SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

DYNAMITE temporarily stopped a back-to-work movement in the great Cambria Works of the Bethlehem Steel corporation at Johnstown, Pa. scene of the most violent altercations among strikers, loyal workers and the law in recent days. Two explosions crippled the principal water mains supplying the plant just as Cambria once more had thrown open its doors and nearly half its 15,000 em-through Steel Workers' Organizing Committee picket lines to resume their labors. It took several days to repair the damage sufficiently to allow part of the workers to re-

The blasts interrupted what had been the nearest semblance of peace-still not very near-since the C. I. O. affiliate called the strike on the big steel independents who refused to sign contracts with what son's rights in real or personal propthey dubbed "John L. Lewis' irresponsible organization." The strikers committee "deplored" the explosions and "hoped no strikers had caused them.'

Two hundred state troopers, part of the state force which had enforced the martial law declared for a few days and then lifted by Gov. George H. Earle, patrolled the Johnstown district in an attempt to apprehend the dynamiters and protect the water supply of the city itself from damage. Mayor Daniel J. Shields appealed to President Roosevelt again, declaring in a telegram that the majority of his citizens were opposed to the C. I. O. violence and, if provoked much more by the minority, "might take the law into their own hands," adding to the toll of deaths, injuries and destruction that already has been rolled up. He said the strikers were openly declaring that they had the support of the President.

As the plants re-opened before the blasts it had seemed that the real grip of the strike had been broken, although there were still some 250 pickets on hand. The day before the re-opening, the C. I. O., in a last-minute attempt to save its cause, promised a mass meeting, near the city, of 50,000 miners who would then aid the steel strikers in keeping the plants closed. Only about 1,500 showed up, and after listening to speeches by union leaders they dispersed peaceably. -*-

F.D.R. Waxes Impatient

TT WAS believed that the pressure of public opinion in the steel strikes had driven President Roosevelt close to supporting federal legislation similar to that of the amendments proposed by Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan for the national labor relations act. The President indicated at a press conference that he was as much put out at the C. I. O. for forcing organization upon the steel workers as he was with the corporations for refusing to negotiate in terms of a signed contract.

After a talk with Charles P. Taft, who had been chairman of the mediation board that failed to effect a settlement, the President said: "Mr. Taft and I talked over the whole steel situation and came to the conclusion that the nation as a whole, in thinking of the strikes, was saying just one thing-'a plague on both your houses."

Senator Vandenberg's proposed amendments were designed to broaden the rights of employers un- guests. Bitter political hatreds der the Wagner act, forbid "sit- were buried temporarily.

Der Fuehrer Scores Neutrals FROM now on," Adolf Hitler told 200,000 Nazis at a party rally in Wurzberg, "we will prefer . . . to from attacks by the Spanish government. He described how Germany had been condemned for shelling Almeria after a Spanish airplane had bombed the cruiser Deutschland, and how, when the cruiser Leipzig was attacked by a submarine while on patrol duty, the non-intervention committee had done nothing about it.

A remedy suggested by Great Britain and France was that the patrol duty be left entirely to them, with Italian observers on French patrol ships and German observers on British ships to "judge the equitable, impartial working of the system.'

Germany and Italy lost little time in refusing to accept the proposal. Sir Neville Chamberlain called the British cabinet in to see what might be done, but it was generally believed that if the Fascists continued in their policy of refusing to co-operate with the non-intervention patrol, Great Britain would scrap her entire neutrality policy. She might extend the right of belligerents to Gen. Francisco Franco and his insurgents, thus for the first time recognizing that a state of war exists in Spain. This would be regarded as a bit of sugar for the Fascist nations, who recognize the insurgent government as the government of Spain.

Montagues and Capulets

WITH all the family blessings save those of a political classification, Miss Ethel du Pont, daughter of Eugene du Pont, and Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Jr., son of the President of the United States, were married at Christ church near Wilmington, Del., in a "simple" wedding attended by a "handful" of about 400 picked

Mediation Board Gives Up

THE mediation board of three, named by Secretary of Labor Perkins to sit in Cleveland and attempt to negotiate a settlement in the steel strike, gave up in despair. Its chairman, Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati, and the other two members, Lloyd Garrison, former president of the national labor relations board, and Edward F. McGrady, trouble-shooting assistant of Mme. Perkins, were unable even to persuade Tom Girdler, Eugene Grace and other steel officials to sit around a conference table at which union leaders were present. The board explained its failure, "The only hope of settlement lies in such a meet-

In criticizing the companies for their stand the board said, "Nothing can be made clearer today than that management and organized labor, when it really represents the wishes of the men, have got to learn how to live together, to reach agreements and to abide by them when made.

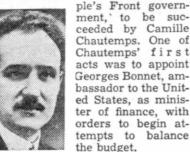

Steel officials handed Taft a written resume of their stand, that they would not make any agreement with Lewis' "irresponsible" C. I. O. They admitted that the Wagner act might force them to negotiate with the union, but declared another law provides that no one need make a contract he doesn't want to make.

