Defense

In dealing with today's international situation the U.S. government has its choice of two methods. Any citizen may hold to one or the other method with equal righteous-

(1) Strict neutrality and isolation. Europe's affairs are no business of We should have no arms secrets, no secret alliances; all U.S. activities should be strictly aboveboard because secrets are undemocratic and tend to create public doubt about the government.

(2) The antithesis. In 1939 one hemisphere's problems are another's. If the institution of democracy is worth saving we must join other in aggressive combat against dictators. This need not mean war, but constitutes economic and military favoritism to one group of nations, with sanctions against

In post-World war history, not until the current winter have these two contrasting foreign policies found such ardent champions as to cause a marked rift in Washington. Champions of the latter (favoritism) are President Roosevelt and administration leaders. Opposed is practically every Republican senator and congressman, plus a formidable bloc of insurgent Democrats. That this difference of opinion is partly a reflection of political animosity is a foregone conclusion. Administration forces favor internationalism as expressed in Secretary of State Cordell Hull's reciprocal trade treaties; contrariwise is the traditional Republican tenet of high tariff walls and the isolation that inevitably ac-

This winter's foreign policy battle got its real start when a bomb ing plane crashed in California, bouncing out a representative of the French air ministry whose presence in the U.S. had previously been kept secret. The subsequent revelations: That President Roosevelt had approved sale of U. S.-made warplanes to France, though army secrets were being carefully guarded from all foreigners. A few days later the senate's military affairs committee constituted itself a body of visiting firemen (see photo) to call on the President and get the real facts about a rumored U. S.-French military alliance. The secret President Roosevelt reputedly told his visitors was so choice that some anonymous committeeman blurted to the press the minute the conference ended, which bespeaks the futility of any administration attempt at sharing its military secrets with congress. The alleged secret: That the U.S. is following a policy of selling arms to "independent states" as opposed to dictators; that the U.S. will give Britain and France every assistance but troops in case of war; that the "frontiers of the United States are in France.'

If a vote were taken, most people would sympathize with the President's foreign policy, i.e., to help Britain, France and China against Japan, Italy and Germany; to improve trade and political relations with South America, where dictator states are attempting to gain sway. But for the President to speak openly of his purpose brings the situation into a shockingly sharp focus for the first time.

The net result will probably be open congressional revolt against secret alliances, against favoritism in military exports and even against the President's emergency defense program, which many legislators think is unjustified in view of the tax burden it would create. In the end a cumbersome, loudvoiced and highly opinionated con-gress may find itself incapable of taking a constructive hand in foreign policy. Though rightfully indignant over a Pan-Democracy aliance because future Anglo-French friendship is problematical, Massa-chusetts' Sen. David I. Walsh summed up the entire exasperating situation quite well: "In God's name, who are we (the U.S.) to determine where truth and justice exist? When we attempt it, we will find ourselves in trouble."

Treasury

Depressions hatch pension plans and this winter's congress is deluged with panaceas to make the U.S. safe for old people. Believing most such plans (like Townsendism) to be impractical, the administration has offered congress its own ideas via proposed amendments to the social security law.

Biggest amendment is that calling for a start on old-age benefit payments in 1940 instead of 1942, annuities to be based not on payroll taxes actually paid out on wage Hence the social security board would simply make believe that benefit recipients had been paying taxes throughout their adult lives instead of a mere four years. Other proposals would (1) provide supplementary pensions for aged wives, (2) help widows and 000 a year. orphans of social security's insurees, and (3) enlarge the program to include farm laborers, seamen, servants, domestics and selfemployers.

Starting hearings on this program, the house ways and means committee was startled to learn that more social security would cost tremendously more money, so much in fact, that Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. was reported stroking his chin perplexedly. Morgenthau figures:

(1) It would cost $1,000,000,000 a year more than at present. (2) Social security's hoped - for 1980 reserve of $47,000,000,000 would be cut to $7,000,000,000, meaning that the U.S. must find from $1,250,000,000 to $1,500,000,000 new annual taxes to continue financing the program. If the above details bother the committee, still more trouble will hatch when California's Rep. Bertrand W. Gearhart asks abolition of the present payroll tax and substitution of general revenue levies for a pay-as-you-go social security. Since the government must already levy extra taxes to pay interest on funds it is borrowing from social security's reserve fund, Mr. Gearhart's plan has attracted many congressmen who think it is fallacious to tax the public for borrowing funds the public has already been taxed for via social security. If the Gearhart plan is adopted, general revenue taxes must be hiked $1,000,000,000 a year at present (under the unamended social security act), twice as much in 1950, four times as much in 1980.

