Bedlam Reigns in Roper's Conference . . . Housing Bill Enacted . . . German Army Versus Nazis

Business Men in Uproar

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE ROPER thought the thousand "little business" men he invited to Washington to tell their troubles and needs to the President would hold a nice quiet meeting and formulate a program that wouldn't embarrass the administration. But they fooled him.

Their opening session in the Department of Commerce auditorium was decidedly riotous and finally the police were called in to restore order. Every man present wanted to make a speech and dozens fought for possession of the microphone of the loudspeaker system in order to tell what they thought was wrong with the country and what should be done about it. Mr. Roper tried valiantly to deliver a message of greeting from Mr. Roosevelt, but the throng refused to listen even to that. Assistant Secretary Ernest Draper had little better luck. Draper announced that Fred Roth, shoe manufacturer of Cleveland, was temporary chairman, and this led to further disorder because he was "hand-picked."

RFC Chairman Jesse Jones, who tried to speak, was cheered but soon retired from the room with Roper and Draper.

Some of the business men who could make themselves heard condemned the administration for high taxes, reckless spending and unwarranted attacks on industry and business. Others called on the President to declare he will not accept a third term. They demanded he get rid of his theorists. They voted to consider the problem of taxes, shouting down the attempts of Commerce officials to sidetrack it.

Finally nine small groups were formed to discuss as many phases of the problem and carry their findings to the White House. These, with their topics and chairmen,

Housing Bill Passed

L'NOUGH Democratic senators L switched their votes on the Lodge prevailing wages amendment to the housing bill, so the senate by a vote of 42 to 40 adopted the conference report on the housing bill and the measure went to the White House for the President's approval. This was the first item on the administration's program to be enacted since the special session was called November 15 last.

The measure provides for government insuring of mortgages on privately constructed housing up to 90 per cent of the value of the property on homes costing not more than $6,000; and on 80 per cent on homes costing up to $16,000.

With the prevailing wage amendment eliminated, legislators and labor leaders are disputing as to the effect it will have on the wage scales in the residential building industry. Senator Lodge's amendment was approved by the American Federation of Labor, but proponents of the measure said it would defeat the whole housing program. At any rate, it appears to have served the opponents of the administration by getting it in bad with organized labor. _*_

Author of "God Save the King"

The origin of "God Save the King" has been wrapped in mystery for centuries. It was first sung by Harry Carey at a dinner to celebrate the capture of Portobello by Admiral Vernon in 1740, according to Pearson's London Weekly. Carey admitted authorship of the words, but refused to commit himself about the music. The song achieved instant success on the wave of patri-otism that followed the declaration of Bonnie Prince Charlie as king. English citizens sang it everywhere as a retort in favor of the legitimate monarch, and it was first sung in the presence of the monarch, at Drury Lane in September, 1745.

Formerly it was believed that lead veins were closely related to the rocks containing them, but Dr. Holmes finds the lead in many rocks differs from lead in veins and is actually a different kind of lead, having a different atomic weight.

Basing his conclusions on the studies of radioactivity which he has been making for many years, Dr. Holmes has learned that rock lead (not in veins) contains the products of radioactive disintegration, while vein-lead, the material mined and sold, does not contain radioactive end-products. It therefore appears, according to Holmes, that vein-lead does not have its source in the rocks surrounding the veins, but in some deeper zone

According to Mr. Heyl's invention each seed would be coated with latex-the rubber-containing "milk" of the rubber tree. Before the coating is applied, fertilizer, fungicides and bacteria which can fix nitrogen from the air so plants can "eat" it, are mixed in the latex solution.

When this solution dries on the seed it leaves a thin rubber coating containing the various ingredients. Water from the surrounding soil gradually penetrates through this coating and carries the nourishment imbedded therein, to the seed. The inventor claims that plants which spring from these specially treated seeds grow better and yield greater harvests.

HUMOR BIRDS FOR POULTRY PROFITS

Catering to Hens' Whims Is Found Good Plan.

H. H. Alp. Poultry Extension Specialist. It will pay poultry producers to learn how hens behave like human beings. Whims in poultry behavior can be noticed in fowls just as easily as they can be in human beings, and in many cases they are likely to be similar. Although there is a difference of opinion as to whether human whims should be catered to, the successful poultryman knows that for good egg production, poultry whims can not be overlooked.