Budget Trouble, U. S.

TREASURY figures indicated that the end of the fiscal year would find the President's economy program missing its mark by about $200,000,000. Last April he warned all departments that expenditures would have to be drastically cut, and revised his budget to $295,000,-000 less than the forecast in January. His revised budget estimated that expenditures from July 1, 1936, to June 24, 1937, would be $7,781,-000,000; actually they turned out to be $7,883,000,000, or $102,000,000 above the estimate. It was believed that, at that rate, there would be a difference of about $200,000,000 in the budget and actual spending for the entire fiscal year.

Budget Trouble, French

B UDGET trouble is bothering France in a serious way; in fact it led to the resignation of Premier Leon Blum and his Peo-

Bonnet's first Premier moves were to close the stock exchange and suspend foreign exchange and commercial payments pending a decision on whether or not he would temporarily. Because the senate refused him this power, Blum and his cabinet resigned: the chamber of deputies twice had approved giving it to him. The senate finance committee approved virtually the same thing for Chautemps, 20 to 3, ten days after he had become premier. It would authorize the new government to promulgate decrees "tending to assure suppression of attacks on government credit, fight against speculation, promote economic recovery, control prices and balance the budget. France, like the United States. operates on two budgets-ordinary and extraordinary. France's deficit in her ordinary budget, as estimated by retiring Finance Minister Vincent Auriol, is about $200,000,000, and the deficit in her extraordinary budget approximately $1,600,000,-000. Rene Brunet, Bonnet's undersecretary, said they could be balanced in three years.

Most of the expenditures from the extraordinary budget are for de-

Rebels Again Eye Madrid

HAVING taken Bilbao after months of siege, Gen. Francisco Franco, rebel commander, turned his guns once more upon Madrid and the sector north of Guadalajara, New troops were moved into the sections about the western and southeastern limits of the city.

The loyalist government set out at once to strengthen its own lines. although it was not believed Madrid was in much danger of attack before the insurgents have "cleaned up" the northern provinces. Since the capture of Bilbao the Basque and Asturian forces have been virtually isolated from those of the Madrid-Valencia government.

Nickels Lead Coin Demand

The Treasury department shipped $27,939,000 worth of halves, quarters, dimes, nickels and pennies during the first five months of the fisca year 1936-1937, more than the total for five fiscal years beginning with 1930. Largest increase was in nickels, meeting the demand for nickel games and goods venders, and catching up with short nickel production during depression years, which reached a low ebb in 1932, with only $1,000 worth.

my enemies; but please save me from my friends." The distinguished Democrat, Mr. Cleveland, recognized one of the gravest dangers that besets politicians and it was in this connection that he made the famous remark.

Lately, I have been thinking that President Roosevelt is getting into the spot-if, indeed, he is not already behind the eight-ball-where he must have some protection from his friends. He faces a condition with which some observers fear he may not be able to deal as successfully as has been his record.

The thing that has put Mr. Roosevelt in a bad political spot is the outburst of Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania. Governor Earle, it was, who burst forth recently with a declaration that Mr. Roosevelt must run for a third term. There are "no men in the Democratic party or any other party who reach kneehigh stature mentally or morally to Franklin D. Roosevelt," according to Governor Earle's appraisal of the present Executive. Governor Earle's record in Pennsylvania is that of an avid New Dealer. He has followed the Roosevelt footsteps in every specification and he has maintained a constant gunfire of chatter in support of the President and his policies.

The activities of the Pennsylvania governor have been so constant that it led one observer to remark the other day that Governor Earle apparently wanted to be the first man on the Roosevelt bandwagon for 1940. This, of course, had reference to the priority given in political appointments after Mr. Roosevelt became President to those Democrats who had been supporters of Mr. Roosevelt before the Chicago convention that nominated him.

But instead of being flattered by the pronouncement by the agile Pennsylvania governor, I hear from authentic sources that the President was somewhat embarrassed. Certainly, a good many of the New Deal wheelhorses are embarrassed because they can see how the Earle declaration may be used to explode various things politically as Mr. Roosevelt goes through his current

However that picture may develop, the fact remains that no President ever has served a third term in the United States. It is a precedent established by George Washington and rigidly adhered to. Thus to have "my friend George" de-clare Mr. Roosevelt in the market for a third term at this particular time constitutes a bad political error. This is true because at the moment there are more cries of personal dictatorship being voiced in this country than has happened since congress gave the President all of the extraordinary powers that he holds.

There is, however, another side to the story concerning Governor Earle. There are Playing many who do not Politics believe Governor Earle is stupid.

politically. These persons hold the conviction that the Pennsylvania governor knows exactly what he is doing in promoting Mr. Roosevelt for a third term at this time. Their reasoning is to the effect that it will be impossible to renominate and reelect President Roosevelt for a third time, however much the President may want the job again. This same group contends that it would be fatal to the liberal movement for Mr. Roosevelt to take any steps in this direction although there are a goodly number of people who are convinced that he wants to break this precedent as he has broken many others.