Genuine Strain Being Placed Upon Administration Control of Senate

President's Appointments to Public Office Are Upsetting To Some of His Followers; Roper Virtually Forced Out As Secretary of Commerce to Make Room for Hopkins.

> By WILLIAM BRUCKART WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

ngly difficult these days to stay off signs rightly, they are getting rathmonth ago that the anti-administration senators would break out of control only on major issues, it now seems that there is a real threat of danger to the President on minor, as well as major, questions.

The new developments have come. and are continuing to come, from what some believe to be an unwise course on the President's part in the matter of nominations to public office-appointments that must have approval of the senate. Whether the President is to blame, personally, for placing these distasteful names in the mouths of senators, or whether, as heretofore, the condition results from the activities of the "inner circle," the effect is the same. It is a very real problem for the administration advisors to ponder, and it is entirely possible that Mr. Roosevelt will get a slap in the face by senate rejection of some of the nominees for judgeships and other public offices. It is just possible that some senators will gag at swallowing several of the names. If that happens, what will be left Mr. Roosevelt's mastery of the senate thereafter will be meaningless.

Observers here in Washington Appointments Upsetting to heard many private remarks of a very uncomplimentary character last fall when Mr. Roosevelt named Gov. James V. Allred of Texas to a federal judgeship. It was so plainly political that some individuals who are very close to Mr. Roosevelt were disgusted. They did not speak out then, but they are bolder now.

Shortly thereafter, Mr. Roosevelt named Floyd Roberts to a federal judgeship in Virginia. Now, apparently, Mr. Roberts is about as well equipped to be a judge as I would -if we are to believe the public statements of Senators Carter Glass and Harry Byrd, both Democrats and both acquainted with the life and record of Judge Roberts.

Roper Virtually Forced Out As Secretary of Commerce

Subsequently, Daniel C. Roper was virtually forced out as secretary of commerce in order to make room for removal of Professional therefore, to have whom he desires Reliever Harry Hopkins to a cabinet to sit with him at the cabinet sesjob. Hopkins thereby was taken out sion and to advise him when he of the line of red hot fire about his spending policies. Homer S. Former Sen. James P. Pope who was licked in the Idaho Democratic against him for that reason than primaries was named to the directorate of the Tennessee Valley authority from which Dr. Arthur Morwas so unceremoniously dismissed. Rumor has it that former Sen. Fred H. Brown, lame duck New Hampshire Democrat, is to be given the juicy job of comptroller general of the United States as soon as it is evident that congress will not vote abolition of the general accounting office.

Rep. T. Alan Goldsborough of Maryland lately has been named a federal judge for the District of Co-It will be recalled that it was Mr. Goldsborough who invited President Roosevelt into Maryland last summer in the attempt to purge Sen. Millard Tydings from the Democratic ranks. In fact, it was at Denton, Md., Mr. Goldsborough's home town, that the President made his most vicious attack on Tydings and delivered his eulogy of praise for David J. Lewis in the senatorial primaries.

There have been other appointments mixed in here and there, some important, some just run-ofthe-mine jobs, and they have not met unanimity. Even the selection of Professor Felix Frankfurter as a justice of the Supreme court of the United States did not arouse enthusiasm among the senators who voted approval of the nomination. I, personally, heard several senators remark that the Frankfurter appointment was so much better than that of Hugo Black, a year ago, that it was refreshing to vote for him. Yet, they added a qualification. Justice Frankfurter has brains, a fine mind-but he is looked upon as the father of so much of the New Deal that his presence on the highest court appeared none too pleasing.

Nomination of Amlie of Wisconsin Creates Fuss

But all of these appointments new seem to have been only a build up to a climax. They were to be followed by an appointment that caught the senators in the ribs. It was the nomination of former Rep.

WASHINGTON .- President Roose- | Thomas F. Whereas, it appeared a advised against it, had he been consulted.

There is a very real possibilityalthough not conclusive—that the senate will reject the Amlie appointment. The pressure against him is quite unusual. Even the legislature of his home state adopted a resolution, memoralizing the senate in opposition to confirmation.

Whatever virtues Mr. Amlie may have, his qualifications to be a member of the interstate commerce commission cannot be numbered in that list. He knows nothing about transportation; he is not an economist and if his record as a member of the house of representatives here is a proper criterion, he is as lacking in judicial characteristics-well, he simply does not have them. His work in the house was distinguished by the fact that he headed a conglomerate group which was attempting to "co-ordinate liberal thought" in the nation. But apparently the folks in Wisconsin rather doubted his value for they refused to select him as the progressive senatorial candidate-who, incidentally, was doomed for a licking anyway in the November election

Followers of President

One never can tell what trades may be made within the great club known as the senate, but surely Mr. Amlie will be discussed fully before he is confirmed. And as I said above, he may not be approved at all. The appointment may be the straw that breaks the camel's back.

