SENATOR CARTER GLASS
Just turned eighty, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia is a peppery, outspoken "rebel" from New Deal ranks. Despite his advanced age, Glass overflows with nervous energy. Seemingly gruff, he is really warm and kindly. He is no longer proud of the Federal Reserve Bank act which he fathered because, he says, "the government now owns 6,000 of our banks." Mr. Glass has been in public Washington life 35 years. Today, for the first time, he says "we no longer have a democracy." He further bemoans the failure of modern inventions to bring happiness. He was born the son of a newspaper man and is still one, owning the paper at Lynchburg, Va. Mr. Glass quit school at fourteen to become a printer's devil, rising to editor-in-chief of the Lynchburg paper by the time he was thirty. In Washington he spent two years as secretary of the treasury under President Woodrow Wilson, going to the senate in 1920. President Roosevelt ranks him as one of the administration's most ardent critics, a designation Mr. Glass enjoys. "I will remain an 'unreconstructed rebel' until the policies under which the government is now being run are changed," says Carter Glass as he starts on his eighty-first year of life, confident that he will remain on the Washington front many years to come.

Unique Library Wins Popularity As Living Room

By BETTY WELLS
WHEN they built the new house, Alice insisted that they must have a knotty pine library. It was a nice idea, although Alice didn't mean to confine its use to reading by any means. So her problem was to bring this room into the general scheme of family living. First, to vindicate herself and then to show that an extra room of this sort was practical and pleasant.

On the practical side she tried subtlety, and it worked! She made this little pine room into a modern version of the "back parlor"—you know the room that used to be used for evenings in famille, saving the front parlor for big occasions. Of course, Alice makes no hard and fast rules, yet by furnishing this little room comfortably and gayly she has succeeded in diverting a lot of wear and tear here. Then she discovered that the smaller room is grand for those evenings when she and her husband like to sit at home, he with a pipe and paper, she with needlepoint or knitting.

How has she furnished it? To start with she decided that the wood tones of the walls were the best part of the room, so she completely covered the floor with a soft pile rich brown carpet that would play up to the walls. The sturdiness of the wood tones suggested a sealing-wax red leather chair for the lord and master of the house, while Milady is content with a deep lounge chair in soft beige material fringed in brown.

In recessed book shelves she has placed books with gay bindings, and when the original covers of the books didn't seem quite bright enough, she recovered them in colors to suit herself. Here and there among the books she has placed innocently gay peasant figures in pottery. And a small table, the pine desk and the wide window sill hold brass bowls and pitchers, adding highlights for the wood tones.

PETER RABBIT FIGHTS WITH HIMSELF

THAT'S a funny thing to do—to fight with yourself—isn't it? But that is what Peter Rabbit did—fought with himself. Yes, sir, Peter fought with himself, and it was a hard fight. You know, that kind of fighting is the very hardest kind of fighting in the world. You see, it was this way: Peter had been lucky, very lucky. He had started out to follow Busy Bee from the Green Meadows to her storehouse in the Green Forest, and almost right away he had lost sight of her.

Then he knew that just by chance he had found the storehouse of Busy Bee.

But he kept on deep into the Green Forest, wandering this way and that way, until he had grown so tired that he just had to sit down at the foot of a big tree to rest. And as he rested he had heard a humming sound way up high over his head, and it sounded as if it came from inside the great tree. When Peter looked up he saw Busy Bee and all her relations coming and going from a little hole way up near the top of the tree. Then he knew that just by chance he had found the storehouse of Busy Bee.

How Peter's heart did leap! He did a little jig dance all by himself, with no one to see, just because he was so tickled. "Now," said Peter to himself, "I will tell Buster Bear, and he will be so pleased that he will always be friendly to me, and I need never be afraid of him any more. They say he loves honey better than anything else in the world. I'll hurry and tell him as soon as I can before anyone else finds this storehouse and gets ahead of me."

Peter started off, lipperty-lipperty-lip, as fast as he could go to look for Buster Bear, but he had gone only a little way when he stopped suddenly. He had remembered what Bumble, the cousin of Busy Bee, had said when he had asked him to tell him where Busy Bee's storehouse was. Bumble had been indignant, very indignant. He had hummed and buzzed angrily. He had said some very sharp things to Peter about people who went about making trouble for others. Peter had gone home to the dear old Briar Patch and thought it all over and had made up his mind that Bumble was right. It was a dreadful thing to make trouble for others, and he didn't want to do anything of the kind. But that was before he had found the storehouse of Busy Bee. Then it had been easy to make up his mind that he would do nothing like that. But now—well, now it was different. First he scratched his long right ear with his long left hind foot. Then he scratched his long left ear with his long right hind foot.

"I don't know that Buster Bear will make any trouble for Busy Bee," thought Peter, and hopped on a few steps.

"Yes, you do, too," said a small voice inside, and Peter sat down.

"If I don't tell him, someone else will," thought Peter, and started on again.

"Perhaps no one else will find the storehouse," said the small voice inside, and Peter stopped hopping.

"Someone is sure to," thought Peter, once more starting on. "If they do it is no business of yours," said the small voice, and Peter sat down.

"I'm going to tell!" said Peter fiercely, and began to hurry faster than ever.

"You're not, either! You couldn't be so mean," protested the small voice, and just as before Peter sat still.

Now, all this time that Peter had been fighting with himself he had been too busy to watch out, and so he did not see the crafty face of Reddy Fox peeping out from behind an old stump just ahead of him. Reddy was grinning wickedly, for he saw that Peter for once was not looking for danger.

Frank Merriwell at Fardale

By GILBERT PATTEN The Original BURT L. STANDISH

SYNOPSIS

When Bart Dodge, a vain youth of sixteen, alights from a train at Fardale, he stumbles over a half-blind dog and in a rage kicks the animal...

Frank's face, to which a little color was slowly returning. "Why, yes, Mr. Snodd," he admitted, "but there didn't seem to be anything else for me to do, under the circumstances."

