers and tax avoiders. this committee is getting down to real business and there is every reason to believe it will be able to recommend to congress changes ators was such as to have the effect | in the law that will stop some of the schemes and tricks to which large taxpayers have resorted.

I have sat in on a number of the hearings thus far, including the opening session when Secretary Morgenthau made the opening statement and disclosed to the satisfaction of everyone that he was not conversant with the problem at hand. Like the President, Mr. Morgenthau attempted to place the tax concern most of the representatives problem confronting the government on moral grounds. His statement did not click with the committee at all. With two or three exceptions, the committee members recognized the problem as purely a question of law and Senator Pat Harrison, Democrat of Mississippi, vice chairman, said that there was no point in making the investigation "a Roman holiday." Therefore, the thing settled down very quickly to an earnest study of cases where men have resorted to various kinds of subterfuges of law, to reduce their tax liability.

In this connection, it seemed to me that too much credit cannot be given Under Secretary Magill who apparently is anxious to get to the bottom of the problem.

Let me give you a picture of that opening session as I saw it: The great ways and Sitting In means committee on Hearing room was made ready several days before; press tables were arranged for 80 correspondents (and 84 were present); the Treasury saw to it that hints were given out from its press section to the effect that names were going to be called and bombs were going to be exploded and that the opening day's hearing would, indeed, be sensational. The committee was called to order by Chairman Doughton and Mr. Morgenthau arose to testify amid the glare of two score of flashlights in the hands of photographers. He got on very well as long as he was reading a prepared statement which was intended to give an cutline of the problem. But when committee members began to ask the secretary questions related to the problem or concerning his own prepared statement, the secretary did not do so well.

I believe it was the general consensus of the correspondents at the press table that the advertised sensation amounted to a flop. © Western Newspaper

CHAPTER X

For two weeks after Warren left for the south, Craig waited impatiently, day after day, for Poleon and his party to return from the Wolf-Lair range.

They were long overdue. The days were precious; time was slipping; the sun was swiftly coming back; the spring license fees would be payable shortly; and in the community house the gloom was thickening again.

Just as he was on the verge of sending a second party after Poleon's, they came dragging in to Dynamite Bay one evening in the midst of a raging woolly-whipper: Back in the Wolf Lairs their explorations had been slowed down by storms and sixty-below weather; but they had stuck with the job till they had carried out Craig's instructions to the last letter.

They brought back with them a sheaf of crude field charts, a great mass of scrawly notes and measurements, and two heavy komatik loads of ore fragments, carefully numbered and recorded.

"Beeg News! . . Allons!"

Within an hour Craig was hard at work on this new batch of material. Allowing only Poleon in his cabin, to cook meals and attend to the stove, he buried himself obliviondeep in this last phase of his re-

Four mornings later Patricia was awakened, just at gray dawn, by a tremendous thumping on her door. "Mees Pat"-it was Poleon's excited voice-"wake op! Immeeditly! Beeg news! Allons!"

Patricia sat up hastily in bed. 'Why-uh"-she rubbed at her sleepy eyes-"what news?"

"I don' say nut'ing. You jus' hurry op queeck and dress. I wait

Patricia sprang out of bed, slid into her clothes. "Craig has finished!" she thought, and her heart pounded with uncertainty over the outcome. She flung open the door. Poleon stood there in the morning dusk. He tried to appear blankly inscrutable, but his face was one huge grin, and he looked ready to burst wide open with his "beeg news." "Oh, it's good, it's good!" Patricia exclaimed. In her ecstasy she hugged Poleon. "Let's go, let's hur-

Honeywell and Kessler, routed out of the Den by Poleon, were already there. The cabin smelled of pipe smoke, chemicals; and the candles threw flickering shadows over the tense faces of the men.