In consequence, according to this line of reasoning, Governor Earle is playing his own game of politics. Hoping that the lightning may strike Governor Earle of Pennsylvania, Governor Earle is promoting Franklin Roosevelt for the job that Governor Earle wants.

It is plain to see that, by urging renomination and re-election of President Roosevelt, Governor Earle avoids the barbs and bludgeons that would be certain to come his way if he were to admit that he is a candidate thus far in advance of 1940. Someone suggested that the governor wanted Mr. Roosevelt to be the objective of the brickbats until that happy day when the President would step aside and label Governor Earle as the crown prince of the New Deal.

However, in talking about 1940, there are basketsful of men who would be most Many Are willing to dedicate Willing their lives for four or eight years in

SUPREME AND HOW

How to Get a Hearing By ROBERT MERRILL

BETWEEN the Supreme court in Washington and a citizen on the Pacific coast an entire continent intervenes. But when it comes to the protection of his Constitutional rights, distance means nothing. His case in a local state or federal court may reach the Supreme court of the United States by steps easily and quickly taken.

How can he get his problem before our National Umpire for a decision? Here, step by step, is the method:

Suppose, for example, a state should pass a law making a homeowner liable for the cost of repaying the street from curb to curb in front of his house. The home-owner claims that this is a municipal expense, which the city should pay out of its general

Appeals From State Court.

The city ignores his objection, files a lien against his property and threatens to sell him out for non-

In the local state court the citizen's attorney moves to strike off the lien. The court, relying on the state statute, refuses. The homeowner appeals to the Supreme court of the state, which dismisses his appeal and declares that either the citizen must pay or have his house sold over his head.

"Am I through?" asks the home-

"Certainly not," replies his attorney. "We'll find out what the Supreme court of the United States thinks about this."

So the home-owner's attorney sends to Washington a short printed petition, stating the facts, giving the decision of the state court and asking the United States Supreme court to order the state court to send its record for review.

State Court Supplies Record. When this petition reaches Washington every one of the Supreme court justices separately examines it and also the printed answer of the lawyer for the state. At the justices' conference on the following Saturday morning, if all or a mawere invited to the Jefferson Island | jority of them think there is substance in the citizen's claim, they grant the petition-and the record comes up from the state court.

The home-owner's case is then set down on the argument list. Lawand representatives was intended to | yers on both sides file briefs. When the case is about to be reached for argument all parties are notified. The citizen's own attorney either appears for him or entrusts the argument to an attorney in Washington. The home-owner doesn't have to ap-

The first paving of the road, it may find, peculiarly benefits the citizen's property, and therefore the cost can be assessed against it. But subsequent repayings of the space between curbs are a community responsibility, and must be paid for out of the tax money which all the citizens contribute.

State Court Reversed.

The judgment of the state Supreme court is therefore reversed, and the record is sent back across the continent with instructions to strike off the lien. If, in such a case, the citizen has been a non-resident of the state in which this property was situated he might have sought relief in the local United States district court instead of in the state court. If he had lost his case both there and in the local United States circuit court of appeals, his subsequent approach to the Supreme court of the United States would have been the same as in the appeal from the state court just described. The great help to the citizen in any such typical case lies in the fact that the final decision is in the Washington that a denial will not hands of an umpire, concerned with constitutional rights.

In this imaginary paving case, the mayor and city council could am convinced that the strained re- see only community advantage in lationship between the capitol and | making the householder go on paythe White House now embraces Vice | ing for successive repavings. Fortunately the Supreme court exists to see both sides of a picture and so to insure the citizen against loss of his property otherwise than by the due process of law guaranteed to him by the Fifth and the Fourteenth amendments to the Constitution.

Mineral in Feed for Cows Mineral matter is very important in the feed of a dairy cow. Calcium and phosphorus make up the major portion of the mineral matter of the skeleton. These, together with other minerals, are essential in regulating the vital processes of the body. Milk production requires many minerals, the most important of which are calcium and phosphorus. Alfalfa and other legumes supply the cow with relatively large quantities of calcium, while the protein concentrates, such as cottonseed meal and wheat bran, are sources of phosphorus. A shortage of iodine will cause the calves to be born with goiters.

CURING HAY CROP TO RETAIN COLOR

Artificial Drying Found to Be Good Practice.

By E. R. Gross, Agricultural Engineer, New Jersey College of Agriculture. WNU Service.

crawled along some of the roughest Larger scale production and increased use of machinery have placed greater emphasis on the proper curing and handling of hay to preserve its feed value, prevent shattering of leaves, and to retain the full green color and the carotene from which animals get vitamin A. Observations and research on the new practices in curing and storing have made available more scientific knowledge than ever before. Earlier cutting, artificial drying and chopping have brought better results in many cases, but have also introduced new dangers.

