Nothing Left

Highwayman—I'll say you take things pretty easy, friend—you ain't a bit afraid.
Victim—Not a bit—just returned from a tour of the European hotels.

If you think birling is easy game, if you think it's child's play to stand on a half-submerged pine log, floating in the water, then think again. You're going to slip, stumble, trip and land face down in a pond while some peering spectator

YOU'RE ALL WET!

JOSEPH W. LaBINE
Birlers aren't lying so fast these days from the axes of woods lumberjacks. Besides, you'll find them birling about a sport called birling (log-rolling to you) and the world championship birling is to be held at Escanaba, Mich., August 12 to 14.

found a postman's holiday in competing with one another to determine who was "the best man on the log."
Annual Summer Event.
That was the start of competitive birling, a sport that is at once tripping and red-blooded. In a land where the heyday of lumbering has long since disappeared, a few enthusiasts have kept birling alive, gathering annually from the far-flung outposts of their primitive north woods to vie for the championship. There are veterans who remember the invincible Tom Fleming and Al Hubbard who reached their peak in 1898. They remember Big Joe Madwayosh, the husky Indian woodsman who won the title in 1924. They still watch Wilbur Marx, the child prodigy of yesteryears who tossed "Big Joe" into the pond when a boy of 14 summers.

laurels against lads who never worked on a log drive, who never pulled the key log from a jam. The practical side of birling is foreign to younger rollers but they know the rules of the game which is all that concerns the judges.
The Battle Begins.
And modern birling does have definite rules. A round, smooth and perfectly turned white pine log, 13½ feet long, and measuring all the way from 16 to 18 inches in diameter, is put in the water. Two men wearing light calked shoes mount the log, one at each end.
Then comes the battle, a tempestuous warfare of churning pine in which each man, by spinning and snubbing the tricky log, tries to throw the other into the water. With bewildering speed the timber whirls and stops, then starts the other way. From the river bank spectators see an exhibition of perfect balance, timing and muscular co-ordination. But eventually one man topples and splashes into the creek. As in wrestling, two falls out of three constitute a match.

But they cannot believe that birling has become a college boys' sport. So they'll converge at Escanaba from every north woods settlement this year to watch some real lumberjack defeat Joe Connor, the twenty-six-year-old University of Minnesota student who won the crown last year.
Considering its barrel-chested heritage, birling should not be a college boys' sport. But the modern birling match finds veteran rivermen struggling to retain their

Part of the Job.
They aren't birlers by choice. They discovered long ago that keeping your job in the north woods apparently senseless business.

Eden in the days when legendary Paul Jerome was a youngster in knee-length pants and a red flannel shirt. He was the first to roll a log into the river and nursed it down the stream. The drive went smoothly, carrying mill-logs of timber down to the mill. But now some obstruction would pile up and it was a granddaddy's job to skip out under this menacing jam, find the log, jerk it loose and get it by land before he was killed.

When the next year's tournament opened Marx was again present, merely fifteen years old, but now a well-muscled, seasoned athlete instead of an awkward boy. Losing a third round elimination match in the northwest titular tourney steadied him and he won the Wisconsin state title without difficulty. Twenty-six of the most accomplished log cutters in the game were entered for the world's title and young Marx defeated four of them in swift succession, winning his way through the first, second and third rounds of elimination and the semi-finals.
Then he faced little Billy Girard of Gladstone, Mich., in the final match. Too eager, too confident, he made the mistake of thinking himself speedier than Girard and "Little Billy" raced him off the log for straight falls in the fastest match that has ever been rolled. Feet trod so fast they could hardly be seen; spiked shoes chewed the logs to splinters; "white water" splashed the contestants' legs and both birlers were almost continually on the verge of a wetting.
On to Victory.
But Marx was a staid birling next year and he could not be stopped. At sixteen he won the world's championship against a score of veteran log rollers. He held it 10 years.
But last year the college boy from Minnesota came along and Marx, whom the old time lumberjacks had at last taken to their hearts, lost his title. To what depths has this sport fallen!
This year Marx says he'll regain the championship and the bearded birlers from the northwoods are wishing a real jam-breaking logger would appear to teach all these young upstarts a lesson. But Joe Connor, the college boy, has been spending the summer at a CCC camp making his legs tough and preparing to take on all comers.
Maybe Joe Connor will be defeated, but even then the plaid-shirted lumberjacks won't be completely happy. At last year's Escanaba tournament they rubbed their eyes with amazement and chagrin to see four girl birlers engage in a contest of their own. A few old timers admitted the women showed a speed and style that equalled or surpassed the skill shown by a lot of the semi-finalists in the men's tourney.
Their only consolation, it appeared, was in the memory of Paul Bunyan, patron saint of all log rollers. Paul's wife, the story goes, was the only one able to wet him in a birling match!