Nith a dead pipe in his hand Craig was sitting on the dynamite man who box, leaning his head back against the wall. He was unshaven, his hair tousled, his eyes weary from days and nights of swift exacting work; but he was grinning happily. He got up when Patricia came in. "Sorry to've waked you, Treeshia, but you simply had to be in on his. You folks come over here where you can see this chart, and I'll explain where we stand." Patricia moved over to the work table and looked at Craig's big geology plot of the Wolf Lairs. The symbols on it were so strange that she understood little about the chart; but she did notice that a wavy purple band led diagonally down across the map, and that up in the northwest corner was a little flock of bright-yellow arrows. Craig pointed with the stem of his pipe. He tried to speak matterof-factly-a scientist explaining-but Patricia caught the hidden elation in his voice. "This purple band represents the it Kessler hill. It's the worn-down thoughts that afternoon seemed "See here I warren tried stub of an old pre-Cambrian mountain. When the men had gone, Patricia went up to Craig, stood tiptoe for his hug and kiss. Craig reached into his pocket and brought out a wireless message which he had been carrying around with him for ten

"I didn't want to show you this, partner," he said, "till we had lo-cated the lode. This wireless is from the Vanguard mines, at Winnepeg. They've got money, and they're a square-dealing concern. I wrote 'em a letter a month ago, and this is their answer."

Patricia glanced at the message. IF YOU LOCATE ORE BODY AND IT HAS SIZE FLASH US WORD STOP YOUR TERMS QUITE REASONABLE STOP WE WILL SEND REPRESENTATIVES BY PLANE TO EXAMINE LODE AND DEAL

At mid-afternoon that day, while Patricia was working in her office, she heard the roar of an airplane. From the window she watched it wing in over the rocky islet, level off, touch the snow plain 500 yards out, and taxi in to the landwash south of Resurrection.

returned! She wanted to run across and see him. Doubtless he had picked up her mail at Fort Smith, and she'd had no mail from home in weeks and weeks. But she was afraid to go and see Warren personally. His long stay in the city country looked ominous-ominous against Craig.

Pilot Odron's ship. Warren had

She stepped into the big smokefilled room, where Sam Honeywell was playing seven-up with Kessler. "Sam," she bade, "go over to Mr. Lovett's place and see if he has any mail for me, won't you?"

Within a very few minutes Sam returned, bringing her a large packet of letters and also a number of very belated Christmas presents. Hastily sorting out the letters of atest date, Patricia slit them open with a hairpin. The first one she read was her mother's. It was filled with a quiet affection, an unspoken wish for her daughter to come home

The letter from her sister Frances was very confidential and informative. "Dad is awfully mad at you, Sis. Moms and I never mention your name to him at all . . . From what you've written me, Craig sounds like an extremely nice man, and I'd love to know him. But I was shocked to hear this about his being married. And I hated to hear that he doesn't wish ever to make money for himself. Of course, he may reconsider this, for your sake . . Please, Sis, don't do anything rash, without thinking it over care-

The last letter-Patricia had put it aside till the last, like a dose of bitter medicine-was from her father. A blue-pencil note on a memo page, its two lines jarred her more than all the other letters together. "Enough nonsense out of you. Now come home, while you've still got a home." Very pale of face, Patricia laid the letters upon her desk without looking at the rest of her mail or even opening the presents. Her singing happiness over the Kessler gold strike had all ebbed away as she read. A wave of homesickness had come over her; she was furious at the slanderous gossip being peddled concerning her and Craig; and she was frightened by her father's blunt

But those troubles were not the worst. They were trifles in comparison with the anguishing dilemma that stared her in the face-All along she had realized that Craig's world and her world were hopelessly sundered. Her family was rich and of the highest social rank. Craig hadn't a dollar and never would have. In spite of the fact that he made more than a million for the company with his "radiore" invention, her father hated him violently; and Craig, on his part, scorned her father, the company, her social circle and everything in her old life, with an uncompromis-ng scorn. Now here was she, caught between those two worlds, torn two ways, with no escape.

As dusk shut down, at six that evening, Patricia kept watching for a light in her cabin. Craig had slept there that day because his own cabin was so disordered and so pungent with chemicals.