For instance, putting fresh feed in a feed hopper for poultry works just about the same as putting fresh bread on the table for the family meal-it usually results in increased consumption. A feeder which requires frequent filling is a distinct advantage, since the frequent filling encourages egg production.

Just as humans dislike water that has been heavily chlorinated, so hens will turn up their noses at water which has been polluted with some pill or powder. Such a practice is likely to result in low water consumption and low egg produc-

The more appetizing the water, the greater will be its probable effect on egg production. When it is cold it will pay to keep water warm as well as clean.

To many people a dessert makes a meal complete and often helps to make up for any shortcomings of the main course. Judging by their reactions to a moist mash feeding once a day, poultry would agree that such a feeding serves them well as a dessert. Many flock owners resort to moist feeding as a means of feeding some of the vitamin and mineral concentrates such as codliver oil, sardine oil and milk products.

Hens also react favorably to clean surroundings. When clean litter is substituted for dirty litter, there is much singing and scratching which helps increase egg production

Electric Farm Fence Is Regarded as Dangerous

It is extremely dangerous for anyone unfamiliar with the principles of electricity to experiment with the electric fence, says Harry L. Garver, investigator in rural electrification at Washington State college.

Electric fences operated by storage batteries and properly constructed by expert electricians will effects of forestry's twin evils in give safe service. But it is never past and present practice, private advisable for the amateur to attempt exploitation without thought for the to build his own equipment, Garver future, and public tax policies that says. In all probability, it would result in reversion to the state of not meet safety approval, thereby making the owner liable for any damage that might be done by it, he added.

While it is possible to build electric fences that are connected with the home wiring circuit, this practice is not encouraged; there is too much danger of unskilled persons making the wrong connection and sending the full charge through the fence. It is believed advisable to post warning signs on all electric tal may venture unappalled .- Alfences.

Nests for R. I. Reds

A nest for a Rhode Island Red hen should be from 12 to 15 inches square and about 12 inches high. One nest of this type must be provided for every four or five hens in the flock. The dark front nest with an entrance from the rear is coming into general use. It avoids egg eating and losses from pickouts. The "community type" nest is a favorite with many poultrymen. It has the same general construction but is built without partitions dividing it into individual This nest may be six or eight feet in length with a four-inch board in front to retain the litter.

Hardware Bad for Cows

Hardware has its very important place in our scheme of farm operation, but baling wire, nails, bits of steel, etc., lodged inside Bossy's body are bad medicine. Just a few precautions are mentioned by Hoard's Dairyman: Account for all baling wire from hay, straw, or shavings used in the cow barn. Unwind the wire, do not chop it in two. Stage a continual pick-up of wire, nails, etc. Do not mend stanchions with wire. If a nail is missed while making a repair about the feed alley, find it. Outlaw the steel brush around the feed department.

Feeding the Hens

The feed for hens depends upon several factors. First, the development of the bird; second, the rate of production; third, the condition of the house in which the birds are kept, and fourth the amount of mash the birds consume daily. You cannot weigh out the scratch grain. The only way is to feed them what they will eat up clean, giving them all they wish at night, when they should go to roost satisfied and with full crops.

Care After Dehorning After dehorning, to control hemorrhage, take four hog rings and place them at equal distances in the margin of the skin around the cut surface. Wrap a piece of binding twine around the rings and pull them together as tightly as it may be found necessary to stop the blood. This recommendation was Many Old Stories About Milk made by Doctor G. "Tuberculosis kills more young peo. ple in Wisconsin between the ages of 15 and 45 than any other disease," according to County Nurse Alberta Anderson, who has completed arrangements for the free chest clinics to be held in West Bend and Hartford during February. The West Bend clinic will be held Friday, Feb. 18, in the of. fice of the county nurse, court house, and the Hartford clinic on Friday, Feb. 25, in the Red Cross rooms, city hall, Hartford. All individuals planning to attend are urged to call West Bend tion reported today. A large number of patients receiving sanatorium care is a good sign in tuberculosis control, the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association explains, because the sanatorium usually offers the patient the best chance to get well. Also, when the source of infection is removed from the home, the patient's family is protected from further infec-

"For tuberculosis is a communicable disease," say the doctors of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association staff. "A well person can 'catch' it from someone who has an active case. That is why whole families often become infected, and tuberculosis is often referred to as a family disease."