Artificial drying of early cut crops offers possibilities of preserving the green color, a high vitamin content, and saving the tender leaves. Mature hay shatters more readily from field handling. Artificial drying generally requires large equipment. which may be too costly for the average farmer. A portable drier operated by a ring of farmers or a custom operated drier are solutions suggested.

Chopped hay offers the advantages of compact storage, easy handling in the operations of feeding, mixing and rationing, and results in more complete consumption. This may be particularly noticeable in the feeding of coarse-stemmed hay. Hay chopping may be especially desirable when hay prices are high. Chopping when associated with artificial drying should create no problem in heating, but care must be taken not to overload mow floors built only for the storage of loose hay. Chopped hay will occupy about one-half the space required for loose

We do so love a free show fall's pullets, determine the number of replacements wanted and secure three chicks for each pullet. Keep these chicks in roomy, comfortable quarters and feed complete rations in adequate amounts.

As warm weather is here, special efforts should be made to keep the chicks comfortable, advises a writer in Wallaces' Farmer. This means an abundance of shade such as patches of sunflowers or corn. A liberal supply of clean, fresh water also is especially important. Keep the feed hoppers in clean, shady places and move frequently to avoid contamination of the soil.

Remember that consumption of green, succulent material insures thrifty chicks. So far as possible. the range should provide this succulence.

Unless the chicks are ranging and eating during the time when it is unnecessary for them to seek shelter from the hot sunlight, valuable time when favorable temperature conditions prevail is lost. While the poultryman does not have direct control of the weather, he can arrange his management practices so as to minimize the retarding effects when high temperatures prevail. This will be all the more important with the early-hatched chicks.

Disposing of Cockerels

As a general rule, it is more profitable to dispose of all the cockerels as broilers at 11/2 to 2 pounds, according to a specialist. The feed requirement increases rapidly after that time and the price falls, owing to the seasonal drop in poultry prices and the fact that heavier birds will not bring broiler prices. Keeping the cockerels for a longer time may be unwise, for the laying pullets represent the chief source of annual income.

Mixing Chick Rations

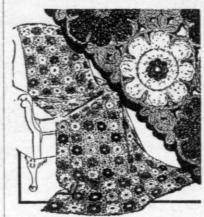

In mixing chick rations only good quality materials should be used. For instance, if yellow corn is used it must be sweet and clean. If good quality yellow corn is not available then some other grain that is good should be used. It is easy to demonstrate that two mixtures can be made using the same formula and if the one mixture is made with poor quality materials the results will be unsatisfactory no matter how good the formula.

Soviet Russia Tries to-Explain Why Eight Generals Were Shot

But, as in Case of Most Red Intrigues, Explanations Border on Fantastic.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

USSIA-land of intrigue, struggle and upheaval-is today no freer from the plots and counter-plots on the grand scale which have characterized it over many decades than it has been in the past. And conspiracies today are dealt with by the Communist government with as much dispatch as they were in the days of the Czars, or more. Explanations today are, as they were in the past, largely a matter of conjecture, and most of them are magnificently fantastic.

When, in the most recent "purge" of Red traitors, seven generals and a marshal who was very nearly the executive head of the whole Russian army, were summarily tried, lined up against a wall and shot, a typical, wild explanation of the act filled the early accounts. It was reported, rumored or "secretly known to the Kremlin" that the eight had been leaders of a mass plot, involving hundreds of thousands of Russians, to turn over a generous helping of western Russia to "an enemy power," Nazi Germany. Of course, when the perspective of even a few days' time permitted a clearer view of the situation, the "explanation" was wholly rejected. Ordinarily little or no official government explanation would be attempted, but the prestige of the Russian army received such a body blow by these latest executions that a semi-authoritative one was concocted. You can take it or leave it, for it is almost as fantastic as the first one.

Masses Must Support Plots.

It involves not alone this one act, but the entire series of some 250 military trials and executions which have taken place in Russia over a maxed by the deaths of Marshal ship? Mikhail Tukhachevsky and his seven generals in Moscow on June 12. It is ascribed to the discovery by the Kremlin of a single huge conspiracy against the state.

To anyone who has followed modern Russian history at all it is ap-two hostile nations would find the period of Russia's internal strife an opportunity for successful attack. So the conspirators sought the promise of Germany and Japan that they would not interfere during the revolution. In return for this co-operation, valuable territory in the Ukraine would be ceded to Germany after the successful completion of the coup, and Japan would be rewarded with generous oil, mineral and fishing concessions in the Far East.

There is no actual evidence that definite agreements were ever consummated between the plotters and the enemy powers. Indeed, Hitler has emphatically refused to consider the suggestion of a military alliance between the Reich and Russia, despite the fact that his high military command has assured him that such an alliance would be the most powerful in the world.

