Natural Causes" Seldom

the Real Cause of Death One of the rarest things in life is death from "natural causes." listed as "senility" on death certificates, observes a writer in the Detroit Free Press.

As has been pointed out by medical men, persons don't often wear out, they generally are killed, either by disease or accident. Although 'senility" frequently is found on death certificates, more often than not because of the advanced age of the deceased, together with lack of apparent disease causes or a post mortem, the term is used without being the real cause of death. FIRST AID AILING HOUSE

By Roger B. Whitman

RADIATOR COVERS

NOT long ago I saw some tests made on a new type of radiator enclosures. The results showed that these enclosures cut down the heat thrown off by a radiator by nearly one-half. The enclosures were ornamental; they were better looking than the radiators. But cutting down the heat by one-half means the chilling of a room in which they might be used. There is no satisfaction in this, of course, for a radiator is intended to supply heat.

A radiator delivers heat in two ways; heat is radiated from the hot metal just as it is from a fire or the sun, and heat passes to the room through the upward flow of air that is heated between the radiator sections. An enclosure with a solid front prevents the radiation of heat from the metal. A cover over the top of the radiator prevents the free upward flow of heated air. Even the best of radiator enclosures check the heating effect to some extent, but a checking of nearly one-half is entirely too great to be considered.

For the greatest heating effect, the front of an enclosure should be an open grill that will not check the radiation of heat from the metal. Not long ago I saw a homemade enclosure; a wood frame with the front filled in with diamond metal lath. This interfered very little with the radiation of heat, and, painted with the rest of the enclosure, was very attractive in appearance

For a full flow of heated air, the top of an enclosure should be open, or at least be of open grill-work. The alternative is to have a solid top, as much higher than the radiator as the radiator is deep, and with its front open. Heated air will then have room enough to pass out horizontally. The lower part of an enclosure should be open, so that there can be a full flow of cool air from the floor.

An enclosure should not be bought for its looks alone. First consideration should be given to the extent to which it may cut down the heating effect of the radiator.

FEMININE shoestring problems are nothing to masculine shoestring problems, we hear. It's probably because the men have more shoestrings to handle. SYNOPSIS

Preparing to close her summer home and preparing to close her summer nome and spend the winter in France with a greataunt, Anne Vincent, a middle-aged widow, accedes to the pleas of her adopted daughter aunt, Anne Vincent, a middle-aged widow, accedes to the pleas of her adopted daughter Rachel, twenty and pretty, that she tell her about her real mother. Anne, an unselfish, understanding soul, finds the task difficult, since she feels Rachel is putting a barrier between them. Rachel learns that her real mother was beautiful eighteen-year-old Elinor Malloy, deserted by her young husband, before Rachel's birth. He was killed in the World war. In desperate financial straits, Elinor had agreed to Rachel's adoption at birth by Anne, whose own baby had died. Elinor subsequently had married Peter Cayne, a wealthy New York business man, and had a son. To soften the story for Rachel, Anne omits telling her that her mother had been callous and selfish. Rachel goes fishing with Bob Eddis, a local boy who runs a library and does wood carving. She refuses his plea to stay in Rockboro and marry him instead of going to New York to look for a Job. Departing the next morning they leave the keys with Mr. Kreel, a neighbor. Anne decides that it is time for Rachel to learn more self-dependence. Rachel makes arrangements to stay in New York for the winter with "Pink," a keen, vivacious girl absorbed in her job. Anne leaves provision for Rachel's finances in case of need and leaves for Europe. After Anne sails, Rachel, bent on seeing her real mother, looks up Elinor Cayne's number. Rachel learns the bent on seeing her real mother, looks up Elinor Cayne's number. Rachel learns the Caynes are not yet in town. Pink takes Rachel to dinner at Tom and Rhoda Steele's where she meets Oliver Land, a shabby genteel young man out of work who suggests that she apply for a job as a photographer's model for advertising illustrations.

"Shush—able to wear smart clothes and not be conscious of them, with enough business sense to keep appointments on time and do what they're told! Oliver's hunch is right, Rachel, the model game is your pigeon and nothing but!"

But see here, I don't know how to model nor where to apply, nor anything," said Rachel. "If I tried it, I'd probably be a flop."

"I know a fellow who has a good agency, one of the best," said Oliver. "I'll take you over there and introduce you, if you'd like me to." "That would be awfully kind," said Rachel, "but I don't want to be a bother."

"Not a bit. I'll come for you tomorrow afternoon-morning would be better.'