Last year 101 Washington-Waukesha county people were hospitalized in parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Phalz. Wisconsin tuberculosis institutions This means that a ratio of 4.0 patients were treated per death from the disease. The state ratio was only 3.6 in

"However, with nine estimated active cases per death from tuberculosis,' the report states, "less than half of the Washington-Waukesha county tuberculosis patients are now receiving the benefit of sanatorium care.

"The sanatorium should be the first resort of the tuberculosis; not the last. National studies show that five out of every six pulmonary tuberculosis patients entering a sanatorium do not do so until they are in an advanced stage of the disease, when recovery is slow and uncertain. But if tuberculosis is discovered in its early stages and put under prompt treatment, cure is relatively quicker, more certain and less

HERE is positively the super spreader of all times. The NEW IDEA Model 8 has the largest capacity of any axle drive spreader on the market, yet it weighs less than many a smaller machine. We will back it, not only to do a better job of spreading, but to load easier and pull lighter than any other spreader of the same size.

This machine is built to withstand the hardest kind of service. You can use it every day in the year and not wear it out in a normal lifetime. And as for repairs, you'll never need enough of them on this spreader to make any difference, either to you or to us.

Capacity, 65 to 70 bushels. Loading height only 401/4 inches. Five changes of feed rate. We'll be proud to have you come in and look over the many special features of this high grade spreader.

WHY

Do People Save?

Most people keep that to themselves. Even bankers do not know. What we do know is that when people decide in earnest to save money, they usually have some definite purpose in mind. That we know by the clocklike regularity with which they add to their accounts. Such people seem to have learned that the way to get the things they want is to save for them. We invite you to save here for the things you want.

Government Opens New Anti-Monopoly Campaign Headed by Trust-Buster Robert H. Jackson; Revives Favorite American Political Custom

By JOSEPH W. LaBINE

The Big Stick is being waved once more in Washington, this time to an accompaniment of sound and fury that makes the 'trust-busters' in the lusty days of 1900 and 1910 seem like so many baa-ing sheep by comparison.

Today's cracking-down is pretty much the same old game; only the terminology, the amplification and the size of the field are different.

"Trust!" was the cry almost ex- competition. Now the administraclusively in the old days; now we hear "monopolies," "big business," As Robert H. "combines," "princes of privilege," and "sixty American families" mentioned in the same breath.

A generation ago the anti-trust campaigns were fought in the American industry from killing itcourts, at comparatively small political meetings and in the press. Today they are fought in large measure over the radio, with some of the government's ablest fire-eaters stirring up millions of people in a long parade of "special" broadcasts.

In addition, the current attack advances at one time in a vast number of directions that would have amazed and confounded the old-timers, but which are characteristic of the tremendously increased scale of operation which the nation has come to accept from its government in recent years.

Monopolies were originally scheduled to have been dealt with by the special session of congress which closed just before Christmas. But when it became evident that protracted wrangling was to keep even the wages-and-hours bill, the executive reorganization bill, or any other of the "must" legislation for which the special session was called, from being enacted, the anti-monopoly drive was switched post-haste from the legislative chambers to the broadcasting studios. Assistant Attorney General Robert Houghwout (pronounced Houghwout) Jackson and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes were the Nos. 1 and 2 cheer leaders. (At this writing Jackson is rumored about to become United States solicitor general.)

What these two and the President have said has been so wide- be in some respects, often father ly heard and read that even the remotest hamlet is already familiar with it. But what is the government actually doing-not saying-in this renewal of the old familiar war against trusts? Seek New Laws.

The administration is again demanding that congress pass laws, such as that requiring the federal licensing of corporations, which will "strengthen" the campaign against "big business" and monopoly.

President Roosevelt is seeking the co-operation of heads of large corporations toward a planned economy which may or may not remove some of the alleged evils.

And the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice has 29 antitrust cases pending determination by the federal courts. These are the evidence "on the record" of what the government is actually doing. Their scope defies history to produce a precedent.

Four Acts in Effect.