When Mr. Roosevelt began making appointments three or four months ago that were upsetting to some of his followers, they had to decide between their loyalty to him and their convictions. The bulk of them stood by him. He was the head of the Democratic party; party unity was, and is, essential, and they justified the votes in confirmation in various ways. The Hopkins and Murphy appointments were confirmed because it always has been the philosophy of senators that cabinet jobs are intimate associations with the President. He is entitled, advice. I think there was an inclination to accept Mr. Murphy, too, because it was known he wanttheir inception and was confronted with White House refusal of support. There were fewer votes against Secretary Hopkins. On the other hand, Senator Vandenberg, the Michigan Republican, said he voted against the nomination because "the issues were the same as in Michi-

Murphy was repudiated." When it gets to cases like the Allred appointment for Texas judge and the Roberts appointment in Virginia, there simply is no explanation available-unless as I said, the "inner circle" is leading Mr. Roosevelt into a morass. Senators Glass and Byrd are going to fight the Roberts nomination. Senators Sheppard and Connally were not consulted about the judgeship in their state. As far as it has leaked out, nobody was asked whether the Amlie appointment would arouse enthusiasm

Congress Shows Disposition To Assert Independence

The proposition thus settles down to only one possible answer. Since the last election removed the rubber stamp from the hands of the New Dealers and the congress has shown a disposition to assert its independence of the unelected "inner circle," they are resorting to a new strategy. They can not always control congress but they have access to the appointive power vested in the hands of the President. They have this because they have the President's ear and they take pains to see that none of the practical politicians, like Vice President Garner, or Sen. Pat Harrison, or Speaker Bankhead, wield any influence.

The strategy may work. It may put into numerous governmental posts and judicial positions men who will continue to execute New Deal plans. That, of course, is a brilliant move if it works. There is, however, more to think about than that. The trend toward the middle of the road, emphasized in last fall's voting, can be given greater momentum by the tactics of forcing upon the country policies against which the electorate expressed themselves. In that event, the Democratic party will be the victim.

Last July Salen was acquitted of conspiracy charges on grand jury indictments.

GAR Ranks Thinned-At the beginning of 1938 Wisconsin had 79 members of the Grand Army of the Republic and 37 GAR posts. On February 1 of this year there were 62 members and 33 posts. Undismaved by falling numbers, members of the GAR and associated groups are going ahead with plans for the annual department convention to be held at Eau Claire June 18 to 21.

Health Progress Cited - A state board of health report shows that Wisconsin nearly completed the conquest of diphtheria and typhoid fever in 1938. The total of 134 diphtheria cases recorded last year was 150 less than a six-year average, while typhoid cases totaled only 57, or 69 below the six-year average. Infantile paralysis was limited to 41 new cases in 1938, or 69 fewer than the six-year annual average.

Ouster Held Illegal-The action of Secretary of State Zimmerman in abolishing the position of director of the motor vehicle division held by Don Farris, Madison, a civil service employe, has been termed illegal by the state bureau of personnel. The bureau holds that it has sole authority to abolish a classified job in the state service and that Farris is entitled to draw his pay of $5,000 a year until Zimmerman takes further action in accordance with the statutes.

Gov. Heil Offers Budget - Gov. Julius P. Heil has recommended to the legislature a state budget of $66,753,133, which is approximately $30,000,000 less than total requests made by state departments. The governor warned the lawmakers that estimated receipts for the biennium are only $43,317,863, leaving $21,435,270 to be raised by new taxes. The largest item in Heil's budget is $17,144,240 for charitable and pension aids and is $1,319,255 more than the current budget established by former Gov. La Follette. Second comes educational aids, for which Heil recommends $15,834,000, a reduction of $469,000 from the current budget. The biennium appropriation of the University of Wisconsin was cut from $8,071,473 to $7,026,435 and that of state teachers' colleges from $4,447,690 to $3,655,950. The governor's budget makes no provisions for continued operation of the Wisconsin development authority, Wisconsin agricultural authority and department of commerce. Two years ago Gov. La Follette recommended a budget of $62,-919,569, but by amendments and other appropriations the legislature created a budget of $66,600,000, not including relief funds, for the current biennium.