Near seven o'clock she saw a candleglow and knew Craig was awake. She went over, a little later; found him dressed and getting ready to "Stay for supper with me, Craig," she begged. Craig looked into her eyes, searchingly. "Treeshia," he asked, 'what's wrong?" "Why-why nothing, Craig," she denied; but she turned away, to the gneiss formation. These concentric tea things in the cupboard, in order rings up here are a hill. We'll call to escape his sharp glance. Her across to the Den? "Glad to," Craig agreed. "Patricia, excuse us.'

The door closed behind them. It was almost an hour before Craig returned. When he stepped inside the cabin Patricia saw at a glance that Warren's "communication" had hit him hard.

She flew to him. "Craig! What did he say to you? What's he done?" "It could have been worse, I guess," Craig said steadily. "It's a pretty bad blow, coming just now; but we mustn't let it upset us or swerve us. Warren has got out an injunction against you and me, Treeshia. It forbids us to see each other any more, or talk to each other, or associate in any way."

"We can't talk to each other?" Patricia gasped. "Or see each oth-

"That's what the injunction says, Treeshia. Warren used Rosalie as a tool. Rosalie is back in Vancouver, as you said. She's broke. Worse than broke. She's thousands in debt. She squandered most of the million and a half that I gave her; and the depression swept away the rest. She thinks I've got money, or can make money, and she's out to get it. I thought I'd paid her off in full, but the law apparently doesn't

"But the law can't forbid you and me to see each other!" Patricia cried. "That's preposterous!"

"The law can do anything, Treeshia. This injunction sounds preposterous, but from a legal viewpoint it's perfectly valid. The substance of the court order is that your influence and your association with me are depriving Rosalie of her established rights. The actual writ is on its way here now, for Corporal Northup to serve and enforce. Rosalie herself is coming to Dynamite Bay. Warren persuaded her she should come, to establish the legal fact that I refuse to live with her."

shoulder of Kessler hill, Patricia was sitting tight against a little fire, writing out claim natices and watching the men at work, on north along the slope.

With a big graphite pencil she was laboriously printing the claim notices on 6 by 8 sheets of tin. She had already printed nineteen, and was on the twentieth, her last one. With extra care she wrote out the

MARCH 20 A thousand yards out along the hill Craig and Kessler were building the southwest post of his "Tri-umph" claim. They had planted a six-foot length of jackpine in the thin snow, and were heaping a mound of stones around the base of it. Fifteen hundred feet beyond them Poleon and Sam were erecting the northwest corner post of Triumph

Except for finishing those last two corners on Triumph and nailing the metal notices on all twenty posts, the Kessler hill job was done. In a couple of hours her party would break camp, with nothing remaining but to record the claims at the government land office. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Several pieces of attempted legislation, most notably the President's Supreme court bill, have apparently created a split between the conservatives and liberals in the Democratic party. The President's continued silence throughout the C. I. O. strikes has been a factor, too. Democratic members of congress are puzzled to decide whether the President is unwittingly bringing about the split, or is doing so deliberately with an eye to freezing out the conservatives and creating a completely liberal party. They would also like to know whether he is silently supporting John L. Lewis or is simply giving the C. I. O. leader plenty of rope with which to hang himself.

States Patrol Strike Areas

A S NATIONAL guardsmen, ordered out by Gov. Martin L. Davey, arrived on the scene to protect the public peace in Ohio cities where C. I. O. steel strikes have caused bloodshed and threatened more, violence dwindled, temporarily at least, to the throwing of a few stones and choice epithets. At Warren, troops dispersed pickets and allowed loyal workmen to move in and out of the Republic Steel plants. A general strike which the C. I. O. had ordered and claimed to be 40 to 70 per cent effective was recalled after a day, with the threat, "The next time our men are called out, it will be on even a larger scale."

At Youngstown the strikers were celebrating the order by which several hundred state troops were forcing the four plants of Republic and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube company to remain closed. Then Gov. Davey reversed his order, commanding troops to keep the plants

Shortly before the arrival of the troops, in Youngstown two C. I. O. strikers had been killed and 25 persons injured as strikers and local police fought for hours in front of a Republic plant.

Bethlehem Steel's plant at Johnstown, Pa., was closed and kept closed for several days by Pennsylvania state police under instructions from Governor Earle. Martial law was finally lifted.