AMERICA GAMBLES 7 BILLION YEARLY; HALF OF IT 'PETTY'
NEW YORK—The word gambling may bring to your mind images of race tracks and roulette wheels, but a recent survey indicates that half of America's gambling, $7,000,000,000 yearly, is accounted for by the petty gambling of Mr. and Mrs. John Doe, and Junior.

ner store and bank night at the neighborhood movie take in quantities of cash during a year. Lodges organize raffles. Office groups have pools on the baseball game.
The pinball machine, that often escapes anti-gambling laws by a liberal classification as "games of skill" when the pay-off is in merchandise, takes in from $7.50 to $10 a week for each machine. In good times, John D. gambles because he has plenty of spending money. In bad times, he gambles because he is more than ever anxious to get something out of nothing, it is pointed out by investigators of the Northwestern National Life Insurance company in commenting on their survey.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.
Get more fresh air. 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vitality to enjoy life and avoid irritating, jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Washington County Fair to Have Drivers' Clinic

Arrangements have been completed by Highway Commissioner H. J. Riley of West Bend to bring the state highway commission's scientific driver's clinic to the Washington county fair at Slinger, Aug. 9 and 10.

This clinic has been in great demand throughout the state, and several thousand persons have taken the free tests to determine their driving skill. Clinic results cannot affect drivers' licenses. No police official or employer will see the driver's record in the test; it will remain confidential between the clinic operator and the driver himself.

To be tested will be the driver's brake reaction time, his eye-hand steering coordination, his traffic vigilance, color blindness, reaction to glare, knowledge of Wisconsin's traffic code, understanding of good driving principles, visual acuity, eye efficiency, perception time, image fusion, eye muscle imbalance, depth perception, distance judgment, astigmatism and field of vision.

Each person taking the tests will receive a report card showing how he placed in each test.

Information gained in 15 minutes attendance at this drivers' clinic may save a life someday. Commissioner Riley points out, in urging that all Washington county motorists visit the clinic during the county fair.

Don't Lose Time with a Worn-Out Corn Binder

Invest in a New McCormick-Deering

PEED is essential at silo-filling time—it pays to have a corn binder you can depend on for sure, steady performance. Don't try to get along with an old, worn-out binder—an investment in a new McCormick-Deering is more than worth while. The McCormick-Deering is available in vertical and horizontal types, and there is a special vertical binder for use where corn is cut. Both have a reputation for good work under all sorts of conditions. They get all the corn and bind it tightly in evenly packed bundles. A bundle loader, available on special order, feeds the bundles to a wagon driven alongside. Put in your order now for the type of McCormick-Deering binder you prefer. We also have a complete line of McCormick-Deering Ensilage Cutters.

BEAUTY AND DUMBNESS

Everybody ought to feel better now. Things are all cleared up about glamor girls and gray matter. It seems people have been drawing the wrong conclusions. On the word of two men of science being beautiful has nothing at all to do with the liveliness of the processes that go on inside the think-tank. Two daring investigators interviewed six hundred plain and fancy girl students at the University of California, and came up with the following findings: That the beautiful ones were not as apt to cop good grades as their less fetching sisters, but that the reason was not dumbness, but popularity. The plain girls had plenty of time to concentrate on their studies; the beautiful girls were forced to do their studying on the fly, between sessions of attending to more important matters, such as dates, dances, drives in the country.