New Wash Materials Remind It's Time for Spring Sewing

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AS A proper approach to the perennial spring sewing program that soon will be staged in countless households, we know of no gesture that will so inspire to hurry and get going as to take a day off and go fabric sight-seeing. We make the prediction that at just a mere glimpse of the new textiles with their refreshing departure from the old, in the way of texture, patternings and colorings, you will feel an urge stirring to cut and to baste

In this day and age when won-ders are being performed in the way of textures and weaves, it becomes absolutely imperative that the woman who would sew successfully must know materials. This is especially true in regard to wash fabrics that are a revelation as to what science is achieving in the way of non-shrinkage, color-fast-boil-proof tones and tints and in the way of weaves of entirely new origin. Consider for example the new spun rayon fabrics that are as lovely and exquisite in texture as imagination

When you ask to see these fascinating new spun rayons take note lorings that are so refreshingly different from the usual run. Many of the beautiful hues and motifs for design are traced to fine Chinese porcelains that excel in subtle soft blues and canary yellows, lime greens, peachbloom pinks and cherry blossom reds. You'll love these new wash fabrics that are so handsome they really do not look like washables, but they are and what's more they are treated to an anticrease process that greatly enhances them from the practical standpoint. Some of the smartest washable crepes combine the newest fabric (spun rayon) with tones or in prints that are so lovely mere word pictures fail to describe them. On your fabric sight-seeing tour be on the lookout for prints that stylize a flight of snow white birds against a sky of peachbloom pink or a seashell motif on a lime green background and you will thus sense the charm and beauty of the new spun rayon crepes. Softer to the touch than all wool, yet cozier than cotton by far is an imported material that looks like and feels like a million, yet it can be sent to wash with a carefree mind for the fabric has been sanforized-shrunk. See to the left in the picture a housecoat made of this new flannel (half wool, half cotton) which is lightweight as thistledown. This particular smart plaid fabric tailors to perfection.

To the right in the illustration unusual charm is expressed in a quaint dirndl dress of flowered cotton poplin-one of the dependable modern cottons in that it does not shrink out of fit when washed. It is trimmed with Czechoslovakian embroidery and buttons in authentic Czech design. Wear it over shorts and cummerbund when en route to active sports, or as a full-time daytime dress. Either way, it is perfect with its matching bonnet.

You will find a bolero costume made of gingham (faithful standby) much to your liking. Why not enter it on your sewing list, for this twopiece is easy to make, so why not look up a reliable pattern and have it in readiness to wear this spring with dainty blouses? The model centered in the group is in blue and white check. The skirt is flared for fullness. The long-sleeved bolero jacket has wide revers and exposes cuffs of white pique caught with large mother-of-pearl links. Matching gingham trims the rough straw sailor hat she has in her hand. @ Western Newspaper Union.

Petticoat, Tiered

If you see a glimpse of lacy froufrou peeping from under her neat little afternoon dress of silk crepe, do not make the mistake of saying "Pardon me lady, your petticoat is showing." If you do milady is apt to airily reply, "Sure, that's the intention." Yes'm it's only too true, petticoats are in fashion and furthermore the so-termed petticoat dress that is causing so much excitement in fashion's realm is actually styled so as to reveal a tantalizing glimpse of its frill.

Another sensation on the dress program is the new flounced silhouette. Fashion is flouncing everything that will gracefully yield to flouncing. Daytime skirts rise tier upon tier done in a restrained way while soft afternoon and evening frocks are widely flounced in the good old-fashioned now very new fashioned way.

Open Toes, Heels

In New Footwear The vogue of open toes and open heels has reached such a state that it will be difficult before many weeks to find even an Oxford which supplies good foot coverage. Shoe styles for spring have been placed on exhibition and indicate that pumps and Oxfords as well as sandals expose the toes and the back of the heels.

SAFETY TALKS

Rural Traffic Accidents Increase Traffic accidents in the rural districts are mounting by leaps and bounds. Since 1924, the National Safety council says, motor vehicle fatalities have increased 172 per cent. In cities over 10,000 population they went up but 30 per cent.

Of course, the council points out, a large part of this increase may be the result of much-increased rural travel. But most traffic authorities believe, however, that the more favorable city record can be traced to the more effective traffic control measures in municipalities.

In 1937, the loss of life to traffic accidents in rural districts and cities under 10,000 population was 27,400. In cities over 10,000, there were 12,100 killed.

While collisions with pedestrians constituted the major fatal accident problem in cities, rural districts had their greatest difficulty the ladies, named for Ina Claire; it with collisions between two or more motor vehicles.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

one of the oldest (pure linen). Rebirth of Amber

It's amber jeweiry you will be wearing if you are up to the moment in style. The revival of this familiar gem is important fashion news. The new amber jewelry reveals untold beauties. The colors range from golden yellow to rich antique mahogany tones. The lovely transparent quality of the stone is especially effective in the new floral designs. The leaves and foliage of many flowers are formed of delicately shaded or veined amber. In the picture a very up-todate young woman enhances her gown with amber flower jewelry. footwear.