The Sherman anti-trust law of 1890 remains still the most important of the rules under which the battle is being fought, but there are three others: The Clayton anti-trust | that no group of investors has been act of 1914; the Federal Trade Commission act of 1914, and the Robinson-Patman law of 1936 to protect | Paradoxically the same governsmall business men from chain ment now prosecuting it protected

Robert H. Jackson (center) is the busy director of the government's trust-busting forces. He carries the double burden of prosecuting the government's anti-trust suits in New York federal courts and of campaigning for the governorship of the same state. He is shown here with Rep. the Hall patents until they ran out in 1909.

Monopoly charges against the Ethyl Gasoline corporation, Earl C. Webb and John Coard Taylor, also grow out of the manner in which the government protects patents on vital inventions.

New York Readquarters.

Jackson, as head of the antitrust division, has 20 new assistants, costing $150,000 to help him wield the war club, and has opened offices in the New York Federal Courts building for the big drive. Western Union and Postal Telegraph systems are due to be tried there. And he recently succeeded in obtaining permission to sue the Aluminum company, already operating under the consent decree of a Pennsylvania federal court, in New York, where he is slated to run for goveror this year.

An idea of the variety and scope of other federal anti-trust cases pending in the courts may be gleaned from a brief summary of a handful of them:

Jackson swears that the Party Dress Guild, Inc., is restraining interstate trade in women's and misses' party dresses. Monopolies are apparently making it something of a task for odd-size ladies to get out at all, even to parties, for he also charges the Half-Size Dress Guild, Inc., with restraining inter-state trade in women's and misses' half-size dresses.

The Protective Fur Dressers' corporation, he says, is skinning the public as well as the more sprightly world of rabbits, by restraining and monopolizing trade in rabbit skins. Local No. 202 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America is charged with restraining the fruit trade; the United Sea Food Workers with tying up the salt water fish business, and the Dairymen's Association, Ltd., with fixing the price of milk in Honolulu.

Oil Defendants.

Several oil company officials, recently convicted at Madison, Wis., on charges of conspiring to restrain gasoline trade, are making plans to appeal the verdict.

The anti-trust division may have to fight an appeal from the Interstate Circuit, Inc., an a decision which agreed that the organization was setting minimum admission charges for second-run moving pictures and prohibiting the use of them on double-feature programs.

Federal investigations are being made of suspected monopolies in the rubber, cement, milk and window products industries. A federal grand jury in Milwaukee, Wis., was investigating monopoly charges against automobile finance companies linked with Ford, Chrysler and General Motors, but the court dismissed the grand jury without hearing its report, much to the chagrin of the Department of Justice. More will probably be heard on this score.

Which of these suits will be won by the government, which may be dropped and which won by the defendants of course remains to be seen. The record for the first era of trust-busting (up to a time shortly before the war) was 42 persons imprisoned, 1,338 fined, and 104 decrees secured in civil proceedings.

DORIS DENE'S COLUMN

Boy Deserves Credit for Clinging to Aim Despite Objections.

DEAR MISS DENE: I am twentyone years old and have planned to marry a boy of twenty-two who has just started working. His father objects to me and has refused to let the boy see me any more. My fiance has consented to his father's wishes. He came to me, told me the truth and said that until he could support me without his father's help, he would not see me any more. So long as he is relying on his father, he will not go back on his word not to see me. I don't know what to think or what to do.-Nancy Y.

In the same mail comes a letter from the sister of Nancy who says she knows her little sister is seeking my advice-and wishes to tell me the true facts of the case.

"I know," writes the sister, "that this boy doesn't care for N. as he should or he would have stuck to her through thick and thin. She is making a fool of herself and breaking her heart over a worthless man. I only want to help her but I want you to tell her that this boy isn't the man for her and that he has shown clearly that he doesn't love her .- Sarah.'

ANSWER-Sorry, Sarah, but I can't condemn the boy out of hand. He must have a fair trial before being dismissed as an utter cad and a lukewarm lover. And Nancy must be given an honest answer, not an outburst of angry oratory at the expense of men in general and Nancy's true love in particular.

Don't forget the boy is only twenty-two-and not yet able to make his own living apparently. That makes it necessary for him to live with father and mother for a while. True, if he were constructed of heroic material he'd go out into the cruel cold world to starve in the cause of true love-but heroes aren't popular in these modern times. And with so much unemployment and depression in the world just now, I for one could not praise a boy who added to the sum total of the world's human misery by voluntarily joining the bread line.