Any eastward movement of the sit-down strikes was given some- sit in the same room with C. I. O. thing of a setback when strikers in | representatives.

French Premier Quits

RACED with one of those financial crises all too frequent in recent French history, Premier Leon Blum asked the senate for powers which would make him financial dictator of France for about six weeks. He did not believe it possible to bring order into the treasury without 30 drastic a measure. When it was refused he and the 20 members of his cabinet resigned. He had served 117 days of his second year as Premier Blum premier of France-something of a modern record. President Albert Lebrun designated Camille Chautemps, radical socialist and a former premier, to attempt the formation of a new cabinet. A successor to Blum was not immediately in sight. The Popular Front government was one of the bulwarks of leftist tendencies in Europe, as opposed to extreme Fascism, and openly expressed its sympathy for the Spanish loyalists. Its passing is extremely important in international affairs.

The Mail Must Go Through

REDERAL warrants were issued at Cleveland for six C. I. O. leaders in the strike at Youngstown and Warren, charging them with preventing delivery of the United States mails to loyal employees of the steel company plants there. Their names were not re-

The order for the obtaining of the warrant was given by Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings after he had looked over testimony at the senate post office committee's hearing. Charges have been made that C. I. O. leaders were censoring the mail in Ohio cities and refusing to permit delivery of parcel post packages containing food, clothing and other "irregular" articles for workers in the plants.

"All mail that the post office department sees fit to attempt to deliver must be delivered," said Cummings. This did not conflict with the post office department's refusal to deliver packages to the plants, but sought to prosecute persons who would prevent the delivery of mail the department had okayed.

Justice-Here and Abroad By ROBERT MERRILL

THE power which the Con-I stitution vests in the courts is called "the judicial power." This means the power not merely to decide controversies but to decide them according to the principles which judges in English-speaking countries have long been accustomed to

In the United States the same courts have equal jurisdiction over the highest officials of the nation, the humblest citizens and everybody in between.

If an American citizen brings suit against a government officer for an injury done him, the defendant cannot plead his official position as a ground for transferring the case to some government-controlled court. On the continent of Europe, however, he would be able to do this; because under the continental system there are two sets of courts: ordinary courts for private citizens and administrative courts for those in the service of the state.

One set of courts for everybody, with the Supreme court of the United States as the court of final appeal, is our guarantee that the man without "pull" will get a square deal.

Need for Fair Tribunal.

Many persons have asserted that there is a difference between the attitude toward a citizen in an American court and in a government department. In the government department, they explain, the citizen is apt to find himself in the hands of a subordinate official who looks at every question from the government point of view.

If, for instance, it is a federal tax question the official knows that the government needs the money and that his own record, or the record of his unit, as a good collector is at stake. The federal estate tax unit wants to make a better record than the income tax unit, and vice versa. Under such circumstances the citizen wants access to a court to find out how an impartial umpire would look at his case.

Take two actual cases to illustrate the point. A citizen had several children, each of whom had property of his own. The father promised the children that if they would convey all their property to him he, in his turn, would by his will leave to them all the property so conveyed and also all of his own property. They did as requested and he kept his part of the bargain.

Upon his death, however, the federal government proceeded to treat for tax purposes the father's estate as if it included the property received from the children and by him willed back to them under the that the property in question was theirs-not their father's. In the government department and before the board of tax appeals they got nowhere. Finally they appealed to court and there they won their case.

Court Protects Insurance.

A widow had taken out insurance on her own life and named her children as beneficiaries. She had no right to change the beneficiaries or power to raise money on the policies without the consent of the children. After her death the federal government attempted to treat the insurance money, for tax purposes, as part of the mother's es-

The children contended that as it was beyond their mother's power to get any value out of the policies. they, the children, were the real owners and that the mother's estate had no interest in the policy money that was subject to tax. They pressed the matter all along the line in the government department, but the tax officials and the board of tax appeals refused to change their position. On appeal to court the position of the children was sustained.

In thousands of cases every year the court is appealed to in differences between the American citizen and the administrative rulings of government officials. That is one of its functions as the guardian of the people's liberties.