FROST B

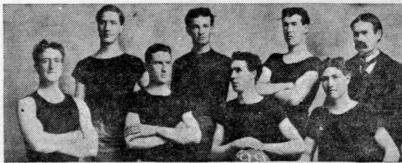

In December, 1891, a staff member of the Springfield (Mass.) YMCA training school invented a new game by corraling two peach baskets, a soccer ball and a smooth floor. That man was Dr. James A. Naismith, now a 76-year-old professor emeritus at the University of Kansas. Basketball, now played by 20,000,000 people each year, got its real start at Lawrence, Kan. A member of the first girls' team, organized there, was the future Mrs. Naismith, now deceased. The "parents" of this remarkable game are shown above, in 1928, during a celebration in their honor.

Basketball now attracts more fans than baseball or football. Partly responsible for this growth is Ned Irish (inset), who brings big college teams to New York's Madison Square Garden each year. The above photo was taken during the Fordham-New York university game in January, 1936, when 10,074 people attended. This tilt established a new attendance record.

Daintiness in Women Wins Men's Favor By PATRICIA LINDSAY

MEN loathe careless grooming. In fact I think that men are inclined to be more fastidious about us than we are about ourselves! That statement will probably bring an avalanche of mail contradicting me. Well anyway, men do like us sweet-smelling, tidy in our dress and noticeably well-groomed.

It isn't too easy to keep fresh as a flower, or crisp looking as a lettuce leaf. It takes special little rituals. We must bathe more fre-

But more than that we have to be ever so careful about wearing fresh underthings and hose each day. If you haven't an abundant supply you must form the habit of rinsing yours out each night.

Job-Hunting Girl Over 30 Has Competition

J UST this week a girl over 30 came to me in sheer desperation. She needed a job and couldn't get one. "I am a secretary," she said, with eight years of experience here and there. I'm not keen about secretarial work, but I'll take any job. I simply have got to work! Yet every place I apply they more or less tell me they want a younger girl. What shall I do?" Her plight is a common one to girls over 30 who, married or single, find it necessary to seek employment this summer. When industry slackens, jobs become scarce and applicants for the jobs increase. It is quite obvious why the younger girl is preferred. She asks a smaller salary, she is more easily trained to the work, she has no home ties to distract her during the day, and usually she is more attractive because she is about 10 years younger! All in all she is stiff competition for the older girl.

If the girl who sought my advice had asked me for a job I would not have given her one. Why? First of all she had let herself grow discouraged. I know it isn't easy to show enthusiasm when your stomach wants food and your room rent is due. But where will she get by showing her troubles to a prospective employer? He has his own: he will hire good spirits more quickly than experience. He doesn't want to look up from a knotty problem and see a drab, disheartened female dragging herself around his office, does he? "I'm not keen about secretarial work," she had said. Well that's just too bad if she wants a job as a secretary! Who is going to hire her knowing she will have little interest in her work? Not a soul!

Martyr Type Has No Place

"D ON'T enjoy feeling depressed," is the advice Mrs. Richard Mather Boardman gives to women, especially women over fifty. "Almost nothing is important enough to upset one's peace of mind if you look at it squarely. We should enjoy life, for living is fun. Don't make it hard for yourself and for those around you. How much we are inclined to worry over problems which never materialize! You can overcome every difficulty by going a step at a time."

This is the philosophy which Mrs. Boardman practices. And she has reached prominence by living the very rules she teaches the young girls who flock to her unique New York school. Though a grandmother several times, she has the vitality and alertness of a woman half her years and she carries on a busy social life along with the running of a large institution.

Her progress has not been a path of roses. She has met difficulties which would have floored many a woman, but her approach to life has been positive-never negative.

Glastonbury Tor, landmark at Somerset, England, is a national park. "The Iron Serpent"

HELLO EVERYBODY: Well sir, we've had two or three yarns in this column about strong men who have been in danger of being crushed to death by huge snakes twenty or thirty feet long, but Jim Evrard of Brooklyn, N. Y., went up against the great-granddaddy of all the reptiles. Jim's snake was three hundred and sixty feet long. It was made of solid steel links ten and a half inches long and five inches wide. It was the great anchor chain of an ocean-going steamer-and when you get one of those babies wrapped around your neck, they're worse than any python or boa constrictor that

It was on February 5, 1918, on the army cargo transport U. S. S. Hatteras that it happened. Jim Evrard had joined the navy as a radio operator in 1917, and here he was on the Hatteras, somewhere out in the Atlantic ocean.

The Hatteras had sailed a week or so before, from Hampton Roads, Va. A few days out of port she had run into a bad storm that had wrecked her steering gear and left her wallowing helplessly in mid-ocean. The captain had dropped both of the ship's three-ton anchors. They helped very little-but that's beside the point. The point is that those anchors were down. If they hadn't been, Jim would have had no adventure. He'd have won no ten-dollar bill. And we'd have had no story.

