House Passes Wage-Hour Bill R EPRESENTATIVE MARY NOR-TON'S wage-hour bill finally got through the house by a vote of 314 to 97, despite fierce opposition of the southern Democrats. It was sent on to the senate, which has passed a widely differing measure and where opposition blocs were reported forming to carry on a filibuster.

The Southerners fought for differentials favoring their industries, and were aided by a few Re-

Rep. Norton publicans who called the bill a "vote catcher" that would "throw millions out of work. The measure establishes rigid wage-hour standards for certain classes of workers in all industries operating in interstate commerce, regardless of prevailing sectional scales. It fixes an initial wage of 25 cents an hour which steps up to 40 cents an hour in three years, and a 44-hour week graduating to 40 in two years.

A coalition of farm state representatives and the southern Democrats put over a drastic amendment offered by Mrs. Norton, exempting thousands of employees engaged in the processing of agricultural commodities from the provisions of the

When the fight ended, Mrs. Norton, chairman of the labor committee, was cheered and hugged by the victorious administration Democrats.

Morgan Charges Deceit

DR. ARTHUR E. MORGAN, ousted chief of TVA, was the first witness heard by the congressional committee inquiring into the affairs of the authority. In straightforward fashion he told his side of the story, charging his fellow directors with dishonest management. He explained he did not mean David Lilienthal and Harcourt Morgan took bribes or stole money, but that they deceived the President, congress, and the public; that they covered up important facts tending to throw doubt on the advisability of the government's huge social experiment; reported a false electric power yardstick, and were subservient to political and other special interests.

He accused Lilienthal flatly of deceit in leading the public to believe that the financial accounts of the communities buying power from the TVA include all the costs of the service they render to the public.

phenomenon. It grows out of the primaries in two widely separated states, Florida and Pennsylvania. The fact that it was a Democratic primary in each instance, however, makes possible this analysis and discussion of details.

Taking up the primaries in their order, there was the primary in Florida where Sen. Claude Pepper, 100 per cent New Dealer, indorser of Townsend old-age pensions, and himself indorsed by James Roosevelt, son and secretary of the President, licked the pants off of his challengers. He polled more votes than Rep. J. Mark Wilcox and former Gov. Dave Sholtz combined. It was, without doubt, a New Deal victory for which the President can claim justifiable credit.

There were two candidates for the Republican nomination for each of these offices, as well, but that fact will be treated later.

Few party primaries in modern times developed the bitterness that flamed in the Democratic test in Pennsylvania. It was the first time that organized labor, as such, had come out into the open with avowed candidates and it was the first time Democratic National Chairman Farley has taken a hand in attempting to tell the voters of a state what to do. In addition, there was a state ported to be taking party committee which insisted upon selecting a slate of candidates in regulation boss fashion. So there were all of the elements of a rough fight, and it happened according to forecast. Mr. Farley made an eleventh-hour public appeal to the Democrats of Pennsylvania "for harmony." He asked them to nominate Governor Earle for the United States senate. Governor Earle was the choice of the state committee faction. Mr. Farley also asked that the Pennsylvanians nominate Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, for the governorship. Mr. Kennedy was thrown overboard by the state committee but he had the open indorsement of John L. Lewis, head United States senate. The Farley recommendation thus cast out Charles Alvin Jones of Pittsburgh, state committee selection for the governorship, and it threw Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia into the discard as far as the Democratic senatorial nomination was concerned. Mayor Wilson was a national chairman, wrote a statement while the Biting sun was coming Words up on the day following the primary. He bounced biting words right off of Mr. Farley's head. In substance, he said the Pennsylvania tain whether Mr. Jones wins or primary showed: 1. The voters of any state resent interference from established as head of the party. All the national headquarters as regards their party nominees. 2. The voters of Pennsylvania showed they will have nothing to do with John L. Lewis, despite the fact that probably that state is the most tightly organized for the C. I. O. of any state in the country. 3. The Democrats of Pennsylvania are tiring of the "crack-pot brains" of the Roosevelt administration.