Now the fellows will not have to duck behind a pillar when they see a beautiful girl coming. They can go right ahead and date her and it will be all right. They will not have to feel embarrassed at all.—Fond du Lac Commonwealth-Reporter.

DRIVERS! State law requires dimming.

Dumas' Story Formed Basis For 'Traviata'

By ELIZABETH C. JAMES

ONE has grown used to seeing characters from favorite books on the screen. There is interest also in meeting again the old books, just as their authors wrote them long before the cinema era. Among famous love stories recently brought to the screen is that of Camille, the lady created by Alexander Dumas in his book, "The Lady of the Camellias."

Elizabeth James

You recall that Dumas opened his romantic novel by relating how he himself had gone to the sale of the personal possessions of Marguerite Gautier, a beautiful courtesan of Paris. He bought the book, Manon, which had been inscribed by one Armand Duval, whom he guessed to be one of her lovers.

The day after this sale a card was presented at the author's door, bearing the name of Armand Duval. Very curious, Dumas invited the caller into his apartment. The per-

VERSATILE DUMAS

Alexander Dumas, fils, was the natural son of the noted novelist and a seamstress. The mother brought up her son carefully and early he attained a wide and cultured education. Taunts from his playmates spoiled his childhood with unhappiness. The younger Dumas was versatile in the number of his literary talents, but one quality ran through them all, the purpose of a reformer. Most of his works have a didactic theme, which caused the elder Dumas to scold his son.

sonable young man could hardly talk for weeping. He wanted to buy back the book, Manon. After much weeping, Duval told the story of the Lady of the Camellias.

Marguerite Gautier, outstanding among the lovely women in Paris, had as her favorite flower the camellia, which she wore the year round in preference to all other flowers. From the time that Armand first saw her, his life was not the same. When he obtained an introduction to her, he was so overcome that he made a very silly impression and for two years he made no effort to see her again. At one time she was ill for two months, and he went daily to inquire about her, never leaving his name.

Marguerite is Consumptive. Finally he arranged to meet her again. When she learned that it was he who had come daily for two months, she was interested and invited him to supper. He knew already that she was consumptive.

Marguerite had never seen anyone pity her so deeply and she was touched. When Armand told her how much he loved her, she explained that her mode of life was lavish, that she spent 100,000 francs a year. But no arguments prevailed against their mutual attraction. Marguerite loved Armand.

As spring came, she suggested that they leave Paris and take a house in the country for the summer. This plan seemed idyllic, and proved to be so. For six months the lovers were happy. Then came a message for Armand to meet his father in Paris.

The interview between father and son was stormy, but neither gave way to the other. The next day Armand called again to see his father but found him out. Returning to Marguerite he found her in a state of agitation worse than he had believed possible. She gave him vague reasons and wept continuously. The next day she urged Armand to go once more to see his father. To please her, he did so.

Marguerite Disappears. Late in the evening when Armand returned to the country, he found the house dark. Frantic, he found that Marguerite had gone. A letter stated that their relationship had been lovely, but it could not last. Armand was wild. He would show her! Back in Paris he went everywhere that Marguerite went, he gambled and lived recklessly, taking every occasion to insult her. Marguerite fled from Paris.

In her exile the Lady of the Camellias knew that she would win him each day, but did not send him letters. She gave instructions that when she was dead these letters with one other should be sent to Armand.

On returning to Paris, Armand learned of her death and received her letters with one from his father to Marguerite in which Armand's father had implored Marguerite in the name of her love to give up his son so that the family name and future would be unmarred. The unfortunate letter had used every means to win her to the idea that she would be doing a heroic deed in the name of love.