When Morning Came the Storm Subsided.

Once the anchors were down, they had to stay down until the storm was over. While the gale was raging, the ship pitched and rolled so violently that it would have been dangerous to try to pull them up. But on the morning that the storm subsided, the crew rigged an emergency gear and began to hoist them aboard.

To our horror the chain was running wild.

That's where Jim Evrard comes into the story. Jim was a radio operator, but in a pinch, aboard ship, everybody turns to and lends a hand. And Jim was sent down into the chain lockers with a lad named Piercy and another lad named White, to lay

I guess that sort of calls for a word of explanation. The chain lockers on the Hatteras were a couple of rooms eight feet square, just below deck, up at the bow of the ship. They were used, of course, to stow the anchor chains in while they were not in use. Up on the deck, a big winch was hauling in the starboard anchor, and as the chain came in, it was passed through a hole in the deck, down into the chain locker.

Well, sir, if that chain were just allowed to lie in the locker any way it landed, it would tangle and snarl next time the anchor was dropped. It had to be laid in a neat coil as it came down, and that's what Jim, and Piercy, and White were doing down there that fateful February day that Old Lady Adventure had picked out to give three

A Choppy Sea Made Footing Insecure.

By that time, all three of them were pretty tired. The chain, with quilt leaflet with 36 author its big ten and a half inch links, was heavy. The sea was still choppy, making their footing none too sure. But they worked away at the port chain until the coil rose high in the locker. Finally the chain stopped coming in. They could tell by the size of their coil that the anchor was up and out of the water and ready to be heaved on deck.

The three lads had stopped work, and leaning, each in a different corner of the cramped locker, bracing themselves against the pitching and tossing of the ship.

"We were waiting for orders to go back up on deck," says Jim, "but the order was slow in coming. Imagine our surprise when we saw the anchor chain begin to pay out again. It moved slowly at first, and then quite rapidly. After several seconds of watching it increased its speed, we realized to our horror that the chain was running wild!"

And those lads had good reason to be horrified. Great loops of heavy chain began whipping in long swings, striking the sides of the locker. Faster and faster it went, and wider and wider were the loops that lashed out on all sides.

"It was swinging with terrific force," says Jim. "If it hit us, it would break our bones like cardboard, or crush our skulls as if they were egg shells. And there we stood, not daring to move out of our corners-wondering when the flying mesh of steel was going to whip in after us-wondering when a chance lurch of the ship was going to throw us off balance out into the path of that whirling mass of metal. The Noise of the Links Was Like a Death Knell.

"The din was terrific. Our prison was small, and we could feel the wind on our faces as the chain flew by. In wider and wider arcs it swung. The links, as they hit the walls, sounded like the beats of a death knell to all of us. I wanted to faint, but I didn't dare. Powerless to do anything at all, I kept my mind on the one thing that might save mestanding right where I was in the scant protection the corner of the room afforded me.'

Loop after loop whipped its way around the little locker and spun on up through the hole in the top. Only a few more of those loops to go now. Then they'd all be safe. Jim watched those last few loops go, and breathed a prayer of thanksgiving. They WERE safe. Over in their own corners stood White and Piercy, chalky-faced, but unhurt. Then they called to the officers up on deck, who by that time, doubted if any of them were alive. The cause of the trouble, they had found, had been Old Man Neptune himself. A roll of the ship had thrown over the anchor chock, and another roll had caused the engineer to slip and throw the anchor winch out of gear.

"The anchor had to be raised again," says Jim, "but we weren't sent down to lay the chain. The next three men had better luck than we did."

her all that ever I did. It was a dull enough record, but have it she would, "because," said she, "for two years you played the part which I should have played—you cared for my poor father, and I cannot know enough of the man who did that."

We held the first of our councils the following day-by the side of the stream in the meadows, before 11 o'clock.

I said what I had to say firstby Elizabeth's wish.

"To my way of thinking we've only one object in view, and that is to expose the man who for 22 years has passed as the Count of Brief. If we can bring this about we shall kill two birds with one stone-we shall not only bring him down but put Elizabeth up in her proper place.

"The only way to expose him is to make him expose himself-admit officially that what we allege is true. And that he will never do, unless we can force his hand. If we can hold above him some threat sufficiently grim, the man will do as we wish.

"What we need is some information from which we can forge a weapon which we can use. And that will be hard to come by. It might not have been so hard 20 years ago; but the sources we might have turned to have almost certainly failed. Still, we're not in the hopeless position of not knowing where to begin, because we have one clew, which, if we can follow it up, may lead us straight to a source which is still alive.