The Farley announcement, made on the day before the primary, built up resentment even from the men he indorsed. Governor Earle barked loud and long; so did Lieutenant Governor Kennedy.

Mr. Hamilton, further, called attention to the fact that two present Democratic members of the house of representatives were defeated for renomination. Representative Stack, an admirer of Father Coughlin, radical radio priest, and Representative Crosby, author of Townsend plan bills in the house, were supplanted. The Republican chairman sought to connect their defeat with a trend away from radicalism which he says is inherent in the New Deal, because Mr. Stack sometimes went beyond New Deal ground.

Now, as to the Republican battle: James J. Davis, present senator, was renominated over G. Mason Owlett, backed by the Republican state committee, and Judge Arthur H. James was nominated for the governorship over former Gov. Gif-

AND SO ONE THING LED TO ANOTHER, UNTIL-

WHEN old Tim Jillis blew his brains out with a rifle, he also set off a box of fireworks that jumped about hither and yon and hit quite a few people. In fact, the body of the suicide was barely cold in death before an unsuspecting citizen was tarred and feathered, and the latter event caused another explosion because it forced a sergeant to desert from the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. At any rate, let's get back to the beginning. Tim Jillis was a lazy, good-for-nothing sort, and a booze-fighter, to boot, all of which kept his hardworking wife, and his two fine children on the outermost edge of destitution and want. Neighbors did all they could, of course, for the sake of the youngsters, and just when things were about as bad as they could be, Mrs. Jillis had a bright idea. She would change the house a bit and take in a lodger, someone who would pay for good food and a warm room. With the income from the boarder, she could make it all right, she felt sure, and soon a Charlie Brown was part of the household. Now Brown was a sober, hard-working chap, and when he saw the general economic conditions in the Jillis household, he dug down into his pockets and provided plenty of food, some necessary clothing, and a nice pile of fuel.

Naturally, the heart of Mrs. Jillis was about to burst from sheer gratitude, and she put herself out to make Brown feel right at home. His slightest wish was law, and the Jillises began to emerge from destitution to a fair measure of comfort and well-being. All of this, strange to say, aroused the anger and displeasure of the no-account husband and father who spent his days in local barrooms bewailing the fact that Brown the lodger was stealing his wife and gradually breaking up the Jillis home.

Instead of shooting the lodger, as most people had expected, Jillis stuck the rifle barrel in his own mouth, pressed the trigger, and scattered his brains all over the bedroom walls. The coroner and the Mounted Police soon realized that it was a plain case of suicide, and the case would have been closed right then had not a gang of half a dozen masked men barged into the Jillis home and seized Charlie Brown, the lodger. They took him to a lonely spot and there they tarred and feathered him from cap to boots. They drove him back to the tiny settlement and threw him into the lobby (?) of the local hotel which was hardly more than an ordinary six or seven-room Hours later Brown found his way back to his room in the Jillis home, and about the only clue he had as to the identity of his kidnapers was that all the talking and all the orders had been spoken by a man with a distinctive western drawl such as was common along the Montana boundary.

Things quieted down, and Brown stayed on at the Jillis place. And then, months later he was sitting on a hotel veranda in Lethbridge, Althe Democratic primary results in berta, when his ears caught up a voice that he would never forget as long as he lived. He knew he had found the leader of the kidnap gang, and in half an hour the owner of the stroys the control of Pennsylvania distinctive western drawl was breaking down under stiff questioning on the part of Men of the Mounted. Later he admitted leading the gang, and was held for trial. And then, while assembling all the necessary data and information for the trial, the inspector of the Mounted Police in the district made a most startling and distressing discovery. Five of the six gangsters were accounted for, and the inspector, while moving heaven and earth to find out the identity of the sixth, found that the much-wanted lawbreaker was one of his own sergeants, a man with years of creditable service behind him, and a man who had always been above reproach in every way. At any rate, perhaps a bit enraged by this discovery, the inspector did all he could to make a strong unshakable case against the sergeant. But, as the days passed, it appeared that the inspector was more hell-bent on "getting" that most certain to, have an important sergeant than anyone else, and just when conditions looked bad for the three-striper, he turned up missing. The fact is, the tiny settlement was loyal to the sergeant, and while the inspector was fussing and fuming over evidence and court procedure the sergeant's many friends dug into their pockets, made up a sizable purse of money, and staked the sergeant to a midnight getaway on one of the finest and fastest horses in the region. Moreover, while the inspector was looking up the law on this and that, a fairsized escort of mounted citizens were escorting the sergeant over the border into Montana.