Inza Burrage hadn't taken her eyes off him. Still sitting on the ground and clinging to her aching ankle, she spoke up in a choked and stammering voice: "Oh, he—he—Mr. Snodd, he did it for me! I twisted my ankle, and fell. I couldn't run. That—terrible, terrible dog would have torn me to pieces—only for him!"

Then she burst into tears. Tad Jones had crept forward, keeping his eyes turned away from the dead dog.

"I've got something to say to you, Snodd," declared John Snodd grimly. "Giving a little shaver a dog in that condition! He ought to be made to smart for it."

"I Guess We Better Examine Your Arm First, Young Man"

called a phobia. He did not know the cause of it himself. It lay, probably, in some forgotten incident of his very early life.

No animal is quicker than a dog to sense fear and dislike in a human being. He is quick, too, to resent it, and he shows his resentment or contempt.

It seemed to Bart that a thousand dogs had let him know what they thought of him. They had leered at him with scornful eyes, they had sneeringly given him a look at their teeth, they had sniffed disdainfully at his heels, and two or three of them had nipped the calves of his legs.

There was, therefore, an undying feud between Bartley Dodge and all dogs. All his life he had looked forward with dread to the time when bad luck would force him to meet a "mad" dog, but he had never seen one until the day of the picnic in Snodd's grove.

Hodge was out of the grove and on his way to any place where the crazy dog wouldn't be liable to come before he fully knew what he was doing. He realized it suddenly. A picture of himself at that moment flashed into his mind. It stopped him as quick as he could put on the brakes.

He turned round and saw several of the frightened girls coming after him. A sense of shame drove him back to meet them.

"Where's Inza?" he cried. They didn't seem to hear him, and he caught hold of Belinda Snodd as she was passing by. "Where's Inza?" he repeated, holding her fast by the arm.

"Oh! Oh, I don't know!" She could hardly speak, and her voice shook like her whole body. "That—that awful dog! He—he—I don't know! It's terrible! I'm scared to death!"

One of the other girls, a little blonde, had stopped of her own accord. She was trembling too, but she gave Bart a look that was a stiff bow to his pride.

Neither Hodge nor the fleeing girls had seen John Snodd coming, for all of them had fled toward the high-way in the vicinity of the school yard. But the report of that ground.

They were removing the torn, foam-covered coat from Merriwell's left arm when Bart came running back through the trees. His mouth open, his hands clutched tightly together, Tad Jones was the picture of suspense as he watched. Her face damp with tears, Inza was still sitting on the ground and watching them also. No one appeared to hear Hodge approaching.

He saw the dead dog lying where it had fallen. Snodd had dropped his gun a few steps away. That explained a part of what had happened, but he knew he could never explain what he had done. Nobody would understand, if he tried.

This realization stopped him, 30 feet away. What could he say? What was there for him to say or do?

Frank Merriwell was taking off his own coat now. He looked pretty sober, but still not as disturbed and anxious as the others. Quickly he thrust the sleeve of his shirt up above the elbow.

"I don't believe the dog's teeth touched me," he said. "If I'm right, I owe it to Hodge's coat."

Snodd took hold of Frank's wrist and turned his arm to inspect it thoroughly. "By ginger!" he cried in great relief. "I can't see even a teeny scratch. Now if that don't beat the world my head's a pun-kin!"

Barney Mulloy put an arm round Merry's shoulders. His chin was quivering a little, but he managed to grin. "You lucky slob!" was all he could say then.

But Tad Jones had less control. "Gosh, I'm glad!" he cried hopping up and down as if trying to hop out of his skin. "I'm glad, Frank! I'm awful glad! If old Tige had bit you I'd gone right off 'nd jumped in the ocean, I would."

"Well, I'm not feeling so bad about it myself," said Frank, after taking a deep breath of relief. "And it's lucky the insane beast didn't eat you up, Tad."

"I've got something to say to you, Snodd," declared John Snodd grimly. "Giving a little shaver a dog in that condition! He ought to be made to smart for it."

Frank turned toward Inza without stopping to put his coat on again. That brought him round facing Hodge, who still stood where he had halted. They looked each other in the eyes again, and the flush of shame on Bart's face could not be mistaken. No sneering, no triumph now; and Merry was not one to kick a fellow when he was down.

"I had to make use of your coat, Hodge," he said, "and I'm sure you'll never want to wear it again. I'll pay you for it."

Bart made no reply, and Frank went to Inza and dropped on one knee. "Now how about that ankle?" he asked.

She wasn't looking at him now. Her proud mouth was very humble. "Are you sure—dead sure—you were not touched by the teeth of that awful dog?" she asked.

He smiled. "There isn't a mark on me."

"It's marvelous! Never, never in my life will I forget this—the way you fought that dog."

She wanted to say more than that, but the words would not come. They both felt awkward. He laughed to cover his embarrassment.

"Well, I'll remember it a while myself. It had more fun doing other things. You mustn't try to walk on that foot. I don't believe it will be such a hard job for Barney and me to carry you back to Mr. Snodd's house. You can't weigh a ton."

Now she laughed too. "I'm an awful lightweight," she said, "especially above the ears."

Hodge heard it all. He had been paying no attention to Mulloy, who was staring at him with a look of unspeakable contempt. Bart was sorry he had come back there. That had been another mistake. He might have known there was nothing he could do to put himself right.

Feeling as empty as a dry well, he turned about and walked swiftly and silently away.

Tad Jones was the torch that started the story of Frank Merriwell's fight with the mad dog running like wildfire through Fardale village. But Pete Smith, the local reporter for a city daily, listened doubtfully to Tad's lurid account of the unflinching manner in which Frank had faced the dog and battled with it. That, Pete thought, would make a fine newspaper story, but of course it was too good to be true.

So he went to question Inza Burrage, in her home, and was amazed when her version of the affair sustained Tad in every particular, but not broken.