Rachel, looking up, saw an odd glance pass between Rhoda and Tom, disturbed, questioning, but they said nothing and she made an appointment with Oliver Land for eleven the next day. But when the evening was over and she and Pink were ready to leave, Rhoda came close to Rachel and whispered quickly, "Listen, darling, listen, don't you lend Oliver any money,

CHAPTER V

It was high time, Rachel felt, to arrange and settle her thoughts. She had been with Pink for nearly six weeks, but except for knowing the streets of the city and how to get about in it, and its parks and big stores and theaters, she might have been in a foreign country. Her life with Anne had run in an entirely different pattern, the quiet uptown apartment, Anne's friends, settled people who all lived in the same general locality or in prosperous suburbs, the days at school, the evenings with Anne to concerts or movies or an occasional play. Looking back at it, Rachel admitted grudgingly that Anne had made efforts to bring more young people around her, but she hadn't, Rachel thought -still with that resentment which had possessed her since the last day in Rockboro-no, Anne hadn't tried very hard. Anne hadn't liked anyone except safe dull stupid people who lived safe dull stupid lives. She'd avoided the lively irresponsible fringe of New York's social fabric, made up of the lesser figures in the arts and professions, people like Tom and Rhoda Steele and Oliver Land. Anne had liked Pink only because Pink was a good housekeeper, Rachel silently accused her. She worked up her case against Anne, stressing the things Anne hadn't done, overlooking the years of tireless care and affection, overlooking Anne's own quiet nature and limited means, overlooking her own nature with equal blindness.

The two letters that had come from Anne added to Rachel's fret against her. Anne had written that there had been agreeable people on board the ship and that her first impressions of the villa near Bordeaux and Madame de Besnard were better than she had hoped. The letters were loving and solicitous of Rachel, but Rachel chose to forget that and to stress that Anne had been having a beautiful trip and was likely to have a diverting winter. Her real mother, Rachel accused Anne, would never have left her alone merely to amuse herself.

All the time Rachel knew she was childishly refusing the truth, but she was in the mood when she needed a grievance. It wasn't nearly as much fun as she'd expected, living with Pink Matthews. Pink had become a fanatic about her work. If she had a hard day before her, she would drop out of the dizziest party at half past ten, or she would turn lingering guests out of the apartment inexorably. "Nobody gets on these days by playing round all the time," Pink said, when Rachel rebelled.

"But what do you want to get on for? What does it get you?" asked Rachel. "You'll only be promoted into another job where you'll have to work harder still. It doesn't make

"Look here, Rachel," Pink replied, "it may not make sense to you, but it does to me. I may be funny that way, but I've got something in me that wants to go ahead. I like to use my brains and see if they aren't a little better than the brains of the people around me. You can call it ambition or vanity, or greed or rank individualism, if you want, but this lopping along like a tame rabbit with a lot of other tame rabbits is nothing to me. I want to be the rabbit that's a yard or so ahead and setting the pace.

It's my way of enjoying life." "I'm like that now. This work's one girl waiting; the man looked "You weren't like that at school."

my form of self-expression, much as I hate that misused word. I like it and I can do it well and I get better at it all the time, and that's a mighty agreeable feeling. And another thing about it, it's stable, it's solid. Your friends may desert you, your new dress may turn out a bust, your best beau may find another gal, but a day's work is a day's work, like a good old block of granite, safe and sound."

"I don't feel so enthusiastic about it," said Rachel.

Pink was sympathetic. "I know, that photographic model stuff must be stupid, but it's only till you land something you really want to do." Rachel had turned silent there. The only thing she really wanted to do was to meet and know Elinor Cayne. She hadn't told Pink, she hadn't told anyone. But there it was, this longing urgency to discover her real mother, for in so doing Rachel assumed she would discover herself, her real self. This dissatisfaction lay at the root of all the others. For the moment she felt nothing but those innumerable dissatisfactions. The first day when she had gone to the agency for models she had felt excited. Oliver Land had called for her, looking just as he had looked the night before, shabbily smart, but quite sure of himself. He had taken a couple of cigarettes from the box on the table. "I'm down to carfare and couldn't buy any," he explained, as if it were the most natural thing in the world. "I'll save one of these for later in the day."

Rachel had been embarrassed, sorry for him. "Take them all," she offcred, "we have heaps more." "I'll fill my case, then, if you don't mind."

Then when they were outside, he said: "Shan't we walk? It's a grand

It was a grand day, but the distance was over 30 blocks. Rachel wondered whether she might offer to pay bus fare. She had never met anyone so frankly penniless,

"It May Not Make Sense to You, but It Does to Me."

and she remembered what Rhoda had whispered in her ear about not lending money to Oliver. They had walked along and she was uncomfortably silent, but Oliver was quite at ease. He had talked amusingly about shows and parties and night clubs, apparently he went everywhere, did everything. Finally he had glanced round at her quizzical-"I believe you're worried about this job. But you mustn't be, you'll land like a house afire, you'll panic the whole outfit. You're very beautiful, you know, keep on thinking about that and don't be nervous. "I'm not nervous," said Rachel, 'but I was wondering if you oughtn't to be looking for a job for yourself instead of taking so much time out for me. "Oh, that! I'll run across something sometime. One of my friends is arranging a radio audition for me and I've got a couple of other plans. And there are so many nice people in the world. Rhoda gave me so much dinner last night that I didn't want any breakfast, and you've given me cigarettes and I've an invitation to lunch-you see?"