"It is, I think, a promising clew, because it concerns a secret of whose existence the Head of the House should know. And Elizabeth knows of its existence: but her uncle does not . . . She knows of its existence, I say: she does not yet know what it is: but she knows where it is-roughly.

"The great tower of Brief-the great tower. There is a doorway there which no one would ever find. You must go up, counting your steps. And when you have . . .

"One thing more. Elizabeth may not like the line I suggest. The secret, whatever it is, has been most jealously guarded for hundreds of years. It may be something that no outsider should know. And if she's the slightest feeling against our doing our utmost to find it outwell, she knows that she's only to say so for me to drop this line and never touch it again.' "My dear," said Elizabeth, quietthen he had continually complained ly, "my father tried to give it to that he could not meet the expenses | you. It may be that you can use it -those were his words. Do you think I would revoke his bequest? Why, he never even charged you to tell me . . . Never mind. Of course claring with oaths that he had not you're right. That doorway's our only chance. I've no idea what is behind it-no more than you. But I think it may lead to something which, as you put it, will give us the weapon we need. As for looking for the doorway-we'll have to be careful, of course, but that shouldn't be very hard. As a rule Brief sleeps very sound, and if I like to return when Brief is asleep . . She held up a Yale key. "That's my key. It will let us into the turret which leads to my rooms. Elizabeth threw up her head and began to laugh.

"You're true to type," she said. 'The jester's counsel was nearly always the best. And why shouldn't Brenda come, too? She can look after us all and wait upon me."

Though the tower was unoccupied, its apartments were aired and dusted twice in the week. Every Monday and Thursday these things were done, and since the day was Sunday, we determined to take possession rising, "a very pressing reason for 52 hours we should have the tower the following night. some torches and knapsacks, and food for two days was put up. Madame Revoke was told that we were going to stay at some huntinglodge, to which her guests of the summer had two or three times repaired, and though she was something surprised that we should travel by night, instead of by day, Lady Elizabeth Virgil could do no wrong in her eyes.

For the search itself, I could not think what to take. I could hardly believe that we should have to use force: yet things which have lain undisturbed for a number of years are apt to get stiff or clogged as the case may be. In the end, after much reflection, I decided on a mallet and chisel, some oil and two measuring-rules; if what we found were to show that this rather meager equipment was not enough, we should have to withdraw-and return with the stuff we required.

That afternoon we rested, to save our energy for the work to come. And at half past eleven that night Winter set us down at the mouth of the entrance-drive. He was not to return to Raven, but to berth the Rolls where he could in the country beyond the foot-hills which rose to the south of Brief: and then at dawn he would make his way over those foothills and down to the belvedere. Half an hour later we saw the castle before us, a shadowy mass without form, charged on the sable field of the woods behind.

So dark was the night that had there been sentries posted about the house, they could not have seen us moving five paces away, and since Elizabeth said that no watch was kept, we followed her boldly up to the foot of the pile. Because we were shod with rubber, we made but the slightest sound.

Elizabeth skirted the walls, and we passed three staircase-turrets, to come to a fourth. And there she stopped, before a door or postern set in its base. I, who was next behind ner, moved to her side. "I want you to pass me," she breathed, "as soon as I've opened the door. Turn to your right up the steps, and wait till I come. I'll shut the door when you're in." I passed the word to Brenda, who gave it to Herrick in turn.

Then Elizabeth used her key-but the door stayed shut. In desperation she set her weight

Then she took her key from the "My God," she said, "it's bolted.

What shall we do?" "Somewhere close by," I whispered. "Where we can talk." She led us away from the turret and presently down some steps.

"Listen," I said. "There must be windows left open a night like this. Isn't there one I can climb to?" Elizabeth shook her head.

"You'd break your neck," she said. "And if you could get in somewhere, you'd never find your way down to open to us." "Then, what of the tower itself?

Isn't there any way I can get into that? Once inside the tower, I couldn't go wrong and its door's in the courtvard, isn't it?" Elizabeth shrugged her shoulders.

"There's a window," she said, "but it's heavily barred. It's on the northern side-not very high up. It's a chance in a million, but one of those bars might be loose."

Elizabeth led us back to the castle wall. There she turned to the left, and we followed her as we had come. Then she turned to the right, and we passed the mouth of the archway which led to the small courtyard: and after a little she turned to the right again . . .

Some 13 feet up I made out what looked like a cage, sticking out of the wall. Straining my eyes, I counted four vertical bars, not flush with the wall, but projecting, which meant, of course, that the casement which they were guarding was made to open outwards into the air. "Hopeless," said Elizabeth, quiet-"I thought it was lower than

"I think I can make it," I said. 'From Herrick's shoulders, of course. And if there's nothing doing, I've only to drop." I took off my knapsack and jacket, and rolled up my sleeves. "Can I use a torch with safety, to look at the bars?"