The question that now poses itself before the world outside the Soviet is: Can the semi-authoritative explanation of the "purge" be trueor is it merely a concoction brewed to fit a long series of incidents in a sordid rule of terrorism under period of less than three years, cli- the iron hand of a vicious dictator-

There is no denying the fact that the conspiring generals must have been rather stupid to risk their enviable positions of power in the existing regime, and their careers of brilliant promise for the future, in a plot which certainly must not fail

The Soviet Union has vast oil resources. This well, which broke loose in a torrent when tapped, produces 15 to 20 thousand tons daily.

regime could be successful without mass support. But how to gain the sympathy of any great mass of citizens, without spreading the great secret so widely that its existence must be obvious, was a poser in-

The one unit of people with whom such a plan could hope to be accomplished was the Red army. This highly trained, massive organization had been well-drilled in discipline and would obey the dictates of a few key men among its leaders without question. The theory of the conspirators, then, was to win over a few army men in the key positions of command, who could be relied upon to control the movements of the army. And this, according to the explanation, is what the civil conspirators were successful in do-

Soviet authorities discovered the plot among the civil conspirators, and it was a simple matter to learn then that it had been extended to a handful of important army officers. Accordingly, a strict espionage system was set up to gather evidence in army quarters. The executions followed quickly. It is believed by some close observers that the Soviet government was tipped off to the plot by the French secret service, interested because of the alliance between the two communist nations, but this has never been admitted officially.

No Evidence of Agreement.

The plot did not, as first believed, include the turning over of White Russia to an enemy power, but the traitors did attempt to reach an agreement with Germany and Japan. The generals were well parent at once that no serious con- | to be discovered amid the universal spiracy to overthrow the existing system of state control and state spying which is Russia today.

> Russia Worries Over Prestige. The puzzle also arises: If one dictator can dispose of eight of the most prominent men of the army in one fell swoop, why would it not be as easy for eight generals to do away with one dictator? Russia is definitely worried over the effect of her internal military disharmony upon the outside world Diplomatic divisions of the western European powers lost no time in taking advantage of it. Germany and Italy, particularly, acted quick-Their dream has always been of a four-power alliance with France and Great Britain. But France, controlled by a communistic party government, in sympathy with the Russians and out of sympathy with the Fascists, 'has been the stumbling block. Now Germany is trying to convince France that she had better forsake any alliance with Russia because it would be too unreliable. The recent resignation of the Popular Front government in France may work to the advantage of the Fascists, also. There is no doubt that the French must be a little uneasy over this new weakness of the nation they had counted upon as their most important ally. The Red army can hardly look so powerful today as it did a few weeks ago. And the French can hardly help remembering how powerful that same army looked before the World war and how pitiful it looked once the war got under way.

Russia's importance among the powers of the world has always been limited by her difficulty in preserving her own unity. Stretching aware that if their plot developed out 5,500 miles across Europe and Asia and from the Arctic ocean to Josef Stalin's personal dictatorship is all-powerful. He is secretary-general of the political bureau of the central executive committee of the communist party of the Union of Socialistic Soviet Republics, which is quite a mouthful any way you chew it. The party bosses the state (for law has decreed that it is the only party which shall be recognized), the central executive committee bosses the party, the political bureau bosses the committee, and Stalin bosses the bureau.

By virtue of the constitution adopted in December there is a parliament-or soviet-composed of a soviet of the union and a soviet of the nationalities, and called the Supreme Soviet. Together the two bodies exert all legislative and administrative authority, through a cabinet appointed by the Supreme Soviet and known as the council of people's commissars. But through the political structure outlined in the foregoing paragraph it may be seen that what they do is dictated by Josef Stalin.

Production Speeded Up. -

Russia is now in the last year of its second Five-Year Plan for agricultural and industrial development by the state, under which the state controls the entire economic life of the nation. The first of these plans was started by Stalin in 1928; private trade was suppressed, landowners liquidated and agriculture collectivized.

Production under the second Five-Year Plan was speeded up greatly, for both economic and military rea-

A few facts serve to illustrate the effectiveness of the programs. Electric power production in the Soviet Union was 5,007,000,000 kilowatt hours in the year before the first Five-year Plan; last year it was 32,600,000,000 kilowatt hours. In steel production the Soviet Union rose to a position second only to Germany among European producers last year. In 1927 it manufactured a total of 680 automobiles; last year, 138,000. The total grain harvest was 92,010,000 metric tons in 1935, although it fell off to less than 77,000,000 metric tons last year, because of widespread drouths. The 1936 cotton crop set a new record.

Latest reports are that there will be a third Five-Year Plan-started which will go into effect January 1. @ Western Newspaper Union.

A Jacobean living room recently exhibited has green, yellow and brown as the three dominant colors. The walls are painted a soft golden yellow; the woodwork is a warm brown. English printed linens in green, accented by Chinese red, repeat the darker green shades of the large rug.

IT HAD been the family breakfast room, but as the children grew out of high chairs, it was decided that the breakfast room should become the children's dining room. Father and Mother wanted to make the room attractive yet didn't want to spend too much in the processanother place where ingenuity would have to play the most important role.