"But haven't you any home, or any people?" "Oh, I've parents and a couple of brothers, but they live over in Jersey. I can't depend on them-I mean, I can't-live on them." "I-see-but-" "My dear girl, I believe you're worrying about me! That's flattery, more than I deserve. But you mustn't. I'm one of the many bright lads about this town who've discovered how to live very well indeed without any money." As they neared their destination

he told her a little about the agency. "Vinco, the head of it, is American, though his name sounds foreign; the fact is he uses it because he made enough money betting on a horse named Vinco to set himself up in business. He's superstitious. I hope to goodness this is one of his lucky days, he's sour as an ape if you strike him when he's seen a bad sign. But he's a right guy when he's seen the moon over his left shoulder or whatever it is."

"But he sounds terrifying!" "You should be terrified, with those eyes! Hold your head up and be nonchalant. Not bored or indifferent, Vinco wouldn't like that. Don't seem to be asking for anything-you'll get a lot more that

The Vinco agency was big and bare with a long counter dotted with telephones across one side. There were some chairs and one man and attentively at Rachel, but the girl turned her head away. Louis Vinco and his two assistants stood behind the counter busy with telephones and behind them on the wall were engagement pads to which they constantly turned. As Oliver and Rachel came in Vinco put down his

"I've found you a new model," said Oliver, shaking hands, "Miss Rachel Vincent."

The short baldish little man beamed with pleasure. "Vinco, Vincent! Why, that's lucky!" Then he turned suspicious. "Is Vincent your real name? Oliver here didn't suggest it to you to get me going?"

The thought of her adoption came vividly to Rachel's mind, but she could not speak of it to these two; besides, Vincent was her name, the only name rightfully her own. So she assured Vinco that Vincent was her real name and his smile came

"And you want to be a photographer's model? Any experience? No, of course not. You're overtall, but you're not fat, your head's right in proportion, your features-but the camera'll tell the tale. You must have a test. I'll send you to a studio where they make all my tests. It's a commercial, not a portrait studio-what is it, Miss Dean?" This last over his shoulder to a hovering assistant.

The girl murmured: "Mr. Vinco, Coulette wants two girls for a furniture ad, full color, boudoir scene, one on a chaise longue and the other at the dressing table, Park avenue types. I can get Selina, but everybody else that's any good is busy. They provide the clothes. They don't want petites."

"Why don't you send Miss Vincent?" asked Oliver.

Vinco took out a coin and flipped it. "Heads you go, tails you don't." It came up heads. "There, Miss Vincent, you go. You think this business isn't very businesslike"— he chuckled—"but that's the first time I ever did such a thing. And the last. Hey, Miss Dean, give Miss Vincent an appointment card for this assignment. If she makes good she's to go into our book."

It cost $25 to be registered in the Vinco book, Rachel discovered later, and the pay for her work was made by the hour, five to fifteen dollars usually, the higher rate for special jobs. But she knew none of this when she went on that first assignment, where she wore a delicious blue-flowered negligee and lay on a peach - colored chaise longue while Selina, as her supposed friend, in delicate primrose chiffons sat before the peach-draped dressing table with her arm raised to her perfect coiffure. A canvas and paint representation of a Louis Quinze boiserie enclosed this scene and in front of it two shirtsleeved, disheveled men pushed cameras and directed lights while a man and woman from the furniture factory busied about discussing the girls and their effect as frankly as if they were deaf.

The whole crazy business took Rachel was sagging and tired.

The furniture people had been delighted with the photographs and their satisfaction had passed on to Vinco, With a flourish he informed Rachel that she was in his book and he would send her such appointments as seemed suitable for her and collect her pay therefor, retaining 10 per cent for himself. From Miss Dean Rachel learned that Vinco was a fiend for punctuality and any excuse short of a broken neck was nothing to him From the other models she met she earned more about him, that he played fair with all his people, had no favorites, was scrupulously honest about money, but wouldn't let anyone draw ahead or cash a check, and was intensely proud of the quality of Vinco service.