Now enthusiastic and eager, the reporter got hold of Tony Accero without wasting time. "John Snodd's place, Tony," cried Pete, diving into the car. "and step on the gas."

Frank was writing a letter to his uncle when Mulloy crashed into the room. The face of the Irish boy was split by a grin.

"Be after dropping that and come down to see a man, my lad," said Barney.

"What man?" Frank wanted to know. "What's he want to see me for?"

"It's a reporter for a newspaper, and he's going to make ye famous, Frankie."

That made Merry drop the pen and stand up. "A reporter?" he exclaimed. "Good Lord!"

This was something he hadn't expected, something he wasn't prepared for, something that made him shy like a skittish pony. "Yesterday you arrived in Fardale," said Barney, who seemed to be enjoying Frank's consternation, "and tomorrow your name will be emblazoned in the public print. Fast work."

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

If You Are Making a Crazy Patch Quilt.

MAKING an old-fashioned silk crazy patch quilt is a simply fascinating thing to do. From the moment you start collecting bits of silk and satin and velvet until the second you invent your last combination of embroidery stitches it holds your interest.

This type of quilt is not quilted after piecing, but tied like a comforter. No padding is needed if soft warm material is used for the foundation. The pieces are always in irregular shapes—often very tiny and the largest is seldom more than four or five inches long. They are pinned or basted to a foundation of soft muslin, flannel or an old wool blanket is good to use.

One patch shown here is a piece of ribbon and the selvages are not turned or covered. It is best to arrange a number of patches before you start to sew them in place with the embroidery stitches.

The embroidery is really used to give balance and unity to the whole design. If a patch seems too light make it darker by embroidering it in dark thread. If it seems too plain you can trace the little forget-me-not design shown here onto it and embroider it in natural colors or use some of the more simple designs shown here as fillers.

Many more authentic old patchwork stitches are in a new leaflet which is now included with the book offered herewith. This book also tells you how the draperies in today's sketch are interlined.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; curtains for every type of room; lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred) to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Strange Facts

Sounds Can Be Photographed

SURPRISING as it seems, it is possible to take pictures of sound. A flame can be made to vibrate in unison with a sound wave and the vibration of the flame then be photographed with the aid of a revolving mirror.

Closely allied to the subject of sound is the science of acoustics, that branch of physics which has to do with making sound easily and distinctly heard in large rooms, halls, or out-of-door meeting places. In the construction of theaters, churches, or concert halls the matter of acoustics is of great importance.

Notice how strange your voice sounds in a large empty room without furniture, curtains, pictures and carpets. In the same room, completely furnished, your voice sounds more "natural." That is a simple experiment in the science of acoustics.

Remove Iodine Stains.—If iodine-stained linen is soaked in a solution of ammonia and water, a teaspoon of ammonia to a pint of water, stain will quickly disappear.

Uncle Phil Says: Excrete the "Maybe" Man. There is a constitutionally "no" man. You don't like him because he is stubborn. You also dislike the "yes" man. What about the "maybe" man?

Few know what wisdom is until 20 years after it has been employed. At first Fortune smiles, after you have made your pile, then she threatens. No man was ever able to psychologically analyze how he felt when he found he was suddenly popular. Men are not so hot when it comes to self-analysis, anyhow.

Sprinkle Dahlia Tubers.—Look over tubers in the storage basement and if they are shriveling sprinkle lightly.

To Bleach White Goods.—When white goods become yellow, dip them in strong blue water after washing, let them become very blue, and then hang out to dry. They will be thoroughly bleached.

To Whiten Skin of Chicken.—Rub the skin of chicken with lemon juice to whiten it.

Treating Cane Seats.—Sponge off cane seats occasionally with salt water. It will tighten them up and prevent sagging.

Peruse the Seed Catalog.—This is a good time to check over the seed catalog and send in your order for spring planting. Remember, there are many new varieties in both flowers and vegetables this year which you might not be able to procure in April.

HITLER'S AUSTRIA COUP
Forces Schuschnigg to Put Nazis in His Cabinet . . . Further Demands Expected . . . Other Nations Alarmed

Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina is here pictured as he expounded his views on the farm bill. "Cotton Ed," who is chairman of the senate agricultural committee, said congress should provide a billion and a half to finance the farm program, instead of the half billion to which the cost is now limited.

Edward W. Pickard
SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Schuschnigg Gives In

REICHSFUEHRER HITLER, massing 20 divisions of the German army and presenting what were euphemistically termed powerful arguments, forced Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria to reorganize his cabinet and give several places to Austrian Nazis. Complete amnesty for all Nazi prisoners in Austrian jails was immediately decreed, and the Austrian press was forbidden to print hostile criticism of the Nazi regime in Germany. Many army officers and civil officials who had been dismissed as pro-Nazi were reinstated or put on pension. Altogether, the Nazification of Austria was well on the way to completion.

Adolf Hitler

But Hitler was not satisfied with this, and called to Berlin the new minister of the interior, Dr. Arthur Seyss-Inquart, a Nazi, to discuss further extension of the "conquest" of Austria. Schuschnigg was still trying to maintain the dominance of his Fatherland Front, and Hitler didn't like that. There was a report that he might go to Vienna himself, taking Field Marshal Goering with him.

Italian officialdom was highly pleased with the success of Hitler's coup, saying it accorded with Italy's central European policy and tended to solidify the Rome-Berlin alignment.

Great Britain and France, however, were alarmed by the developments and agreed to lodge joint representations in Berlin and Vienna asking assurance that Hitler intends to preserve Austrian independence. Neither nation would admit that actual union of Germany and Austria was feared just yet.

Britain's ambassador to Berlin, Henderson, is said to have warned Hitler recently against any attempt to bring about the "Anschluss" which has been one of the Fuehrer's chief ambitions.