And . . . that's how one thing led to another, until . . . well . . . it was difficult to find out just where this all started and when and where it finished. At any rate, it added a few gray hairs to the inspector's scalp. No doubt about that, almost—Dr. Reedley. Just dashing down the home-stretch to a degree and he'll be so glad to-" The flier interrupted again. "At once, please, we go."

CHAPTER V

Jim Allison and a couple of his friends had arrived at the field. "'Evening, Petey!" Allison greeted the man who stepped forward. "Lieutenant Thorwald's delayed, so I'll warm up for him."

"Okeh, Cap'n Allison." The aviator's keen bitter eyes ran over the outlines of the ship as he walked toward it.

"Gas her, will you? Get the weather report. He'll want to hop immediately."

"I betcher! Told me he was off "I told you he was delayed. Snap into it, will you?" Allison said sharply "Okeh, sir." He started away. "May have to sleep out in Mexico there's a big roll of bedding to stow away.

"I'll tend to it, sir." "You do what I told you. I'll take care of the bedding. You let it alone understand?"

The man hurried off. "Walk wide of him this night," he told a youth in overalls, out of the corner of his mouth. "He'll bite the head off you."

"Yeah? Had a coupla drinks again? He better cut that out." They were standing together when Reedley and Lieutenant Thorwald chap, Keaton Dana, rather heavy,

Her teeth were chattering; her heart was in her throat; her head blazed with pain. "But why am I pretending to be all wrapped up in blankets? Mercy, if I can make-believe like this I needn't ever be afraid of anything again-not Ardine, nor Mother, nor Duncan, nor Detroit! Nothing will matter!" Her nostrils dilated and she pulled deep drafts of cold air into her lungs. Her head cleared. She sat bolt up-

A rush of air, chill, stinging, sweet. A great round moon of dazzling platinum. Stars; stars; stars. The steady pounding throb of a motor. A small, compact space enclosing her, and - directly before her, and—directly before her—square shoulders in creamy leather, a head in a sternly classic helmet. Sarah Lynn heard her own voice in a strangled whisper-"Am I even pretending-him?"

Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, was flying in a cold rage. He was hurt, disappointed, deeply disgusted. Jim Allison had failed him utterly, and it was a blow, because he was young enough, in spite of his astonishing exploits, to take himself and his career with great seriousness.

He had come to America very earnestly, pledged to study and learn, to take home all he could gather from the nation a-wing, and he had counted confidently on Jim Allison.

"I wouldn't think of asking you to break your rule about never taking women up," the American flier had explained, "under ordinary circumstances, but in this case, if you could possibly make an exception I'd appreciate it no end. You see, the fact is, Ardine-and of course her husband, too - awfully decent drove up, and the older man saluted | perhaps, but a prince"-he added clumsily.

"She's purrin' like a pussy cat, sir, but Cap'n Allison, he went home sick, poor feller. He couldn't hold his head up. He says you must hop without him and he'll telygraft to Los Angeles.'