This lad has had to compromise with his fate. He must live with his father who has exacted from him a promise never to see his fair lady again. Having promised the hero shows a commendably honorable spirit in refusing to break his word on the sly. There is certainly something to be said for him in holding strongly to his purpose.

No one can blame Nancy for feeling hurt and miserable over the situation. No one can blame her for seeking to mend her broken heart as best she may. But she need not feel that her erstwhile fiance is either a cad or a coward.

DEAR DORIS DENE: I am a high school girl and very unular. Even the girls don't seem to like me. I am never invited to anything and as it is very hard for me to make new friends, my chance never improves. I am usually at home alone. Can you give me any help?-T. A. S.

ANSWER-Again and again I beg of the girls who come to me with a problem like this, to give me something constructive in the way of a personal analysis. There are dozens of reasons for unpopularity. It is easy to say that in general a girl will get over her self-consciousness by taking up interests which distract her mind from thoughts of herself but so often this rule doesn't work because the victim of unpopularity is a special case and needs special instructions. There are many girls who are unpopular simply and solely because of their lack of vitality. They may seem colorless and uninteresting, dull and stupid because of ill-health -or some lack of energy which could be remedied if they found out the truth about themselves.

There are girls whose inability to make friends rests solely on the fact that they have forbidding manners that are aloof and frigid. These girls will tell you con-fidently that they have friendliest feelings in the world toward everyone and want to be liked-yet if they write a long intimate account of themselves it will very often be revealed that they are super critical and extremely sure of their own opinions. They are humble about their lack of popularity yet amazingly arrogant in connection with other matters.

And there are always girls who simply need to attend to their appearance in order to attract some of the attention they crave so. Untidiness and slovenliness have more effect on the high school audience, than the average girl in her teens suspects. The very young generation is critical of the dowdy, downat-the-heel girl whose hair is always a mess and whose general appearance is frumpy. Even a limited income can be made to produce at least one trim costume for school use.

But as I say, one can't lay down hard and fast rules. One must hear about the patient's symptoms first. Will the girls who write me on this absorbing topic, give me some inkling as to what manner of human beings they are. The more they write, the more they reveal in some way or other what their drawbacks and their virtues may be. I shall be glad to answer all questions on this subject if I am given something to go on.

TIPS to Frank Merriwell at Fardale AROUND to the Housewife the HOUSE to the Housewife

When Bart Hodge, a vain youth of sixteen, alights from a train at Fardale, he stumbles over a half-blind dog and in a rage kicks the animal. The dog's owner, Tad Jones, a small, shabby boy who supports his widowed mother, denounces him. This nettles Bart and he slaps Tad. Frank Merriwell, an orphan of Hodge's age, prevents him from further molesting Tad. Although the two do not come to blows. Hodge sneeringly says they will have to settle their differences later. He and Merriwell had come to Fardale to attend Fardale academy. While Hodge consults Joe Bemis, truck driver for John Snodd, about his baggage, Merriwell, accompanied by Tad and his dog. Shag, start walking to Snodd's place. Presently the Snodd truck, with Hodge driving, rumbles down the road and kills Tad's dog. Occupying a room next to Merriwell's in the Snodd home is Barney Mulloy, who dislikes Hodge. They become good friends. Merriwell offers to help Mulloy get into one of the academy dormitories by appealing to Professor Scotch, a friend of Merriwell's Uncle Asher. As they leave the house that evening Hodge is talking to Inza Burrage, a friend of Belinda Snodd. Later they meet Tad, who now has another dog.

There was nothing to prevent them from looking in at the windows as they walked up to the front door. Hodge was surrounded by a group of amused girls with whom he was kidding in a free-and-easy way. Now and then he gave his head a jerk to toss back a lock of hair that soon fell down again over his eyebrows. Judging by his jaunty, cock-sure manner, he felt that he was doing all right for himself. Barney made a queer sound in his throat. "Hold me, Frank," he said, "before I go in there and bounce the big chicken charmer out of a window. At that moment Merriwell, himself, was itching to do something unpleasant to Bartley Hodge, who was giving particular attention to the slim, fair-haired girl who had played the piano at supper time.

But what surprised Merry most was the way he felt about that girl. She was good looking, all right; even better looking now, laughing up into Bart's face, than he had previously imagined. But wasn't that always the way? The stunners were always easy marks for any flattering show-off. They never seemed to have enough sense to see through such fellows. Inza Burrage, he decided, was just another in the beautiful but dumb class.