Her first assignment had been folcwed by others more interesting. Rachel had posed in winter sports clothes for a fashion magazine, coming up over a fake snow hillside, skis in hand, and had won a small acclaim because "you're the first girl we've tried that Schiaparelli outfit on who didn't look insane," the assistant editor told her. "We've had three others." A furrier, too, had liked Rachel for the pictures in his catalogue. "It takes a tall girl for furs," he said. "She wears them with an air and then all the little fatties think they can do it Somehow Oliver Land had made her feel that she was in debt to him for her place with Vinco. And he never let her forget his poverty. "I wish you'd call me up, it costs ten cents whenever I call you and that's my morning coffee." And, "I had to borrow a shirt today, the sleeves are short, I hope I don't look funny to go out with you.' One day he had come to see her and said, laughing: "It's ridiculous, but I'm absolutely broke today and I'm hungry as the devil. Have you got any bread and butter round the place, or any milk?" But when she hurried to bring him food he didn't. eat very much. "I don't want to get the habit of eating," he said, "I can't afford it." He lived, she knew, with another young man out of work, in a room which someone had loaned them. The two pooled their resources, shared their suits and cuff links and cigarettes and invitations.

Pink didn't like them, either of them, especially Oliver, but she was tolerant. "Just a couple of cigaleayant-chante-tout-l'ete, if you ask me," she said. "Almost in the gigolo class but not quite. Don't tell me they can't get work. They don't want it unless it's on their own terms, which is what doesn't exist these days. Why don't they go in the CCC and climb trees instead of kidding themselves they're going to land in a show?"

"But Oliver got me my job, Pink." said Rachel. "They try to do things for people, both of them." 'Then pay Oliver a commission. Probably that's what he's hanging around for."

Unexpected Visitors Must Take a Chance

DEAR Mrs. Post: My husband and I were planning to go with another couple to a big dance in town when the day before out of town relatives just arrived without any notice at all. We tried to persuade them to go to the dance with us but they said they did not care for dancing and also they had not come prepared with evening clothes. We even tried to supply the clothes, but no, they would not go. We felt that we should go since we had promised our friends. We explained the situation and they seemed very sincere in wanting us to go without them. They stayed home with the radio and the dog. Next day they acted hurt and before leaving remarked that they were glad their visit had not interfered with our pleasure. I certainly feel that they have branded me as a discourteous hostess and can't help wondering whether I was wrong.

Answer: A question like this is so hard to answer because if I say you were perfectly right in going out, the chances are that some of my readers would feel about it as your guests apparently did. And yet the real fault was that of your guests who came without asking you if it would be convenient to have them. And this is a thing which in my opinion no one should take for granted-not even a nearest relative, unless she knows there is plenty of room and also that her hostess will feel free to do just as you did.

Use Double Sheets.

DEAR Mrs. Post: I have always been under the impression that correct writing paper for a man was cut in single sheets, but recently you suggested to a reader that in his particular case the paper should be double. Has the style in men's writing paper changed or is it that I have been under a wrong impres-

Answer: I am sorry but I am afraid you have been under the ment. wrong impression. Social paper, or at least that which can be used for formal occasions such as notes of invitation, answers to invitations, etc., should never be on a single fold paper. Of course when file copies need be made of personal letters then they as well as long business letters are necessarily written on single paper of typewriting size.

Junior Bridesmaid

D EAR Mrs. Post: I have a sister only eleven years old, but big for her age. She is my only sister and at an age that seems to make it impossible to include her in my wedding party either as a flower girl or as a bridesmaid, and yet I know the poor child will be heartbroken if you can't find some place for her.

Answer: Make her a junior brides maid. That means that she wears a dress as nearly as possible like those worn by the bridesmaids, but modified to suit her age. If you have a maid of honor, your sister should follow the ushers either walking alone or else walking with another junior bridesmaid. If she walks immediately before you, this would make her your maid of honor, which she can perfectly well be if you have not already invited your best friend.

Deaths in Business DEAR Mrs. Post: At various times our company receives notices of the death of people who are connected with business firms with which we do business. We don't know whether we should make any acknowledgment of this announcement or not, and if so, what, Answer: This is probably only intended as a notification so that you will no longer address business letters to this name, and no acknowledgment is necessary. On the other hand, if you happen to know someone in the company whom you feel will be really upset by the loss of this associate, it would be kind to write to him.

Drinking Your Bouillon D EAR Mrs. Post: Is it proper to pick up the wide bouillon cups and drink from them? They seem almost too large, but my husband insists that their handles are not only intended for ornamentation.

Answer: Your husband is quite right. Moreover, you use both handles, one held in each hand.

JAPAN THE AGGRESSOR

Condemned by Roosevelt and The League, Tokio Is Defiant . . . England and France Prod Mussolini

America Backs Up League

DENOUNCING Japan as the aggressor in the conflict in China and accusing Tokyo of violating both the nine-power treaty and the Kellogg-Briand pact, the United States government lined up with the League of Nations.