"Very good," the Norseman nodded. He turned to the medical student with a stiff bow. "I am obliged. You may go." "All right, then," Reedley said, relieved. "I sure hope there won't be any more jinx!" The aviator did not answer. He was stepping swiftly about his ship, ice-blue eyes keen for the faintest flaw in her shining perfection. Reedley ran back to his car, umped in, backed and turned and slid into high and was off at top speed. Half a mile down the road a parked car snapped on its lights and honked noisily, and he jammed ing stop. "Okeh?" Jim Allison asked hoarsely.

"Well-Lord, I guess so!" Reedley said. Beads of sweat stood on his face. "Boy! What a night!" "And what a day is coming!" someone in the flier's car contributed. "Say, Jim, those doors don't fly open - or - or - anything, do they? "No." Allison said shortly. "Well-better beat it back to the Prune and rehearse our parts with Sarah Lynn said to herself: "I can't possibly sleep with the music beating and pounding, but I don't want to wake up, because I can pretend I'm flying . . ."

Her head ached hideously and her mouth was dry. But the air in her nostrils now was sharp and sweet and cold, and she was shivering.

"I'm pretending so hard that I'm actually cold!" she exulted. "But I won't open my eyes, because Duncan will think I'm asleep, and let me alone." She dozed again. Then "I wonder if I could open my eyes they're so heavy. I never heard such noisy music, and there isn't any tune; just throbbing and pounding and roaring. "I think I'll open my eyes for a minute, now, but I'll keep right on making believe I'm not here." Then she was saying in a scared whiswas rushed per: "I can pretend with my eyes and the host- wide open! Sitting right here in the "Gunnar, Stewed Prune with the horrible mu-hastily under the bleak young gaze -"are very special friends of mine, and she's set her heart on going up for a spin with you." "I am sorry," the yellow-haired youth said civilly.

"Makes it pretty awkward for me. I dare say I-well, I strutted a bit about what pals we are, and I'm afraid I let Ardine infer that I could fix it up for her." "I am sorry," Gunnar said again.

"I take no women in my ship. He might well have expanded his pronouncement to say that he took no women anywhere. Sisterless, cousinless, girl-friendless, rigidly reared by a stern grandmother, he had pledged her and himself to keep his mind wholly upon his work until his career was well established. The night was clear and calm with excellent visibility his hop to Los Angeles would be without excitement.

He came swiftly out of his musings as the nose of the plane dropped, the whir of the motor increased and they leaned toward a downward pitch. He pulled on the stick to regain normal position, wondering what freak of air currents caused the small disturbance. He was aware of a slight jar. Had he, perhaps, struck a high-flying night

He was immediately in level flight again, eased off on the joy stick and began to re-establish the course which had been briefly abandoned, but directly he released his pressure the nose dropped a second time

There was a jar again, more perceptible this time, and he turned his head to look back through his ship, and found his vision blocked. Incredibly, out of all reason, someone was standing behind him.

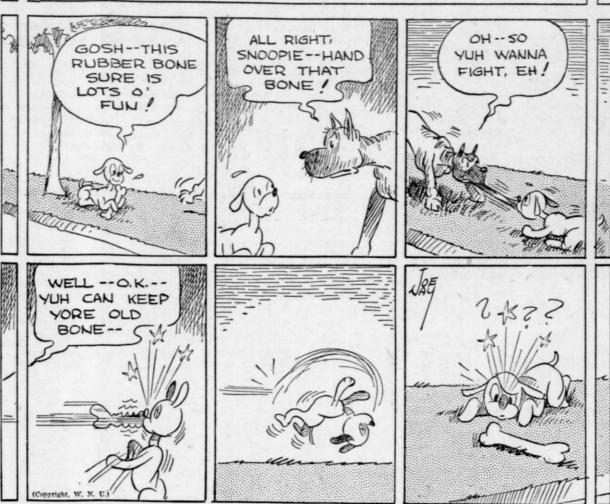

His mind refused to accept it. The thing was impossible. It was the figure of a woman!