From whence they returned to Corre's tavern, where a cold collation was provided by the corporation.

There follows an account of the meeting of the Cincinnati at Corre's tavern in commemoration of the day, at which suitable orations were delivered by Cols. Hamilton and Walker. One of the 13 toasts was, "May the powers of Congress be adequate to preserve the General

Plan for a patch of proso this year for the poultry. Proso is also known as hog millet, broom corn millet and Russian wheat. Vaccination for Mastitis

We have not found vaccination for mastitis to be satisfactory. There seems to be no satisfactory treatment for this disease because numerous kinds of drugs, vaccines and other treatments have been relatively inefficient. The acute attack of mastitis probably is best treated with hot applications, or, if necessary, a suspensory bandage. Most essential, however, is the prevention of the disease. It is contagious, and infected animals are dangerous to the rest of the herd, Animals infected with mastitis should be segregated at one end of the barn and milked last. The hands of the milker should be carefully cleaned and disinfected following the milking of each animal. Platforms on which the animals stand should also be disinfected. -C. P. Fitch, chief, Division of Veterinary Medicine, University Farm, St. Paul.

about, you would lose instead of gaining weight." He suggested that what she needed was a hobby-something to engage her time and energy, that she engage in some form of welfare work where she could see some of the misery of many unfortunates; see how careless fathers, and sometimes mothers, were themselves responsible for the distress of the home; see how, despite the industry and intelligence of some individuals, life had been very hard on them-sickness, loss of employment and other conditions. "When you see some of these people and their homes, you are going to be very angry at times, filled with pity at other times, but always you'll meet something that will make you mad, make you anxious, make you eat less and sleep less as your thoughts dwell on the sights

Distress Eats Up Fat.

Research workers have been able to show that emotional distressanger, rage, fear-eat up fat; and so reduce weight because they interfere with two of the main causes of overweight-eating and sleeping. "A small cat was put into a cage, with a big dog in the cage adjoining. The dog barked, growled, and raged when he found he could not reach the cat. The cat, of course, became terrified as the dog's fury increased. Both lost weight rapid-

The trouble in trying to reduce weight in most of our fat friends by grains; reaches a height of three to this method is that they are "slow four feet, stools and branches, mak- to anger." They are not so easily irritated or enraged as those of normal weight. Fortunately there seems to be in all of us a desire to keep young, to keep our shape or figure, and it is the fear of losing shape or figure that drives men and women to the reducing diets. Now it is not recommended that if you wish to reduce weight your family should try to keep you enraged, frightened, or infuriated. It is a great asset in these days to be able to keep the mind calm and restful. But, as a matter of fact, many individuals have been able to reduce by having the mind made active, not by rage or fury, but by some helpful mental occupation aside from their regular work. They have developed a "hobby."

A little less food, a little less sleep, and a hobby that will mean a little extra activity of body and mind will gradually take off the weight.

. . . Pain in Abdomen of Children.

Parents and physicians sometimes notice that a number of children between the ages of five and twelve complain of discomfort or pain in the abdomen that seems to be present all the time. There is usually constipation, a tired-out feeling with loss of appetite. As a youngster at these ages should be full of life and always hungry, there must be some real reason for these symptoms. In attempting to find a direct cause for this chronic discomfort in the abdomen in children Drs. J. Signorelli and H. Hosen, New Orleans, state in the New Orleans Medical and Surgical Journal that the most logical conditions likely to cause these symptoms are inflammation of certain lymph glands in the abdomen, chronic appendicitis or the action or disordered action of certain flowers or vegetations in the intestine.

These physicians prescribed dilute hydrochloric acid in doses varying from 25 to 40 drops three times a day, to be taken diluted in water at each meal.

Marked improvement occurred, with relief of all symptoms, except lack of appetite in four of the twenty-five cases. After one to two months of such treatment the acid was stopped. Many of the children have now been without the hydrochloric acid for as long as nine months and have been entirely free of the symptoms. This simple treatment for this group of symptoms, in youngsters five to twelve years of age, should be worth a trial at least.