Secretary of State Hull issued a statement to this effect, asserting that Japan's action in China was inconsistent with the principles that should govern the relationships between nations and was contrary to the provisions of the two treaties. It was indicated that the United States would participate in a conference of the powers signatory to the nine-power pact, which was called for by the league.

Fifty member nations of the league voted for the resolution branding Japan as an invader and treaty violator and warning of more drastic action if Tokyo does not mend its ways. China was assured of the moral support of these powers, which agreed to take no action that would weaken China's power of resistance. Poland and Siam refrained from voting.

The Aga Khan, Indian prince who is president of the league assembly, sent messages to the signers of the nine-power treaty and to Germany and Russia, asking them to convene immediately. These events followed closely upon President Roosevelt's startling address at the dedication of a boulevard bridge in Chicago, which turned out to be perhaps the most important speech he ever has made. Reiterating his determination to keep America out of war, he said: 'The peace, the freedom, and the security of 90 per cent of the population of the world is being jeopardized by the remaining 10 per cent who are threatening a breakdown of all international order and law." He continued: "The peace-loving nations must make a concerted effort in opposition to those violations of treaties and those ignorings of humane instincts which today are creating a state of international anarchy from which there is no escape through mere isolation or neutrality. We are determined to keep out of war, yet we cannot insure ourselves against the disastrous effects of war and the dangers of involvement."

Japan Still Defiant

IN THE face of these warnings and threats Japan was defiant. An emergency meeting of the cabinet was called, and spokesmen for the foreign office and the navy declared Tokyo's present "pacification" policy in China would be continued.

We cannot stay our hands out of respect for a world opinion formed on the basis of dispatches rewritten by Chinese government officials,' said a high naval official.

Great Britain's cabinet, studying President Roosevelt's speech, was anxious to learn just how far the United States would go in support of action taken against aggressor nations. The British statesmen remembered how they themselves left Secretary Stimson out on a limb when he tried to stop Japan's seizure of Manchuria; and they suspect that the American people are dead set against being drawn again into foreign intrigues and quarrels.

Germany and Italy both felt that Mr. Roosevelt's remarks were directed against them as well as Japan, and were rather resentful and skeptical. The Nazis recalled President Wilson's failure to pacify the world, and Mussolini's newspaper declared "We fully understand and justify Japanese efforts at expan-France and loyalist Spain warmly approved Mr. Roosevelt's speech and Mr. Hull's announcement.

R EPORTS from neutral observers indicated that the stubborn resistance of the Chinese had brought the Japanese advance to a virtual standstill both in the Shanghai area and on the northern front. Where the Chinese troops have withdrawn they have occupied new and strong systems of defenses. The progress of the Japanese in North China has been rapid but is now slowed up, and the Chinese are ready to meet them on the Yellow river.

Japan's plan to set up an autono mous republic comprising the five northern provinces is revealed in the Tokyo press. The capital is to be Peiping under its old name of Peking.

As for agricultural legislation, it appears the administration will favor compulsory production control for wheat, corn, cotton, rice and tobacco. This was inferred from a speech in which Secretary of Agriculture Wallace expounded his ever normal granary scheme to New Yorkers. The plan, he said, which would "give the maximum income to farmers at the least cost to the federal treasury, is one which involves high loan values and frequent use of compulsory control."

"I realize that I was elected by men who believe in the principles that I have sought to advocate and which are the principles of this organization."

Black emphatically declared his devotion to the principles of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. "When this statement is ended." he concluded, "my discussion of the question is closed." There was a definite note of defiance in Black's address, but it is fair to assume that the American public was not satisfied with his explanation. From all parts of the country came renewed protests against his presence on the Supreme court bench, and various large asso-'ciations "resoluted" about it. Rail Strike Averted

THERE will not be a nationwide strike of railway workers. Such a disaster was averted when the five operating railroad brotherhoods accepted an offer of the companies of a flat raise of 44 cents a day. They and the fifteen "non-operating" unions had demanded a 20 per cent wage increase. The latter already had agreed to a raise of 40 cents a day.

For five weeks Dr. William M. Leiserson, member of the national mediation board, had been holding daily conferences with representatives of both sides.

In announcing the terms of the agreement, Leiserson praised the co-operation of both parties, saying the manner in which they receded from their original positions was the biggest factor in the settlement.

Windsor Coming to U.S.

H is honeymoon being ended, the duke of Windsor intends to take up the really serious things of life, and before long he will come to the United States for the purpose of studying housing and working conditions in this country. This was announced in Paris by the duke's secretary, who said Edward and his duchess would first go to Germany for a similar survey there.