Then young Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, experienced an anger the like of which he had never known in all his years of living. It was the sort of berserk rage his ancestors knew, tricked by a wily foe, and which they eased with sudden blood. Jim Allison had made mockery of his rule. Jim Allison had flouted him - his friend -to please the whim of his light-o'-love made a fool of him in the eyes of the tipsy wasters at a tawdry roadhouse. His teeth ground together and his breath came quickly.

The woman lurched forward and caught at his shoulder to steady herself, bent closer to speak above the roar. Their cold cheeks touched. (TO BE CONTINUED)

ELECTRICITY IS DANGEROUS Electricity so much like fire is a most valuable servant to man.

In the shop, home, on the streets and highways and wherever we go, electricity serves you and all of us. Like fire, electricity has to be watched and con. trolled skillfully by those who understand its tendencies. Without proper facilities it may suddenly become as dangerous as deadly poisonous gas. Unexpectedly and without warning it may cause sudden death or serious burns to anyone who fails to respect its tenden-

-FAMOUS STORIES-

House of La Follette Again Sponsors a Third Party

By JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Since 1930 American politics has seen Messiahs by the carload. In Minnesota the Floyd B. Olsons attempted to project their Farmer-Labor party into the national picture; in Detroit the Father Coughlins came forward with a platform that was anti-Democratic and anti-Republican; Townsendism had its day, and dynamic Huey P. Long raised his voice from the bayous of Louisiana.

These are the malcontents, "radicals" if you please, many of whom argue that it's safer to build a new balloon than patch the old. In an era featured by change, they want more change. Individually they are powerless, but if a new Leader should emerge-.

In Wisconsin a few weeks ago that potential Leader did emerge, but he was not an unknown Messiah. His father was the fire-eating Progressive who kept the United States senate worried until his death in 1925. His brother is today a member of that same senate and very much respected. He himself is governor of Wisconsin.

The name is Phil LaFollette. If America's anti-Republicans and anti-Democrats had searched a generation they might not have found an abler Leader than the man who popped up in the quiet college town of Madison. Like his brother, Sen-ator Bob, Phil LaFollette has been doggedly fighting for the ideals of Progressivism more than a decade. He's never shouted: only the false Messiahs shout. But he has applied his ideals to state government and has made them work.

A Brotherly Combine. Together the brothers LaFollette form a unique combination to win support from labor, the farmer and the small business men.

They are not socialists but the La-Follettes want to "harness the profit motive for social ends." They are not capitalistic but they think organized labor is foolish to bargain for fixed wages instead of an annual income based on a share of the company's profits. Nor are these farm state boys opposed to agriculture but they do censure the farmer for haggling with purchasers of their crops for a set price level. Instead, say the LaFollettes, farmers should bargain collectively for a share of the ultimate price.

These proposals come under the heading of making new balloons instead of patching old ones. Phil La-Follette built a new balloon in his state unem ment insurance law. a piece of legislation that reflects the LaFollette fetish for justice. Under this act a separate set of books is kept for each business organization in the state. The corporation with the smallest labor turnover pays the least. What Phil LaFollette doesn't say, Senator Bob supplies. In Washington he rants about the "hodgepodge" of taxation that has grown up these past hundred years. He'd like to junk it all and develop a sane, thoroughgoing program.

Brother Bob's Opinions. Senator Bob has also voiced a family opinion concerning the New Deal and its efforts to cure deprescause old Bob LaFollette intended that his namesake should carry on the family tradition. Young Bob went to Washington immediately after he finished college and became his father's secretary. In 1924 he managed the LaFollette presidential campaign and found himself in the heat of politics while brother Phil was twiddling his thumbs.

This is a queer trick of fate be-

Phil once thought of entering the ministry. His wise old father discouraged him from politics but his heart was in it. In 1924, at the ripe age of twenty-seven, he ran for district attorney of Dane county, delivering not a single speech for himself because the elder LaFollette needed his help in the presidential campaign. But Phil won.

Wisconsin's Wonder Boy.