The plot of Verdi's opera, "La Traviata," comes from this book. © Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Interprets the Modern Conception of Meat

Nationally Known Food Authority Explains Why It Rates As a Top-Notch Food.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City

AMERICANS spend from one-fourth to one-third of their total food budget for meat. In order to discover whether this expenditure is justified, let us examine the nutritive value of meat, and consider its contribution to the diet.

Almost everybody likes the flavor of meat, from the man who instinctively eats the meat on his plate before he touches the other foods. The desire for meat is one of the strongest human appetites.

For centuries, man accepted this craving for meat as an indication that it was essential to his well being. But with the advance in civilization, there was an increase in many diseases, and for a period of years, meat was blamed as being a contributing cause to kidney trouble, rheumatism, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries and gout.

In recent years, there has been a careful investigation of the possible association between meat and disease. In the light of our newer knowledge, the old notions have been discarded. And in many cases, meat now has a place in the treatment of the diseases that it was once believed to cause!

Composition of Meat Meat is a protein food of the highest type. It is useful both for repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily and for building the new tissues that are necessary for growth in childhood. The proportion of protein varies with the kind of meat, and the cut. In beef, lamb and veal, it comprises between 14 and 26 per cent of the edible portion.

The other constituents of meat are fats, water, minerals, extractives, enzymes and pigments. The amount of fat present is an important factor in determining the fuel value of meat. And the more fat it contains, the less protein will be found in a given unit of weight. The different cuts of pork contain less protein than corresponding cuts of beef and lamb, with the exception of lean ham, lean pork chops and tenderloin.

Meat as a Blood Builder Both glandular and muscle meats are rich in the blood-building mineral, iron, and meat also contains copper. The glandular organs, particularly liver, have great value in the prevention and treatment of anemia. Pernicious anemia baffled physicians for many years until, in 1926, two noted American scientists discovered that liver contains a principle which stimulates red blood cell formation. This discovery has made the dress more becoming. Very short kimono sleeves, just covering the shoulders, give a much prettier line than sleeveless frocks do, and they're just as cool. The skirt has a charming flare. Make this in linen, dotted Swiss, dimity or organdie in a pretty flower print, and you'll love it.

Day Frocks for Large Figures. You'll find this straight, well-cut dress one of the most becoming, most slenderizing you ever put on. It has a deep v-neck and short pleated sleeves for coolness and comfort. It's very easy and unhampering in line, so that you can work in it comfortably. Darts on the shoulders and at the waistline give it an unusually trim, slimming fit. A touch of prettiness is added by ricrac braid and the pointed closing. This is a diagram design that you can make in a few hours, and you'll want several dresses made just like this—in dimity, calico, percale and seersucker.

The Patterns. 1558 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 and 40. Size 14 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35-inch material; 9 yards of ribbon or braid to trim. 1533 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35-inch material. 1 1/2 yards of ricrac braid to trim.

Cool, Slim-Waisted Frocks

These last few hot weeks will be a whole lot easier to bear if you have some fresh new dresses to wear around the house—cool, slim-waisted styles that are finished enough for shopping and porch wear too. A detailed sew chart comes with each pattern.

Day Frocks for Slim Figures. This little dress is right at the top of new fashions, with its gored skirt and shaped square neckline. Notice that the skirt seams are extended above the waistline, to give a little bosom fullness, which method of cooking and the degree of mastication. But there is no marked difference in the thoroughness with which the different kinds of meat are digested. Since it is so completely digested, however, meat supplies little bulk, and it is therefore essential that an abundance of leafy vegetables and fruits should be eaten at the same time.

Meat in the Child's Diet There has been considerable discussion regarding the place of meat in the child's diet.

There are the same good reasons for using meat in the diet of the child as in the diet of the grown-up. Moreover, the child's protein requirement is greater than that of the adult, in proportion to his body weight.

At the beginning of the second year, many authorities advise that small servings of tender and finely minced beef, chicken, lamb or liver may be given about three times a week. As the child becomes older, he may have meat more often and as his ability to chew increases, he may be given larger pieces.