The duke's interest in such matters is no new development, for as Prince of Wales and during his brief reign as king-emperor Edward was notably concerned with the social welfare of his subjects. On many occasions he assailed housing conditions of British workers.

In London it was said the government had given reluctant permission for the duke's American trip in order to avoid an open rupture with him. He resented the close restrictions placed on his movements and, it was rumored, had threatened to return to England. American friends of the Windsors think they may make their temporary home at "Wakefield manor," near Front Royal, Va., possibly arriving there in November. The manor is the estate of Mrs. George Barnett, cousin of the duchess. _*_

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart National Press Building

Washington.—It may be, as I have frequently been told, that the averperson-Mr. age John Q. Public-Federal has very little in-Reserve terest in the doings of the federal reserve system.

It may be true that the average citizen accepts the federal reserve banks as a thing apart and of little or no concern to him because they are so far removed and, further, because they indulge in what the demagogues used to call "high fi-

Whether my information is correct and regardless of the public concept of the federal reserve system, I am devoting some space this week to a discussion of certain developments in the federal reserve banking structure in an attempt to show the trend of money conditions in this country at the moment.

Lately, the federal reserve board of governors announced a revision of its regulations governing discounts and advances by federal reserve banks. Now, it may be said that these regulations affect only the banks that are members of the reserve system. That is true but it is not the whole truth because everything that the federal reserve board of governors and the federal reserve banks do affects you and me and everyone else whether we are little fellows and, therefore, unimportant individually, or whether we are trustees of great sums of money such as is the case with corporation presidents.

The board of governors, in the revision of its regulations, has making as well. If we do not, a made it possible—if not obligatory— yawning cavern of unsounded for the reserve banks to take almost any kind of paper that is an evidence of debt. That is, the reserve banks are now empowered to receive from the member banks that paper upon which you and I the current fiscal year to help in borrow, any paper that shows that a balancing the budget. There were citizen owes the bank money, and to give that bank money in exchange for the evidence of that debt.

Now the executive | time and the arrangement simply | just around the corner," a corner permits the federal reserve banks to carry the debt until its maturity.

All of this obviously sounds as though the federal reserve system is at last to be helpful to us little fellows. That is true. It is going to be helpful in increasing the number of us little fellows who get ourselves in debt. It is going to do that because it makes getting into debt easier.

I think no one should object to the reserve board regulations in all details. There must be credit given where credit is needed; that is to say when you prohibit borrowing money you choke off eighty-five per cent of all of the business done in the United States. Yet, credit is dangerous, a double-edged sword and must be handled with extreme caution by the borrowers as well as by the lenders. As we have seen from the inglorious debacle of 1929, there can be too much credit extended, and when I say that, I refer not only to loans by banks but the sale of goods, wares and merchandise that enter into everyday life. And, going a bit further on that line, there can be too much credit extended by the manufacturer and jobber to retail merchandising establishments just as easily as there can be too much credit extended by the retail merchants to you or to me. One can get into debt over his head just as easily by purchasing at retail or wholesale as by buying more land than we can afford to own or a home larger than we need. So, a discussion of what the board of governors of the federal reserve system has done can lead in this instance only to a conclusion that danger flags are waving.

I do not want to exaggerate present conditions or signs as I see them. This is no time to Don't Get become excited. Excited There are, however, boundaries beyond which we cannot go in the matter of credit without facing another tailspin of the type of 1929. That is the thing I fear may result from an accumulation of federal policies of which the late action by the federal reserve board is only

It is perfectly human and natural for each one of us to aspire to better things, to have more of this world's goods for our enjoyment and to equip ourselves by way of greater real necessity exists for curtailment resources for the future. We will do those things sometimes when we ought not to do them simply because the instruments are available and we do not stop to count the ultimate cost. To the extent, then, that the federal reserve board probably has made borrowing easier it has tempted a certain percentage of citizens, or will tempt them in the future.

The condition of easier debt that is now presented is, as I have said, only one of many temptations and inducements for getting into debt that has been offered by the Roosevelt policies. It is unnecessary to re-

Washington, D. C. count here how many pieces of legislation, how many executive and administrative rules have been made to permit citizens to use money that is not their own. They are almost numberless. The result has been, is, and will continue to be the creation of a lot of debt that will hang over us all for years to come. The federal government itself has taken the lead in getting into debt. The latest Treasury statement shows that the United States government owes more than thirty-seven billion dollars. That amounts to $281.63 for every man, woman and child in the United States. Compare that with the national debt as of 1932 when it stood at $19,500,000,000 or a debt of $155.93 for every living person in the United States.