The next year his father died and Phil's ambitions were nipped in the bud when young Bob ascended to the senate. It looked like a political fade-out but Phil won the Republican nomination for governor in 1930 and has been at Madison for three terms since.

Old Bob LaFollette, dead since Follette tradition is a thing of wonder. In November, 1928, young Bob came up for election the first time and was sent back to the senate with a plurality of 400,000. Yet Wisconsin gave its electoral vote that year to Herbert Hoover, for whom the LaFollettes had said not a single good word.

Governor Phil is by no means an when the New Deal shows signs of idol with his constituents. The past bogging down, when the Republican two years have seen many scraps party still lacks leadership and the from which he has emerged viccountry cries with discontent, Phil torious but badly scratched. In most LaFollette has launched the Nationof these he has shown a judgment al Progressive party with an eye to for diplomacy that would credit any President. One of his accomplish by 1948. "Trigger" La Follette.

The governor's private life and hobbies account for much of his popular appeal. He is a devotee of Americana of the Sam Houston period and is also a student of Na-

His quick-on-the-trigger aptitude in speech-making wins him many converts. Never caught short, he faced a momentary crisis when addressing a crowd of Farmer-Laborites in Iowa a few weeks ago. A bench collapsed noisily, spilling its occupants to the ground.

"That," cracked Phil, "must have been the Democratic or Republican platform." The next few months may see Governor Phil and Senator Bob carrying their National Progressive party to the nation. The two brothers never disagree on major points, so America's farmers, laboring men and small business men are apt to be offered two Messiahs instead of one, each preaching the same political doctrine.

To them may fall the task of cementing our growing crop of malcontents into a unified political group, of soothing Labor's quarrels with the farmer and the corner grocery man. To their flag may rally a strange mixture of men and women, disillusioned followers of defeated third party movements.

But Phil will be the dominant La-Follette, a dynamic crusader in whom more than one aging Progressive will see a carbon copy of old Fighting Bob LaFollette, the man who wanted his son to be a minister.

Senator Bob LaFollette, lacking his brother's salesmanship ability,

Will LaFollette progressive ideas some day dominate the Washington picture? Time will tell.

King Arthur's Death Told in

By ELIZABETH C. JAMES

Tennyson Tale

IN THE last days of King Arthur, his men were led in revolt against him by the traitorous knight, Sir Modred. Warfare had continued many months and the time had now come for the last struggle. Among those faithful to the king was the knight, Sir Bedivere, now constant companion to the lonely and aged king. Overlooking the camps which were arrayed for battle, the king thought sorrowfully of his knights whom he was now fighting. His heart was heavy as the battle began, relates Lord Tennyson in his story, "The Death of King Arthur." On every side there was strife to the death until the field was strewn with men. At the point of Excali-bur, King Arthur's famous sword, Sir Modred met his

The knight thought this a strange request, but he lifted the treasured sword and went his way to the lake. Standing beside the water, Sir Bedivere thought of the needless waste of so many jewels and of so much beauty and he hid Excalibur in a tree. When Sir Bedivere stood again before him, King Arthur asked what he had seen when the threw the sword into the water. Sir Bedivere answered, "The rippling of the waves."

"Betrayer!" cried the king. "Do as I bid you!"

Standing again beside the water the knight thought: the king is ill and does not know what he says, so I will hide the sword. Accordingly,

"BEAUTIFUL" LIFE

Alfred, Lord Tennyson, lived a life as beautiful and unreal in its romanticism as that of any hero in his King Arthur stories.

The drowning of Arthur Hallam, Tennyson's college friend who understood and encouraged the sensitive poet, caused Tennyson to suffer a nervous collapse and to live ten years in retirement. At the end of that time he presented for publication "In Memoriam," an elegy to Arthur Hallam, a poem said to have brought more comfort to sorrowing people than any other poem.

Tennyson was not wealthy, and he and his sweetheart wanted to leave the path of his life open earn a less precarious livelihood, so they waited many years before marriage was possible. Speaking of his marrying Emily Sellwood he said, "On the day I married her, the peace of God entered into my soul."