One London correspondent said the British cabinet had just been informed that Hitler and Mussolini had formed a new secret defensive alliance of which the Austro-German arrangement was only a part. It was said to include co-ordination of the German and Italian foreign and financial policies in Europe and strengthening of the Rome-Berlin axis in various ways.

With the start he has made, it may be expected that Hitler before very long will make the move against Czechoslovakia that has been anticipated for months. That country is the gateway toward the southeast and its position is perilous in view of the Fuehrer's known ambitions. France is her ally but France would hesitate to take strong action in her behalf unless directly supported by the British.

One observer said, "The Fuehrer seems to have started on the road to Bagdad."

ships now planned from 35,000 tons each to 43,000 or 45,000 tons, and such dreadnaughts probably would carry 18-inch guns.

In order to obviate the restrictions on the size of battleships that inhere in the width of the Panama canal locks and to minimize the contingency of interruption of coast-to-coast communication through destruction of a Panama lock by an enemy, the administration is preparing to push the project of a canal through Nicaragua.

Congressmen who fear the President is piloting the nation into war with Japan made probable futile moves to prevent our government from joining in the rearmament race.

Though Secretary Hull had denied that there was any understanding with Great Britain and France concerning Japan, opponents of the administration were still suspicious that it was planning joint action. Representative George Tinkham of Massachusetts voiced their sentiments when he uttered a warning that "every day brings the United States nearer to a war with Japan as planned by Great Britain to further British interests."

Roosevelt said in a press conference that the United States never will consent to Japan's aims for navy parity. He said that in the opinion of experts the American national defense can not rely on a naval establishment designed to defend only one of the country's two coasts. He subscribed to the view that the national defense requires protection of both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans as possible areas of warfare.

Wallace Gets Busy

PLANS for putting the new farm program into immediate effect were announced by Secretary Wallace, to whom the law just enacted gives increased powers to control production through acreage allotments and to regulate marketing by quotas for individual farmers. He said he would soon make acreage and production allocations and call for a referendum on marketing quotas for cotton and tobacco. Marketing quotas would become effective unless rejected by more than one third of the farmers voting in the referendum to be held before March 15.

The secretary announced a six-point program embodying the "basic principles" of the broadened farm policy as follows:

- 1. Continuation of the AAA soil conservation program as a part of the permanent farm policy.
2. National acreage allotments for corn, cotton, wheat, tobacco and rice to the extent designed to meet domestic consumption and export demands and establish reserve supplies.
3. Federal loans to encourage systematic storage of surpluses in big crop years for use in years of shortage.
4. Marketing quotas backed by penalties on sales in excess of quotas to secure general participation of farmers in holding surpluses off the market.
5. Release of corn supplies from storage under marketing quotas to meet farm shortages or in the case of national need.
6. Crop insurance for wheat to protect producers against drought and consumers against high prices resulting from shortages.

Admittedly no one fully understands the new farm law, but Wallace and his associates hope and believe it will all work out for the best.

Relief Bill Pushed
SENATE leaders expected to put through, with little delay, the $250,000,000 emergency relief appropriation bill. The house approved the measure by a topheavy vote of 352 to 23. All efforts to make major changes in the measure were overridden. Only one amendment, barring relief to aliens temporarily in this country, was authorized.

The Works Progress administration, which has on hand about $490,000,000 of its regular $1,500,000,000 appropriation, will administer the additional relief fund. The WPA has reported to congress that the money will keep at least 2,000,000 persons on the relief rolls until June 30.

Wiping Off RFC Debt

WITHOUT debate the senate approved a house bill writing off more than $2,500,000,000 in Reconstruction Finance corporation debts to the treasury. Senator Byrd of Virginia said the legislation marked a "return to honest book-keeping on the part of the federal government." He explained that the RFC, which obtained all its funds from the treasury, had listed among its assets about two and a half billion dollars it had advanced for relief and expenditures in various government agencies.

Jones Urges Tax Revision

JESSE JONES, the usually level headed chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, conferred with treasury officials and urged them to do what they could to hasten congressional action on tax revision. He told Undersecretary Roswell Magill that the whole country was waiting impatiently for action on promised modification of the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes.

Jones indicated a belief that the bill, which is still in the hands of the house ways and means committee, was being held up by opposition to a provision retaining a stiff tax on undistributed profits of corporations owned by a few persons.

Great Battle in China

ONE of the greatest battles ever fought was reported to be taking place in central China, where the Japanese invaders smashed a Chinese army of 15,000 and forced it to retreat across the Yellow river under fire and without bridges, which had been destroyed by the defenders. Five Japanese armies were driving southward through the central China agricultural region and were seriously threatening Kaifeng, capital of Honan province.

From the south, three Japanese armies were advancing from the Hwai river. Gen. Chiang Kai-shek had 400,000 troops along the north and south fronts fighting to prevent the Japanese from gobbling up the huge Lunghai "corridor."

Another Dictator State

RUMANIA is now added to the European states under dictatorship. Octavian Goga's government was so anti-Semitic and pro-Fascist that it was forced out, and King Carol took charge by naming Dr. Miron Cristea as premier and dissolving the parliament. Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox church, was given virtual dictator power, but it was expected George Tarzescu would very soon succeed him as premier and that Carol would create a crown council over which Dr. Cristea would preside. Much of the new government's authority was concentrated in the army, and a nation-wide state of siege was proclaimed. A commission was set to work formulating a new constitution.

Cristea, the key man of the government, was expected to take steps to regain the friendship of France and Great Britain, traditional allies of Rumania, without offending Italy and Germany.

This Is a "Drouth Year"

BECAUSE of early dust storms in Kansas, Oklahoma and parts of the Texas Panhandle, 1933 already is called a "drouth year" by grain men. The weather in those regions is being closely watched by traders in the United States, Liverpool, Winnipeg and Buenos Aires.