The legs of an old wood top kitchen table were cut down so that the table became a dining table of just the right height for the youngsters. Four small unpainted chairs were bought, three for the family children and an extra chair for company. These and the table were finished in a soft blue. The walls of the breakfast room were already painted a pale yellow so all they needed was a washing down to make them look like new. Father drew a series of scallops on the wall as a border at the top molding and painted them a rich, cocoa brown. The ceiling was also painted brown to make it seem lower.

The one large window was curtained with Dutch type curtains in an amusing chintz, a brown background with saucy, pert faces of kittens as a pattern. These curtains were bound with yellow rickrack. The same chintz was used to cover chair pads for the small seats and these pads were finished also with the yellow rickrack.

On one wall of the room a bulletin board, in the form of a blackboard, was put up as a picture with the frame painted brown. Yellow chalk was used to write down daily reminders and suggestions and here the children were allowed, once a week, to plan a meal they would like to have. Brown paper was used for cutting out several cats that were rubber-cemented on the wall directly over the board. They looked as if they were sitting on a yellow fence, watching the children eat their suppers. Various pictures of cats, collected and adored by the children, were framed and hung in a low frieze around the room on a line with the window sill, which was eye level for the three little children who used this room.

A Protest

We have some petticoat popping to do today. First, we think it's time for a protest against this vogue for elegance that the decorators have decreed. It's all very pretty, of course, and we're a great believer in having a home as beautiful as means will permit. And we don't hold for taupe mohair just because it wears like iron either. But we've seen just one white linoleum floor too many . . . just one more pale satin chair than we can approve. After all, a lot of American women do their own work. White linoleum and white broadloom show every footmark and that's too much cleaning for the lady who has to get rid of footmarks. Satin upholstery lasts just exactly three years under reasonable use, and that's not long enough for its cost in the average home.

You see, we've just been on a round of the most distinguished of New York decorators' exhibits of new rooms-the rooms that set styles as the Paris fashion openings do. And we just can't see families growing up in those too, too beautiful visions of blonde floors and pastel upholsteries. 'Twould be well and good if we all had a retinue of ancestral retainers in our marble halls and all the money we need for replacements.

What we ask in the exhibits are rooms that interpret gracious backgrounds in terms of every-day life. The distinguished decorators do beautiful things with rooms in the royal manner, but they fail conspicuously in the execution of rooms that people-just people-are going to live in.

And yet it requires more ability to do rooms of charm on a small sum than on an unlimited amount. A room costing a young fortune ought to be beautiful. A room built on imagination and ingenuity is a lot more of a triumph for the interior decorator who is possessed of real

Do you know where we've found more ideas of originality coupled with livable charm? Right in the department stores, for their decorators are in touch with the actual needs of actual people. So we doff our Breton sailor to the anonymous decorators in the stores who plan pleasant possible ways for us to make our homes more amiable while the thinkers-up of mirrored dining tables and velvet lined bathrooms grab off all the glory.

They hit Resurrection a mile above Indian creek, swung out upon its level hard snow, and hurried Somewhat dismayed, Craig handed the note to Patricia. "They've gone in to the Bay! To see me! I guess we'll have to drop on down to Hark Dawson's.

Patricia glanced at the scrawl, looked up at him. "Why do we have to, Craig? It's so far to Dawson's, I'm tired, it's almost night now, and the wind is blowing so bad. Why can't we stay here?"

Craig shook his head. If the news should get out that he and Patricia had spent a night at a lonely cabin, people would talk. And then-the Chiwaughimis. He felt positive that the half-breeds had not followed him, but still he could not forget those snowshoe tracks in that drogue of spruce. "Please, Craig - please let's stay," Patricia urged. "I'm glad that Higginson and those other two aren't here! We can have the evening all to ourselves." She pleaded unashamed, "If I-if we-if you and could have just this evening alone, think I could go back, then, and got a fire going, he took the water bucket and started down to the river, to the hole which Higginson kept open in the ice. Out of sight of the cabin, he set the bucket beside the path, hurried up the trail to the first bend, crouched down in a juniper clump, and waited, searching the frozen Resurrection and the dark woods on either bank. If the Chiwaughimis had followed him and he had somehow failed to see them, they would be coming along, whipping down the river. In the thickening gloom he lay in the juniper thicket as long as he dared without alarming Patricia by his absence. He saw nothing whatever. The river and woods were silent, empty. Feeling a bit foolish over his excessive caution, he rose up finally and hurried back to the cabin.

They had eaten supper. Craig had unrolled Patricia's sleeping poke on s route, searching it the bunk, and spread his own on the distant moving objects. the bunk, and spread his own and spread his ow day and the 16 wilderness miles that she and Craig had covered. But she had not gone to sleep. This evening was too precious. She and Craig could talk, as long as they wanted, with no prying eyes to see or question; and at the end of their evening she would go to sleep knowing that Craig was in the same room with her and that she would be awakened in the morning by his kiss-as at God's lake.