At the death of Wordsworth, Tennyson was made Poet Laureate of England, having long enjoyed the friendship of Queen Victoria. After that he was so besieged by sightseers, that he was forced to move to the Isle of Wight, which place is now famous for having been his home. Tennyson died in 1892, at the age of eighty-three.

he once more placed it safely away. The second time the king asked what he had seen and the knight gave the same answer as before, "The rippling of the waves."

With great effort King Arthur cried, "If you do not do as I command, I will kill you with my own hands!

Sir Bedivere ran to the lake, wheeled the sword high, and with all his might, hurled it into the lake. Instantly an arm clothed in rich apparel rose from the lake, caught the sword, brandished it three times and drew Excalibur under the waves. When the king had heard what Sir Bedivere had seen, his soul was satisfied. Then he made his last request of his knight, that Sir Bedivere would assist him to reach the shores of the lake. Old Order Changeth.

When the king stood beside the waters, there appeared in the distance a barge. Nearer and nearer it came, until the richness of the black draperies could be seen. Three queens weeping in lamentation stood on the bow looking toward King Arthur, Sir Bedivere supported his king, until the outstretched arms of the queens assisted King Arthur to take his place on the barge. Slowly the barge began to leave the shore. Standing alone as King Arthur moved into the distance, Sir Bedivere cried out, "I am left alone! What shall I do?" Kindly answered the king, "The old order changeth, giving place to new-Pray for me, for more things

Fences on the Contour

One farmer, who had a permanent pasture adjoining a cultivated field, added the point rows to the pasture and added some of the pasture at the upper swing of the contour to the cultivated portion of the farm. In the end he had about the same acreage of pasture and cultivated land as before. He protected the grass by not moving the fence until the grass was firmly established.

When land next to a cultivated field has a soil that is or unproductive, it should not be added to the cultivated portion of the farm.

C. Houston Goudiss Describes the Place of Fats in the Diet

Nationally Known Food Authority Compares the Different Cooking Fats and Shortenings

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THERE are, perhaps, more false notions concerning fats I than any other class of foods.

Some homemakers, considering them as "fattening" only, try to eliminate them entirely from the diet. Others have the impression that foods containing fat are difficult to digest, and for this reason deprive their families of many delicious and healthful foods. Both @ points of view arise from uct releases more money for milk, fruits and vegetables. Margarine ignorance of dietary facts. is interchangeable with butter for

-★-Fats Are Necessary to Health Fats have a number of important functions to perform. They are a concentrated fuel food, having more than twice the energy value of an equal weight of protein or carbohy- bility and food value, but to add drate.

One-half ounce of fat, that is one tablespoon, yields 100 calories,

Fat and Hunger

Perhaps the greatest service performed by fat is its ability to give "staying power" to the dietto satisfy hunger. In this respect, it directly affects the disposition and may influence the ability to enjoy life.

The shortage of fats in European countries during the World war graphically demonstrated how a deficiency of this class of foods can destroy the morale of entire nations.

With supplies cut off or very greatly curtailed, the warring countries found it necessary to ration fats closely. As a result, their people were always hungry and dissatisfied, even when their actual needs were satisfied. In this connection, it is interesting to note that a slice of bread and butter or margarine will delay the onset of hunger longer than a slice of bread and jam, even though the number of calories may be the same.

Different Fats Compared

As sources of energy, the different food fats are very similar. Thus, the homemaker's choice may be determined by preference, convenience, economy, and the use to which the product is to be

The various forms of edible fats and oils are derived from both animal and vegetable sources. They include butter, margarine, lard, compounds, which are a mixture hydrogenated fats, and the liquid vegetable oils.

Butter and margarine are used chiefly as a spread, and it is interesting to note that the annual per capita consumption of margarine is steadily increasing, as homemakers have discovered that every youngster deserves half a the use of this less expensive prod-