Now the girls were urging Hodge to sing again. "Again?" Of course that meant he had sung for them before this. But he hung off just enough to make them urge him The system worked well. He yielded gracefully at the proper moment, on condition that Inza Burrage would accompany him on the piano. Then, together, they looked through Belinda Snodd's music to find something.

"Come on, Barney," said Frank. "Let's get upstairs where we won't have to hear this."

'You'll have to plug up your ears if you don't want to hear it up there, my lad," said Barney. "Me, I'm for sitting down on these steps and listening to Caruso warble. Don't leave me. Somebody may have to keep me from throwing rocks at him through the window.'

So Merriwell, hoping for the worst, sat down with Mulloy. Meanwhile Hodge had found a song over which he was laughing. He called it a comic song, and that made Inza Burrage laugh, too. Frank wondered if he would be able to sit it out, but he didn't want Barney to know about that. There came a rippling prelude on the piano, and Bart Hodge struck into the song. It was something about "a maiden young and fair' who "dwelt by the blue Alsatian mountains," and it went on to tell how "came a stranger in the spring" who hung around whispering in the moonlight "till her heart was all his own." But Hodge could sing and he was burlesquing the sentimental old ballad in a way that made it really funny. Frank squirmed on the step. Something inside him was squirming, too. Suddenly he laughed soft-

"Stay right here, Mulloy," he said, getting up. "I'm going to get my uke out of my trunk. I know a comic song to match that one and, by Jove, I'm going to sing it." Hodge had just finished and was being warmly applauded when Merry came down again with his ukulele, which he had already put in tune. "Now this," chuckled Mulloy as Frank sat down beside him once more, "will be the surprise feature of Belinda's party. I hope it's

"I'll let you be the judge," said Merry. Then, strumming the uke,

"Not a long time to come, I remember it well, ered laughter. "Ah-ha," he cried, 'that lad was a bird, Frank!" All was very still within the house but behind them sounded swift and heavy steps. Bart Hodge came out through the door into the moonlight. "Look here, Merriwell," he said hoarsely, "what do you mean by that dirty stuff?"

"Oh-ho!" said Mulloy. "Here's the dog catcher." Bart blazed at him: "Mind your cheap song?" he snarled. "Why," said Frank, "what's all this about, Hodge? I was amusing myself-and Barney. I wasn't try-ing to insult anybody." "Oh, no? With that stuff about 'her age it was fair and her hair was sixteen!' I resent it, and Miss Burrage does, too." "Well, I don't mind you so much, Hodge, but I'm quite willing to apolher that nothing personal was intended." Bart caught his breath sharply.

"What Do You Mean by That Dirty Stuff?'

voice shook when he spoke again: "But that's a lie! It was meant as an insult to both of us."

"Now," whispered Mulloy to himself, highly pleased, "Frank will let him have it!" To his great surprise, Frank answered quietly: "Hadn't we better talk this over somewhere else, Hodge? Let's not start a disturbance at Miss Snodd's party. "You started it," panted Hodge,

'but I'm going to finish it." A girl came flying out of the house and sprang between them. "Stop, Bart!" she cried. "Don't mind him! He's just too - too cheap!" It was Inza Burrage, and the look she gave Frank burned him up with scorn. Frank Merriwell didn't sleep well that night. He couldn't forget the look of scorn Inza Burrage had flashed at him before coaxing Bart Hodge back into the house. She had called Frank cheap, and the queer thing about it was that she had made him feel cheap. He hadn't foreseen that she might resent his little joke as a personal affront.

There had been another unexpected kick-back in that joke. It had given Hodge a grand chance to play the gallant hero, and he had not missed the trick. Like Inza. no doubt, the other girls at Belinda Snodd's party had been filled with great admiration by his excellent performance. In Frank's room, after the affair, Barney Mulloy had said it was his belief that Hodge had been praying for somebody to hold him. As Barney saw it, Bart had been trembling with fear while he was roaring like a lion. But whether this was true or not, he had played the lion and got away with it. It was his turn to laugh.