I do not know when, if ever, this gigantic national debt will be paid off. I think prob-Pay Off ably the American people with tradi-Sometime tional tenacity will stick by the job and get it done some time, but I must refer to the job as a very slow process. It required twelve years after the World war debt reached its peak of twenty-six billion to reduce it by ten millions. That reduction was more rapid than had ever been known before in any nation and it was made possible be cause of the prosperity which we enjoyed during those twelve years.

It would seem, therefore, that we must consider not only a slowing down of individual debt making, but a sharp curtailment of national debt depths awaits us.

Some weeks ago Mr. Roosevelt sent instructions to the various agencies of the government to save ten per cent out of the operations for no ifs, nor ands, nor buts about President Roosevelt's instructions. The spending agencies were told Everyone, of course, is familiar simply to lay aside that ten per with a note or a mortgage on a cent which, in the aggregate, would next fiscal year. Most other people realized because Mr. Roosevelt has . . .

> But Mr. Roosevelt must be commended and criticized at the same time for his budg-Budget et balancing ideas. Balancing Mind you, no criticism can possibly be attached to the objective-a balanced budget. But commendation must give way to criticism on some of the things that are happening under the flat order for a reduction in spending.

Take this case for example: The National Park service, like other agencies, laid away ten per cent of its operations. This impounding of money happened to coincide with the greatest flock of visitors ever to enter the gates of the country's national playgrounds. It costs money to police and protect the parks; it requires funds to provide for the comfort of the throngs of visitors to national parks. The result, in the case of several parks, was that they were forced to close their gates to visitors from a week to a month earlier than they usually do in the fall. Their money had run out.

Well, say you, what harm does that do? Simply this: Visitors to national parks, such as Yellowstone, for example, pay much more for entrance fees and the things they must buy while in the parks than it costs the government to maintain the parks. In other words, the national parks in most cases are a good investment because they yield revenue into the national treasury. But that is the crux in this situation. The National Park service does not keep the money that is paid in by park visitors. Those funds are turned directly into the treasury as general revenue. The books of the National Park service, therefore, show only outgo and nothing in the way of income to balance its expenditures.

The condition is one, therefore, it seems to me, that almost warrants a statement that the policy is "penny wise and pound foolish.' All of this is by way of illustrating the need for a closer examination of national expenditures. Would it not be better, I ask, to do away with some of the wasteful expenditure's for experimentation-sums running into millions-and permit expenditures where they bring a return. Likewise, it seems to me that a of a lot of brain trust theories that were proved futile in the days when Rome was at its height-because some of the brain trust theories go back just that far. Why not eliminate, close the spigot at the treasury, on some of the expenditures that are obviously political sop and thereby permit expenditures that will encourage general business to go forward and provide jobs so that relief rolls may be reduced. And lastly, why not cut down expenditures generally where they provide no return and avoid a boost in taxes.

International interest reached its peak in London in 1930, when 60 countries were represented, but attendance fell off to 80,000. No attendance records were kept at Rome in 1933, but the Sixth congress, at Leipzig, Germany, in 1936, drew 41 countries and an attendance of 70,000. It is expected that the holding of the next congress in the United States, as unanimously decided at Leipzig, will awaken a tremendous revival of interest and attendance.

The congress has ever been a colorful affair. Dignitaries of the host nations have served as patrons. Kings, queens, princes and dictators have paid homage to the humble hen by opening the congresses and participating in their functions.

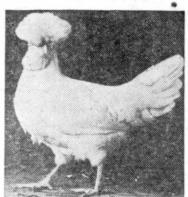

In addition to holding the scientific sessions and exposition, it has been customary for the host nation and host city to entertain official delegates and visitors with receptions, banquets, concerts and short tours to nearby points of interest.

The congress itself has never included all of the events which attract poultry-raisers, but rather acts as the nucleus or stimulus for a great many outside activities. Following the congress there are usually tours to points of interest, such as experiment stations, egg-laying contests, poultry farms and marketing establishments and agencies, as well as tours of general scenic and historic

How Show Is Sponsored.

In other countries the congress has been sponsored by the national governments, but here so many interests are at stake that the show will be put on by a general committee co-ordinating the sponsorship of the poultry industry, the federal government, the host city and state, and the various participating state committees. All will contribute to the financing.

James E. Rice, of Trumansburg, N. Y., co-author of the congress idea, is chairman of the national poultry industry committee. Dr. C. W. An executive board, made up of members of these four committees, will actually direct the destinies of the Seventh World's Poultry Congress and Exposition.

Although the big event is nearly two years away, state poultry congress committees or councils have been reported organized in California, Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah and Washington, a tohe activity and tal of 19 states. State organizations are expected to be completed by the first of the year.

Government Contributes $100,000.