Craig sat on the bunk edge, leaning over her, one arm under her shoulder, his other hand smoothing her silky hair. In quiet tones he was telling her of a huge project which had slowly taken shape within him since New Year's; and by the feeble light of the candle Patricia saw his eyes narrow and his lean jaw harden as he sketched his daring ambition.

Listening in dreamy comfort, she caught the general outlines of the startling and ambitious project that Craig was sketching. He intended, he said, to weld those 300 Resurrection men together into a syndicate, a rich and powerful company of prospectors. This Vanguard money would hold them till next summer; and by that time he could raise additional money on a radium deposit which he knew about. With that capital he could bring in machinery and start active mining on several of the richest silver lodes.

Once he had the power of this Dynamite Bay syndicate behind him, he could then launch his real project, his big program. All along the far-flung Canadian mining frontier and all through the vast sub-Arctic territories there were hundreds and thousands of prospectors like Sam, like Bill Fornier-hardworking, penniless, good - hearted men. They were loping the bush, starving, freezing, fighting the wilderness. They did the pioneering, made the mineral discoveries, cleared the way. They had opened up the Flin-Flon, Cobalt and other rich fields. And then had lost them. Poor and helpless men, they had been preyed upon by wildcat promoters and unscrupulous companies who bought them out for a song. As Warren was trying to buy out these Dynamite Bay prospectors for a trip to Edmonton and a few miserable dollars

"This scheme of mine, partner, or some plan along its general lines," Craig said, "would stop all that injustice. This Dynamite Bay syndicate would be a refuge to all those men. We could advance them capital on their worth-while claims, and they wouldn't have to take a beggar's choice." A chill had crept into the cabin, and the cherry-red glow had faded from the sides of the little sheetiron stove. Whistling through the pines outside, the blizzard was spinning the surface snow into sheets and sending them dancing down the wind like wraiths. Craig stood up, beside the bunk.

"I'll stir a bit more fire, sweet." As he turned toward the stove his eyes caught a slight blurry movement at the small window to the right of the door. Only one pane of the four was of glass; over the others Higginson had tacked squares of caribou skin. As Craig glanced at the little glass pane, he saw a human face pressed against it-the leathery-dark countenance of a man who was staring into the cabin at Patricia and him. The face was gone in an instant

gone before he could recognize the person; and the pane was empty

A jolt went through Craig like an electric shock. He did not need to recognize the man. In a flash he knew - the Chiwaughimis! They were out there, those six Manitobans, in the wind-torn dark.

A moment after the face vanished, he saw a gleam of rifle steel beyond the glass pane. It was a slow gleam—the glint of a rifle being leveled and aimed at him.

His hand shot out and smashed down on the candle, plunging the cabin into darkness.

Patricia sat up hastily, on the bunk. "Craig! Why'd you do that?" He stepped across to the door, groped for the wooden bar, found it and slipped it into place so that the Chiwaughimis could not rush him. Something cold was clutching his heart. Lupe had him at last, trapped in a lonely cabin, miles from any human help, one rifle against six. He thought of that hole in the river ice, and shuddered. A quick and effectual way to dispose of an enemy's body.

"Get Patricia out of this!"-that was Craig's one thought now. She must not be exposed to danger or get caught in the life-and-death fight closing in upon him. From the darkness Patricia de-

Craig told her the truth, so that she would understand and would get out of the cabin, to safety. "Treeshia, in plain words Lupe is again it was by a noise at the door. But this time the noise was a tremendous thupp! that jarred the whole cabin and nearly broke the door off its hinges. Craig whirled to the foot of the

A silence fell. He heard nothing more of the metis outside.

He clipped in three fresh cartridges. "I guess they'll let that door alone," he commented grimly to Patricia. "I hope it was Lupe that I winged; but that'd be too much luck.'

The silence lengthened — three minutes, five, ten. It was an ominous quiet. Craig's nerves were jumpy from the sinister quietness.

"Patricia, you've got to get out of this place! They're planning something. I don't know what it'll be, but trust Lupe to make a good job of it. You might be killed. I'll palaver Lupe. I'll tell him you're coming out—"

"I won't go!" Patricia refused point-blank. "The minute I'd go out, they'd start shooting through the window and door; they'd riddle this cabin and kill you. As long as I'm here they won't do that."

"You've got a ticket to walk out of this, alive and safe, and you're going to take it!" he insisted. 'That's that. Get your clothes on, fast. I'll talk to Lupe." He added, to stop her from sobbing so heartbrokenly: "I'll stand a good chance to escape. There's half a box of dynamite under that wall bench. I'll figure out a way to use the stuff. But, Treeshia, hurry! Every minute you waste cuts down my chance." He stepped up near the door.

"Lupe!" he called.