Grain experts of Chicago reported that present conditions of soil in much of the territory from west Texas to Nebraska is such that light rains quickly would break it down into powder, easily blown by high winds. Only extremely heavy rains could prevent such blowing. Oklahoma wheat is much below that of last year at this time. The western half of the state was reported in serious need of moisture. Dust storms have seriously damaged wheat and done further damage to the state's topsoil. The central section, too, was reported in need of moisture. In all these states producers, grain traders and elevator men agreed that only part of the winter plant in each state would come to harvest should the much-needed rains fail to materialize.

Washington Digest
National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington.—It always has been interesting to me to see how politicians frequently overlook real issues in national affairs. Many a time they stimulate the house to override the rabbits. That is the reason why so often a new man in public life suddenly rises to leadership. He has taken hold of a bad situation that is right under our feet, offered a constructive solution and has dealt with an imminent condition rather than schemed for re-election through political fence building.

These facts lead directly into a bit of current history. It will be recalled how Bruce Barton campaigned through congested sections of New York's Manhattan island for an unexpired term in the house of representatives last fall. About all that Mr. Barton said of consequence in his campaign speeches was that there are too many laws. I think that is obvious. When he was campaigning on that line, he was speaking for great masses of inarticulate citizens.

But Mr. Barton went further. He announced his intention to seek repeal of one federal law a week until there is some semblance of reason in the structure of federal laws. Now, of course, Mr. Barton is very new in politics. He had been keeping his nose to the grindstone of business. He knew only what other persons outside of politics knew, namely, that high pressure minorities, sour pussies and nit wits were getting one law after another through congress, and that, in the end, those laws would be ruinous to the country as a whole.

Mr. Barton thought he would succeed or whether he recognized the fact that he was only making a start, it does not matter. Bruce Barton has taken hold of an obvious issue in national affairs and it is not outside of the realm of probabilities that he will succeed with his program. Thus far, it must be said that Mr. Barton has succeeded only in getting a dozen repeal bills into the house committees through introduction in the house. None has been acted on. Few probably will be acted on—if the house runs true to form. That is to say, Mr. Barton is a Republican and the house is controlled by Democrats and New Dealers. Naturally, they will give no opportunity for the opposition to gain credit for anything, no concessions at all.

The significance of the Barton program goes much deeper, however, and it is of that significance that I want to write. Through more than twenty years as an observer of national affairs here in Washington, obviously I have witnessed many issues develop, or be created, or be discovered. It seems to me that the really important national issues are those that develop, as the Barton program is developing. That means the issue is fundamental; it means, further, that there is no necessity for building the issue, and it means as well that it involves vital questions of policy.

As I said above, there are too many laws, too many don'ts and very few do's. Restriction and regulation always breed more restriction and regulation. The Roosevelt administration has been constantly saying "don't" in the shape of laws and the tremendous majority in congress has been giving President Roosevelt almost unlimited power to do as he wants to do beyond the "don't" legislation. So the Barton program would restore a great deal of freedom to the people themselves and would restore to congress much of the power that it has given to the President. To carry that thought further, then, the Barton program actually seems to me to propose saving only those laws that the progress of civilization shows to be sound and workable.

We might consider some of the statutes which Mr. Barton wants to repeal. There is for example the so-called Thomas amendment—one of the most assinine and dangerous pieces of legislation ever to get on the statute books. The legislation, forced through by Senator Thomas of Oklahoma in May of 1933, gave the President the power to issue $2,000,000,000 in paper currency. I do not see how anybody can regard it as anything but authority to issue printing press money. Of course, it never has been used by President Roosevelt and probably never will be, but the authority to go into printing press inflation exists and that is the danger. How, for instance, can you or I or anyone else feel sure that the money we have in our pocket or the few dollars in the bank is going to be worth anything tomorrow when the President of the United States, by mere stroke of the pen, could turn loose a flood of worthless money.

Mr. Barton also seeks liquidation of a flock of government agencies. Some of them are 20 years old or more of even greater age—built as wartime emergency units, but still in existence for no reason at all. Besides the War Finance corporation and some others of that wartime era, it is proposed to get rid of some things of more recent date. The Commodity Credit corporation and the two export-import banks, to mention only three. Now, there is no reason available for retention of the skeletons of the World War, and there appears to have been no reason for creation of such things as the export-import banks. I mean there was no sound reason. Those radicals who forced the diplomatic recognition of Soviet Russia thought there was reason for the export-import banks because they held such banks would enable trade with Russia. But Russian trade has amounted to about the same as the sale of mules in my home county of Missouri.

Two other pieces of legislation which Mr. Barton seeks to repeal are strictly New Deal. One is that law which gave the President the right to change the value of the dollar at will, within certain limitations. I suppose there are some who still believe that devaluation of the dollar has done or can do good in aiding recovery. It seems to me, however, that existence of that power in the hands of one man is just another basis for uncertainty among all of the people. In any event, the failure of that panacea has been amply demonstrated.

The piece of far-reaching New Deal legislation concerned is the so-called Guffey coal law. That thing is a price fixing measure. It gave authority to a coal commission to prescribe prices throughout the country, and producers would be violating a law if they sold below those figures; they would be subject to fines and prison terms. Only recently, the price fixing features were enjoined by a circuit court of appeals and so at the moment they are not operative. Yet the threat exists. And attention should be called to the fact also that the three judges who granted an injunction were appointed by President Roosevelt and supposed, therefore, to be very liberal in their views. Mr. Barton called the Guffey coal act a piece of "grand larceny against the consumers," because, he explained, the consumers are made to pay the higher prices fixed by the commission and they have no word to say about it.

Historic Hoaxes

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
Western Newspaper Union.

The Gold Machine
ALCHEMY, the professed art of transmuting baser metals into gold, has been one of man's dreams for ages. But it remained for a Connecticut Yankee to give it a practical application which, metaphorically speaking, lined his pockets with $200,000 worth of gold obtained from credulous investors in his "gold accumulator."