The federal government will enter the exposition in a big way. Congress has authorized and the President has approved an appropriation of $100,000 for federal participation. This provides for an exhibit, for entertaining delegates at Washington, for printing, and for translators and interpreters. From requests now being made, it appears that at least 40 states will have exhibits and that the average appropriation will be $7,000. The Hall of Industry will display the commercial aspects of the poultry industry. Here will be shown the products and work of hatcheries, manufacturers, marketing agencies, press and radio.

Many commercial firms doing educational or research work will exhibit. Others will show the history and development of their product. Exhibits of processes of the industry will include hatching, grading and sexing chicks; battery raising of broilers and hens; killing, dressing, grading and packing of chickens; eviscerating fowl; and breaking, canning and drying of eggs. On nearby railroad tracks the various types of railroad cars used in transporting the industry's products will be exhibited.

Large Live Bird Exhibits.

Educational and progress exhibits throughout the Hall of Industry will break the monotony of a purely trade show. Here, also, booths will be provided for the World's Poultry Science association and the Poultry Science Association of America.

Most fascinating for virtually every visitor will be the Hall of Poultry, which will house the live bird exhibits. It may take the form of national government displays of a non-competitive nature, with possibly 15 or 20 countries showing live birds. Consideration is being given to the holding of a competitive live bird exhibit of standard breed poultry.

Butterhorn Rolls

One cup milk scalded, two tablespoons sugar, one cup lukewarm water, one cake compressed yeast, seven to eight cups sifted flour, one tablespoon salt, one-half cup fat, one-half cup sugar, six egg yolks. Scald milk with two tablespoons sugar and cool to lukewarm. Add water and yeast which has been mixed with part of the water. Add three cups of flour to make a spongy batter. Beat, let stand until light. Cream fat and sugar, add egg yolks and beat until light and fluffy. Add to sponge with rest of flour and salt. Knead lightly and cover and let stand in warm place until double in bulk.

Divide in three pieces, roll out each one in one-third-inch-thick rounds. Spread with soft butter, cut in 16 pie-shaped pieces. Beginning at large end, roll up each section with point at top. Place on greased tin, brush top with egg beaten with water and let stand, covered, until double in bulk. Bake 20 minutes in a hot oven.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Do you realize how the leisure time of a high school student throughout his educational career, may develop

If you like to spend your leisure time listening to the radio, reading the newspaper, attending the movies or playing bridge, you've fallen into a typical American rut. These activities, along with motoring and attendance at parties, are the favorite pastimes of high school students.

"Though we have far more leisure time today than ever before in our history, we are actually doing fewer things than many of our forebearers who had less time."

We are not opposed to the use of leisure time. Something ought to be done with it, something which will improve minds, as it gives pleasure, or otherwise make the world a better place to live in. Perhaps the answer lies in something about the way other persons spend their leisure time.

Banish the future; live only for the hour and its assigned work. Do not think of the amount accomplished or the difficulties to be overcome, but sit earnestly at the little task at your elbow, letting that be sufficient for the day. Our duty is not to see what lies at a distance, but to do what lies clearly at hand. If we do our best, not magnifying troubles and look resolutely, I will not say at the bright side of things, but at things as they really are; if we apply ourselves to our studies, we cannot but feel that life is indeed a glorious inheritance.

The most tedious task for a high school student is first, to get a position; second, to keep his mouth shut; third, observe all given rules; fourth, be a good worker, and fifth, be honest,

No high school student lives without meeting some difficulties. In all ways he has to elbow himself through the world, giving and receiving offense.

HOG CHOLERA

Madison: Widespread occurence of hog cholera in Wisconsin has been reported by Dr. W. Wisnicky, state director of livestock sanitation.

Fifteen counties in widely separated areas have notified the department of agriculture and markets of the existence of the disease in menacing proportions within their borders, Dr. Wisnicky revealed. These include Green, Winnebago, Buffalo, Calumet, Ashland, Bayfield, Langlade, Jefferson, Rock, Walworth, Trempealeau, Columbia, Dodge, Dunn and Fond du Lac.

The department of agriculture and markets is exercising strict sanitary regulation to prevent the spread of the disease, but in spite of its efforts some hogs are being transported into Wisconsin illegally.

Dr. Wisnicky attributed the outbreaks partly to the purchase of feeding and breeding pigs in widely scattered sources as a result of favorable market prices for finished hogs. The price situation, he explained, has stimulated new interest in hog raising.

THE CORN BORER

An annual survey just completed by the department of agriculture and markets has revealed the presence of corn borers in only 55 fields in 10 Wisconsin counties, E. L. Chambers, state entomologist, reported. Only a few stalks in each field were found to be infested, Chambers said, indicating that the presence of this crop pest in widely scattered fields is due to the migration of corn borer moths across Lake Michigan. The worst infestations were discov-