Elizabeth nodded. "But do be careful," she said.

Herrick spoke out of the darkness. "I'm prepared to contribute," he said. "Be sure of that. But I'm no acrobat. I'm willing to try and carry your 15 stone, but as soon as you feel me going, you'd better jump. And how d'you propose to begin? Are you going to run up me, or something?"

I made him take off his knapsack and stand to the wall, and I begged him to hold his peace, because if he I stared at him open-mouthed, but | made me laugh, we might both come down. Then I turned again to my lady.

"Once I'm up there," I said, "we shan't be able to talk: yet there may be something I find that I want to say: in that case I'll drop my handkerchief. If I do that, will you climb on to Herrick's shoulders? And I'll lean down and tell you whatever it is.'

"Yes, indeed. But, Richard, you will be careful? Supposing those bars aren't sound." "I promise to test them," I said,

"before I go up." A moment later I was standing on Herrick's shoulders, with my chisel and a torch in my pockets and both my hands on the bars.

These were in good condition, and when I had tried them once, I drew myself up by inches until I had a foot in the cage . . . Within this, the window was open.

C. Houston Goudiss Offers Timely Advice on Keeping Children Well in Winter; Warns of Several Dangers

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

ONE of the ways by which her community judges a woman's success as a mother is by the health and wellbeing of her children. If they are energetic, rosy-cheeked change—the addition of a salad to normal boys and girls who have a high resistance to infections, such as the common cold, and if they display the good dispositions that we usually associate with buoyant health, daily. > Winter Hazards It has been said that in winter the body is on trial-and this is ulating to children in normal health, some children withstand it much less successfully. This is particularly true of those who are improperly nourished; who are over-fatigued or suffer from poor circulation.

When it is very cold outdoors, it is wise to have children come in from their play periodically to warm up. And if a child appears to suffer from the cold unduly, it is wise to have a physician check up on his health.

Guard Against Frostbite Over-exposure must be avoided, particularly in cold, damp weather. Is Your Child Lazy? We often hear mothers complain that their children are lazy in cold weather . . . and they seem to have less pep and energy than in other seasons. If by that they mean that their children are less active, it may be that this can be attributed in part to the bleak, shorter days that do not always invite outdoor play. But sometimes a child displays such and in most parts a reduction in his activities as to appear indolent. Then the mothchildren are called er must seek the physical or emotional factors that may be responsible. For true laziness suggests a body that is not functioning normally. inclined to exert himself. The food may be adequate as to quantity, but not as to quality. For example, a diet that is too highly concentrated, contains too little bulk or cellulose, may cause a tendency to faulty elimination. This, in turn, is frequently responsible for lassitude. The remedy is often a simple dietary the daily diet; or possibly the use of stewed dried fruits in addition to a fresh fruit or fruit juice also have two servings of vegetables besides potatoes, one of which should be of the green leafy variety. Also a quart of milk daily; breads and cereals, at least half of which may preferably be the whole grain variety; an egg daily or at least three or four weekly; one serving of meat, fish or chicken, and another serving of a protein food, such as cheese. Some form of vitamin D should be included in the diet of young children, especially during the winter months.

It is also most important that children follow a daily routine that includes plenty of time for sleep. And for younger children a daytime nap is usually advised.

Children Need Healthy Mothers Mothers must give attention to the children's health. But let them give some consideration to their own. The tired, nervous mother is very apt to transfer some of her own fatigue and nervousness to her child. So in arranging your child's rest periods and diet, in looking after proper habits of elimination, make sure that Mother, too . . . and better still every member of the family lows this same sound health pro-

The most important action in the state legislature during the past week was Gov. Heil's presentation of his budget message to a joint session. it he asked for $66,750,000 for the coming biennium and warned the legislature that it must raise $21,550,000 in new revenue to meet that principle in the next two years. The various state departments ha.

asked for $96,585,000 but the governor slashed these requests by $29,835,000. This makes the new budget approximately $4,000,000 less than the appropriations properly chargeable to La-Foliette for the current biennium ent.

The governor then stressed the fact that the condition of the state's finances was very poor and that strict econ. omy will have to be practised during the next two years. He then called attention to the fact that it is imperative that the buget be balanced at this time, and that there are only two ways in which this can be done: 1. by reducing state expenditures, and 2. by increas.

He pointed out that on June 30, 1930, there was a cash surplus of $1,014,000 later, there was an obligation in ex-600, and estimated that on June 30, 1939, there will be a cash deficit of 941,000 in the present fiscal year.