This was the invention of Prescott Ford Jernegan, once a minister of Middletown, Conn., who interested Arthur W. Ryan, a jeweler, in his plan for extracting gold from sea water. In February, 1897, Jernegan lowered into Narragansett bay in Rhode Island, his "gold accumulator," a flat box containing a small battery, quicksilver and other chemicals and constructed so that the sea water flowed over the quicksilver. When the box was raised 24 hours later what appeared to be gold was discovered in place of the quicksilver and the jeweler's tests proved to his satisfaction that it was real gold—$2 worth.

So he joined with Jernegan in forming a company and selling $500,000 in stock. A plant was built at Lubec, Maine, and the two "accumulators" began bringing up increasing amounts of gold. This went on for more than a year. Then in July, 1898, Jernegan went to Europe and at the same time an employee named Charles E. Fisher disappeared. The "accumulators" ceased to produce gold, for the very good reason that Fisher, who was a professional diver, had been placing the precious metal in them before they were brought to the surface.

When the fraud was exposed, the directors of the company who had been made victims of the fake, gave back the profits they had made and eventually the stockholders recovered about 36 percent of their investment. There was some talk of trying to extradite Jernegan from Europe, where he was living off the $200,000 he had obtained from investors, but nothing ever came of it.

Nature Faker Par Excellence

THE modern champion of all writers of nature fakes was undoubtedly "Lester Green" of Prospect, Conn. No matter how preposterous his yarns, which several metropolitan newspapers printed for the amusement of their readers, there have always been some people who have believed them.

When he told how a setting of hen's eggs, which he had found in a block of ice taken from a flooded meadow, hatched out chickens covered with fur instead of feathers, a Canadian farmer wrote to him and wanted to buy some.

When he declared he had discovered the fluid responsible for the curl in pigs' tails and his wife had obtained beautiful permanent waves by rubbing it on her hair, "Mrs. Green" was flooded with requests from women for samples of this magic fluid.

When he told of spraying his apple trees with glue, which not only prevented the apples from falling but also preserved them in a fresh condition on the trees throughout the winter, both American and Canadian glue manufacturers wrote to ask what kind of glue he used, hoping to get a good "testimonial." One Boston firm even sent a representative to Prospect to investigate his stunt.

And these are only a very few of the marvelous achievements of "Lester Green" who was, by the way, the brain child of C. Louis Mortison, Prospect correspondent for the Waterbury (Conn.) Republican-American.

Spectrist Poetry

DURING the second decade of the present century there was a sudden growth of new "schools" of poetry and art, among them such cults as Futurism, Vorticism, Cubism, Dadaism and Polyphonic Prose.

So in 1916 when the publication of "Spectra: a Book of Poetic Experiments" was announced, it was hailed with delight by the "emancipated souls" who were struggling for new methods of self-expression. The authors of this volume were "Anne Knish" and "Emanuel Morgan" and immediately they had a host of imitators who wrote the new Spectrist poetry. Nobody could understand it, of course, but that made it seem all the more important.

Then the whole movement was revealed as a hoax which had been fathered by two authentic poets, Witter Bynner and Arthur Davison Ficke, who used this method to satirize the current fad in new poetic cults. But, in a sense, the joke was on them. For those who had been duped and had become devotees of "Spectrism" insisted upon continuing to write their verses in that form and to perpetuate the new "movement," which still flourished among some of America's intelligentsia.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK
By Lemuel F. Parton

NEW YORK.—There is hope for world peace and order. Some day a little band of diplomats and financiers will meet in the catacombs of London for a little disquieting put-on performance, and some won't catch them at it. To the watchful French journalists anticipated and cried down the effort, warning all and sundry whatever it is, it won't work.

Thus, the studios' proposal of Paul van Zeeland, former premier of Belgium, were blasted weeks in advance of their production, as just so much eye-wash.

Pertinax is one of the most brilliant and influential journalists in Europe and anything he touches in advance goes in with two against it. As does the Van Zeeland plan for economic reconstruction.

Walt Disney is readying "White" for France. That means that Pertinax is prepared to swing on it, just before it is there. One American commentator made the film his sole criterion in many years of dissent, liking like that may be expected from Pertinax.

He is the only full-time dissident who bats 1.000. He has picked up with Senator Borah, former President Hoover (being the only one ever to assail an American President with that dignitary prerogative with all the Germans, before and after the war, and ambassadors of good will.

In 1933, the French government announced it would spend $1,200,000,000 to build good roads in America. It is a good idea, but it is a good idea to build good roads in America.

Wise Cracks in America. Soured U. S. Good Will to this country some sour cracks about American materialism. And, just in passing, any French journalist ought to have a lot about materialists. For days it looked as if he might look the recent Brussels conference but he was on the job and smart in plenty of time to get it in press. He is at his best in exposing and exposing Geneva's will conspiracies.

He is a Parisian sophisticate, per, dandy, mononed, getting a great deal and noting in his diplomatic feed-back—a first reporter; but never satisfied of the depressing things about is that he is so often right in pans this or that hopeful end before anybody else knows what is.

PROPOS of recent flare-up in the behaviorist argument among the psychologists, and Eugene Ormandy in the news, a timely exhibit of the effect of conditioning. Long before he married, Eugene Ormandy's father, a Hungarian dentist, used to say "Some day I'm going to get married and have a son and I'm going to make him a great violinist. Years later, he pressed a tiny into his new baby's hand and him coached in rhythm before he was out of the cradle.

At the age of three, the boy was working hard at his violin lessons. His only toy was a music box.

Now, Eugene Ormandy is a mandy, conductor of the Philadelphia orchestra, gets the Mahler medal, following the performance of his composition, "Lied Von Der Erde."

At the age of five, he was a student in the Budapest academy of music, through a fourteen, he allowed to go on tour at five until he was seventeen. In 1920 was in New York, hoping to break the break in his career with his five-cent piece. He did, as a violinist at the Capitol theater, then assistant conductor, later with the gang and then six years as conductor of the Minneapolis symphony orchestra. He is perhaps the best conductor to be upped to fame radio.