Some Fallacies Regarding Meat Many people believe that veal is less completely digested than other meats. But it has been demonstrated that even very young veal digests as rapidly and as completely as beef. It has also been held that red meats are less digestible and, therefore, less desirable than white meats. There is no evidence to support this point of view.

Someone with a gift for concise expression once remarked: "No meat—no man!" His point was well taken. For considering its delicious flavor, essential food values, and ease of preparation, it is easy to agree that THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR MEAT.

moving picture double for dangerous scenes, who was making a first hop after being grounded by the Department of Commerce for reckless flying; she was lost; she was found, and found by Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, her fiancé; she would die; she would live; she would live, but she would never walk again.

It was after this last announcement that Kitty Medill committed suicide, quietly and with a good deal of reticence and dignity. They did not tell Sarah Lynn about Kitty Medill. They did not, in the first days, tell her about anything. She was constantly under opiates. Sometimes, when their effect wore thin, she murmured feverishly, anxiously.

"Gunnar . . ." the name came through the confusion again and again. "Gunnar . . ."

Her mother, her beauty deepened and clarified by draining grief, hung over her in an agony of tenderness. "Yes, darling! What is it, darling? What are you trying to say? Tell Mother!"

"Let me," the nurse said capably, taking her place. "Yes, Gunnar, I understand," she said slowly and clearly. "You want to see Gunnar?" The head, held rigidly in a frame, could not move, but the eyes rolled wildly in negation. "No, no, no!" She made a great effort. "Tell him—"

"Yes, I understand. What shall I tell him?" "Don't come in here . . . Go away!" "All right, dearie. I'll tell him. Now you go to sleep again." Miss Burke straightened up. She was young enough and gallant enough to revel in the drama of the case and

"You needn't trouble yourself." She thought that particular phrase of delirium pretty sad. She followed Mrs. Dana out into the hall. "Of course, that doesn't mean a thing," she was beginning briskly when the mother interrupted.

"Mr. Thorwald is downstairs?" "Goodness, yes! Always. I don't know when he eats or sleeps. He—" "Be quick!"

When they reached the wreck Kitty Medill shut her eyes. She didn't see his face when she saw Sarah Lynn, but it was almost as if she heard him. It sounded as if he were talking in his own Swedish, but she understood perfectly the terrible, racked sobbing.

Miss Burke disdained the elevator and ran down three flights of sound-proof stairs on her heeless rubber soles. "Aha! So, that's the scenario!" she told herself, deciding to tell the Norwegian ace exactly what she pleased. She found him as usual walking up and down the long hall.

"A change?" he demanded in a queer, spent voice. "No. We weren't expecting any change, you know. She is certainly no worse." "She—she asked for me?"

"Well, not exactly, asked, but she talks about you a lot. I mean, she's under opiates all the time, but she keeps murmuring your name." "When—when can I see her?"

"Well, not just yet. They seem to think it isn't wise. The shock—" "You will tell me when I can see her?" "I'll tell you." She put her well-groomed hand for an instant on his arm. "It's a promise. But in the meantime, you know, a little eating and sleeping—"

Duncan Van Doren arrived within the first week after the accident. Duncan's well-bred face showed the effects of grief and shock; its pleasant veneer was rubbed off. "Well, I'm here now," he said, "and I'm here to stay until she gets well—or—doesn't get well."

Mrs. Dana gave him a wan smile. "Duncan dear!" It was certain, they had assured her, that her child would live. "But Bixford, who is the greatest bone specialist this side of Chicago, won't make any prognosis yet about the spine."

Conrad Jordan, who had left Tahoe instantly to join in the search, remained to look after Gunnar. "Though there's nothing I can do, he admitted to Lynn Dana, "except walk up and down that horrible-smelling hall with him, burbling about all the injured spines I've known cured, and dragging him out to eat infrequently. He begrudges every instant away for fear it might be the time they would let him see her." He shook his head. "And why can't he see her?"