Barney had been disappointed. He had locked for something quite different from what had happened when Hodge had accused Merry of lying. "Maybe it wasn't a nice place to do it, Frankie," he had said, "but I never could have detained my fist from popping him on the nose. Now what'll he think of

But what Hodge would think hadn't put the pucker into Merriwell's forehead. He was annoyed at himself. Let Hodge think what he pleased and be hanged! Frank could laugh that off, but the sting of being made to feel cheap by a girl with a pretty face and a head as empty as a hole in a doughnut was what got him down. It never had happened before. So Frank flopped around in bed quite a lot that night and punched his pillow twenty times, though the pillow wasn't at all to blame. Then, having wasted the most of the hours for sleep in such foolish gymnastics, he fell into a soggy doze just before dawn and had a tussle with a bear that caught him and shook him until he awoke. The bear proved to be Barney Mulloy, who had a hand on his shoulder. "Will you never wake up, lad?" said Barney. "If that's the way you sleep you need an earthquake for an alarm clock."

"Well, go right back again," said Frank, "and take my apologies to the cook and waitress. Tell them I'll be there before they can boil and serve a couple of three-minute eggs.

He came down smiling, but Belinda Snodd gave him no answering smile when she placed the threeminute eggs before him. The response to his pleasant "good morning" was a slight nod that seemed own business, Irish!" Then he again to be worked by remote control. faced Frank, who had risen. "Well, if it is I'll give you odds we won't be in on it."

"Don't make me cry, Barney. It's such a lovely morning." Later Merriwell got on the phone and made an appointment to call on Professor Scotch in his study at eleven o'clock. The professor would be free to talk with him at that hour.

"Did ye mention me, Frank?" asked Mulloy anxiously.
"Not over the phone but I will when I see him. Didn't I give you my word?" "But I was a bit fearful you'd

A smile leaped into the Irish boy's face. "It's something I'd thought myself," he confessed, "but it seemed a little too pleasant to come true.'

The mystery of Hodge's disappearance was still unsolved when Merriwell set forth to keep his appointment with the professor. Barney walked down the road with him as far as the gate to the school grounds.

"I'll be hanging around with my heart in me mouth when you come out, Frank," he said.

"You won't have to wait long," said Merry, with a cheering smile.

"I'll make it snappy." But it was almost half an hour, and it seemed half a year to Mulloy. At last he saw Merriwell returning. But he was walking slowly and his face was the face of a pall bearer. Barney's heart moved right down from his mouth into his shoes.

"Well," he forced himself to say when Frank came up and stopped, "slip me the bad news, lad."

"Can you take it?" "It'll be no worse than I expect-

"Now that makes me think of something else," said Frank. "I know where Hodge went to. He's been making a visit to the school." "That," said Barney, staring past Merriwell's shoulder, "is something I've just this minute found out myself. He's coming out of the gate behind you and walking this way.

And he looks as pleased as a cat that's swallowed a canary bird." At that moment, as he came walking toward Frank and Barney. Hodge looked like a fellow who had no fault to find with himself or the world at large. It might be wrong to say there was a twinkle in his eyes, but they held, at least, a

Strange Facts Jack Frost Artist THE patterns which we say save the life of many a bird. "Jack Frost" paints on our window-panes are usually made by the crystallization of the isture in the air on dry glass, in a cool, unheated room. "I stretched my ears and heard like ferns, trees, stars, corals, forests, and castles, and are caused, first, by the structure of the minute crystals themselves, and, second, by the conditions the frost encounters as it forms. Tiny scratches on glass, lines in rock, dust particles, the direction of wind, or air currents greatly influence the design. On clear cold nights, when the earth's surface cools rapidly to a freezing temperature, a fairylike white coating of frost forms on trees and grass and windowpanes but on misty nights, when fog prevents the rapid cooling of the air, there is little chance of frost forming. White frost, commonly called hoarfrost, is visible frozen vapor, and occurs in two forms, granular and crystalline. Granular frost is frozen fog and is usually found on mountain tops or in other places where fog is common. Crystalline frost is formed, as are snow crystals, from the water vapor in the airthat is, directly from the gaseous state to the solid, with no intervening liquid state. In spring and fall it is often said that the frost does great damage to plants, but it is not the frost itself, but the freezing of the plant juices that is harmful. When frost is expected farmers now take scientific measures to raise the temperature in the fields and orchards where they have crops that may be injured. This is done by means of tents, smudge pans, and fires.