Constitution-Maker
Pelatiah Webster was a Philadelphia business man, remember his advocacy of a revision of Articles of Confederation by setting a new Constitution in his own sertation of the Political Union of the Constitution of the Thirteen States of North America (1787). He is, therefore, sometimes credited as the originator of the Constitution, though his plan was the product of the federal convention.

Eat Fish in Norway
In Bergen, Norway, fish is served three times a day in nearly all families, and as a result, the community revolves about the fish market. The Bergen house is a somewhat fastidious household, insofar as fish is concerned, prefers to have her fish cooked up alive from salt water ponds in the market. The serving of amounts to a fine art in Bergen.

The Original Petticoats

Part of 10 Million Americans Nears Another Year's Climax With Two Important National Tournaments

By JOSEPH W. LABINE

Bowling, the ancient sport with 10,000,000 American participants, nears its climax for another season. From Brooklyn to Main Street pin boys are busier than ever with the game that changed America from a country of spectators to one of participants.

Forgotten is the unsavory reputation that once made bowling the sport of saloon hangers-on. As early as 1900 the more genteel folk began kegling and by 1905 women were active participants. Subsequent development was slow until five or six years ago when bowling zoomed to ace-high popularity.

Climaxing the current season are two nation-wide tournaments drawing 250,000 participants, the $34,000 Red Crown Sweepstakes and the thirtieth annual tournament of the American Bowling Congress, governing body of bowling.

The sweepstakes, with weekly prizes totaling $24,600 and grand prizes of $9,400, has brought out 232,000 enthusiasts, a world record for any sports event. These people are now making up competitive scores in 150 towns all over the country. Winners of grand prizes will be announced shortly after March 6.

Competition grows. Five thousand teams will enter the ABC tourney at Chicago during March and April. Something like $100,000 in prizes furnishes incentive here. Figures may bore you but ABC membership sprouted from 10,000 teams in 1936 to 60,000 in 1937, a pretty good indication of the trend.

Why this popularity? One of the best reasons for enjoying the game was given by Jack Dempsey, once prominent in another field of sports. Said Mr. Dempsey: "The main thing I like about bowling is that when you knock the pins down they stay down."

Dempsey, you may recall, had a little trouble keeping a fellow named Dempsey down in a Chicago ring a few years back. The satisfaction of knocking the ballings out of ten innocent pins at the other end of the alley undoubtedly accounts for much of bowling's popularity. Unlike other sports, anyone can be nominally successful on the alleys, which also helps.

Women like it for several reasons. They're deserting bridge clubs because one can make more social contacts on the alleys. They find the game "fascinating," and it's a new women. Anyway, it's being "done" nowadays so why not join the crowd?

Exercise and Relaxation. Men also like the social contacts they make at the alleys but there's an even more important factor for men in strenuous athletics. Bowling is hard work—don't get us wrong—but there's a chance for relaxation between bouts with the ball. Historians tell us bowling is the world's oldest sport, dating back to Roman days. In that misty period these age sportsmen were heaving great boulders at piles of rock, the purpose being to sharpen one's aim before going hunting. A few centuries later Sir Francis Drake is supposed to have defeated the Spanish Armada and saved England because he was filled with confidence—confidence instilled by a successful game of bowling just before he took sea.

The modern game is related to the Dutch game of nine-pins, which was brought by them to Manhattan in 1623. New York's famous Bowling Green was their first rendezvous before nine-pins became a standard game and had to be played indoors. Paradoxically bowling took a new lease on life through legislation passed to stamp it out. In the Seventeenth century New England Puritan fathers banned nine-pins because it wasn't elevating. So the boys decided to add another pin and that was the law.

Stay Away From "Splits"! Failure to get all ten pins with two rolls constitutes an error unless a split occurred on the first roll. A split is the sad fate of a man who leaves two or more pins standing with the intervening pins knocked down.

You needn't develop a "form" to look at home on the alleys. Some people walk up to the line, take a couple of weak swings and let their ball roll slowly down the alley; others—the more deliberate bowlers—get as long a running start as possible, then try to slam the ball through the opposite end of the building.

Karl Keyerleber of the Cleveland Plain Dealer recently visited a bowling alley and returned to compile the following classification of bowling forms:

"They include the dying swans who collapse on the alley after each roll, the kickers who almost lose a shoe as one foot goes after the ball, the bouncers who make alley owners tear their hair by dropping the ball on the middle of the alley, the mowers who try to sweep the pins over by remote control with a mighty thrashing of the arms after delivering the ball, the wavers who blow them down with their hands, the straight-ball addicts, the boys who 'bend' them and those who back them up."

Cleveland, incidentally, is among America's top-rank bowling cities, boasting Harvey Braatz and Mrs. Joan Radtkin, holders, respectively, of men's and women's world championships for three games.

Pressure Is Heavy. Braatz made his record by rolling 276, 300 and 288, the hottest three-game stretch ever recorded in league competition under ABC standards. We mentioned awhile back how unusual a 300 score is. The perfect score is "par" to a bowler, but it's much harder than par in golf. On the links you can slip now and then, recouping your losses with a few exceptional shots. But "par" bowling must be perfect bowling from start to finish; the keglers must toss 12 straight balls correctly and the pressure gets pretty strong about the ninth or tenth ball.

Bowling is much like golf in its appeal to your "never-say-die" instincts. After a few weeks of poor trundling you may throw five or six perfect scores in 300 points, requiring 12 successive "strikes." A Comely Alice Faye is reputed to be one of Hollywood's most enthusiastic bowlers, but the press agent who arranged this picture neglected to remind Alice that she shouldn't step over the black line. Below: Mont Lindsey of New Haven, Conn., one of the all-time high ABC bowlers, talks it over with Jack Dempsey of heavyweight fame, also a trundling expert.