There was no answer from out-He called again, louder; but got no reply. Over at the northwest corner of the cabin he heard a peculiar thudding noise. It sounded as though someone had thrown an armful of chunks against the logs. The noise puzzled him, but just then he paid little attention to it. Thinking that the Chiwaughimis might not have heard him, he called third time, from the windowflattening himself against the wall so that he could not be shot.

"Lupe! I'm sending Miss Patricia out. D'you hear? Lupe! Answer me, man!" (TO BE CONTINUED)

The Earliest Diamonds It was a Dutch farmer who discovered the first diamond, says a writer in the Philadelphia Record. To him it was simply a pretty stone with which some children were playing. He showed it to a trader. Neither of them knew what it was. But the French consul in Cape Town, a jeweler, pronounced it to be a diamond and valued it at $2,500. At this price it was bought by the governor of the colony. The profits were honorably divided beagainst the door only to find it tween the owner and the trader. The same farmer paid all that he had-Patricia heard the noise, too. 500 sheep, 10 oxen and a horse, to a native witch doctor for a stone four times as heavy which he was using as a charm. NEED CARE FOR PERFECT JELLY Acid Content of Juice Is of Prime Importance.

By EDITH M. BARBER

IT WOULD be interesting, at least to me, to know what clever oldtime housekeeper, perhaps in the still-room of a manor house, discovered that fruit juice and sugar when cooked together would jelly. We know that the time does not date back centuries, because sugar, the necessary factor, in the fine granulated form, has not been generally available until a comparatively recent time. Many must have been the experiments before more or less accurate recipes were de-

The perfect jelly should be clear, firm enough to mold but not stiff. The results depend upon using the proper proportions of fruit juice and sugar. They also depend upon the amount of acid present in the juice. Not all fruits supply the proper amounts of pectin and acid. For this reason our grandmothers through the trial and error method limited the number of fruits for jelly. Strawberries and peaches for instance were reserved for canning and preserving. The standard proportions-1 cup of sugar to 1 cup of juice-were not always successful for other jellies. They usually work for currant, green apples and green grapes. If fruit was overripe, however, this amount of sugar was too much and the result was a soft, syrupy mixture. This was sometimes prevented by combining the fruit juice with green apple or with green grape juice. This custom eventually resulted in the preparation for market of a concentrate of apple juice which we know as fruit

By the use of this fruit pectin in the proper proportions we are now able to make jelly of practically any flavor in a very short time. The short time of cooking preserves the fresh flavor of the fruit, and for this reason, pectin is sometimes used with fruit juices, such as currant, which will jelly without Plum Jelly.

4 cups (2 lbs.) plum juice 71/2 cups (31/4 lbs.) sugar

½ bottle fruit pectin Wash about four pounds of fully ripe plums. To prepare juice, crush fruit well without peeling or pitting, add one cup of water, bring to a boil, cover, and cook over a low flame ten minutes. Put fruit in double cheesecloth or one thickness Canton flannel and squeeze out juice. Measure juice into kettle, add sugar and stir well. Put over hot flame, bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. As soon as the mixture boils, stir in fruit pectin, bring to a hard rolling boil and continue boiling and stirring for just half a minute. Take Blackberry Jelly.

4 cups (2 lbs.) blackberry juice 2 tablespoons lemon juice

8 cups (3½ lbs.) sugar 1 bottle fruit pectin

this recipe.

Wash about three quarts of fully ripe berries. To prepare juice crush well or grind the berries. Put berries in double cheesecloth or one thickness of Canton flannel and squeeze out the juice. Squeeze and strain juice from 1 medium size lemon. Measure juice into kettle, add lemon and sugar; stir well. Put over hot flame, bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. As soon as the mixture boils, stir in the fruit pectin, bring to a hard rolling boil and continue boiling and stirring for just skim quickly, and pour at once into scalded jelly glasses. Cover with an eighth of an inch layer of paraffin. Yield-eleven to twelve six-ounce glasses.

Strawberry jelly may be made by the above method.

Test for Pectin.

Put one tablespoonful of hot juice into glass or cup. Add one tablespoonful of alcohol and stir once. Let stand two minutes. If a thick jelly which can be taken up on a spoon without breaking, one cup of sugar to one cup of juice may be used. If jelly forms, but breaks as it is taken up with the spoon threefourths cup of sugar to each cup of juice should be used. If there is no jelly formation, the juice must be combined with sour apple juice or currant juice and retested. Old Fashioned Jelly.

To obtain best results in jelly making, it is advisable to work with a small quantity of juice. Two quarts of juice is a sufficiently large quantity to handle at one time.

Measure juice, add sugar and stir until sugar is dissolved. Boil rapidly until jelly test is obtained. When two drops will hang side by side from a spoon which has been dipped into the boiling mixture, the jelly is ready to be skimmed and to be poured in clean, hot glasses. Pour hot paraffin immediately over the jelly to the depth of one-eighth inch. When cold cover with tin lids. @ Bell Syndicate.-WNU Service.