Yes-Bird
A man went into a pet shop to buy a parrot.
"Here is a fine talking bird," said the assistant. "For years he was the companion of a big movie producer—weren't you, Polly?"
"Yes, sir!" shrilled the parrot.
"Yes, yes, yes, yes. Indeed! You're absolutely right. Yes sir!"

With Interest
"Has she kept her girlish figure."
"Kept it? Man, she has doubled it!"—Exchange.

Loud Noise
A man was trying to rent an apartment in one of the most modern apartment houses in his city.
"Have you any children?" roared the owner.
"No, sir," replied the prospect, meekly.
"Any dog?"
"No, sir."
"Any cat or canary?"
"No, sir. But I have a fountain pen that scratches a little. Would that be objectionable?"

Just Wait
Mother—How did papa's new book get in this condition?
Tommy—Why, mama, I heard papa say several times last night that the book was too dry for him, so I put it in the sink and turned the water on it.

Favorite Recipe of the Week

For Winter Meals.
SCALLOPED dishes are favorites for cold weather because it is a pleasure to use the oven, and because the blended flavor of foods makes such delicious finished products. The tartness of tomatoes complements most any meat that is being served, and while there are almost unlimited ways of making the dish, you may enjoy trying the following recipe:

Scalloped Tomatoes.
1 No. 2½ can tomatoes
1 tsp. minced onion
1 tsp. salt
1 lb. sugar
2 cups bread crumbs
4 tsp. butter

Combine the tomatoes with the onion and arrange a layer in a baking dish. Mix the salt and sugar with the bread crumbs and blend with melted butter. Place a layer of crumbs over the tomatoes, add another layer of tomatoes, crumbs, and so on until the dish is filled and ingredients used. Leave crumbs on top. Bake about 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees).

If you happen to have some sweet cucumber pickles on hand, slice two or three and add them to the above ingredients.

On the Highway
Probably the worst fault in driving a car is believing you haven't any fault.
The dullest drivers usually have the brightest headlights.
Many a woman thinks she can drive as well as a man, and, too often, it's the sad, sad truth.
It isn't so funny to be a crazy driver as it is crazy to be a funny driver.
Less automobile horn blowing—and more responsibility.
Kisses may shorten life, says a physician. Especially when you snatch them while driving a car.

WHEN COLDS BRING SORE THROAT

The speed with which Bayer tablets act in relieving the distressing symptoms of colds and accompanying sore throat is utterly amazing and pleasant. This is all you do. Crush and dissolve three genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back.
This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases promptly; rawness is relieved.
You will say it is remarkable. And the few cents it costs effects a big saving over expensive "throat gargles" and strong medicines. And when you buy, see that you get genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

Headlines may scream of death and disaster without causing you to raise an eyebrow. But if your son gets his name in the paper—that's real news!
It isn't by accident that this paper prints so many stories which vitally interest you and your neighbors. News of remote places is stated briefly and interpreted. Local news is covered fully, because all good editors know that the news which interests the readers most is news about themselves.

HEALTH INSPECTION

As many of you know, the county nurse spent three days of last week checking the health of the students of the school. By this biennial inspection many defects, most of them still minor, are discovered and can be remedied before they become serious.
A child is entitled to the use of its faculties when put into competition with other children. A handicapped child is often classed as dull when he might be a leader if he had medical attention. Impaired vision causes fatigue, lack of interest, loss of credits and often failure, when properly fitted glasses would give the necessary tools to the child to work with, a greater ease, speed and efficiency. Poor posture with its consequent ill health can be corrected in youth, by the cooperation of parents, teachers and students. Teeth, throat conditions and nutrition are also checked. Miss Anderson pointed out that a slender child is often well nutritioned, while one fairly plump may be suffering from malnutrition.
It is to be regretted that this inspection cannot be made an annual affair. Two years is a long time for trouble to gain headway, and the loss of time and interest in school subjects is often more serious than can be seen at first glance.
Healthy bodies and healthy minds are needed by every student. Health inspection by the county nurse is not the correction of the defect. Are you going to see your family physician soon?
—Margaret Muenk

OFFICE NEWS

The report of the county nurse's inspection was received on Tuesday. Notes are being sent home by those pupils who were found to need corrections. It is hoped that where recommendations were made by the nurse for corrections, that they can be attended to.
Several cases of near blindness were discovered and in one it was found that nurses' recommendations for several years had gone unheeded and all the while the vision growing rapidly worse. When these people cannot see writing on a black board while sitting in front row seats it is time that corrections be made.
Miss Busch and Pearl Hron attended the extemporaneous reading and speaking contest and radio-program contest at West Bend Saturday. This was not a league contest—only a practice test. Seven schools competed: West Bend, Campbellsport, Horicon, Port Washington, Mayville, Washington High, Milwaukee, and Beaver Dam.
On Wednesday night Mr. Furlong, Misses Browne, Lea, and Busch attended the Tri-County forensics meeting at Fond du Lac.
Each Thursday afternoon the entire student body listens to the English As You Like It programs of the WHA School of the Air. These programs are prepared by English teachers and students and have proven both interesting and educational.

SCHOOL NEWS

The students in the junior shorthand class will have a thorough review of Book I this week and then begin Book II of the Functional Method next week.
The biology students are studying digestion and absorption in the human body. This includes the study of all the digestive organs and the connected glands as well as the teeth.
The world history class is studying the conflicts of the popes and the em-perors over the right of investiture.
Since the English class has completed reading "Prose and Poetry," the sophomores will, during the second semester study grammar, composition, spelling and penmanship.
The American history class is studying how the Hayes administration ushered in a new era and how efforts were made toward financial reorganization.
The economics class is now studying the limit on corporations. Definitions and examples of business forms and words such as capital stock, bonds and notes, surplus, undivided profits, book value, net worth and various other forms are being studied. It is very important that the individual knows and understands the correct definitions of these words and forms in a study of economics and for general personal good.
